FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

FINDINGS AND ORDERS, DECEMBER 1, 1937, TO MAY 31, 1938

IN THE MATTER OF

BOURJOIS, INC., AND BARBARA GOULD SALES CORPORATION

Docket 2838. Complaint, June 9, 1936—Decision, Dec. 4, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of cosmetics and other toilet preparations, and in sale and distribution thereof through its corporate subsidiary, and said subsidiary engaged in selling, distributing, and shipping to purchasers in every State, under corporate name including words "Barbara Gould," products of said manufacturer, including so-called "Skin Food," "Skin Cream," and "Face Powder," sold under designations including aforesaid words; and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale of cosmetics and other toilet preparations in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

- (a) Sold their "Evening in Paris Talcum" in glass containers with label displaying words "Evening in Paris, BOURJOIS, New York—Paris," and enclosed in cardboard containers similarly displaying aforesaid words, together with depiction of certain scenes peculiar to Paris, and including the Eiffel Tower, notwithstanding fact talcum powder in question was compounded and processed from separately imported ingredients and assembled and packaged for sale and distribution at factory, in this country, of said first-named corporation;
- (b) Represented, in various periodicals, including magazines of Nation-wide circulation, and in newspapers of wide interstate circulation, and in advertising matrices sent for reproduction to retailers throughout the United States, that preparation first sold by them under designation "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" and thereafter, substantially unchanged, as "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream," had been irradiated with ultra-violet rays, and that, applied to the skin, said "Food" released rays of light and sunlight of therapeutic and beneficial value, and that its said similarly designated "Irradiated Face Powder," and its said "Irradiated Skin Food," were beautifying, stimulating, and beneficial in treatment of skin, by reason of such ultra-violet irradiation, and that its aforesaid skin cream, by reason of such treatment, and as a consequence thereof, released, when applied to skin, atomic oxygen, which was absorbed thereby, and thus conferred upon users thereof therapeutic and beneficial results, facts being processes used in compounding said products did not and do not have result of causing them to absorb and retain, and, upon use, emit sufficient ultra-violet rays to be beneficial in treatment of skin, and said

26 F. T. C.

"Face Powder," "Skin Food," and "Skin Cream" gave out no radiation whatever, nor ultra-violet rays or sunlight or light or re-irradiation of any kind, and emitted no form of light rays;

- (c) Represented, through inclusion of words "Skin Food" in aforesaid designation of their above referred to product, that said "Irradlated Skin Food" possessed such properties as to constitute a food for the skin or tissues, and that said preparation awakened and restored the youth glands of the skin, facts being it did not possess such properties or characteristics as to constitute such a food, did not serve to furnish nourishment to skin, body has no "youth glands," and no glands thereof were restored or revived by use of its products or preparations externally applied; and
- (d) Displayed and made use of name "Barbara Gould," as above indicated, in connection with its aforesaid products, and represented that their said products were developed or discovered after research or experimentation by said Barbara Gould, or that said Barbara Gould collaborated with a scientist or scientists in developing or originating such products, through such statements as "After extensive research and experiment in her laboratories, Barbara Gould, internationally known Beauty Counsellor, has developed this fine face powder. * * *," "This new Barbara Gould Skin Food * * *," "Barbara Gould Says: 'My Irradiated Skin Food gently, safely, supplles tiny rays of light to your skin!'" etc., and " 'If ultra-violet-rays should be introduced into a beauty cream how marvelous that would be for a woman's skin!' thought Barbara Gould. So, in collaboration with a scientist in a great Eastern University she developed her new Irradiated Skin Food," etc., facts being name was fictitious and was an alias for an otherwise named person who, at one time, was in their employ as beauty counsellor, and person referred to did not discover or develop products in question, had no scientific degree or degrees, was not skilled in scientific preparation of cosmetics, and had no special knowledge regarding therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays;

With capacity and tendency to mislead purchasing public into mistakenly believing that said "Food" gave nourishment to, and acted as a food for, the skin, and to confuse and mislead members of such public into erroneous belief that there were glands in the body which would be restored and revived through use of such products, variously developed, as above noted, by supposed Barbara Gould as a person of special skill and knowledge regarding the therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays on the skin, etc., and who, by reason thereof, had incorporated, with beneficial results noted, sunlight and ultra-violet rays into aforesaid product, and that users thereof, through such emission of ultra-violet rays and release of atomic oxygen, would benefit and receive results similar to those obtained from exposure to natural sunshine and from ultra-violet rays, and that talcum powder above referred to was made in France and imported to the United States, and to induce members of purchasing public to buy and use aforesaid preparation because of erroneous beliefs thus brought about, and with effect, by reason of belief of substantial portion of purchasing public, and preference of many thereof, and supposed properties or source or origin, as case might be, of aforesaid preparations, of giving added sales value thereto, and with capacity and tendency further unfairly to divert trade to them from their competitors above referred to, of whom some do not in any manner misrepresent the therapeutic value or effect of their said preparations, nor place of origin thereof:

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Norwood, trial examiner.

Mr. Astor Hogg for the Commission.

Olwany, Eisner & Donnelly, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Bourjois, Inc., a corporation, and Barbara Gould Sales Corp., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bourjois, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its factory located at Rochester in said State and its office and principal place of business located at 35 West Thirty-fourth Street, New York, in said State. Respondent, Barbara Gould Sales Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 35 West Thirty-fourth Street, in the city of New York in said State. The stock of respondent, Barbara Gould Sales Corp. is wholly owned by respondent, Bourjois, Inc., and it, Barbara Gould Sales Corp., is a selling agent of respondent, Bourjois, Inc., and is completely dominated and controlled by respondent, Bourjois, Inc. Respondent, Bourjois, Inc., has been for more than one year last past, and now is, engaged in the manufacture of cosmetics and other toilet preparations and in the sale and distribution of same through its selling agent and subsidiary, respondent Barbara Gould Sales Corp., and now causes, and for more than one year last past has caused, its said products when sold by it and by respondent Barbara Gould Sales Corp. to be shipped from said place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of New York and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in said products sold by the respondents.

Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, persons, and firms engaged in the sale of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents adopted and now use, as and for their trade names for certain of their products the words "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream," "Evening In Paris Talcum," "Talc Soir de Paris," and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder," and cause said trade names to appear prominently displayed in their advertisements and advertising matter, letterheads, and stationery; on labels affixed to the containers in which said products are packed, sold, and distributed; and on the wrappers in which said containers are packed. The respondents also cause the words "London," "New York," "Paris," "Barcelona," "Buenos Aires," "Mexico," and "Havana" to appear prominently displayed on such labels.

PAR. 3. For a good many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been led to believe, and does believe, that exposure of the human body to the natural sunshine and to ultra-violet rays produces beneficial results to the skin.

Perfumes, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in London, Paris, Barcelona, Buenos Aires, Mexico, and Havana and imported into the United States have for many years enjoyed widespread popularity and goodwill among the trade and the consuming public throughout the United States, many of whom consider and believe that perfumes, cosmetics and other toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in Paris, London, Barcelona, Buenos Aires, Mexico, or Havana and other foreign countries, are superior in quality and other desired characteristics to such commodities manufactured in the United States. Many of the consuming public throughout the United States purchase perfumes, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States in preference to perfumes, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 4. In and by the use of the words "Evening In Paris Talcum," "Talc Soir de Paris," and other labels of the products sold and distributed as aforesaid, respondents impliedly represent that the products so labeled, sold and distributed by them have been manufactured in Paris, France, and imported into the United States, when, as a matter of fact, said products so labeled, sold, and distributed were not manufactured in Paris, France, or any other place in France and then imported into the United States but on the contrary were manufactured and compounded in the United States. In and by the use of the words "London," "New York," "Paris," "Barcelona," "Buenos Aires," "Mexico," and "Havana," respondents impliedly represent that they have factories located at those places where the products sold by them bearing such words have been manufactured and imported into the United States, when, in truth and in fact respondents do not have factories or laboratories at London, or Paris, or Barcelona, or Buenos Aires, or Mexico, or Havana, and said products were not manufactured at such places, but on the contrary were manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling their said products, respondents now represent and for more than one year last past have represented in various periodicals, including magazines and newspapers having a wide interstate circulation, the following:

Beautifying, stimulating and beneficial to the skin—Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder * * *

After extensive research and experiment in her laboratories, Barbara Gould, internationally known Beauty Counsellor, has developed this fine face powder. A most refreshing effect is obtained with this powder which is irradiated with ultra-violet rays to be had in your skin tone.

BARBARA GOULD

Sunshine While You Sleep Without Tanning Your Skin. New Irradiated Skin Food By Barbara Gould.

Barbara Gould's New Skin Food slowly, gently, safely applies tiny ultra-violet rays to your skin all night long but you cannot see them * * * or feel them! They do not tan the skin like the ultra-violet rays of the sun, nor do they give you a sunburn! So mild are the rays, however, that they give only benefits to your skin.

Directly irradiated with ultra-violet rays. That is why beauty results show so quickly so shortly after you have begun to use Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food * * *

Barbara Gould Says:

My Irradiated Skin Food gently, safely, supplies tiny rays of light to your skin all night long! You cannot see them or feel them but they reawaken the youth glands of your skin!

A beauty cream irradiated with ultra-violet rays—what marvelous things that would do for a woman, said Barbara Gould.

If ultra-violet rays should be introduced into a beauty cream how marvelous that would be for a woman's skin! thought Barbara Gould. So, in collaboration with a scientist in a great Eastern University she developed her new Irradiated Skin Food, into which is introduced just the right amount of ultra-violet rays to benefit the skin, without including "tan" or sunburn.

Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food * * * actually contains the health-giving rays of sunlight * * * all night long it softly sheds its invisible tiny rays into the depths of every pore—gently coaxes tired, sluggish glands to normal vigor and health * * * the gentlest, safest of sun treatments.

All said representations and statements, together with other statements not herein detailed, purported to be descriptive of respondents' products and of the beneficial results that may reasonably be expected to be obtained by the users of said products.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact the representations made by the respondents in aid of the sale of their products are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading and incorrect. The product sold and distributed under the trade name of Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food did not and does not possess such properties or characteristics as to be a food for the human skin or tissues. There are no such glands in the human body as "youth glands." The name of Barbara Gould was and is a fictitious name and an alias for one Ruth Frances, who is employed by said respondents as a beauty counsellor, and she did not discover or develop such products, and she has no scientific degrees and is not skilled in the scientific preparation of cosmetics, and has no special knowledge regarding the therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays. The process used in compounding said products did not and does not have the result of causing them to absorb, retain, and, upon use, emit sufficient ultra-violet rays to be beneficial in the treatment of the human skin.

PAR. 7. The use of the trade name "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" has a capacity and tendency to deceive the purchasing public into believing that the products sold by respondents give nourishment to and acts as a food for the human skin. The representations of respondents as hereinabove set forth and other similar representations made by the respondents have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that there are glands in the human body known as "youth glands," which will be restored and revived if respondents' products are used; that the alleged Barbara Gould, in the employ of respondents, after extensive research and experiments, developed the talcum powder "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder," and that she has special skill and knowledge regarding the therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays on the human skin and by her skill and knowledge has incorporated natural sunshine and ultra-violet rays into the products sold by respondents, which products, if applied to the skin will produce beneficial results; that the products sold by the respondents contain and, when applied to the human skin, emit sufficient violet rays to be beneficial in the treatment of the human skin; that the products sold by respondents and especially those designated by them as "Evening In Paris Talcum," "Talc Soir de Paris," were manufactured in France and imported into the United States, and that the products labeled with the words "London," "Paris," "Barcelona," "Buenos Aires," "Mexico," and "Havana" were all products manufactured in respondents' factories or laboratories in either London, Paris, Barcelona, Buenos Aires, Mexico, or Havana, and were products imported into the United States from foreign countries; that users of said products will receive beneficial results and results similar to those received from natural sunshine and from ultra-violet rays.

The said representations of respondents have had and do have the tendency and capacity to induce members of the purchasing public to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered, as above set forth, and as a result thereof to unfairly divert trade to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale, in interstate commerce, of similar competing preparations who truthfully represent the origin of and the therapeutic value of their respective products. As a further result thereof injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competitors in commerce as hereinabove set out.

There are among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, many who sell and distribute in commerce similar preparations who do not misrepresent the origin or place of manufacture of such products or the properties or qualities, or therapeutic virtues or effects of their said competing products.

PAR. 8. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

the Federal Trade Commission, on June 9, 1936, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Bourjois, Inc., and Barbara Gould Sales Corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Astor Hogg, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by Mark Eisner, attorney for respondents, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed at the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Bourjois, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 35 West Thirty-fourth Street, city of New York, in said State. The stock of respondent Barbara Gould Sales Corporation is wholly owned by respondent Bourjois, Inc. Respondent Bourjois, Inc., has been for more than one year last past, and now is, engaged in the manufacture of cosmetics and other toilet preparations at its factory located at Rochester, N. Y., and in the sale and distribution of said products to and through its subsidiary, Barbara Gould Sales Corporation, and through other subsidiaries. Respondent Barbara Gould Sales Corporation is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 35 West Thirty-fourth Street in the city of New York, in said State.

Respondents cause, and for more than one year last past have caused, their said products, when sold by them, to be shipped from said places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of New York and others located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in said products sold by the respondents. Barbara Gould Sales Corporation purchases the products sold by it exclusively from Bourjois, Inc., taking deliveries from Rochester, N. Y., to New York city and Chicago, Ill. From these cities it ships said merchandise to purchasers located in every State of the United States.

Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, persons, and firms engaged in the sale of cosmetics and other toilet preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. During the year 1935 and prior thereto, respondents manufactured and sold a skin preparation under the trade name and brand "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food." On or about July 1, 1935, the label on said product was changed and substantially the same product was labeled, branded and marketed by respondents as "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream." During the year 1935 and prior thereto, respondents manufactured and sold a face powder which they labeled and branded as "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder." Respondents have manufactured and sold, and do now manufacture and sell, a talcum powder which they brand and label as "Evening in Paris Talcum."

PAR. 3. The talcum powder designated "Evening in Paris Talcum" is placed in a glass container to which is attached a label that reads

Evening
in Paris
BOURJOIS
New York—Paris

The said glass container of talcum powder is enclosed in a cardboard container on which appear the words

Evening
in Paris
BOURJOIS

and on which cardboard container appear certain lineal outline scenes which may be observed only in Paris, France, including the Eiffel Tower located in Paris, France.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their businesses, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling their products designated "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder," "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream," respondents represented in various periodicals including magazines having a nation-wide circulation and in newspapers having a wide interstate circulation, and through advertising matrices sent to retailers throughout the United States to be reproduced, as follows:

1. Beautifying, stimulating and beneficial to the skin—Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder * * * After extensive research and experiment in her laboratories, Barbara Gould, internationally known Beauty Counsellor, has developed this fine face powder. Barbara Gould Says:

4. Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream has a normalizing effect on all types of skin. This is brought about through the atomic oxygen element of the cream which is imparted to it by the irradiation of ultra-violet rays. U. V. R. This cream has a revitalizing rejuvenating and normalizing effect on all skins—

Due to irradiation with ultra-violet rays, this cream literally teems with oxygen atoms. They, too, are released to your skin—toning, invigorating and generally building up normal health.

Findings

PAR. 5. In the manner and by the means aforesaid, respondents represent that their talcum powder designated "Evening in Paris Talcum" and sold and distributed by them, was, and is, manufactured in France and imported into the United States; that their product, "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" was a beauty cream irradiated with ultra-violet rays, which, when applied to the skin, released rays of light and sunlight to the skin, which were of therapeutic and beneficial value; that "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" possessed such properties and characteristics as to be a food for the human skin; that "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" awakened and restored the youth glands of the skin; that one Barbara Gould, an internationally known beauty counsellor, had developed the products "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder" and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," which products were beautifying, stimulating and beneficial in the treatment of the skin by reason of the fact that they had been irradiated with ultra-violet rays; that the product "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream" had been irradiated with ultra-violet rays and, as a consequence, released atomic oxygen, when applied to the skin, which was absorbed through the skin and that by reason thereof, therapeutic and beneficial results were received by the users of such cream.

The representations made by the respondents as aforesaid are misleading, for the following reasons: The talcum powder designated as "Evening in Paris Talcum" was not manufactured in France and imported into the United States, but on the contrary was manufactured at Rochester, N. Y. The ingredients of the "Evening in Paris Talcum" are separately imported into the United States and compounded and processed into the completed product, then assembled and packaged for sale and distribution at the factory of respondent Bourjois, Inc., located at Rochester, N. Y. The product designated "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" does not possess such properties or characteristics as to be a food for the human skin or tissues. Such product did not serve to furnish nourishment to the skin. There are no such glands in the human body as "youth glands." Glands in the human body are not restored or revived by the use of respondents' products or by the use of any preparations applied externally. The processes used in compounding said products did not, and do not, have the result of causing them to absorb, retain and, upon use, emit sufficient ultra-violet rays to be beneficial in the treatment of the human skin. As a matter of fact, it has been conclusively shown, and the Commission finds, that "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder," "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream" give out no radiation whatever, neither do they give out any ultra-violet rays or sun rays or light or re-irradiation of any kind. They emit no form of light rays.

The name "Barbara Gould" is a fictitious name used by respondents and the name "Barbara Gould" was an alias for Ruth Frances who, at one time, was employed by respondents as a beauty counsellor. She did not discover or develop such products and she has no scientific degree or degrees and is not skilled in the scientific preparation of cosmetics and has no special knowledge regarding the therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays.

PAR. 6. For a good many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been led to believe, and does believe, that exposure of the human body to the natural sunlight and to ultra-violet rays produces beneficial results. To represent a cosmetic as one which emits ultra-violet rays or sunshine causes such cosmetic to have an added sales value.

Perfumes, cosmetics and other toilet preparations manufactured in France and imported into the United States have for many years enjoyed prosperity and good-will among the trade and consuming public throughout the United States. Many of the consuming public throughout the United States purchase perfumes, cosmetics and other toilet preparations manufactured in France and imported into the United States in preference to perfumes, cosmetics and other toilet preparations manufactured in the United States. Domestic cosmetics labelled as of French origin causes such cosmetics to have added sales value and enables dealers in the cosmetics so labelled to sell same more readily than would otherwise be the case.

PAR. 7. The use of the trade name "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" had the capacity and tendency to mislead the purchasing public into mistakenly believing that said product sold by respondents gave nourishment to and acted as a food for the human skin. The representations of respondents as hereinabove set forth have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to confuse and mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that there are glands in the human body known as "Youth glands" which will be restored and revived if respondents' products are used; that the alleged Barbara Gould employed by respondents, after extensive research and experiments, developed the products "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder" and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," that she had special skill and knowledge regarding the therapeutic effect of ultra-violet rays on the human skin and by her skill and knowledge had incorporated natural sunlight and ultra-violet rays into said products which, if applied to the skin, would produce beneficial results; that the products designated "Barbara Gould Irradiated Face Powder," "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food," and "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Cream," when applied to the human skin, would emit ultra-violet rays and release atomic oxygen which would be absorbed through the skin, all of which would be beneficial in the treatment of the human skin and that users of said products would receive beneficial results and results similar to those received from exposure to natural sunshine and from ultra-violet rays; that the product designated "Evening In Paris Talcum" was manufactured in France and imported into the United States. .

Order

The said representations of respondents have had and now have the tendency and capacity to induce members of the purchasing public to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs brought about as above set forth. The representations made by respondents as aforesaid have the capacity and tendency unfairly to divert trade to respondents from competitors herein referred to, some of which said competitors do not in any manner misrepresent the therapeutic value or effects of said preparations nor the place of origin of such products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents Bourjois, Inc., and Barbara Gould Sales Corporation are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Bourjois, Inc., and Barbara Gould Sales Corporation, corporations, their respective officers, rep-representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cosmetics and other toilet preparations in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, that said products contain any beneficial elements of the natural rays of the sun, or that the use of said products will bring the beneficial effects of sunshine to the users thereof, or that said products emit or give off ultra-violet rays or any other rays which are beneficial in the treatment of the human skin;

2. Representing in any manner that their face creams when applied to the skin, release oxygen which is absorbed through the skin or that said creams are beneficial in the treatment of the human skin by reason thereof;

3. Representing, through the use of the words "skin foods" or any other word or words of similar import to describe or designate their products, or in any manner, that the product designated "Barbara Gould Irradiated Skin Food" or said product under any other designation or any other product containing similar ingredients and having substantially similar properties, possesses such properties as to be a food for the human skin or tissues;

4. Representing in any manner that any of their said products will reawaken or restore so-called "youth glands" or any other glands;

5. Representing in any manner that their products were developed or discovered after research or experimentation by one Barbara Gould, or that Barbara Gould collaborated with a scientist, or scientists, in developing or originating any of such products;

6. Using the word "Paris" or "France," or any other word or words, or any design, outline, symbol, or illustration suggesting French origin to advertise, brand, label, designate, or otherwise describe talcum powder, cosmetics or toilet preparations compounded, bottled, packaged, and assembled in the United States solely from imported ingredients without clearly stating in immediate connection and conjunction therewith in letters of equal size and conspicuousness that said products were compounded, bottled, packaged and assembled in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3177. Complaint, July 20, 1937—Decision, Dec. 4, 1937

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of clocks, in commerce among the various States, and in furnishing her customers and prospective customers with push cards for use in sale of her said clocks, in accordance with said cards' explanatory legend, under which amount paid for chance was dependent upon number disclosed under card's discs, receipt of clock was dependent upon chance selection of feminine name corresponding to that disclosed under master seal after sale of all discs, and operator of card was compensated by receipt of one of such articles; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing her said products—

Made use of, and sold same under and through, method and plan involving distribution of said clocks to purchasing public by means of lottery scheme or gift enterprise, through sale thereof in accordance with push cards aforesaid and under scheme or plan, in accordance with explanatory legend contained thereon, by which amount paid for chance to receive clocks thus sold was dependent on particular number concealed under and disclosed by removal of card's various discs and receipt of clock was contingent upon selection of name of girl corresponding to that concealed under master seal, and operator was similarly compensated by receipt of such an article, and thereby supplied to and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of her merchandise in accordance with such plan, in violation of public policy long recognized by the common law and in criminal statutes, and contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by her said method and element of chance involved in sale of clocks to purchasing public, and game of chance, or sale of a chance to procure such article at price much less than normal retail price thereof, and were induced to buy and sell her said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who did not use same or equivalent methods, and of diverting trade and custom to her from her said competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frieda Wolchin, individually and trading as Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is an individual, doing business under the name and style of Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, with her principal office and place of business located at 418 South Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. She is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. She causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from her place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of her business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said clocks, has furnished her customers and prospective customers with a device commonly called a "push card," the use of which in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent involves the distribution of said clocks to the purchasing public by means of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. The method or sales plan suggested by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

The said push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and concealed within each disc is a number; directly above each disc is a girl's name. The said push card also has a master seal, and concealed within such master seal is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Purchasers select one of the discs and remove the same, disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 pay 29¢. The push card bears a legend informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated and by which the clocks described thereon are to be distributed. When all of the discs have been selected and the master seal removed, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives one of the clocks heretofore referred to without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting sales by means of said card, as above described, receives one of the clocks heretofore referred to without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting a particular name until the selection has been made and the disc removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the discs have been selected. Thus, customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money they pay. The person selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives one of the clocks for a price not exceeding 29¢, which is less than the normal retail price of such clocks. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pushes from said card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name and thus obtaining a clock for a price of 29¢ or less. The said clocks are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of her merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of her merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of clocks to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a clock at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute such merchandise in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from her said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on July 20, 1937 issued, and on August 23, 1937 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Frieda Wolchin, individually and trading as Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, charging her with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said Act. Thereafter on October 27, 1937 respondent filed in the office of the Commission her answer dated October 23, 1937, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure. After the filing of said answer this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is an individual and was doing business under the name and style of Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, with her principal office and place of business located at 418 South Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. The respondent is now located at 3318 West Marquette Road, Chicago, Ill. Prior to June 15, 1937 the respondent was engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. She caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from her place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. Prior to June 15, 1937 there was a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent was in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of her business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said clocks, furnished her customers and prospective customers with a device commonly called a "push card," the use of which in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent involved the distribution of said clocks to the purchasing public by means of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. The method or sales plan suggested by respondent was substantially as follows:

The said pushcard had a number of partially perforated discs, and concealed in each disc was a number; directly above each disc was a girl's name. The said push card also had a master seal, and concealed within such master seal was a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Purchasers selected one of the discs and removed the same, disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 paid in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 paid 29¢. The push card had printed thereon a legend informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card was operated and by which the clocks described thereon were to be distributed.

When all of the discs had been selected and the master seal removed, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal received one of the clocks heretofore referred to without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting sales by means of said card, as above described, received one of the clocks heretofore referred to without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names were concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they did not know how much they would have to pay for the privilege of selecting a particular name until the selection had been made and the disc removed. The name under the master seal was concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the discs had been selected. Thus, customers selecting names which did not correspond with the name under the master seal received nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money they paid. The person selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal received one of the clocks for a price not exceeding 29¢, which was less than the normal retail price of such clocks. The purchasing public was thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pushes from said card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name and thus obtaining a clock for a price of 29¢ or less. The said clocks were thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer paid for a chance was determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnished the said push cards used the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of her merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of her merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, was, and is, a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and was, and is, contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of clocks to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a clock at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who did and do sell or distribute similar merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged were and are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that was or is contrary to public policy, and such competitors have refrained and do refrain therefrom. Many persons were attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who did not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, had the tendency and capacity to and did divert trade and custom to respondent from her said competitors who did not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Frieda Wolchin, individually and trading as Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, were, and are, to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer filed on October 27, 1937 by the respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent had violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Frieda Wolchin, individually and trading as Wright Manufacturers Distributing Company, her agents, representatives, and employes, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks and other merchandise in interstate commerce, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or similar devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell, by the use thereof, clocks or other articles of merchandise;

26 F. T. C.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to members of the public push cards or similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons by the use thereof to sell or distribute clocks or other articles of merchandise; and

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of clocks or other articles of merchandise by the use of push cards or similar devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. C. HICKSON & COMPANY

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2554. Complaint, Sept. 18, 1935—Decision, Dec. 7, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the growing and packing of citrus fruits, and in the sale thereof to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in similar sale and shipment—

- (a) Set forth, in advertisements and on labels of crates thereof, words "Indian River," through statements such as "Indian River," "Indian River Fruit Exclusively," "Groves and packing houses Ft. Pierce, Vero Beach, White City, Gifford, Mims, on the Indian River," notwithstanding fact fruit in question was not that recognized superior quality and preferred fruit raised in Indian River Valley, but was grown in area far distant therefrom, and it owned no groves or packing houses at any point within aforesaid area and raised no fruit therein; and
- (b) Falsely represented number of pieces of fruit contained in certain cartons by placing thereon figure indicating that number of pieces contained therein was greater than that of pieces of fruit actually packed therein;

With capacity and tendency to mislead purchasing public into erroneous belief that fruit thus labeled was grown in Indian River Valley area, and with effect of misleading and deceiving consuming public as to origin of such fruit and number of pieces packed in its said cartons, and of causing substantial number of purchasing public to buy its said products because of erroneous belief thus engendered, and of unfairly and substantially diverting trade in commerce involved to it from its competitors; to their injury and that of the public:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. C. Hickson and Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondent, J. C. Hickson and Company, is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, having its principal office and place of business in Miami, Fla., and has been since the issuance of its charter in the month of July 1929, engaged in the growing, packing, shipping and selling of citrus fruits, and in the course of the sale of said citrus fruits has caused the same to be transported from the place of business of the respondent in the State of Florida to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of Florida and in the District of Columbia, and has maintained a constant current of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. During the period of its corporate existence respondent has inserted, or caused to be inserted, in advertisements published by it the words and phrases—

Indian River
Indian River fruit
exclusively.
Indian River Fruit
Groves and packing houses
Fort Pierce, Vero Beach,
White City, Gifford, Mims
on the Indian River.

and has caused to be imprinted upon the labels and the crates of the fruits so sold the words "Indian River."

The use of the words "Indian River" in connection with the packing, shipping, or selling of fruit indicates to a substantial portion of the purchasing public that the fruit so packed, shipped, and sold was grown in that area along the eastern seaboard of the State of Florida drained by the Indian River and which section is widely famed for the excellence of the fruit there produced.

The effect of the use of the words as above indicated is to falsely represent to the public that the fruits to be purchased from the respondent corporation are what is known as "Indian River" fruit.

There are among the members of the purchasing public a substantial number who have an actual preference and desire for fruit characterized and known as "Indian River" fruit.

The designation of fruit as being of that class of fruit known as "Indian River" fruit indicates to the minds of a substantial number of the purchasing public that the fruit is of a superior quality, and among the industry in which respondent is engaged the superior quality of such fruit is recognized and asserted.

In truth and in fact, the fruits sold and offered for sale by the respondent under the above-stated representations are grown in an area other than that particular geographical section on the eastern seaboard of the State of Florida drained by the Indian River, and are principally, if not wholly, secured from Dade County, Fla.

PAR. 3. During the entire period of its corporate existence the respondent has advertised and offered for sale various packages of crystallized fruit and other merchandise of the character and material hereinabove described, falsely representing them to have a content weight of one pound, two pounds, three pounds, or five pounds, according to the various packages, when in truth and in fact such packages fall materially short of having the weight represented by the respondent.

PAR. 4. During the entire course of its corporate existence, respondent has falsely represented cartons of fruit to contain twenty pieces of fruit, when in truth and in fact there is a substantial deviation from such representation, the cartons of fruit so represented often containing a number materially less than twenty pieces of fruit, and in some instances only twelve pieces of fruit are contained in such cartons.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondent corporation a substantial number of persons, partnerships, and corporations who do not falsely represent the fruit offered by them for sale to be of that class of fruit known as "Indian River" fruit or who do in fact sell and offer for sale fruit grown in that territory along the eastern seaboard of the State of Florida drained by the Indian River, so that the same are truthfully represented or designated as "Indian River" fruit.

There are among the competitors of the respondent various persons, partnerships and corporations which offer for sale merchandise of a like nature and character with that in which the respondent deals, offering the same for sale to members of the purchasing public and truthfully representing the proper net weight of the fruit so offered for sale, offering the same in cartons similar to those used by the respondent but truthfully representing the exact and correct weight of the merchandise so offered.

There are among the competitors of the respondent various persons, partnerships and corporations who represent to a substantial number of the purchasing public the number of pieces of fruit to be obtained at a given price in a described carton, or otherwise, and such representation on the part of such competitors is truthful, and the number of pieces of fruit represented as being offered for sale in such packages are the number of pieces of fruit which are actually placed in such cartons or packages.

PAR. 6. The above acts and practices done by the respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on September 18, 1935, issued, and on September 20, 1935, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent; J. C. Hickson & Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Alden S. Bradley, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, no evidence was introduced by the respondent; and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. C. Hickson & Company, is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Miami, State of Florida, and since its inception in 1929 has been engaged in the business of growing, packing and selling of citrus fruits and causing said citrus fruits, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Florida to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of Florida and in the District of Columbia, and has maintained a constant current of trade and commerce in said produce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is now, and since its inception in 1929 has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and shipment of citrus fruits in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, and in the sale and distribution of citrus fruit, has caused to be inserted in advertisements published by it and imprinted on labels and crates of fruit so sold by it the following words and phrases:

Indian River,
Indian River Fruit Exclusively,
Groves and packing houses Ft. Pierce, Vero Beach, White City, Gifford, Mims, on the Indian River.

The use of the words "Indian River" in connection with the sale and distribution of citrus fruits indicates to a substantial portion of the purchasing public that the fruit so labelled was grown in an area known as "Indian River Valley," which extends from Daytona Beach to West Palm Beach in the State of Florida and is between 15 and 25 miles wide.

Among the industry in which the respondent is engaged the superior quality of citrus fruit raised in the area known as "Indian River Valley" is recognized and asserted; and there is a decided preference on the part of the purchasing public for citrus fruit grown in this area.

The citrus fruit sold and shipped by the respondent as aforesaid, under the aforementioned representation, had not been grown in the area known as "Indian River Valley" but had been grown in an area known as Dade County, which is far distant from the area known as "Indian River Valley."

The respondent does not own, nor has it ever owned groves or packing houses at any point located within the area known as "Indian River Valley," nor has the respondent raised any fruit in said area.

The use of the words "Indian River" in connection with the sale and offering for sale of citrus fruit has the capacity and tendency to mislead the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the said fruit so labelled has been grown in the area known as Indian River Valley.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent has falsely represented the number of pieces of fruit contained in certain cartons by placing thereon a number indicating that the number of pieces of fruit contained in said cartons was greater than the number of pieces of fruit actually packed in said cartons.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive the consuming public as to the origin of said fruit and as to the number of pieces of fruit packed in said cartons, and have caused a substantial number of the purchasing public to purchase said products because of the erroneous belief engendered by the acts and practices of the respondent, thereby unfairly substantially diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, J. C. Hickson & Company, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. C. Hickson & Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of citrus fruits in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

(a) Representing in advertisements, on labels, or otherwise, that citrus fruit is "Indian River Valley" fruit, unless and until said fruit is produced in that section of the State of Florida where the fruit produced is known and sold as "Indian River Valley" fruit.

(b) Representing that it owns or operates fruit groves or warehouses in that section of the State of Florida where the citrus fruit produced is known and sold as "Indian River Valley" fruit, unless and until it does own or operate a fruit grove or warehouse, as the case may be, in that section of the State of Florida.

(c) Representing by figures placed on the container, or otherwise, that the number of pieces of fruit in such container is greater than the number of pieces of fruit in such container.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
CONFECTIONERS TRADING CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3195. Complaint, Aug. 5, 1937—Decision, Dec. 9, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and one of which was composed of a number of penny pieces of uniform size and shape, together with number of larger pieces to be given as prizes to those purchasers selecting, by chance, one of a relatively few of said penny pieces, concealed centers of which were pink and not white—

(a) Represented, to customers and prospective customers, through salesmen and agents, and through its business stationery, billheads, invoices and other printed literature, that it was a manufacturing agent of the candy dealt in by it, notwithstanding fact it neither owned, controlled, nor operated any factory whatsoever, and did not make candy purchased, repacked, and sold by it, and was not agent for manufacturer or manufacturers thereof;

With effect of misleading, and deceiving many of its customers and prospective customers into erroneous belief that it was a business concern which controlled and operated factory in which candy sold by it was made, or was agent of such business concerns, and that persons dealing with it were buying from the manufacturer or agent thereof, and thereby limiting profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including those of service, delivery and adjustment of account, not obtained by purchasers from middlemen, and of diverting business from, and otherwise injuring and prejudicing, competitors, including many who make the candies sold by them or are agents of the manufacturers thereof and rightfully represent themselves as such manufacturers or agents, and others who purchase candy dealt in by them and resell same at profit to themselves, and in no wise represent that they are manufacturers of such product;

(b) Sold, to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, assortments of candy without name thereon of manufacturer thereof and in wrappers displaying names and addresses, as case might be, of various concerns other than itself, notwithstanding fact candy in question was not made by any one of companies thus indicated;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many of its customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that candy thus sold was made by business concern whose name appeared thereon, and of diverting business from, and otherwise injuring and prejudicing, competitors, of whom many do not misbrand the merchandise sold by them, nor place thereon false and misleading labels; and

accordance with such plan, and as means of inducing purchasers to buy its said products in preference to those offered and sold by competitors, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell candy made and sold by them, so packed and assembled or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public as to involve a game of chance, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by its said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and thereby induced to purchase its said candy, so packed and sold, in preference to that offered by competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to it trade and custom from its said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use same or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition therein, and tend to create a monopoly thereof in it and in such other distributors of candy as use same or equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.

Mr. Alexander J. Sparrow, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Confectioners Trading Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 380 Throop Avenue, in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York. It is now, and for several months last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States. It causes the said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to its customers and prospective customers by its salesmen and agents, and to be set forth on its business stationery, billheads, invoices, and other printed literature, that it is a manufacturing agent of the candy in which it deals. By the representation that it is the manufacturing agent, respondent represents that it is the direct agent of the concern or concerns manufacturing the candy which it sells, and also by said representation represents that it is agent for certain customers or purchasers and as such manufactures candy to their order. A substantial portion of the purchasing public, including dealers in candy, have expressed and have a preference for purchasing products direct from the manufacturer or his agents, such persons believing that they secure closer prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from an independent selling agency or middleman.

PAR. 3. The use by respondent of said representation that it is a manufacturer of candy, or the agent of manufacturers of candy, has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is a business concern which controls and operates a factory in which the aforesaid candy sold by respondent is manufactured, or that it is the agent of such business concerns, and that persons dealing with the respondent are buying said candy from the manufacturer thereof or his agent, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including advantages in service, delivery, and adjustment of account, that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture said candy sold by it and is not the agent for the manufacturer or manufacturers of the candy which it sells, but on the contrary only purchases and repacks the candy which it sells.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who manufacture the candy which they sell or who are agents of such manufacturers and who rightfully represent that they are the manufacturers thereof or are the agents of such manufacturers. There are others of said competitors who purchase the candy in which they deal and resell the same at a profit to themselves and who in no wise represent that they manufacture said candy. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers assortments of candy which do not and did not have thereon its name or the name of the manufacturer of the candy contained in said assortment. The candy contained in said assortment was contained in wrappers bearing the legends Red Hook Chocolate Corporation, Red Hook, N. Y., thereby representing that the said candy was manufactured by the Red Hook Chocolate Corporation of Red Hook, N. Y., when such was not the fact. The candy in other assortments was contained in wrappers bearing the name Harwood Candy Corporation. Other assortments contained candy in wrappers bearing the name Lincoln Chocolate & Confectionery Company. Other assortments contained candy in wrappers bearing the name Geiger's Candy Company. Other assortments bore the legend Allan & Allan, Corning, New York, thereby representing that the assortments contained candy manufactured by the Harwood Candy Corporation, Lincoln Chocolate & Confectionery Company, Geiger's Candy Company, and Allan & Allan, respectively, when in fact the candy was not made by any one of the said companies. The misbranding of respondent's merchandise, or the false labeling thereof, has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that the candy so sold was manufactured by the business concern whose name appeared on the said wrappers. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who do not misbrand the merchandise which they sell and who do not place thereon false and misleading labels. The acts and practices of respondent just above described tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

sembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have white centers, but a small number of said pieces of candy have pink centers. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a pink center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said larger pieces of candy contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to. The color of the center of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy selected broken open. The aforesaid purchasers who procure a piece of candy having a pink center thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent packs, assembles and sells various assortments of candy involving the above described sales plan or lottery scheme but varying in detail from the sales plan or lottery scheme just above described.

PAR. 7. The jobbers and wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 8. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 9. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 10. The aforementioned methods, acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

6, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefore an answer dated November 3, 1937, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission on November 9, 1937. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 380 Throop Avenue, in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York. It is now, and for several months last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States. It causes the said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to its customers and prospective customers by its salesmen and agents, and to be set forth on its business stationery, billheads, invoices, and other printed literature, that it is a manufacturing agent of the candy in which it deals. By the representation that it is the manufacturing agent, respondent represents that it is the direct agent of the concern or concerns manufacturing the candy which it sells, and also by said representation represents that it is agent for certain customers or purchasers and as such manufacturers candy to their order. A substantial portion of the purchasing public, including dealers in candy, have expressed and have a preference for purchasing products direct from the manufacturer or his agents, such persons believing that they secure closer prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from an independent selling agency or middleman.

PAR. 3. The use by respondent of said representation that it is a manufacturer of candy, or the agent of manufacturers of candy, has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is a business concern which controls and operates a factory in which the aforesaid candy sold by respondent is manufactured, or that it is the agent of such business concerns, and that persons dealing with the respondent are buying said candy from the manufacturer thereof or his agent, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including advantages in service, delivery, and adjustment of account, that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent neither owns, controls nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture said candy sold by it, and is not the agent for the manufacturer or manufacturers of the candy which it sells, but on the contrary only purchases and repacks the candy which it sells.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who manufacture the candy which they sell or who are agents of such manufacturers and who rightfully represent that they are the manufacturers thereof or are the agents of such manufacturers. There are others of said competitors who purchase the candy in which they deal and resell the same at a profit to themselves and who in no wise represent that they manufacture said candy. The above described acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers assortments of candy which do not and did not have thereon its name or the name of the manufacturer of the candy contained in said assortment. The candy contained in said assortment was contained in wrappers bearing the legends Red Hook Chocolate Corporation, Red Hook, N. Y., thereby representing that the said candy was manufactured by the Red Hook Chocolate Corporation of Red Hook, N. Y., when such was not the fact. The candy in other assortments was contained in wrappers bearing the name Harwood Candy Corporation. Other assortments contained candy in wrappers bearing the name Lincoln Chocolate & Confectionery Company. Other assortments contained candy in wrappers bearing the name Geiger's Candy Company. Other assortments bore the legend Allan and Allan, Corning, N. Y., thereby representing that the assortments contained candy manufactured by the Harwood Candy Corporation, Lincoln Chocolate & Confectionery Company, Geiger's Candy Company, and Allan & Allan, respectively, when in fact the candy was not made by any one of the said companies. The misbranding of respondent's merchandise, or the false labeling thereof, has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that the candy so sold was manufactured by the business concern whose name appeared on the said wrappers. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who do not misbrand the merchandise which they sell and who do not place thereon false and misleading labels. The acts and practices of respondent just above described tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape together with a number of larger pieces of candy which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have white centers, but a small number of said pieces of candy have pink centers. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a pink center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said larger pieces of candy contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to. The color of the center of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy selected broken open. The aforesaid purchasers who procure a piece of candy having a pink center thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 7. The jobbers and wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 8. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 9. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer dated November 3, 1937 and filed herein on November 9, 1937 by the respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, that the respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employes, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly that it is a manufacturing agent of the candy which it sells, or that it is the direct agent of the concern or concerns manufacturing the candy which it sells and distributes, or that it is the agent for certain customers or purchasers, and as such manufactures the candy which it sells to their order;

2. Representing, directly or indirectly by labels, wrappers or otherwise that the candy which it sells or offers for sale is manufactured by any concern other than the actual manufacturer or manufacturers thereof;

3. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers or retail dealers assortments of candy which are used, or which may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public; and

5. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Confectioners Trading Corporation, a corporation, shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3237. Complaint, Oct. 8, 1937—Decision, Dec. 10, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of women's cloth coats made from fabric containing little, if any, of the hair or wool of the camel, and the exclusive sales agent of said fabric and seller thereof to said first-named corporate coat manufacturer, respectively engaged in substantial competition with others likewise selling and distributing, in commerce among the States, women's coats, and with those engaged in thus selling cloth fabrics from which such garments are made—

Respectively supplied, and made use of, labels for attachment to garments made from fabric in question, depicting camel with palm trees and mountains or pyramids, and displaying, in large and readable type, statement "Genuine Camel's Hair," and thereby represented to retailers and purchasing public that garments made, as above set forth, from aforesaid fabric and with aforesaid labels thus supplied and attached thereto, were composed in whole or in substantial part from the hair or wool of the camel;

With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that coats in question, made from aforesaid fabric and labeled as above described, were made in whole or in substantial part from such hair or wool, and with the result, as a consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief thus engendered, that some dealers and members of purchasing public bought said garments as and for camel's hair or wool, preferred by many retailers and members of purchasing public as more desirable than those of other materials and as lighter, warmer and more desirable than other similar products not thus made in whole or substantial part, and trade was thereby unfairly diverted, in commerce in question, to them from their competitors who do not misrepresent the nature, character or quality of the materials from which their garments are made, and of placing in hands of unscrupulous retailers means whereby latter may commit fraud upon members of purchasing public by representing thereto that such garments are made in whole or substantial part from the hair or wool of the camel; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts, practices and representations were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Form Maid Coat Company, Inc. and Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined by said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc. is a New York corporation with its office and principal place of business located at 545 Eighth Avenue in New York City, N. Y. It is engaged in manufacturing, selling and distributing women's cloth coats.

Respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc. is a New York corporation with its office and principal place of business located at 450 Seventh Avenue in New York City, N. Y. The said respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, the exclusive sales agent for certain fabrics manufactured by Blackinton Company, Inc. These fabrics are used in the manufacture of women's cloth coats. Included in such fabrics made by Blackinton Company, Inc. and sold and distributed by its sales agent, respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., to respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., to be used by it in manufacturing women's cloth coats, is one fabric known as Style No. 5036 (with various subnumbers to represent different shades).

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, the respondents herein, Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc. and Form Maid Coat Company, with the aid, assistance and cooperation of respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., caused, and now cause, said cloth fabric and said women's coats made therefrom, and labelled as hereinafter described, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of New York. The respondents maintained a constant current of trade in commerce in said cloth fabrics and women's coats made therefrom between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses the respondents are now, and they have been for more than one year last past, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing women's coats and cloth fabrics from which said coats are manufactured in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their businesses and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said garments by retailers and by members of the purchasing public, the respondents have entered into and subsequently carried out, and are now carrying out, a common understanding, agreement and conspiracy with the intent and for the purpose and with the effect of misleading and deceiving retail dealers and members of the purchasing public.

Such agreement, combination, understanding and conspiracy has been, and is now being, carried out in part in the following manner. The respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., in selling cloth fabric to the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., also furnishes said respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., with a supply of labels to be attached to the garments made by it from said cloth fabric. These labels depict a camel together with palm trees and mountains or pyramids within a diamond shaped border. The labels also bear in large and readable type the statement, "Genuine Camel's Hair." Such labels so furnished by respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., are attached to the coats made by the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., from the cloth fabric purchased from respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc.

PAR. 5. The use of such hereinabove described labels and the statements contained thereon serve as representations, on the part of both respondents, that the garments so manufactured by respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., from fabrics procured from respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., and so labelled were in fact composed in whole, or in substantial part, from hair or wool obtained from camels.

In truth and in fact the representations so made are deceptive, exaggerated, false and untrue. The garments made from the fabric above referred to and labelled in the manner above referred to contain only a negligible amount of camel's hair if any at all. The principal constituent parts of the fabric from which said garments are made consists of rayon, wool and cotton warp. The amount of camel's hair or camel's wool contained in the fabric from which said garments are made is negligible, if there is any such wool present at all.

PAR. 6. Garments made from camel's hair or wool are generally believed, by many retail dealers and members of the general purchasing public, to be more desirable than garments made from any other material. Garments made from genuine camel's hair or wool are light in weight and are warm and possess other qualities which make them more desirable than other similar garments not made from camel's wool. Consequently, there is a preference on the part of the purchasing public for purchasing garments that are in truth and in fact made up of camel's hair or wool.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said coats so manufactured by the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., and bearing the labels furnished by the respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., with the fabric from which said coats are made, are in fact made in whole or substantial part from camel's hair. As a result thereof, such dealers and members of the purchasing public purchase said garments on account of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced as aforesaid, and thereby trade is unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the nature, character, or quality of the materials from which their garments are made.

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents place in the hands of unscrupulous retail dealers a means whereby said dealers may commit a fraud upon members of the purchasing public by representing that said garments are made in whole or in substantial part from camel's hair.

The aforesaid acts and practices on the part of the respondents therefore cause a substantial injury to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

of the complaint to be true, and respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., entered into a stipulation as to the facts in lieu of evidence, which was received, accepted and approved by the Commission, and each respondent waived hearings on the charges set forth in the complaint and consented that, without further evidence, or other intervening procedure, the Commission may make its findings as to the facts, and order disposing of the case. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation as to the facts, no briefs having been filed or oral argument having been made, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., is a New York corporation with its office and principal place of business located at 545 Eighth Avenue in New York, N. Y., and is engaged in manufacturing, selling and distributing women's cloth coats.

Respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., is a New York corporation with its office and principal place of business located at 450 Seventh Avenue in New York, N. Y., and is now, and for more than one year last past has been, the exclusive sales agent for certain fabrics manufactured by Blackinton Company, Inc., and that said fabrics are used in the manufacture of women's cloth coats. That included in such fabrics made by Blackinton Company, Inc., and sold, distributed and shipped in interstate commerce by its sales agent, respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., to respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., to be used by it in manufacturing women's cloth coats, is one fabric known as Style No. 5036 (with various sub-numbers to represent different shades).

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., with the aid, assistance and cooperation of respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., caused, and now causes, said cloth fabric and said women's coats made therefrom, and labeled with labels furnished by respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., as hereinafter described, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of New York. Respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., in the course and conduct of its business of selling cloth fabrics from which coats are made, is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, cloth fabrics from which coats are manufactured. The respondents maintained a constant current of trade in commerce in said cloth fabrics and women's coats made therefrom between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing women's coats in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their businesses and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said garments by retailers and by members of the purchasing public, respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., in selling cloth fabric to the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., also furnished it with a supply of labels to be attached to the garments made by it from said cloth fabric, which labels depict a camel together with palm trees and mountains or pyramids within a diamond shaped border, and said labels also bear in large and readable type the statement "Genuine Camel's Hair," and such labels so furnished by respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., were intended to be and were attached to the coats made by the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., from the cloth fabric purchased from respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc.

PAR. 5. By the means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondents represent to retailers and to the purchasing public that the garments manufactured by the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., from fabrics purchased from the respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., and bearing labels furnished by the respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., were composed in whole, or in substantial part, from hair or wool obtained from camels. Garments made in whole, or in substantial part, from camel's hair or wool are generally believed by many retail dealers and members of the purchasing public to be more desirable than garments made from other materials, as they are light in weight, are warm, and possess other qualities which make them more desirable than other similar garments not made in whole, or in substantial part, from camel's hair or wool, and there is a preference on the part of the purchasing public for garments made wholly, or in substantial part, from camel's hair or wool.

