<sup>1</sup> For example, as noted in the Official Rules section on Eligibility, the contest is not open to people with certain financial or family ties to the judges or the FTC. The FTC's IoT Home Inspector Challenge website also contains information about the competition judges: Georgia Weidman of Shevirah Inc.; L. Jean Camp of Indiana University; Tadayoshi Kohno of the University of Washington; David Wollman of the U.S. Department of Commerce's National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST); and Dan Klinedinst of Carnegie Mellon University's CERT Coordination Center (see <https://www.ftc.gov/node/1009873>).

Privacy Act Statement: The FTC is collecting this information under the authority of the FTC Act and the America COMPETES Act, for purposes of administering this contest. We use this information to verify that you are eligible to participate in this contest and, if you are a Team Representative, that you are authorized to represent your team. This form is voluntary, but if you do not complete it in full, you will not be eligible to participate. If you later qualify for a prize, we may ask you to complete a separate form to verify that you meet additional eligibility requirements, as stated in the Official Rules, before the FTC may award that prize to you. This information will be treated as part of the FTC's general nonpublic program records system, FTC I-1, and may be disclosed as required by law or as authorized as a routine use. To learn more about how the FTC handles the information it collects, and to see a complete list of routine uses, please read the FTC's privacy policy at <https://www.ftc.gov/site-information/privacy-policy>.
