I heard on the news recently that you guys want to regulate the debt settlement industry and tells those companies when they can charge fees. Something about not being able to charge fees until every last service they are supposed to deliver is made. That sound very ridiculous to me. Why can lawyers charge me every month for on-going work even though the ultimate goal has not been reached yet? Do you think debt Settlement needs more regulations than lawyers? I did not think so. You asked for comments about what you proposed to do affecting debt settlement companies. Stopping service fees will do one thing: eliminate good companies who will do whatever we have to do to earn a buck!

Is that what you want?

Let us work and look at the real issue. The credit card Companies, who continue to harass people with high interest rates and fees just for having these cards. You want our opinion help the people by taking care of the real issue.
