Every time I have my eyes examined by a physician I have been directed toward the shop "just through that door" to buy contact lenses. I have always felt that to be an inappropriate gesture by the physician and go elsewhere for my lenses. On some occasions I have had to insist on getting a copy of the prescription and have to give the excuse "I may be on vacation when I want new ones". I usually engage in conversation with the receptionist then depart quickly when the physician is busy. I am able to get the same lenses by mail at about half the cost.

I am therefore very much in favor of the Fairness to Contact Lens Wearers Act of 2003 and hope that the FTC is able to enforce this act.
