RE: Privacy Roundtables - Comment, Project No. P095416
Comments of CTIA-The Wireless Association®

Dear Mr. Clark:

CTIA-The Wireless Association®[1] ("CTIA") respectfully submits these comments for consideration by the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC"), supplementing CTIA's filing of May 1, 2008,[2] and statements at the "Beyond Voice: Mapping the Mobile Marketplace" Town Hall meeting hosted by the FTC on May 6 and 7, 2008, in Washington, DC. CTIA thanks the FTC for addressing consumer protection issues in the rapidly expanding and evolving world of M-commerce, and for its interest in the evolving state of the location-based services ("LBS") market.

In these supplemental comments, CTIA provides an overview of non-carrier applications stores (also known as "apps stores") and illustrative examples

[1] CTIA is the international organization of the wireless communications industry for both wireless carriers and manufacturers. Membership in the association covers Commercial Mobile Radio Service ("CMRS") providers and manufacturers, including cellular, broadband PCS, ESMR, AWS and 700 MHz licensees, as well as providers and manufacturers of wireless data services and products.

of LBS offerings available through apps stores and other providers of mobile applications.[3]

[3] CTIA has established "Best Practices and Guidelines for Location Based Services" ("Guidelines") that promote and protect user privacy as new Location-Based Services ("LBS") are developed and deployed. With strong support from the nation's leading wireless carriers and input from LBS providers and industry stakeholders, this voluntary initiative was developed to promote and protect consumer privacy through user notice and consent. For information about "Best Practices and Guidelines for Location-Based Services," see http://www.ctia.org/business_resources/wic/index.cfm/AID/11300. The Best Practices document is intended to be somewhat dynamic, and will be revisited as needed to keep pace with new developments.

Location Based Services have one thing in common regardless of the underlying technology – they rely on, use or incorporate the location of a device to provide or enhance a service. Accordingly, the Guidelines are technology-neutral and apply regardless of the technology or mobile device used or the business model employed to provide LBS (e.g., a downloaded application, a web-based service, etc.). The Guidelines primarily focus on the user whose location information is used or disclosed.

The hallmarks of the Guidelines are user notice and consent. The Guidelines place a premium on these two fundamental principles because it is the LBS user whose privacy is most at risk if location information is misused or disclosed without authorization. Under the Guidelines, LBS providers must inform users about how their location information will be used, disclosed and protected so each user can make informed decisions whether or not to use the LBS or authorize disclosure. In some cases, an account holder (as opposed to the actual device users) may control the installation and operation of LBS on multi-line accounts (e.g., business account holder utilizing LBS for fleet management; parental account holder providing phones for childrens' use). Under these limited circumstances, the appropriate consent may be obtained solely from the account holder.

Whenever location information is linked by the LBS Provider to a specific device (e.g., phone number, userID) or a specific person (e.g., by name or other unique identifier), the user should have confidence that their location information will be protected and used or disclosed only as described in LBS Provider notices. Accordingly, LBS Providers must ensure that users are informed about how location information will be used, disclosed and protected so that users can make informed decisions whether or not to use the LBS. Second, once users have chosen to use an LBS, or authorized the disclosure of location information, they should have choices as to when or whether location information will be disclosed to third parties and should have the ability to revoke any such authorization. In addition to the notices required under the Guidelines, the Guidelines also recognize the importance of educating users regarding the responsible use of LBS and the privacy and other risks associated with the disclosure of location information to unauthorized or unknown third parties. All the entities involved in the delivery of LBS, including wireless carriers, device manufacturers, operating system developers, application aggregators and storefront providers, should work to educate users about the location capabilities of the devices, systems, and applications they use as well as to inform them of the various privacy protections available.

LOCATION-BASED SERVICES

As noted in CTIA's filing of May 1, 2008, location-based services "are information services that utilize the location of a mobile device and are accessible through the mobile network. LBS applications are available from wireless carrier and non-carrier providers and include the public safety-oriented E911 services that wireless companies provide, as well as other commercial and non-commercial location-based services."[4]

As noted then, "Developers and solutions providers are a significant part of the location-based services market. Leading application publishers include Networks in Motion, MySpace Mobile, XM Satellite Radio and other GPS navigational software providers, such as Garmin Mobile, MapQuest Mobile, Pitney Bowes MapInfo, TeleNav, Telmap. uLocate, WaveMarket, and Wayfinder."[5]

LBS offerings include applications such as GPS, navigation, location messaging, friends / family locators, social networking, traffic alerts, and more.[6] Since the filing of those comments, the LBS marketplace has continued to evolve, with a growing number of non-carrier applications stores ("apps stores") offering consumers access to a variety of products and services, including LBS applications. Some of these applications, once downloaded to the mobile device, provide the location-based services without requiring use of a mobile network to perform their functions. Others draw upon the mobile network or upon other communications to provide their functionality on a real-time basis. Some blend location- and gaming functionalities, others provide business-oriented services such as real estate listings.[7] Applications can range from meeting the most basic human needs, to apparently frivolous purposes. As one marketing expert noted earlier this year, when asked what mobile effort impressed him:

> Charmin's Sit or Squat application, which was built by Dense Brain. A smaller brand like Charmin gave a clear and on-equity reason for consumers to digitally engage by offering consumers a high-interest utility - a bathroom-locater app. This won the P&G Global Media Award this year for best media idea. Touching lives, improving life. This app does just that.[8]

Table 1 shows some of the more high-profile applications stores that are currently available to wireless consumers in the United States. In fact, there are additional applications stores, operated or supported by such companies as Handango, MobiHand, and GetJar, offering mobile applications, including

You can use your cell phone to check in from almost anywhere -- at a coffee shop, bar, restaurant, art gallery or even The Daily Record office. When you check in, Foursquare alerts your friends to your current location so they can drop by and say hello. What is so special about Foursquare? Foursquare has several competitors, but has attracted more attention because it incorporates elements of gaming and social competition. Most people are very competitive (whether they know it or not), and Foursquare awards points and virtual badges to players depending on how often they go out and which places they visit. The top designation is when you become mayor of your favorite location.") See also Faris Yakob, Executive VP and Chief Strategist at McCann Erickson, quoted in "Marketers, take note: The experts choose their favorite things," Advertising Age, Sept. 14, 2009, at M6 ("Foursquare is exciting precisely because it combines elements of 'geotility' [location-based usefulness], gaming, social networking, manufactured serendipity and more. visitors to other countries. Some companies currently operate applications stores only intended for the use of residents of other countries (e.g., Samsung's current applications stores are intended for the use of residents of Italy, France, and the United Kingdom),[17] others offer applications that may be acquired and used in the U.S., and abroad.