PAR. 6. The representations so made and used by the respondents are deceptive, exaggerated and untrue, in that the fabrics, and the garments made from the fabrics above referred to and labeled in the manner above described, are not composed in whole, or in substantial part, of camel's hair or wool but, in fact, contain only a negligible amount of camel's hair or wool, and the principal constituent parts of the fabric from which said garments are made consists of rayon, wool, and cotton warp.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said coats so manufactured by the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., from the fabric purchased from, and bearing labels furnished by the respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., are made in whole, or in substantial part, from camel's hair or wool; as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief engendered by the acts and practices of respondents, as aforesaid, some dealers and members of the purchasing public purchased said garments and thereby trade was unfairly diverted in said commerce to the respondents from their competitors who do not misrepresent the nature, character, or quality of the materials from which their garments are made, and the aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents place in the hands of unscrupulous retail dealers a means whereby said retail dealers may commit a fraud upon members of the purchasing public by representing to the purchasing public that said garments are made in whole, or in substantial part, from camel's hair or wool, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and on the answer of the respondent Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., filed November 3, 1937, admitting all of the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving hearing on the charges set forth in the complaint and all other intervening procedure, and on the stipulation as to the facts executed by the respondent Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., duly approved by the Commission, wherein it waives the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents Form Maid Coat Company, Inc., and Walter-Lewis & Co., Inc., their officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of coats and other garments, or fabrics from which coats or other garments are to be made, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, that the coats or the fabrics from which coats are made, or are to be made, contain camel's hair or wool, unless such coats or the fabrics do, in fact, contain a substantial quantity of camel's hair or wool, and unless, where such fabric is made from camel's hair or wool and other materials, such other materials contained in said fabric are aptly and truthfully described in equally conspicuous words in connection and in conjunction with the word or words used in describing the camel's hair or wool content of said fabric.

2. Using labels, or furnishing the same for use by others, containing the words "Genuine Camel's Hair," or any word or words of similar import and meaning, to designate and describe coats or textile fabrics which are not composed wholly of the hair or wool of the camel.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

C. W. BEGGS SONS & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2687. Complaint, Jan. 18, 1936—Decision, Dec. 13, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in sale of its "Marcelle" line of cosmetics, and in distribution thereof in commerce among the various States, through stores, department stores, and other media, in substantial competition with those engaged in similar sale of preparations recommended or used for treatment or relief of allergy, hypersensitiveness, and kindred diseases or conditions, and also with those engaged in sale of cosmetics in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia; in extensively advertising its aforesaid assertedly nonallergic line of cosmetics in various periodicals in interstate circulation and through radio broadcast of interstate transmission and reception, and through booklets and circulars—

Represented that its said "Non-Allergic" cosmetics and formulas therefor had been accepted or approved by the American Medical Association, or had passed rigorous requirements of that organization with regard to ingredients, claims and purity, and that said association, after finding, on investigation, said line "100% pure," "passed an approval note on to every physician in the United States advising them" that said cosmetics were "pure in every sense of the word," facts being that, while its said cosmetic advertisements were accepted for publication by the Journal American Medical Association, said association had no councils for accepting or approving cosmetics and had never accepted or approved any cosmetics from it or anyone else, nor had it declared its products 100% pure or sent approval notices to such effect, as above claimed;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that its said products had in truth and in fact been accepted or approved by said association, and to induce purchasing public to buy its said products in preference to other cosmetics and other preparations compounded and used for avoidance or relief of allergy and kindred diseases or conditions, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to it, by reason of such deceptive and misleading representations, from competitors above named and cosmetic manufacturers, dealers, and distributors who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, Mr. Robert S. Hall and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. T. H. Kennedy for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that C. W. Beggs Sons & Company, a corporation, has been or is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, the Commission hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, C. W. Beggs Sons & Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at Chicago in said State. It is now and for more two years last past, has been engaged in the preparation and manufacture of cosmetics which it sells under the trade name "Marcella" and in the selling thereof between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and has caused and still causes such products when sold by it to be transported from its place of business in Illinois, or other place within the United States, to purchasers (chiefly retailers) thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and there has been for more two years last past and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in cosmetics manufactured by respondent between respondent and respondent's customers, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now and for more two years last past has been in constant competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of cosmetics among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent for more than two years last past has, by means of catalogs, advertising matter, and by other means, represented and still represents that the products manufactured and sold by it were and are submitted to and accepted by the American Medical Association before they were or are distributed to the purchasers thereof, and that before each preparation manufactured by said respondent is distributed to the purchasers thereof it must pass the rigorous requirements of the American Medical Association with regard to the ingredients of said product and the claims of respondent-ent for said product, and as to the purity of said product; and that the formulas for the compounding of said products were and are accepted by the American Medical Association and that the formulas for the compounding and the claims of respondent with regard to said products are approved by the American Medical Association when in truth and in fact, such representations by respondents with reference to the submission to, the acceptance by, and the approval of said products by the American Medical Association have been and are untrue. There is a preference on the part of a substantial number of retailer dealers in cosmetics and on the part of a substantial part of the purchasing public for cosmetics represented to have been submitted to, accepted or approved by the American Medical Association. The aforesaid representations by respondent that the products sold by it are submitted to, accepted or approved by the American Medical Association, have had and still have a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived and still misleads and deceives retailers and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the products of respondent have been and are submitted to, approved and accepted by the American Medical Association and causes them to purchase respondent's products in such erroneous belief. The aforesaid representations by respondent have placed and still place in the hands of retailers of cosmetics, the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business described hereinabove, respondent for more than two years last past, has, by means of catalogs, advertising matter, display cards, and otherwise, represented and still represents as follows:

NON-ALLERGIC
COSMETICS
Advertising ACCEPTED BY AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

In said representation, the word "advertising" has been and is printed in comparatively small and inconspicuous type and the other words in large and conspicuous type, and said representation has the tendency and capacity to cause the readers thereof to believe that the products of the respondent have been and are accepted by the American Medical Association, when in truth and in fact the products of the respondent have not been and are not now accepted by the American Medical Association. There is a preference on the part of a substantial number of retail dealers in cosmetics and on the part of a substantial part of the purchasing public for cosmetics represented to have been accepted by the American Medical Association. The aforesaid representation by respondent that the products sold by it are accepted by the American Medical Association has had, and still has a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, and still misleads and deceives retailers and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the products of respondent have been accepted by the American Medical Association, and to purchase respondent's products in such erroneous belief. The aforesaid representations by respondent has placed and still places in the hands of retailers of cosmetics, the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent hereinabove mentioned, manufacturers of cosmetics who truthfully represent the acceptance and approval of their said products. There are also among such competitors, manufacturers who do not submit or request the acceptance or approval of their products by the American Medical Association, who do not represent that such products have been submitted to, accepted or approved by the American Medical Association.

By the representations made by the respondent as set out hereinabove, trade has been and still is diverted to the respondent from such competitors. Thereby substantial injury has been done and still is being done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The above acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

complaint were introduced by Thomas H. Kennedy, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Addison, Robert S. Hall, and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Clement F. Springer and Joseph R. Harmon, attorneys for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (no oral argument having been requested) and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, C. W. Beggs Sons & Company, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1741 N. Western Avenue, in the city of Chicago, within the State of Illinois. Said respondent is now, and has been since 1923, engaged in the sale of cosmetics, including face powders, creams, lotions, lipsticks and rouges of various kinds, under the trade names or designations "Marcelle Laboratories" or "Marcelle," and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said cosmetic products, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. There is now, and has been for more than three years last past, a course of trade and commerce by respondent in said cosmetic products between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and since 1923 has been, in substantial competition with sundry other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of other preparations recommended or used for the treatment or relief of allergy, hypersensitiveness and kindred diseases or conditions, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in substantial competition with persons, firms and partnerships engaged in the sale of cosmetics in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The cosmetic preparations sold and distributed under the trade name "Marcelle" are sold and distributed by said respondent through drug stores, department stores, and other media of distribution located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, has been and now is engaged in extensive advertising as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of said "Marcelle" cosmetic preparations, and as media of such advertising it has been and now is using various magazines of interstate circulation and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate transmission and reception. Said respondent also issues and distributes booklets and circulars describing the said "Marcelle" cosmetic preparations.

PAR. 4. The respondent, in its said advertisements of "Marcelle" cosmetic preparations sold and distributed by it, has made various statements regarding the merits and qualities of said preparations in the treatment or relief of hypersensitiveness, allergy and kindred diseases or conditions. Among the statements which said respondent has used in its sales devices, advertisements in magazines and over the radio, and in its booklets and circulars, are the following:

MARCELLE COSMETICS

MARCELLE COSMETICS

MARCELLE NON-ALLERGIC COSMETICS comply with the ethical demands of the American Medical Association with regard to formulas, claims and purity.

WE SUBMIT MARCELLE NON-ALLERGIC formulas to the American Medical Association. Before each preparation is distributed it must pass the rigorous requirements of that organization with regard to ingredients, claims and purity. We do this in order to meet conscientiously the standards of the medical profession. Materials worth many thousands of dollars have been discarded because they did not in the strictest sense meet every non-allergic requirement.

This is the Face Powder recommended by physicians because of its purity and high quality. It has been tested and approved by the Good Housekeeping Bureau; formulas and claims are approved by the American Medical Association and endorsed by the Medical Women's National Association.

Marcelle Cosmetics, approved by the American Medical Association as being 100% pure, endorsed by the Medical Women's National Association on the same score and because they are beneficial.

Marcelle Cosmetics will pass the test of your own physician. They have been approved by the American Medical Association and endorsed by the Medical Women's National Association.

When the American Medical Association investigated the field of cosmetics they found Marcelle Cosmetics were 100% pure, and they passed an approval note on to every physician in the United States advising them that Marcelle Cosmetics are pure in every sense of the word.

PAR. 5. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, has, by the means aforesaid, and in catalogs and other advertising matter, represented that:

1. The cosmetic preparations sold and distributed by it under the name "Marcelle" were and are submitted to and accepted and approved by the American Medical Association before they are distributed and sold to the purchasers thereof;

2. Before each of respondent's preparations sold under the name "Marcelle" is distributed and sold to the purchasers thereof they must pass the rigorous requirements of the American Medical Association with regard to the ingredients and purity of said product and with regard to respondent's claims for said product;

3. The formulas for the compounding of said products were and are accepted by the American Medical Association, and that the formulas for the compounding and the claims of respondent with regard to said products are approved by the American Medical Association.

PAR. 6. So-called non-allergic cosmetics are only relatively non-allergic, depending upon the reaction of each individual user. Orris root, rice starch, and other ingredients generally used in the compounding of cosmetics frequently react against certain individual users, and the omission of such ingredients from so-called non-allergic cosmetics frequently averts allergic reactions in hypersensitive individual users. Usually it is necessary for each individual to submit to so-called medical "patch tests" to determine the identity of the allergic agent involved in his own case and the allergic agent can be other than the above-named products. Respondent's products do not contain orris root, rice starch or other ingredients, which frequently react against individual users, but the exclusion of such ingredients does not insure respondent's products against being allergic to other individual users.

PAR. 7. Respondent's cosmetics have never been "accepted" or "approved" by the American Medical Association, nor has that Association declared respondent's products 100% pure or sent approval notices to like effect to all physicians throughout the country. Respondent's cosmetic advertisements are accepted only for publication by the Journal American Medical Association. "Acceptance" by the American Medical Association is different from acceptance for advertising by the Journal American Medical Association. The American Medical Association has no councils for "accepting" or "approving" cosmetics and, therefore, has never "accepted" nor "approved" any cosmetics from respondent or anyone else. Proper officials of the American Medical Association have denied that such Association has prescribed or promulgated requirements with regard to ingredients, claims, and purity of cosmetics, whether for the treatment or relief of allergy, or for general use.

PAR. 8. The advertisements and representations made to the purchasing public by the respondent, as hereinbefore set out in paragraph 4, are misleading. Such representations have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's products have, in truth and in fact, been "accepted" or "approved" by the American Medical Association, and to induce such purchasing public to purchase respondent's products in preference to other cosmetics and other preparations compounded and used for the avoidance or relief of allergy and kindred diseases or conditions. The result of such deceptive and misleading representations on the part of said respondent is to unfairly divert trade to said respondent from such competitors above named and cosmetic manufacturers, dealers and distributors who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, C. W. Beggs Sons & Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

26 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, C. W. IN THE MATTER OF WORTHALL, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2690. Complaint, Jan. 24, 1936—Decision, Dec. 13, 1937

Where a corporation engaged as distributor of its "Drury Lane English Lavender" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations, including soaps, perfumes, toilet water, face powder, rouge, lipstick, and other similar products, ordinarily compounded or manufactured and packed and labeled for it by the manufacturers thereof and sold and distributed by it to drug stores and other retail outlets, principally, at points in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with those engaged in manufacture, distribution, and sale, or in distribution and sale, of similar toilet preparations and cosmetics in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Caused products thus dealt in and sold by it to be packed, wrapped, assembled, and labeled by the respective manufacturers with packages and labels conceived, designed, printed, and prepared and furnished by it to said compounders or manufacturers, and bearing legend, as attached by them, "Drury Lane English Lavender," along with name of individual preparation, and "Distributed by Worthall, Ltd., London, Montreal and New York," and also, at bottom of the various containers and entirely detached from aforesaid labels, small and inconspicuous and readily removable paper stickers containing words "Made in U. S. A.," facts being products in question were made for it at domestic plants of aforesaid domestic manufacturers and were not compounded or made in England, and contained no English materials or ingredients, and were not in any sense products of English manufacture or English in origin, and it had no branch or office in London, England, or Montreal, Canada;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said toilet preparations, distributed as aforesaid under name "Drury Lane English Lavender," were genuine English products prepared and compounded in England of English ingredients by an English concern, and subsequently imported from England into the United States, as preferred by substantial portion of purchasing public to similar domestic toilet preparations, and as implied from such terms as "English," "Made in England," etc., and of inducing members of purchasing public, acting in such mistaken and erroneous beliefs thus engendered, to buy its said toilet preparations, and thereby unfairly divert trade to it from its competitors who do not misrepresent the materials and place of origin of their respective products, or the ingredients thereof, and from competitors who actually sell and distribute toilet preparations of English origin and manufacture and truthfully represent the same:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Worthall, Ltd., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Worthall, Ltd., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 160 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, N. Y.: The officers of said respondent, Worthall, Ltd., are: H. A. Woods, president; Philip F. Cohen, executive vice president; C. C. Payne, first vice president; E. R. Albright, second vice president; Max Rosenwald, secretary and treasurer, and Joseph Rosenwald, assistant secretary and treasurer. The directors of said respondent corporation are: H. A. Woods, Philip F. Cohen, C. C. Payne, E. R. Albright, and Max Rosenwald.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Worthall, Ltd., since prior to September 1934, has been and now is engaged in the business of causing to be compounded and manufactured, of offering for sale, selling and distributing a line of toilet preparations and cosmetics, including soaps, perfumes, toilet water, face powder, rouge, lipstick, and other similar products, to purchasers in the various States of the United States. Said respondent ordinarily causes said products to be compounded or manufactured, packed and labeled in the State of New York, and sells and distributes the same to various retail outlets, principally drug stores, located in the different States of the United States, including the District of Columbia, said products being in turn sold by said retail outlets to the public. In the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent causes its said products to be transported from the State of New York through and into other States of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and in the conduct of said business said respondent was and is in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the manufacture and compounding, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned, respondent Worthall, Ltd., in the course and conduct of its said business, caused and now causes to be manufactured, compounded, wrapped, packed, offered for sale, and sold and distributed a line of toilet preparations which were and now are so sold and distributed in interstate commerce under the trade name or brand of "Drury Lane English Lavender." The labels attached to the containers and packages in which said toilet preparations were and are packed, sold, and distributed were and are conceived, designed, printed, and prepared by said respondent and furnished by respondent to the manufacturer or compounder of said products, who attaches said labels to the packages and containers of said products at the request of the respondent.

PAR. 4. For a long period of time the terms "English," "Made in England," "Imported from England," and similar terms, when used in connection with toilet preparations such as perfumes, soaps, toilet water, face powder, rouge, and similar articles have had and still do have a definite significance in the minds of wholesalers and retailers and the ultimate purchasing public, to wit: Such toilet preparations and products have for some years been compounded, blended, and manufactured in England, by English companies, of English materials, and imported into the United States, and which products so compounded and imported have been appropriately labeled and branded for sale and distribution in various States of the United States.

Such terms as the above, when applied to toilet preparations not made of English materials or manufactured by an English company, or imported from England, are false and misleading, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy genuine English toilet preparations produced as aforesaid, rather than imitations thereof which are not of English origin or manufacture.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its said business as aforesaid, respondent has caused and does cause its products so manufactured, sold and distributed in interstate commerce to be labeled and branded with the words, "Drury Lane," "English Lavender," "Distributed by Worthall, Ltd., London, Montreal, New York," when, in truth and in fact, the said Worthall, Ltd., is not a limited corporation, nor is it an English company, nor does it have, nor has it had, any branch or office in London or Montreal which has any connection with the manufacture, compounding, labeling, or packaging of said products, nor are or have been any of said products so sold and distributed in interstate commerce manufactured or compounded in London, or in England, nor are or have been the same imported from England or made from English material or ingredients. On the contrary, Worthall, Ltd., is a New York corporation; all of said products have been and are manufactured and compounded in the United States, principally of materials produced in this country, and the same were not and are not in any sense products of English manufacture, or English in origin.

PAR. 6. The representations so made and being made by respondent, as above set forth, and the use of the word "Limited," or the abbreviation "Ltd.," instead of "Incorporated" or "Inc." by said corporation, in combination with the words "London Montreal New York" and the trade name "Drury Lane" together with the words "English Lavender" are calculated and intended to, and do, have the capacity and tendency to, and did and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the belief that the toilet preparations so caused to be manufactured and compounded, and so sold and distributed by respondent, are genuine English products, and that respondent is an English corporation with manufacturing branches or offices in London and Montreal, and that said products are prepared and compounded in England and are of English origin and imported from England into the United States, when such is not the fact. Said representations have the capacity and tendency to, and did and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting on such beliefs, to purchase the said imitation toilet preparations, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not, by their corporate trade names or by false and misleading labels and advertising, or in any other manner, misrepresent the nature and character of their products, and from competitors who actually do sell and distribute toilet preparations of English origin and manufacture, and thereby, respondent does substantial injury to competitors and to the purchasing public, in interstate commerce.

PAR. 7. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 24, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Worthall, Ltd., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Allen C. Phelps, attorney of the Commission, before John W. Bennett, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Boyd and Holbrook, attorneys for respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and no oral argument having been applied for), and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Worthall, Ltd., is a corporation, organized in 1932 and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business at 160 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. Since prior to September 1934, respondent, Worthall, Ltd., has been engaged in business as a distributor of cosmetics and toilet preparations, including soaps, perfumes, toilet water, face powder, rouge, lipstick, and other similar products, all of which are distributed under the name "Drury Lane English Lavender." Worthall, Ltd. ordinarily causes said toilet preparations and cosmetics to be compounded or manufactured, and packed and labeled by the manufacturer thereof. Respondent's soap sold under the name "Drury Lane English Lavender" is manufactured by Light-foot Schultz Company and the other preparations above named are manufactured by B. H. Krueger, Inc., both of which manufacturers have their plants located in the State of New York. Respondent sells and distributes said toilet preparations and cosmetics to its customers, principally drug stores and other retail outlets, which are located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said products are in turn sold by said retail outlets to individual members of the purchasing public. In the course and conduct of its business, said respondent causes said toilet preparations and cosmetics, when sold, to be transported from the State of New York, where said products are compounded, manufactured, and labeled, to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent was, and is, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale, or in the distribution and sale, of similar toilet preparations and cosmetics, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Since September 1934, the respondent, Worthall, Ltd., in the course and conduct of its business, has caused Lightfoot Schultz Company and B. H. Krueger, Inc. to compound or manufacture, and to label, pack, wrap, and assemble said toilet preparations which are sold and distributed by respondent, in commerce as herein described, and which are designated and described with the name "Drury Lane English Lavender." The labels attached to the containers and packages in which said toilet preparations are packed for distribution and sale were conceived, designed, printed and prepared by said Worthall, Ltd. and by it furnished to the compounders or manufacturers of said products which attached said labels to the packages and containers thereof at the direction of the respondent.

PAR. 3. The labels and packages furnished to the manufacturers by the respondent and used by them in preparing said toilet preparations and cosmetics for distribution and sale by the respondent herein bear statements such as the following: "Drury Lane English Lavender," together with the name of the individual preparation such as toilet water, astringent lotion, and the words "Distributed by Worthall, Ltd., London, Montreal, and New York." On the bottom of the containers of the various toilet preparations, herein referred to, sometime appear small paper stickers containing the words "Made in U. S. A." These stickers are inconspicuously placed on the bottom of the container and are not in close conjunction to, or equal prominence with, the other phraseology hereinabove set out, and are not readily discernible. Said stickers bear no relation whatever to the principal labels appearing on said products and may be readily removed from the containers of said products by retail dealers or others without in any way affecting the appearance of the labels, or the salability of the products.

For a long period of time, the terms "English," "Made in England," "Imported from England," and similar terms suggesting English origin, when used in connection with toilet preparations such as perfumes, soaps, toilet water, face powder, rouge and similar articles, have had, and still do have, a definite significance in the minds of retail dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, said products; and the use of such terms signify to them that the toilet preparations and other products so branded and labeled have been actually compounded or manufactured in England and have been compounded, blended or manufactured from English materials by English companies and subsequently imported into the United States for sale and distribution. A substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy such genuine English toilet preparations produced as aforesaid rather than similar toilet preparations which are of domestic origin and are not of English origin or manufacture.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, Worthall, Ltd. is a New York corporation and is not an English concern. It has never maintained any branch or offices in London, England or Montreal, Canada. None of said toilet preparations or similar products are compounded or manufactured in England and none of said products are made from English materials or ingredients. All of said toilet preparations are compounded and manufactured in the United States, principally from materials produced in this country. Said toilet preparations are not in any sense products of English manufacture and are not English in origin.

PAR. 5. The use of such terms as "English," and "Drury Lane English Lavender," particularly when accompanied with the representation that the distributor of said preparations maintains offices and places of business in Montreal and London, serves as representations to the purchasing public that said toilet preparations were made of English materials and ingredients and were manufactured by an English company in England and subsequently imported into the United States.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid misrepresentations made by the respondent through the use of the term "Drury Lane English Lavender," as descriptive of, or as a designation for, its toilet preparations, and through the use of the words "London" and "Montreal," were calculated and intended to have, and do have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said toilet preparations distributed by the respondent under the name "Drury Lane English Lavender" are genuine English products prepared and compounded in England of English ingredients by an English concern, and subsequently imported from England into the United States. The respondent's aforesaid representations also have the capacity and tendency to, and do, induce members of the purchasing public, acting in said mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced as aforesaid, to purchase respondent's said toilet preparations thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the materials and place of origin of their respective products, or the ingredients thereof, and also from competitors who actually sell and distribute toilet preparations of English origin and manufacture and who truthfully represent said preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Worthall, Ltd., are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent Worthall, Ltd., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, of toilet preparations and cosmetics compounded and manufactured in the United States, including perfumes, soaps, toilet water, face powder, and similar articles, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of the term "Drury Lane English Lavender," or any other term or words as a designation or brand name for its various toilet preparations and cosmetics, or through any other means or device, or in any other manner, that said products are of English manufacture or origin, or are imported from England;

2. Representing that said products contain ingredients of English origin when such is not the fact;

3. Representing, through the use of the words "Montreal" and "London," or through the use of any other name of a foreign city or country, that it maintains branches and places of business in England, Canada, or any other foreign country.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Worthall, Ltd., a corporation, shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
ENGLANDER SPRING BED COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2602. Complaint, Oct. 30, 1935—Decision, Dec. 14, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of bed mattresses to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those similarly engaged, including those who do not misrepresent the regular and customary retail price of their respective products and do not use the below set forth methods in sale and distribution thereof in commerce; in pursuance of so-called "sales stimulator plan" adopted by it—

- (a) Furnished retailers, for their use in running advertisements in local newspapers, mats bearing such statements as "Englander's Famous Regular $39.50 PROPEREST Mattresses ½ off sale! $19.75. We are able to buy these nationally advertised $39.50 damask covered mattresses and bed springs at a drastic price concession," with, in some cases, figure $29.75 as supposed regular price, and urged use of such advertisements upon retailers in connection with offer for sale of its said products;
- (b) Attached to mattresses, to which reference was made as aforesaid, label bearing such words as "Finest Quality Since 1895. PROPEREST reg. U. S. Pat. Off. $39.50, manufactured by ENGLANDER SPRING BED CO., INC. New York, Brooklyn," or figure $29.75 in those cases in which such figure had been made use of in aforesaid mats; and
- (c) Supplied to retailers, in further connection with its aforesaid "sales stimulator plan" and for use in their showrooms in connection with offer and sale of its aforesaid mattresses, variously labeled as above set forth, embossed advertising cards displaying illustrations of its said products, together with dealer's name, and statement in regard to regular price, as aforesaid, of such mattresses, and including, as typical, some such statement as "Never before sold for Less than $30.50. $22.50 All Sizes" and "Nationally advertised at $29.75 NOW $19.75";

Notwithstanding fact aforesaid supposed retail prices of $39.50 or $29.75, as above displayed in advertisements and on labels and in display advertising cards, were not the regular and customary retail prices of the mattresses thus advertised, labeled and mentioned, nor those at which it was contemplated by it that said merchandise would be sold, but were greatly in excess of retail price at which sale by retailers involved was contemplated and intended by it, such retail price was wholly fictitious, mattresses thus advertised and labeled were greatly inferior in quality and workmanship to those which regularly and customarily retail for $39.50 and $29.75, and regular and customary retail price at which products in question were offered and sold was $22.50 or $19.75, depending upon quality of particular mattress;

With result that prospective purchasers were led to believe that mattresses thus advertised and branded were products of kind and quality that regularly and customarily sell at retail for prices indicated, and that, when offered and sold at their aforesaid regular prices or other sum substantially less than price indicated by such fictitious price markings, contrary to the fact, they were securing a bargain, in that products in question were made to sell for a sum greatly in excess of that at which they were offered and sold, and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public as to value, grade, quality, and price of aforesaid mattresses and causing them erroneously to believe that regular and customary retail prices thereof were greatly in excess of those at which said mattresses were regularly and customarily offered and sold, and, as a consequence of such erroneous belief, of causing substantial portion of such public to buy its said mattresses, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade in commerce involved to it from its competitors who do not misrepresent the value, grade, quality, and price of their products; to their substantial injury and to that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Lewis, Marks & Kanter, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its power and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Englander Spring Bed Company, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Englander Spring Bed Company, Inc., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, but having its principal office and place of business at 3961 Lowe Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and has been and now is engaged in the manufacture of bed mattresses and the sale and distribution thereof; and in the course and conduct of its said business, has sold and distributed such bed mattresses and caused the same to be transported from the various places of business of the respondent, to wit: Chicago, Ill., Boston, Mass., and Brooklyn, N. Y.—to purchasers of such bed mattresses located in the various States of the United States other than the State or States of of origin of such shipments and in the District of Columbia and has maintained a constant current of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. During the course and conduct of its business the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling its products in interstate commerce, has suggested and urged upon its retailer-customers the adoption of what is called a "sales stimulator" plan which consists and consisted essentially of statements and representations in advertisements that such retailers were offering the products of said respondent at greatly reduced prices; and said respondent has written and does write, in connection with the sales and distribution of its products in interstate commerce, letters in which the following statements and representations are used:

I am not offering you an untried scheme, but a definite, approved, worked-out plan that is selling thousands of mattresses for many of the country's leading dealers. I am confident that it will do for you what it is doing for others and that you will find it just the productive, yet dignified, sales stimulator you need under present conditions.

Accompanying such letter and similar letters the respondent has offered to supply and has in fact supplied and now does supply its retailer-customers with embossed advertising cards upon which appear illustrated advertisements of its products, together with the dealer's name and a statement, or statements substantially as follows:

Never before sold for Less than $39.50
$22.50
All sizes

and the further statement or a statement similar thereto:

Nationally advertised
$19.75

A further custom and practice of the respondent is to manufacture, sell, and distribute in interstate commerce bed mattresses to which is attached labels bearing the following words or words similar thereto:

Finest Quality Since 1895 ENGLANDER Properest Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. PRODUCTS INNER SPRING $29.75 MATTRESS New York—Brooklyn—Boston— Chicago

PAR. 3. The products of the respondent, the retail selling price of which is stated to be variously $29.75 and $39.50, are in truth and in fact offered and intended to be offered to the purchasing public by the retailers thereof at $19.75 and $22.50 respectively.

Respondent has initiated and encouraged such so-called "cut" retail selling price among its retail customers by advising them substantially as follows:

The mattress carried a $39.50 resale price. You can feature it at any price you see fit from $19.75 up.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact the mattresses so advertised are greatly inferior in quality and workmanship to those mattresses generally available on the market at the price of $39.50 and such mattresses of the respondent are manufactured at an average cost of $8.53 each and are offered by the respondent to retailers for $14.00 each. The mattresses so manufactured are actually made with the intention and the purpose of being sold at varying prices from $19.75 up and are made in such a manner and of such material as to warrant the offering of the same at such prices to the consuming or purchasing public.

PAR. 5. The labels as above set forth remain displayed upon the mattresses as affixed thereto by the respondent throughout the channels of trade and distribution to the consuming public and are used pursuant to an intention and purpose on the part of the respondent to mislead and deceive the purchasing and consuming public as to the true value of the same or as to the regular, usual, or customary retail selling price of such mattresses.

PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce various individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bed mattresses and who do not, by the affixation of labels or the circularization of letters as hereinabove set forth represent their said products to be of a value in excess of the actual value thereof, and competitors who do not suggest to their retailer-customers fictitious and grossly marked-up prices for the purpose of deceiving the purchasing public as to the real value of said mattresses.

PAR. 7. Respondent's practice of affixing such false, fictitious, and inflated price marks to be labeled upon said mattresses has a capacity to mislead and deceive and has misled and deceived the purchasing and consuming public as to the value, grade, quality, and price of such mattresses and has the capacity and tendency to aid, enable, or cause dealers to sell such mattresses to the consuming public at prices purporting to constitute a substantial reduction in such dealers' prices, which reductions are in fact false and fictitious.

PAR. 8. Such practices have the further capacity to and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing or consuming public into the erroneous belief that the prices at which said products are offered for sale to the consuming or purchasing public are in fact prices reduced from those set forth as the original price of such merchandise and that such purported reduction is a genuine, bona fide reduction in price by which purchasers have saved sums of money equivalent to the amount of such reduction and further that the higher price mark as contained in the labels so affixed to the mattresses represent the current, regular, or retail prices for mattresses of the particular grade and qualities offered for sale and that such mattresses so offered are higher priced mattresses being offered for sale or sold at actually greatly reduced or lowered prices.

PAR. 9. The use by respondent of such false, fictitious, and inflated price marks is unfair and tends to and does prejudice and injure the public, unfairly divert trade from, and otherwise prejudice and injure, respondent's competitors, and to that extent constitutes a substantial diversion of trade and a loss to substantial competition in interstate commerce and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of Section 5 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on October 30, 1935, issued, and on November 6, 1935, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Englander Spring Bed Co., Inc., a corporation, charging

it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Alden S. Bradley, attorney for the Commission, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, no testimony or other evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint having been introduced by the respondent, that said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel for the Commission and L. B. Kanter, counsel for the respondent; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Englander Spring Bed Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its principal office and place of business at Stewart and Johnson Avenues, in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York. The respondent is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bed mattresses. It causes said mattresses, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia, and it has for several years last past maintained a constant current of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is in substantial competition in said commerce with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships and individuals who are engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of bed mattresses in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent in offering for sale and selling its said mattresses to retailers for resale to the ultimate users thereof, has adopted what it describes as a "sales stimulator plan." Under this so-called "sales stimulator plan" the respondent furnishes retailers with mats for use in running advertisements in local newspapers, upon which

Englander's Famous Regular $39.50 PROPEREST
 Mattresses ½ off sale! $19.75
 We are able to buy these nationally advertised $39.50 damask covered mattresses and bed springs at a drastic price concession.

Retailers are urged to use these advertisements in connection with the retail offer for sale of respondent's said products. To the mattresses, to which reference is made in said advertisements, is attached a label upon which appear the following words, or words of similar import and meaning:

Finest Quality Since 1895
 PROPEREST reg. U. S. Pat. Off. $39.50 manufactured by
 ENGLANDER SPRING BED CO., INC.
 New York Brooklyn

In some instances, the regular retail price of the mattresses is shown in the mats supplied retailers for use in placing advertisements in local newspapers as $29.75. In such instances, the labels affixed to the mattresses have printed thereon a price of $29.75.

In connection with this "sales stimulator plan," the respondent supplies to retailers embossed advertising cards upon which appear illustrated advertisements of its products, together with the dealer's name, and a statement in regard to the regular price of respondent's said mattresses. The following statements are typical of those appearing on such cards:

Never before sold for Less than $39.50
 $22.50
 All sizes
 Nationally advertised
 $19.75

These cards are supplied to retail dealers for use in their show rooms in connection with the offering for sale and sale of respondent's said mattresses, upon the labels of which is marked a price of $39.50 or $29.75, as the case may be.

The mats supplied by the respondent to the retailers, as above stated, were used by various retailers located throughout the United States in placing advertisements in local newspapers advertising mattresses purchased from the respondent, bearing the labels with the price marks placed thereon, as stated.

PAR. 3. The retail price of $39.50 or $29.75, as the case may be, as stated in the advertisements, on the labels, and in the display advertising cards by the respondent, is not the regular and customary retail price of the mattresses advertised, labeled and mentioned in the display cards, nor the retail price at which the respondent contemplated said merchandise would be sold, but is, in truth and in fact, greatly in excess of the retail price at which the respondent contemplated and intended that said mattresses would be, and were, sold by retailers. The regular and customary retail price at which said mattresses are offered for sale and sold is $22.50 or $19.75, depending upon the quality of the mattress. The retail price so indicated by the respondent, as aforesaid, in said advertisements, on said labels, and display cards is wholly fictitious and bears no relation to the true retail price. The mattresses so advertised and labeled are greatly inferior in quality and workmanship to mattresses which regularly and customarily retail for $39.50 and $29.75.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent, as aforesaid, of said fictitious price markings in said advertisements and on said labels, and the statements made in connection therewith, leads prospective purchasers to believe that the mattresses so advertised and branded are mattresses of the kind and quality that regularly and customarily sell at retail for the prices indicated, and to believe that, when said mattresses are offered for sale and sold for $22.50 or $19.75, or some other sum substantially less than the retail price indicated by such fictitious price markings, they are securing a bargain in that the mattresses were manufactured to sell for a sum greatly in excess of the sum at which they are offered for sale and sold. In truth and in fact, the sums paid by purchasers, in such instances, are the regular and customary retail prices, and purchasers do not secure mattresses manufactured to sell for much greater sums.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent other corporations, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of mattresses in interstate commerce who do not misrepresent the regular and customary retail price of their said products and who do not use the methods used by the respondent, as hereinabove set out, in the sale and distribution of their said products in said commerce.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondent, as hereinabove, set out, have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public as to the value, grade, quality and price of said mattresses and cause them erroneously to believe that the regular and customary retail prices of said mattresses are greatly in excess of those at which said mattresses are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold, and as a result of said erroneous belief cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's said mattresses, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the value, grade, quality, and price of their products, to the substantial injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Englander Spring Bed Co., Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Alden S. Bradley, counsel for the Commission, and by L. B. Kanter, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent Englander Spring Bed Co., Inc., and its successor, or successors, their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bed mattresses in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, that said mattresses retail, or were manufactured to retail, at prices in excess of the prices at which said mattresses are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold by retailers.

2. Placing on said mattresses labels indicating retail prices in excess of the prices at which said mattresses are regularly and customarily sold by retailers.

Order

3. Furnishing retailers with "mats" for newspaper advertisements, display placards, or other advertising matter, containing figures or words indicating or implying that the retail prices of said mattresses are in excess of the prices at which retailers regularly and customarily sell said mattresses.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

EARL E. MAY SEED COMPANY AND EARL E. MAY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3063. Complaint, Feb. 16, 1937—Decision, Dec. 14, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in transportation, sale and distribution of nursery stock, in commerce among the various States, and an individual whose name it bore and who was principal stockholder and director and controller of its sales policies and operations—

Represented that they actually grew or propagated the nursery products sold and distributed by them, and owned, operated, or controlled nurseries, farms, or properties in or on which such products were grown, through catalogs depicting views including signs placed by them by roads, walks, and driveways in near-by nurseries and identified by said signs as said individual's "Visitors Drive" or "Flower Garden," as case might be, and fruit trees, flowers, shrubs, etc., and through language featuring and emphasizing the quality and extent and abundance of the nursery products displayed along said individual's "Nursery Drive"; facts being said corporation and individual did not actually grow or propagate nursery products sold by them, said signs were placed beside roads, walks, and driveways in many near-by nurseries containing many acres of land on which nursery stock was being propagated and grown, and stock sold and distributed by them was actually grown and propagated by others on their own nursery farms and properties, and thereafter sold to them in wholesale lots;

With effect of confusing and misleading members of the purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken beliefs that they actually grew or propagated products sold by them and actually owned, operated, and controlled nursery farms or other properties on which such stock was grown or propagated for sale, and with result, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by their aforesaid advertisements and representations, that a substantial portion of purchasing public bought a substantial amount of their said stock, and trade was unfairly diverted to them from competitors who do not misrepresent the source of their respective products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Federal Trade Commission, having reasons to believe that the Earl E. May Seed Company, a corporation, and Earl E. May, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The Earl E. May Seed Company is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Iowa, with its principal place of business located in the city of Shenandoah, State of Iowa. Respondent, Earl E. May Seed Company, is now and has been for a number of years last past engaged in the transportation, sale and distribution of nursery stock in commerce between and among various States of the United States. Respondent, Earl E. May, is the principal stockholder of the Earl E. May Seed Company, and directs and controls its sales policies and business operations. The respondents cause said nursery stock, when sold, to be shipped and transported in commerce from the respondents' place of business in Shenandoah, Iowa, to purchasers thereof at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Iowa. The respondents maintain a constant current of trade and commerce among and between the various States of the United States in the nursery stock which they sell and distribute.

PAR. 2. The respondents, in the course and conduct of said business, are now, and at all times herein referred to have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of nursery stock in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or source of their product, or resort to unfair practices in offering for sale and selling their product.

PAR. 3. The respondents, in the course and conduct of the business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase said nursery stock, have distributed through the United States mail, and otherwise, to the purchasing public throughout the several States of the United States, circulars and catalogues, in all of which the respondents have caused the firm name, and a purported description of the product, to be prominently and conspicuously displayed.

There are located in and around the City of Shenandoah, Iowa, many nurseries containing many acres of land on which nursery stock has been, and is being propagated and grown, and in and around which are roads, walks, and driveways. The respondents have made and placed and/or have caused to be made and placed along and on the side of said roads, walks, and driveways, many large signs on which are written, in large and conspicuous letters, the following:

Earl May's Visitors Drive.

Earl E. May's Flower Garden.

In the aforesaid catalogues the respondents have inserted and/or have caused to be inserted and made a part thereof, certain photographs of different views along said roads, walks and driveways, and in which are depicted fruit trees, flowers, shrubs, etc., and the signs as before described. On the side of said photographs and in direct connection therewith, the respondents represent:

Come take a trip with me through the nursery.

Follow the arrow through Earl E. May's Nursery Drive.

Acres of hardy phlox plants in bloom along Earl May's Nursery Drive. You will get these colorful, thrifty plants when you order them from me.

Look for this arrow. It shows the way through Earl May's Nursery Drive. These Morhelm Blue Spruce are beautiful trees, too.

These pictures on this page will give you an idea of just a few of the things you will see when you take a tour through Earl May's Nursery Drive.

Along our Nursery Drive you will see more than 1,200 acres of growing nursery stock.

Even with this soil we must use this big, extra deep tree digger in order to get all the roots and send them out to you right along with the trees.

In describing the different species of nursery stock advertised, the respondents represent:

The Special Rose Stock De-eyeing Process developed by our rose growers, make it almost impossible for our roses to sucker from the roots.

Our planting of this variety at the seed house have been blooming profusely all summer long.

We usually grow too many of some plants, so I make up the surplus into collections.

We have growers who have been growing and selecting the best of clean, pure-bred, high-yielding strains.

We had a good growing season last year and I don't believe I have ever seen a finer lot of good, plump, bright, shiny seeds.

PAR. 4. The manner and form in which the aforesaid photographs were made, and were, and are being displayed, and the representations in connection with the publication of said pictures, and otherwise, are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. Said statements and picturizations herein referred to, and others similar thereto not specifically set out, serve as representations on the part of the respondents that the said Earl E. May Seed Company actually grows or propagates the nursery products sold and distributed by it; and that it owns, operates and controls nurseries, farms, or properties in, or on which the said nursery products sold and distributed by it are grown.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, neither of the respondents actually grows or propagates the nursery products sold by them. Neither of the respondents owns, operates, or controls nurseries, farms, or properties in or on which nursery stock is grown or propagated. The nursery stock sold and distributed by them as described herein is actually grown and propagated by others on their own nursery farms or properties, and are sold to respondents in wholesale lots after being grown.

PAR. 6. Said representations on the part of the respondents had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and did and do, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that when they purchase nursery stock from the respondents they were buying direct from the grower and would, thereby, be the recipient of the advantages to be had by buying direct from the grower.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements made by the respondents wherein they represent that they grow and propagate the nursery stock sold by them was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of the said representations are true. Said representations have tended to induce and have induced the purchase of respondents' nursery stock by the public in reliance upon such erroneous belief. As a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors who do not engage in similar false and misleading representations and practices all to the injury of competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above acts and practices engaged in by respondents, as aforesaid, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5, of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Federal Trade Commission on February 16, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents herein, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. On April 12, 1937, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, on October 1, 1937, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by respondent's counsel, Varro E. Tyler, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto; and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report as to the findings of facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The Earl E. May Seed Company is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Iowa, with its principal place of business located in the city of Shenandoah, State of Iowa. Respondent, Earl E. May Seed Company, is now and has been for a number of years last past engaged in the transportation, sale and distribution of nursery stock in commerce between and among various States of the United States. Respondent, Earl E. May, is the principal stockholder of the Earl E. May Seed Company, and directs and controls its sales policies and business operations. The respondents cause said nursery stock, when sold, to be shipped and transported in commerce from the respondents' place of business in Shenandoah, Iowa, to purchasers thereof at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Iowa. The respondents maintain a course of trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States in the nursery stock which they sell and distribute.

PAR. 2. The respondents, in the course and conduct of said business, are now, and at all times herein referred to have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of nursery stock in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and who truthfully represent the quality or source of their products.

PAR. 3. The respondents, in the course and conduct of the business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase said nursery stock, have distributed through the United States mail, and otherwise, to the purchasing public throughout the several States of the United States, circulars and catalogues, in all of which the respondents have caused the firm name, and a purported description of the product, to be prominently and conspicuously displayed.

There are located in and around the city of Shenandoah, Iowa, many nurseries containing many acres of land on which nursery stock has been, and is being propagated and grown, and in and around which are roads, walks and driveways. The respondents have made and placed and/or have caused to be made and placed along and on the side of said roads, walks and driveways, many large signs on which are written, in large and conspicuous letters, the following:

Earl May's Visitors Drive.
Earl E. May's Flower Garden.

The tract of ground designated on said signs as "Earl E. May's Flower Garden" was, and is, a display garden on ground leased by the respondents, in the exclusive possession and control of respondents, and planted and cultivated by them, and used by them for the display of trees, shrubs, and plants taken from the stock offered for sale and sold by the respondents.

In the 1936 Spring Catalogue, the respondents have inserted and/or have caused to be inserted and made a part thereof, certain photographs of different views along said roads, walks and driveways, and in which are depicted fruit trees, flowers, shrubs, etc., and the signs as before described. On the side of said photographs and in direct connection therewith, the respondents represent:

Come take a trip with me through the nursery.

Follow the arrow through Earl E. May's Nursery Drive.

Acres of hardy phlox plants in bloom along Earl E. May's Nursery Drive. You will get these colorful, thrifty plants when you order them from me.

Look for this arrow. It shows the way through Earl May's Nursery Drive. These Morheim Blue Spruce are beautiful trees, too.

These pictures on this page will give you an idea of just a few of the things you will see when you take a tour through Earl May's Nursery Drive.

Along our Nursery Drive you will see more than 1200 acres of growing nursery stock.

Findings

26 F. T. C.

Even with this soil we must use this big, extra deep three digger in order to get all the roots and send them out to you right along with the trees.

In describing the different species of nursery stock advertised, the respondents represent:

The Special Rose Stock De-eyeing Process developed by our rose growers, make it almost impossible for our roses to sucker from the roots.

Our planting of this variety at the seed house have been blooming profusely all summer long.

We usually grow too many of some plants so I make up the surplus into collections.

We have growers who have been growing and selecting the best of clean, pure-bred, high-yielding strains.

We had a good growing season last year and I don't believe I have ever seen a finer lot of good, plump, bright, shiny seeds.

The words "Our planting of this variety at the seed house have been blooming profusely all summer long," above quoted from said catalogue, referred to a variety of roses named "Red Ideal." The respondents conduct their business at Shehandoah, Iowa, in a building known as "The Seed House," and in front of said building is an area owned by the respondent, Earl E. May Seed Company, and cultivated as a display garden by the respondents. During the summer of 1935, the respondents had a planting of "Red Ideal" roses in said display garden, and said roses bloomed profusely through the said summer. The summer of 1935 was, in fact, a good growing season for garden seeds, and respondents state that the seeds offered for sale by respondent, Earl E. May Seed Company, were good, plump, bright and shiny.

PAR. 4. The manner and form in which the aforesaid photographs were made and displayed in said catalogue and the representations in connection with the publication of said pictures, as above set forth, are susceptible of meaning, and therefore serve as representations, that the said respondents actually grow or propagate the nursery products sold and distributed by them, and also serve as a representation that the respondents own, operate, or control nurseries, farms, or properties in, or on which, the said nursery products sold and distributed by them are grown. The respondents have, since the said seed catalogue was published, recognized their obligation to eliminate the said objectionable features from future catalogues, and have embodied in the 1937 catalogue published by them many changes intended to correct the objectionable features of the said 1936 catalogue.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, neither of the respondents actually grows or propagates the nursery products sold by them. Neither of the respondents owns, operates or controls nurseries, farms or properties in or on which nursery stock is grown or propagated for sale. The nursery stock sold and distributed by them as described herein is actually grown and propagated by others on their own nursery farms or properties, and is sold to respondents in wholesale lots after being grown.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the advertisements and representations herein set out has the tendency and capacity to, and does, confuse and mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that respondents actually grow or propagate the nursery products sold by them and actually own, operate and control nurseries, farms or other properties on which nursery stock is grown or propagated for sale. As a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the advertisements and representations of respondents as hereinabove enumerated, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial amount of respondents' products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from respondents' competitors who do not misrepresent the source of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, and the agreed stipulation of facts entered into between the respondents herein, Earl E. May Seed Company, a corporation, and Earl E. May, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides among other things that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusions based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Earl E. May Seed Company, a corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondent Earl E. May, individually, and his agents and representatives, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale and distribution of nursery stock in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

1. That the respondents, or either of them, grow or propagate the nursery stock sold by them;
2. That the respondents, or either of them, own, operate, or control lands, farms, or properties in or on which nursery stock is grown for sale unless and until they own or directly and absolutely operate and control lands, farms or other properties in or on which they grow nursery stock.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

FOX-WEIS COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3236. Complaint, Oct. 4, 1937—Decision, Dec. 22, 1937*

Where a corporation engaged in distribution and sale of furs and fur coats to members of purchasing public in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in distribution and sale of such products, and including those who, in selling and distributing furs and fur coats made from skins of rabbit or muskrat, truthfully designate said garments as actually thus made, by use of such words as "Dyed Coney" or "Dyed Muskrat" in equally prominent type and in close proximity and hyphenated to other designations used by them in describing such garments, those engaged in sale of such products actually made from the skins of seal and so designated, and those who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status and, falsely, that they are manufacturers, for the direct purchase of the products of which there is preference on the part of substantial portion of purchasing public as securing, in their opinion, better prices, superior merchandise and other advantages not to be had after product has passed through hands of number of middlemen—

- (a) Made use of designations "Sealine," "Black Seal," "Hudson Seal," and "French Seal" in describing, in its advertisements in newspapers of interstate circulation and in other advertising media, its furs and fur coats, together with qualification, in not easily readable type and widely separated from aforesaid designations, "Dyed Coney" or "Dyed Muskrat," and without qualification in other cases, notwithstanding fact products thus described and represented were not made from the furs and skins of the seal, but, in a number of cases, from rabbit skins so dressed and dyed as to resemble, in appearance only, the more costly seal, with its superior pliability, durability, wearing quality, and luster, and number thereof were made from muskrat skins likewise so dressed and dyed as to resemble garments made from seal, to which they were inferior in aforesaid respects and for which there was a preference on the part of a substantial number of purchasing public; and
- (b) Represented itself as a "manufacturing furrier," through use of such statements on letterheads and other advertising media, and through statement "it makes a difference when you buy from the maker," notwithstanding fact it was not the manufacturer of all the furs and fur coats sold by it, but purchased a substantial majority of such products ready-made for sale to ultimate purchaser;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous beliefs that garments in question were actually made from the furs and skins of seal, and that it was the manufacturer of all such products sold by it, and with result that substantial portion of such public, by reason of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, were induced to buy such

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Fox-Weis Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Fox-Weis Company, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal place of business located at 1130 Chestnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. It is now, and has been for some time heretofore, engaged in the business of distributing and selling to members of the purchasing public, among other items of merchandise, furs and fur coats.

The respondent causes said furs and fur coats, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid principal place of business to the purchasers thereof located at points in States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania. It maintains, and for a period of more than one year last past has maintained, a constant current of trade and commerce in said furs and fur coats, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in the distribution and sale of said furs and fur coats with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling furs and fur coats, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Fur coats and other garments made from the furs and skins of seal have, over a period of many years, acquired a wide popularity among that portion of the public purchasing garments made from fur on account of their superior quality, including pliability and durability of the leather and wearing quality and luster of the fur. Garments made from furs and skins of seal demand prices substantially greater than the prices of garments made from rabbit or muskrat furs and skins and there is a preference on the part of a substantial number of the purchasing public for garments made from furs and skins of seal. Garments made from the furs and skins of seal are commonly designated as "seal," or some derivation of said word, including the word "seal" and said designation is well-known and recognized both by the trade and the purchasing public generally.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its furs and fur coats by members of the purchasing public, respondent has, from time to time, inserted advertisements in newspapers having an interstate circulation and has made use of other advertising media designed and intended to influence purchasers of said furs and fur coats. In said advertisements, respondent has caused certain of its furs and fur coats to be variously represented or designated as "sealine," "black seal," "Hudson seal," and "French seal." In certain of said advertisements, the designations above set out are made without qualification of any kind. In other of said advertisements, the words "dyed coney" or "dyed muskrat" appear in substantially smaller type so as to not be easily readable and are not in close proximity to said designations above set out, but are, in fact, widely separated therefrom.

