

Good Day To You, When I am online I do not expect to open my e-mail and find offensive content in it. When my children open there e-mail and find it, and it is labeled Disney or Looney Toons that is cause for alarm. I am all for labeling the content in e-mail. And I do have a suggestion, not only should it be labeled, but a key or password from the company or individual in a previous e-mail warning people should be mandatory also. and a tracking number or something to go back on to stop unwanted content.

Thank You
Dale A. Andre
