To whom it may concern,

I am writing to voice my support of the Fairness to Contact Lens Consumers Act of 2003. I have had numerous eye practitioners in the past, and some have been cooperative with giving me a copy of my prescription while others have not. I would never return to see a practitioner who would not give me a copy of my prescription. It is outrageous to me that I would not be able to have a copy of my contact lens prescription the same way I could with an eyeglasses prescription.

As a physician, I feel that patient rights are very important. Could you imagine if I recommended a medication for a patient, then refused to give them a prescription and instead insisted that they had to buy it from my office? I hope that many others will also write to express their support for this important law.

Sincerely,

Kimberly A. Pryce MD
