

From: jophill2
Sent: Wednesday, March 17, 2004 2:35 PM
To: CONTACTLENSRULE
Subject: Proposed Contact Lens Limbo Rule

To whom it may concern:

The proposed FTC rule that will limit the length of time a consumer may receive his or her contact lenses from a retailer is one that can provide no utility to consumers and does not protect or benefit any party in the eye care industry. As a contact lens wearing consumer of over fifteen years, I know the importance of receiving replacement lenses as soon as possible. Though I do own eye glasses as an alternative to my corrective lenses, they are of an outdated prescription, as replacing glass lenses frequently is far more expensive than purchasing new contacts. Losing the ability to see clearly for days can be catastrophic to me being able to conduct my life and accomplish the things I need to get done on a daily basis. With such poor vision, lacking corrective lenses can prevent me from driving, working, or even enjoying a movie. Any delay in receiving a product I require to see more clearly seems extremely wrong, and I would just like to voice my opposition. I thank you for your time.

Truly,
Jon Phillips