These applications stores ("app stores") provide access to multiple LBS apps, and to multiple developers / authors / "manufacturers" of these apps. The app stores frequently offer apps which – when selected – show multiple companies offering the same app – e.g., Handango, MobiHand, or Pocketland (a European-oriented app store) – which, in turn, was developed and also is offered for sale to end users by another, the app's developer.

There are thousands of applications available to consumers, some available for download and usage at no charge, and some for a fee. Some of these applications are offered across platforms, and there are competing offerings of different apps (such as multiple automobile navigation apps). Some applications also appear more than once in an App store, as they offer variations tailored to specific areas (e.g., Canyonlands National Park Map, Shenandoah National Park Map, etc.), different devices (e.g., RIM, Motorola, etc.), or different products (e.g., ILocate – Parking Facilities, ILocate – Subways, ILocate – Health Food).

Choice clearly exists between applications stores and between manufacturers of applications. Consumers may download competing applications for free, or for a fee, from either carriers or non-carrier sources. In fact, this competitive market is both attracting new entry and is being reshaped through the merger of existing players in the marketplace, as recently noted in an article about the acquisition of Networks In Motion (a provider of wireless navigation software for GPS-enabled cell phones) by TeleCommunications Systems Inc.[18] That article notes that:

> Google is starting to offer a free turn-by-turn GPS-based navigation system on wireless handsets that run the latest version of its Android operating system. If Google's free product gains traction in the marketplace, it could mean that consumers are less willing to pay $5 to $10 in typical monthly charges for the GPS navigation applications that companies like Networks in Motion offer to customers through the wireless carriers."[19]

Although this entry poses a challenge to "the long-term sustainability of paid handset navigation," according to analyst Scott P. Sutherland of Wedbush Morgan Securities, Sutherland nonetheless thinks ultimately "the consumer market would evolve to leave room for both Google's free, ad-supported navigation product and subscription-based and ad-free products, such as those built by Networks in Motion."[20]

Companies such as comScore and Nielsen Mobile have researched the adoption and use of mobile applications. For example, last year, comScore "reported a 51% year-over-year increase from March 2008 to March 2009 in the number of people seeking local information on a mobile device, with the strongest growth coming from an 83% increase in downloaded applications."[21] Likewise, Nielsen "reported that users of the popular iPhone are six times as likely as a typical mobile subscriber to use mobile applications."[22] More recently, comScore's MobiLens™ service reported that for the three months ending in October 2009, almost a third (32.7 percent) of all U.S. wireless customers used an application, with 5.2 percent accessing maps, 5.1 percent accessing weather, 3.2 percent accessing social networking, and smaller percentages accessing news, sports, and an array of other applications.[23]

Last year, ABI Research noted its expectation that global LBS revenues will grow dramatically by 2014, after experiencing 156% growth from 2008 to 2009.[24] According to ABI Research practice director Dominique Bonte, "There seems to be no limit to developers' creativity in using location for functions such as search, social networking, messaging, micro-blogging and augmented reality."[25]

ABI Research also noted:

> While there is no doubt LBS is heading towards mass market adoption, it remains unclear which pricing and business models will emerge successfully. Currently subscription-based models are making way for one-off pricing or free hardware-subsidized offers,

A sampling of LBS- or GPS-related applications drawn from multiple applications stores, including the more high-profile stores identified in Table 1, and other applications stores, are described below. It should be noted that keyword searching is not possible on all app stores. Likewise, the categories which exist on one app store do not necessarily map to those of another app store provider. Moreover, the categories that exist may not correspond exclusively with LBS applications. For example, the category "Navigation" may not encompass all LBS-enabled apps in a particular applications store, since other LBS-apps may appear in such categories as "Social Networking" or "Productivity" or "Travel." Thus, the following section and the attached screenshots should be regarded as just a sampling of LBS- or GPS-related applications.

While it may be intuitively apparent that location-based services require the disclosure of location information to the providing company, a number of applications providers make explicit reference to this fact in their privacy policies or the terms and conditions of their service offerings. For example, the Company uLocate explicitly notes in its privacy policy that the users of its WHERE® application:

[26] Id.

> You understand that when you use WHERE, certain information that you post on www.where.com or provide through WHERE may be shared with other users and posted on publicly available portions of WHERE, including without limitation your profile, comments, and photographs. In addition, you should be aware that (i) Location Data and other information that you post on www.where.com and WHERE that are not designated as private may be publicly available and can potentially be viewed by anyone.
> Aggregate information and Location Data may be shared with carriers, Service Providers and other third parties in accordance with the provisions of this Privacy Policy. If the Location Data is shared with carriers, Service Providers and other third parties then it will be done so in a way to keep your anonymity. Location Data will not be shared in such a way as to be personally identifiable.[27]

The degree of disclosure of location information varies according to the application and application provider. The following sections, which describe categories and offerings by various applications store operators and applications developers or providers, also include language drawn from various privacy policies or notices of terms and conditions.

iTUNES APP STORE

The iTunes Applications Store was launched in June 2008. Since then, the number of applications available through the iTunes app store has risen to more than 100,000, and more than 3 billion downloads have occurred.[28] The iTunes App Store has 19 categories, including Books, Business, Education, Entertainment, Finance, Games, Healthcare & Fitness, Lifestyle, Medical, Music, Navigation, News, Photography, Reference, Social Networking, Sports, Travel, Utilities, and Weather. Attached to this filing are 147 pages of screenshots from the iTunes App store that are specific to the Navigation category. When these screenshots were begun on Thursday, December 10, 2009, there were 144 pages of Navigation applications. By December 16, 2009, there were 147 pages of such applications. On the evening of January 1, 2010, there were 161 pages.

These navigation applications include dozens of "Virtual Maps" for American cities, available from FQ Publishing (for a fee); and specialized applications such as the free offerings of Trapster's speed trap alerts,[29] Youniversalideas' Free Wi-Fi locator,[30] and more competing applications in the free and paid categories, such as free "Take Me to My Car" app (from individual developer Eldar Sadikov)[31] versus the paid "Park'n Find" app from Affinicore.[32]

The display pages within the Navigation category indicate the top 20 paid and top 20 free applications within the Navigation category, including such "Top Paid Apps" as "TomTom U.S.A." (number 4 on Jan. 4, 2010), "Where To? GPS points of interest" (number 6 on Jan. 4, 2010), "Tide Graph" (number 14 on Jan.

