

Rommell Hippolyte

Mr. Hippolyte is the Research Economist at the CARICOM Competition Commission (CCC). He has been employed at the regional competition enforcement agency for 9 years, where his main responsibilities are: investigating competition complaints of a cross-border nature; reviewing the Community Competition Policy with the aim to strengthening its enforcement; organizing capacity building workshops on competition law and policy; and conducting research to promote the benefits of competition law and policy.

Prior to the CCC, Mr. Hippolyte was an economist at the Ministry of Agriculture in Barbados. He was the Ministry's focal point for several years for agricultural trade matters, including the WTO negotiations, the CARIFORUM-EU EPA and the CARICOM-Canada negotiations. Mr. Hippolyte was also responsible for domestic economic policy formulation for the sector.

He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics and Management (Hon.), and a Master of Science degree in Financial and Business Economics from the University of the West Indies, Cavehill Campus. He also has a Master of Laws (Merit) degree from the University of London, with a specialization in competition law.
