I am writing this letter to inform the FTC that I believe that the companies that use spyware and adware have that right provided that they inform the computer operator that they are infecting of there spyware/adware and receive there permission. If they fail to do so they are no better than common pickpockets and thieves because what they are doing is stealing private information from the computer operator. No more no less and the latter being the case we should have the right to seek monetary damages against these companies. Thank you in advance for any consideration you give this communication.

Thank you