As part of the MapQuest Wireless Services, MapQuest may also collect and store certain information about our users, such as, users' wireless mobile subscriber ISDN numbers and users' network access identifier information. This information will be used to provide you with the MapQuest Wireless Services. MapQuest may use third party providers to help operate the MapQuest Wireless Services and such providers may use the information in accordance with the AOL Network Privacy Policy. Certain applications of MapQuest Wireless Services may allow you to adjust your privacy settings; please review any information or FAQ area that accompanies such application for more details and instructions.[40]

Some applications may also include a link to a License Agreement on iTunes' App store drill-down description page.[41]

WINDOWS MOBILE

There are two separate sites for Windows-related applications. There is a "Windows Mobile Catalog" page, and there is a "Windows phone Marketplace." The Windows Mobile Catalog displays such categories as Industries; Business and Office Productivity; Development Tools; Digital Video, Audio, and Animation; Enterprise Solutions; Games and Entertainment; Home and Education; Internet; Networking and Communication; Personalization; Security and Virus Protection; and Utilities.[42] The Windows Mobile Catalog offers applications for Pocket PC and Smartphone devices.[43]

The Windows phone Marketplace page is segmented into sections for "Showcase," "Most Popular," and "What's New." The page states "To enable purchasing from this Web site, sign in to Windows Marketplace for Mobile from your phone, then return to this Web site and sign in. If you don't already have Windows Marketplace on your phone, you can download it for the Windows Mobile 6.x phone."[44] The Windows phone Marketplace offers the following categories, and enumerated entries: 9 entries in Books, 31 in Business Center, 33 in Communication, 27 in Reference, 39 in Entertainment, 207 in Games, 44 in Lifestyle, 9 in Maps & Search, 16 in Music & Video, 15 in News & Weather, 33 in Productivity, 14 in Social Networks, 35 in Travel, and 62 in Tools.[45]

The Windows Mobile Catalog includes links to its Terms of Use and Privacy Statement at the bottom of the page, which take you to the Terms of Use, and highlights of Microsoft's Online Privacy Policy.[46] Microsoft's Online Privacy Statement includes links to supplemental policies related to maps and location services, as well as to the Windows Marketplace.[47] The Maps Privacy Supplement notes that with respect to the Microsoft MapPoint Web Service:

> Mapping features on Microsoft's sites and services are based in part on the Microsoft MapPoint Web Service. The MapPoint Web Service is a set of mapping and related services that is accessed through an application such as a Web site, desktop software, or mobile application. When you submit information, such as an address to be viewed on a map, to the application, that application passes it to the MapPoint Web Service for processing.
> We keep track of all requests the application you are using makes to the MapPoint Web Service. Location-related information in the request or derived from the request, such as latitude and longitude, is used for calculating payments to our data vendors so that we may operate the service. We will occasionally capture all information in the request for use in testing and maintenance of the service. This information includes the date and time of the request and location-related information you may have provided to the application such as latitude and longitude, address, place name, or the start and end address of a route.[48]

The MapPoint Web Service is not an end-user service. Rather, it is "used by enterprises and independent software developers to integrate location-based services into Web applications."[49] These may include "mapping and related services, such as spatial proximity searching, geocoding, POI lookups, obtaining street maps and driving directions, and other mapping-related services."[50]

A keyword search on the Windows phone Marketplace produces 16 results for GPS, including such paid apps as: LocateMe, from Applied PDA Software, Inc., GPS Trackah from Subsembly GmbH, SMS my Position from M2Mobi, and Joggah from Subsembly GmbH.[52]

The Windows Marketplace drill-down page for Joggah includes a link at the bottom to a "Customer Service Agreement."[53] Section 11.3 of this agreement states:

> Each time a location request is made by a Windows Marketplace application that uses location services provided by Microsoft, we will collect information about your location such as available cell tower data, Wi-Fi data, and GPS data to help the application provide features that use location and to help improve Microsoft's location services. This data may include cell tower and Wi-Fi access point identification information and their signal strength in relation to your phone. with identifying information that is part of your Windows Marketplace or Windows Live ID account or profile and is not used to identify or contact you.[54]

Searching on the Windows phone Marketplace for the term "location-based" produces one entry: Nanonavi, which is described as:

> [A] secure mobile social app to bring your Family, Social-networks and Belongs together. Family, Friends, Things, Media, Places buttons to support the daily life of its user. > the world. Basic one month service included, user can renew their service anytime.[55]

Nanomatic Ltd., the manufacturer of Nanonavi, includes general Terms and Conditions and Privacy Policy statements on its website.[56]

The Windows Mobile Catalog also allows keyword searches.[57] Searching on the word "location" produced 18 results, including:

> Driving Log
> "Driving Log is a GPS enabled, award winning application for recording distances traveled." The website indicates that the app is offered by MobiHand and Handango™ and is manufactured by Concrete Software, Inc.[58]

The Driving Log application provides an illustration of the variety of ways in which a consumer may purchase LBS applications. First, in the Windows Mobile Catalog you can click on the "buy-it-now" vendor's icon (e.g., Handango), which will take you to the initial Handango Driving Log page at which point you can purchase the application, or review other applications.[59] (Here, too, compatibility with the device may be determined.) A link to Handango's general privacy policy appears at the bottom of the initial Driving

Alternatively, from the Windows Mobile Catalog you can click on a link to Concrete Software – the manufacturer of the application – for additional product information, or to buy it directly from the manufacturer.[62] The Driving Log page on Concrete Software's website provides a link to its "Online Privacy Policy."[63] That statement notes that:

> Concrete Software intends to post a statement of purpose that explains why Personal Information will be collected and whether we plan to share such information outside of Concrete Software at the point of this information being collected. Variations in handset selection may result in directing the would-be purchaser to different sites, and policies. For example, in selecting to "Buy It Now" from the Concrete Software story, for an iDEN handset, the icon transfers you to the Sprint website, where a link to Sprint's "Your Privacy Rights" appears.[65] That "Sprint Privacy Policy" landing page in turn provides a link to Sprint's policy statement regarding "Presence, Location and Tracking Information," which notes:[66]

> We offer wireless location-based applications that use your wireless network location to provide the service you request. For example, you may choose to subscribe to a service that provides driving directions on your wireless device. Please review the terms and conditions for each service for additional information about how the location information will be used or disclosed. It is important to note, if you let others use location-based services to which you've subscribed as the account holder (or if you let others use your handset if such handset has location tracking capabilities), it is your responsibility to inform that user that his or her location may be tracked.[67]

Selecting a different handset, e.g., a Nokia device, results in directing a would-be purchaser to Concrete Software's check-out page. That page includes a link to "Customer Support," which indicates that:

> Concrete Software and Handango have teamed together to provide you a secure way to purchase software applications for your mobile device. Handango developed and manages this area of the Web site; you are using Handango's server right now. Should you decide to purchase, you will be buying from Handango, and Handango will provide first-level support for your software purchase and download. If you have questions pertaining to specific functionality, features or

The "Customer Support" page also includes a link to Handango's Privacy Policy, which notes that:

> Information about you – we actively collect personal information about you when you provide it voluntarily. This information may include your name, email address, phone number, credit card details (e.g., type, expiry date), postal address and other information as defined by applicable federal, state or local law. More detailed information is collected via our Careers link from those who may be interested in employment with Handango.

