Children at Risk: Foster Care and Beyond

This panel will explore the unique challenges of identity theft among foster children, who often have fewer resources to help them address this crime and recover from victimization. These children are particularly vulnerable because their personal information is easily accessible by many, including relatives, foster parents, and state employees. This panel will examine all of these challenging issues, as well as assess state and federal legislation related to foster children and identity theft. Panelists will also provide useful tips for those in positions to advocate for youth in the foster care system.
