I feel that the addition of any spyware/adware programs on a computer, whether when it is included when the PC is bought or added afterwards should not be allowed under any circumstances. It is as bad as telemarketing if not worse because at least you can hang up on a telemarketer, with that software you simply can't hang up, and most of the time the software can and will create problems for your PC.....problems that most people do not know how to correct, and it is amazing how much of that garbage is installed on a computer when you buy it.

That is my two cents.

Sincerely