This is done automatically using a variety of tools, including cookies, server log files and other forms of navigational data collection, including, without limitation, pixel tags, web beacons or clear GIFs."

The Privacy Policy also notes:

> Your personal information may be shared with our business partners, such as software developers, network providers, device manufacturers and/or certain retailers, in order to fulfil [sic] your request for Handango products and services. These business partners should not use this information for any purpose other than to fulfil [sic] your request, but we cannot ensure that their confidentiality policies are the same as ours. [69]

As previously noted, not all LBS-related applications may be produced by a single search. Use of "location-based" or "GPS" instead of "location" to search the Windows Mobile Catalog generates different and longer sets of applications.

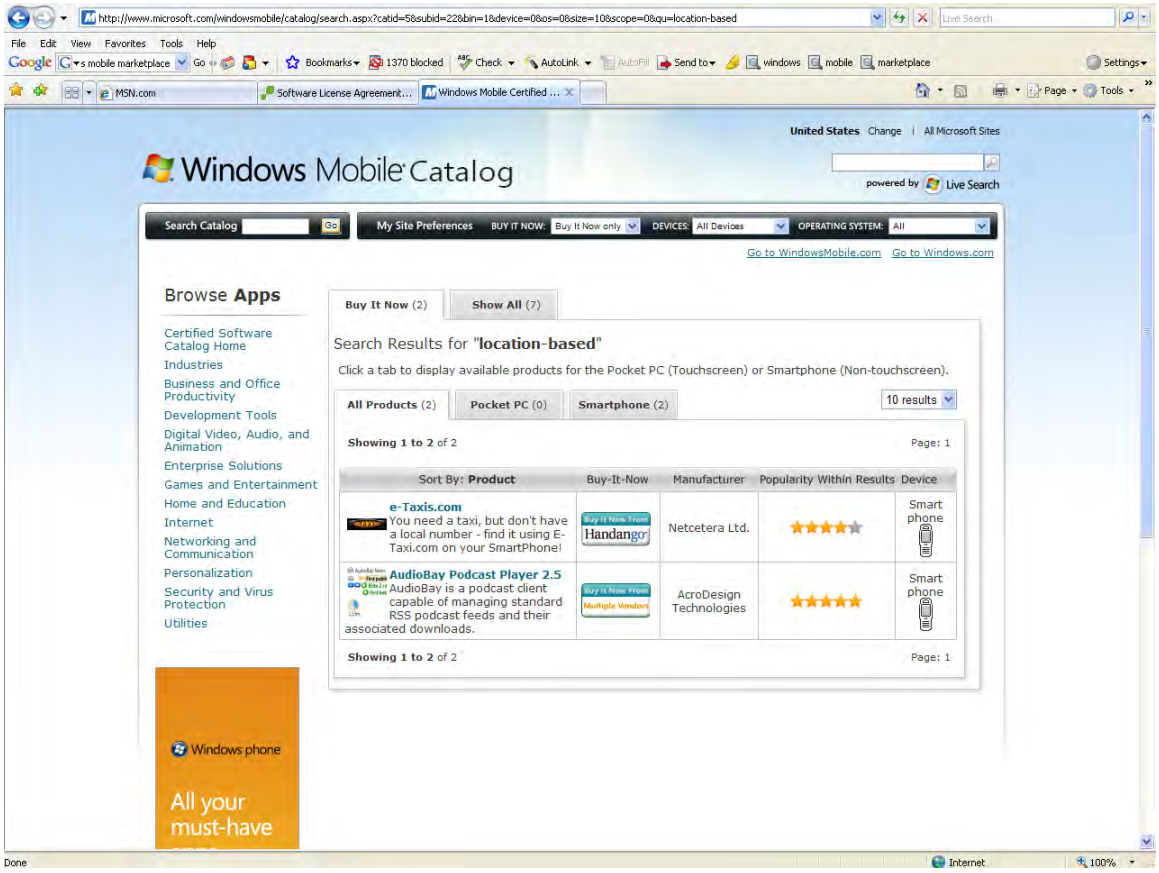
Indeed, with respect to applications available from the Windows Mobile Catalog that are "location-based," there are actually two sets of results – a "buy it now" selection, shown immediately below, and an "all results" set which includes both the "buy it now" items and additional applications, with links to the developers of the applications.



Although the second entry might not seem intuitively to include location-based features from just looking at the top-line "buy it now" results, the drill-down description of the AudioBay Podcast Player notes: "AudioBay also includes integrated location-based and category podcast directories."[70]

In fact, this product also demonstrates how applications are made available for purchase through multiple providers (in this case, through both Handango and MobiHand), as well as through the application's manufacturer, AcroDesign Technologies, as the following screenshots illustrate.[71] Clicking on either the Handango or MobiHand icons takes you to the next two screenshots. Clicking on the "More Product Information" link takes you to the page on the manufacturer's website shown in the third screenshot. The application may be purchased from any one of these three pages.

Clicking on the "Buy Now" icon to purchase the application from the AcroDesign page takes you to the check-out page, hosted by Handango, which includes a "Customer Care" link at the bottom of the page that in turn provides you with a link to a Handango "Privacy Policy" statement.[72] The Handango Privacy Policy reached through this link, which differs from the Privacy statement associated with the Concrete Software application described earlier, indicates:

> Handango will not sell your private information to any outside company for its use in marketing or solicitation. However, many downloadable software applications that we sell require the

In these cases, Handango must provide the software developers with relevant customer information in order for them to generate a registration code and email it to the customer. Although we strongly encourage software developers to follow strict privacy policies, Handango cannot be responsible for the privacy practices that each of the software companies follow. If you are concerned about the privacy policy of a certain developer or software company, you may contact them directly or visit their individual Web sites. Handango may also disclose your information in certain cases where we have your permission or under special circumstances, such as when we believe it is required by law.[73]

With respect to the "all results" page referred to earlier, the following screenshot indicates the various "location-based" apps that are available for Pocket PC or Smartphone devices.

The non-"buy it now" items also include links to descriptive pages which in turn include links to the manufacturers' websites where, in addition to product information, installation instructions and links to other apps stores appear. The following screenshot from the GyPSii website shows the page which is reached through clicking on the GyPSii Windows Mobile Client links in the above screenshot.

