Re: In the Matter of Phusion Projects, LLC - FTC File No. 112 3084

Dear Mr. Clark:

We, the undersigned Attorneys General and City Attorney, respond to the Federal Trade Commission's request for comments concerning the proposed consent order ("Order") to resolve charges against Phusion Projects, LLC, Jaisen Freeman, Christopher Hunter, and Jeffrey Wright ("Phusion"") regarding the marketing of Four Loko, a flavored malt beverage (FMB) sold in 23.5 ounce (oz) cans with 11% or 12% alcohol by volume (ABV).

As the Chief Legal Officers of our respective states and jurisdictions, we are concerned about the dangers and economic costs which excessive alcohol consumption, particularly binge drinking, inflicts on our citizens and society. As a major public health problem, binge drinking accounts for more than half of the country's 79,000 annual alcohol-related deaths and increases the chances of motor vehicle crashes, violence, HIV and sexually transmitted disease, and unplanned pregnancy. At the same time, binge drinking accounts for most of the staggering economic costs – for health care, criminal justice resources and lost worker productivity -- resulting from excessive drinking. We are particularly concerned about the role played by "single serving" marketing of supersized, high alcohol FMBs -- in disarmingly sweet, fruit flavors and eye-catching brightly colored cans -- in normalizing and promoting excessive alcohol consumption and binge drinking, especially among youth and young adults.

&lt;sup>2</sup> According to a new study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the cost of excessive alcohol consumption in the United States in 2006 reached $223.5 billion or about $1.90 per drink. Three-quarters of this cost resulted from binge drinking. E. Bouchery, et al., The Excessive Costs of Excessive Alcohol Consumption in the U.S., 2006, American Journal of Preventive Medicine (Nov. 2011), published online at http://www.ajpmonline.org. See, http://www.cdc.gov/media/releases/2011/p1017 alcohol consumption.html?source=govdelivery.

We commend the FTC for investigating Phusion's marketing of a supersized, high alcohol FMB as if it were a single serving of alcohol when, in fact, one can of Four Loko contains 4.7 servings of alcohol. Consuming one can of Four Loko in a single occasion is "binge drinking," namely, consuming four or more drinks of alcohol per occasion for women or five or more drinks per occasion for men. We are thus pleased that the FTC's complaint recognizes that "an individual cannot safely consume a 23.5 oz can of 11% or 12% ABV Four Loko on a single occasion" and Phusion's express or implied representations to the contrary constitute unfair or deceptive practices or false advertising in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.<sup>3</sup>

We agree with the FTC that federal action is needed to address the health and safety risks presented by Four Loko and other supersized, high alcohol FMBs like it, particularly because these new products significantly affect young consumers. It is in this positive spirit that we offer the following comments about the Order. We also encourage the FTC to expand its investigation to include all similar supersized, high alcohol FMBs that are marketed as if they were safe to consume as a single serving, thereby promoting dangerous binge drinking behavior.

COMMENTS ABOUT THE PROPOSED ORDER

1. The Order should limit FMB containers to two servings of alcohol -- the label disclosure and resealability provisions, while positive steps, do not adequately address the "single serving" nature of the product.

In its complaint, the FTC alleges that through unfair, deceptive or false statements and depictions, Phusion represents that a 23.5 oz can of 11% or 12% ABV Four Loko contains alcohol equivalent to one or two regular, 12 oz beers or 2 servings of alcohol (1.2 oz of ethanol). See, e.g., FTC Complaint ¶ 9 (emphasis added). Although not stated, we assume that the FTC's allegation is premised upon a reasonable consumer's expectation that a "single serving" container provides about one, and certainly no more than two, servings. With regard to alcohol, this is especially important because moderate drinking means consuming no more than two drinks a day for men and one drink a day for women. 4 At the same time, excessive alcohol consumption, or heavy drinking, means consuming an average of more than one alcoholic beverage per day for women and an average of more than two alcoholic beverages per day for men, and any drinking by pregnant women or underage youth.<sup>5</sup>