Said designations purport to be descriptive of respondent's furs and fur coats and serve as representations that said garments are made from furs and skins of seal.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the garments offered for sale and sold by the respondent, bearing the designations above set out, are made from furs and skins other than furs and skins from the seal. A number of said garments are made from rabbit skins so dressed and dyed as to resemble garments made from furs and skins of the seal in appearance only. Said rabbit skins are inferior to the skins of seal in pliability and durability of the leather and in wearing quality and luster of the fur. A number of said garments are made from muskrat skins so dressed and dyed as to resemble garments made from furs and skins of the seal. Said muskrat skins are inferior to the skins of the seal in pliability and durability of the leather and in wearing quality and luster of the fur.

PAR. 6. There are now, and have been, competitors of respondent selling and distributing furs and fur coats made from skins of rabbit or muskrat, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, who truthfully designate said garments as actually being made from the skins of rabbit or muskrat by use of such words as "dyed coney" or "dyed muskrat" in type equally prominent to, and in close proximity and hyphenated to, the other designations used by said competitors in describing said garments. There are also other competitors of respondent selling furs and fur coats which are actually made from the skins of seal and are so designated, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. There are also among respondent's competitors those who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status and represent that they are manufacturing furriers when such is not the case.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its furs and fur coats by members of the purchasing public, respondent has represented itself to be a manufacturing furrier. On its letterheads and its other advertising matter, the respondent has made use of such statements as "Fox-Weis Company, Manufacturing Furriers," and "it makes a difference when you buy from the maker." Such statements serve as representations that the respondent is the maker of the furs and fur coats which it sells to members of the purchasing public. In truth and in fact the respondent is not the manufacturer of such furs and fur coats that it sells, but purchases the same already made up and ready for sale to the ultimate purchaser. The respondent is not a manufacturer or a manufacturing furrier as that term is known and understood among the purchasing public generally.

There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing direct with the manufacturer. Such preference is brought about by the belief on the part of said members of the purchasing public that in dealing direct with the manufacturer they secure better prices, superior merchandise, and other advantages which cannot be secured when merchandise is purchased after having gone through the hands of a number of middlemen.

PAR. 8. The false and misleading representations used by the respondent in the offering for sale and sale of its furs and fur coats, as hereinabove set out, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that said garments are actually made from the furs and skins of seal and that the respondent is the manufacturer thereof. On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase garments so designated by the respondent and thereby trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors named in paragraph 6 hereof. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 4th day of October, 1937 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Fox-Weis Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and its counsel, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Fox-Weis Company, is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal place of business located at 1130 Chestnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia,

State of Pennsylvania. It is now, and has been for some time heretofore, engaged in the business of distributing and selling to members of the purchasing public, among other items of merchandise, furs and fur coats.

The respondent causes said furs and fur coats, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid principal place of business to the purchasers thereof located at points in States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania. It maintains, and for a period of more than one year last past has maintained, a constant current of trade and commerce in said furs and fur coats, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in the distribution and sale of said furs and fur coats with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling furs and fur coats, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Fur coats and other garments made from the furs and skins of seal have, over a period of many years, acquired a wide popularity among that portion of the public purchasing garments made from fur on account of their superior quality, including pliability and durability of the leather and wearing quality and luster of the fur. Garments made from furs and skins of seal demand prices substantially greater than the prices of garments made from rabbit or muskrat furs and skins and there is a preference on the part of a substantial number of the purchasing public for garments made from furs and skins of seal. Garments made from the furs and skins of seal are commonly designated as "Seal," or some derivation of said word, including the word "Seal" and said designation is well known and recognized, both by the trade and the purchasing public generally.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its furs and fur coats by members of the purchasing public, respondent has, from time to time, inserted advertisements in newspapers having an interstate circulation and has made use of other advertising media designed and intended to influence purchasers of said furs and fur coats. In said advertisements, respondent has caused certain of its furs and fur coats to be variously represented or designated as "Sealine," "Black Seal," "Hudson Seal," and "French Seal." In certain of said advertisements, the designations above set out are made without qualification of any kind. In other of said advertisements, the words "Dyed Coney" or "Dyed Muskrat" appear in substantially smaller type so as to not be easily readable and are not in close proximity to said designations above set out, but are, in fact, widely separated therefrom. Said designations purport to be descriptive of respondent's furs and fur coats and serve as representations that said garments are made from furs and skins of seal.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the garments offered for sale and sold by the respondent, bearing the designations above set out, are made from furs and skins other than furs and skins from the seal. A number of said garments are made from rabbit skins so dressed and dyed as to resemble garments made from furs and skins of the seal in appearance only. Said rabbit skins are inferior to the skins of seal in pliability and durability of the leather and in wearing quality and luster of the fur. A number of said garments are made from muskrat skins so dressed and dyed as to resemble garments made from furs and skins of seal. Said muskrat skins are inferior to the skins of the seal in pliability and durability of the leather and in wearing quality and luster of the fur.

PAR. 6. Prior to July 1, 1937, the respondent changed its advertising literature in the following respects: Furs and fur coats made from furs and skins of rabbit and muskrat which have been dyed so as to resemble furs and skins of seal, or of any other animal, are now designated and described by use of the words "Seal," "Hudson Seal," "French Seal," "Black Seal," "Sealine," "Beaver," and "Beaverette," preceding and hyphenated to words which state that the furs and skins used in the garment are dyed and are rabbit or muskrat skins. All of such words appear in equal size type and are in close proximity and hyphenated in respondents present advertising. Such garments as have heretofore been described and represented in the manner set forth in paragraph 4 of the complaint are now described and represented as follows: "Seal-Dyed Coney," "Hudson Seal-Dyed Muskrat," "Beaver-Dyed Coney," "French Seal-Dyed Coney," "Beaverette-Dyed Coney," "Black Seal-Dyed Coney."

PAR. 7. There are now, and have been, competitors of respondent selling and distributing furs and fur coats made from skins of rabbit or muskrat, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, who truthfully designate said garments as actually being made from the skins of rabbit or muskrat by use of such words as "Dyed Coney," or "Dyed Muskrat" in type equally prominent to, and in close proximity and hyphenated to, the other designations used by said competitors in describing said garments. There are also other competitors of respondent selling furs and fur coats which are actually made from the skins of seal and are so designated, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. There are also among respondent's competitors those who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status and represent that they are manufacturing furriers when such is not the case.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its furs and fur coats by members of the purchasing public, the respondent has represented itself to be a manufacturing furrier. On its letterheads and other advertising matter, the respondent has made use of such statements as "Fox-Weis Company, Manufacturing Furriers," and "it makes a difference when you buy from the maker." Such statements serve as representations that the respondent is the maker of all the furs and fur coats which it sells to members of the purchasing public. In truth and in fact, the respondent is not the manufacturer of all the furs and fur coats which it sells. A substantial majority of the furs and fur coats sold by the respondent are purchased by it ready-made for sale to the ultimate purchaser, but the respondent does actually control and operate a plant wherein it maintains facilities for making fur garments and fur coats. In such plant, respondent employs approximately twenty-three people in the following capacities:

1 Manager	2 Cutters
15 Finishers	1 Ironer
1 Nailer	1 Cleaner
2 Operators

In said plant, it maintains certain machinery and equipment for making fur garments and fur coats as follows:

2 Fur sewing machines	3 Ironing and glazing tables
5 Fur cutting tables	2 Nailing tables
1 Fur lining and finishing table	2 Fur drums
1 Fur staying machine	5 Fur knives
1 Machine for sewing lining	4 Sets of nailing pinchers
1 Fancy stitch machine

From the period October 1, 1935 to September 30, 1936, respondent manufactured in its plant three hundred twenty-seven (327) coats and thirty-one (31) jackets. From October 1, 1936 to September 30, 1937, it made in its plant three hundred ninety-two (392) coats and ten (10) jackets. It does not sell any of its products to any other retail furrier but sells said products in its retail place of business.

There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing direct with the manufacturer. Such preference is brought about by the belief on the part of said members of the purchasing public that in dealing direct with the manufacturer they secure better prices, superior merchandise, and other advantages which cannot be secured when merchandise is purchased after having gone through the hands of a number of middlemen.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid representations used by the respondent prior to July 1, 1937, as set out hereinabove, in the offering for sale and sale of its furs and fur coats, have had the capacity and tendency to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that said garments were actually made from the furs and skins of seal, and that the respondent was the manufacturer of all the fur garments and fur coats which it sold. On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase garments so designated and described, and thereby trade has been diverted to the respondent from competitors referred to in paragraph 7 hereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Fox-Weis Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That respondent, Fox-Weis Company, a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale of furs and fur garments made from dyed muskrat or dyed coney (rabbit) fur, in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, cease and desist from:

26 F. T. C.

1. Describing furs or fur garments in any other way than by the use of the correct name of the fur as the last word of the description or designation thereof.

2. Describing furs or fur garments wherein the fur has been dyed to simulate another fur without using the correct name of the fur as the last word of the description or designation thereof immediately preceded by the word "Dyed" compounded with the name of the simulated fur.

3. Using the words "Seal," "Hudson Seal," "French Seal," "Sealine," "Black Seal," as descriptive of furs and fur garments made from muskrat or coney (rabbit), alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, unless and until the word "Seal," or the words "Hudson Seal," "French Seal," "Black Seal," "Sealine," are compounded with the word "Dyed," and such words so compounded are immediately followed by the true name of the fur as "Hudson Seal-Dyed Muskrat," or "Seal-Dyed Coney."

4. Representing that it is a manufacturing furrier or that it manufactures the garments which it sells, except as to such garments as are actually manufactured by it.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pennsylvania Whiskey Distributing Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business in the city of Brooklyn in said State. It is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the business of a wholesale distributor and rectifier of alcoholic liquors, purchasing and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits and selling the same in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business as aforesaid into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with other individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by distillation of whiskies and other distilled spirits and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. For a long period of time the word "distilling," when used in connection with the liquor industry, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning in the minds of the wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of whiskey and other distilled spirits by a process of original distillation from mash, wort, or wash; and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy whiskey and other distilled spirits prepared or bottled by the actual distillers thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by an abbreviation of the word "Distributing" to "Dist." in its corporate name as printed on stationery, cartons, labels, contracts, advertising, and warehouse receipts used by it in soliciting and obtaining the sale of its products as aforesaid, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distilling company and that the whiskies and other distilled spirits by it sold were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash as aforesaid, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies or other distilled spirits by it so sold and transported, and does not own, operate, or control any place or places where such spirits are manufactured by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and as a means or method of furthering and promoting the sale of its said products, respondent delivers to its customers certain paper writings or receipts by it falsely designated as "United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts," covering distilled spirits stored in bonded warehouses located in States other than the State of New York, which said paper writings or receipts are contracts between respondent and the customer whereby the respondent is obligated to sell and the customer to buy a quantity of distilled spirits located in the aforesaid warehouses under bond, and for which distilled spirits respondent has and retains the genuine United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts. Pursuant to such contracts, and upon the requests of the purchasers, respondent causes such bonded spirits to be released and delivered to it for rectification or bottling and labelling as aforesaid and then causes the said distilled spirits so released, delivered, bottled, and labelled to be shipped from its place of business as aforesaid to the purchasers thereof located in the State of New York and in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the aforesaid manner, respondent falsely represents that its own warehouse receipts and contracts for the bonded liquor as aforesaid are official United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts, sufficient to release the bonded spirits covered thereby, upon payment by the purchaser of the storage charges, insurance, State, and Federal taxes.

PAR. 5. There are, among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of whiskies and distilled spirits as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort or wash as aforesaid the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by them, and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," "distilling," or "distilled products" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, cartons, and labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," "distilling," or "distilled products" as a part of their corporate or trade names nor on the stationery, cartons, and labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

There are also, among such competitors, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of whiskies and other distilled spirits who, as a means or method of furthering and promoting the sale of said products do not misrepresent as official United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts their own unofficial receipts or paper writings as an inducement to the sale of their said products.

PAR. 6. The representations by respondent as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the belief that the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by respondent are manufactured and distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash; and do mislead and deceive dealers into the belief that upon presentation to the bonded warehouse of the aforesaid unofficial warehouse receipt by them obtained from respondent, the whiskies or distilled spirits so purchased will be released from bond for delivery to a duly authorized rectifier and bottler of their selection for rectification or rebottling or both, as desired, upon payment by the said dealers of the storage charges, insurance, and State and Federal taxes; and such representations are calculated to, have the capacity and tendency to, and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors who do not make the same or similar misrepresentations, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 7. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on October 11, 1935 issued, and later served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Pennsylvania Whiskey Distributing Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. This respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. Its office and principal place of business is located at 135 Johnson Street in the Borough of Brooklyn, in the city of New York, in said State. For more than one year last past, it has been engaged in the business of a wholesale distributor and rectifier of alcoholic liquors, purchasing and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits and selling the same in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business as aforesaid into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with other individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by distillation of whiskies and other distilled spirits and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individual firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. For a long period of time the word "distilling," when used in connection with the liquor industry, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning in the minds of the wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of whiskey and other distilled spirits by a process of original distillation from mash, wort, or wash; and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy whiskey and other distilled spirits prepared or bottled by the actual distillers thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has abbreviated the word "Distributing" to "Dist." in its corporate name, as printed on its stationery, cartons, labels, contracts, advertising, and warehouse receipts used by it in soliciting and obtaining the sale of its products as aforesaid. In this way and in various other ways respondent has represented to its customers and furnished them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distilling company and that the whiskies and other distilled spirits by it sold were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort or wash as aforesaid, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies or other distilled spirits by it so sold and transported, and does not own, operate, or control any place or places where such spirits are manufactured by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. Also in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and as a means or method of furthering and promoting the sale of its said products, respondent delivers to its customers certain paper writings or receipts by it falsely designated as "United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts," covering distilled spirits stored in bonded warehouses located in States other than the State of New York, which said paper writings or receipts are contracts between respondent and the customer whereby the respondent is obligated to sell and the customer to buy a quantity of distilled spirits located in the aforesaid warehouses under bond, and for which distilled spirits respondent has and retains the genuine United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts. Pursuant to such contracts, and upon the requests of the purchasers, respondent causes such bonded spirits to be released and delivered to it for rectification or bottling and labelling as aforesaid and then causes the said distilled spirits so released, delivered, bottled, and labelled to be shipped from its place of business as aforesaid to the purchasers thereof located in the State of New York and in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the aforesaid manner, respondent falsely represents that its own warehouse receipts and contracts for the bonded liquor as aforesaid are official United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts, sufficient to release the bonded spirits covered thereby, upon payment by the purchaser of the storage charges, insurance, State and Federal taxes.

PAR. 5. There are, among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of whiskies and distilled spirits as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort, or wash as aforesaid the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by them, and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," "distilling," or "distilled products" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, cartons, and labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other distilled spirits, who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," "distilling," or "distilled products" as a part of their corporate or trade names nor on the stationery, cartons, and labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products. There are also, among such competitors, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of whiskies and other distilled spirits who, as a means or method of furthering and promoting the sale of said products do not misrepresent as official United States Internal Revenue Bonded Warehouse Receipts their own unofficial receipts or paper writings as an inducement to the sale of their said products.

PAR. 6. The representations by respondent as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the belief that the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by respondent are manufactured and distilled by it from mash, wort or wash; and do mislead and deceive dealers into the belief that upon presentation to the bonded warehouse of the aforesaid unofficial warehouse receipt by them obtained from respondent, the whiskies or distilled spirits so purchased will be released from bond for delivery to a duly authorized rectifier and bottler of their selection for rectification or rebottling or both, as desired, upon payment by the said dealers of the storage charges, insurance and State and Federal taxes, and such representations are calculated to, have the capacity and tendency to, and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies and other distilled spirits sold by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors who do not make the same or similar misrepresentations, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Pennsylvania Whiskey Distributing Corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pennsylvania Whiskey Distributing Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of whiskies and other distilled spirits in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing by the use of the abbreviation "Dist." in its corporate name, as printed on stationery, cartons, labels, contracts, advertising, and all other paper writings used by it in soliciting and obtaining the sale of its products, or in any other way by word or words of like import representing (a) that it is a distiller of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages; or (b) that the said whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages were by it manufactured through the process of distillation; or (c) that it owns, operates or controls a place or places where such beverages are manufactured by the process of distillation unless and until the said respondent shall own, operate, or control a place or places where such whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages are by it manufactured through a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed.

2. Representing that its own warehouse receipts or contracts for the sale of liquors by it to its customers are United States Internal Revenue bonded warehouse receipts sufficient to release the bonded spirits covered thereby upon payment by the purchaser of the storage charges, insurance, State and Federal taxes, or in any other manner representing that the purchaser is buying an official warehouse receipt for liquors stored in bonded warehouses when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent within 60 days from and after the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report or reports in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

LAWTON V. CROCKER AND HENRY F. CROCKER, TRADING AS THE NATIONAL SURVEY COMPANY, THE NATIONAL SURVEY, AND NATIONAL SURVEY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3103. Complaint, Apr. 10, 1937—Decision, Dec. 23, 1937

Where a firm engaged, as "The National Survey Company" and "The National Survey," in publication of maps and sale and shipment thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with others similarly engaged—

Made use of such designations, in advertising and conspicuously labeling their various maps, as "The National Survey Map of," etc., "The Official National Survey Map of," etc., together with imprint facsimile, in certain cases, of coat of arms of States involved, and together with legend in small type "Compiled from U. S. Government Surveys, Official State Surveys, and original sources," and "Published by The National Survey Co.," etc., notwithstanding fact that while some of said maps were purchased and used by certain State departments and organizations, none of them had been published by, or upon the order of, or with the sanction of, any authority of any Federal, State, or other political entity;

With tendency to deceive and mislead public into erroneous belief that said maps were official, national survey maps and Federal or State Government publications, and unfairly to divert trade to them from competitors similarly engaged in business of distributing and selling maps, and who do not use such false and deceptive labels and designations; to their substantial injury:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Wm. T. Chantland for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph Fairbanks, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lawton V. Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, copartners doing business under the firm names of The National Survey Co., The National Survey, and National Survey, hereinafter referred to as "respondents," have been, and are now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Lawton V. Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, copartners doing business under the firm names of The National Survey Co., The National Survey, and National Survey, have their principal office and place of business in the city of Chester, State of Vermont. Respondents are now, and for many years last past have been, engaged in the business of publishing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, certain advertising folders and maps.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their office and place of business in the State of Vermont to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made. Respondents now maintain a constant current of trade in commerce, in said products distributed and sold by them, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling advertising folders and maps in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said maps, respondents, in their advertising folders and on their maps transmitted in commerce, represented, designated and labelled their maps as "official." Some of these were as follows:

- Official Map of the World
- Official Map of the United States
- Official Map of New England
- Official Map of New York
- Official Map of Maine

In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their maps, respondents have caused, and now cause, one or another of their several trade names, The National Survey Co., National Survey and The National Survey, to appear on their advertising folders and maps together with such designations and labels, among others, as "Official National Survey Maps," "Official Map of the World," "Official Map of the United States," "Official Map of New England," "Official Map of New York," and "Official Map of Maine." On some of said maps respondents also make use of an imprint of a State seal together with statements such as "The Official Map of Maine." Through use of such statements as herein set out, and others similar thereto, respondents represent, directly and by implication, that their maps have been prepared by, or under the direction of, or authorized, adopted or recognized by proper or duly authorized State or Federal officials.

PAR. 4. The representations, designations and labellings made by respondents as above set out, are deceptive, misleading, and untrue, in that none of said maps had been prepared by, or under the direction of, or authorized, adopted, or recognized by any proper or duly authorized officials of any State or of the Federal Government, and no authority or permission had been so granted to respondents to represent, designate or label any of their maps as official.

The designation and labelling of some of their maps by respondents as "Official National Survey Maps" are misleading and deceptive, in that said maps are not prepared or made or authorized to be made from any "Official National Survey," although many maps are in fact so made and issued by various departments of the United States Government. Such representations, designations, and labelling have a tendency to confuse and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the belief that respondents' maps are some of such official maps.

PAR. 5. There are among respondents' competitors many who distribute and sell maps who do not thus or in any way misrepresent their respective products.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents as to their maps, as hereinabove set out, in the course of distributing their products, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true, and that their maps are official State or Federal Government publications. Further, as a true consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts, advertisements and representations of respondents as hereinbefore set out, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' maps with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling maps, who truthfully advertise their respective products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondents have been and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on April 10, 1937, issued, and on April 12, 1937 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Lawton V. Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, copartners doing business under the firm names of The National Survey Co., The National Survey, and National Survey, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance and service of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, a stipulation as to the facts, in lieu of testimony and documentary evidence, which waived further and all other intervening procedure, was entered into between the chief counsel for the Commission and counsel for respondent, and was duly accepted and approved by the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer, and stipulation, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Lawton V. Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, are copartners doing business under the firm name and style of "The National Survey Company" and "The National Survey," having their principal place of business at Chester, Vt., and part of their business has been and is the publication and sale of maps and the sale and shipment of some of said maps in interstate commerce in competition with others similarly engaged.

PAR. 2. Of maps so sold and shipped by respondents, during five years last past, maps to the average annual aggregate sales price of $2,069, were labeled or designated "Official Map" or "Official National Survey Map," followed by the name of the States, State, Territory or region shown by such maps, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of these maps, certain advertising material has been circulated in interstate commerce by the respondents, describing these maps by the aforesaid designations.

PAR. 3. Of such maps so labeled, designated, advertised, and sold:

None of "The Official Map of the World" has been sold during the last four years, and said item has been abandoned;

Of "The Official Map of the United States" the annual sales during the four years last past have not exceeded $25, and its publication has been discontinued;

Of New England, since 1926, respondents have advertised, published and sold as aforesaid, maps, in various forms and sizes, and variously labeled and designated. Among such designations were:

1. The National Survey Map of New England.
2. The Official National Survey Map of New England.
3. Official National Survey Maps of New England.
4. Official National Survey Map—New England.

Within the latter, which is in book form, appears designations as follows:

(a) "The Official Map of Maine," with an imprint facsimile of the coat of arms of Maine within such large type wording.

(b) Official National Survey "Bookform" Maps of Vermont and New Hampshire.

(c) Official National Survey "Bookform" Maps of Southern New England.

Following such designations which are in large type, appears the following in small type:

Compiled from U. S. Government Surveys, Official State Surveys, and original sources.

Published by The National Survey Co.
Chester, Vermont.
L. V. Crocker, Topographer.

Of the State of Maine, in addition to the one aforementioned, respondents have advertised, published and sold as aforesaid, a certain large map designated in large type "The Official Map of Maine", with an imprint facsimile of the coat of arms of Maine within such wording.

Of the State of New York, respondents have advertised, published and sold as aforesaid, maps labeled and designated in large type—"The Official National Survey Map of New York", with a facsimile imprint of the coat of arms of New York within said lettering.

Following the foregoing designations on said maps of Maine and New York appears the same wording as appears in the various New England maps, as above set out.

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. No one of the aforementioned maps were in fact "Official," or "National," or "National Survey" maps, as having been either published by, or upon the order of, or with the sanction of, any authority of any federal, state, or other political entity, although certain of said maps were purchased and used by certain State departments and organizations.

PAR. 5. Certain Federal agencies publish maps using the words "National" and "Survey" as a part of their designation of source.

PAR. 6. The use of the words "Official," "National," and "National Survey" in labels and designations by respondents in the manner hereinbefore described, signifies to some of the public that such maps were in fact issued by, or with the authorization or sanction and approval of, properly constituted national, Federal, or State authorities, as the case might be, and such labeling and designation constitute, and are, false representations that such maps have been issued or sanctioned by such proper authorities, and such advertising, labeling, and designation have the tendency to deceive and mislead the public into the erroneous belief that said maps are official, national survey maps, and Federal or State government publications.

PAR. 7. The foregoing actual and implied misrepresentations and erroneous beliefs induced thereby have a tendency unfairly to divert trade to respondents from individuals, firms, and corporations similarly engaged and competing in the business of distributing and selling maps who do not use such false and deceptive labels and designations, to the substantial injury of said competitors engaged in interstate commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents Lawton V Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, copartners doing business under the firm names of The National Survey Co., and The National Survey, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondents and the stipulation as to the facts in lieu of evidence, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Lawton V. Crocker and Henry F. Crocker, copartners doing business under the firm names of The National Survey Co. and The National Survey, their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of maps in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist, directly or indirectly, either personally or through any corporate or other device, from:

Representing, directly or by implication, by or through use of the word "Official," either alone or in conjunction or connection with the words "National" or "National Survey" printed on their maps, or in any other manner, that said maps are "Official" publications of, or are authorized or sanctioned by federal or state authorities, unless said maps are in fact official publications of Federal or State authorities and have been authorized and sanctioned by such authorities; provided, however, that whenever the respondents print, issue, and distribute maps sanctioned, adopted and used by any organization, they are not hereby prohibited from using the word "official" in conjunction, and connection with the name of such organization actually sanctioning, adopting and authorizing the issuance of said maps when the name of said organization appears in close connection and conjunction with the word "official" in letters of equal prominence.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Where a firm engaged, as "Sanitas Fundoshi Company," in selling and distributing combination loin cloth and suspensory to purchasers in other States, in substantial competition with those engaged in sale and distribution of undergarments and other articles designed for the same general uses and purposes; in advertising their said product in various periodicals of nation-wide circulation and in folders mailed to customers and prospective customers in the various States—

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler are copartners trading under the name and style of Sanitas Fundoshi Company, with their office and principal place of business located at 7508 Linwood Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, and are now and have been for more than one year last past engaged in the business of manufacturing from cloth made in and imported from Japan a combination loin cloth and suspensory for the use of men, and in the sale and distribution thereof to members of the purchasing public as herein set out.

PAR. 2. The respondents, being engaged in business, as aforesaid, cause said loin cloth and suspensory, when sold by them, to be transported from their office and principal place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times since the respondents have been in business as aforesaid, a constant current of trade and commerce in said loin cloth and suspensory so distributed and sold by the respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, are now, and have been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in substantial competition with other partnerships and with corporations, firms, and individuals engaged in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in the sale and distribution of similar products.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove set out, respondents, Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler, trading as Sanitas Fundoshi Company, in offering for sale and selling their said products in interstate commerce, cause advertisements thereof to be inserted in various periodicals having a wide circulation in the various States of the United States, and also in advertising folders mailed by respondents to customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States. In such advertisements and advertising matter, the following statements and representations have been and are made:

A one-piece garment of specially treated hand-woven Oriental fabric * * *. Conserves vitality. Absorbs body moisture * * *.

Absorbs moisture like a blotter. Simple Sanitary Scientific * * *. The SANITAS FUNDOSHI is a new, scientific article of clothing for men * * *. Japanese soldiers, noted for their physical endurance, always wear the FUNDOSHI—not only because it is clean and healthful, but because it conserves energy and relieves fatigue.

The following appears on the outside of the containers in which said product is packed and sold:

HEALTH BUILDER—HEALTH RESTORER.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' product. In all of their advertising literature, respondents represent through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect that:

1. Their product is a builder of health and a restorer of health;
2. Their product is a scientific article of clothing for men and was scientifically designed to preserve and had the properties of preserving and did preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, and nervous energy of the wearer and relieved the fatigue of the wearer;
3. Their product contained greater absorbent qualities than other similar products.

In truth and in fact, the product so described and referred to was not, and is not, a health builder or a health restorer, nor is it a scientific article of clothing for men; it was not scientifically designed to preserve, nor has it properties of preserving, and it does not preserve the strength, vigor, vitality or nervous energy of the wearer and it does not relieve the fatigue of the wearer; it contains no greater absorbent or resilient qualities than other similar garments made of cloth.

PAR. 5. Representations of respondents, as hereinabove set out, and other similar representations, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the false and erroneous belief that respondents' said product will build health and restore lost health; that the product is a scientific article of clothing and is scientifically designed to preserve and does preserve the strength, vigor, vitality and nervous energy of the wearer and relieves fatigue; that it contains greater absorbent qualities than other similar products. The said representations of the respondents have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to induce members of the public to buy and use said product because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set out. Further, said representations have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert trade from competitors of respondent engaged in the sale, in interstate commerce, of similar products, which said competitors truthfully and rightfully advertise and represent their said products, and in no wise misrepresent the properties, functions, uses or effects of their said competing products. As the result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of respondents are to the injury and prejudice of the public and to the competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

one of the respondents; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Sanitas Fundoshi Company with their office and principal place of business located at 7508 Linwood Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. For several years last past they have been engaged in advertising, selling, and distributing a combination loin cloth and suspensory. Respondents sell and distribute said article in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause said article when sold to be shipped from their place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio. In the conduct of their business they are, and at all times herein mentioned have been, in substantial competition with other partnerships and with persons, firms and corporations engaged in the business of selling and distributing undergarments with suspensory features, and suspensories and other article designed for the same general uses and purposes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, in offering for sale and selling their said product in interstate commerce, respondents have represented in various periodicals having a nation-wide circulation and in advertising folders mailed by respondents to their customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States that their product is a builder of health and a restorer of health; that their product is a scientific article of clothing for men and is scientifically designed to preserve and has such properties as to preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, and nervous energy of the wearer and relieve the fatigue of the wearer. Among the representations and claims made by respondents are:

A one-piece garment of specially treated hand-woven Oriental fabric * * *
Conserves vitality, absorbs body moisture * * *

Absorbs moisture like a blotter. Simple Sanitary Scientific * * * The SANITAS FUNDOSHI is a new, scientific article of clothing, for men * * * The SANITAS FUNDOSHI is the American adaptation of a garment centuries old in the Orient. It is made from a specially hand-woven fabric, every thread of which has been treated by a secret, scientific and sanitary process which imparts wonderfully soft, absorbent and resilient qualities * * * It * * * allows free circulation and instantly absorbs perspiration and other body moisture * * * It preserves strength and vigor to a marked degree. It is a boon to men who are much on their feet. To those inclined to weakness or debility, the SANITAS FUNDOSHI will prove a definite preserver of vitality and nervous energy. It has been worn in the Orient for centuries. Japanese soldiers, noted for their physical endurance, always wear the FUNDOSHI—not only because it is clean and healthful, but because it conserves energy and relieves fatigue.

HEALTH BUILDER—HEALTH RESTORER

PAR. 3. The article advertised and sold by respondents is hand-loomed and made from cotton cloth on sewing machines. The edge of the cloth is woven so as to prevent the garment from raveling. Attached to the cloth is a tape, referred to by respondents as a belt, that is used by the wearer in fastening the garment to the body. The garment is wrapped about the body, and the loose end is pulled up through the tape or belt. In that way it acts as a support for the genital organs. The garment can also be used as an undergarment as well as a suspensory.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the cloth from which the garment is made is not specially treated with any secret chemical properties and is not unlike other cloths on the market with respect to its functions and properties. There are other athletic supporters that have the same supporting characteristics as respondents' article. The article will not restore or correct anatomical conditions of the human body and such article when worn is not a builder of health or a restorer of health. The article involved is not constructed to fill particular requirements that have been developed as the result of scientific investigations. The article is not scientifically designed to preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, or nervous energy of the wearer, nor to relieve the fatigue of the wearer. Normal persons do not generally have any need for or benefit from the use of suspensories except when engaged in some strenuous sport or when specifically prescribed by a physician to relieve some particular physical ailment. The article is incapable of and it does not preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, or nervous energy of the wearer and it does not relieve the fatigue of the wearer.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondents, as hereinbefore set out, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondents' product so advertised, offered for sale and sold, will build health and restore lost health; that the product is scientifically designed to, and does, preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, and nervous energy of the wearer and that by the use of said article the wearer will be relieved of fatigue. Said representations of respondents have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the buying public into buying said article because of such erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to unfairly divert trade to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale of undergarments with suspensory features, and in the sale of suspensories and other articles designed for the same general uses and purposes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. Thereby, substantial injury has been done, and is being done, to competition in commerce as herein set out.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler, individuals, trading as Sanitas Fundoshi Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents Anthony J. Hildreth and Joseph Fischler, individuals, trading as Sanitas Fundoshi Company, their representatives, agents, servants and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a combination loin cloth and suspensory in interstate commerce or the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

1. Representing in any manner, directly or indirectly, that said product is a builder of health or a restorer of health.

2. Representing in any manner, that the product is scientifically designed to preserve, or that when worn, it will preserve the strength, vigor, vitality, or nervous energy of the wearer or that it will relieve the fatigue of the wearer.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF RALEIGH CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2707. Complaint, Jan. 31, 1936—Decision, Dec. 29, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, or so-called "draw" or "deal" assortments, sale and distribution of which type candy, affording, in connection with sale thereof to public, means or opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children, who constitute substantial number of purchasers and consumers of such type of candy, and particularly where prize is such as to them is attractive, and appearance of which "draw" or "deal" assortments in the markets of many manufacturers selling their "straight" merchandise only, in competition with the other, has been followed by marked decrease in sales of such "straight" goods, due to gambling or lottery feature connected with so-called "draw" or "deal" candy—

Sold, to wholesalers and jobbers, their aforesaid lottery assortments, including, among others, those composed of—

(a) Large candy doll, together with push card, for sale and distribution to purchasing public under a plan by which person paid for chance amount ranging from 1¢ to 15¢, in accordance with disc selected and number disclosed, and secured, or failed to secure, such doll and anything other than privilege of selection for money paid, in accordance with success of particular purchaser in selecting feminine name corresponding to that concealed under card's large disc;

(b) Number of one-pound boxes of assorted candies and other articles of merchandise, with push card, for sale and distribution to purchasing public under plan, in accordance with which purchaser received, for 5¢ paid, one of said boxes, in accordance with success or failure in securing certain specified numbers, and purchaser found to have obtained, after sale of all chances, number corresponding to that under large seal, received, without further charge, aforesaid other article of merchandise included with such assortment, value of which, as of the one-pound boxes, exceeded 5¢ paid, and under which purchasers not thus qualifying received nothing for their money other than privilege of making such chance selection; and of

(c) Number of boxes of candy, together with punch board, for sale and distribution to purchasing public under plan in accordance with which person received, for penny paid, one of such boxes, in accordance with success or failure in selecting one of certain specified numbers, and purchasers of last punches in each of the sections into which said board was divided received one of such boxes likewise, value of which was in excess of the penny paid, and purchasers failing to make one of aforesaid selections received nothing for their money other than privilege of making punch;

So assembled and packed that they were designed to be, and were, exposed and used by numerous retail dealer purchasers thereof for distribution to purchasing public by lot or chance, without alteration or rearrangement, and with knowledge and intent that such candy should thus be resold to public by lot or chance by said retail dealers, in violation of public policy, and in competition with many who regard such sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling, and especially among children, and as injurious to the candy industry through resulting in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy, and as providing retail merchants with a means of violating the laws of the several States, and some of whom, for such reasons, refuse to sell candy so packed that it can be resold to public by lot or chance;

With result that such competitors were put to a competitive disadvantage and retailers, finding that they could dispose of more candy by "draw" or "deal" method, bought from it and others employing similar methods of sale, and trade was thereby diverted from such competitors to it and others using such methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Raleigh Candy Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of Missouri with its principal office and place of business in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri. Respondent is now, and for several years last past, has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy, between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers, various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Certain of said packages are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but this list is not all inclusive of the various packages, nor does it include all the details of the several sales plans which respondent has been or is using in the distribution of candy by lot or chance:

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a large candy doll baby, together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy doll baby in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has fifteen partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a price is disclosed. The prices on said discs run from 1¢ to 15¢, but are not arranged in numerical sequence. The price on said disc is the amount which the customer pays. Above each disc is a girl's name and all the names are different. There is on said card one large partially perforated disc, and when the fifteen pushes on said card have all been punched, this large disc is to be removed and a name is then disclosed. The customer having selected the disc bearing the name corresponding to the name under this large disc, is entitled to receive, and is to be given without further charge, the large candy doll baby. Purchasers who do not qualify by selecting the name shown under the large disc receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing said disc from the card. The amount of money which the customer pays is determined wholly by lot or chance, and the fact as to whether a customer receives the candy doll or receives nothing for his money is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures and distributes numerous variations of the above described assortment where the details are different but where the principle involved is similar.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of one-pound boxes of assorted candies and another article of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

Sales from said push card or punchboard are 5¢ each, and when a push is made, a number is disclosed. The numbers run from one to the number of pushes or punches there are on the board but are not arranged consecutively. The numbers are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a push or punch has been made and the numbers separated from the card or board. The purchasers obtaining certain specified numbers are entitled to receive, and are to be given without additional cost one of the one-pound boxes of assorted candies. The board also contains a seal, under which a number is concealed. The number under this seal is effectively concealed until all the sales have been made from said board and the seal removed. The purchaser who obtains the number shown under the large seal, is entitled to receive without additional cost the other article of merchandise contained in said assortment. The one-pound boxes of assorted candies and the other article of merchandise are each worth more than 5¢. The purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy receives the same, and purchasers not qualifying by receiving one of said numbers, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a number from the card or board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives nothing for his money, or receives one of the one-pound boxes of candy for the price of 5¢, or the other article of merchandise for the price of 5¢ is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures and distributes numerous assortments involving the same principle but differing in details.

(c) Respondent also manufactures and distributes an assortment consisting of a number of boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The candy in said assortment is distributed in the following manner:

The board has a number of partially perforated holes, and in each hole is inserted a slip of paper bearing a number. The holes on said board are arranged in sections. Sales are 1¢ each, and the board bears a statement informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the boxes of candy, and that the purchaser punching the last punch in each section, is entitled to receive one of the boxes of candy. The numbers on said slips are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made, and the slip separated from the board. Purchasers who do not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers specified, or by punching the last punch in one of the sections, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch from the board. Those qualifying by receiving one of the numbers specified or by punching the last punch in one of the sections receive one of the boxes of candy. The boxes of candy are each worth more than 1¢. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the boxes of candy or nothing for his money is determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy or an article of merchandise of a value in excess of the amount paid.

The use by respondent of said method of the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit; that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 31, 1936, issued and served its complaint upon the respondent, Raleigh Candy Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by P. C. Kolinski, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John S. Leahy, Herbert E. Barnard, and Leroy R. Krein, attorneys for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Raleigh Candy Company is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of St. Louis, Mo. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located in twenty-four States of the United States, and causes its products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, Mo., to purchasers thereof in the State of Missouri and in twenty-three of the other States of the United States, at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In so carrying on said business, respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 above, the respondent has sold in commerce between and among the States of the United States, to wholesale dealers and jobbers, various packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. The said assortments were described by an officer of the respondent, called as a witness on behalf of the Commission, and are shown in the catalog of the respondent which was offered as an exhibit. Certain of said assortments are hereafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by the respondent, but these descriptions do not include all of the assortments nor the details of the several sales plans which respondent has been, or is, using in the distribution of candy by lot or chance;

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a large candy doll baby, together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy doll baby in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has fifteen partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a price is disclosed. The prices on said discs run from 1¢ to 15¢, but are not arranged in numerical sequence. The price on said disc is the amount which the customer pays. Above each disc is a girl's name and all the names are different. There is on said card one large partially perforated disc, and when the fifteen pushes on said card have all been punched, this large disc is to be removed and a name is then disclosed. The customer having selected the disc bearing the name corresponding to the name under this large disc, is entitled to receive, and is to be given without further charge, the large candy doll baby. Purchasers who do not qualify by selecting the name shown under the large disc receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing said disc from the card. The amount of money which the customer pays is determined wholly by lot or chance, and the fact as to whether a customer receives the candy doll or receives nothing for his money is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of one-pound boxes of assorted candies and another article of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

Sales from said push card or punchboard are 5¢ each, and when a push is made, a number is disclosed. The numbers run from one to the number of pushes or punches there are on the board but are not arranged consecutively. The numbers are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a push or punch has been made and the numbers separated from the card or board. The purchasers obtaining certain specified numbers are entitled to receive, and are to be given without additional cost one of the one-pound boxes of assorted candies. The board also contains a seal, under which a number is concealed. The number under this seal is effectively concealed until all the sales have been made from said board and the seal removed. The purchaser who obtains the number shown under the large seal is entitled to receive, without additional cost, the other article of merchandise contained in said assortment. The one-pound boxes of assorted candies and the other article of merchandise are each worth more than 5¢. The purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy receives the same, and purchasers not qualifying by receiving one of said numbers, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a number from the card or board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives nothing for his money, or receives one of the one-pound boxes of candy for the price of 5¢, or the other article of merchandise for the price of 5¢ is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(c) Respondent also manufactures and distributes an assortment consisting of a number of boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The candy in said assortment is distributed in the following manner:

The board has a number of partially perforated holes, and in each hole is inserted a slip of paper bearing a number. The holes on said board are arranged in sections. Sales are 1¢ each, and the board bears a statement informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers entitled the purchaser to one of the boxes of candy, and that the purchaser punching the last punch in each section, is entitled to receive one of the boxes of candy. The numbers on said slips are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made, and the slip separated from the board. Purchasers who do not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers specified, or by punching the last punch in one of the sections, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch from the board. Those qualifying by receiving one of the numbers specified or by punching the last punch in one of the sections receive one of the boxes of candy. The boxes of candy are each worth more than 1¢. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the boxes of candy or nothing for his money is determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Candy assortments involving the lot or chance feature as described in paragraph 2 above are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "draw" or "deal" assortments. Assortments of candy without any lot or chance feature in connection with their resale to the public are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "straight" merchandise. These terms will be used hereafter in these findings to distinguish the various types of assortments.

PAR. 4. The wholesale dealers or jobbers, to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell the same to retail dealers. Numerous retail dealers purchase the said assortments from said wholesale dealers and jobbers, and such retail dealers display said assortments for sale to the public as packed by the respondent, and the candy contained in the majority of said assortments is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push cards or punch boards in the manner hereinbefore described.

PAR. 5. All sales made by respondent to wholesale dealers and jobbers are absolute sales and respondent retains no control over said assortments after they are delivered to the wholesale dealer or jobber. The assortments are assembled and packed in such manner that they are, and have been, used, and may be used, by retail dealers for distribution to the purchasing public by lot or chance without alteration or rearrangement.

In the sale and distribution to wholesale dealers and jobbers of the assortments of candy hereinbefore described, respondent has knowledge that the said candy is to be resold to the purchasing public by retail dealers by lot or chance, and it packs such candy in the way and manner described so that, without alteration, addition, or rearrangement thereof, it will be, and may be resold to the public by lot or chance by said retail dealers. Such packing and distribution is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 6. There are in the United States many manufacturers of candy who do not manufacture and sell "draw" or "deal" assortments of candy and who sell their "straight" merchandise in interstate commerce in competition with the "draw" or "deal" candy, and manufacturers of "straight" merchandise have noted a marked decrease in the sales of their products whenever or wherever the "draw" or "deal" assortments have appeared in their market. This decrease in the sale of "straight" merchandise is due to the gambling or lottery feature connected with the "draw" or "deal" candy.

Witnesses from several branches of the candy industry testified in this proceeding to the effect that consumers preferred to purchase "draw" or "deal" candy because of the gambling feature connected with its sale. The sale and distribution of "draw" or "deal" assortments of candy, or of candy which has connected with its sale to the public the means or opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children who comprise a substantial number of the purchasers and consumers of this type of candy. Particularly is this true where the prize is attractive to children; for instance, where the prize is a candy doll baby or is a child's wagon.

PAR. 7. The sale and distribution of candy by the methods described herein is the sale and distribution of candy by lot or chance, and constitutes a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise. Competitors of respondent appeared as witnesses in this proceeding and testified, and the Commission finds that many competitors regard such sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling, especially among children, and as injurious to the candy industry because it results in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy and has provided retail merchants with a means of violating the laws of the several States. Because of these reasons, some competitors of respondent refuse to sell candy so packed that it can be resold to the public by lot or chance. These competitors are thereby put to a competitive disadvantage. The retailers, finding that they can dispose of more candy by the "draw" or "deal" method, buy from respondent and others employing the same methods of sale, and thereby trade is diverted from said competitors to respondent and others using similar methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Raleigh Candy Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Raleigh Candy Company, a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy and candy products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers packages or assortments of candy which are used or may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in the said assortment to the public;

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

4. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card or punchboard is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Raleigh Candy Company shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF JOHNSON & JOHNSON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914.

Docket 3029. Complaint, Jan. 8, 1937—Decision, Dec. 29, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of absorbent cotton, gauze, bandage, and other first-aid and surgical-dressing products, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in other States, in substantial competition with those engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of similar products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products, who truthfully advertise and represent nature, merit, therapeutic, and remedial value thereof, and those who do not falsely advertise and otherwise represent that their products have merits and values not possessed by competitive goods or articles not so well-known or extensively advertised, and do not unwarrantedly disparage products of competitors; in advertising certain of its said products in newspapers, magazines, and other publications circulated among the various States and in aforesaid District—

Unfairly disparaged competitors' products through statements inferring that, because such competitors did not extensively advertise their respective goods and products and they were not widely known, such goods subjected users thereof to dangers of infection, and were not safe and in sanitary condition when opened for use, through such statements as " * * * this young mother is wrapping around her son's wrist a bandage that may invite infection. It is a 'first-aid' dressing of unknown make which can betray the trust imposed in it," and that while probably "sterilized at some period," as in the "original bleaching process," "in subsequent cutting and packing, it may have been handled by dirty hands * * * hands that couldn't help but rob this dressing of its cleanliness—and safety," and accompanying depiction of crutches, and under caption "Monuments to a Misplaced Trust," among others, "You just can't take chances with germs of infection," "The 'sterilized' dressings that you use must be sterilized in fact as well as in name," and "You can't afford to gamble with any 'first-aid' product that is merely marked 'sterilized,'" and " * * * some 'first-aid' dressings of unknown make, which may be sterilized only in an early process of manufacture and subsequently be exposed to germ-laden dirt," etc., facts being there is no necessary relationship between antiseptic properties or safety of any of products in question and fact that manufacturer is known or unknown;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of first-aid and surgical-dressing goods or articles into purchase of its said products in erroneous belief that its aforesaid representations were true, and with result that a number of the consuming public, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, purchased substantial volume thereof, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from those likewise engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution of similar goods and articles; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Johnson & Johnson, a corporation, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Johnson & Johnson, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal place of business located in the city of New Brunswick, in the State of New Jersey. It is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing absorbent cotton, gauze, bandage, and other first-aid and surgical-dressing products. It ships said products, or causes them to be shipped, when sold, to purchasers located at various points in States of the United States other than New Jersey. It maintains, and has at all times maintained, a constant current of trade and commerce in the products distributed and sold by it among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has been, at all times referred to herein, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of creating a demand for its products on the part of the purchasing public, the respondent has caused advertisements and advertising matter pertaining to certain of its products to be inserted in newspapers and magazines, and other publications having a circulation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In said ways and by said means, the respondent has caused and now causes its said products to be advertised and represented as follows: Following the picture of a young woman binding the wrist of a child are the statements:

In all innocence, this young mother is wrapping around her son's wrist a bandage that may invite infection.

It is a "first-aid" dressing of unknown make which can betray the trust imposed in it.

True, it probably was sterilized at some period of its manufacture * * * as in the original bleaching process.

But in subsequent cutting and packing, it may have been handled by dirty hands * * * hands that couldn't help but rob this dressing of its cleanliness—and safety.

Following the picture of a pair of crutches and as part of an advertisement entitled "Monuments to a Misplaced Trust" appear the following representations:

You just can't take chances with germs of infection.

No matter how small the cut, the greatest care must be exercised in dressing the wound—or something serious * * * tragic may happen.

The "sterilized" dressings that you use must be sterilized in fact as well as in name * * *.

You can't afford to gamble with any "first-aid" product that is merely marked "sterilized."

* * * some "first-aid" dressings of unknown make, which may be sterilized only in an early process of manufacture and subsequently be exposed to germ-laden dirt * * *.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations thus made by respondent as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, and others similar thereto, are misleading and deceptive in that they represent, directly or by inuendo, that users of first-aid and surgical-dressing products of unknown make, or which are manufactured by other than well-known and extensively advertised organizations, run grave risk of infecting wounds or cuts upon which such dressings are used. Further, respondent's said statements and representations constitute an unwarranted disparagement of the products of those competitors who, although they do not advertise their products extensively and may not be as well known, manufacture first-aid and surgical-dressing products that are equal in antiseptic properties and are as safe for use and in as sanitary condition when opened for use as are the products manufactured and sold by the respondent.

PAR. 4. There are, among the competitors of the respondent in commerce, as herein set out, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, therapeutic and remedial value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that their products have merits and values not possessed by competing products that are not so well known or as extensively advertised, when such is not the case, and who do not unwarrantedly disparage the products of competitors.

PAR. 5. The above-alleged acts and practices of respondent have and have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of first-aid and surgical-dressing products into the purchase of respondent's products in the erroneous beliefs that respondent's representations, as aforesaid, are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs aforesaid, a number of the consuming public purchase and have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing similar products, and thereby substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged, and said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto; and by which stipulation it was further agreed that the Commission might proceed upon said statement of facts to issue its report stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission and approved by it. Thereafter the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs and argument having been waived and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Johnson & Johnson, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal place of business located in the city of New Brunswick, in the State of New Jersey. It is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing absorbent cotton, gauze, bandage, and other first-aid and surgical-dressing products. It ships said products, or causes them to be shipped, when sold, to purchasers located at various points in States of the United States other than New Jersey. It maintains, and has at all times maintained, a constant current of trade and commerce in the products distributed and sold by it among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has been, at all times referred to herein, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of creating a demand for its products on the part of the purchasing public, the respondent has caused advertisements and advertising matter pertaining to certain of its products to be inserted in newspapers and magazines, and other publications having a circulation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In said ways and by said means, the respondent has caused its said products to be advertised and represented as follows: Following the picture of a young woman binding the wrist of a child are the statements:

In all innocence, this young mother is wrapping around her son's wrist a bandage that may invite infection.