ANDROID

The Android Market permits viewing of a sampling of free and popular applications from a desktop computer. However, to view a comprehensive and up-to-date listing, the Android Market indicates it needs to be explored via a Google handset.[75]

From a desktop computer, previewed applications include such items as Google Maps, and Layar Reality Browser 2.1, the latter of which:

> shows what is around you by displaying real time digital information on top of reality through the camera of your mobile phone. With many local layers and global content from Flickr, Wikipedia, Yelp, Google local search, Qype, Brightkite, Yellowpages (soon), Twitter and much more.[76]

For a comprehensive, up-to-date list of the thousands of titles that are available, you will need to view Android Market on a handset.") (last accessed Jan. 5, 2010).

The desktop-accessed version of the Android Market page permits display of four pages of the Top Paid Applications, and 14 pages of the Top Free Applications. Most of the displayed top paid applications provide for customization of the user's handset. The displayed top free applications include a variety of location-related applications, such as:

> US Traffic from Better Android, which is described as a "simple app that shows traffic report around your neighborhood. US cities ONLY. This is our gift back to the android community to thank you for supporting our apps."[77]
> ShopSavvy from Big in Japan, which is described as "your shopping assistant. Using the camera in your phone, you can scan the barcode of any product to find the best prices on the internet and at nearby, local stores."[78]
>
> Google Sky Map from Google, which is described as "A star map for Android. Google Sky Map turns your Android-powered mobile phone into a dynamic window on the night sky. When you point your phone up you will see a map of the brightest stars, constellations, and planets in that part of the sky."[79]
> Hotels near me from BlueMedialab.com B.V, which says "Find and book hotel rooms mobile for often BETTER PRICES then at the reception! "Hotels near me" app is the first worldwide GPS hotel finder for Android. 66000 hotels in 71 countries and no fees. 21 languages supported!"[80]

> Loopt from Loopt, Inc., which is described as connecting "you to your friends and the places around you. See where your friends are and what they're doing. Connect on the fly and instantly share photos, comments, and cool places. Turn your phone into a social compass and never be bored or lonely again!"[82]

Loopt provides explicit description of what constitutes "location information" and the manner in which it is used and disclosed in their Privacy Notice. The Loopt Privacy Notice notes that:

> Loopt collects, maintains, uses, and displays your personal data and the geographic location of your mobile device (we call this location fix of your device "location information" or "geo-location") to provide the Loopt Services.
> By using the Loopt Services, you have consented to: (1) the use of your device's location to provide Loopt's services including relevant advertisements, and the display of that location information to your Loopt friends and within your geo-tagged messages and content; (2) receive text messages and emails; and (3) pay carrier data, messaging, and other fees resulting from Loopt usage.

Changing these settings is easy - just select 'Settings' on the Loopt mobile application or manage your preferences via the Loopt.com Web site.[83]

The Loopt Privacy Notice also indicates that:

> 'PROFILE INFORMATION': When using the Loopt Services you provide certain other personal information and content - such as event times and locations, interests and hobbies, age, gender, sexual orientation, relationship status, and favorite places for breakfast, drinks, dancing, outdoor activities, etc. - that will be publicly displayed to other Users and on third-party sites and services (for example, when using the Loopt Services to publish updates to Twitter, Facebook, etc.) in accordance with your privacy settings.
> 'LOCATION INFORMATION': To provide the Loopt Services, we derive location information from your wireless carrier, certain third-party service providers, or directly from the mobile device that you used to register. This location tracking of your mobile device may occur even when the Loopt mobile applications are not actively open and running in the foreground, but your location is displayed and shared with others only in accordance with your privacy settings.[84]

The Android Market website includes statements regarding the "Android Market Business and Programs Policies," "Android Market Terms of Service," and "Android Privacy Policy."[85] The Android Privacy Policy explicitly states:

> signals sent by a mobile device) or information that can be used to approximate a location (such as a cell ID).[86]

The Android Privacy Policy (modified March 11, 2009) also says:

> At Google we recognize that privacy is important. This Privacy Policy applies to all of the products, services and websites offered by Google Inc. or its subsidiaries or affiliated companies except DoubleClick (DoubleClick Privacy Policy) and Postini (Postini Privacy Policy); collectively, Google's "services." In addition, where more detailed information is needed to explain our privacy practices, we post supplementary privacy notices to describe how particular services process personal information. These notices can be found in the Google Privacy Center.[87]

Google maintains a page with multiple links to privacy policies specific to particular products and services.[88] One such policy is the Google "Mobile Privacy Policy," which identifies mobile-specific information that Google collects, as well as the applicability of third-parties' policies to information sharing and forwarding with respect to third-party applications ("If you decide to use third party applications on your device, any information those applications collect may be sent to third parties and the Google privacy policies do not apply. However, third party applications may have their own privacy policies that you should review.").[89]

BLACKBERRY APP WORLD™

Research in Motion's ("RIM") BlackBerry App World™ offers 19 categories of applications, including 168 items under Business, 308 under Entertainment, 108 under Finance, 1071 under Games, 120 under Health & Wellness, 95 under IM & Social Networking, 159 under Maps & Navigation, 95 under Music & Audio, 154 under News, 73 under Photo & Video, 252 under Productivity, 500 under Reference & eBooks, 31 under Shopping, 143 under Sports & Recreation, 3 under Test Center, 395 under Themes, 202 under Travel, 389 under Utilities, and 24 under Weather. Location-based applications may exist across these categories. Thus, for example, "Wheres My Phone Pro" and "Wheres My Phone – Free Edition" appear in the Utilities category.[90]

A search on the acronym GPS generates a list of 181 entries which refer to GPS, appearing in 17 of the BlackBerry App World™ categories: 5 in Business, 2 in Games, 97 in Maps & Navigation, 2 in Photo& Video, 2 in Shopping, 15 in Utilities, 12 in Entertainment, 8 in Health & Wellness, 1 in Music & Audio, 4 in Productivity, 18 in Sports & Recreation, 6 in Weather, 1 in Finance, 8 in IM & Social Networking, 3 in News, 1 in Reference & eBooks, and 12 in Travel. These range from applications specific to particular wireless service providers, or other countries (e.g., Canada or the UK) as well as applications offering to track the users' location, providing traffic information and directions, location information for nearby stores, or tools to track and analyze ski statistics.[91] As previously noted, some applications – once downloaded – function without requiring on-line connectivity. Others may involve periodic or real-time connectivity in order to perform their functions.

[91] The "GpsSkiMaps – GPS Maps Track and Analytics – 2009-2010 Season Pass for All North American Resorts" by Bist LLC offers for a one-time fee a downloadable application that provides downloadable maps and subsequent offline "run by run analysis," including GPS tracking, run overlays, and ski track summaries. See http://appworld.blackberry.com/webstore/content/4826 (last accessed Jan. 6, 2010).

