Dear sir:

As a contact lens wearer I have an interest in the rules governing my ability to purchase these items. I understand you are considering making changes in the rules that effect my ability to obtain my lens. It would seem reasonable that I should be the ultimate authority as to when, how and if I choose to purchase these items. I go to Optometrists as I do other services including medical doctors. I have the ability to make the decision to purchase what services I choose. Once I choose and pay for the service, I expect to be in control of the decisions that result from the information received. In the case of contacts, these would be:

1. If I want to purchase lens?
2. What brand, style, or configuration I would prefer?
3. When I want to purchase lens?
4. Where I want to purchase lens?

I prefer less intrusion into my independence not more and especially from the guy at Wal-Mart.

Thank you,

Ray Chandler