It is a "first-aid" dressing of unknown make which can betray the trust imposed in it.

True, it probably was sterilized at some period of its manufacture * * * as in the original bleaching process.

But in subsequent cutting and packing, it may have been handled by dirty hands * * * hands that couldn't help but rob this dressing of its cleanliness—and safety.

Following the picture of a pair of crutches and as part of an advertisement entitled "Monuments to a Misplaced Trust" appear the following representations:

You just can't take chances with germs of infection.

No matter how small the cut, the greatest care must be exercised in dressing the wound—or something serious * * * tragic may happen.

The "sterilized" dressings that you use must be sterilized in fact as well as in name * * *.

You can't afford to gamble with any "first-aid" product that is merely marked "sterilized."

* * * some "first-aid" dressings of unknown make, which may be sterilized only in an early process of manufacture and subsequently be exposed to germ-laden dirt * * *.

Respondent's advertisements as above set out were discontinued in or about the month of February, 1937.

PAR. 3. The statements and representations made by respondent as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, and others similar thereto have a capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead the public in that they represent indirectly, that users of first-aid and surgical products of unknown make, or those manufactured by other than well-known manufacturers, run grave risk of infecting wounds or cuts upon which such dressings are used. Further, respondent's said statements and representations have the capacity and tendency to disparage the products of those competitors, if any, who, although their products may not be well-known, manufacture first aid and surgical dressing products that are safe for use and sanitary when opened for use. There is no necessary relationship between the antiseptic properties or safety of any of the products in question and the fact that the manufacturer is known or unknown.

PAR. 4. There are, among the competitors of the respondent in commerce, as herein set out, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, therapeutic and remedial value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that their products have merits and values not possessed by competing products that are not so well known or as extensively advertised, when such is not the case, and who do not unwarrantedly disparage the products of competitors.

PAR. 5. The above-alleged acts and practices of respondent have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of first-aid and surgical-dressing products into the purchase of respondent's products in the erroneous beliefs that respondent's representations, as aforesaid, are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs aforesaid, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing similar products, and thereby substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Johnson & Johnson, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914 entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer and amended answer of the respondent, and the agreed stipulation of facts entered into between the respondent herein, Johnson & Johnson, a corporation, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Johnson & Johnson, a corporation, its representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, sale, distribution and manufacture of absorbent cotton, gauze, bandages and other first-aid and surgical dressing products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

From unfairly disparaging competitors or their products through use of statements which, directly or indirectly, infer that because said competitors do not extensively advertise their respective products and are not widely known such competitive products subject the users thereof to the dangers of infection and are not safe and in a sanitary condition when opened for use, or through any other such means or device or in any similar manner.

And it is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall, within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, file with this Commission a report, in writing, setting forth the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
BUILDING MATERIAL DEALERS ALLIANCE, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2191. Complaint, Oct. 18, 1935¹—Decision, Dec. 30, 1937

Where a trade association which included in its membership over 150 dealers in building materials and builders' supplies in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area, and organized local or sectional associations of such dealers; and certain local or sectional organizations of such dealers, affiliated with said trade association as members or through common membership or common officers and representation on its council, and active cooperators with it in furthering their common basic object and purpose or program of controlling and confining retail distribution of building materials and builders' supplies exclusively through "recognized" dealers as established by them, and preventing direct sale of such materials to consumers, non-recognized dealers, vendors, contractors, and State Governments and other political sub-divisions, and of requiring all such purchasers to buy their materials and supplies through recognized dealer channels affording a commission or profit to recognized dealers, and with further objectives of (1) limiting distribution of such materials to carload quantities by railroad only, with participation in pool car shipments denied to other than recognized dealers, (2) preventing manufacturers of cement blocks from purchasing their raw materials direct from manufacturers and producers, (3) requiring sale and distribution of all cement requirements for all buildings and private construction, and for highway, bridge, and culvert maintenance, and for cities, counties, and other political sub-divisions, to be made through the medium of the members and recognized dealers, and at prices affording them a profit, (4) facilitating price fixing among such dealers in their respective communities, and (5) eliminating brokers in distribution of such materials and supplies; and the officers, counsellors and members of such associations and organizations: and—

Where a national federation which included 41 federated local and sectional associations of dealers in such materials and supplies in '32 States, and which was formed to succeed to, and apply on a national scale and under same leadership, principles, and programs of aforesaid trade associations; and certain local or sectional affiliated or member organizations of said national federation, acting in cooperation with one another and with it and the active officers thereof, as the case might be; and officers, etc., of said various organizations.

In concertedly pursuing their common objectives and purposes, as above indicated, and as the case might be, and representing, in the aggregate, predominant interests in the fields and sections concerned—

- sons or concerns thus specified were entitled to buy direct from such manufacturers and producers, and that others were not thus entitled;
- (b) Solicited, accepted, and acted upon reports from their various officers or members concerning the arrival, delivery, or origin of shipments made to persons or concerns not recognized by them as entitled to buy direct from manufacturers or producers, for the purpose of preventing further dealings between such buyers and former, and made use of boycott and threats thereof to persuade, induce or compel manufacturers and producers to refrain from selling materials and supplies concerned to so-called "irregular" dealers or others, or to refrain from so selling, except on unfairly discriminatory or prohibitive terms and conditions fixed by them;
 - (c) Made and circulated among manufacturers and producers reports concerning status, equipment, and business methods of dealer-competitors to induce former not to sell such competitors, and stated or intimated to former that so-called "regular" or recognized dealers would withhold or withdraw their patronage if manufacturers and producers sold them, and cooperated with other dealer organizations and manufacturers and producers to confine sale and distribution of materials and supplies involved to so-called regular channels, and prevent sale and distribution otherwise, and intimidated representatives or agents of manufacturers and producers from having or continuing business relations with buyers or prospective buyers not recognized by them as entitled to buy direct;
 - (d) Prepared, published, and circulated among the members, lists, bulletins, extracts of minutes, etc., conveying information to them concerning sales or prospective sales by manufacturers and producers to irregular or non-recognized dealers or prospective buyers, for the purpose of having such members withdraw or withhold their patronage from manufacturers and producers concerned;
 - (e) Took concerted and cooperative action to prevent manufacturers and producers of materials and supplies involved from selling freely to consumers, contractors, United States Government, State governments or political sub-divisions thereof, or other irregular dealers or retailers, and to prevent such consumers, contractors, United States Government, etc., from purchasing freely from manufacturers and producers involved;
 - (f) Fixed and established uniform prices at which members and others should sell their materials and supplies in particular communities; and
 - (g) Held meetings of their officers, directors, counselors, and members for discussion and interchange of information and adoption of plans and measures for executing and carrying out programs and policies as aforesaid indicated;

With results that—

- (a) Interstate commerce in sale and distribution of materials and supplies involved was restrained by elimination or attempted elimination therefrom of so-called irregular dealers and manufacturers and producers selling thereto, and by restriction or attempted restriction of said commerce to such manufacturers, producers and dealers as would and did abide by and support aforesaid program and plan, and there was tendency otherwise to restrain and obstruct natural flow of commerce in channels of trade;
- (b) Competition in sale and distribution of such materials and supplies was substantially lessened, hindered, and suppressed in territories served by members of organizations and associations involved;

- (c) Manufacturers and producers of materials and supplies involved in the various States, who sold and distributed their products in markets in which dealers concerned had their places of business quite generally confined such sale and distribution to recognized dealers;
- (d) Members withdrew and withheld their patronage from manufacturers and producers reported and published as selling through so-called irregular channels and not through recognized dealers;
- (e) Manufacturers and producers frequently refused to sell and discontinued selling to those not on membership lists of aforesaid organizations, etc., or reported to them, as aforesaid, as not entitled to buy direct, and members' competitors in retail sale and distribution of materials and supplies involved frequently were unable to obtain interstate shipments of their requirements because not recognized;
- (f) Manufacturers and producers were injured in their business by restriction of demand for their products and of freedom to sell same direct, by confining their sales to lists of dealers published and distributed by aforesaid organizations, etc., and would not sell to many to whom they wished to sell and considered as dealers, nor direct to consumers, contractors, vendors, Government and political sub-divisions, but limited their sales through "recognized dealer distribution";
- (g) Competition was further substantially interfered with and lessened by activities of such organizations, etc., in preventing dealer competitors from obtaining from manufacturers and producers small quantities of supplies for transportation by truck; and
- (h) Costs to consuming public were increased by issuance and observance of price lists by aforesaid associations and organizations, etc., in certain communities, and by their policy of exclusive dealer distribution, through thereby denying consuming public advantages in price which it otherwise would have obtained from natural flow of commerce under conditions of free competition:

Held, That such practices constituted combination and conspiracy to engage in and further unfair methods of competition in and affecting interstate commerce, within intent and meaning of Section 5.

mission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that said respondents hereinabove designated have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PAR. 10. Those hereinabove specifically named as members, officers, or councillors of respondent associations and organizations do not embrace the entire list or number of such members, officers, or councillors. The building materials and builders' supplies dealers and the affiliated associations or organizations which are members of the associations and organizations hereinabove specifically named parties respondent, and the officers and councillors thereof, number several thousand persons, partnerships, corporations, and associations. Such memberships constitute a class so numerous and changing as to make it impracticable to specifically name them all as parties respondent herein. Those specifically named herein are fairly representative of the whole. All members of aforesaid respondent associations and organizations and all their officers and councillors are also made parties respondent herein as a class of which those specifically named are representative of the whole.

PAR. 11. Said building materials and builders' supplies dealers, members of said associations and organizations and respondents herein, purchase their materials and supplies in the course and conduct of their business from manufacturers, producers, and distributors in various States and cause such materials and supplies to be shipped and transported to the warehouses, places of business and to customers of such purchasing respondents from points in States other than the States in which such respective points of destination are located. In the course of the sale and distribution of their merchandise said respondent members of said organizations and associations cause materials and supplies when sold to be shipped and transported pursuant to purchase orders from their warehouses, places of business or direct from their suppliers to their customers at points in States other than the State in which such respective shipments originate. In the course and conduct of the business of respondents as hereinabove described, all respondents are and have been engaged in commerce among the several States and in trade, business, and commerce having a direct effect upon interstate commerce in building materials and builders' supplies. Except insofar as competition has been restrained, stifled, lessened, suppressed, eliminated, or destroyed by the respondents as hereinafter alleged, each of the said dealers in building materials and builders' supplies, members of respondent associations and organizations, is and has been engaged in the course of such business in actual and potential competition with other respondent members and "recognized" dealers and with non-members and other dealers and vendors who market or desire to market building materials and builders' supplies.

PAR. 12. The respective members of the respondent associations and organizations hereinabove described constitute a large and important part of the dealers in building materials and builders' supplies in the several States of the United States in which the members of respondent organizations and associations are engaged in business; and such members constitute a group so large and influential in the trade as to be able to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in building materials and builders' supplies within, to and from the several trade areas. Said members as allied and banded together in said associations and organizations are enabled thereby to more effectively exercise control and influence over such trade and commerce for the promotion and enhancement of their own volume of trade and profits. The volume of consumption of building materials and builders' supplies in the several trade areas and the volume of trade and commerce in such materials and supplies in, to and from said areas constitute a large and important part of the trade and commerce of the United States in the building and construction materials and supplies industry. Said trade areas are large and important outlets and markets for the sale of building materials and builders' supplies by manufacturers, producers, and distributors within said several trade areas in the several States of the United States.

PAR. 13. Respondents are banded and allied together in aforesaid associations and organizations to carry into effect the program and practices hereinbelow described and to enhance and promote the volume of trade, business and profits of said respondent members and "recognized" dealers. And the respondents, namely said associations and organizations, their members, officers and councillors, parties respondent herein, during and in the period of more than three years last past have agreed, conspired, combined, and confederated together and with others, and have united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves and with others, to adopt, follow, carry out, enforce and maintain, in the said several trade areas, a program, to wit:

1. To establish the respondent members and building materials and builders' supplies dealers approved by respondent associations and organizations as a class of "recognized" building materials and builders' supplies dealers in such trade and industry in the said several trade areas; and to confine and require the sale and distribution of such materials and supplies by manufacturers and producers thereof to or through the medium of such respondent members and "recognized" dealers exclusively.

2. To induce, require or compel manufacturers and producers of building materials and builders' supplies to refrain and to cease or desist from selling or distributing such materials or supplies to non-recognized competitors of respondent members or to dealers, vendors, contractors, consumers, or other purchasers who are not members of respondent associations and organizations and are not such "recognized" dealers; to prevent such non-recognized or non-member competitors, dealers, contractors, vendors, consumers, and other purchasers from purchasing or securing such materials and supplies direct from manufacturers or producers, and to compel them to purchase their requirements of such materials and supplies from or through the medium of respondent members and such "recognized" dealers exclusively and upon terms or conditions of sale which afford a commission, profit, or allowance to such "recognized" dealers and respondent members.

3. To induce, require or compel manufacturers and producers of building materials and builders' supplies to refrain and desist from soliciting trade or business from, or quoting prices to, non-recognized competitors or respondent members or to dealers, vendors, contractors, and other purchasers who are not such "recognized" dealers, except upon terms and conditions of sale which include or afford an allowance, commission or profit to a respondent member and "recognized" dealer; and to induce, require, or compel such manufacturers and producers to solicit their direct trade or business from, and to quote manufacturer's or producer's prices to, such "recognized" dealers exclusively.

4. To prevent competing dealers, vendors, contractors and other purchasers of building materials and builders' supplies from participating with said respondent members and "recognized" dealers in pool car shipments of such materials and supplies; to induce, require or compel manufacturers and producers of building materials and builders' supplies to confine and limit their distribution thereof to carload quantities and to shipments by railroad only; and to induce, require, or compel such manufacturers and producers to refrain from and to refuse to permit such distribution of their materials and supplies to be made by motortruck or motor vehicle; and to eliminate, prevent, or lessen and restrain the use of motortrucks or motor vehicles for such transportation as well as the actual and potential competition afforded respondent members and such "recognized" dealers by contractors, dealers, vendors, consumers, and other purchasers who because of economy of operation, lack of railroad, storage, or other facilities, or for other good and sufficient reasons on the part of the seller or purchaser, desire to have their requirements of building materials and builders' supplies distributed and delivered by motortruck or motor vehicle from the plants, warehouses, or distributing points of the manufacturers or producers.

5. To interfere with the business and trade in building materials and builders' supplies of dealers, vendors, and other sellers who are not members of respondent organizations or associations who are not such "recognized" dealers, for the purpose of enabling or assisting said respondent members and "recognized" dealers to appropriate and acquire the patronage or trade and obstruct the competition of such non-member or non-recognized dealers, vendors and other sellers.

6. To prevent manufacturers of cement blocks and building materials of similar type from purchasing or continuing to purchase their raw materials and supplies direct from manufacturers and producers of such raw materials and supplies, and to require such manufacturers of cement blocks and building materials of similar type to purchase their raw materials and other supplies exclusively from said respondent members and "recognized" dealers and at prices which include or afford such dealers and members an allowance, commission or profit upon such purchases.

7. To require and compel the sale and distribution of all cement requirements for all buildings and other private construction as well as for highway, bridge, and culvert construction and maintenance, and the cement requirements for cities, counties, and all other political subdivisions, to be made through the medium of said respondent members and "recognized" dealers and at prices or conditions of sale which include or afford such members and "recognized" dealers an allowance, commission, or profit on such cement purchases; and to induce, require or compel manufacturers and producers of cement to cease or desist from making any sales of cement for such purposes direct to the contractors, States, counties, political subdivisions, and non-recognized dealers or purchasers, and to cease and desist from making sales in any way which does not afford such "recognized" dealers or respondent members a commission, allowance, or profit on the purchase of such cement.

8. To exclusively warehouse, promote, advertise, and advance the sale and use of the brands of building materials and builders' supplies of the respective manufacturers and producers who (a) confine and limit the marketing and distribution of their products to or through the medium of respondent members and said "recognized" dealers, and (b) who refrain or desist from selling or distributing their products direct to competitors of respondents or to contractors, dealers, vendors, consumers, and other purchasers which are not included among such "recognized" dealers or members of respondent organizations and associations; to urge contractors, builders, consumers, and other purchasers to buy or use the brands or products of such manufacturers and producers to the exclusion of the brands and products of manufacturers or producers who do not so confine or limit the sale and distribution of their products to or through the medium of said respondent members and "recognized" dealers or who do not otherwise conform to the foregoing program of respondents; and to refuse to warehouse or deal in, or to promote, advertise, advance, or urge the sale and use of, the products and brands of building materials and builders' supplies of those manufacturers or producers who fail or refuse to so confine the marketing and distribution of their products to or through the medium of said respondent members and "recognized" dealers or who make any sales of their products direct to competitors of respondents or to non-recognized dealers, vendors, contractors, builders, consumers, or other purchasers.

9. To prevent dealers, vendors, distributors, and other sellers of building materials and builders' supplies who are not such "recognized" dealers from selling any building materials or building supplies for new construction or new work to contractors, builders, consumers, or other purchasers; to monopolize such trade and business in respondent members and such "recognized" dealers, and to destroy all such business enjoyed by non-recognized dealers, vendors, contractors, or other sellers.

10. To eliminate, lessen, and destroy the business and competition of those engaged or desiring to engage in said building materials and builders' supplies trade and industry as jobbers or brokers.

11. To prohibit, prevent, and restrain the sale or distribution of building materials and builders' supplies by manufacturers or producers to ultimate purchasers or users through the medium of jobbers or brokers, and to thereby secure for such "recognized" dealers and respondent members the trade and business ordinarily enjoyed or conducted by such jobbers and brokers.

12. To accord and limit said "recognition" to concerns who are or become members in good standing of respondent associations and organizations.

13. To eliminate, lessen, restrain, and control actual and potential competition among or with such respondent members and "recognized" dealers (a) by denying such "recognition" and membership in respondent organizations and associations to persons, partnerships, and corporations who are engaged, or desire to engage, in the business of dealing in, selling or vending building materials and builders' supplies in competition with such members or "recognized" dealers, or who desire to do business in communities served by such members or "recognized" dealers; and (b) by hindering, obstructing, and hampering such persons, partnerships, and corporations in the conduct of their business; and (c) by driving or attempting to drive such concerns out of business; and (d) by denying membership in respondent organizations and associations and such "recognition" to any dealer, vendor, or other seller of building materials and builders' supplies who fails or refuses to support, agree to, and abide by the said program, conspiracy, and undertaking of respondents as herein described, and (e) by other united, cooperative, or concerted action on the part of respondents.

14. To acquire and maintain a monopoly in such respondent members and "recognized" dealers of the trade and business of dealing in or distributing building materials and builders' supplies.

15. To fix and establish, by agreement, schedules of uniform prices for the sale of building materials, and builders' supplies. The prices thus established were enhanced beyond the price which would prevail under natural and normal competition, in the absence of said price agreements and the other agreements herein alleged.

16. To require all members of respondent organizations and associations and all "recognized" dealers to carry out, and to agree and pledge themselves to support and carry out, the foregoing program; and to enhance and increase the volume of business and profits of said respondent members and "recognized" dealers by effecting and maintaining the foregoing program and by other united and concerted action.

PAR. 14. The parties respondent herein have agreed, combined, confederated and conspired together for the purpose and with the intent of carrying out the aforesaid program; and they have been and are now engaged in carrying into effect and maintaining said program and the said agreement, combination, confederation, conspiracy and undertaking as set forth in paragraph 13 hereof. Pursuant to and for the purpose of effecting and carrying out the said program and said agreement, combination, confederation, conspiracy, and undertaking, the respondents have, among other things done the following:

(a) Exacted and procured written pledges and other promises and agreements from each such "recognized" dealer, from each member of respondent associations and organizations, and from manufacturers and producers of building materials and builders' supplies to the effect that such dealers, members, manufacturers, and producers will support, adhere to and enforce the foregoing program of respondents set forth in paragraph 13 hereof.

(b) Used and continued to use, in concert and agreement among themselves and with others, coercive and concerted action, boycott, threats of boycott, and other united action against manufacturers, dealers, and others to induce and require them, and to attempt so to induce and require them, to agree and conform to and to support and enforce the said program of respondents.

(c) Held meetings of respondent associations and organizations, their members, officers, and councillors, to devise means of exerting influence, pressure, coercion, or other means of inducing, coercing, and requiring manufacturers, producers, distributors, and others engaged in said building materials and builders' supplies trade and industry to abide by and adhere to said program.

(d) For the purpose and with the effect of inducing or compelling manufacturers and producers to conform to said program, informed and advised such manufacturers and producers of the names of said "recognized" dealers in the several trade areas and of respondent's purpose and determination to insist upon and require such manufacturers and producers to distribute their products through the medium of said "recognized" dealers exclusively, and in conformity with aforesaid program of respondents; and also advised such manufacturers and producers that their sale and distribution of building materials or builders' supplies direct to certain non-recognized dealers and purchasers, or their failure to conform to aforesaid program in the distribution of their materials and supplies, would be considered by respondents and such "recognized" dealers as "unfriendly" acts against respondents and such "recognized" dealers.

(e) Denied and revoked membership in respondent associations and organizations and such "recognition" of dealers who failed to support, abide by or carry out said program of respondents, and otherwise disciplined such members and dealers.

(f) Used and engaged in other acts, cooperative, and concerted action and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing and carrying out the foregoing program and agreement, combinations, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking set forth in paragraph 13 hereof.

PAR. 15. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking, and the said acts and practices of respondents, set forth in paragraphs 13 and 14 hereof, are and have been in various trade areas and other related or connected territory, frequently comprising more than one State or portions of more than one State.

(a) To monopolize, in said respondent members and "recognized" dealers, the business of dealing in and distributing building materials and builders' supplies.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said building materials and builders' supplies trade and industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other consideration which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

(c) To substantially increase the cost to purchasers of such building materials and builders' supplies and consequently to increase the cost of construction, repair, maintenance, and remodeling of homes, dwellings, buildings, highways, and all kinds of construction and building works.

(d) To oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which are or have been engaged in selling, distributing, manufacturing, or using building materials and builders' supplies.

(e) To restrain or restrict employment in the construction and building industry and trade and to reduce the purchasing power or capacity of purchasers and users of such building materials and builders' supplies.

(f) To restrain, restrict, hamper, and lessen employment in, and the business of, the manufacture, sale, and use of motortrucks and motor vehicles for the distribution of building materials and builders' supplies.

(g) To obstruct, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in building materials and builders' supplies in, to and from various trade areas; and to injure respondent's competitors in unfairly diverting business and trade from them, depriving them thereof, and otherwise oppressing or driving them out of business.

(h) To prejudice and injure the public and manufacturers, producers, dealers, distributors, and others who do not conform to respondent's program or who do not desire, but are compelled, to conform to said program.

PAR. 16. The above alleged acts and things done by respondent as set forth in paragraphs 13, 14, and 15 hereof are monopolistic practices and are methods of competition which are unfair, and they constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning, and in violation, of Section 5 of said Act approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

respondents Building Material Dealers Alliance, et al., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Daniel J. Murphy, attorney for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and respondents did not introduce any testimony in opposition to the allegations of the complaint; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel for the Commission and for the respondents; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Building Material Dealers Alliance, hereinafter referred to as the Alliance, was organized in 1931 as a voluntary unincorporated trade association. Its membership consisted of (a) over 150 dealers in building materials and builders' supplies, having their principal places of business within, and doing business in, an area known in the trade as The Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area; and (b) organized local associations or units of such dealers. Said dealer members of said Alliance and of said organized local units are persons, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the business of buying, selling, and distributing building materials and builders' supplies, which embrace such materials and supplies as cement, brick, tile, clay products, sewer pipe, plaster, sand, gravel, stone, lime, mortar, and products thereof, lumber, lath, roofing, and other builders' supplies and building materials used in the building and construction industry. The Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area consists of all that portion of the States of Ohio and Pennsylvania included in a line from Cleveland to Massillon to Pittsburgh to Erie, and is one of the largest markets in the country for the sale of building materials and builders' supplies; and the business of the dealer members of said Alliance represents the preponderance of business in said materials and supplies in said market. The affairs of said Alliance were managed and conducted by executive officers, including a chairman, a vice-chairman, and a secretary-treasurer, and by an Executive Board of Councillors, hereinafter referred to as the Council. The said Council met at frequent intervals for the transaction of business of the Alliance. The members of said Council are known in said respondent organization as councillors, and they are delegated or elected to membership in said Council as representatives of the members of said Alliance and of various groups or subdivisions of such members. For the more effective operation of the Alliance, the membership thereof was divided or organized into local associations, or districts, each constituting a branch or sub-division of said Alliance. Said respondent association was a unit of the respondents Middle Atlantic Council and National Federation, and the officers and members of said respondent Association actively cooperated in carrying out the program and policies of the respondent organizations and associations. Respondent H. W. Classen, who was the president of the respondent Exchange, was also president of the respondent Maryland Builders Supply Association. The members of the respondent Lime and Cement Exchange were also members of the respondent Maryland Builders Supply Association.

PAR. 9. The respondent National Federation of Builders Supply Associations is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey in 1933, comprising certain associations of dealers engaged in the several States of the United States in the sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies and federated together for the purpose of promoting the business interest of the dealer members of said associations. The membership of said respondent Federation consisted of forty-one federated units located in approximately thirty-two States throughout the United States. The said federated units were as follows: the respondents Building Material Institute of Cleveland, the Western Pennsylvania Builders Supply Alliance, Lime and Cement Exchange of Baltimore City, Maryland Builders Supply Association, New Jersey Mason Material

Dealers Association, New York State Builders Supply Association, Ohio Builders Supply Association, the Building Material Merchants of Chicago District, Michigan Builders Supply Association, Builders Supply Dealers Association of Eastern Pennsylvania, Greater Washington Builders Supply Association, Philadelphia Builders Supply Association, Virginia Lumber and Building Supply Dealers Association, Inc., Alabama Lumber and Building Material Association, Builders Supply Dealers Association of Wisconsin, Building Material Credit Association, Inc., Building Material Dealers Association of Greater St. Louis, Building Material Dealers Association of San Diego, California, Building Material Dealers Association of Western Washington, Building Material Men's Association of Westchester County, Building Supply Dealers Association of Northern California, Building Supply Dealers Association of Oregon, Carolina Retail Lumber and Building Supply Dealers Association, Colorado Association of Builders Supply Dealers, Florida Lumber and Millwork Association, Georgia Retail Lumber and Building Supply Association, Inc., Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers Association, Indiana Builders Supply Association, Iowa State Builders Supply Association, Kentucky Builders Supply Association, Los Angeles County Building Material Dealers Association, Mason Material Dealers Association, Inc., Mason Material Dealers Association of New Castle County, Delaware, Minnesota Building Supply Dealers Association, Missouri Valley Builders Supply Association, Inc., New England Builders Supply Association, Southern Builders Supply Association, Texas Builders Supply Dealers Association, Tri-County Division of Michigan Builders Supply Association, West Virginia Lumber and Builders' Supply Association, New York Builders Supply Trade Area Association, Inc., and Mississippi Retail Lumber Dealers Association. The affairs of said respondent Federation were managed by executive officers, including a president, vice-presidents, treasurer, secretary, and an executive committee which functioned in the nature of a board of directors, meeting from time to time for the transaction of business of the Federation. Respondent John M. Stoner was the president of said respondent Federation, and respondent Lawrence I. MacQueen, who was also the executive secretary of the respondent Building Material Dealers Alliance, manager of the respondent Pittsburgh Builders Supply Club, and executive secretary of respondent Western Pennsylvania Builders Supply Alliance, was also the secretary of the said respondent Federation, and the headquarters of said respondent Federation were maintained in the office of its secretary in Pittsburgh, Pa. The officers and executive committee of said respondent Federation were actively engaged in securing the cooperation of all its affiliated units in maintaining the respondents' program and policies.

PAR. 10. The respondent members of respondent organizations and associations purchase building materials and builders' supplies from manufacturers and producers located in various States of the United States other than the States in which the respective members have their places of business, and cause said materials and supplies to be transported from the various States in which they are manufactured and produced to respondents at their respective places of business. Respondent members sometimes cause materials and supplies to be shipped and delivered to their customers from the respective places of manufacture of such materials and supplies in States other than those in which the respective customers are located. The activities of the respondent organizations and associations and the members thereof, have affected interstate commerce to the extent and in the manner hereinafter set forth. In the course of their respective businesses, the members of the respective respondent organizations and associations, but for the matters and things hereinafter set out, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, and are in competition with other individuals, partnerships and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies.

I. Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, refer primarily to the following respondent organizations, their officers, and their members, to wit: Building Material Dealers Alliance, Pittsburgh Builders Supply Club, Building Material Institute, Western Pennsylvania Builders Supply Alliance, Allied Construction Industries of Cleveland, Ohio, Inc., and to their cooperation in maintaining and enforcing the said respondents' program known as the Alliance program.

PAR. 11. The respondent organizations as aforesaid established a class of dealers in building materials and builders' supplies known as "recognized" dealers. These recognized dealers were the members of the respondent organizations and associations and building materials and builders' supplies dealers approved by the respondents. The articles of organization of the respondent Alliance provided as follows:

The recognized dealers in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area shall be construed as those holding membership in, cooperating with, an organized dealer group within this territory, or who hold membership in the Alliance.

Membership in the respondent organizations was restricted, theoretically, to the ability of a dealer seeking recognition to establish an economic necessity for his business in the community which he served or proposed to serve, but, practically, it was the arbitrary decision of the officers and leaders representing the respondent members, competitors, or prospective competitors of the said dealer seeking recognition, in determining whether the said dealer should be classed as "recognized."

PAR. 12. The basic object and purpose of the Alliance program which all the respondents actively cooperated in maintaining was to control and confine the retail distribution of building materials and builders' supplies exclusively through such recognized dealers, and to prevent the direct sale of such materials and supplies by manufacturers to all others, to wit: consumers, non-recognized dealers, vendors, contractors, and State Governments and other political sub-divisions; and to require all such purchasers to purchase their materials and supplies through recognized dealer channels upon terms or conditions of sale which afforded a commission or profit to such recognized dealers.

PAR. 13. Further objectives of the respondents' Alliance program were (a) to limit the distribution of building materials and builders' supplies to carload quantities by railroad only, and thus eliminate distribution by motor truck or motor vehicles, so preventing competing dealers, vendors, contractors, and other purchasers from obtaining their requirements in truckload quantities; only recognized dealers could participate in pool car shipments, and all others were to be prevented from so participating with the recognized dealers; (b) to prevent manufacturers of cement blocks from purchasing their raw materials direct from manufacturers and producers, and to require such manufacturers to purchase their raw materials exclusively from the respondent members and recognized dealers at prices which afforded a profit to such dealers and members; (c) to require the sale and distribution of all cement requirements for all buildings and other private construction, as well as for highway, bridge, and culvert construction and maintenance, and the cement requirements for cities, counties, and all other political sub-divisions of states to be made through the medium of said respondent members and recognized dealers and at prices affording a profit to said members and dealers; (d) to facilitate price fixing among recognized dealers in their respective communities; and (e) to eliminate brokers in the distribution of building materials and builders' supplies.

PAR. 14. For the accomplishment of the aforesaid objects and purposes of the respondents' Alliance program, the respondent organizations, their officers and members, under the leadership of respondent Lawrence I. MacQueen, have used the following methods and practices:

(a) They have exacted and procured written pledges and other promises and agreements from each respondent member and from manufacturers and producers of building materials and builders' supplies to the effect that such members and manufacturers will support and adhere to the respondents' Alliance program. The articles of the Alliance organization provided: "A member of the Alliance shall be required to pledge support to such principles and policies as may at that time represent the mind of the Alliance, and to such later policies as may be duly and properly adopted." The Alliance membership pledge is as follows:

BUILDING MATERIAL DEALERS ALLIANCE

In recognition of the value and importance of a closer relationship and co-operation between those dealers in building material who have an obvious community of interest, we do hereby accept membership in the Building Material Dealers Alliance and do pledge ourselves to the observance and maintenance, in so far as it is within our power, of the following principles:

1. It is the sole right and prerogative of the organized dealers in Building Material serving any community to determine who shall be qualified as a recognized dealer in that community and when such recognition shall be accorded.

2. The interests of the building industry are conserved and protected when producers of Building Material distribute their products exclusively through recognized dealers in such material.

3. Our mutual interests are best served and the welfare of the industry is advanced when the solicitation of business and the quotation of prices by producer's representatives and salesmen are confined to recognized dealers.

4. The maintenance both by ourselves and by our sources of supply of definite terms of sale and proper credit practices is a fundamental necessity for the continuity of our business.

5. Where equitable practice and market stability requires, the shipment of all building material shall be made in carload quantities by rail.

6. The use of jobbers and brokers as a medium for the distribution of building material in an area served by recognized dealers is unnecessary and uneconomic.

SIGNED:-----

(b) For the purpose of inducing and compelling manufacturers and producers to conform to said program, membership lists of the respondent organizers were mailed to large numbers of such manufacturers and producers in the various States of the United States, together with statements of policy and letters which implied boycott, or contained threats of boycott, against the materials of manufacturers and producers who failed to cooperate. For example, secretary MacQueen addressed the following form letter:

To all manufacturers of Building Material serving the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Area:

GENTLEMEN:

By direction of the councilors of the Building Material Alliance representing the recognized dealers in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area, I am sending to you certain statements which represent the basic policy of each member of the Alliance * * *.

It would be very pleasing to this group of more than 150 recognized dealers in this area, if you would inform your salesmen or sales representatives of these statements of policy, and it's our earnest hope that you may see your way clear to insist that they give to these recognized dealers their sincere and wholehearted support. * * *

Naturally, a statement from any manufacturer of his desire and willingness to cooperate with the Alliance—will be appreciated and all members will be fully informed of such evidence of understanding helpfulness.

You will find enclosed a list of the membership of the Building Material Alliance of the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area, representing the recognized dealers in this territory of March 1, 1933. This is sent you in the expectation that it will be helpful to you in the proper distribution of your product in this district.

Very sincerely yours,

(S) L. I. MACQUEEN,
Secretary.

The following statements of policy were enclosed with the above letter:

STATEMENT OF POLICY

NUMBER THREE

It is the fixed policy of each member of the Building Material Dealers Alliance of the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Trade Area that they will only warehouse and push the sale of those brands of commodities which are marketed exclusively through the recognized dealers in this trade area.

NUMBER FOUR

The members of the Building Material Dealers Alliance will construe as an unfriendly act the sale of any type of building material, usually and customarily sold through building supply dealers, directly to contractor or consumer at any point within the Cleveland-Pittsburgh trade area where recognized dealer distribution is available. Further, it is held by the members of the Alliance that on new business, on and after March 1st, the shipment by manufacturers of any building material within this trade area other than in car lots by rail will be detrimental to the interests of the recognized building material dealers and subversive to the dealer structure.

(c) Consistent and combined pressure of the respondent dealers was exerted on manufacturers and producers to accept and cooperate with the respondents' program. This pressure took the form of official letters, personal contacts, telephone calls, and telegrams containing implied threats that if a manufacturer did not so abide the members of the respondent organizations would not do further business with him.

(d) The respondent officers and members conducted a system of espionage upon the business of manufacturers, members, non-recognized dealers, and others; complaints against manufacturers for violations of the respondents' program were made directly to secretary MacQueen, or indirectly through a councillor, and said complaints were brought to the attention of the respondent members and discussed at the meetings of the respondent organizations; letters to secretary MacQueen from manufacturers and producers indicating cooperation with respondents' program were also brought to the notice of respondent members at their meetings; secretary MacQueen, through various sources of information, particularly through members, received reports relative to the conduct of other members and the observance or nonobservance of their pledges.

(e) In conformity to secretary MacQueen's advocacy of "publicity for the facts" to insure an effective working unit, the officers of respondent organizations transmitted information, either orally or by official bulletins and communications, to respondent dealer members in regard to manufacturers who were not abiding by the respondents' program, the obvious inference being that the members should not further do business with these non-conforming manufacturers.

(f) Official letters and resolutions of respondents were addressed to, and oral conferences were had with manufacturers and railroad officials in order to promote and enforce the respondents' policy of "shipments of carload lots by rail only" and to eliminate the trucking of building materials and builders' supplies.

(g) Price-lists were issued from the office of Lawrence I. MacQueen as an official of respondent organizations, to which lists the dealers in the Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania markets were supposed to adhere. Changes of prices were furnished from Mr. MacQueen's office by supplemental pages forwarded or handed to the members to insert in their "price books." If a dealer failed to adhere to said prices, pressure was brought to bear by the respondents on the source of supply of that dealer, and other respondent dealers would not purchase materials from a manufacturer who insisted upon selling to a dealer who was not adhering to the price-list.

PAR. 15. The respondent organizations and associations actively cooperated in the enforcement and maintenance of the Alliance program. Lawrence I. MacQueen was the executive secretary in two of the organizations, to wit: Building Material Dealers Alliance and Western Pennsylvania Builders Supply Alliance, and manager of the Pittsburgh Builders Supply Club, and operated as the official of these three organizations from the same office in Pittsburgh; and the president and manager, respectively, of the other two organizations, to wit: Building Material Institute, and Allied Construction Industries were councillors of Building Material Dealers Alliance. Reports, bulletins, pamphlets, letters, extracts from meetings, rosters of membership, and other data were mailed by Mr. MacQueen to the members of the respondent organizations, most of whom were listed as members of the respondent Alliance. The officers of said respondent organizations cooperated in reporting and disseminating information identifying the manufacturers who violated the Alliance program.

II. Paragraphs 16 to 33 refer primarily to the activities of the other named respondent organizations and associations, their officers, and their members, to wit: Lime and Cement Exchange of Baltimore City, Middle Atlantic Council of Builders Supply Associations, Maryland Builders Supply Association, and the National Federation of Builders Supply Associations and its federated units and members thereof.

PAR. 16. On May 19, 1933, secretary L. I. MacQueen sent a form letter, entitled "A Call to Action," over the entire country to secretaries and presidents of organized groups and to various dealers in the building supply industry. The letter is in part as follows:

To the responsible executives of organized groups within the construction industry:

At the regular meeting of the councillors of the Building Material Dealers Alliance in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh area, it was directed that a general call be issued to all organized groups of dealers in builders supplies—requesting that they delegate representatives to a conference to be held in Cleveland, on Monday, June 5.

The said meeting on June 5, 1933, is the last recorded meeting of the Building Material Dealers Alliance as such. The meeting resulted in the formation of the respondent National Federation of Builders Supply Associations, which was to apply on a national scale the principles and programs of the Alliance under the same leadership, with its headquarters at Pittsburgh, Pa., at the office of its secretary, respondent L. I. MacQueen, who was the author of the booklet entitled "Alliance Program," which contained the principles and policies of the Alliance movement.

PAR. 17. The directors of the respondent National Federation, in convention assembled in December 1934, adopted a "Resolution of Dealer Definition," which set forth the qualifications necessary for recognition as a dealer in builders' supplies. This dealer definition was mailed to the officers of the affiliated units of the National Federation for distribution among its members. At about the same time, the respondent National Federation issued "A Declaration of Business Policy," which was widely distributed among the dealer members of the units of said respondent National Federation. Many of the dealer members signed said declaration on perforated coupons attached to the bottom of said declarations, and mailed the said signed coupons to secretary MacQueen's office, indicating their acceptance thereof. The members were requested to hang said declarations in their offices. Said declaration is in part as follows:

We resolve, therefore, that whenever possible, we will hereafter purchase builders supplies from those manufacturers or producers of builders supplies who merchandise their products to dealers in builders supplies, when sold for use within a recognized marketing area which is constantly and regularly served by dealers or from those manufacturers who comply with the provisions of the Code of Fair Competition for the Builders Supply Trade.

The purpose and intention of the above resolution was to keep the sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies within clearly circumscribed limits, to wit: To the qualified recognized dealers under the respondent Federation's definition, as represented by the members of its affiliated units; and to have said dealer members limit their patronage to those manufacturers and producers who sold exclusively to those dealers so recognized by the Federation.

PAR. 18. The directors of the National Federation, at a meeting in Kansas City, Mo., on June 3 and 4, 1935, voted the following: "Executive Committee goes on record as definitely opposed to the practice of receiving builders' supplies in any other way than by rail, preferably in carload quantities."

PAR. 19. Secretary MacQueen of the respondent National Federation issued a form letter dated August 30, 1935, to officers and directors of federated units. Said letter is in part as follows: "Local markets must be stabilized. In some way we must control those dealers or alleged dealers who * * * are destroying the stability of our markets."

PAR. 20. Harloe S. Chaffee, a director of the National Federation, and the president of the New York State Builders Supply Association, an affiliated unit of the National Federation, was the chairman of a cement committee, consisting of twelve other dealer members located in various States of the United States, representing the said National Federation, which met with representatives of the cement industry, and as a result of negotiations, a large number of cement companies, in April 1935, announced a "Revised Distribution Policy." This revised policy contained a definition of an "equipped cement dealer" to whom the cement companies were to confine all sales of cement, with certain specific exceptions stated in said policy. Secretary MacQueen, in a circular letter mailed to all the secretaries of the federated units, stated "a most important element in this revised distribution policy is the definition of an equipped cement dealer." Secretary MacQueen, in an official communication to the federated units on June 19, 1935, stated: "The splendid service to the industry rendered by the Federation in connection with the sales policy generally announced by cement companies is illustrative of the necessity of the Federation and of its value to all federated groups. Without a doubt this recently announced cement policy will turn not less than $25,000,000 worth of business into dealer channels * * *."

PAR. 21. At the meeting of the respondent National Federation in June 1935, secretary MacQueen stated:

First, the responsibility devolved upon every dealer in builders' supplies to ascertain whether or not the cement manufacturer from whom he purchased cement has issued a statement of policy as to distribution * * *.

It was suggested therefore that unless the dealer had received notice from his cement manufacturer of the adoption of this policy that he communicate with the manufacturer, inquiring whether such policy had been issued, and if not, why not. Unquestionably dealers should give their patronage to those manufacturers who had indicated in writing their policy of distribution.

Second, since the policy was to distribute through "equipped cement dealers" the speaker outlined a definite program which he recommended to all markets as the procedure to be followed in developing accurate lists of equipped dealers in every market.

Third, all markets were urged to maintain as a fixed mark-up the addition of 15¢ per barrel for Portland cement f. o. b. cars.

Secretary MacQueen's plan was that a committee be appointed within each federated unit to prepare a list of "equipped cement dealers," and that the list be presented personally to each cement manufacturer who sells within a given market. The secretary of each federated unit would then send his list to the secretary of the National Federation, and master lists would then be compiled which would include all the selected "equipped cement dealers" within the territories of all the federated units.

PAR. 22. The respondent National Federation, in calling its convention to be held January 9, 10, and 11, 1936, issued, on November 29, 1935, "A Call to Arms * * * to the 500 odd dealers throughout the United States who have always sold more than one-half of all hard material distributed through dealer channels in this country." The National Federation appointed major commodity committees to work in conjunction with the commodity committees of the federated units. The object of these commodity committees was to assist in the maintenance of a policy of dealer distribution for the particular major commodities of the building supply industry. The major commodity committees included committees on cement, clay products, metal lath, lime, gypsum products, metal sash, mineral aggregates, ready mixed concrete, brick, roofing, and sewer pipe. At said convention the Federation adopted the recommendations of the cement committee, which were in brief:

1. That cement manufacturers should not ship to dealers outside their particular dealer territory.

2. That the organized units, with the assistance of their dealer members, determine the selling territory of each dealer.

3. That the cement manufacturers desist from all warehouse operations.

4. That all trucking of cement be stopped.

5. That the dealers maintain a minimum differential of 15¢ per barrel on all sales of Portland cement in carload quantities.

6. That the federated units make revised lists of established dealers, these to be furnished to all cement manufacturers shipping into their territory.

7. That all ethical manufacturers of cement be given recognition in all metropolitan markets, even at some possible inconvenience to dealers in that market.

Chairman Chaffee of the said cement committee was appointed by the Federation as Special Liaison Officer to receive complaints from dealer members in regard to cement sales by cement companies throughout the country which the secretaries of the federated units of the Federation were unable "to effect a satisfactory settlement." Mr. Chaffee received a large number of these complaints which were "regularly destroyed as soon as they were cleaned up," and a large number of said complaints were made and handled entirely by long distance telephone. Mr. Chaffee testified, "I can assure you that I put nothing on paper." In response to complaints made by a dealer in Harrisonburg, Va., Mr. Chaffee, as chairman of the National Cement Committee, wrote to the Keystone Portland Cement Company of Philadelphia, Pa., because of a direct sale made by said cement company to the Nielsen Construction Company for delivery at Shenandoah, Va., and in regard to other prospective deliveries at Staunton, Va., for the same firm; Chairman Chaffee also wrote to the Superior Cement Company of Portsmouth, Ohio, in regard to a direct sale by that company to J. I. Barnes of Logansport, Ind., for use on the United States post office building at Orange, Va. The said Nielsen Construction Company and J. I. Barnes were not considered "equipped cement dealers" by the respondents.

Mr. Chaffee wrote, "The Dealers represented at this coming meeting (directors' meeting of the National Federation) are vitally interested in knowing the policy and position of the various manufacturers of cement throughout the country. Your cooperation will be keenly appreciated."

PAR. 23. In 1935, the United States Government, through the Procurement Division for the Relief Administration, announced a policy of buying directly from manufacturers. Secretary MacQueen of the respondent Federation announced that this policy "must be stopped" in a form letter dated July 8, 1935.

The United States Government, in connection with F. E. R. A., sent out an inquiry "for 100,000 barrels of cement to manufacturers within the State of Ohio." The following excerpt is taken from a report on Federation activities, signed by Lawrence I. MacQueen, Secretary, dated August 22, 1935:

As a result of the prompt action on the part of the State organization (Ohio Builders Supply Association, an affiliated unit of the National Federation), and with the leadership of the president of the Federation, no cement company quoted. This same inquiry was then issued to manufacturers outside of the State, and again no direct bids were made. A committee headed by the president of the Federation met with the purchasing agent for relief work in the State of Ohio, and negotiated for a recognition of the rights and privileges of dealers. This work in Ohio unquestionably served to assist in bringing the Government to see the position of the dealer in connection with Government bidding.

The National Federation was successful in having the United States Government change its announced policy of direct purchase of materials for relief purposes, and Secretary MacQueen, on August 28, 1935, addressed a form letter to the units of the Federation which refers to said activity of the Federation as "one of the finest pieces of cooperative work this industry ever engaged in" in "bucking a department of the Government" and thereby secured for "dealer distribution $50,000,000 worth of business" which the Government "was determined to buy direct."

PAR. 24. The respondents Lime and Cement Exchange of Baltimore City and the Maryland Builders Supply Association, affiliated units of the respondent National Federation, and the Middle Atlantic Council of Builders Supply Associations, which included in its membership of eight associations seven affiliated units of the said National Federation, actively cooperated with the said National Federation in enforcing and maintaining the principles and program of the said National Federation, as above set forth. Respondent H. C. Thompson was the secretary of each of the three above named respondent organizations, as heretofore stated. Secretary Thompson received from Secretary MacQueen of the National Federation copies of the "Resolution of Dealer Definition" above referred to, and adopted said definition in determining who was a dealer in building materials. Secretary Thompson also received from Secretary MacQueen at least 100 copies of "Declarations of Business Policy" referred to above, and he distributed at least 50 of the same. It was the duty of respondent Thompson, as secretary of these organizations, which he fulfilled, to notify members of the names of manufacturers who made direct sales to those whom the respondents did not consider as dealers in builders' supplies.

PAR. 25. Secretary Thompson of the Lime and Cement Exchange sent membership lists of said Exchange, together with the names of a few other approved dealers, to several manufacturers located in various States, to wit: New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois, Ohio, and Maryland, who shipped, sold, and distributed their products in the markets where the dealer members of said Exchange have their places of business, with the implied suggestion that sales be confined to said list. Replies from several manufacturers were received indicating cooperation. The respondent Exchange adopted a resolution stating that the Lehigh Portland Cement Company had accepted a contract in Baltimore without a dealer being a party thereto, and said resolution condemned the action of any cement manufacturer or any other manufacturer of building materials in selling direct to the United States Government, the State, or any political sub-division, concrete block manufacturers, ready-mix plants, or any other purchaser of building materials for manufacturing and/or construction. In accordance with the said resolution, copies were sent to all members and to all manufacturers selling to the dealers in the Baltimore area.

Secretary Thompson forwarded a copy of said resolution to the secretary of the National Federation, with the suggestion that a copy of this resolution be broadcast from the National Federation office among all of its units, "as this will be direct evidence that at least one cement company has already started to sell direct rather than through a building supply dealer."

PAR. 26. The respondent L. H. Thompson, as secretary of the Maryland Builders Supply Association, mailed a "Special Notice to all Members," calling attention to a direct sale to a contractor by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. The Maryland Builders Supply Association included in its membership the members of the respondent Lime and Cement Exchange.

PAR. 27. The Baltimore Lumber Company, a competitor of the members of said Exchange, was unable to purchase cement in carload lots from several manufacturers because of the interference of the said Exchange and its unwillingness to classify the firm as a dealer. The said firm, in 1935, did about $340,000 worth of business in lumber and building materials, both within and outside the State of Maryland; the said firm applied for membership in said Exchange, and it was refused membership.

PAR. 28. The Middle Atlantic Council of Builders' Supply Association was formed "for the sole purpose of getting representation from adjoining trade areas of the builders' supply industry; thereby having a council to solve problems in the different overlapping areas which are more or less of the same character." The Council, at a meeting on January 18, 1935, adopted the following resolution:

First. "That manufacturers should distribute builders supplies through established and recognized builders supply dealers."

Second. "That a new dealer account * * * should not be opened by any manufacturer * * * until after such manufacturer had communicated * * * to ascertain if the contemplated account is a builders supply dealer in the trade area."

These resolutions, as adopted, are being mailed to manufacturers of the principal commodities sold by builders supply dealers in the territory in order that all manufacturers may know the distribution policies acceptable to the members of these associations.

