Subject: Comments on Contact Lens Rule

Dear Sirs:

First, I believe Congress's intention was to allow all Americans the right to buy contact lens and other eye supplies, I.e. glasses, etc. wherever they so chose to do so.

Rational: When we go to the Doctor (MD), and he proscribes an medication, it is up to us get that proscription filled at a pharmacy of our choosing. The MD cannot dictate where it shall be filled. The same should be true for any eye care supplies we need.

Secondly, to thwart the will of Congress in this matter is a grave infraction of the law. And, if the FTC sees fit to do so, you may yourselves at the wrong end of a revolt by the citizenry. And, rightly so.

Thirdly, since when shall a small segment of citizens have the right to tell the vast majority who they shall go to to spend their own money.

We shall not be held hostage by optometrists and ophthalmologists and a few glass-fitters. As far as I'm able to discern, this is still a pretty free country. Do not make it even less so.

May God bless you gently,
