

I totally support the choice to purchase contact lenses from a source other than the company that performed your eye examination. If you pay for an eye examination, you are entitled to the prescription information obtained during that examination. I do not wish to put any store out of business, but competition from an outside source is always a good thing to keep prices down. Again, I feel that when you pay for an eye examination you are entitled to your prescription information. You should then be allowed to look for the best price on lenses.

Kymerly Mortimer