Respondent Thompson, as secretary of said Council, sent the above resolution to several manufacturers located in various States of the United States who service the markets of the members of its associations, and several responses were received from said manufacturers indicating cooperation. The following reply is typical:

We are pleased to advise you that we are taking steps to give you complete cooperation by advising our sales representatives to conform with the distribution policies which are acceptable to the members of your association * * *

PAR. 29. The New Jersey Mason Material Dealers Association is a New Jersey corporation, with its principal headquarters in Newark in said State. The said Association was a member of the respondent Middle Atlantic Council of Builders Supply Associations, and is an affiliated unit of the respondent National Federation, and actively cooperated with said Federation in maintaining and enforcing the policies and program of said Federation as hereinabove set forth. The membership of said Association consists of: (a) Active members who are dealers in building materials with places of business in New Jersey, and (b) associate members who are manufacturers located in various States of the United States, who service the building material markets in New Jersey. W. M. Staubus was secretary of said association during the years 1929-1933, and Edward J. Kernahan is now its secretary and manager. The said Association and its officers were active in maintaining the principle that all building materials should be distributed through recognized dealers as represented by the members of said Association. Manufacturers were warned not to sell direct to those not recognized, and the dealer members were requested to buy only from those manufacturers who sold through the recognized dealers, and said dealer members were requested to consult the directories of the associate members of the Association, which were distributed to dealer members, when needing their supplies. The qualification of the associate members, who paid $25.00 a year dues, is that they abide by the policies of the said Association. The dues of the active members were determined by the volume of their business. The active members of said Association comprised approximately 100 out of approximately 300 dealers in New Jersey, and the sales of the dealer members represented the preponderance of sales of building materials in the New Jersey market. The following concerns are representative members of said Association but do not constitute the entire membership of said Association:

Tidewater Stone & Supply Co.,
Hackensack, N. J.
Campbell, Morrell & Co., Passaic,
N. J.
Hill City Coal & Lumber Co., Summit, N. J.
Rovegno-Hall Co., Jersey City,

Perry & Ruck, Inc., Newark, N. J.
Comfort Coal-Lumber Co., Hackensack, N. J.
Ogden & Cadmus, Bloomfield, N. J.
Osborne & Marsellis Co., Upper Montclair, N. J.
Phillipsburg Supply Co., Phillips-
burg, N. J.

The Association was active in the elimination of trucking to the dealers' jobs.

The Greenburg Sash, Door, and Supply Company, a New Jersey corporation, organized in 1926, with its principal place of business in Newark, in said State, was engaged in the building material supply business, selling its products both within and outside the said State of New Jersey. The average business of the corporation is about $200,000 a year, of which about $75,000 represented its mason material business. The said corporation is in competition with members of said Association. Several manufacturers of cement and building materials who shipped their products from outside the State of New Jersey into the markets of said State, stopped selling the said corporation because of the activity of said Association. The corporation applied for membership in the said Association on three different occasions, but its applications for membership were refused.

The Rockland Concrete Sales Company, Inc., is a New Jersey corporation engaged in the mason material supplies business. Several manufacturers of cement and building materials refused to sell said company because it was not a member of the New Jersey Mason Material Dealers Association. The company made application for membership in the said Association, and was advised by Secretary Kernahan that it was not qualified to be a member. The said company had a large warehouse and garage, which is sufficiently stocked with mason and building materials, and necessary delivery facilities to supply the ordinary business demands of the community where its business was located. The said company is in competition with members of said Association.

James Ricigliano, another competitor of some of the members of said Association, experienced similar difficulty in obtaining his requirements due to the activity of said Association.

PAR. 30. The New York State Builders Supply Association is a corporation organized in 1917, under the laws of the State of New York, having its headquarters in Utica, N. Y. Its membership consisted of approximately 400 dealers in the building material business whose places of business were located in the State of New York, but outside the city of New York. The following concerns are representative members of said association but do not constitute the entire membership of said association:

Globe Plaster Co.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Acme Builders Supply Co., Inc.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Bison Builders Supply Co., Inc.,

Kenmore Builders Supply Co., Inc.,

The said Association is an affiliated unit of the respondent National Federation. H. S. Chaffee was president of the said New York Association during 1933, 1934 and 1935, and represented the said Association as a director of the said National Federation during the years 1933 to 1936. He also served as chairman of the National Cement Committee, and as Special Liaison Officer, as hereinabove noted. The said New York Association, and its officers, actively cooperated with the National Federation and its officers, directors, and members, in the enforcement and maintenance of the Federation program and policies, as above set forth.

The said New York Association endorsed and adopted the recommendations of the National Cement Committee as adopted by the National Federation which recommendations are set forth in paragraph 22 above. Members of said New York Association, acting on the instruction of their authorized officers, forwarded notices and copies of all public bids for cement in their particular localities to the office of the secretary of said Association, where the bids were tabulated and published, with the name of the bidder, amount bid, and the date, in news letters and other official documents which were distributed throughout the State to dealers. Said publications contained the "violations" of the dealers who failed to adhere to the 15¢ differential on Portland cement. President Chaffee communicated with, and criticized, a number of these bidders who did not adhere to the fifteen cents per barrel mark-up. Complaints were made to cement companies for selling dealers who were not adhering to the fifteen cents per barrel mark-up. The Alpha Portland Cement Company sells and distributes about 60,000 barrels a year in Buffalo, N. Y., and the surrounding counties; about one-half of this amount is shipped into the said Buffalo area from the plant of the company located in Pennsylvania; the other half is shipped from its plant located within the State of New York. Said company sold substantial amounts of cement to the Ark Builders Supply Company, Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y. Respondent Chaffee complained to a representative of said cement company for selling to the said Ark Builders Supply Company, Inc., because he was a price-cutter, and said Chaffee threatened the cement company with a loss of tonnage from other dealers if sales to the said Ark Builders Supply Company, Inc., were not discontinued. According to the program of said Association, only those dealers who were members, or who qualified under the definition of a dealer, as contained in the constitution and by-laws, of said Association should be able to buy direct from manufacturers and producers. Complaints were made by Mr. Chaffee to certain manufacturers for selling to dealers whom he did not consider qualified to be dealers. The Globe Plaster Company of Buffalo, New York, of which H. S. Chaffee was the vice-president, and the Acme Builders Supply & Fuel Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., are two of the largest dealers in building materials in the Buffalo area, and both are members of the said New York Association. The Globe Plaster Company and the Acme Builders Supply & Fuel Co., at separate intervals, issued price-lists which the dealer members of the said New York Association in the Buffalo area were supposed to adhere to. The Buffalo dealers, members of the New York Association, met at frequent intervals and discussed said prices. August Neuman, president of the Ark Builders Supply Company, Inc., which was having difficulty in obtaining its requirements, was "called down" by president Chaffee for selling below the prices as listed by the Globe Plaster Company.

its membership consisted of retail dealers in building supplies having places of business in Cook County, Ill., which composed the territorial jurisdiction of said Association. The said Cook County is one of the largest building supplies markets in the United States. The business of the members of said Association, in September 1935, represented about 92.2% of the building supplies sold in that area. The members of said Association purchase large quantities of their requirements from outside the State of Illinois, and some of said members sell and distribute their products outside the State of Illinois. The said Association was a unit of the National Federation and cooperated with the officials of said Federation in the Federation program as above set forth; said Association was active in securing dealer distribution of cement, plaster, and other building materials exclusively through the medium of its members; in accordance with a written request from the secretary of the said National Federation, the directors of the said Association, at its meeting on April 23, 1935, ordered the secretary of the said Association to prepare a list of "equipped cement dealers" for submission to cement manufacturers; that within certain territories within the jurisdiction of said Association, lists of "equipped cement dealers" were prepared; in at least one instance, the secretary of the said Association complained to a manufacturer for making a direct sale to a concern which was not a member of said Association and which concern said Association did not consider to be a dealer; letters forwarded to said manufacturer from the secretary contained a veiled threat that the members of the Association might not purchase the product of said manufacturer. The officers of said Association attempted to maintain retail prices on building materials by distributing composite price-lists, made up from prices filed by the various members, to which the members were expected to adhere. The following concerns are representative members of said association but do not constitute the entire membership of said association:

Consumers Company, Chicago, Ill.	Consolidated Company, Chicago, Ill.
Chicago Fire Brick Company, Chicago, Ill.	Calumet Coal Co., Chicago, Ill.
Moulding Brownell Corp., Chicago, Ill.	Ideal Building Material Co., Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 32. The Michigan Builders Supply Association is an unincorporated voluntary trade association organized in 1927 and having its headquarters in Ypsilanti in said State of Michigan; its membership consists of approximately 235 retail dealers in building materials and builders' supplies with places of business in said State of Michigan, not including the city of Detroit, and numbering in said membership many of the largest dealers in said area; as a federated unit of the respondent National Federation, the said Association contributed to the support of said Federation, and cooperated with it and its officers and members in the maintenance of the Federation program as above set forth. The basic policy of said Association calls for the "100% distribution" of all building materials and builders' supplies through dealers who qualify under the definition of a "legitimate and qualified retail builders' supply dealer" as set forth in the articles of said Association; the said legitimate and qualified dealers are the members of said Association and such other dealers as are recognized by the officers of said Association; a special bulletin issued by said Association, and distributed to its members, stated:

We work at all times to prevent the manufacturer selling direct to the contractor or customer, any kind of construction materials used by the mason contractor, the plaster contractor, or the sewer builder.—DISTRIBUTION OF BUILDERS' SUPPLIES THROUGH THE DEALER— * * *

We believe that dealers should stand together against the encroachments of direct selling by the manufacturer—whether these sales are made to private industry or to the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Manufacturers and producers servicing the markets within the territorial jurisdiction of said Association were notified of said dealer distribution policy; complaints were made to such manufacturers and producers who violated said policy in selling to others who were not recognized by the officers of said Association as legitimate and qualified dealers; the secretary of said Association sent letters to manufacturers "insisting" that they abide by said policy, and these letters contained the implied threats that members would not purchase the products of those manufacturers and producers who did not abide by the said dealer distribution policy; the secretary of said Association complained to the American Vitrified Products Company of Cleveland, Ohio, for violating the said dealer distribution policy and said letter is in part as follows: "before reaching a conclusion unfavorable to your company's policy, it is necessary to have an answer * * *"; another letter forwarded to a manufacturer by the secretary complained of a violation of said dealer policy, and said letter is in part as follows: "For your information, W. H. Knapp Company are contractors and are not, and never have been, recognized as dealers. Your quotations in that city (Monroe) should be made through one of the following: * * *" The names of four members of said Association are then set out in said letter.

The following concerns are representative members of said association but do not constitute the entire membership of said association:

Martin Dawson Company, Ypsilanti, Mich.	Ann Arbor Fuel and Supply, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Van Poppelen Bros., Bay City, Mich.	J. P. Burroughs & Son, Flint, Mich.
S. A. Wilder & Son, Alblon, Mich.	S. A. Morman & Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

PAR. 33. The said National Federation was a national combination of effort and in the interest primarily of the dealers in builders' supplies who were members of its affiliated units; each member of each of the affiliated units of said National Federation, by virtue of such affiliation, joined and allied himself with all other builders' supplies dealers who were members of the other affiliated units located throughout the United States in concertedly pursuing common objects, purposes, and methods of said National Federation and its affiliated units. The activities of the said National Federation, as above set forth, were conducted primarily for the individual and mutual interests and advantages of the dealer members of all its federated units, and the results of said activities inured to the benefit of said dealer members. Respondents Lawrence I. MacQueen, as secretary of the said Federation, and H. C. Chaffee, as chairman of the National Cement Committee, and Special Liaison Officer, in their official duties and labors in behalf of the dealer members throughout the country of the federated units, were in frequent communication with the officers of said federated units. Said respondents also represented, and were in direct communication with, the dealer members thereof for the purpose, and with the effect, of assisting said dealer members by effectuating the objects of the respondent organizations, with which said dealer members were respectively affiliated.

The dealer members of the affiliated units of the National Federation were at the time of the issuance and filing of the complaint herein so numerous and so widely scattered, to wit: several thousand dealer members of forty-one affiliated units located in thirty-two States of the United States, that all of the said dealer members of said affiliated units of said Federation could not, without manifest inconvenience and oppressive delay, be made parties respondent specifically by name, but were made parties respondent by representation herein. There is direct evidence in the record relative to the activities of the following respondent affiliated units of said National Federation and their officers and members: Building Material Institute, Western Pennsylvania Builders Supply Alliance, Lime & Cement Exchange of Baltimore City, Maryland Builders Supply Association, New Jersey Mason Material Dealers Association, New York Builders Supply Association, The Building Material Merchants of Chicago-District, The Michigan Builders Supply Association, and the Ohio Builders Supply Association. The above named respondent affiliated units were and have continued to be each and all of them fairly representative of the entire affiliated membership of the said National Federation, and the dealer membership of said affiliated units was and is representative of the dealer membership of all the other affiliated units of said Federation.

PAR. 34. The respondent dealer members of said associations and organizations of dealer members named herein do not constitute all of said dealer members, but are representative of the dealer members of said associations and organizations which have a common and general interest in the methods and purposes of said associations and organizations. Said dealer members constitute a class having a common or general interest so numerous as to make it impracticable to name them all as parties respondent.

PAR. 35. The aforesaid methods and purposes of the respondent organizations and associations, and the officers, councillors, and members, have tended to produce, and have produced, the following results:

(a) Interstate commerce in the sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies has been restrained by eliminating therefrom, or attempting to eliminate therefrom, the so-called irregular dealers, and manufacturers and producers who sell to such dealers, and by restricting, or attempting to restrict, said commerce to such manufacturers and producers, and to such dealers, as will, and do, abide by, adhere to, and support the program and plan of respondents in the limitation of trade hereinabove described; and to otherwise restrain and obstruct the natural flow of commerce in the channels of interstate trade.

(b) Competition in the sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies has been substantially lessened, hindered, and suppressed in the territories served by the members of respondent organizations and associations.

(c) Manufacturers and producers of building material and builders' supplies in the various States who sell and distribute their products in the markets where respondent dealers have their places of business have quite generally confined such sale and distribution to the recognized dealers. Said manufacturers and producers received from respondents membership lists, together with official letters containing implied boycotts and threats of boycotts against the products of said manufacturers and producers unless their distribution was confined to the dealers recognized by respondents.

(d) Respondent members of respondent organizations have withdrawn and withheld their patronage from manufacturers and producers who have been reported and published as selling through so-called irregular channels, that is, not through recognized dealers.

(e) In numerous instances manufacturers and producers have refused to sell, or have discontinued selling, to persons or firms who were not on the respondents' membership lists, or who were reported to them by the respondents as not entitled to buy direct. In many instances, competitors of respondent members in the retail sale and distribution of building materials and builders' supplies were unable to obtain interstate shipments of their requirements because they were not recognized by the respondents.

(f) Manufacturers and producers were injured in their business by restriction of demand for their products and of freedom to sell same direct by confining their sales to the lists of dealers published and distributed by the respondents; in order not to incur "pressure" and "combined" or "concerted" action of respondents against them, they would not sell to many to whom they wanted to sell and considered as dealers; neither would they sell direct to consumers, contractors, vendors, Government and its political sub-divisions, but had to limit their sales through "recognized dealer distribution."

(g) Competition was further substantially interfered with and lessened by the respondents' activities in preventing dealer competitors from obtaining from manufacturers and producers small quantities of supplies to be transported by truck.

(h) Costs to the consuming public were increased by respondents' issuance and observance of price-lists in certain communities and by respondents' policy of exclusive dealer distribution because the consuming public was thereby denied the advantages in price which it otherwise would have obtained from the natural flow of commerce under conditions of free competition.

CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondent organizations and their officers, directors, and members, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, in the circumstances therein set forth, constituted a combination and conspiracy to engage in and to further unfair methods of competition in, and affecting, interstate commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Daniel J. Murphy, counsel for the Commission, and by Lawrence I. MacQueen, Herman J. Hughes and Webster C. proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violating the provisions of subsection C of section 2 of the said act as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, the taking of testimony and other evidence herein was waived by a stipulation entered into on November 5, 1937, between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission and Grosvenor Calkins, attorney for Charles F. Baker & Co., Inc., F. L. Degener, Jr., attorney for Keystone Emery Mills, and Felix H. Levy, attorney for all the other above-named respondents, which stipulation was thereafter duly approved by the Commission and filed in the office of the Commission. Said stipulation was so executed in conformity with and as supplemental to a certain stipulation entered into between the said parties above named on April 27, 1937. By the terms of the stipulations above referred to and in the answers to the complaint filed herein respondents admitted certain facts alleged in said complaint and certain other facts then before the Commission in this and another proceeding (respondents reserved, however, the right to contest this proceeding upon any review before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals or the U. S. Supreme Court with respect to any conclusions of fact or conclusions of law drawn herein by the Commission), and by said stipulations respondents agreed that the Commission might proceed to dispose of this proceeding on the record. And a final hearing before the Commission on the said record, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel aforesaid, having been waived by the stipulations aforesaid, and the Commission having considered the record and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

OLIVER BROTHERS, INC.

Per -----

No subscriber has any exclusive right to the Oliver services, but they are sold to any wholesaler who wants them, subject only to the requirement that he has good credit rating. The Oliver services are quite often bought by several dealers in the same line in the same town. Oliver yearly buys for its subscribers from said sellers several million dollars worth of commodities for resale by the buyers and as a result of said purchases such merchandise is shipped and transported from the State in which the sale is located when the order is placed into and through other States of the United States, where they are delivered to purchasers who are Oliver subscribers. Oliver receives daily from its subscribers approximately one hundred orders. When a subscriber forwards an order to Oliver, usually at a specified price Oliver transmits the order to the seller. The seller ships the product direct to the buyer, in most cases billing the buyer at the price specified in the order. The buyer in most cases makes payment direct to the seller. The seller then sends a commission or brokerage on the transaction and Oliver pays this to the buyer or credits it to his account. If a buyer fails to name the purchase price, he expects to get the last price quoted by Oliver in its bulletin, or a lower price. If Oliver finds that the market has advanced he communicates with the buyer and confirms the order at the new price before transmitting it to the seller. The buyer in some cases names the seller whose products are wanted, but in some cases he relies upon Oliver to transmit the order to some producer who will supply goods of the quality and standard required.

PAR. 8. All respondent sellers have made sales of commodities in interstate commerce through Oliver Brothers, Inc., to respondent buyers and other Oliver buyers and have paid brokerage fees on such transactions to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., which brokerage fees were later paid over or credited by respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., to the particular respondent buyer or other buyer. Respondent Keystone Emery Mills, after the service of the complaint herein, discontinued the practice of paying Oliver Brothers, Inc., brokerage on sales made to the Oliver buyers through Oliver Brothers, Inc. All of the respondent sellers at the time of payment of brokerage fees to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., had knowledge of the fact that Oliver Brothers, Inc., paid such fees over to the buyer placing the order and to whom the goods were shipped.

PAR. 9. The sellers from whom respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., buys for its clients pay to Oliver brokerage fees at the same rate that they pay other brokers who sell goods for them. This rate ranges from 1% to 10%, but being usually from 2½ to 5%, of the invoice price of the commodities sold. It is a matter of common knowledge in the trade that Oliver Brothers, Inc., receives these fees for the use of its subscribers and pays them over in their entirety to the buyers. Respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., receives and accepts these brokerage fees for the use and benefit of its subscribers and does not claim any right, title or interest in such fees. The buyers receive and accept these brokerage fees from respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., and know that they are to receive them at the time they place orders for merchandise for execution by Oliver. The Oliver buyers, by reason of the fact that they receive the brokerage fees paid to Oliver, get a lower price on commodities, purchased through Oliver from the sellers than other buyers who are not members of the Oliver organization get on similar goods in like quantity bought direct from said sellers.

PAR. 10. In all of the purchasing transactions which the respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., executes for its buyers, Oliver Brothers, Inc., is the agent and representative of the buyer, and acts in fact for such buyer and in his behalf, and is subject to his control, insofar as such purchasing transaction is concerned. Said respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., in such purchasing transactions is neither the agent nor representative of the seller nor does it act for or in behalf or is it under the control of such seller. Such services as respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., may render to the seller in selling his commodities are incidental to the particular purchase and sale transaction, and if any services are so rendered by Oliver in connection with the sale or purchase of such commodities, such services are donated by Oliver Brothers, Inc., to the seller. There is not, in fact, any payment of brokerage commissions made by any of respondent sellers to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., which is not intended for the buyer and which does not reach the buyer. Such brokerage commissions, being intended for the buyers, are not in fact paid in satisfaction of any contractual or other indebtedness due from the seller to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., for services rendered, or otherwise. These payments, in effect are actually made from the seller to the buyer and the buyer receives a discount in price equivalent to the brokerage fee paid to him. Respondent buyers render no service to respondent sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities through respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. Respondent buyers render no service to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., in connection with the purchase of goods, wares and merchandise made for them by said respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc.

PAR. 11. The contract between respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. and its subscribers is construed by the parties thereto as being a contract for the sale and purchase of the Oliver market information service with a privilege extended to the buyers of using the Oliver purchasing services at their option. The buyers pay the monthly fee stipulated in the contract for the market information service. The buyers exercise their option to use the purchasing services of Oliver Brothers, Inc. in order to secure a discount in price from the current market price and the buyers when purchasing commodities through Oliver compute the net price at which the purchase is made as being the quoted price less the fee or commission paid by the seller as brokerage to Oliver and by Oliver transmitted to them. The buyers, in their bookkeeping, do not treat the brokerage fees and commission received from respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. as being an offset to the monthly fee paid by them to Oliver. The amount of the monthly fee paid by the buyers to Oliver is fixed at the time the contract is made, but the amount of the brokerage fees and commissions which may be received by a given buyer from the utilization of the Oliver purchasing services is unknown and incapable of ascertainment at the time the contract is entered into.

PAR. 12. All payments of brokerage fees made by respondents as hereinabove set forth are made as a part of a general plan or scheme which contemplates and results in payment of brokerage fees from the seller to the buyer through the respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., and which enables the buyers to secure discounts in price from the sellers under the guise of brokerage payments.

CONCLUSION

The Commission concludes that the respondents Globe Crayon Company, Inc., E. V. Crandall Oil & Putty Manufacturing Company, Inc., Charles F. Baker & Company, Inc., Keystone Emery Mills and James Corner & Sons, have violated and are violating Subsection C, section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended, by paying fees and commissions as brokerage to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., in the sale of commodities to respondent buyers and other buyers, with knowledge of the fact that such fees and commissions were and are intended to be and were and are being paid over by said respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. to said buyers.

The Commission further concludes that respondents W. D. Allen Manufacturing Company, Black Hardware Company, Jacobi Hardware Company, Matthews & Boucher, Charlotte Supply Company and Virginia-Carolina Hardware Company have violated and are violating the provisions of Subsection C, section 2 of the said statute, by receiving and accepting fees and commissions paid as brokerage by said respondent sellers and other sellers, in connection with the purchase of commodities by said buyers through respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc.

The Commission further concludes that respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. has violated and is violating the provisions of subsection C, section 2 of said statute, by receiving such fees and commissions as brokerage from respondent sellers and transmitting and paying over the same to respondent buyers; further, that said respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. is the instrumentality and means by which respondent sellers unlawfully are enabled to make payment of such fees and commissions as brokerage to respondent buyers, and by which respondent buyers are enabled to receive and accept the same.

The Commission further concludes that the violations of said statute referred to are in pursuance of a general plan and scheme whereby fees and commissions paid by the sellers are made available to and transmitted to the buyers.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

counsel for the Commission and said respondents, in which stipulations and answers respondents admitted certain facts contained in the said complaint and certain other facts before the Commission in this and another proceeding and waived formal hearings herein and agreed that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission might proceed to dispose of this proceeding. And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents had violated and were violating the provisions of subsection C, section 2 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondents Globe Crayon Company, Inc., E. V. Crandall Oil & Putty Manufacturing Company, Inc., Charles F. Baker & Company, Inc., Keystone Emery Mills and James Corner & Sons, and their officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of commodities in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from paying or granting to respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. any fee or commission on sales of commodities, as brokerage or as an allowance in lieu thereof, which fee or commission is intended to be paid over or which is in fact subsequently to be paid over, in whole or in part, by said respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc. to any purchaser of such commodities.

It is further ordered, That respondents W. D. Allen Manufacturing Company, Black Hardware Company, Jacobi Hardware Company, Matthews & Boucher, Charlotte Supply Company and Virginia-Carolina Hardware Company, and their officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the purchase of commodities in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith, cease and desist from accepting or receiving from respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., any fee or commission which has been paid or granted to said Oliver Brothers, Inc., as brokerage or as an allowance in lieu thereof, by a seller of commodities on sales made by such seller to said respondents.

It is further ordered, That respondent Oliver Brothers, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the purchase or sale of commodities in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

1. Receiving or accepting any fee or commission, as brokerage or as an allowance in lieu thereof, from any seller of commodities, which fee or commission is intended to be paid over to the purchaser of such commodities, or which is to be applied for the use and benefit of such purchaser;

2. Paying or granting to any purchaser of commodities any fee or commission received or accepted by said Oliver Brothers, Inc., as brokerage or an allowance in lieu thereof, from the seller of such commodities.

It is further ordered, That the respondents and each of them shall within 90 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
WORTHMORE SALES PROMOTION SERVICE, INCORPORATED

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2946. Complaint, Oct. 15, 1936—Decision, Jan. 4, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and printing of sales promotion or trade cards, arranged for recording or punching out thereon purchases of customers or consumers to whom distributed, and in sale and distribution thereof to retail merchants in the various States, in competition with concerns making and distributing trading stamps and other trade booster cards which did not involve lot or chance feature, and including 99¢ and other price concession cards and premium coupons—

Sold, distributed, and supplied cards, as aforesaid described, so designed and arranged as to confer upon the customer-holders of such used-up or punched-out cards amounts in trade ranging from 20¢ to $5.00 or $10.00, in accordance with concealed legend under card's secret panel and particular style of card employed, and furnished therewith, to retail merchant customers, various display posters and advertisements and card punch, for their use in distributing and making use of such cards, and thereby knowingly supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of operating lotteries, games of chance, and gift enterprises in the use, without alteration or rearrangement, of such cards, sales booster plans or schemes, in competition with those who are opposed to such methods and refrain therefrom;

With effect of inducing many of the consuming public to deal with or purchase merchandise from retailers using its aforesaid cards in preference to those using sales booster plans or schemes or devices which have connected therewith no element of lot or chance, and with result that many retailers were induced to buy its said cards in preference to those of competitors, such refraining competitors as aforesaid were thereby put to competitive disadvantage, sale of competing sales plans or sales promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons by competitors was injuriously affected, to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and there was a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Worthmore Sales Promotion Service, Incorporated, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Worthmore Sales Promotion Service, Incorporated, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 6256 Champlain Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of sales promotion cards and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail merchants, located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such sales promotion cards between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and with individuals engaged in the manufacture of sales promotion cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons, and trading stamps, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public.

The respondent manufactures and distributes several groups of sales promotion cards, but they all involve the same lottery scheme or gift enterprise and vary only in detail. The sales promotion cards in one such group are herein described for the purpose of showing

PAR. 3. The retail merchants to whom respondent sells assortments of said sales promotion cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown under the secret panel of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondent and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made, punches corresponding to the amount of such purchases are made around the margin of said card and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched, the secret panel is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the said secret panel, free of charge.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondent, various manufacturers and distributors of sales promotion cards, premium cards, price concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which when used by retail merchants do not involve a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. By reason of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with the distribution and use of the respondent's said cards, many retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to the devices manufactured and distributed by respondent's competitors and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 5. The consuming public are induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants, using respondent's cards in preference to retail merchants using the devices of respondent's competitors, because of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with respondent's said cards. By reason thereof, retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to devices of respondent's competitors and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of said method in designing and arranging its said cards is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent of similar element of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of retail merchants are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme or gift enterprise and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 7. The respondent, in shipping the said cards to its customers, assorts and packs them so that such customers know the amount of award stated under the secret panel, thus the retail merchants to whom respondent sells its cards are enabled to perpetrate a fraud on their customers. This practice has the capacity and tendency to induce and does induce retail merchants to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to cards or devices of respondent's competitors.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid method, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on October 15, 1936, issued and served complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Worthmore Sales Promotion Service, Incorporated, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, counsel for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, counsel for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral argument of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this

The secret panel referred to on the said card was partially perforated to indicate where it might be opened, but until said panel was opened, the legend thereunder was effectively concealed from the holder of said card. The said legends under the secret panel varied in amount from 20¢ to $5.00. Thus, the amount which the holder of said card would receive in trade was determined wholly by lot or chance.

On the reverse or back of said sales promotion cards was the following:

NO BLANKS—AWARDS UP TO $5.00

These awards are given in appreciation of your patronage. When this card is fully punched, present same to us intact. We will then open the SECRET PANEL. You will receive the award printed thereon ABSOLUTELY FREE. SHOULD YOU OPEN THE SECRET PANEL, THIS CARD BECOMES VOID.

BUY ALL YOUR NEEDS FROM US—YOU MAY BE A BIG WINNER

(MERCHANT'S ADVERTISEMENT)

This particular card was discontinued some time prior to the taking of testimony in this case. The respondent, however, has manufactured and distributed, and is manufacturing and distributing, various cards identical in principle but varying somewhat in detail. On some of the cards which the respondent manufactures and distributes the "secret panel" is referred to by the respondent as "mystery star." Other cards are referred to by respondent as "play ball" coupons.

Some of the cards manufactured and distributed by the respondent provide for the recording and sale of $10.00 worth of merchandise by the numbers arranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of amounts up to $10.00 by the legends under the secret panel. In some groups, the legends begin with 20¢ and go to $10.00 and in other groups they begin with 40¢ and go to $10.00.

Respondent furnishes its retail merchant customers with various display posters and advertisements to be used by said retail merchants in distributing and using said cards, and also furnishes such customers with a punch for punching or cancelling the numbers arranged around the border of the said cards.

The retail merchants to whom respondent sells, and has sold, assortments of said sales promotion cards or trade cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers, and honor the awards as shown under the secret panel of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondent and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers of respondent is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made numbers corresponding to the amount of such purchase are punched from the margin of said card and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched the secret panel is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the secret panel, without additional charge.

PAR. 3. Employees or officers of concerns manufacturing and distributing trading stamps and other trade booster cards not involving a lot or chance feature were called as witnesses and testified in this matter. The Commission finds that manufacturers and distributors of trading stamps, 99¢ and other price concession cards, and premium coupons are in competition with the respondent and the business of such concerns is competitive with the business of the respondent. Retail merchants desiring to install some plan by which to boost sales of their merchandise cannot use more than one type of sales promotion or price concession card or coupon at the same time and retail merchants purchasing respondent's merchandise are not then in the market for other trade booster schemes or plans which do not involve a lot or chance feature.

The lot or chance feature connected with respondent's cards has the capacity to and does induce many of the consuming public to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants using respondent's cards in preference to retail merchants using the sales booster schemes or plans or devices of respondent's competitors which have connected with them no element of lot or chance and by reason of this last mentioned fact many retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to devices or plans of respondent's competitors, and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 4. The use of respondent's cards by retail merchants by the methods described herein constitutes a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. The Commission finds that competitors of respondent are opposed to such methods and refrain therefrom. Such competitors are thereby put to a competitive disadvantage.

PAR. 5. The respondent, in selling and distributing said cards, has knowledge that they are, and will be, used by its customers in the operation of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of operating lotteries, games of chance and gift enterprises. The sale and distribution of such cards by the respondent injuriously affects the sale of competing sales plans or sales promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons by competitors of respondent, and the use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 6. The assortments purchased from the respondent by retail dealers are usually of 500 cards, although it is not unusual for a merchant to purchase an assortment consisting of 1,000 cards and while the exact extent of respondent's business was not shown, an officer of the respondent was called and testified as a witness, and the Commission finds that respondent had approximately 125 part-time salesmen and that at the time of the hearing respondent was receiving from 350 to 400 orders per month; that respondent's customers are located in practically all of the States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Worthmore Sales Promotion Service, Incorporated, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent Worthmore Sales Promotion Service, Incorporated, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of sales promotion cards or trade cards in interstate commerce, do cease and desist from:

Order

1. Selling and distributing sales promotion cards so designed that their use by retail merchants constitutes or may constitute the operation of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of retail merchants or others sales promotion cards or sales booster plans or schemes which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise when distributed to the consuming public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2731. Complaint, Feb. 27, 1936—Decision, Jan. 5, 1938*

Where an individual engaged in sale of certain correspondence courses pertaining to the subject of Forensic Ballistics, as commonly known, and consisting of three lessons which purported to tell the police officer proper things to do and not to do at scene of crime, correct scientific procedure for examination of firearms and bullets in police laboratories, together with list of necessary equipment for laboratory work, and, finally and third, to tell expert in firearms identification how to conduct himself in court, with statement of questions which would be asked by the lawyers and certain citations from available authorities, Federal and State; in advertising his aforesaid courses in numerous newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States—

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that T. G. Cooke, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent acting individually and doing business under the trade name of "Institute of Applied Science," maintains his office and principal place of business at 1920 Sunnyside Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in conducting a business commonly known as a correspondence school, which consists of the sale and delivery by mail, and by other means of transportation, of certain courses of instruction to subscribers or purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of Illinois. After the said courses of instruction have been subscribed for or purchased, the respondent ships or causes to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, the printed matter, examination questions, charts, information and paraphernalia comprising the said course of instruction to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of Illinois. Said subscribers or purchasers are members of the general public and are hereinafter referred to as students. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals, corporations, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and shipment in interstate commerce, by mail and other means of transportation, of courses of instruction to subscribers or purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business, as heretofore described and alleged, the respondent caused to be prepared and printed a textbook containing a series of three lessons which he entitled "FORENSIC BALLISTICS The Science of Examining Guns and Ammunition in Crimes" and advertised, used and referred to the same, in connection with soliciting the sale of, and in selling a complete course of instruction in finger printing, as follows: "Low Tuition Rates Still in Effect, Include Secret Service, Bertillon, Photography and Ballistics Courses," and in aid of his said business, and in soliciting such sale, and in selling said course of instruction, and for the purpose of inducing persons to enter into contracts with him to enroll as students with him for this course of instruction, the respondent further, in his advertising literature, among other things, stated and represented:

I am offering my complete course in Finger Print Work, including the complete Finger Print Outfit, and all the other allied courses complete, for only $70, payable $5 down and $5 per month for thirteen months.

This is indeed a low rate and is a real bargain for anyone interested in getting into this work. Of course, if you enroll under the $70.00 price that is all you will ever have to pay. After you are enrolled the price to you cannot be raised.

and further, in connection therewith, the following:

when in truth and in fact the said textbook does not deal with the science of "Ballistics" and the instruction so advertised and imparted to students does not relate to that science, and when in fact it contains many absurd and misleading statements as applied to the science of ballistics and to a ballisticians, and when the subject matter of said textbook deals merely with a very sketchy and meagre outline of some of the basic principles of firearms identification and not with the science of "Ballistics," which is the science that deals with the impact, path and velocity of projectiles.

PAR. 4. The use of the word "ballistics," in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and furnishing said textbook and said course of instruction, as heretofore described and alleged, is false and misleading and has the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive prospective students and in fact does deceive prospective students and induce them to enroll and subscribe for respondent's said course, or courses, and has caused students to purchase respondent's said course, or courses, in such erroneous belief, and thereby unfairly diverts trade to respondent from his said competitors, engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of like or similar courses of instruction, and who do not make such misrepresentation or misuse of the word or term "ballistics" in selling such course, or courses, in the manner heretofore described and alleged in paragraph 3 herein; and, thereby substantial injury is done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The acts, methods, and practices of respondent, as hereinabove alleged, described and set forth, are to the injury and prejudice of the public and to respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on February 27, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, T. G. Cooke, doing business under the trade name and style of Institute of Applied Science, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Thomas G. Kennedy, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Gustav E. Beerly, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, respondent's attorney having advised the Commission that no brief would be filed on behalf of the respondent and no oral argument would be requested, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. T. G. Cooke, acting individually, has been and is now conducting a business known as a correspondence school. Respondent conducts said business under the trade name of Institute of Applied Science. For the purpose of conducting said business under said trade name respondent maintains an office and place of business at 1920 Sunnyside Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said business consists of the sale and distribution of courses of instruction to subscribers or purchasers thereof, located in the various States of the United States. When respondent makes a sale of said courses of instruction, he causes the same to be shipped and transported from his place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondent does now, and has for a number of years last past, maintained a constant current of trade and commerce in said courses of instruction among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. There are now and have been for a number of years, numerous other individuals and numerous corporations, firms, and partnerships, engaged in the business of selling and transporting in interstate commerce, courses of instruction similar to the courses sold and distributed by respondent, and which courses of instruction are sold and distributed for similar purposes for which respondent's courses of instruction are sold and distributed, and which are sold to the same class of purchasers to whom respondent sells his courses of instruction.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling and offering for sale his courses of instruction, advertises in numerous newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals, of general circulation throughout the United States, and in said advertising, among other things, represents:

I am offering my complete course in Finger Print Work, including the Complete Finger Print Outfit, and all the other allied courses complete, for only $70, payable $5 down and $5 per month for thirteen months.

This is indeed a low rate and is a real bargain for anyone interested in getting into this work. Of course, if you enroll under the $70 price that is all you will ever have to pay. After you are enrolled the price to you cannot be raised.

When I receive your enrollment, I will send you our complete courses in Secret Service, Bertillon Work, Photography and Ballistic Lessons without any additional charge.

Furnish you with a full and complete course of instructions in FINGER PRINT WORK, BERTILLON IDENTIFICATION, PHOTOGRAPHY, BALLISTICS AND SECRET SERVICE INTELLIGENCE.

By said statements in said advertising respondent represents to the purchasing public that the courses of instruction sold by respondent are full and complete courses of instruction in Finger Print Work, Bertillon Identification, Photography, Ballistics and Secret Service Intelligence.

PAR. 4. The terms "Ballistics," "Forensic Ballistics," and "Firearms Identification" have distinct different technical meanings but they are generally used interchangeably by the general public, and very often by technicians and experts. To the layman and general public the terms are practically synonymous.

Said courses of instruction sold by respondent consist of three lessons. Lesson No. 1 purports to tell the police officer the proper things to do and the things not to do at the scene of a crime. Lesson No. 2 purports to tell police officers the correct scientific procedure for the examination of firearms and bullets in their laboratories, and this lesson lists the necessary equipment for laboratory work. Lesson

No. 3 purports to tell the expert in firearms identification how to conduct himself in court and what questions will be asked by the lawyers on both sides and gives certain citations from available authorities, both Federal and State.

PAR. 5. The representations made and being made by respondent in selling and offering for sale said courses of instruction, wherein respondent represents the courses to be full and complete courses in ballistics, or forensic ballistics, are false and misleading. Said representations had, and now have, the tendency and effect to, and did, and do, mislead the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true and lead them into purchasing respondent's courses of instruction relying upon said representations. In truth and in fact the courses sold by respondent are not full and complete courses of instruction in ballistics, neither are they full and complete courses of instruction in forensic ballistics. Insofar as the subjects of ballistics and forensic ballistics are concerned, respondent's courses are far from complete. The most that can be said of them is that they are incomplete outlines of what is commonly known as forensic ballistics and contain very little, if any, information which would be of value to one desiring to become acquainted with the science of ballistics.

PAR. 6. The statement and representations made by respondent in describing the courses of instruction and the contents of same had, and now have, a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial number of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of the said representations are true, and into the purchase of a substantial amount of respondent's product on account of such beliefs induced by the respondent's representations as above set out. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted to respondent from individuals and from firms, corporations, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing courses of instruction, prepared, intended, and sold for substantially the same purpose and use for which respondent's courses of instruction are sold, and who truthfully advertise their products. As a consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, T. G. Cooke, trading under the style and firm name of Institute of Applied Science, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, T. G. Cooke, an individual, trading as Institute of Applied Science, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his courses of instruction in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or indirectly:

1. That said courses of instruction are full and complete courses in the science of ballistics, or

2. That said courses of instruction are full and complete courses in the science of forensic ballistics.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HARRY WEINBERG, TRADING AS NU-ART TAILORING COMPANY

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3256. Complaint, Oct. 30, 1937—Decision, Jan. 5, 1938

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of men's clothing through traveling salesmen or agents, whom he equipped with order blanks for taking measurements of each purchaser and with samples of materials for purchasers' selection as to color, weave, and quality, and who recorded such selections, along with purchasers' measurements on aforesaid blanks and forwarded orders, and were compensated by deposit required of purchaser at such time, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in selling and distributing men's clothing in interstate commerce, and with many who likewise sell their clothing through salesmen or agents and have not adopted the below described acts, practices, and methods—

- (a) Represented and implied to prospective purchasers that he would make for and deliver to them made-to-measure or tailor-made garments and garments made from material of the color, weave and quality selected by them from the samples exhibited by his said salesmen or agents, facts being garments delivered, in many cases, were not tailor-made, as understood by purchasing public, but "ready-made" or "hand-me-down" clothes previously made without regard to individual measurements of purchaser to whom they were eventually sold, garments, in some instances in which in fact made to individual measurements of purchaser, did not fit in same manner as made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, or at all, or with any reasonable relation to individual to whom they were delivered, due to lack of experience and skill on part of salesman or agent in making and taking measurements, etc., or lack of skill on part of workman making the clothing, and, in many instances, were so cut and constructed that it was not possible for expert tailors to alter them so as to fit the purchaser, and, in many instances, garments were made from material which was different in color and weave from, and substantially inferior in quality to, material selected by customer;
- (b) Represented, from time to time, to prospective purchasers, that delivery of the garment ordered would be made to purchaser by one of his salesmen or agents in person, so as to afford former opportunity to inspect the same as to material from which made and as to its fit prior to paying balance of purchase money due, and, in many instances, that well-known men in purchaser's community had bought clothing from him and that they were satisfied therewith and had indorsed the same, facts being that, in practically every instance, garment was shipped to purchaser by express, cash on delivery for balance of purchase money, with no inspection permitted and with no opportunity to inspect clothing prior to payment of such balance, and representation as to purchases by well-known men in particular customer's community were false;

- (c) Represented, in many instances, that he contemplated opening a local store and that only a limited number of suits were being sold in the vicinity at greatly reduced prices for introductory and advertising purposes, and that no additional charge would be made for shipping, and that price paid included extra pair of trousers, and customer would be extended privilege of making payment for garment ordered on installment plan, facts being such various representations as above set forth, as variously made from time to time, were each and all false; and
- (d) Failed and refused to deliver to purchasers making complaint to him by reason of garments' failure to fit or his failure to make same from material selected by purchaser, or for any other reason, garment that would fit, made from material selected, and refused to return to purchaser entire amount of purchase price paid;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many purchasers and causing them erroneously to believe that garments sold by him were made-to-measure or tailor-made clothing, as understood by purchasing public, and that they would be made from materials selected by purchaser from samples submitted by salesmen or agents, and be delivered by person taking order, with inspection permitted prior to payment of balance, and that other representations above set out were true, and that promises made by him would be fulfilled, and of thereby giving him an unfair advantage over his competitors through causing many prospective purchasers to buy clothing from him in interstate commerce, in preference to purchasing same from competitors who have not resorted to such acts and practices; to their substantial injury and that of public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Harry Weinberg, trading and doing business under the name Nu-Art Tailoring Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Harry Weinberg is an individual engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling men's clothing through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing. Respondent has his office and principal place of business at 818 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent causes his said clothing, when sold, to be transported from his said place of business in the city of New York, N. Y., into and across the several States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the said several States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business in said commerce, as aforesaid, is in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, associations, and partnerships engaged in commerce between and among the several States of the United States in the business of selling and distributing men's clothing. Among the competitors of respondent are many who sell their clothing in said commerce through salesmen or agents and who do not use the acts, practices, and methods in the sale thereof used by the respondent in the sale of his clothing as hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, employs approximately twenty salesmen or agents located at various points in the United States to solicit and accept orders for his said clothing. These salesmen or agents are equipped by the respondent with order blanks, containing spaces for the taking of the individual measurements of each purchaser, and with samples of materials from which the purchasers make selections as to color, weave, and quality of the material from which the garment ordered is to be made. The prices at which said clothing is sold vary according to the quality of the material selected, and the said salesmen or agents collect from the purchasers of said clothing a substantial part of the agreed purchase price at the time that the order is accepted and the balance of the purchase price is to be paid when the purchase is delivered. When a salesman or agent sells a garment, such salesman or agent takes the measurements of the purchaser and places this and other information regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance, etc., of the purchaser, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser, on one of said order blanks and forwards the same to the respondent at his said place of business in New York, N. Y., where the garment ordered is purportedly made from the material selected to the individual measurements of the purchaser of the garment.

PAR. 3. Made-to-measure or tailor-made clothing is understood by the trade and purchasing public generally to be and mean garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to make a made-to-measure or tailor-made garment, as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person, experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments, measure the person for whom the garment is to be made, so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and exact measurements regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance, etc., of the person measured. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or tailor-made garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made and there exists a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or tailor-made garments.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, and by the means and in the manner aforesaid, represents and implies to prospective purchasers of his said clothing that he will make for, and deliver to, purchasers of his clothing made-to-measure or tailor-made garments made from material of the color, weave, and quality selected by purchasers from the samples exhibited by his salesmen or agents. In truth and in fact, in many instances, the garments delivered by the respondent to purchasers are not made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as that term is understood by the purchasing public, as hereinabove set out, but are "ready-made" or "hand-me-down" garments having been previously manufactured without regard to the individual measurements of the purchaser to whom the garment is eventually sold. In some instances the garments are made to the individual measurements of the purchaser but, because of the lack of experience and skill on the part of the salesmen or agents of respondent in making and taking measurements and securing accurate information regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance, etc., of the purchasers or because of the lack of skill on the part of the workmen making the garments, the garments delivered do not fit in the same manner as made-to-measure or tailor-made garments and, in some instances, do not fit at all or with any reasonable relation to the individual to whom they are delivered. In many instances, the garments delivered to purchasers are so cut and constructed that it is not possible for expert tailors by alteration to make them fit.

PAR. 5. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, represents to purchasers of his said clothing that he will make for, and deliver to, them garments made from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by such purchasers from the samples furnished to said salesmen or agents by the respondent and by said salesmen or agents exhibited to said purchasers.

In truth and fact, in many instances, respondent does not deliver to a purchaser a garment made from the material selected by such purchaser, but delivers a garment made from a material which he has substituted for the material selected by the purchaser and which is different in color and weave from, and substantially inferior in quality to, the material selected by the customer.

PAR. 6. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, in many instances, represents to prospective purchasers that delivery of the garment ordered will be made to the purchaser by the salesman or agent in person so as to afford such purchaser an opportunity to inspect the garment ordered as to the material from which made and as to its fit prior to the time that payment is made of the balance of the purchase money due the respondent. In truth and in fact, the garment, in practically every instance, is shipped to the purchaser by express, cash on delivery for the balance of the purchase money, with no inspection permitted, and the purchaser does not have an opportunity to inspect the garment prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase price due.

PAR. 7. In many instances, the representation is made to prospective purchasers that well-known men in the purchaser's community have purchased garments from the respondent and they are satisfied and have endorsed said clothing, when such is not a fact. In many instances, the representation is made that the respondent contemplates the opening of a local store and that only a limited number of suits are being sold in the vicinity at greatly reduced prices for introductory and advertising purposes, when such is not a fact. In many instances, the representation is made that no additional charge will be made for shipping, when such is not a fact. In many instances, it is represented that the price paid for the suit includes an extra pair of trousers, when such is not a fact. In many instances, respondent represents that the customer will be extended the privilege of making payment for the garment ordered on the instalment plan, when such is not a fact.

PAR. 8. When complaint is made to the respondent by a purchaser because of the failure of the garment to fit, or because respondent failed to make the garment from the material selected by the purchaser, or for any other reason, the respondent fails and refuses to deliver to such purchaser a garment that will fit made from the material selected and refuses to return to the purchaser the entire amount of the purchase price paid.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of the respondent have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive many purchasers and cause them erroneously to believe that the garments sold by the respondent are made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as those terms are understood by the purchasing public; that the garments ordered will be made from the material selected by the purchaser from samples submitted by the salesmen or agents, and will be delivered by the person taking the order, and that inspection will be permitted prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase money to the respondent, and that the other representations hereinabove set out are true, and that the promises made by the respondent will be fulfilled. Said acts, practices, and methods have the capacity and tendency to and do cause many prospective purchasers, because of said erroneous beliefs, to purchase clothing from the respondent, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from his competitors who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondent, hereinabove alleged, to the substantial injury of said competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 10. The above alleged acts, practices, and methods of the respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on October 30, 1937, issued, and on November 1, 1937, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Harry Weinberg, trading and doing business under the name Nu-Art Tailoring Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and after the expiration of the time within which respondent's answer thereto was due to be filed, the Commission, by order entered herein, ordered that respondent's time for filing answer be extended to December 31, 1937, and that respondent's answer, dated December 4, 1937, be filed herein, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, waiving the taking of further evidence, and all other intervening procedure, which said answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Harry Weinberg is an individual engaged in the business of offering for sale, and selling, men's clothing, through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing. His office and principal place of business is located at 818 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent has been trading and doing business under the name Nu-Art Tailoring Company.

Respondent in the usual course of such business has constantly engaged in interstate commerce, selling and shipping such clothing from his place of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers located in various other States of the United States.

In the operation of his business as aforesaid, respondent comes into substantial competition with others engaged in selling and distributing men's clothing in interstate commerce. Among such competitors are many who likewise sell their clothing through salesmen or agents, and who have not adopted the acts, practices, and methods in the sale thereof used by the respondent in the sale of his clothing as hereinafter described.

PAR. 2. Respondent employs approximately twenty salesmen or agents located at various points in the United States to solicit and accept orders for his clothing. By means of advertisements published in various newspapers, particularly in the Western sections of the United States, respondent contacts men who have had experience in selling men's clothing by way of door-to-door canvassing. For their services, respondent's salesmen receive a commission for each sale, the amount of which is determined by the quality of the merchandise which they sell. When a salesman makes a sale, he receives a deposit from the customer giving the order, and this deposit is retained by him. Respondent equips each salesman or agent with order blanks, and with samples of materials from which the purchasers make selections as to color, weave, and quality of the material from which the garment ordered is to be made. The order blanks contain spaces for the taking of individual measurements of each purchaser.

