

10/13/2013

FTC Office of the Secretary
600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC. 20580

FTC Docket: 9327

Dear Secretary,

I write to you today in the matter of the Polypore application to divest assets to Seven Mile Capital partners. First off I am an employee of the company and must write anomalously for fear of my job. I am told that Polypore paid approximately 75 million dollars for the company in 2008. Your case has proven that Polypore broke the law and thus has been ordered to divest the assets. Explain to me how this company can profit from the ownership of our plants for 5 years while constantly delaying due process, and now be allowed to profit again as Polypore's documents filed with the SEC state that they have agreed to sell for 120million!!! I would say that Polypore should be punished not rewarded for breaking the law!! Based on some simple research and available public documents it appears that the FTC should just allow Polypore to keep the business. The proposed buyer (7 Mile) has one of its officers a Mr. Kevin Kruse that was previously on the Polypore Board of Directors? And they don't stop there either. The 7 Mile group also plan to hire an ex Daramic employee from France to run the company, and also bring a CFO from Daramic as well. Smells of collusion to me. I work in the plant and visually witnessed many potential buyers tour our facility. Was this 7Mile the only group that made an offer? I have to believe that others would have at least offered, but according to a meeting conducted by our Plant Mgr. and HR Mgr. 7 Mile offered the highest bid. I don't trust Polypore and it appears to me that they have orchestrated a deal to make the most money, all the while selling to a very weak buyer. 7Mile's website indicates that they are managing a portfolio that came from the Citigroup. Have they ever purchased a company before? I can find zero evidence that they have purchased anything. Does this really meet the goal of creating a strong competitor? Why doesn't the FTC interview some employees to get their opinion?

FTC - Please do the right thing and force Polypore to sell the business to someone that is completely independent of Daramic/Polypore ties, and not make 45 million in profits!!

As stated earlier I write anonymously because there is no mechanism in place to protect me from retaliation from management.

Thank You