"Single-serve" or "ready-to-drink" containers of alcohol beverages, sold in individual cans or bottles and displayed in self-serve, refrigerated cabinets in convenience stores and other outlets, have become an increasingly large part of the alcohol beverage industry. Moreover, a growing number of malt beverages – FMBs as well as light, regular and other beers - are sold in 24 oz cans which are recognized as "single serves." The Order does not prohibit Phusion from instructing retailers to display the 12% ABV/23.5 oz cans in refrigerated boxes alongside other lower alcohol, single serve, ready-to-drink beverages. As a result, 12% ABV/23.5 oz cans of Four Loko (containing 4.7 servings of alcohol) will continue to sit on retailers' shelves alongside other "single serve" cans of malt-based alcoholic beverages. See FTC Complaint, Exhibit C-2. The FTC's proposed disclosure and resealability requirements alone do not appear likely to "cure" these single-serve and ready-to-drink aspects of the product from the perspective of the reasonable consumer. Accordingly, we recommend that the FTC consider amending the Order to limit the total amount of alcohol per "single serving" container to two standard drinks, irrespective of labeling and resealability.

Limiting the number of servings in a single-serve container is not without FTC precedent. A similar issue was presented in In re Canandaigua Wine Company, 114 F.T.C. 349 (1991), wherein the Commission investigated the marketing and advertising of a chilled high-alcohol wine called "Cisco." The Commission alleged, in part, that a single 375 ml bottle of Cisco wine contained as much alcohol as 5 servings of 80 proof vodka, but was marketed as single-serve and sold alongside lower alcohol wine coolers. The Commission ordered Canandaigua Wine Co. to cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication, that any package of product with 14% to 24% ABV is a "single-serve" container, unless the contents are 100 ml or less -- the equivalent of .8 to 1.4 servings of alcohol.

The Commission also prohibited Canandaigua Wine Co. from displaying its product on retail shelves next to any alcoholic beverage with less than 7% ABV. Id.

2. If the Order does not limit FMB containers to 2 servings of alcohol, its provisions should apply to FMB containers with 2 or more servings of alcohol – and not 2.5 or more servings as currently proposed.

The Complaint alleges that Phusion falsely represents that 23.5 oz/11% or 12% ABV Four Loko contains alcohol equivalent to one or two regular, 12 oz beers. Complaint ¶ 9. One regular beer (12 oz/5% ABV), which contains .6 oz of ethanol, is considered one standard serving of alcohol. However, the Order requires Phusion to take corrective measures only when the product exceeds 1.5 oz ethanol or 2.5 servings of alcohol. The Order thus permits Phusion to market as much as 2.5 servings of alcohol (1.5 oz of ethanol) as if it were one serving and avoid the Order's requirements for label disclosure and resealability, and its prohibition against depicting consumption directly from the can. By condoning the marketing of "single serving" FMBs with 2.5 servings of alcohol, the Order would undermine federal guidelines for moderate drinking.<sup>9</sup> At the same time, it would create a gap between a reasonable consumer's expectation of the number of servings of alcohol in a single serving container (at most two servings), and the threshold for corrective action (more than 2.5 servings). Accordingly, we recommend that the terms of the Order apply to any container with more than two servings of alcohol.

<sup>24</sup>ounce-beer-can-production-line/83428/. Another industry report from 2009 valued the single serve segment of the beer business at $3.2 billion and stated that "single-serve 24-ounce packages represent almost 11 percent of the case volume sold in the c-store channel, making it a key package in a channel designed around convenience and immediate consumption." http://www.crownimportsllc.com/latestnews/pdf/CXCL_24ozCans_Rls.pdf; see also http://www.nacsonline.com/NACS/News/Daily/Pages%20Archive/ND1016094.aspx

3. The Order should define "resealable."

The Order prohibits Phusion from selling any covered FMB in a container that provides more than 1.5 oz/2.5 servings of alcohol unless the container is "resealable." Proposed Order, Part II. However, the Order does not define the term "resealable." The FTC has explained that the resealability requirement "makes it possible for consumers to drink a portion of the container's content and to save some for later" as part of the remedy "to address the allegedly false representation that Four Loko can be consumed on a single occasion." To achieve this objective, we recommend that the Order define "resealable" to mean, at a minimum, a device or method that retains the carbonation of the product, prevents spillage, and remains affixed to the container during consumption so that it is available for use without requiring the consumer to hold it or keep track of it.