The prices at which respondent sells his clothing vary according to the quality of the material selected, and each salesman, or agent, collects from the purchaser of said clothing a substantial part of the agreed purchase price at the time that the order is accepted, with the understanding that the balance of the purchase price is to be paid when the purchase is delivered. When a salesman or agent sells a garment, such salesman, or agent, takes the measurements of the purchaser and places the information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc., of the purchaser, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser, on one of the aforesaid order blanks and forwards the same to the respondent at his place of business in New York City, N. Y. The purchaser assumes, and has a right to assume, that the garment ordered by him will be made from the material and according to the measurements determined upon between himself and the salesman who took his order.

PAR. 3. Made-to-measure or tailor-made clothing is understood by the trade and purchasing public generally to mean, and to be, garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to make a made-to-measure or tailor-made garment, as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person, experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments, measure the person for whom the garment is to be made, so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and exact measurements regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance, etc., of the person measured. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or tailor-made garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made, and there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or tailor-made garments.

PAR. 4. Respondent represents and implies to prospective purchasers of his clothing that he will make for, and deliver to, purchasers of his clothing made-to-measure or tailor-made garments made from material of the color, weave, and quality selected by purchasers from the samples exhibited by his salesmen or agents. In many instances, the garments delivered by the respondent to purchasers are not made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as that term is understood by the purchasing public, but are "ready-made" or "hand-me-down" garments, having been previously manufactured without regard to the individual measurements of the purchaser to whom the garment is eventually sold. In some instances the garments are made to the individual measurements of the purchaser, but, because of the lack of experience and skill on the part of the salesmen or agents of respondent in making and taking measurements and securing accurate information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc., of the purchasers, or because of the lack of skill on the part of the workmen making the clothing, the garments delivered do not fit in the same manner as made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, and, in some instances, do not fit at all, or with any reasonable relation to the individual to whom they are delivered. In many instances, the garments delivered to purchasers are so cut and constructed that it is not possible for expert tailors to alter them to make them fit the purchaser.

PAR. 5. Respondent represents to purchasers of his clothing that he will make for, and deliver to, them garments made from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by such purchasers from the samples that respondent furnishes to said salesmen or agents, and as exhibited to purchasers by respondent's salesmen or agents.

In many instances respondent does not deliver to a purchaser a garment made from the material selected by such purchaser, but delivers a garment made from a material which he has substituted for the material selected by the purchaser, and which is different in color and weave from, and substantially inferior in quality to, the material selected by the customer.

PAR. 6. Respondent has from time to time represented to prospective purchasers that delivery of the garment ordered will be made to the purchaser by one of his salesmen, or agents, in person so as to afford such purchaser an opportunity to inspect the garment ordered as to the material from which made, and as to its fit, prior to the time that payment is made of the balance of the purchase money due the respondent. In practically every instance the garment is shipped to the purchaser by express, cash on delivery for the balance of the purchase money, with no inspection permitted, and the purchaser does not have an opportunity to inspect the garment prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase price due.

PAR. 7. Respondent, in many instances, represents to prospective purchasers that well-known men in the purchaser's community have purchased garments from the respondent, and that they are satisfied and have endorsed said clothing, when such is not a fact. In many instances the representation is made that the respondent contemplates the opening of a local store, and that only a limited number of suits are being sold in the vicinity at greatly reduced prices for introductory and advertising purposes, when such is not a fact. In many instances the representation is made that no additional charge will be made for shipping, when such is not a fact. In many instances it is represented that the price paid for the suit includes an extra pair of trousers, when such is not a fact. In many instances, respondent represents that the customer will be extended the privilege of making payment for the garment ordered on the installment plan, when such is not a fact.

PAR. 8. When complaint is made to the respondent by a purchaser because of the failure of the garment to fit, or because respondent failed to make the garment from the material selected by the purchaser, or for any other reason, the respondent fails and refuses to deliver to such purchaser a garment that will fit made from the material selected, and refuses to return to the purchaser the entire amount of the purchase price paid.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of the respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive many purchasers and cause them erroneously to believe that the garments sold by the respondent are made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as those terms are understood by the purchasing public; that the garments ordered will be made from the material selected by the purchaser from samples submitted by the salesmen or agents, and will be delivered by the person taking the order, and that inspection will be permitted prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase money to the respondent, and that the other representations hereinabove set out are true, and that the promises made by the respondent will be fulfilled. Said acts, practices, and methods have the capacity and tendency to, and do, give the respondent an unfair advantage over his competitors, in that they cause many prospective purchasers to purchase clothing from the respondent in interstate commerce, in preference to purchasing such clothing from his competitors, who have not resorted to such acts and practices, to the substantial injury of said competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Harry Weinberg, trading and doing business under the name Nu-Art Tailoring Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on December 31, 1937, by respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent Harry Weinberg, an individual trading and doing business under the name Nu-Art Tailoring Company, or under any other name or style, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of men's clothing in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing in newspapers and magazines, and through circulars, catalogs, labels, or in any other form of printed matter, or in any other way:

1. That the men's clothing sold by him is made-to-measure or tailor-made, unless and until his garments are actually cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended;

2. That the garments sold by him will be made from the material selected by the purchaser from samples submitted by his salesmen or agents, and will be delivered by the person taking the order, unless and until the garments sold by him are actually so made and delivered;

3. That purchasers of his men's clothing will be permitted to inspect the articles of clothing purchased by them prior to the payment by them of the balance due, when in fact orders are shipped c. o. d. with no inspection permitted;

4. That well-known men in the various communities where he sells his clothing have purchased garments from him, and that they are satisfied and have endorsed them, when such is not the fact;

5. That he contemplates opening a local store in the various communities where his garments are sold and purchased, when in fact he has no such intention;

6. That no additional charge will be made for shipping when such extra charge therefor is made;

7. That the price paid for one of his suits includes an extra pair of trousers, when no such extra pair of trousers is included in the price of one suit;

8. That the purchaser of his clothing will be extended the privilege of paying for it on the installment plan, when such privilege is not actually given.

And it is hereby, further ordered, That the said respondent shall within 60 days from the date of service upon him of this order file with this Commission a report, in writing, setting forth the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF BELMONT LABORATORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2869. Complaint, June 30, 1936—Decision, Jan. 6, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of its "Mazon" proprietary preparation or unction for various skin ailments and disorders, and in sale and distribution thereof, and of its "Mazon Soap" as auxiliary product and adjunct thereto, to and through wholesale druggists in the various other States, for resale through drug stores, indiscriminately, to purchasers who attempt self-medication without proper and necessary advice as to their condition and proper treatment therefor, and with no clinic maintained by it wherein purchasers of its products were afforded opportunity for medical examination and with no physician connected with its said business, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, or in manufacture, sale, and distribution, in commerce among the several States and in the District of Columbia, of preparations designed and sold as cures and remedies, or as treatments for various similar ailments and disorders of the skin—

- (a) Represented, in advertisements of its said products in medical and nursing journals, through circulars mailed to physicians throughout the country, and through leaflets included in each package of aforesaid product and depicting photographs purportedly showing cures of aggravated cases of eczema and psoriasis, and through copies of purported medical indorsements, and other advertising matter relating to efficacy of product in question, that such product was a competent remedy or cure for eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia, and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin, and had been clinically proved to eliminate permanently such various disorders and ailments;
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said "Mazon" was a competent remedy or cure for all forms of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of similar nature, irrespective of type of disorder or cause or condition thereof, and had been clinically proved to eliminate permanently all types of such aforesaid disorders; and
- (c) Represented that aforesaid product was used exclusively by well-known specialists in the treatment of various skin disorders, and that physicians throughout the country had successfully prescribed said product permanently to eliminate or cure ailments, disorders and diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of type of particular disorder or cause or condition thereof;

Facts being that some diseased conditions of skin, especially those caused by systemic or metabolic disorder, are often of serious nature and, in such disease as syphilis, usually manifested by skin disorder, sometimes prove fatal if neglected or improperly treated, such skin diseases as eczema, alopecia, and acne are usually associated with or caused by metabolic or systemic disorders, while psoriasis, dandruff, and ringworm are, according to respectable medical opinion, sometimes caused by internal disorders, no one medicine or type of treatment is employed by physicians in treatment of all diseased conditions of skin, and particular treatment, following medical diagnosis, including detailed history of particular condition for determining cause and condition thereof if possible, may include correction of diet, administration of internal and external medicines, X-ray treatments, and treatments of nerves, depending on particular circumstances; and

Product in question, while effective in treatment of some types of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of other nature, was not effective and competent remedy and cure for eczema, alopecia, acne, dandruff, and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of skin due to or associated with systemic or metabolic disorder, or due to syphilis, nor for all forms of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of similar nature, irrespective of form of disorder or cause or condition thereof, said product had not been clinically proved by thousands of physicians to be effective as above represented, had not been successfully prescribed by physicians throughout the country for permanent elimination of such conditions, etc., and was not used exclusively by well-known specialists in treatment of various skin disorders; and

(d) Represented that aforesaid "Mazon" was the original or only treatment of its character for skin disorders, and that it contained "Dichloramine-T," facts being it was not the original or only treatment of its character for ailments and disorders of the skin, but ingredients thereof had been known to and used by the medical profession for many years, there were a number of proprietary preparations for skin diseases on the market which were similar to it, and said product did not contain aforesaid substance or ingredient;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and that said preparation was an effective remedy or cure for eczema, acne, alopecia, dandruff, athlete's foot, and other diseased conditions of skin, irrespective of form of disorder or cause or condition thereof, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors likewise engaged, in manufacture, sale, and distribution, or in sale and distribution, of cures and remedies or treatments for ailments and disorders of the skin, and who truthfully represent the efficacy and therapeutic value of their respective products:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Lawrence H. Eldredge and Mr. Charles A. Wolfe of Montgomery & McCracken, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Belmont Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter designated as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Belmont Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business at 4430 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in selling Mazon and Mazon soap, proprietary preparations advertised and sold as a treatment for skin disorders, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and now causes and for several years last past has caused such products when sold by it to be shipped from its place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been for several years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by the respondent in Mazon and Mazon soap between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of remedies for diseases of the skin between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products to purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof, located in various States of the United States, represents, and for several years last past has represented through circulars, magazines, medical journals, pictorial representations showing alleged cures effected by the use of Mazon and Mazon soap, and other forms of advertising media circulated in many States of the United States and in the Dominion of Canada as follows:

COMPLETE RAPID ABSORPTION * * *

Thousands of physicians have clinically proved the effectiveness of Mazon treatment, and are prescribing it daily to permanently eliminate:

ECZEMA	TINEA SYCOSIS
PSORIASIS	ACNE
ALOPECIA	DANDRUFF
RINGWORM	ATHLETE'S FOOT
AND OTHER SKIN DISORDERS.

The Colloidal nature of the base of Mazon and its strong penetrating characteristics, together with its healing and soothing ingredients, afford quick and permanent elimination of eczema and other skin disorders.

MAZON * * * is the original treatment of its character for

Eczema	Ring Worm
Psoriasis	Athletic Foot
Head Colds	Barber's Itch
Ivy Polson and Other Skin Disorders

MAZON and MAZON SOAP have been successfully prescribed for nine years by prominent physicians throughout the country for the permanent elimination of these conditions;

It contains a medicinal ingredient known as Dichloramine-T;

No other treatment for permanent cure has ever been discovered;

Some of the best-known skin specialists in the City (of Philadelphia), are using it exclusively and praising it highly;

Well known skin specialists are using Mazon exclusively for the treatment of skin diseases; there is no substitute for Mazon.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact Mazon is not completely and rapidly absorbed; thousands of physicians have not clinically proved the effectiveness of Mazon and are not prescribing it daily to permanently eliminate eczema, psoriasis, alopecia, ringworm, tinea sycosis, acne, dandruff, athlete's foot, and other skin disorders; Mazon and Mazon soap will not afford quick and permanent elimination of eczema and other skin disorders; Mazon is not the original treatment of its character for the various skin diseases mentioned but its ingredients have been known and used by the medical profession for many years; Mazon and Mazon soap have not been successfully prescribed for nine years, or for any other period of time, by prominent physicians throughout the country for the permanent elimination of skin disorders; it is not used exclusively in the treatment of skin disorders by the best known skin specialists in the city of Philadelphia; there are a number of proprietary preparations for skin diseases on the market similar to Mazon and the statement that there is no substitute for Mazon is untrue; and analysis fails to disclose the presence of Dichloramine-T.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to lead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the belief that they themselves can diagnose the ailments or diseases of the skin from which they are suffering and thereby determine the cause or causes of said ailments or diseases and to purchase respondent's products in such erroneous belief. Only by a thorough diagnosis, made by a competent physician, can the causes of the various ailments and diseases of the skin be ascertained and successfully treated. Respondent is not a physician and there is no medical doctor connected with respondent's business in any capacity. Purchasers or prospective purchasers of Mazon or Mazon soap are not given a medical examination for the purpose of determining the particular disease or diseases from which they are suffering and the cure, if any, for same.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that such representations are true and to purchase substantial quantities of said Mazon and Mazon soap from respondent in such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of remedies for diseases of the skin who do not misrepresent in any way the therapeutic values of their products, who likewise advertise, sell, and distribute remedies for diseases of the skin among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By the representations aforesaid, trade is diverted to respondent from such competitors, thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to substantial competition in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 6. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, before Edward M. Averill, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Laurence H. Eldredge and Charles A. Wolfe, attorneys for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Belmont Laboratories, Inc., is a Delaware corporation organized in 1926. Its principal office and place of business are at 4430 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. It is engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of a product called Mazon, a proprietary preparation or unction advertised and sold as a treatment or remedy for various ailments, disorders and diseased conditions of the skin. Respondent also sells and distributes Mazon Soap, an auxiliary product, as an adjunct to Mazon.

Respondent's said products are packaged at its place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., and distributed through wholesale druggists. When orders are received for respondent's said products, it causes them to be shipped from its place of business at Philadelphia, Pa., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the various States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania. Since the date of incorporation, the respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times since respondent entered into said business, it has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, of preparations designed and sold as cures and remedies or as treatments for various similar ailments and disorders of the skin, in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent advertised its said products in medical journals and in the American Journal of Nursing until June, 1935.

Respondent has advertised and now advertises its said products by means of circulars mailed to physicians throughout the country. It also advertises its products by means of a leaflet inserted in each package of Mazon. Under the legend "ONE PICTURE IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS", said leaflet bears several photographs purporting to show cures of aggravated cases of eczema and psoriasis. Said leaflet also carries copies of purported medical indorsements of Mazon and other advertising matter as to the efficacy of the product.

Respondent caused the following advertisement to appear in the American Journal of Nursing in June of 1935:

COMPLETE RAPID ABSORPTION * * *

Thousands of physicians have clinically proved the effectiveness of Mazon treatment, and are prescribing it daily to permanently eliminate:

ECZEMA	TINEA SYCOSIS
PSORIASIS	ACNE
ALOPECIA	DANDRUFF
RINGWORM	ATHLETE'S FOOT
AND OTHER SKIN DISORDERS

Speaking of Mazon, respondent caused the following to appear in a Canadian medical journal:

It contains a medicinal ingredient known as Dichloramine-T.

The following representations appeared in a current circular or broadside which respondent mailed to doctors and physicians throughout the country:

The colloidal nature of the base of Mazon and its strong penetrating characteristics, together with its healing and soothing ingredients, afford quick and permanent elimination of eczema and other skin disorders.

MAZON * * * is the original treatment of its character for

Eczema	Ring Worm
Psoriasis	Athletic Foot
Head Colds	Barber's Itch
Ivy Poison and Other Skin Disorders

MAZON and MAZON SOAP have been successfully prescribed for nine years by prominent physicians throughout the country for the permanent elimination of these conditions.

No other treatment or permanent cure has ever been discovered.

Some of the best-known skin specialists in the city (of Philadelphia) are using it exclusively and praising it highly.

By means of the foregoing statements, the respondent represents to purchasers, prospective purchasers and the public generally that Mazon is an effective remedy or cure for all cases of eczema, alopecia, acne, psoriasis, dandruff, athlete's foot and other disorders of the skin irrespective of the form of the particular disorder or the cause or condition thereof.

PAR. 3. Quantitative and qualitative analyses of Mazon were made by a government agency. The quantitative analysis showed it to contain:

Net weight.....	20.75 gms. or 0.73 oz. av.
Total solids (at 100° C.).....	18.41%
Ash.....	0.54% (Mainly sodium oxide)
Water (Xylene Distillation).....	About 80%
Salicylates as sodium salicylate....	1.12%

The qualitative tests showed the following:

Resorcinol.....	Indicated
Salicylates.....	Present
Water.....	Present
Fatty acids.....	Present (stearic acid indicated)
Tar oils.....	Identified by odor
Phenol.....	Trace indicated
Glycerin.....	Present
Sulphur.....	Absent
Heavy metals.....	Absent
Borax.....	Absent
Tannic acid.....	Absent

Ailments and disorders of the skin, commonly referred to as "skin diseases," are, in many instances, merely surface indications of an internal disorder. Some diseased conditions of the skin, especially those caused by a systemic or metabolic disorder, are often of a serious nature and, in such a disease as syphilis, which is usually manifested by a skin disorder, sometimes prove fatal if neglected or improperly treated.

Among the so-called "skin diseases" which are usually associated with or caused by metabolic or systemic disorders are eczema, alopecia, and acne. Psoriasis, dandruff, and ringworm are, according to respectable medical opinion, sometimes caused by internal disorders.

The evidence establishes that the method of treating ailments and disorders of the skin, which method is followed by the medical profession generally, is, in all cases, to conduct an exhaustive diagnosis including a detailed history of the diseased condition for the purpose of determining the cause and condition thereof, if possible. The diseased condition is then treated in accordance with generally accepted methods of treatment employed by the medical profession for the particular disorder or ailment. Such treatment may include correction of the diet, administration of internal and external medicines, X-ray treatments and treatments of the nerves if the disorder is caused by a nervous condition of the patient. No one medicine or type of treatment alone, however, is employed by physicians in the treatment of all diseased conditions of the skin. Mazon is not an effective and competent remedy or cure for eczema, alopecia, acne, dandruff, and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin if caused by or associated with a systemic or metabolic disorder, or if caused by syphilis. Mazon is not an effective and competent remedy or cure for all forms of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of a similar nature irrespective of the form of the disorder or the cause or condition thereof. Mazon has proved effective, however, in the treatment of some types of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of a similar nature.

PAR. 4. Based upon the testimony and other evidence in this record, it is found that the representation that the effectiveness of Mazon has been clinically proved by thousands of physicians is untrue; that physicians throughout the country have not successfully prescribed Mazon to permanently eliminate eczema, acne, athlete's foot, alopecia, dandruff, and other skin disorders and ailments, irrespective of the form of the particular disorder or the cause or condition thereof; that Mazon is not the original or only treatment of its character for ailments and disorders of the skin, but its ingredients have been known to and used by the medical profession for many years; that Mazon does not contain an ingredient known as Dichloramine-T; that specialists do not use Mazon exclusively in the treatment of ailments and disorders of the skin; and that the statement "There is no substitute for Mazon" is untrue in that there are a number of proprietary preparations for skin disorders on the market similar to Mazon.

PAR. 5. Respondent maintains no clinic or consultation room wherein purchasers of its products are afforded an opportunity for a medical examination and there is no medical doctor connected with respondent's business. Respondent's products are sold through drug stores indiscriminately to purchasers who can and do attempt self-medication without the proper and necessary advice as to their condition and the proper treatment therefor.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the representations set forth above in its advertising literature has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that said representations are true and that said preparation is an effective remedy or cure for eczema, acne, alopecia, dandruff, athlete's foot, and other diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the form of the disorder or the cause or condition thereof. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of the respondent's said products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, or in the sale and distribution, of cures and remedies or treatments for ailments and disorders of the skin, who truthfully represent the efficacy and therapeutic value of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Belmont Laboratories, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Belmont Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a medicinal product now designated as Mazon, or of any other medicinal product containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, sold under that name or any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. Directly or through the use of testimonials or indorsements, or in any other manner:

(a) That Mazon is a competent remedy or cure for eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin unless such representations are limited to those types of said diseases and disorders which are not caused by, or associated with, a systemic or metabolic disorder, or are not caused by syphilis;

(b) That Mazon is a competent remedy or cure for all forms of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of a similar nature irrespective of the type of the disorder or cause or condition thereof;

(c) That Mazon has been clinically proved to permanently eliminate eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia, and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin unless such representations are limited to those types of said diseases and disorders which are not caused by, or associated with, a systemic or metabolic disorder, or are not caused by syphilis;

(d) That Mazon has been clinically proved to permanently eliminate all types of athlete's foot and other skin disorders of similar nature irrespective of the type of the disorder or cause or condition thereof;

(e) That the product is used exclusively by well-known specialists in the treatment of various skin disorders;

(f) That physicians, throughout the country, have successfully prescribed Mazon to permanently eliminate or cure ailments, disorders and diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the type of the particular disorder or the cause or condition thereof;

2. That the product is the original or only treatment of its character for skin disorders;

3. That the product contains Dichloramine-T unless such is a fact.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and which were composed of a number of penny caramels of uniform size, shape, and quality, together with a number of larger pieces of candy and a number of still larger pieces of candy and another article of merchandise, to be given as prizes, respectively, to those purchasers respectively selecting, by chance, one of a relatively small number of said caramels, centers of which were pink, and to those securing, by chance, one of a still smaller number of such caramels, centers of which were white—

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as aforesaid, and thereby induced to purchase said candy thus packed and sold by it, in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to it trade and custom from its said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use same or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition therein and tend to create a monopoly thereof in it and such other distributors as use same or equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent method:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that M. H. Sobel, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago. Respondent is now and for several months last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products when so sold to be transported from its place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there is now and has been for several months last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said assortment is composed of a number of pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, a number of larger pieces of candy and a number of still larger pieces of candy, together with another article of merchandise, which larger pieces of candy and the other article of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality in the following manner:

The majority of said pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, are plain caramels, that is, have the same color throughout, but a small number of the said pieces of caramel candy have pink centers and a smaller number of said caramels have white centers. The fact as to whether the caramels are of the same color throughout or have a pink or a white center is effectively concealed from the prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the caramel broken open. The said pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, retail at the price of one cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of the said caramel candies having a pink center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to, and the purchaser who procures one of the caramel candies having a white center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the still larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The aforesaid purchasers procuring a caramel candy having a white or pink center, and the purchaser of the last piece of caramel candy in said assortment thus procure a larger piece of candy or other article of merchandise wholly by lot or chance. The respondent furnishes with said assortment a circular or display card stating that the assortment is to be sold and distributed in accordance with the above described sales plan.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy or another article of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method of the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

mission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 15, 1936 issued, and on January 16, 1936 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, M. H. Sobel, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located at 2309 South Keeler Avenue in the city of Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products when so sold to be transported from its place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for several months last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said assortments are composed of a number of pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape and quality, a number of larger pieces of candy and a number of still larger pieces of candy, together with another article of merchandise, which larger pieces of candy and the other article of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality in the following manner:

The majority of said pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, are plain caramels, that is, have the same color throughout, but a small number of the said pieces of caramel candy have pink centers and a smaller number of said caramels have white centers. The fact as to whether the caramels are of the same color throughout or have a pink or a white center is effectively concealed from the prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the caramel broken open. The said pieces of caramel candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, retail at the price of one cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of the said caramel candies having a pink center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to, and the purchaser who procures one of the caramel candies having a white center is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the still larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The aforesaid purchasers procuring a caramel candy having a white or pink center, thus procure a larger piece of candy or other article of merchandise wholly by lot or chance. The respondent furnishes with said assortments a circular or display card stating that the assortment is to be sold and distributed in accordance with the above described sales plan.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, M. H. Sobel, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the amended answer of respondent, M. H. Sobel, Inc., admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,"

It is ordered, That the respondent, M. H. Sobel, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise which said larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, M. H. Sobel, Inc., a corporation, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

HARTZ MOUNTAIN PRODUCTS, INC.COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2867. Complaint, June 30, 1936—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938*

Where a corporation engaged in the sale of pet shop products, including foods and remedies for birds, fish, and turtles, bird perches, and various other products and accessories pertaining to pets, and in distribution thereof through chain stores, department stores, drug stores, and other media of distribution, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce among the States, of other products and preparations recommended or used for pet foods and remedies, including foods and remedies for canaries; in extensively advertising its said pet foods, remedies, and accessories in various newspapers and other mediums of interstate circulation, and through broadcasts having interstate transmission and reception—

- (a) Designated certain of its pet shop products, including canary foods and remedies, as "Dr. Brehm's Bird Tonic," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Wash," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Bitters," and "Dr. Brehm's Revelenta," notwithstanding fact it did not appear that the famous German naturalist ever prescribed formulas for bird foods and remedies, or was connected with the formulas used by it on products and preparations distributed and sold by it, and none of its said products either were or had ever been made or prepared under direction of a doctor, or a Dr. Brehm, and representation thus made was false; and
- (b) Represented that its "Perfect-Grip" sand perch contained a vibrating spring or embodied a spring action and soothing sensation comparable, in use, to swaying of a tree branch as the canary alighted or jumped from its surface, facts being said product contained no vibrating spring and had no spring action comparable to swaying of a tree branch when used by a bird;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive public into erroneous and mistaken belief that its said products had, in truth and in fact, been prepared by, or under the direction, or according to the formula of, a doctor or a Dr. Brehm, and that its said "Perfect-Grip" sand perch contained a vibrating spring which enabled such perch to simulate the swaying of a tree branch as the canary alighted or left its surface, and to induce such purchasing public to buy its said products in preference to other pet shop products and accessories, including canary foods and remedies, and with result of unfairly diverting trade to it from its aforesaid competitors who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products nor the results to be obtained from the use thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal place of business located at 32 Cooper Square, New York, N. Y. Respondent is, and for more than three years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of fish and bird foods, bird medicines and remedies, bird perches, appurtenances thereto, bird cages, and other equipment for pets, and has been engaged in the sale of said products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent's bird medicines and remedies have been sold under the trade names of "Dr. Brehm's Bird Tonic," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Wash," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Bitters," and "Dr. Brehm's Revalenta." Respondent has also sold its products under the trade name "Hartz Mountain." During all of said time it has caused, and still causes, said products, when sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in New York, or other places within the United States to purchasers thereof some located in the State of New York and others located in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and for more than three years last past has been, in constant competition with other corporations, persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described herein, respondent included within its corporate name under which to carry on its business the words "Hartz Mountain." Respondent has sold its products under the trade name of "Hartz Mountain" and has prefixed said trade name with the word "Genuine." It has used continuously for three years last past, and is now using, said corporate name containing the said words "Hartz Mountain" and the said trade name "Hartz Mountain" alone or in conjunction with the word "Genuine" in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce. Respondent has caused its corporate name "Hartz Mountain Products, Inc." and its said trade name "Hartz Mountain" alone or in conjunction with the word "Genuine" to appear on its letterheads, billheads, business cards, circulars, advertising matter, labels on containers containing its said products, and in booklets and otherwise, and has distributed said printed matter in interstate commerce to customers and prospective customers of respondent. Respondent has also caused its said corporate name and said trade name to be used in radio broadcasts in the advertisement of its said products. Respondent has caused its said corporate name "Hartz Mountain Products, Inc." and its said trade name "Hartz Mountain," used alone or in conjunction with the word "Genuine" to be presented to its customers and prospective customers in such a way that the representation is made to its customers or prospective customers that respondent's products are made or originate in the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany. It is well known among owners of birds, and especially canary fanciers, that the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany is a locality wherein a high-grade species of canary has been bred for many years.

In truth and in fact respondent's products are not, nor have they ever been, made or manufactured in, nor have their ingredients or component parts ever, nor do they now, originate in the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany, but on the contrary, respondent has filled and now fills orders with products made or manufactured in the United States from ingredients or component parts procured by the respondent from places other than the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany.

PAR. 3. Respondent at all times herein referred to has sold and now sells preparations under the trade name or brand of "Dr. Brehm's Bird Tonic," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Wash," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Bitters," and "Dr. Brehm's Revalenta," and has used and featured said trade names or brands on labels and in advertisements and in advertising matter, and has caused the following to appear on the labels which it placed on the product designated as "Dr. Brehm's Revalenta":

REVALENTA

Prepared according to Dr. Brehm's original recipe, is acknowledged by all German bird breeders to be the best remedy for colds, asthma, coughs, hoarseness, etc.

The use by the respondent of the words "Dr. Brehm" or "Dr. Brehm's" and the title "Doctor" or the abbreviation therefor, to wit, "Dr." is made in such a way that purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent are led to believe that the products sold by respondent under said trade names or brands are prepared from a formula or under the direction of a doctor or a Doctor Brehm. In truth and in fact none of respondent's products have ever been, nor are they now, made, manufactured, or prepared under the direction of a doctor or a Doctor Brehm, and said representation of respondent is untrue.

PAR. 4. Respondent at all times herein referred to has sold, and now sells, a product designated as "Hartz Mountain 'Perfect-Grip' Sand Perch," and has made representations regarding said product as set forth in the following statements which it has caused to appear in catalogues and other advertisements which it circulates in interstate commerce:

The vibrating spring by which the perch is attached easily from the outside of the cage produces a gentle spring action, a soothing sensation comparable to the swaying of a tree branch as a canary alights and jumps from its inviting surface.

In truth and in fact said product contains no vibrating spring and no spring action comparable to the swaying of a tree branch is produced in its use.

PAR. 5. There is a preference on the part of certain purchasers or prospective purchasers located in different States of the United States for products similar to those sold by the respondent to be resold by retail to the public, made or manufactured in or composed of ingredients or component parts originating in the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany, for products made or prepared according to the formula or under the direction of a doctor or a Doctor Brehm, or for a perch for canaries containing a vibrating spring which when used will produce a spring action comparable to the swaying of a tree. The use by the respondent of the words "Hartz Mountain Products" in respondent's corporate name, and the words "Hartz Mountain," alone or in conjunction with the word "Genuine," in respondent's trade name, as described herein; of the words "Dr. Brehm," "Dr. Brehm's," the title "Doctor" or the abbreviation therefor, to wit, "Dr."; or the representation by the respondent that respondent's said "'Perfect-Grip' Sand Perch" is attached to a cage by a vibrating spring which produces, when used, a gentle spring action comparable to the swaying of a tree, has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers who are customers or prospective customers of respondent, into the belief that respondent's products are actually made or manufactured, or the ingredients or component parts thereof originated in the Hartz or Harz Mountain District of Germany, or are prepared under the direction or according to the formula of a doctor or a Doctor Brehm, or that respondent's "'Perfect-Grip' Sand Perch" has the properties, capacities, or effects claimed for it, as hereinabove set forth, and such prospective customers, relying and acting upon such belief, have been and are thereby induced to and do buy respondent's aforesaid products, thereby tending to divert trade to respondent from other corporations, associations, individuals, firms, and partnerships who do not misrepresent the locality of manufacture of their products or the locality from which the ingredients or component parts of their products are obtained, or the persons under whose direction or formula their products are prepared, or the properties, capacities, or effects of their products, but who truthfully advertise and label their products.

PAR. 6. The practices of respondent, described hereinabove, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

plaint by Nims and Verdi, by P. E. Williamson, Jr., Meyer Halperin, and Daniel R. Forbes, attorneys for the respondent, before W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs and oral arguments in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 32 Cooper Square, New York City, within the State of New York. Said respondent is now, and has been since 1933, engaged in the sale of pet shop products, including foods and remedies for birds, fish and turtles, bird perches, dog powder, and various other products and accessories pertaining to pets, and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said products, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been for more than three years last past, a course of trade and commerce by respondent in said pet shop products between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and since 1933 has been, in substantial competition with sundry other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of other products and preparations recommended or used for pet foods and remedies, including foods and remedies for canary birds, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The pet foods, remedies, and accessories, including foods and remedies for canary birds, sold and distributed by said respondent, are sold and distributed by said respondent through chain stores, department stores, drug stores, and other media of distribution located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, has been and now is engaged in extensive advertising as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of its pet foods, remedies, and accessories, including foods and remedies for canary birds, and as media of such advertising it has been and now is using various newspapers and other mediums of interstate circulation, and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate transmission and reception.

PAR. 4. The respondent, in its said advertisements of its pet foods, remedies, and accessories, sold and distributed by it, has made various statements regarding the merits and qualities of said products, preparations and accessories in the feeding and treatment of household pets, including canary birds. Among the statements which said respondent has used in its sales devices, advertisements in newspapers and other mediums of circulation, and over the radio, is the following:

The vibrating spring by which the perch is attached easily from the outside of the cage produces a gentle spring action, a soothing sensation comparable to the swaying of a tree branch as a canary alights and jumps from its inviting surface.

The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, has, by some of the means aforesaid, represented its "Perfect-Grip" sand perch as containing a vibrating spring by which the perch is easily attached from the outside of the cage and produces a gentle spring action, comparable to the swaying of a tree branch, as a canary alights or jumps from its surface.

PAR. 5. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, has, by some of the means aforesaid, represented that its pet shop products, including foods and remedies for canary birds, sold and distributed by it under the names "Dr. Brehm's Bird Tonic," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Wash," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Bitters," and "Dr. Brehm's Revelenta," are the products or brands prepared from a formula prescribed by a doctor, or under the direction of a doctor, or prescribed or prepared according to the formula or under the direction of a Dr. Brehm.

PAR. 6. Use by the respondent of the trade names or brands "Dr. Brehm's Bird Tonic," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Wash," "Dr. Brehm's Bird Bitters," and "Dr. Brehm's Revelenta," is and has been unjustified in that it has not been shown that Dr. Brehm, the famous German naturalist, either ever prescribed formulas for bird foods and remedies, or was connected, either directly or indirectly, with the formulas used by respondent, or the products and preparations distributed and sold by it. None of respondent's products have ever been, nor are they now, made, manufactured, or prepared under the direction of a doctor, or a Dr. Brehm, and said representation of respondent is untrue.

PAR. 7. Respondent's use of representations in describing its "Perfect-Grip" sand perch as containing a vibrating spring by which the perch is attached easily from the outside of the cage and produces a gentle spring action, or a soothing sensation comparable to the swaying of a tree branch as a canary alights and jumps from its surface is unjustified in that its said product contains no vibrating spring and has no spring action comparable to the swaying of a tree branch in its use by a bird.

PAR. 8. The advertisements and representations made to the purchasing public by the respondent, as hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 4 and 5, are misleading. Such representations have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's products have, in truth and in fact, been prepared by, or under the direction, or according to the formula of a doctor or a Dr. Brehm, or that its "Perfect-Grip" sand perch contains a vibrating spring which enables the said sand perch to simulate the swaying of a tree branch as a canary bird alights or leaves its surface, and to induce such purchasing public to purchase respondent's products in preference to other pet shop products and accessories, including foods and remedies for canary birds. The result of such deception and misleading representations on the part of the said respondent is to unfairly divert trade to said respondent from such competitors above-named who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondent, Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

for the Commission, and by P. E. Williamson, Jr., counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pet shop products and accessories, including foods and remedies for canary birds, or any preparations, under whatever name sold, possessing similar qualities, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through use of the term "Dr." or "Doctor" or any other term or word of similar meaning, or in any manner, that said products or preparations, including the formulas therefor, manufactured and sold by them, are manufactured according to a formula of, or under the supervision of a Dr. Brehm or of any doctor of medicine or any other person skilled in the practice of medicine, until and unless such products are so manufactured.

2. Representing that said "Perfect-Grip" sand perch contains a vibrating spring or embodies a spring action simulating or comparable in use to the swaying of a tree branch.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Hartz Mountain Products, Inc., shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Where a corporation and two individuals, officers, stockholders, and controllers thereof, engaged in sale and distribution of chewing gum assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and which included, as typical, assortments composed of (1) one hundred penny pieces of gum of uniform size and shape (within individual wrappers of relatively few of which were concealed, as below set forth, printed legends), together with (a) a number of small felt pennants, of which purchasers securing by chance concealed legend reading "One Base Hit" received one, of which purchasers thus securing legend reading "Two Base Hit" received two, and of which purchasers thus securing legend reading "Three Base Hit" received three; and together with (b) larger felt pennants, to be given to such purchasers procuring by chance legend reading "Home Run"; and together with (c) still larger pennant, to be given to purchaser of last piece in assortment; and (2) similar assortments of chewing gum of uniform size, etc., together with number of small felt pennants, to be given as prizes to purchasers of individually wrapped pieces containing legend "Double Play," and together with further chance toward the securing of baseball uniform or gymnasium outfit through chance securing and accumulating of wrappers containing letters, in sequence, necessary to spell sentence "YOU ARE THE WINNER"—

Sold, to wholesalers and jobbers, for display and resale to purchasing public by retailer-vendee-customers thereof in accordance with aforesaid sales plans, said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products, in accordance with aforesaid sales plans, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell chewing gum or other confections, so packed and assembled, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public, as to involve a game of chance, refrain therefrom;

With capacity and tendency to induce purchasers of their said assortments to buy their said products in preference to chewing gum or other confections offered and sold by their competitors, and with result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of such products were attracted by their said methods and manner of packing said chewing gum and by elements of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and were thereby induced to purchase their said chewing gum thus packed and sold by them, in preference to chewing gum or other confections offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to them trade and custom from their said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said chewing gum trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful, lessen competition therein and tend to create monopoly thereof in it and such other distributors as use same or equivalent methods, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in said chewing gum trade, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. In addition to doing business under its own name as Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, the said respondent uses the trade names and styles of Novelty Gum Company, Specialty Gum Company, and Yankee Doodle Gum Company. Respondent, Sol S. Leaf, is president, treasurer, a director and a stockholder of respondent, Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, and has his office and place of business at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, Harry Leaf, is secretary, a director and a stockholder of the respondent, Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, and has his office and place of business at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. Said respondents, Sol

S. Leaf, and Harry Leaf, as officers, directors, and stockholders of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, have a controlling voice in the methods employed by, and direct the policies of, the said respondent corporation.

The respondents, as above described, are now and for some time last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of chewing gum to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondents cause and have caused their said products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such chewing gum between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of chewing gum or other confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of chewing gum so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of 100 sticks of chewing gum of uniform size and shape, together with a number of small felt pennants, a lesser number of slightly larger felt pennants, and one still larger felt pennant, which said felt pennants are to be given as prizes to purchasers of individual sticks of chewing gum in the following manner: The said sticks of chewing gum in said assortment are wrapped in individual wrappers, and all of the said wrappers appear identical until removed from said chewing gum. The majority of the said wrappers have no printing on the inside thereof, but a small number bear the printed legend "One Base Hit"; a still smaller number bear the printed legend "Two Base Hit"; a still smaller number bear the printed legend "Three Base Hit"; and a few of the wrappers bear the printed legend "Home Run." The printed legends on the inside of the wrappers cannot be seen or ascertained until a selection has been made and the wrapper removed. The individual sticks of chewing gum retail at the price of 1¢ each, and purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "One Base Hit" receives one small pennant, contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to, free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers obtaining a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Two Base Hit" receive two of the said small pennants free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Three Base Hit" receive three small pennants free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Home Run" receive one of the larger pennants contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to, free of charge and as a prize. The purchaser of the last piece of chewing gum in the said assortment receives the still larger pennant contained in said assortment. The said felt pennants contained in said assortment are thus distributed to purchasers of chewing gum from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment sold and distributed by respondents is composed of 100 sticks of chewing gum of uniform size and shape, together with a number of small felt pennants, which said felt pennants and certain other specified articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of individual sticks of chewing gum in the following manner: The said sticks of chewing gum in said assortment are wrapped in individual wrappers, and the said wrappers appear identical until a selection has been made and the wrappers removed. A small number of the said wrappers bear on the inside thereof the printed words "Double Play." Other wrappers bear on the inside thereof a printed letter from the following sentence: "You are the Winner." The individual sticks of chewing gum retail at the price of 1¢ each, and the purchaser who procures a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the printed legend "Double Play" is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said small felt pennants contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to. The wrappers bearing one of the printed letters, above referred to, also contain the following or similar legends:

When purchasers have procured the necessary wrappers bearing letters spelling "You Are the Winner," they are entitled to forward them to the respondents and receive free of charge and as a prize a baseball uniform or a gymnasium outfit. The printed legends on the inside of the said wrappers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular wrapper removed. The felt pennants, the baseball uniform, and the gymnasium outfit are thus distributed to purchasers of chewing gum from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell their assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortments for sale and sell said chewing gum to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, and said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said products in preference to the chewing gum or other confections offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said chewing gum to the purchasing public by either one of the methods above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure other articles of merchandise. The use by respondents of said methods in the sale of chewing gum, and the sale of chewing gum by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the chewing gum trade, competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery schemes. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell chewing gum or other confections in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell chewing gum or other confections so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of chewing gum or other confections are attracted by respondents' said methods and manner of packing said chewing gum and by the elements of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said chewing gum so packed and sold by respondents in preference to chewing gum or other confections offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said games of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said chewing gum trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said chewing gum trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said chewing gum trade in respondents and in such other distributors of chewing gum or other confections as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said chewing gum trade. The use of said methods by respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said chewing gum trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Dietz Gum Company of Chicago is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. In addition to doing business under its own name as Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, the said respondent uses the trade names and styles of Novelty Gum Company, Specialty Gum Company, and Yankee Doodle Gum Company. Respondent Sol S. Leaf is president, treasurer, a director and a stockholder of respondent Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, and has his office and place of business at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Harry Leaf is secretary, a director and a stockholder of respondent Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, and has his office and place of business at 1734 West Hubbard Street, Chicago, Ill. Said respondents, Sol S. Leaf, and Harry Leaf, as officers, directors, and stockholders of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, have a controlling voice in the methods employed by, and direct the policies of, the said respondent corporation.

The respondents, as above described, are now and for some time last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of chewing gum to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondents cause and have caused their said products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such chewing gum between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of chewing gum or other confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of chewing gum so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of 100 sticks of chewing gum of uniform size and shape, together with a number of small felt pennants, a lesser number of slightly larger felt pennants, and one still larger felt pennant, which said felt pennants are to be given as prizes to purchasers of individual sticks of chewing gum in the following manner: The said sticks of chewing gum in said assortment are wrapped in individual wrappers, and all of the said wrappers appear identical until removed from said chewing gum. The majority of the said wrappers have no printing on the inside thereof, but a small number bear the printed legend "One Base Hit"; a still smaller number bear the printed legend "Two Base Hit"; a still smaller number bear the printed legend "Three Base Hit"; and a few of the wrappers bear the printed legend "Home Run." The printed legends on the inside of the wrappers cannot be seen or ascertained until a selection has been made and the wrapper removed. The individual sticks of chewing gum retail at the price of 1¢ each, and purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "One Base Hit" receive one small pennant, contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to, free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers obtaining a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Two Base Hit" receive two of the said small pennants free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Three Base Hit" receive three small pennants free of charge and as a prize. Purchasers procuring a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the legend "Home Run" receive one of the larger pennants contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to, free of charge and as a prize. The purchaser of the last piece of chewing gum in the said assortment receives the still larger pennant contained in said assortment. The said felt pennants contained in said assortment are thus distributed to purchasers of chewing gum from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment sold and distributed by respondents is composed of 100 sticks of chewing gum of uniform size and shape, together with a number of small felt pennants, which said felt pen-nants and certain other specified articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of individual sticks of chewing gum in the following manner: The said sticks of chewing gum in said assortment are wrapped in individual wrappers, and the said wrappers appear identical until a selection has been made and the wrappers removed. A small number of the said wrappers bear on the inside thereof the printed words "Double Play." Other wrappers bear on the inside thereof a printed letter from the following sentence: "You are the Winner." The individual sticks of chewing gum retail at the price of 1¢ each, and the purchaser who procures a stick of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing the printed legend "Double Play" is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said small felt pennants contained in said assortment and heretofore referred to. The wrappers bearing one of the printed letters, above referred to, also contain the following or similar legends:

SAVE THIS LETTER—W

This is the 10th letter in YOU ARE THE WINNER.

Save all the other letters.

Boys and Girls—Save wrappers with letters.

When you have the proper letters to spell out mail the wrappers by registered mail to

NOVELTY GUM CO., 1734 W. Hubbard St., Chicago, Ill.

You will receive free a complete BASEBALL UNIFORM or GYMNASIUM OUTFIT to your measurements.

When purchasers have procured the necessary wrappers bearing letters spelling "You Are the Winner," they are entitled to forward them to the respondents and receive free of charge and as a prize a baseball uniform or a gymnasium outfit. The printed legends on the inside of the said wrappers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular wrapper removed. The felt pennants, the baseball uniform, and the gymnasium outfit are thus distributed to purchasers of chewing gum from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents manufacture, sell and distribute various assortments of chewing gum involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to those described in (a) and (b) above, and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell their assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortments for sale and sell said chewing gum to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, and said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said products in preference to the chewing gum or other confections offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said chewing gum to the purchasing public by either one of the methods above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure other articles of merchandise. The use by respondents of said methods in the sale of chewing gum, and the sale of chewing gum by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the chewing gum trade, competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery schemes. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell chewing gum or other confections in competition with respondents, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell chewing gum or other confections so packed and assembled, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public, as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of chewing gum or other confections are attracted by respondents' said methods and manner of packing said chewing gum and by the elements of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said chewing gum so packed and sold by respondents in preference to chewing gum or other confections offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said games of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said chewing gum trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said chewing gum trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said chewing gum trade in respondents and in such other distributors of chewing gum or other confections as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said chewing gum trade. The use of said methods by respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said chewing gum trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the substitute answer filed herein by respondents admitting all material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondents, Sol S. Leaf, individually and as president and treasurer of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, and Harry Leaf, individually and as secretary of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of chewing gum and other merchandise in interstate commerce do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers or others chewing gum or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such chewing gum or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;
2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers or jobbers or others assortments of chewing gum or other merchandise which are used or may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents thereof to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the chewing gum or other merchandise contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of chewing gum for sale to the public at retail pieces of chewing gum, together with felt pennants, which said felt pennants are to be given as prizes to purchasers of individual pieces of chewing gum procuring a piece of chewing gum contained within a wrapper bearing particular or specified legends;

4. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of chewing gum for sale to the public at retail, pieces of chewing gum contained within wrappers bearing various legends or letters, which wrappers bearing particular legends entitle the purchaser to specified articles of merchandise as a prize and which wrappers bearing letters, when obtained in particular combinations, entitle the holder thereof to certain specified articles of merchandise as a prize.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, a corporation, in its own name and right and trading as Novelty Gum Company, Specialty Gum Company, and Yankee Doodle Gum Company; and Sol S. Leaf, individually and as president and treasurer of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago; and Harry Leaf, individually and as secretary of the Dietz Gum Company of Chicago, shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

LOUIS H. TABACH, TRADING AS LONGWEAR HOSIERY COMPANY, CERTIFIED HOSIERY COMPANY, AND CANARY HOSIERY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3229. Complaint, Sept. 18, 1937—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938

Where an individual engaged in sale of hosiery among the various States through house-to-house canvassers, in substantial competition with those engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution, or in sale and distribution, of hosiery in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including among his said competitors manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of hosiery who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and do not use methods and practices as below described in connection with offer, sale and distribution thereof—

- (a) Falsely represented that he manufactured the hosiery sold and distributed by him, and that such hosiery corresponded as to grade, texture, color, and quality to samples displayed by his said agents and representatives for customers' selection, facts being he was not a hosiery manufacturer and hosiery shipped was of a quality or grade inferior to sample selected and to that represented by his said agents and representatives, and in many instances not of size and color selected by purchaser;
- (b) Represented that his stock in trade was turned over every ten days, and was always new and fresh, and that some of his said hosiery was made by a certain specified well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery, facts being none of the products sold by him was made by manufacturer referred to, nor was his stock in trade turned over as above represented;
- (c) Represented that his so-called "Longwear" hosiery was woven with special lockstitch which prevented it from snagging, running or developing holes, and that it was guaranteed as hole-proof and run-proof for a period of from three to six months, facts being said hosiery was not thus woven and would not, with normal wear, last for period of time specified, and he did not replace worn with new hosiery as promised;
- (d) Represented that purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery would be given, without further charge, extra pair, and misrepresented postage which customer would actually be called upon and required to pay when goods were shipped, facts being he failed and refused to include so-called "free" pair in such order when shipment was made, and thereafter to deliver such pair as promised, and postage charge required was greater than that represented at time of sale; and
- (e) Exacted additional payments of ten percent or more to cover postage and insurance fee on extra shipment in case of exchange of goods to correct mistakes in color or size, and unduly and unreasonably delayed correction of mistakes in filling orders; and
- (f) Failed and neglected, in a number of instances, to make adjustments as promised, refusing adjustments unless and until purchaser sent in original receipt given by salesman, and thereby, in some instances, defeating customer's efforts to secure adjustment, and, in number of instances, keeping receipts sent in without making adjustments, and retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes without refunding purchaser's money;

With effect of deceiving and misleading purchasers and prospective purchasers into buying his said hosiery in the false and erroneous belief that he was a manufacturer and that hosiery sold and distributed would correspond in grade, etc., to salesman's samples, and that goods might be exchanged to correct mistakes without additional payment, and that such corrections would not be unreasonably and unduly delayed, deposits would be refunded in the absence of exchange or other satisfactory adjustment, and that hosiery in question was specially woven and guaranteed as above set forth, or was made by, as case might be, well-known manufacturer, and that his stock in trade was turned over, etc., as above represented, and that other undertakings and representations above set forth were true, and of misleading purchasers and prospective purchasers in the aforesaid respects and into purchase of his said hosiery by reason of such beliefs, in preference to that of competitors who do not resort to similar acts, practices, and misrepresentations in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective products, and with result thereby of unfairly diverting trade to him from such competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Louis H. Tabach, an individual doing business under the trade names Longwear Hosiery Company, Certified Hosiery Company and Canary Hosiery Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect, as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis H. Tabach, is an individual, trading as Longwear Hosiery Company, Certified Hosiery Company and as Canary Hosiery Company, having his principal office and place of business located at 1060 Broad Street, in the city of Newark, in PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent, by and through his sales agents and representatives, sells and has sold ladies' hosiery directly to the persons by whom such hosiery is to be worn. Respondent sells said ladies' hosiery on orders taken by said sales agents and representatives through house-to-house canvass. Orders so solicited and received are forwarded to the respondent at his principal place of business in the city of Newark, in the State of New Jersey. Said sales agents and representatives of respondent represent that said orders, when received by respondent, are filled according to the statements and representations made by them, and with hosiery of a grade, quality, and texture as shown by samples displayed by said sales agents and representatives, and of a color and size selected by the customer.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, in said commerce, as aforesaid, represents by and through his sales agents and representatives

(a) That he is a manufacturer;

(b) That the "Longwear" hosiery sold by him is woven with a special lockstitch which prevents them from snagging, running, or developing holes; that such hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof and run-proof for a period of from three to six months;

(c) That each pair of hosiery developing runs or holes within the period guaranteed will be replaced with a new pair without charge;

(d) That purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery will be given without further charge an extra pair;

(e) That the postage charge will be less than the customer is actually called upon and required to pay when goods are shipped C. O. D.;

(f) That some of the hosiery sold by respondent is manufactured by "Vanity Fair", a well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery; and

(g) That respondent's stock in trade is turned over every ten days and that said stock is always new and fresh.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business in said commerce, as aforesaid, through his sales agents and representatives makes use and has made use of the following methods and practices:

(a) Exacting an additional payment of ten per cent (10%) or more to cover postage and insurance fee on the extra shipment in case of exchange of goods for the purpose of correcting mistakes in color and/or size;

(b) Unduly and unreasonably delaying the correction of mistakes in filling orders, and in a number of instances failing and neglecting to make adjustments as promised;

(c) Retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failing and neglecting to refund the money paid by the purchaser;

(d) By refusing to make adjustments unless and until the purchaser sends in the original receipt given by the salesman, thereby, in some instances, defeating the efforts of the customer to secure an adjustment; and

(e) In a number of instances, keeping the receipts sent in and failing and neglecting to make any adjustment.