The BlackBerry App World™ includes in the information intended for developers, the following notation (item "j"):

> How should I notify users of data charges associated with my application? In general, the application only needs to warn the user once—however, if the data charge is linked to a specific action (e.g. downloading a video), it would be preferable to warn the user before each action. The application can provide a warning with an option that says "do not warn me again". Please communicate any data charges within your application description as well.[92]

Protecting your GPS location information

Your BlackBerry® device stores GPS location information. Third-party applications and preloaded BlackBerry device applications that support location-based services can use that GPS location information. For example, you can use BlackBerry® Maps to get the GPS location of your BlackBerry device. However, third-party applications cannot access your GPS location information automatically.

When applications have access to your GPS location information, they could potentially track your location or report your location back to a server. To prevent applications from using the GPS location of your BlackBerry device, perform any of the following actions:

- Block specific third-party applications from using the GPS location information.
- Block all third-party applications from using location-based services.
- Turn off GPS technology on your BlackBerry device.
- Delete the BlackBerry Maps application from your BlackBerry device.[97]

As previously noted, third-parties also offer directly applications which may be compatible with differing devices. Handango's website permits would-be purchasers to identify their specific device, and search for applications by keyword. On Handango's website it is possible to choose "BlackBerry Bold 9700" and specify "GPS" and generate a list of 43 products that offer GPS-based services for such a device.[98]

Likewise, third party applications such as uLocate's WHERE® application may be available across competing applications stores, and compatible with devices running on competing wireless service providers' networks. For example, uLocate's WHERE website notes that:

> WHERE® is available on most of the major carriers: AT&T, Sprint, Verizon, T-Mobile, Virgin/Helio, Boost, and metroPCS, and as well as most of the hottest phones: iPhone, BlackBerry, Android, and the Palm Pre. Think we left you out? Think again. For the rest of you we have a mobile web version available at m.where.com.[99]

PALM

Palm offers two stores from which applications may be purchased: the Palm Software store, and the Palm App Catalog.

PALM SOFTWARE STORE

The initial page of the Palm Software Store lists 47 Palm devices for which applications are available, and allows viewing of applications by supported platform: Palm OS and Windows Mobile Touchscreen.[100] The Palm Software Store offers nine broad categories: Professional, Tools & Productivity, Finance & Accounting, Games, Entertainment, Medical, Personal Productivity, Travel, and Education & Reference.

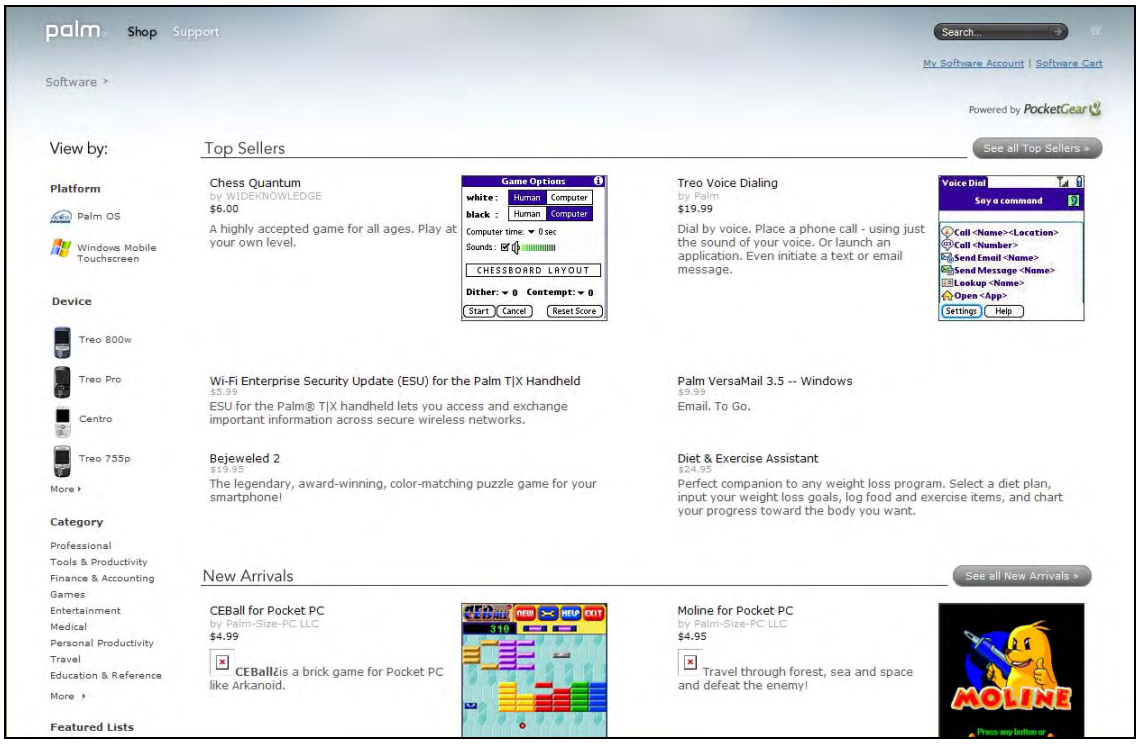
[100] See http://software.palm.com/us/html/ (last accessed Jan. 2, 2010).



These categories are in turn divided into 89 subcategories (e.g., Travel is divided in Currency, GPS, Maps, City Guides, Languages & Translators, Itineraries & Schedules, Transportation, Restaurants, and Foreign Languages).

A keyword search on the acronym "GPS" generates 2,970 hit in the Palm Software Store.[101] A search on "location-based" generates eight hits (five of which are different cities' versions of "Where to Wear" by Earthcomber LLC), while a search on LBS generates nine hits, only one of which is a genuine location-based service (imov Messenger Enterprise for Windows Mobile by mov Software, Inc.), the rest being unrelated diet or exercise-related apps, or unit converter / calculators.[102]

The Palm Software Store includes a link to Legal Notices at the bottom of the page, which in turn leads to the "Palm Privacy Policy."[103] That policy notes that "If you use services we provide through your Palm mobile device, we will collect information relevant to providing the services and as you designate. For example:"

> Location Based Services. When you use location based services, we will collect, transmit, maintain, process, and use your location and usage data (including both real time geographic information and information that can be used to approximate location) in order to provide location based and related services, and to enhance your device experience.[104]

Palm's Privacy Policy also notes, with respect to "Notice and Choice":

> You may choose whether or not to provide your personal information to us. If you choose not to do so, you can continue to interact with Palm, but you may not be able to take advantage of certain products, services, offers, or options that depend on personal information.[105]

