FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION
RECEIVED DOCUMENTS
MAR 22 2004
SECRETARY

Dear sir/madam,

I was informed by my contact lens provider that eye doctors are now lobbying the FTC to further limit my rights as a contact lens wearer.

The laws stipulate that I have to go once a year for a costly exam before I can obtain lenses.

First I think I am the best judge of whether I am having an eye problem, in which case I would go. Second, even young kids know when they need a new prescription, i.e., you can't see distance very well, blurriness, etc.

Who are these people trying to fool? You ask any family of contact lens wearers and you will see we are unfairly burdened.

I realize eye doctors are lobbying to hold onto or charge for prescriptions - however how about giving the consumer the right to decide everything

Sincerely
Susan Hafle