PAR. 5. The representations of respondent set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, and others similar thereto, have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead and do deceive and mislead, purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's said hosiery into the false and erroneous beliefs:

(a) That respondent is a manufacturer;

(b) That the ladies' hosiery sold and distributed by respondent is made of a fabric whose grade, texture, color and quality correspond to the samples displayed by respondent's sales agents and representatives, and as selected by said customers;

(c) That goods purchased from respondent may be exchanged for the purpose of correcting mistakes in color and/or size, without an additional payment of ten per cent or more to cover postage and insurance fee on the extra shipment;

(d) That correction of mistakes in filling orders will not be unduly and unreasonably delayed;

(e) That deposits made on hosiery purchases by purchasers will be refunded unless exchange or other satisfactory adjustment is made;

(f) That respondent's hosiery is woven with a special lockstitch preventing it from snagging, running, or developing holes;

(g) That respondent's hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof and run-proof for a period of from three to six months;

(h) That a purchaser of respondent's hosiery will get a new pair in exchange, without additional charge, if and when it develops runs or holes within the period guaranteed;

(i) That purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery will be given an extra pair without further charge;

(j) That the cost of C. O. D. shipments of goods is as represented by respondent and his sales agents and representatives;

(k) That certain hosiery sold and distributed by respondent is manufactured by "Vanity Fair," a well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery; and

(l) That respondent's stock in trade is turned over every ten days and that the same is always new and fresh.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, respondent, trading under the various trade names hereinbefore set forth, is not now and has never been a manufacturer of ladies' hosiery. Respondent ships hosiery of a quality or grade inferior to the sample selected and of a quality and grade inferior to that represented by his sales agents and representatives and, in many instances not of the size and color selected by the purchaser. The hosiery sold by respondent is not woven with a special lockstitch which prevents said hosiery from snagging, running, or developing holes. Said hosiery will not and does not, under normal wear, last for the period of time specified and the respondent will not and does not replace worn hosiery with new hosiery at the expiration of such period of time, as promised. Respondent fails and refuses to include the so-called free pair in the order when shipment is made, and he thereafter fails and refuses to deliver said free pair, as promised. The postage charge the customer is actually called upon and required to pay when the goods are delivered C. O. D. is greater than represented at the time of the sale. None of the hosiery sold by respondent is made by "Vanity Fair," nor is respondent's stock in trade turned over every ten days.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of the respondent in said commerce, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of hosiery who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and who do not use the methods and practices used by the respondent as hereinbefore alleged in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their products.

PAR. 8. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs described in paragraph 5 hereof, and into the purchase of respondent's said hosiery in and on account of such beliefs. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors and as a consequence thereof, substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. Said acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on September 18, 1937, issued, and later served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Louis H. Tabach, trading as Longwear Hosiery Company, Certified Hosiery Company, and Canary Hosiery Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs having been waived (oral argument not being requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis H. Tabach, is an individual trading as Longwear Hosiery Company. From time to time he has also done business as Certified Hosiery Company, and as Canary Hosiery Company. His principal office and place of business is located at 1060 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

For more than five years respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the business of selling hosiery in commerce between the State of New Jersey and the various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. When he sells his hosiery, he causes it to be transported from his place of business in Newark, N. J., to purchasers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There has been, and still is, a course of trade and commerce in said hosiery by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent has been for more than five years and is now in substantial competition with other individuals, and with partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution, or in the sale and distribution of hosiery, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent employs sales agents and representatives who sell, and have sold, respondent's hosiery directly to the persons by whom such hosiery is to be worn. By and through these said sales agents and representatives, respondent sells hosiery on orders taken through house-to-house canvass. Orders so solicited and received are forwarded to the respondent at his principal place of business in Newark, N. J. By and through his said sales agents, respondent represents to purchasers and prospective purchasers that he is selling, and will ship and deliver to them, hosiery of the specified grade, quality, and texture by them ordered from samples displayed by his agents.

PAR. 3. In soliciting the sale of and selling his hosiery, respondent, by and through his sales agents and representatives, makes, among others, the following representations:

(a) That he is a manufacturer;

(b) That the "Longwear" hosiery sold by him is woven with a special lockstitch which prevents it from snagging, running, or developing holes; that such hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof and run-proof for a period of from three to six months;

(c) That each pair of hosiery developing runs or holes within the period guaranteed will be replaced with a new pair without charge;

(d) That purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery will be given without further charge an extra pair;

(e) That the postage charge will be less than the customer is actually called upon and required to pay when goods are shipped C. O. D.;

(f) That some of the hosiery sold by respondent is manufactured by "Vanity Fair," a well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery; and

(g) That respondent's stock in trade is turned over every ten days, and that said stock is always new and fresh.

PAR. 4. As a matter of fact, respondent is not now, and has never been, a manufacturer of hosiery. In the usual course of his business aforesaid, he ships hosiery of a quality or grade inferior to the sample selected, and of a quality and grade inferior to that represented by his sales agents and representatives, and, in many instances, not of the size and color selected by the purchaser. This hosiery is not woven with a special lockstitch which prevents said hosiery from snagging, running, or developing holes, and will not, with normal wear, last for the period of time specified. Respondent does not replace worn hosiery with new hosiery, as promised. Respondent fails and refuses to include the so-called free pair in the order when shipment is made, and thereafter fails and refuses to deliver said free pair, as promised. The postage charge the customer is actually called upon and required to pay when the goods are delivered C. O. D. is greater than represented at the time of the sale. None of the hosiery sold by respondent is made by "Vanity Fair," nor is respondent's stock in trade turned over every ten days.

Further, this respondent makes a practice of—

(a) Exacting an additional payment of ten per cent (10%) or more to cover postage and insurance fee on the extra shipment in case of exchange of goods for the purpose of correcting mistakes in color and/or size;

(b) Unduly and unreasonably delaying the correction of mistakes in filling orders, and, in a number of instances, failing and neglecting to make adjustments as promised;

(c) Retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failing and neglecting to refund the money paid by the purchaser;

(d) Refusing to make adjustments unless and until the purchaser sends in the original receipt given by the salesman, and, thereby, in some instances, defeating the efforts of the customer to secure an adjustment; and

(e) In a number of instances, keeping the receipts sent in and failing and neglecting to make any adjustment.

PAR. 5. The representations of respondent set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, and his methods and practices as set out in paragraph 4 hereof, and other representations and methods and practices similar thereto, have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and do deceive and mislead, purchasers and prospective purchasers into purchasing respondent's said hosiery under the following false and erroneous beliefs:

(a) That respondent is a manufacturer;

(b) That the hosiery sold and distributed by respondent is made of a fabric whose grade, texture, color, and quality correspond to the samples displayed by respondent's sales agents and representatives, and as selected by said customers;

(c) That goods purchased from respondent may be exchanged for the purpose of correcting mistakes in color and/or size, without an additional payment of ten per cent or more to cover postage and insurance fee on the extra shipment;

(d) That correction of mistakes in filling orders will not be unduly and unreasonably delayed;

(e) That deposits made on hosiery purchases by purchasers will be refunded unless exchange or other satisfactory adjustment is made;

(f) That respondent's hosiery is woven with a special lockstitch preventing it from snagging, running, or developing holes.

(g) That respondent's hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof and run-proof for a period of from three to six months;

(h) That a purchaser of respondent's hosiery will get a new pair in exchange, without additional charge, if and when it develops runs or holes within the period guaranteed;

(i) That purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery will be given an extra pair without further charge;

(j) That the cost of C. O. D. shipments of goods is as represented by respondent and his sales agents and representatives;

(k) That certain hosiery sold and distributed by respondent is manufactured by "Vanity Fair," a well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery; and

(l) That respondent's stock in trade is turned over every ten days, and that the same is always new and fresh.

PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of hosiery who do not in any manner misrepresent their products, and who do not use the methods and practices used by the respondent, as hereinbefore described, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have a tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs that the various representations described in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof are true, and into the purchase of respondent's said hosiery in and on account of such beliefs in preference to purchasing hosiery from respondent's competitors who do not resort to similar acts, practices and misrepresentations in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective products. As a result thereof, trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from such competitors and substantial injury is done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Louis H. Tabach, trading as Longwear Hosiery Company, Certified Hosiery Company, and Canary Hosiery Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on the 7th day of January 1938, by respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, waiving hearing on the charges set forth in the said complaint, and stating that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission might issue and serve upon him findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is hereby ordered, That the respondent, Louis H. Tabach, an individual, doing business as Longwear Hosiery Company, Certified Hosiery Company, and Canary Hosiery Company, or under any other name, his agents, representatives, and employees in connection with the sale, or offering for sale of hosiery in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Representing that respondent manufactures the hosiery distributed and sold by him until he actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls, the factory or plant wherein such hosiery is made.

2. Representing that the hosiery sold and distributed by respondent corresponds as to grade, texture, color, and quality, to the samples displayed by respondent's sales agents and representatives for selection by customers, unless and until such customers actually receive hosiery of the grade, texture, color, and quality, selected by them from the samples displayed by respondent's sales agents and representatives.

3. Representing that hosiery purchased from the respondent may be exchanged without an additional payment to cover postage and insurance fee on the extra shipment when such exchanges are not made without such additional payments.

4. Representing that correction of mistakes in filling orders will not be unduly and unreasonably delayed, unless and until orders are filled without undue and unreasonable delay.

5. Representing that deposits made on hosiery purchases by purchasers will be refunded unless exchange or other satisfactory adjustment is made, unless and until deposits are in fact refunded or exchange or other satisfactory adjustment is made.

6. Representing that respondent's hosiery will not snag, run or develop holes by reason of a special lockstitch in weaving said hosiery or for any other reason.

7. Representing that said hosiery is guaranteed or that a purchaser of respondent's hosiery will get a new pair in exchange, without additional charge, if and when it develops runs or holes within the period guaranteed, unless and until purchasers whose hosiery develops runs or holes within the period guaranteed will in fact receive a new pair of hose in exchange without additional charge.

8. Representing that purchasers ordering not fewer than six pairs of hosiery will be given an extra pair without further charge, unless and until purchasers ordering six or more pairs of hosiery are in fact given an extra pair without additional charge.

9. Misrepresenting the cost of C. O. D. shipments of goods by informing prospective purchasers that such cost is less than it actually is.

Order

10. Representing that certain hosiery sold and distributed by respondent is manufactured by "Vanity Fair," well-known manufacturer of ladies' hosiery.

11. Representing that respondent's stock in trade is turned over every ten days, and that the same is always new and fresh, when that is untrue.

And it is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall, within 60 days from the date of the service upon him of this order, file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which he shall have complied with this order.

AGRICULTURAL LABORATORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3263. Complaint, Nov. 10, 1937—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in the development of nitrogen fixing bacteria, costs of growing, selling and delivering which are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, and in the sale and distribution thereof, in competition with others engaged as members of the commercial legume inoculant industry, to customers, of whom some were competitively engaged in commerce in resale and distribution of its said product with other customers, and who included (1) wholesale distributors engaged in sale to retailers and directly to farmers, and selected or attempted to be selected by it on a basis of one for each trade area in which it sold, (2) the two largest mail order houses, and (3) some farm bureaus which were in competition with retailers in sale to farmers—

Discriminated in price, through granting to some customers competitively engaged with other customers in the resale of its inoculant, price differentials which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which commodity in question was to such purchasers sold or delivered, and were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for, or the marketability of, the goods concerned, and through sales practice involving delivered price basis to some, and f. o. b. price to others, and return privileges to some, denied to others;

With result that the effect of said discriminations in price might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which it was engaged, and that in which its distributors were engaged, and might be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with it and with certain favored distributors and customers thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices constituted a violation of the provisions of Subsec. (a) of Sec. 2 of an act of congress approved Oct. 15, 1914, as amended.

Mr. A. W. DeBirny for the Commission.

Mr. Preston B. Kavanagh, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Agricultural Laboratories, Inc., hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and is now violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936, (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Ohio and has its principal office and place of business at 3415 Milton Avenue in the city of Columbus, Ohio.

PAR. 2. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, respondent has been and is now engaged in the business of developing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing certain nitrogen-fixing bacteria, which is a commodity commonly known as a commercial inoculant and is useful in promoting the growth of leguminous plants and crops. In the course and conduct of its said business the respondent has been and is now developing and manufacturing said bacteria at its place of business in the State of Ohio and has been and is now, in direct active competition with other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged, selling, shipping, and distributing said bacteria in commerce from its said place of business in the State of Ohio to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Ohio and the several other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, there has been and is now between respondent and purchasers of said bacteria a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Ohio and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of its business described in paragraph 2 hereof and while engaged in trade and commerce between the State of Ohio and the other States of the United States and the District of Columbia as therein described, the respondent has been and is now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between different purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality sold and shipped in commerce, as aforesaid, by respondent to said purchasers and by them purchased from respondent in commerce for use, consumption, or resale within the State of Ohio and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, in that the respondent has been and is now selling bacteria to some of said purchasers at prices lower than the prices at which respondent has been and is now selling bacteria of like grade and quality to other of said purchasers, and the respondent has been and is now allowing to some of said purchasers a larger discount from the prices at which bacteria was and is sold to them by respondent than the discount, if any, which respondent has been and is now allowing to other purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality purchased from respondent at the same prices.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, many purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent receiving the benefit of the aforesaid discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as favored customers, have been and are now in substantial competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, and distribution of said bacteria with many other purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent not receiving the benefit of said discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as disfavored customers, and many customers of said favored customers have been and are now in like competition with many customers of said disfavored customers, and the effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale or distribution of said bacteria or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, or distribution of said bacteria between and among said favored customers and said disfavored customers and between and among the customers of said favored customers and the customers of said disfavored customers and between and among the respondent and other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged in the sale and distribution of commercial inoculants.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the above-mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on November 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Agricultural Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, charging it with discriminating in price between different purchasers of inoculants in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the aforesaid act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Said corporate respondent, Agricultural Laboratories, Inc., now is, and at all times since June 19, 1936, has been a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and plant located at 3415 Milton Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. At all times herein mentioned said respondent has been engaged in the business of developing, selling and distributing certain nitrogen fixing bacteria, useful for inoculating the seeds of leguminous plants, from its said place of business in the State of Ohio to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Ohio and the several States of the United States and there has been and is now between respondent and purchasers of said bacteria a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Ohio and the several States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondent is a member of the commercial legume inoculant industry of the United States which industry grows, sells and distributes commercial inoculants to the value of approximately $1,000,000 in gross annual sales. There are approximately fourteen members of this industry, all competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants. The bacteria are grown for the inoculation of seeds of leguminous plants. The bacteria are encouraged to multiply from various strains and are then placed in a carrier, which is either a jelly or a humus medium such as peat or charcoal, for commercial distribution. Seeds of leguminous plants are saturated with the bacteria before planting. These bacteria have the function of associating with legume plants, with the result that an adequate number of bacterial nodules are formed on the roots of the plants to extract nitrogen from the air for the purpose of aiding luxuriant growth of the plant. Principally these inoculants are placed upon alfalfa and sweet clover seeds, soy beans, peas and other legumes.

PAR. 3. Said respondent confines its sales generally to wholesale distributors and attempts to select one for each trade area in which it sells. Such wholesalers sell to retail dealers as well as directly to farmers. Additionally respondent sells its product to the two largest mail order houses who sell to consumers throughout the United States. The respondent also sells to some farm bureaus which, however, generally do not compete with respondent's wholesale distributors. Respondent sells to a few retailers. Some of respondent's customers are competitively engaged in commerce in the resale and distribution of the inoculant product with other of respondent's customers. The farm bureaus compete with retail dealers in selling to the farmers.

PAR. 4. Respondent sells its product to its wholesalers at various prices of from 14¢ to 16¢ for the one bushel size. Retail distributors pay 30¢ for the one bushel size. Some of the product is sold on a delivered basis and some customers, paying the highest price are sold F. O. B. Columbus, Ohio. The farm bureaus all purchase at a price of 14¢ delivered. The mail order houses purchase at 20¢ delivered for the one bushel size with the privilege of returning unsold goods. The farm bureaus are not allowed to return unsold goods but may return empty cans and obtain a credit of 2¢ a can. Wholesalers may return not to exceed 10% of their annual purchases. The respondent sells to a farm bureau at 14¢ and also sells at 14¢ to a competing wholesaler. Respondent departs from its regular policy with this wholesaler and does not allow the return of goods but only the 2¢ credit for each empty can returned. However, the farm bureau purchases on a 14¢ delivered price basis whereas the competing wholesaler purchases on a 14¢ non-delivered price basis, that is in the latter instance F. O. B. Columbus, Ohio.

PAR. 5. The granting of a lower price to some customers competitively engaged with other customers in the resale of the inoculant is under the circumstances set forth above a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's product, which purchases are for use, consumption or resale within the United States.

PAR. 6. The effect of said discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondent is engaged and in the line of commerce in which its distributors are engaged; and the effect of said discrimination may be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with the respondent and with certain favored distributors and with customers of such favored distributors.

PAR. 7. The costs of growing, selling and delivery are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, largely due to the practice of accepting the return of goods unsold, which returned goods are then practically valueless.

PAR. 8. The discriminations in price set forth above do not make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery, resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodity is to such purchasers sold or delivered. That such price differentials were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraph 5 hereof, are in violation of Section 2 (a) of said Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, section 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings and conclusion are hereby made a part hereof, that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Agricultural Laboratories, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of commercial inoculant in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from the unlawful discriminations in price found in paragraph 5 of the aforesaid findings as to the facts and conclusion.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent, Agricultural Laboratories, Inc., within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1938

Docket 3264. Complaint, Nov. 10, 1937—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of bacteria inoculation for leguminous plants, as member of the commercial legume inoculant industry, and, as such, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants, costs of growing, selling, and delivering which are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, and in selling, as thus engaged, through salesmen, at varying price not related to savings in cost of production, sale, or delivery or to buyer resale functions, to customers whom it classified as consumers, retail dealers, and jobbers, but who included farm bureaus reselling large portion of its product to farmers and occasionally to local elevators and other dealers, and who, as "jobbers," generally sold both consumers and dealers, and of whom farm bureau competed with retailers in sale to farmers, and customer "jobbers" resold to consumers at lower price than customer "retailers,"—

- (a) Discriminated in price through sale to its said customers at prices based on, and varying in accordance with, aforesaid classifications, and involving price differentials which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from different methods or quantities in which commodity in question was to such purchasers sold or delivered, and were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for, or marketability of, the goods concerned, and which constituted discrimination, respectively, as to customers competitively engaged in resale of inoculant of like grade and quality to consumers, and as to customers competitively engaged in resale of such products to dealers; and
- (b) Discriminated in price through sale to certain dealer "jobber" of one of its said products under private brand at fifteen cents, while requiring of other dealer customers, in competition with aforesaid dealer "jobber," twenty-four cents for same quantity of same product sold under similar labels, and thereby exacted price differential and discrimination which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, etc., as above set forth, and were not in response to changing conditions, etc., as hereinbefore described;

With result that effect of said discriminations in price might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which it was engaged, and that in which its distributors were engaged, and might be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with it and with certain favored distributors and customers thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices constituted a violation of the provisions of Subsec. (a) of Sec. 2 of an act of Congress approved Oct. 15, 1914, as amended.

Complaint

Mr. A. W. DeBirny for the Commission.

Williamson & Winkelmann, of Urbana, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and is now violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936, (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois and has its principal office and place of business at 808 North Lincoln Avenue in the city of Urbana, Ill.

PAR. 2. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, respondent has been and is now engaged in the business of developing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing certain nitrogen-fixing bacteria, which is a commodity commonly known as a commercial inoculant and is useful in promoting the growth of leguminous plants and crops. In the course and conduct of its said business the respondent has been and is now developing and manufacturing said bacteria at its place of business in the State of Illinois and has been and is now, in direct active competition with other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged, selling, shipping, and distributing said bacteria in commerce from its said place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Illinois and the several other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, there has been and is now between respondent and purchasers of said bacteria a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Illinois and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of its business described in paragraph 2 hereof and while engaged in trade and commerce between the State of Illinois and the other States of the United States and the District of Columbia as therein described, the respondent has been and is now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between different purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality sold and shipped in commerce, as aforesaid, by respondent to said purchasers and by them purchased from respondent in commerce for use, consumption, or resale within the State of Illinois and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, in that the respondent has been and is now selling bacteria to some of said purchasers at prices lower than the prices at which respondent has been and is now selling bacteria of like grade and quality to other of said purchasers, and the respondent has been and is now allowing to some of said purchasers a larger discount from the prices at which bacteria was and is sold to them by respondent than the discount, if any, which respondent has been and is now allowing to other purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality purchased from respondent at the same prices.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, many purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent receiving the benefit of the aforesaid discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as favored customers, have been and are now in substantial competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, and distribution of said bacteria with many other purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent not receiving the benefit of said discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as disfavored customers, and many customers of said favored customers have been and are now in like competition with many customers of said disfavored customers, and the effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale or distribution of said bacteria or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, or distribution of said bacteria between and among said favored customers and said disfavored customers and between and among the customers of said favored customers and the customers of said disfavored customers, and between and among the respondent and other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged in the sale and distribution of commercial inoculants.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the above mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on November 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with discriminating in price between different purchasers of inoculants in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the aforesaid act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and the conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Said corporate respondent, Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., now is, and at all times since June 19, 1936, has been a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and plant located at 808 North Lincoln Avenue, Urbana, Ill. At all times herein mentioned, said respondent has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing bacteria inoculation for the seeds of leguminous plants to customers located in the several States of the United States, more particularly to customers in States between Maine and Minnesota on the North, and Mississippi and Florida on the South, and including these named States, and there has been and is now a course in trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Illinois and the several States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondent is a member of the commercial legume inoculant industry of the United States which industry grows, sells and distributes commercial inoculants to the value of approximately $1,000,000 in gross annual sales. There are approximately fourteen members of this industry, all competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants. The bacteria are grown for the inoculation of seeds of leguminous plants. The bacteria are encouraged to multiply from various strains and are then placed in a carrier, which is either a jelly or a humus medium such as peat or charcoal, for commercial distribution. Seeds of leguminous plants are saturated with the bacteria before planting. These bacteria have the function of associating with legume plants, with the result that an adequate number of bacterial nodules are formed on the roots of the plants to extract nitrogen from the air for the purpose of aiding luxuriant growth of the plant. Principally these inoculants are placed upon alfalfa and sweet clover seeds, soy beans, peas, and other legumes.

PAR. 3. Said respondent classifies its customers as consumers, retail dealers, and jobbers. One who sells to consumers is considered to be a retail dealer and one who sells to dealers a jobber. However, in this industry there are very few distributors who sell only as dealers or jobbers. Generally distributors called jobbers sell both to consumers and to dealers. Additionally a large portion of the respondent's product is sold through farm bureaus which, in turn, sell the inoculant to farmers and occasionally to local elevators and other dealers.

PAR. 4. Some of the respondent's customers are competitively engaged in commerce in the resale and distribution of the inoculant product with other of respondent's customers. The farm bureaus compete with retail dealers in selling to the farmers. Customers classified by the respondent as jobbers usually purchase in commerce respondent's inoculant, which they re-sell to consumers at a lower price than do other of respondent's customers competing for the same consumer business but who are classified and sold at retailers' list.

PAR. 5. Said respondent, Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., issued a 1937 Distributor Price List effective January 1, 1937. Respondent has been and now is generally selling his products to its customers at such list prices less 20% off such jobbers' and dealers' lists, said distributor price list being as follows:

Prices F. O. B. Urbana, Illinois. Terms: 2% 10 days, net 30 days. Left over cultures are returnable, prepaid, for credit or exchange. The consumer's price is placed on the labels of the products. In many instances the labels, whether they bear private brand names or the Hansen name, resemble each other having green borders and background of leguminous plants and similar language. The inoculant is the same regardless of the label on the container. Prices to county farm bureaus vary and are frequently as low as 14¢ for the one bushel size.

PAR. 6. County farm bureaus retail the one bushel size frequently for 30¢ having purchased the same at 14¢, or retail the 2½ bushel size at 50¢ where they purchase at 28¢. Competing dealers pay 24¢ for the one bushel size and 48¢ for the 2½ bushel size. County farm bureaus sell to non-members also.

PAR. 7. Said respondent distributes its inoculant by means of traveling salesmen in the States of Iowa, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. Orders obtained by the salesmen are delivered by the respondent and collections are also made by the respondent. Such salesmen work on a commission basis. These salesmen sell at varying prices which are not related to savings in cost of production, sale, or delivery or functions performed by the buyer in the resale of the goods.

PAR. 8. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 5, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to consumers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's inoculant.

PAR. 9. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 5, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to dealers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's inoculant.

PAR. 10. Respondent sells to a certain dealer-jobber the one bushel size humus or jelly for 15¢ under a private brand. The dealer-jobber, in turn, resells and distributes the same in commerce to consumers located in adjoining states for 35¢. The said dealer referred to herein is in competition with other dealer customers of the respondent, who are required to pay 24¢ for the one bushel size of the same inoculant sold under respondent's name. The dealer referred to advertises in commerce that the inoculator "is made for us under our own label, by a reliable manufacturer at Urbana, Illinois" and, as stated in paragraph 5 hereof, the labels are similar regardless of whether they bear the Hansen or private brand name. The differential in price amounts to and is under the circumstances set forth above a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's product, which purchases are for use, consumption and resale within the United States.

PAR. 11. The effect of said discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondent is engaged and in the line of commerce in which its distributors are engaged; and the effect of said discriminations may be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with the respondent and with certain favored distributors and with customers of such favored distributors.

PAR. 12. The costs of growing, selling, and delivery are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, largely due to the practice of accepting the return of goods unsold, which returned goods are then practically valueless.

PAR. 13. The discriminations in price set forth above do not make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodity is to such purchasers sold or delivered. That such price differentials were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as set out in paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 hereof are in violation of Section 2 (a) of said Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, section 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings and conclusion are hereby made a part hereof, that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of commercial inoculant in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from the unlawful discriminations in price found in paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 of the aforesaid findings as to the facts and conclusion.

Order

It is further ordered, That the said respondent, Hansen Inoculator Company, Inc., within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3265. Complaint, Nov. 10, 1937—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938

Where a firm engaged in sale and distribution of bacteria inoculation for leguminous plants, as members of the commercial legume inoculant industry, and, as such, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants, costs of growing, selling, and delivering which are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, and in selling, as thus engaged, its said products to customers, of whom some were competitively engaged in resale and distribution of its said products with other customers, and whom it classified as consumers, retailers, and jobbers, and who included farm bureaus as purchasers of large portion of its product for resale, in competition with retailers, to farmers, and, occasionally, to local elevators and other dealers, and of whom its distributor "jobbers" generally sold both to consumers and to dealers—

- (a) Discriminated in price, through sale to customers at prices based on, and varying in accordance with, aforesaid classification, and involving price differentials which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from different methods or quantities in which commodity in question was to such purchasers sold or delivered, and were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for, or marketability of, the goods concerned, and which constituted discrimination, respectively, as to customers competitively engaged in resale of inoculant of like grade and quality to consumers, and as to customers competitively engaged in resale of such products to dealers; and
- (b) Discriminated in price, through sale to county farm bureaus at price basis under which they frequently retailed at lower price than that of small independent merchant, and through practice under which postage, absorbed in case of some customers, was required to be paid in case of others, and through concession to meet, as asserted, competition of farm bureau, extended to one, but not another, and thereby imposed price differential and discrimination which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, etc., as above set forth, and were not in response to changing conditions, etc., as hereinbefore described;

With result that the effect of said discrimination in price might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which it was engaged, and that in which its distributors were engaged, and might be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with it and with certain favored distributors and customers thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices constituted a violation of the provisions of Subsec. (a) of Sec. 2 of an act of Congress approved Oct. 15, 1914, as amended.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Albert L. Whiting and Lucille W. Whiting, individuals trading under the firm name and style of "The Urbana Laboratories," hereinafter called respondents, since June 19, 1936, have been and are now violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Albert L. Whiting and Lucille D. Whiting, trading under the firm style and name "The Urbana Laboratories," a partnership, have their principal office and place of business at 406 North Lincoln Avenue, Urbana, Ill.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business the respondents have been and are now developing and manufacturing said bacteria at their place of business in the State of Illinois and have been and are now, in direct active competition with other persons, partnerships and corporations similarly engaged, selling, shipping, and distributing said bacteria in commerce from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Illinois and the several other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, there has been and is now between respondents and purchasers of said bacteria a PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of their business described in paragraph 2 hereof and while engaged in trade and commerce between the State of Illinois and the other States of the United States and the District of Columbia as therein described, the respondents have been and are now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between different purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality sold and shipped in commerce, as aforesaid, by respondents to said purchasers and by them purchased from respondents in commerce for use, consumption, or resale within the State of Illinois and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, in that the respondents have been and are now selling bacteria to some of said purchasers at prices lower than the prices at which respondents have been and are now selling bacteria of like grade and quality to other of said purchasers, and the respondents have been and are now allowing to some of said purchasers a larger discount from the prices at which bacteria was and is sold to them by respondents than the discount, if any, which respondents have been and are now allowing to other purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality purchased from respondents at the same prices.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, many purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondents receiving the benefit of the aforesaid discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as favored customers, have been and are now in substantial competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, and distribution of said bacteria with many other purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondents not receiving the benefit of said discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as disfavored customers, and many customers of said favored customers have been and are now in like competition with many customers of said disfavored customers, and the effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale or distribution of said bacteria or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, or distribution of said bacteria between and among said favored customers and said disfavored customers and between and among the customers of said favored customers and the customers of said disfavored customers and between and among the respondents and other persons, partnerships and corporations similarly engaged in the sale and distribution of commercial inoculants.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the above-mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on November 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Albert L. Whiting and Lucille D. Whiting, trading under the firm style and name "The Urbana Laboratories," a partnership charging them with discriminating in price between different purchasers of inoculants in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the aforesaid act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs, and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and the conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondents, Albert L. Whiting and Lucille D. Whiting, trading under the firm style and name "The Urbana Laboratories," a partnership and maintaining their principal office and plant at 406 North Lincoln Avenue, Urbana, Ill. At all times herein mentioned, said respondents have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing bacteria inoculation for the seeds of leguminous plants to customers located in the several States of the United States, more particularly to customers in the States located between Ohio, on the East, and Kansas, on the West, and North and South the width of the country, and there has been and is now a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Illinois and the several States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Said respondents are members of the commercial legume inoculant industry of the United States which grows, sells, and distributes commercial inoculants to the value of approximately $1,000,000 in gross annual sales. There are approximately fourteen members of this industry, all competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants. The bacteria are grown for the inoculation of seeds of leguminous plants. The bacteria are encouraged to multiply from various strains and are then placed in a carrier, which is either a jelly or a humus medium such as peat or charcoal, for commercial distribution. Seeds of leguminous plants are saturated with the bacteria before planting. These bacteria have the function of associating with legume plants, with the result that an adequate number of bacterial nodules are formed on the roots of the plants to extract nitrogen from the air for the purpose of aiding luxuriant growth of the plant. Principally these inoculants are placed upon alfalfa and sweet clover seeds, soy beans, peas, and other legumes.

PAR. 3. Said respondents classify their customers as consumers, retail dealers and jobbers. One who sells to consumers is considered to be a retail dealer and one who sells to dealers a jobber. However, in this industry there are very few distributors who sell only as dealers or jobbers. Generally distributors called jobbers sell both to consumers and to dealers. Additionally a large portion of respondents' product is sold through farm bureaus which, in turn, sell the inoculant to farmers and occasionally to local elevators and other dealers.

PAR. 4. Some of respondents' customers are competitively engaged in commerce in the resale and distribution of the inoculant product with certain other of respondents' customers. The farm bureaus compete with retail dealers in selling to the farmers.

PAR. 5. Said respondents issued a 1937 dealer price list, effective January 1, 1937. Respondents have and are generally selling their products to their customers at such list prices, said price list being as follows:

The consumer's price is placed on the labels of the products. Prices to certain county farm bureaus vary and are frequently as low as 17¢ for the one-bushel size which is sold to many dealers for 30¢ and to a number for 20¢. County farm bureaus retail the one-bushel size frequently at a lower price than small independent merchants, having purchased the one-bushel size at from 17¢ to 20¢ or the 2½-bushel size at from 34¢ to 40¢. A typical competitive situation disclosed one dealer selling at 50¢ and purchasing the one-bushel size at 30¢. A competing dealer likewise sold at 50¢ and likewise purchased at 30¢ but had the postage paid. Another dealer, competing with the first-named, sells at 40¢ but buys at 20¢ and states that his lower price is made to meet competition created by the county farm bureau. Many county farm bureaus sell to nonmembers also. These county farm bureaus are direct competitors of independent retail merchants buying at higher prices. Where, in fact, jobbing services are rendered by State or county farm bureaus, nothing herein contained shall preclude jobber prices on that portion which is jobbed.

PAR. 6. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 5, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to consumers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondents' inoculant.

PAR. 7. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 5, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to dealers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondents' inoculant.

PAR. 8. The effect of said discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondents are engaged and in the line of commerce in which their distributors are engaged; and the effect of said discrimination may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with the respondents and with certain favored distributors and with customers of such favored distributors.

PAR. 9. The costs of growing, selling, and delivery are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, largely due to the practice of accepting the return of goods unsold, which returned goods are then practically valueless.

PAR. 10. The discriminations in price set forth above do not make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodity is to such purchasers sold or delivered. That such price differentials were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraphs 6 and 7 hereof, are in violation of Section 2 (a) of said Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. Title 15, Section 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the respondents admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and

waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings and conclusion are hereby made a part hereof, that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Albert L. Whiting and Lucille D. Whiting, trading under the firm style and name "The Urbana Laboratories," a partnership, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of commercial inoculant in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from the unlawful discriminations in price found in paragraphs 6 and 7 of the aforesaid findings as to the facts and conclusion.

It is further ordered, That the said respondents, Albert L. Whiting and Lucille D. Whiting, trading under the firm style and name "The Urbana Laboratories," a partnership, within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1938

Docket 3266. Complaint, Nov. 10, 1937—Decision, Jan. 12, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in the development of nitrogen fixing bacteria and in the sale and distribution of such inoculants, costs of growing, selling, and delivering which are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, in competition with others engaged as members of the commercial legume inoculant industry, to customers whom it classified as consumers, retailers, and jobbers, but who included, as purchasers of a large portion and of a considerable portion of its product, respectively, county farm bureaus reselling to farmers and occasionally to local elevators and other dealers, and mail order catalog houses reselling to consumers, and of whom farm bureaus competed with retailers in sale of its said product to farmers, jobbers resold to consumers at lower price than did other competitor-customers classified and sold to as retailers, and mail order houses competed with retailer-dealers in sale to farmers, and of which customers, specially favored county farm bureaus competed generally with both jobbers and retailers, and certain similarly favored jobbers were enabled to sell to such bureaus at jobbers' prices—

- (a) Discriminated in prices through sale to its said customers at prices based on, and varying in accordance with, aforesaid classifications, and through according some, but not all, mail order houses, ordinarily sold at jobbers' prices, twenty percent off list, and some, but not all, jobbers, similar concession, and through according jobber prices to retailers purchasing $100 or more yearly; and
- (b) Discriminated in prices through according twenty percent off list, denied to certain competitor jobbers, to certain county farm bureaus purchasing at jobbers' prices and selling, in some instances, to jobbers, retailers, and consumers, and in competition generally with both aforesaid distributive classes, and through according aforesaid twenty percent concession from jobbers' price to favored jobber customers, thereby enabled to sell at jobber prices to county farm bureaus, and through granting of such prices to certain retailers above noted, an additional twenty percent concession from jobbers' list to some, but not all, mail order houses;

With result that effect of said discriminations in price and price differentials, which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from different methods or quantities in which such commodity was to such purchasers sold or delivered, and were not in response to changing conditions affecting market for, or marketability of, goods concerned, might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create monopoly in line of commerce in which its distributors were engaged, and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with it and with certain favored distributors and customers of such distributors;

Held, That such acts and practices constituted a violation of the provisions of Subsec. (a) of Sec. 2 of an Act of Congress approved Oct. 15, 1914, as amended.

Mr. A. W. DeBirny for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Nitragin Company, Inc., hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and is now violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Wisconsin and has its principal office and place of business at 3747 North Booth Street in the city of Milwaukee, Wis.

PAR. 2. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, respondent has been and is now engaged in the business of developing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing certain nitrogen-fixing bacteria, which is a commodity commonly known as a commercial inoculant and is useful in promoting the growth of leguminous plants and crops. In the course and conduct of its said business the respondent has been and is now developing and manufacturing said bacteria at its place of business in the State of Wisconsin and has been and is now, in direct active competition with other persons, partnerships and corporations similarly engaged, selling, shipping, and distributing said bacteria in commerce from its said place of business in the State of Wisconsin to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Wisconsin and the several other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. For many years prior hereto and since June 19, 1936, there has been and is now between respondent and purchasers of said bacteria a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Wisconsin and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of its business described in paragraph 2 hereof and while engaged in trade and commerce between the State of Wisconsin and the other States of the United States and the District of Columbia as therein described, the respondent has been and is now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between different purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality sold and shipped in commerce, as aforesaid, by respondent to said purchasers and by them purchased from respondent in commerce for use, consumption, or resale within the State of Wisconsin and the several other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, in that the respondent has been and is now selling bacteria to some of said purchasers at prices lower than the prices at which respondent has been and is now selling bacteria of like grade and quality to other of said purchasers, and the respondent has been and is now allowing to some of said purchasers a larger discount from the prices at which bacteria was and is sold to them by respondent than the discount, if any, which respondent has been and is now allowing to other purchasers of bacteria of like grade and quality purchased from respondent at the same prices.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, many purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent receiving the benefit of the aforesaid discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as favored customers, have been and are now in substantial competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, and distribution of said bacteria with many other purchasers of bacteria and customers of respondent not receiving the benefit of said discriminations in price, hereinafter referred to as disfavored customers, and many customers of said favored customers have been and are now in like competition with many customers of said disfavored customers, and the effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale or distribution of said bacteria or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the use, consumption, sale, resale, or distribution of said bacteria between and among said favored customers and said disfavored customers and between and among the customers of said favored customers and the customers of said disfavored customers and between and among the respondent and other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged in the sale and distribution of commercial inoculants.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the above-mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved

October 15, 1914 (Public No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15 sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (Public No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on November 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, The Nitragin Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with discriminating in price between different purchasers of inoculants in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the aforesaid act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs, and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Said corporate respondent, The Nitragin Company, Inc., now is, and at all times since June 19, 1936, has been a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Wisconsin, with its principal office and plant located at 3747 North Booth Street, Milwaukee, Wis. At all times herein mentioned, said respondent has been engaged in the business of developing, selling, and distributing certain nitrogen fixing bacteria, useful for inoculating the seeds of leguminous plants, from its said place of business in the State of Wisconsin to various purchasers of said bacteria located in the State of Wisconsin and the several States of the United States and there has been and is now between respondent and purchasers of said bacteria a course of trade and commerce in said bacteria in and between the State of Wisconsin and the several States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondent is the largest member of the commercial legume inoculant industry of the United States which industry grows, sells and distributes commercial inoculants to the value of approximately $1,000,000 in gross annual sales. There are approximately fourteen members of this industry, all competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution in commerce of commercial inoculants. The bacteria are grown for the inoculation of seeds of leguminous plants. The bacteria are encouraged to multiply from various strains and are then placed in a carrier, which is either a jelly or a humus medium such as peat or charcoal, for commercial distribution. Seeds of leguminous plants are saturated with the bacteria before planting. These bacteria have the function of associating with legume plants, with the result that an adequate number of bacterial nodules are formed on the roots of the plants to extract nitrogen from the air for the purpose of aiding luxuriant growth of the plant. Principally these inoculants are placed upon alfalfa and sweet clover seeds, soy beans, peas and other legumes.

PAR. 3. Said respondent classifies its customers as consumers, retail dealers and jobbers. One who sells to consumers is considered to be a retail dealer and one who sells to dealers a jobber. However, in this industry there are very few distributors who sell only as dealers or jobbers. Generally distributors called jobbers sell both to consumers and to dealers. Additionally a large portion of the respondent's product is sold through county farm bureaus which, in turn, sell the inoculants to farmers and occasionally to local elevators and other dealers. A considerable portion of the respondent's product is also sold to mail order catalog houses who resell to consumers.

PAR. 4. Some of respondent's customers are competitively engaged in commerce in the resale and distribution of the inoculant product with other of respondent's customers. The farm bureaus compete with retail dealers in selling to the farmers. Customers classified by the respondent as jobbers usually purchase in commerce respondent's inoculant, which they resell to consumers at a lower price than do other of respondent's customers competing for the same consumer business but who are classified and sold at retailers' list. Mail order catalog houses compete with retail dealers in selling to farmers.

PAR. 5. Said respondent, The Nitragin Company, Inc., issued a 1937 Distributor Price List effective January 1, 1937. Respondent has been and now is generally selling its products to its customers at such list prices. However, some mail order catalog houses and some jobbers also receive an additional 20% off jobbers' list price, said distributors' price list being as follows:

The consumer's price is placed on the labels of the products. The inoculant, whether distributed under private label or under the producer's label is of like grade and quality. Prices to county farm bureaus vary but are generally jobbers' prices and in some instances an additional 20% off the jobbers' price is allowed.

PAR. 6. County farm bureaus purchasing at jobbers' price less 20% sell in some instances to jobbers, retailers and consumers and are generally in competition with both jobbers and retailers. Certain of these competing jobbers do not receive the 20% additional discount and thus competition with the county farm bureaus, receiving the additional 20% in addition to the jobbers, discount, is practically impossible. County farm bureaus sell in competition with independent retailers to non-members as well as to their own members.

PAR. 7. Certain jobbers receiving the jobbers' price less the additional 20% sell to county farm bureaus at jobbers' prices whereas other customers not receiving the 20% additional allowance are prevented from doing so.

PAR. 8. The respondent sells to retailers who purchase $100 or more in a year at jobbers' prices. Mail order catalog houses buy at jobbers' prices and some but not all receive an additional 20% off such jobbers' list.

PAR. 9. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 3, 6, and 8, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to consumers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's inoculant.

PAR. 10. The difference in prices, resulting from the said classifications as set forth in paragraphs 6, 7, and 8, of inoculant of like grade and quality to customers competitively engaged in reselling the same to dealers is, as to that portion of such inoculant under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, a discrimination in price in commerce between purchasers of respondent's inoculant.

PAR. 11. The effect of said discriminations in price may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which its distributors are engaged; and the effect of said discriminations may be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with the respondent and with certain favored distributors and with customers of such favored distributors.

PAR. 12. The costs of growing, selling, and delivery are generally not substantially affected by quantity purchases, largely due to the practice of accepting the return of goods unsold, which returned goods are then practically valueless.

PAR. 13. The discriminations in price set forth above do not make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodity is to such purchasers sold or delivered. That such price differentials were not in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as set out in paragraphs 9 and 10 hereof are in violation of Section 2 (a) of said Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. Title 15, Section 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings and conclusion are hereby made a part hereof, that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Nitragin Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of commercial inoculant in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from the unlawful discriminations in price found in paragraphs 9 and 10 of the aforesaid findings as to the facts and conclusion.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent, The Nitragin Company, Inc., within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 1857. Complaint, Feb. 25, 1937¹—Decision, Jan. 13, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of women's and men's hosiery, clocks, cameras, fountain pens, radios, toys, novelties, and other articles—

- (a) Furnished, along with instructions for agent or operator, various devices and plans of merchandising involving variety of punchboards, push cards or similar devices for retailer's or operator's use in selling and delivering to purchasing public its said products, under schemes by which chance purchaser received more costly article, or nothing further, dependent upon success or failure in selection of right number or name, and paid, in accordance with particular plan, fixed, or varying, amount, dependent upon number secured; operators were compensated by receipt of article; and makers of last punch or push were, in some cases, also awarded prize thereof; and thereby supplied to and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of its said merchandise, with knowledge and intent that such various plans were and would be used in such distribution to public by lot or chance and in competition with many who are opposed to use of punchboards, push cards and other devices in sale and distribution of their merchandise, and, as contrary to public policy, refrain from furnishing the same;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise similar to or identical with that thus dealt in by it were attracted by said methods and element of chance involved in sale thereof as aforesaid, and were thereby induced to buy, sell or distribute its said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods, and trade was thereby diverted to it from them, to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and there was a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of sale and legitimate competition; and

- (b) Represented and caused to be represented, through firm name word "Manufacturing," that it was manufacturer of some or all of merchandise sold and distributed by it, notwithstanding fact it neither owned, controlled, nor operated any factory whatsoever and did not make any merchandise sold by it;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many customers into erroneous belief that it made some or all of such merchandise, and that persons dealing with it were buying directly from the manufacturer and thereby eliminating profits of middlemen and obtaining advantages not had by those buying from such persons, and of diverting trade to it from others, and those who do not falsely represent that they manufacture their said products; and

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasing public and prospective sales agents, and inducing them to become its agents or representatives or to distribute its said merchandise, and of diverting trade to it from others selling similar products who do not make such claims or representations:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, The Federal Trade Commission did heretofore, to wit, on July 11, 1930, issue its complaint herein, charging and alleging that respondent had been guilty of unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes"; and

Whereas, This Commission, having reason to believe that respondent herein has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint as aforesaid, and it appearing to said Commission that a further proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest;

Now, therefore, Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of the Act aforesaid, the Federal Trade Commission charges that the K & S Sales Company, a corporation, in its own name and right, and also trading under the names and styles of Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, Garden City Novelty Company, and Montrose Silk Company, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 4329 East Ravenswood Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent advertises, offers for sale, and sells its merchandise, hereinafter referred to, under its own corporate name and also advertises, offers for sale, and sells its merchandise under the trade names and styles of Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, Garden City Novelty Company, and Montrose Silk Company. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in selling various articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes said merchandise when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois into and through other States of the United States and the District of Columbia to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the sale and distribution of its said merchandise or products, said respondent has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of punchboards, push cards, or fortune boards, or other similar devices, the method or use of which by retail dealers or individuals in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondent's said merchandise or products was and is substantially as follows:

(a) Said punchboards consist of boards of various shapes and sizes with from 100 to 4,000 holes. Into each of the holes has been inserted a small slip of paper bearing a printed number, the printed slips bearing consecutive numbers according to the number of holes contained in the board but not arranged in numerical sequence, and said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboards that they cannot be seen by the customer except when they are punched from the board. The punchboards bear legends indicating the numbers which entitle the purchasing public to an article of merchandise or prize, and in some cases the last punch in each board receives a prize. Customers pay 5¢ to 10¢ for each punch from the board, and the purchasers of punches who receive numbers calling for an article of merchandise receive such article, and purchasers who receive numbers other than those enumerated on the board, or who do not qualify by purchasing the last punch on the boards receive nothing for their money. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board, and the combined value of the articles of merchandise is much less than the cost of the total punches on the board.

(b) The push cards have a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. There are as many separate numbers as there are disks on the board, but the numbers are varied or assorted and are not arranged in numerical sequence. The numbers on said disks are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a selection has been made and the disk selected separated from the card. The price of sales varies, but on some of the cards the price which customers pay ranges from 1¢ to 29¢, depending upon the number obtained. Numbers from 1 to 29 pay the amount of the number in cents; numbers over 29 pay 29¢. The push card bears statements or legends informing the customers and prospective customer that certain numbers entitle the purchaser obtaining the same to certain specified merchandise. Purchasers of pushes who receive one of the specified numbers receive the articles of merchandise as described in said statements or legends. Purchasers who do not receive one of the specified numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a disk from said card. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card.

(c) Other push cards have a number of girls' names immediately above the partially perforated disks, and when all the disks have been separated from the push card a master seal on said card is removed exposing a girl's name similar to one of those mentioned on said card, and the purchaser who pushed the disk under that name is entitled to the article of merchandise specified. On still other push cards certain specified numbers are free, and the winner is ascertained after all the pushes have been purchased by removing a master seal and disclosing a legend. On some of the push cards the purchasers pay from 1¢ to 35¢, depending upon the number pushed out; numbers under 35 pay the amount of the number in cents; and numbers over 35 pay 35¢.

The said punchboards, push cards and fortune boards vary in detail but involve substantially the same features as the above plans and lottery schemes.

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

Respondent furnishes retail dealers and individuals with various display posters, advertisements and printed instructions, to be used by such merchants and individuals in distributing and using said punchboards, push cards and fortune boards.

The merchandise sold and distributed by respondent includes, among other things, radio receiving sets, clocks, hosiery, portable mixers, sandwich toasters, roasting ovens, washing machines, pocket knives, razors, fountain pens, automatic pencils, pen and pencil sets, jewelry, pipes and other smokers' accessories, flashlights, cigarette cases, ladies' compacts, beaded bags, manicure sets, toilet sets, and various other articles of merchandise.