4. The Order's prohibitions against depicting consumption directly from the container should be clarified and expanded to address the misrepresentations alleged in the Complaint.

The FTC's Complaint alleges that Phusion made false or misleading representations through both "statements and depictions." FTC Complaint ¶¶ 9-11, 13 (emphasis added). Moreover, the Complaint cites the website photo and caption in Exhibit B4 as a representation by Phusion that one 23.5 oz/12% ABV Four Loko contains alcohol equivalent to one or two regular, 12 oz beers. FTC Complaint ¶¶ 8, 9. The Complaint describes the photo ("three young men, one of whom is holding a can of Four Loko") and the caption ("first guy drank 1 [can], second guy drank 2, third guy drank 3, fourth guy was on the ground"). Id. ¶ 8.B. Neither the photo nor the caption depicts consumption directly from the can. However, as alleged in the FTC's Complaint, the photo and/or the caption falsely represent that one entire can (or more) of Four Loko may be safely consumed on a single occasion.

In contrast, the proposed Order provides that Phusion "shall not depict" any covered product containing more than 1.5 ounces of ethanol "being consumed directly from the container." Proposed Order, Part III.B. We recommend that the FTC clarify and expand this provision to comport with the allegations in the Complaint by amending it to read "shall not depict or represent any covered product containing more than [1.2] ounces of ethanol being consumed directly from the container or in its entirety on a single occasion." This change would ensure that the provision addresses Phusion's false representations (whether by words or pictures) that a

&lt;sup>9</sup> According to the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, moderate drinking is defined as having no more than 1 drink per day for women and no more than 2 drinks per day for men. This definition is referring to the amount consumed on any single day and is not intended as an average over several days. http://www.cdc.gov/alcohol/faqs.htm#moderateDrinking can of Four Loko can be safely consumed on a single occasion as alleged in the FTC's Complaint.

5. After the Order is made final, the impact of the label disclosure should be studied.

The Order requires, for any container that provides more than 2.5 servings of alcohol, that Phusion disclose on the label, "This [can/bottle] has as much alcohol as [x] regular (12 oz, 5% alc/vol) beers."

The FTC explains that this label disclosure is designed to alert consumers to the actual number of servings in the container. <sup>12</sup> As officials entrusted with enforcing our respective states' consumer protection laws, we agree with the FTC's goal and believe that it is crucial to give consumers information so they may better understand the nature and content of products in the marketplace, especially alcoholic beverages. However, there are currently no federal regulations requiring serving facts on beverage alcohol. <sup>13</sup> Consequently, the Order would make Four Loko the first (and only) alcoholic beverage on the market to provide this information on its label.

In view of reports by Four Loko's consumers of excessive alcohol consumption,<sup>14</sup> often with the express intent of becoming intoxicated,<sup>15</sup> we are concerned about the current lack of data on how the proposed label disclosure will influence the purchasing and consumption decisions of these consumers and whether it results in any unintended consequences. We therefore recommend that the FTC work with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institute for Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, or other appropriate public health authorities to study the impact of this label disclosure on the target market.

Four Loko

BREAKING NEWS: Four Loko is turning people into crazy clowns!

Each week we're going to creep up one of your pictures!

How to Enter: upload a clear image of your face (with your favorite Loko in hand). Get ready to be clowned.

We'll be posting the first reveal tomorrow!

Down for getting Creepy Clowned this Halloween?

Four Loko to relabel cans to show alcohol content, after pressure from FTC

www.washingtonpost.com

The maker of an alcoholic drink that appeals to teenagers will start disclosing that each can of the beverage contains as much alcohol as four to five beers.