PALM APP CATALOG

The Palm App Catalog for the Palm® webOS™-based devices offers apps across the categories of Entertainment, Music, Social Networking, News, Weather, Sports, Finance, Productivity, Games, Food, Business, Books, Reference, Lifestyle, Travel, and Navigation.[107] The Palm App Catalog also includes a link at the bottom of the page to Palm's Legal Notices, which in turn provides links to the Palm Privacy Policy and other legal notices, including the Palm App Catalog Terms and Conditions.[108]

The Palm App Catalog Terms and Conditions include a provision to the effect:

> CONSENT TO USE OF DATA: You agree that Palm, its affiliates and designated agents may collect and use technical and related information, gathered in any manner, as part of product support services related to the App Catalog. Palm, its affiliates and designated agents may use this information solely to improve its products or to provide customized services or technologies to you. Palm will collect and use this information in accordance with its privacy policy and in accordance with applicable data protection laws. Palm, its affiliates and designated agents may disclose this information to others, but not in a form that personally identifies you.[109]

[109] See http://www.palm.com/us/company/app-tc.html ("Palm App Catalog End-User Terms and Conditions") last accessed Jan. 8, 2010).

The Palm App Catalog also includes an "Application License Agreement" (which notes that it may be supplemented by an Application Provider's End User License Agreement, which would have precedence over the Application License Agreement, if such an agreement is established between a consumer and an application provider). The Application License Agreement provides (among other things) that:

> CONSENT TO USE OF DATA: You agree that the Application Provider may collect and use technical and related information, gathered in any manner, as part of product support services related to the Application. The Application Provider may use this information solely to improve its products or to provide customized services or technologies to you. The Application Provider may disclose this information to others, but not in a form that personally identifies you.[110]

The first page of the Palm App Catalog provides an illustrative listing of applications within the various categories (e.g., Entertainment, Music, etc.). The location-based applications available in the Palm App Catalog (which are previewed) include uLocate's WHERE, Yelp (which allows you to search "for places to eat, shop, drink, relax, and play, complete with reviews from locals in the know"), Mobile by Citysearch (which allows you to "Quickly find local neighborhood business listings, reviews, and more with instant GPS detection and easy keyword search. Write and submit local business reviews and share merchant details by text, email, and Twitter."), FreeWeather (which provides you with "real-time, location-based weather app shows the weather conditions around your current location. Zoom in or out to cover a wider region."), and Kosher2Go ("Powered by the world's largest kosher database, Kosher2Go provides location

NOKIA OVI STORE

The Ovi store offers "approximately 20,000 items across categories ranging from applications, games, videos, podcasts, productivity tools and web to location-based services. The store is currently accessible from over 75 Nokia devices in five languages. Nokia's top five downloading countries include India, Italy, Spain, the UK and the US, with developers from 60 countries uploading content to Ovi Store."[112]

The Ovi Store applications page welcomes the consumer by offering them the ability to identify their specific Nokia device, in order to direct them to the applications or content appropriate to the device.[113] The page also permits display of all applications, as well as paid or free applications, and provides a search capability. Searching on terms such as "location" or "GPS" results in the display of a dozen applications per page, on either a newest-to-oldest basis, or by relevancy. Location applications include:[114]

> SMS My Position (Utilities) by M2Mobi – with the snapshot description: "SMS your address in one click! How many times have you spend ages trying to explain somebody where to meet up, and finally. . ."

The Nokia Ovi Store includes links to Nokia's "Privacy Policy,"[118] "Ovi Service Terms,"[119] and "Ovi Store Service Specific Terms."[120] Collectively, these outline the data that Nokia collects when users "make a purchase, use or register" for services or otherwise interact with the company, as well as the purposes for which the data is processed. The Privacy Policy notes that "Certain services may involve the use of your location data. However, use of your location data for such services is subject to your consent."

OTHER APPLICATIONS STORES

As previously noted, additional applications stores exist, operated by Handango, MobiHand, GetJar, and other companies.

HANDANGO

Handango offers 4,867 applications across dozens of categories, including Android™, BlackBerry®, Palm®, Windows Mobile™, and Symbian OS™ apps.[121] The Handango website offers would-be purchasers of applications a "Top 10" listing of applications (and a "Top 10" listing of games) for each of these operating systems.[122] The site prompts would-be purchasers of applications to identify their mobile device (or manufacturer, or network provider) before they proceed to search the store for specific applications.

Handango's website includes both Privacy Policy and "Software License Agreement" (terms of use) notices.[123] The latter notice indicates:

> Use of Information; Opt Out Rights. Information provided by you in connection with your use of the Software will be used as necessary to complete your purchase. In addition, by Downloading the Software, you agree to receive communications via email from Handango regarding changes to and upgrades and/or new versions of the Software and promotions relating to the Software. These business partners should not use this information for any purpose other than to fulfil [sic] your request, but we cannot ensure that their confidentiality policies are the same as ours.[125]

MOBIHAND

MobiHand's website describes it as "a leading distributor of software and content for smartphones, including BlackBerry, Windows Mobile, Palm, Symbian, and Android devices. The company partners with media companies, portals, retailers, device manufacturers and operators to deliver customized desktop and on-device app stores."[126] They note that they "currently power hundreds of co-branded app stores worldwide -- offering thousands of mobile applications, media products, and subscription services from hundreds of leading content providers and developers."[127] The website permits users to identify the software that they are interested in by platform (i.e., BlackBerry, Pocket PC, Windows Smartphone, Android, Symbian, Palm OS, iPhone), by category (Business & Finance, Communications & Internet, E-Books, Education & Reference, Entertainment, Games, Medical, Personal Productivity, Professional, Ringtones, Themes, Travel), by Subject (Special Offers, Best Sellers, New

> YouCaddy GPS – "mobile phone GPS application for golfers." (Available for BlackBerry and Sprint CDMA devices.)[129]
> Map My Tracks – an "easy way to accurately track, or share in real-time, your sporting activity over land, sea or air using your mobile phone and GPS." (Available for BlackBerry, Windows Mobile Pocket PC, Windows Mobile Smartphones, Android, Symbian, Palm OS, and iPhone devices.)[130]
>
> Efficasoft GPS Utilities for Smartphone – offering real-time map navigation, digital compass, speedometer, and speed alarms (for Windows Mobile Pocket PC, and Windows Mobile Smartphones).[131]

MobiHand's website includes, in the Developer Partners section, a Software Distribution Agreement, which includes the notation that:

> Customer Information. Information about Customers delivered by MobiHand to Content Partner shall not, without the permission of the Customer, be sold, given, loaned or made available to any third party, nor be used to contact the customer in violation of applicable laws.[132]

GETJAR

GetJar offers thousands of applications, across such categories as Games, Education, Social & Messaging, Entertainment, Productivity, Finance, Food, Health, Search, Maps, Music, News & Weather, Photos, Religion, Shopping,

