I believe we should have the right to expect quick and immediate receipt of purchased contact lenses. Having a large family that consists six kids ranging in age from 18 to 4--we do alot of family outtings esp. in the summer where I need to have contacts. Swimming and beach trips require it. Watching out for your kids without glasses in the ocean or a pool when you have toddlers is a big deal. Trying to see through wet glasses isn't much better, or what about trips to the amusement park where you must accompany your kids on certain rides and glass are just not safe to be worn. If I lose my contacts and need a pair expressed to me for a trip like this or a business trip-- it is a must, I don't have the time or luxury to wait. It's more than just a convenience of not having to wear my glasses, there are other crucial issues at hand for parents and business people. (Projectionists that work in my line of business many times opt for contacts so that in projector convergence mode they don't have to deal with the glare they might encounter while wearing glasses.) Are these guys supposed to wait for their lenses when they have a huge permanent install that needs to take place say like for Homeland Security whom we do quite a bit of sub-contract work? I don't think the rules have been reviwed from the right points of view.

Your conscientious re-consideration will be much appreciated.
