RE: 16 CFR Part 306; Automotive Fuel Ratings, Certification and Posting; Project No. R811005

To Whom It May Concern:

For many Americans owning a vehicle is a necessity. We need them to get to work, doctors, grocery stores, etc. because there is no public transportation available. Vehicles are the second most expensive item in a household budget, after the mortgage or rent.

How could the FTC even consider allowing the sale of a gasoline that would destroy these vehicles, thereby causing great financial distress to millions of Americans, many of whom are already having a difficult time making ends meet? How could an organization that was created to protect the US citizenry turn on us and instead protect the profits of an already bloated, greedy industry?

Sincerely,
Karen Kirchdoerfer, PA