OTHER LBS-RELATED COMPANIES

There are third-party companies which provide services that enable other companies to offer applications stores. Companies like Handmark provide turnkey services that enable service providers and third-parties to offer their own applications stores. As Handmark describes it:

> The company delivers an engaging, customized experience for your mobile phone with the industry's best applications covering news and information, games, lifestyle and travel, reference and productivity, personalization and more. As one of the leading distributors of mobile content and storefronts for 10 years, Handmark has established itself as the premier mobile content partner.[140]

Handmark also develops and aggregates mobile applications for other companies to offer in their own stores,[141] and provides desktop and mobile web solutions for carriers and handset companies to use in establishing their own application stores.[142]

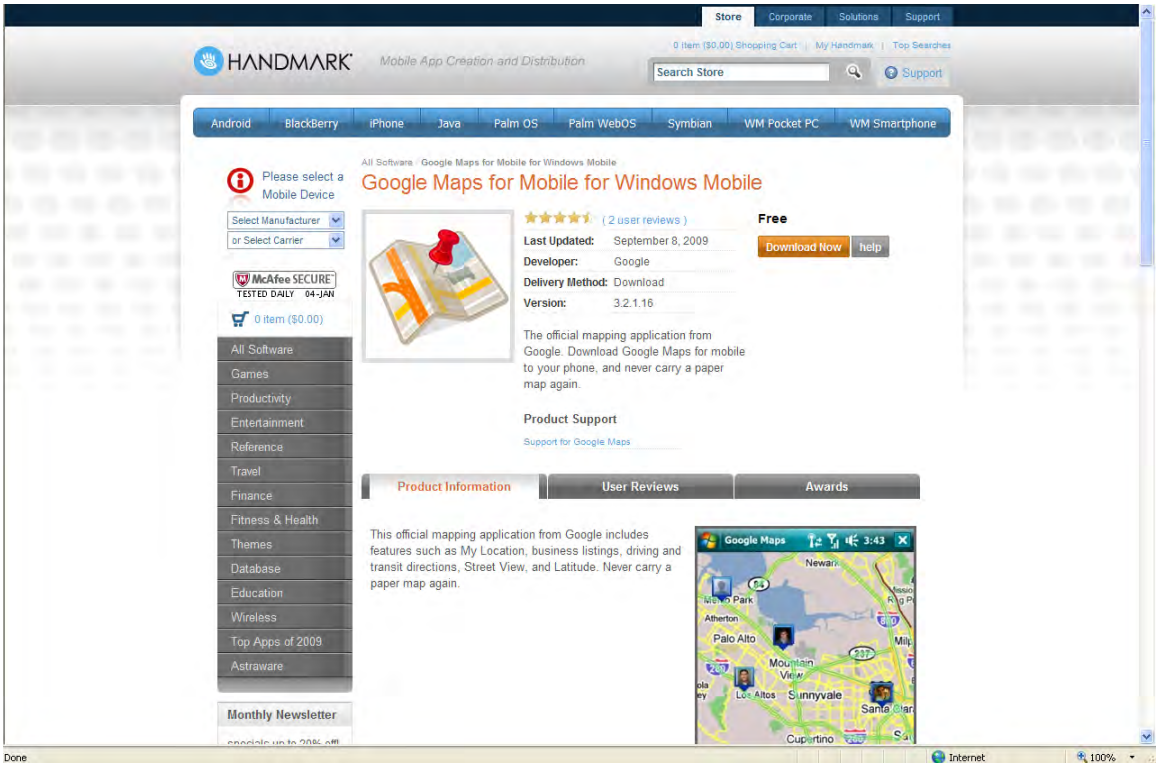
Need Help?



A search on the Handmark store on the acronym "GPS" generates 32 hits, ranging from navigation applications such as Garmin Mobile for U.S. and Canada for BlackBerry, Google Maps or MapQuest Navigator, to sports and exercise related applications such as AllSports GPS for Android, or Trimble Outdoors for BlackBerry.[146] Applications providers, like AAA Mobile and Trimble Outdoors, may include Privacy or Terms of Use policies or notices on their websites regarding location information, while others may include general privacy policy statements. These sites and notices may be reachable via the "Product Support" links for the applications sold through the Handmark website.[147] Thus, for example, the "Terms of Use" for AAA Mobile notes:

> For AAA to provide services via AAA Mobile, the location of your mobile device must be sent from AAA Mobile to AAA. AAA will record this information only for use in providing services to you via AAA Mobile and for internal quality assurance purposes.
> Your location is retrieved by AAA Mobile directly from the GPS unit in your wireless device only when you request it via the services provided by AAA Mobile. AAA Mobile does not provide AAA, or any other entity, a means to retrieve your location without your knowledge and consent.
> Your location information is retained by AAA and NIM only for the purposes of delivering the services provided by AAA Mobile and for internal quality assurance measures. When you request AAA member Roadside Service, your location is made available to the AAA member roadside assistance call center strictly for use in directing the appropriate service personnel and equipment to where you are. This member roadside assistance location information cannot be retrieved for any other purpose by AAA or any other entity.[148]

Likewise, Trimble Outdoors (provider of an application which "transforms your phone into a GPS device, providing you the ultimate outdoor experience. With Trimble Outdoors, you can find your way, avoid getting lost, and record and track your outdoor experiences"[149]) includes in its Terms of Use the provision:

> Notice about Location Based Services. When you use the Software used with the Trimble Outdoors Services to voluntarily upload and share Adventure Planner Trips through Site, information regarding your geographic location(s) may be accessed and disclosed through the Software. You agree to notify any other users associated with your Trimble Outdoors account of this feature.[150]

The Trimble Outdoors Terms of Use statement (dated July 21, 2008) also includes the company-specific provision:

> Notice for Alltel users
> By subscribing to and/or using this application, you, the user of the location based service, agree that Alltel Communications, LLC. ("Alltel") may disclose your location information to a third party service provider or providers in order to deliver the location based services you requested. You should not initiate this service if you do not want your location shared with these third party service providers. You control when your location is shared with others by managing the settings on the application. You authorize the disclosure of your location to those third parties you wish to receive your location. You may revoke the foregoing consents within the application and by deleting the application from your handset. Alltel may retain your location information for as long as it has a business need to do so. Alltel does not guarantee the accuracy or completeness of any location information displayed through this application. Always use caution when disclosing personally identifiable information about yourself or your location to others.[151]

CONCLUSION

As the foregoing indicates, the applications marketplace is complex, and multi-dimensional. It is comprised of applications developers, third-party platform enablers, applications store operators, and companies which span all three of these functional categories. The applications marketplace is evolving, as
