I think being able to "opt out" is wonderful, but from the time you submit personal information to a business til the time it then receives the consumer's "opt out", that business can give it out the personal information to a lot of people.I believe in an "opt IN" process by which a business would have to obtain the consumers CONSENT to sell, trade, give, or otherwise distribute personal information. It's time to give control back to the consumer over how his/her personal information is put to use.Thank you.