The purchasing public is induced and persuaded into purchasing punches from said boards and cards in the hope that they may obtain one of the prize-winning numbers and thus obtain one of the prizes called for by said numbers. Merchandise of the respondent is thus distributed to purchasers of the punches from the boards and cards wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid retail dealers of respondent expose said articles of merchandise in connection with the aforesaid punchboards, push cards or fortune boards, and sell punches, pushes or fortune slips to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid plans, whereby the said merchandise of the respondent is distributed to the purchasers of punches, pushes or fortune slips from the said boards or cards wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent forwards its push cards to individuals who sell pushes from said cards and deliver to the successful purchasers the merchandise to which they are entitled, in accordance with the sales plans hereinbefore described.

Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof.

The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its merchandise, and the sale of its merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make or sell merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert trade and custom to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of respondent's merchandise are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and trade is thereby diverted to respondent, from its said competitors.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to its customers and prospective customers, by use of the firm name and style of Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company and by others means, that it is the manufacturer of the merchandise which it sells and distributes. A substantial portion of the purchasing public have expressed, and have, a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased, such purchasers believing that they secure lower prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from a selling agency or middleman.

The use by respondent of said representation that it is a manufacturer has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is a business concern which controls and operates a factory in which the merchandise sold by respondent is manufactured, and that persons dealing with respondent are buying said merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middleman and obtaining various advantages that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture any merchandise sold by it. There are many competitors of respondent who do not falsely represent that they manufacture the merchandise sold by them. The use of said representation by respondent has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors.

Complaint

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, containing, among others, statements and representations of which the following are typical illustrations:

(a) (PICTURE OF A CLOCK) GIVEN AWAY! You get one—Your friends get one—without cost. Let us give you the details of this amazing Time Teller. Also it can pay you big money giving it away free. Nothing to buy or sell! Write fast.

GARDEN CITY NOVELTY CO.

4344-B Ravenswood Ave.,

The respondent inserted and caused to be published these advertisements in newspapers, magazines and other periodicals of general circulation with the intent and knowledge that the advertising would be displayed before and read by the public. The advertisements referred to above are false and misleading, in that: the clocks are not given away; persons answering the advertisement do not receive one without cost; their friends do not receive one without cost; respondent does not pay big money for giving them away free; respondent requires persons receiving clocks to sell chances on push cards, or to render other services, or to pay cash for the said clocks; it is necessary for somebody to buy or sell something before the clocks are delivered.

Each and all of the foregoing false, misleading, and exaggerated claims and representations hereinabove set out have and have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public and prospective sales agents into the belief that they are true, and to induce them to purchase the clocks of respondent or become agents of the respondent in such belief, and to unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who do not make such false, misleading or exaggerated claims, statements or representations concerning the products sold or offered for sale by such competitors.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors. Said methods, acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, on July 11, 1930, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent K & S Sales Company, a corporation. Thereafter on February 25, 1937, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served an amended and supplemental complaint upon the respondent, K & S Sales Company, a corporation, in its own name and right and trading under the names and styles of Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, Garden City Novelty Company, and Montrose Silk Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said amended and supplemental complaint and the filing of respondent’s answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. In addition to said testimony and other evidence, a stipulation as to certain facts was entered into between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, and John A. Nash, counsel for the respondent.

Said testimony and other evidence and stipulation were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said amended and supplemental complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, stipulation of counsel, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel for the Commission and for the respondent; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, K & S Sales Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 4329

East Ravenswood Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. The respondent does business in its own name and right and also uses the trade names and styles, Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, Garden City Novelty Company, and Montrose Silk Company. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in advertising, offering for sale, and selling various articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes its said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The merchandise so sold and distributed by respondent includes ladies' and men's hosiery, locks, cameras, fountain pen desk sets, radios, food mixers, toastmaster and hospitality trays, roastmasters, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, watches, cigarette lighters, penknives, hunting knives, ladies' vanity cases, opera and field glasses, military brush sets, pipes, air rifles and toys, and novelties as well as various other articles of merchandise. In so carrying on said business respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise, or in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 above, respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes in distributing said merchandise to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of punchboards, push cards, or fortune boards, or other similar devices, the use of which by retail dealers or individuals in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondent's said merchandise or products was, and is, substantially as follows:

contained in the board but not arranged in numerical sequence, and said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboards that they cannot be seen by the customer except when they are punched from the board. The punchboards bear legends indicating the numbers which entitle the purchasing public to an article of merchandise or prize, and in some cases the last punch in each board receives a prize. Customers pay 5¢ or 10¢ for each punch from the board, and the purchasers of punches who receive numbers calling for an article of merchandise receive such article, and purchasers who receive numbers other than those enumerated on the board, or who do not qualify by purchasing the last punch on the board, receive nothing for their money. The said articles or merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board, and the combined value of the articles of merchandise is much less than the cost of the total punches on the board.

(b) The push cards have a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. There are as many separate numbers as there are disks on the board, but the numbers are varied or assorted and are not arranged in numerical sequence. The numbers on said disks are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a selection has been made and the disk selected separated from the card. The price of sales varies, but on some of the cards the price which customers pay ranges from 1¢ to 29¢ depending upon the number obtained. Numbers from 1 to 29 pay the amount of the number in cents; numbers over 29 pay 29¢. The push card bears statements or legends informing the customers and prospective customers that certain numbers entitle the purchasers obtaining the same to certain specified merchandise. Purchasers of pushes who receive one of the specified numbers receive the articles of merchandise as described in said statements or legends without additional cost. Purchasers who do not receive one of the specified numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a disk from said card. The said articles of merchandise vary in value but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card.

Other push cards have a number of girls' names immediately above the partially perforated disks, and when all the disks have been separated from the push card a master seal on said card is removed exposing a girl's name similar to one of those mentioned on said card, and the purchaser who pushes the disk under that name is entitled to the article of merchandise specified without additional cost. On still other push cards certain specified numbers are free, and the winner is ascertained after all the pushes have been purchased by removing a master seal and disclosing a legend. On some of the push cards the purchasers pay from 1¢ to 35¢, depending upon the number pushed out; numbers under 35 pay the amount of the number in cents; and numbers over 35 pay 35¢. The said punchboards, push cards and fortune boards vary in detail but all involve substantially the same features as the above plans and lottery schemes. In all of the aforesaid plans the person who receives the article of merchandise is selected wholly by lot or chance and makes no additional payment, while the other purchasers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch.

PAR. 3. Respondent furnishes its customers and prospective customers with various display posters, advertisements, and printed instructions to be used in distributing and using said punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, and other devices in connection with the sale and distribution of the aforesaid merchandise. On one of the said printed instruction circulars, there are, among other things, the following printed legends, to wit:

HOW TO OBTAIN YOUR MODERNE ROTARY CLOCK

This card consists of 32 girls' names—beneath each name is a concealed number which shows the amount the person selecting that particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity.

These concealed numbers range from No. 1 to No. 52 but your customers pay only 1¢ to 29¢, according to the number disclosed under the disc punched. For instance, if customer punches 1 he pays 1¢. If 10 is punched, he donates 10¢, or if 50 is punched, he pays only 29¢. NOTHING HIGHER THAN 29¢—29¢ is maximum cost. (Total $3.60.)

When all names have been punched and collections made, you then remove the large seals and disclose the winners—the persons who punched the corresponding name received One (1) Moderne Rotary Clock, valued at $5.00.

And, for your efforts, you also receive one Moderne ROTARY CLOCK.

Upon receipt of your order (see other side) with the $3.60 remittance, (or we will ship C. O. D., F. O. B. Chicago) we immediately ship you Three (3) Moderne Rotary Clocks, Two (2) of which may be given the holders of the names under the large seals—the other may be retained by you.

Isn't this an easy way to obtain a clock valued at $5.00? Nothing hard about this—nothing complicated—you merely show the clock or illustration to your friends, neighbors, coworkers in the office, shop, etc. They will all want it.

This material is sent you absolutely free for your use if you wish. It can be used with any merchandise. If you desire to purchase from us, you can do so at any time.

NOTE—Write purchaser's name opposite the girls name he selects and then remove disc by pushing with pencil or any pointed object.

Don't forget the surprise gift—send your order and remittance within 15 days and the FREE gift will certainly SURPRISE you.

As stated above, the other devices which respondent furnishes are identical in principle but vary in detail. The members of the public to whom respondent furnishes its said devices and literature use the same in the manner suggested by respondent thereby distributing respondent's merchandise to others and procuring respondent's merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondent's merchandise through the use of, or by means of, said punchboards, push cards, or other devices constitutes the operation of lottery games of chance or gift enterprises, and the respondent, in furnishing said punchboards, push cards, or other devices, puts in the hands of others the means of conducting lottery games of chance or gift enterprises in the distribution of its merchandise.

PAR. 4. The respondent, in furnishing said punchboards, push cards, and other devices, has knowledge that the said devices are, and have been, used in distributing its merchandise and furnishes said punchboards, push cards, and other devices so that its merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 5. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondent who do not furnish punchboards, push cards, or devices similar to those furnished by respondent, and who do not furnish any devices by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondent who are opposed to the use of punchboards, push cards, and other devices in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondent were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said punchboards, push cards, and other devices, injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondent from its said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said punchboards, push cards, or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from its said competitors, and is a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of sale and legitimate competition.

PAR. 6. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, merchandise similar to or identical with respondent's merchandise are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy, sell, or distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and trade is thereby diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 7. As stated previously in these findings, the respondent sells its merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and while the annual volume of respondent's business was not shown exactly, an official of the respondent testified, and the Commission finds that approximately 150,000 push cards were distributed for the distribution of ladies' and men's silk hosiery and that sales of such hosiery were in excess of $15,000; that during the period of about one year immediately preceding the hearings in this case, the respondent distributed approximately 1,000,000 push cards for the distribution of one type of clock; and that it distributed approximately 100,000 push cards for the distribution of one of its cameras. And, further, that in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by push cards, the respondent during the period from March until October, 1936, both months inclusive, distributed approximately 1,500,000 push cards. The Commission also finds that its sale of merchandise by means of punchboards and other devices is, and has been, substantial.

PAR. 8. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise as described in paragraph 1 hereof, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 9. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has caused, and causes, the representation to be made to its customers and prospective customers by the use of the firm name and style, Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, that it is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise which it sells and distributes, which representation is false and misleading for the reason that the respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture any merchandise sold by it.

The Commission further finds that a considerable number of the purchasing public has a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased believing that they secure lower prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from a selling agency or middleman. The use by respondent of said representation that it is a manufacturer has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers into the erroneous belief that respondent manufactures some or all of the merchandise sold by it and that persons dealing with the respondent are buying said merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. There are persons, firms, and corporations selling merchandise similar to the merchandise sold and distributed by respondent who do not falsely represent that they manufacture the merchandise sold by them. The use by respondent of the representation that it is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise sold and distributed by it has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade to respondent from other persons, firms, and corporations, selling similar merchandise.

PAR. 10. In the course and conduct of its business respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States containing among other statements and representations of which the following are typical illustrations:

(b) (PICTURE OF A CLOCK) GIVEN AWAY You get one—Your friends get one—without cost. Let us give you the details of this amazing Time Teller. Also it can pay you big money giving it away free. Nothing to buy or sell! Write fast.

The clocks referred to in said advertisements are not given away. Persons answering the advertisement do not receive one without cost, and friends of persons answering said advertisements do not receive one without cost. Respondent does not pay big money for giving away said clocks free, the facts being that respondent requires persons receiving clocks to forward money in payment therefor. The said clocks are distributed by means of push cards heretofore described in these findings, the said clocks thus being distributed by lot or chance to a purchaser of such a chance from said push cards and the person or agent of the respondent who sells the said chances receiving a clock for their services.

Such false, misleading, and exaggerated advertisements and representations have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public and prospective sales agents and induce such persons to become agents or representatives of the respondent or to distribute respondent's merchandise. Such claims and representations have the capacity and tendency to, and do, divert trade to respondent from others selling similar merchandise who do not make such claims or representations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, K & S Sales Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said amended and supplemental complaint and in opposition thereto, stipulation of counsel as to certain facts, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Henry C. Lank, counsel for the Commission, and by John A. Nash, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, K & S Sales Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards, punchboards, or similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise;

2. Mailing, shipping or transporting to the members of the public or to dealers push cards, punchboards, or similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons or dealers by the use thereof to sell or distribute merchandise being offered for sale and sold by respondent;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of various articles of merchandise by the use of push cards, punchboards, or similar devices;

Order

4. Representing by the use of the firm name, Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, or otherwise, that it is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise which it sells and distributes;

5. Representing directly or indirectly by the use of advertisements in magazines and periodicals or otherwise that the merchandise which it sells or distributes is given away or may be obtained free of charge.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, K & S Sales Company, a corporation in its own name and right, and trading under the names and styles of Garden City Novelty Manufacturing Company, Garden City Novelty Company, and Montrose Silk Company, shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

AND TRADING AS GELLMAN BROTHERS

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 1880. Complaint, Nov. 28, 1930—Decision, Jan. 13, 1938

Where a firm engaged in sale and distribution of hunting knives, clocks, wrist watches, compacts, cameras and various other articles of merchandise—
Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising involving variety of punchboards, push cards, or similar devices for retailer's or operator's use in selling and delivering to purchasing public its said products, under schemes by which chance purchaser received more costly article, or nothing further, dependent upon success or failure in selection of right number, and paid, in accordance with particular plan, fixed, or varying, amount, or nothing, dependent upon particular number secured; and thereby put in hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of their merchandise, with knowledge and intent that such devices were and would be used in such distribution to public by lot or chance by retail dealers and other vendees of their said products, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are opposed to use of such devices in sale and distribution of their merchandise, and refrain from furnishing the same;

With result that sale of merchandise by means of said devices by competitors was injuriously affected, and trade was diverted to them from competitors by reason of furnishing the same, to their prejudice and injury and that of public, and there was a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition:

COMPLAINT

Acting in the public interest, pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, individually and as copartners trading as Gellman Brothers, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, are copartners doing business under the firm name and style of Gellman Brothers, and have their principal office and place of business located in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota. They are now and for more than four years last past have been engaged in selling various articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. They cause said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Minnesota into and through other States of the United States to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Minnesota. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are engaged in competition with other corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof the respondents have been and are now soliciting the sale of, and selling and transporting in commerce to retail dealers in various States of the United States certain articles of merchandise, and in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise or products said respondents have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involves the operation of gift enterprises and/or lottery schemes, and a distribution of such merchandise or products to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans consist of a variety of punchboards, push cards or fortune boards, and other similar devices, the method or use of which by retail dealers in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondents' said merchandise or products was and is substantially as follows:

Said punchboards consist of boards of various shapes and sizes, with from one hundred to four thousand holes. Into each of the holes has been inserted a small slip of paper bearing a printed number, the printed slips bearing consecutive numbers according to the number of holes contained in the board, and said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboard that they cannot be seen by the customer except when they are punched from the board. The punchboards bear legends indicating the numbers which entitle the purchasing public to an article of merchandise or prize, and in some cases the last punch in each board receives a prize. Every customer pays 5¢ or 10¢ for each punch from the board and the purchasers of punches who receive numbers other than those enumerated on the board, or who do not qualify by purchasing the last punch on the board, receive nothing for their money. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board, and the combined value of the articles of merchandise is much less than the cost of the total punches on the board.

The purchasing public are thus induced and persuaded into purchasing punches from the said boards in the hope that they may obtain one of the prize winning numbers and thus obtain one of the prizes called for by the said numbers. The merchandise of the respondents is thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

The said punchboards also make use of various other plans or schemes for the distribution of merchandise to the consuming public other than that just above described. These various forms or schemes are known and described by the respondents as "Put and Take," "Hit Me—Take Me," "Numbers from 1 to 22, pay what you draw. Numbers over 22 pay 22¢," "New Style 'Double Pay' Merchandise Assortment 5¢ punch pays single on money winners, 10¢ punch pays double on money winners," "Combination Merchandise Assortments. New Three Way Sales Board," "Full Value Every Punch a Winner," "Sweets for your Sweetie. Has special 'money row with 36 additional punches free'," "This year's sales board surprise. 600 free punches (each marked free) with equal chance to win," "Lucky Stops," "Lucky Cash," "Gallop Dominoes," "Game of Hands," "Top the Seven," "Down the Stretch," "Lose and Win," "Movie Stars," "Big Business," "Teapot Dome Oil Gusher," "Rays of Fortune," "Pick your favorite fruit," "Can Can," "Cash Register," "K. O. Vendor," "Odd Ball," "Blond or Brunette," "Kelly Pool," "Batter Up," "Horse Race," "Ace High," and various other titles or schemes.

The punch cards and fortune boards involve substantially the same plan or plans as referred to above.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid retail dealers of the respondents expose said articles of merchandise in connection with the aforesaid punchboards, push cards, or fortune boards, and sell punches, pushes, or fortune cards to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid plans whereby the said merchandise of the respondents is distributed to the purchasers of punches, pushes, or fortune cards from the said boards wholly by lot or chance. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their products in accordance with the respondents' sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The respondents' sales plans as mentioned in paragraphs 2 and 3 thus tend to and do induce many of the consuming public to purchase respondents' said products in preference to the products of respondents' said competitors because of the chance of obtaining one of said articles of merchandise at a price of 5¢ or 10¢, rather than at the normal retail price of the same, which is many times greater than 5¢ or 10¢, or because of the chance of obtaining one of the said articles of merchandise at a price less than its normal retail price by one of the various other plans, schemes or methods described in paragraph 2, and the distribution of said articles of merchandise to the consuming public is determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, are individuals doing business as a copartnership under the firm name and style of Gellman Brothers, and have their principal office and place of business located in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota. They are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from their principal place of business in the State of Minnesota to purchasers thereof in the State of Minnesota and in practically all the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the year 1936 such commerce amounted to approximately $8,000 of sales volume. In so carrying on said business, respondents are and have been engaged in active competition with other partnerships and with corporations and individuals engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In connection with the sale and distribution of such merchandise said respondents have furnished various selling and merchandising devices and plans which involve the operation of gift enterprises, lottery schemes, or games of chance. Said devices or plans consist of a variety of punchboards, push cards, or fortune boards, and other similar devices, the method of use of which by retail dealers in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondents' said merchandise or products was and is substantially as follows:

Said punchboards consist of boards of various shapes and sizes, with from one hundred to four thousand holes. Into each of the holes has been inserted a small slip of paper bearing a printed number, the printed slips bearing consecutive numbers according to the number of holes contained in the board. These numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. Said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboard that they cannot be seen by the customers except when they are punched from the board. The punchboards bear legends indicating the numbers which entitle the purchasing public to an article of merchandise or prize, and in some cases the last punch in each board receives a prize. Each customer pays 5¢ or 10¢ for each punch from the board and the purchasers of punches who receive numbers other than those enumerated on the board or who do not qualify by purchasing the last punch on the board, receive nothing for their money. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board.

The said punchboards also make use of various other plans or schemes for the distribution of merchandise to the consuming public other than that just above described. These various forms or schemes are known and described by the respondents as "Put and Take," "Hit Me—Take Me," "Numbers from 1 to 22, pay what you draw, Numbers over 22 pay 22¢." "New Style 'Double Pay' merchandise assortment 5¢ punch pays single on money winners, 10¢ punch pays double on money winners," "Combination Merchandise Assortments, New Three Way Sales Board," "Full Value Every Punch A Winner," "Sweets for your Sweetie. Has special 'money row with 36 additional purchases free'," "This year's sales board surprise. 600 free punches (each marked free) with equal chance to win," "Lucky Stops," "Lucky Cash," "Galloping Dominoes," "Game of Hands," "Top the Seven," "Down the Stretch," "Lose and Win," "Movie Stars," "Big Business," "Teapot Dome Oil Gusher," "Rays of Fortune," "Pick your favorite fruit," "Can Can," "Cash Register," "K. O. Vender," "Odd Ball," "Blond or Brunette," "Kelly Pool," "Batter Up," "Horse Race," "Ace High," and various other titles or schemes.

The merchandise sold and distributed by respondents included penknives, hunting knives, clocks, wrist watches, novelty smoker sets, cigarette lighters, pipes, ladies' compacts, cameras, and various other articles of merchandise. The said punchboards, push cards and fortune boards vary in detail but all involve substantially the same features as the above plans and lottery schemes. In all of the aforesaid plans the person who receives the article of merchandise is selected wholly by lot or chance and makes no additional payment, while the other purchasers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch.

PAR. 3. The retail dealers and the members of the public to whom respondents sell and distribute their merchandise, together with the punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or other devices, use such devices to distribute respondents' merchandise as described above. The sale and distribution of respondents' merchandise through the use of or by means of said punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or other devices constitute the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises. The respondents in furnishing said devices put in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of their merchandise.

PAR. 4. The respondents in furnishing said devices have knowledge that said devices are and have been and will be used in distributing their merchandise, and furnish said devices so that their merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of merchandise, and the sale of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 5. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondents who do not furnish punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or other devices similar to those furnished by respondents and who do not furnish any devices by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondents who are opposed to the use of such devices in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondents were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said devices injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by competitors and that trade is diverted to respondents from competitors by reason of the furnishing of said punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondents' competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondents from their said competitors and is a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, individually and trading as Gellman Brothers, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute a violation of the Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, individually and trading as Gellman Brothers, their agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with offering for sale, sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of retail dealers or others punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or similar devices so as to enable such retail dealers and others to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise;

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to retail dealers or others punchboards, push cards, fortune boards, or similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable such retail dealers or others to sell or distribute merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of various articles of merchandise by the use of punchboards, push cards, fortune boards or similar devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Mike Gellman and Nate Gellman, individually or trading as Gellman Brothers, shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Docket 2806. Complaint, May 15, 1936—Decision, Jan. 13, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and one of which was composed of a number of penny pieces of uniform size and shape, together with number of packages of candy to be given as prizes to those purchasers of aforesaid penny candies procuring piece, colored center of which differed from that of majority, and together with large candy bar to be given free to purchaser of last piece in assortment—

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that March of Time Candies, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 446 North Hermitage Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for one year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for one year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of packages of candy and a large bar of candy, which packages and large bar of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a different color; the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢ each, but the purchasers who procure one of the said candies having a center colored differently from the majority of said candies is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the said packages of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, the large bar of candy also contained in said assortment. The color of the center of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy having a center colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy in said assortment, thus procure one of the said packages or large bar of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, and with the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages or a large bar of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned methods, acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on May 15, 1936 issued, and on May 18, 1936 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair

methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 446 North Hermitage Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for one year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for one year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of packages of candy and a large bar of candy, which packages and large bar of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a different color; the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢ each, but the purchasers who procure one of the said candies having a center colored differently from the majority of said candies are entitled to receive, and are to be given free of charge, one of the said packages of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge the large bar of candy also contained in said assortment. The color of the center of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy having a center colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy in said assortment, thus procure one of the said packages of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the amended answer of respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with larger pieces of candy which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, March of Time Candies, Inc., a corporation, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

INDIANAPOLIS SOAP COMPANY, ALSO TRADING AS
SANISOAP COMPANY, AND W. W. SOAP MANUFACTUR-ING COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2966. Complaint, Nov. 4, 1936—Decision, Jan. 13, 1938*

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of soap and soap products, and in sale and distribution thereof, through mail order concerns and house-to-house canvassers, throughout the United States, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in such sale and distribution, or manufacture, sale, and distribution, including competitors who, as manufacturers and distributors of such products, in no way mark the same with retail prices, and also those who place thereon only price marks at which their products are actually offered and sold in usual course of business—

Made use of expression "Combination Price, 75¢" on the three-bar cartons in which it put up such soap, and which it sold, thus packaged and conspicuously labeled, at 5¢ per carton, or thereabouts, to aforesaid canvassers for resale and distribution in conjunction with other products or separately, as desired, and in accordance with their practice and within their discretion, at approximately 25¢ per carton;

With effect of deceiving and misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said cartons of soap had retail value or price in excess of actual one, and were actually normally offered and sold at said marked price per carton in usual course of business, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading representation, purchased substantial volume of its soap and trade was unfairly diverted to it thereby from competitors similarly engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution, or sale and distribution, of such products, and who truthfully represent the quality and value thereof, and the price at which same are offered and sold to public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Indianapolis Soap Company, a corporation, trading as Sanisoap Company, and as W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been, and is now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Indianapolis Soap Company, trading as Sanisoap Company, and as W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company, is a corporation, organized in 1922, and doing business under the laws of the State of Indiana, having its principal office and place of business at 1249 Roosevelt Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale of soap to the purchasing and consuming public located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent now causes, and for several years last past has caused, its soap, when sold by it, to be shipped from its place of business in Indianapolis, Ind., to the purchasers thereof, located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce, by the respondent, in soap, between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships, engaged in the sale of soap in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent offers for sale and sells its soap packed in cardboard boxes. For the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said soap respondent has been, and is now, engaged in, fictitious price marking. On the lid of each box of said soap appears one of the following representations: "3 Bars—Combination Price 75¢," "Price 75¢," or "Combination Price 75¢."

The said soap above mentioned is sold by the respondent principally to house-to-house canvassers for resale to ultimate consumers. The prices marked on the boxes in which the soap above mentioned is sold are many times in excess of the actual selling price to said house-to-house canvassers and many times in excess of the actual value thereof and are much greater than the actual price at which said soap is sold by said canvassers to said ultimate purchasing and using public. The prices so indicated were not intended by the respondent to be the true retail price or the true retail value of said soap, and are false and fictitious, and in no sense represent either the true value or the true selling price of the soap so price marked. The prices marked as above indicated, were intended by the respondent and the canvasser purchasing for resale, to be far in excess of the price actually charged the ultimate consumer.

PAR. 3. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and does mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said soap from respondent on account of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of soap who do not misrepresent in any way the prices at which their products are sold in the usual course of trade, who likewise advertise, sell, and distribute their soap among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 4. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 4, 1936, issued, and on November 6, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Indianapolis Soap Company, a corporation, also trading as Sanisoap Company and W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Jesse M. Daily, counsel for the respondent, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (no oral argument having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Indianapolis Soap Company, is an Indiana corporation, organized in 1922. Its office and manufacturing plant are located at 1249 Roosevelt Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. It is engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of soap and soap products. Respondent also offers its said products for sale under the trade names Sanisoap Company and W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company.

Respondent's said soap and soap products are manufactured and prepared for the market at its said place of business in Indianapolis, Ind., and distributed to the public through mail order houses and house-to-house canvassers throughout the United States. About one-third of its output is marketed through house-to-house canvassers. When orders are received for respondent's said soap and soap products, it causes such products to be shipped from its place of business in Indianapolis, Ind. to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of Indiana. At all times mentioned herein, the respondent has maintained a course of trade in said soap and soap products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

At all times since respondent entered into said business, it has been in substantial competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals, engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, of soap and soap products, in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent's bar soap is put up in pasteboard cartons, three bars to the carton. On each of the cartons conspicuously appears the expression "Combination Price, 75¢." Thus packaged and labeled, respondent's bar soap is sold by respondent for approximately 5¢ per carton to house-to-house canvassers, located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Indiana, who in turn sell and distribute same to the purchasing public for approximately 25¢ per carton.

The house-to-house canvassers usually carry, in addition to the cartons of soap, other products such as soap flakes, cleansers and soap powders. The canvassers determine what item or items shall be included in their stock in trade and respondent's sales to the canvassers do not always include the auxiliary products. It is within the discretion, also, of the canvassers to determine what item or items they shall offer for sale and sell and the price or prices at which the said item or items are offered for sale and sold. Respondent's cartons of soap labeled "Combination Price, 75¢" are not intended by respondent to be sold at retail, nor are they actually sold for 75¢ per carton retail. As a rule, they are actually sold at retail for approximately 25¢ per carton, the canvasser paying only 5¢ per carton therefor. The cartons may or may not be sold in conjunction with other products depending on whether the particular canvasser chooses to offer the cartons of soap singly, in groups, or in conjunction with other products.

PAR. 3. There are, among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of soap and soap products who in no way mark their soap and soap products with retail prices. There are also among said competitors those who place upon their soap and soap products only the price marks at which their products are actually offered for sale and sold in the usual course of business.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the expression "Combination Price, 75¢" on its cartons of soap, which cartons do not in fact sell for 75¢ each, but actually sell for a price much less than 75¢ each, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, deceive and mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said cartons of soap have a retail value or price in excess of the actual value or price thereof and are actually normally offered for sale and sold at 75¢ per carton in the usual course of business. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading representation above referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's soap with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution, or in the sale and distribution, of soap and soap products, who truthfully represent the quality and value of their respective products and the price at which their said products are offered for sale and sold to the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Indianapolis Soap Company, a corporation, also trading as Sanisoap Company, and W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Indianapolis Soap Company, a corporation, doing business under its own name and also trading as Sanisoap Company and W. W. Soap Manufacturing Company, or trading under any other name, its agents, representatives and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of soap and soap products, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of fictitious price marks, or through the use of any other means or device, or in any manner, that its soap has a retail value or price which is in excess of the price at which said soap is actually and customarily offered for sale and sold to the ultimate consumer thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3016. Complaint, Dec. 19, 1936—Decision, Jan. 13, 1938*

Where a firm engaged in preparation of its "Gabriel's Mange Formula," and in distribution and sale thereof to purchasers at various points in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, distribution, and sale of mange cures or other products designed, intended, and sold for same purposes for which its aforesaid preparation was sold in commerce as above set forth, and including many who manufacture, compound, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended and sold to cure, relieve, or treat said ailment and allied diseases, and who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness in use; in advertising the same in different magazines circulating throughout the various States and aforesaid District—

With tendency and capacity to mislead substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that use of aforesaid product would accomplish results claimed, and with result that number of purchasing public, by virtue of such belief, bought substantial quantity of its said preparation, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors engaged in manufacture and sale in interstate commerce of medicinal products designed for treatment of said disease and who do not falsely represent curative value thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:

COMPLAINT

sion, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Gabriel S. Eusch, Sr., and Gabriel S. Eusch, Jr.,¹ individuals and co-partners, trading as Gabriel's Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Gabriel S. Eusch, Sr., and Gabriel S. Eusch, Jr., maintain a copartnership, trading under the name of Gabriel Laboratories, and have their main office and place of business at 402 Main Street, Tell City, Ind. Respondents are now and have been for some years past engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling in commerce, as herein set out, certain medicines designed, intended, and represented as mange cures and distemper cures by the respondents.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said medicines, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Indiana to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so prepared, distributed, and sold by the respondents, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mange cures and distemper preparations or other products designed, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondents' products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said medicines, respondents have caused advertisements to be printed and circulated in various magazines, to wit, "Dog World," "Dog News," "Field and Stream," "Outdoor Life," "Blood Lines Journal," "Red Ranger," "American Hound Journal," "Hounds & Hunting," "Hunting & Fishing," and "Outdoors." said statements and other statements of like character and nature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' products and their effectiveness in treating or curing mange. In all of their advertising literature, respondents represent, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that "Gabriel's Mange Formula" is an effective cure for all types of mange and will effect cures of mange overnight, and that "On-the-Nose" is an effective cure for distemper.

PAR. 5. The representations made by the respondents with respect to the nature and effect of their product when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading and untrue. Two types of mange are recognized by the veterinarian, follicular and sarcoptic. In truth and in fact the use of the Gabriel Mange Cure upon a case of follicular mange has no effect and no curative value whatever. Upon sarcoptic mange, it must be applied actively for a period of weeks. The "On-the-Nose" treatment for distemper has no curative value, has no effect against the spread of distemper and does not relieve distemper.

PAR. 6. There are among the respondents' competitors many who manufacture, compound, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating mange, distemper, and allied diseases, and who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating and describing their products and the effectiveness of said products for curing, treating, or alleviating the diseases herein described, in offering for sale and selling their said products were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended and sold for use, cure, relief and treatment of the diseases herein described, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Federal Trade Commission on December 19, 1936 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, Gabriel S. Dusch, Sr. and Gabriel S. Dusch, Jr., individuals and copartners, trading as Gabriel's Laboratories, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 23, 1936, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Gabriel S. Dusch, Sr., heretofore known in the complaint as Gabriel S. Eusch, Sr., and Gabriel S. Dusch, Jr., heretofore known in the complaint as Gabriel S. Eusch, Jr., are individuals who maintain a copartnership, trading under the name of Gabriel's Laboratories, and have their main office and place of business at 402 Main Street, Tell City, Ind. Respondents are now, and have been for some years last past, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, a certain preparation designated as "Gabriel's Mange Formula" which is represented by the respondents as a mange cure.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Indiana to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation so prepared, distributed and sold by the respondents, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mange cures or other products designed, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondents' preparation is sold in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said preparation, respondents have caused advertisements to be printed and circulated in various magazines, to wit: "Dog World," "Dog News," "Field and Stream," "Outdoor Life," "Blood Lines Journal," "Red Ranger," "American Hound Journal," "Hounds & Hunting," "Hunting & Fishing," and "Outdoors." Each of such magazines has a circulation throughout the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Subsequent to April 1, 1935, respondents also used advertisements such as the following:

Said statements and other statements of like character and nature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' preparation and its effectiveness in treating or curing mange. In all of their advertising literature, respondents represent, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that "Gabriel's Mange Formula" is an effective cure for all types of mange and will effect cures of mange overnight.

PAR. 5. The claims and representations made by the respondents as aforesaid with respect to the nature and effect of their preparation when used for the purpose for which the same is sold are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. Of the two types of mange, follicular and sarcoptic, recognized by veterinarians, the so-called "Gabriel's Mange Formula" has no effect or curative value whatever upon that known as follicular mange. Upon sarcoptic mange the said remedy must be applied actively for weeks. In no instance is there an "overnight" cure of either type of said disease.

PAR. 6. There are among the respondents' competitors many who manufacture, compound, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating mange and allied diseases, and who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 7. Each of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in describing their preparation and its effectiveness for curing the disease herein described had and now has a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the use of said preparation will accomplish the results claimed. By virtue of such belief a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of respondents' preparation with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling in interstate commerce medicinal products designed for the treatment of said disease and who do not falsely represent the curative value of the same. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Gabriel S. Dusch, Senior, and Gabriel S. Dusch, Junior, individuals and co-partners, trading as Gabriel's Laboratories, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

Dusch, Senior, and Gabriel S. Dusch, Junior, individuals and copartners, trading as Gabriel's Laboratories, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Gabriel S. Dusch, Sr., and Gabriel S. Dusch, Jr., individually and trading under the name Gabriel's Laboratories, or under any other trade name, their representatives, servants, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a preparation designed for the treatment of mange now designated as "Gabriel's Mange Formula," or of said preparation or any other preparation containing similar ingredients and possessing similar properties whether sold under that name or under any other name, do cease and desist from:

1. Representing, in any manner, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for, or has any beneficial value in, the treatment of mange, except that type designated as sarcoptic mange;
2. Representing, through statements such as "Kills Mange Overnight" and "Kill Mange Mites and Eggs Overnight," or through any similar statements, or in any manner, that said preparation will cure sarcoptic mange overnight, or will cure sarcoptic mange without extended treatments;
3. Representing that all forms of mange can be cured by the use of said preparation.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2469. Complaint, June 28, 1935—Decision, Jan. 19, 1938

Where a corporation engaged, as rectifier of distilled spirits, in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages, and in purchasing all distilled spirits sold and used in its said products, and in compounding, from purchased alcohol and flavors, gin dealt in by it, and with two small experimental or test stills and one small discontinued still employed for vaporization in connection with manufacture of liqueur sold by it, and in substantial competition, as thus engaged in sale and distribution of its aforesaid product to wholesalers and distributors from coast to coast through traveling salesmen, with those engaged in manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in selling same in trade and commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and with those engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling such various spirituous liquors and similarly selling same, and including among said competitors those who, as manufacturers and distillers from mash, wort, or wash of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors sold by them, truthfully use words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs, and advertising, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products, and those who, engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling such various products, do not use aforesaid words as above set forth—

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Midland Distilleries, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Missouri, with its office and principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, in said State. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages and in the sale thereof in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business aforesaid into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors from mash, wort, or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Upon the premises of respondent's place of business aforesaid there is installed a miniature still for experimental purposes, which still is not used for the distillation from mash, wort, or wash of either spirits or gin. Such rectification of alcoholic spirits does not make or constitute respondent a distillery or distiller, as defined by Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes regulating Internal Revenue, not as commonly understood by the public and the liquor industry. For a long period of time the word "Distilleries" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, places where spirituous liquors are manufactured by a process of original distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "Distilleries" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs, advertising, and labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and merely by the use for experimental purposes of a miniature still as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof respondent does not distill the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported in the sense in which the word "distilled" is commonly accepted and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and the public. Respondent does not own, operate, or control any place or places where spirituous liquors are manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort, or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs, advertising and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 5. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are calculated to and have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash by one continuous process and are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors rectified and bottled by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade names or in any other manner misrepresent that they are distillers, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on June 21, 1935 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Midland Distilleries, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by PGad B. Morehouse, attorney for the Commission, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Jerome F. Duggan, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint; no brief in opposition thereto having been filed or oral arguments of counsel having been made; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent company was incorporated in February, 1934, under the laws of the State of Missouri, and since its organization in the following June, it has been and now is engaged in business as a rectifier of distilled spirits with its office and principal place of business at 314 Market Street, in the city of St. Louis, under a rectifier's basic permit originally issued by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, under date of November 25, 1935 and later renewed by the Federal Alcohol Administration Division of the United States Treasury Department. Said basic permit is known and designated as "R-424." In the course of its said business, it purchases, rectifies, blends and bottles whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages and sells the same in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

When sold, it causes said products to be transported from the State of Missouri into and through various other States of the United States and the District of Columbia to wholesalers and distributors to whom respondent has sold said products through the medium of salesmen who travel over the United States from coast to coast. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors from mash, wort or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other corporatins and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent has three (3) stills upon its premises—one is a small fifty-gallon still, which was formerly used for vaporization of spirits in connection with the manufacture of the liqueur "Southern Comfort," respondent's principal product. This still is no longer so used. Respondent has two other stills—one a glass still of a three-quart capacity, used for experimental purposes in the nature of sales exhibitions to prospective customers—and the other still is a test still with a capacity of less than a pint, used to check sugar content of respondent's products. Respondent also sells gins and whiskies. The gin which it sells is not made by it from tax-paid and purchased alcohol redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics, but is compounded by the respondent from purchased alcohol and flavors, and all of the distilled spirits which it sells and uses in its products are purchased.

PAR. 3. For a long period of time, the word "distilleries," when used in connection with the liquor industry, and with the products thereof, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, places where spirituous liquors are manufactured by a process of original distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete. This respondent does not now and never did own, operate, or control any such place or places, and has never had any permit to operate as a distiller, and has no distillers' bond, and does not now and never did so operate.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "Distilleries" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs, advertising, and labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins and other spirituous liquors therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash. The use by respondent for experimental purposes of the stills hereinbefore described does not constitute it a distiller of the whiskies, gins and other spirituous liquors by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, in the sense in which the word "distilleries," is commonly used and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and by the public, and does not constitute respondent a distillery or distiller as defined by Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes of the United States regulating Internal Revenue.

PAR. 5. The Commission called a large number of public witnesses for the purpose of ascertaining the reaction of the public to the use of the name "Midland Distilleries, Inc.," in connection with the distilled spirits industry. Of the said public witnesses, some twenty-seven in all, nearly all testified that the corporation name, "Midland Distilleries, Inc.," would lead them to believe that the respondent was a distiller and the manufacturer of the products sold under its label; practically all of the said twenty-seven witnesses testified that they would have a preference for a liquor bottled by a distiller or the manufacturer, and that the respondent's name on its packages would induce them to purchase the products of that concern, or others using such name on the label of the bottle containing the product, in the belief that it was a distiller's product and that a distiller's product would be more uniform and there would be more protection to them in the products made by a distiller than by a rectifier. It was generally testified by all of the above mentioned witnesses that the use of the words "distilling," "distillers," "distilleries," or "distillery" used generally in the trade would lead them to believe that any one using such name was engaged in the "distilling business." The Commission finds that a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 6. Several members of the trade, distillers, rectifiers and wholesalers, were called as witnesses and testified generally that the competition of the Midland Distilleries, Inc., and other rectifiers calling themselves distillers, was harmful to the whiskey industry; that in competition sales resistance was increased for the reason that there is a preference on the part of wholesalers and jobbers to deal with a distiller. All of the above mentioned witnesses are in competition with respondent. The evidence discloses that wholesalers were misled by use of the word "Distilleries" in the firm name and on the labels of respondent. The evidence showed that the respondent adopted the name "Midland Distilleries," because at the time of its adoption the president of the company considered that it would be to his benefit from a competitive standpoint, due to the fact that "at that time rectifiers were in very ill repute; the Government had licensed lots of fly-by-night concerns, and a lot of good reputable businesses were ruined, the market was flooded with horrible blends, and at that stage of the game it would have been to our advantage." The Commission finds that the use by respondent of the term "Distilleries" in its corporate name, as aforesaid, on its labels and in its advertising, gave this respondent an unfair competitive advantage over its competitors. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins and other spirituous liquors who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 7. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are calculated to and have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash by one continuous process and are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous liquors rectified and bottled by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade names or in any other manner misrepresent that they are distillers, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Midland Distilleries, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Midland Distilleries, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a liqueur known as "Southern Comfort," gins, whiskies, liquors and all other alcoholic beverages, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of the word "Distilleries" in its corporate name, on its stationery, advertising, or on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships said products, or in any other way by word or words of like import, (a) that it is a distiller of whiskies, gins, or of a liqueur known as "Southern Comfort" or other spirituous beverages; or (b) that the said whiskies, gins, or liqueur known as "Southern Comfort," or other spirituous beverages were by it manufactured through the process of distillation; or (c) that it owns, operates, or controls a place or places where any such products are by it manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed, unless and until respondent shall actually own, operate, or control such a place or places.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent within 60 days from and after the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report or reports in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying, and has complied, with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2722. Complaint, Feb. 17, 1936—Decision, Jan. 19, 1938

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments, which, sold to jobbers, wholesalers, retailers, and schools, were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumer, were made up of penny candy inferior to that usually retailing for such amount, and were composed of a number of small penny packages within which were included and concealed, as prizes, along with candy, articles of, or coupons representative of, merchandise of unequal and, chiefly, of very little value, but, in case of small number thereof, greater than candy's penny cost—

- (a) Sold to wholesalers and retailers for display to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with aforesaid plan, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by said method and manner of packing such product and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and thereby induced to purchase said candy, thus packed and sold by him, in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to him trade and custom from his said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition therein and tend to create monopoly thereof in him and such other distributors as use same or equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent method; and

- (b) Represented to customers and prospective customers through use of firm name and style including abbreviation "Mfg.," that he was manufacturer of some or all of said merchandise distributed and sold by him, facts being he neither owned, controlled, nor operated any factory whatsoever and did not manufacture any of such merchandise;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many of his said customers into erroneous belief that he made some or all of aforesaid merchandise, and that persons dealing with him were buying same directly from manufacturer thereof, and thereby eliminating profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages not had by those buying therefrom, and of diverting trade to him from others selling similar merchandise, including those who do not falsely represent themselves as manufacturers of their products:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Goldberg, an individual trading as U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business as U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 10222 Superior Avenue, in the city of Cleveland, State of Ohio. He is now and during the past year has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, retail dealers, and schools located at points in the various States of the United States and causes the said product, when so sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to his customers and prospective customers by his salesmen and agents, and has caused and causes said representation to be set forth on his business stationery, billheads, invoices, catalogues, labels, and other trade literature, to the effect that he controls and operates factories and is the manufacturer of said candy in which he deals.

PAR. 3. The use by respondent of said representation that he is a manufacturer of candy has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is a business concern which controls and operates a factory in which aforesaid candy sold by respondent is manufactured, and that persons dealing with respondent are buying said candy directly from the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including advantages in service, delivery, and adjustment of account that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture said candy sold by him, but, on the contrary, only purchases and repacks the candy which he sells.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who manufacture the candy which they sell and who rightfully represent that they are the manufacturers thereof. There are others of said competitors who purchase the candy in which they deal and resell the same at a profit to themselves over and above the cost of said candy to said competitors, and who in nowise represent that they manufacture said candy. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent as set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to jobbers, wholesale and retail dealers, and to schools a package or assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and is as follows:

The said assortment of candy is composed of a number of small packages containing several small pieces of candy, which said packages retail at a price of 1 cent each. They are designated "Pirate's Treasure Tubes." Each of said small packages of candy contain, in addition to the candy, an article of merchandise, or a prize, or, in the event that the article of merchandise or prize is too large to be packed within the package, a printed coupon or premium notice entitling the holder thereof to the larger article of merchandise or prize. The majority of these articles of merchandise or prizes contained within the said packages are of very little value, but a small number of the said articles of merchandise or prizes are of a value greater than 1 cent. The articles of merchandise, or prizes, or printed coupons entitling the holder thereof to a prize, are concealed from the consuming or purchasing public within the packages of candy until after the packages have been purchased and broken open by the said purchasing or consuming public. The articles of merchandise or prizes thus obtained by the purchasing or consuming public are of unequal value. The candy contained in each of the said packages is not the equivalent in quantity or quality to candy that ordinarily retails for 1 cent. The purchasers of the said small packages of candy containing an article or merchandise or prize, or coupon entitling the holder to a prize greater in value than 1 cent, thus procure the article of merchandise or prize wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 6. The jobbers and wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells his assortment resell said assortment to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers and schools to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 7. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method of the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 8. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 9. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 10. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondent filed in the office of the Commission an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further testimony and all other intervening procedure. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the firm name and style of U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 10222 Superior Avenue in the city of Cleveland, State of Ohio. Since the year 1935 the respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, retail dealers, and schools located at points in the various States of the United States and causes the said product, when so sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to jobbers, wholesale and retail dealers, and to schools a package or assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and which is described as follows:

The said assortment of candy is composed of a number of small packages containing several small pieces of candy, which said packages retail at a price of 1 cent each. They are designated "Pirate's Treasure Tubes." Each of said small packages of candy contain, in addition to the candy, an article of merchandise, or a prize, or, in the event that the article of merchandise or prize is too large to be packed within the package, a printed coupon or premium notice entitling the holder thereof to the larger article of merchandise or prize. The majority of these articles of merchandise or prizes contained within the said packages are of very little value, but a small number of the said articles of merchandise or prizes are of a value greater than 1 cent. The articles of merchandise, or prizes, or printed coupons entitling the holder thereof to a prize, are concealed from the consuming or purchasing public within the packages of candy until after the packages have been purchased and broken open by the said purchasing or consuming public. The articles of merchandise or prizes thus obtained by the purchasing or consuming public are of unequal value. The candy contained in each of the said packages is not the equivalent in quantity or quality to candy that ordinarily retails for 1 cent. The purchasers of the said small packages of candy containing an article of merchandise or prize, or coupon entitling the holder to a prize greater in value than 1 cent, thus procure the article of merchandise or prize wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells his assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this: to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of his business respondent has caused, and causes, the representation to be made to his customers and prospective customers by the use of the firm name and style, U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., that he is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise which he sells and distributes, which representation is false and misleading for the reason that the respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever and does not manufacture any merchandise sold by him.

The Commission further finds that a considerable number of the purchasing public has a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased, believing that they secure lower prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from a selling agency or middleman. The use by respondent of said representation that he is a manufacturer has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers into the erroneous belief that respondent manufactures some or all of the merchandise sold by him and that persons dealing with the respondent are buying said merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. There are persons, firms, and corporations selling merchandise similar to the merchandise sold and distributed by respondent who do not falsely represent that they manufacture the merchandise sold by them. The use by respondent of the representation that he is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise sold and distributed by him has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade to respondent from other persons, firms, and corporations selling similar merchandise.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Samuel Goldberg, an individual trading as U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Samuel Goldberg, an individual, trading as U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., or under any other trade name, his agents, representatives and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape and premium notices, together with articles of merchandise which said articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring said premium slips;

4. Representing by the use of the firm name U. S. Specialty & Mfg. Co., or otherwise, that he is the manufacturer of some or all of the merchandise which he sells and distributes, unless and until he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant wherein said candy is manufactured by him.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 30 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, partners, trading as Colonial Ribbon Mills, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, are trading and doing business under the trade name and style of Colonial Ribbon Mills with their office and principal place of business located at 95 Madison Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondents are now, and have been since 1932, engaged in the business of distributing and selling, in commerce as herein set out, ribbons and narrow fabrics made of silk, satin, taffeta and rayon to manufacturers of handkerchiefs, ladies' and children's underwear, greeting cards, dolls, candies, and toys and novelties.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said ribbons and narrow fabrics, when sold, to be transported from their office and principal place of business in the State of New York to the respective purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of New York. Respondents have at all times maintained a constant current of trade in said ribbons and narrow fabrics, sold, and distributed by them, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are now, and have been since 1932, in substantial competition with other firms and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase the ribbons and narrow fabrics sold by them, respondents have caused cards, invoices, letterheads, and other business stationery to be printed and circulated throughout the various States of the United States to customers and prospective customers. In all of said cards, invoices, letterheads, and other business literature, respondents have caused their firm name "Colonial Ribbon Mills" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed.

The use of the word "Mills" in their firm name serves as a representation to the respondents' customers, prospective customers, and the general buying public that the respondents own, operate, or control a mill wherein ribbons and narrow fabrics are manufactured.

PAR. 5. Respondents do not, in fact, own, operate, or control any mill or mills for the manufacture of ribbons and narrow fabrics from raw materials. Respondents are not engaged in the business of manufacturing and are not manufacturers as those terms are understood by the trade and the purchasing public generally, but are engaged solely in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics manufactured from raw products by others.

PAR. 6. A substantial portion of the wholesale and retail purchasers of ribbons and narrow fabrics have expressed, and have, a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased. Such purchasers believe that they secure closer prices, superior quality, and other advantages in dealing direct with the manufacturer rather than a selling agency or middleman or anyone else.

PAR. 7. Many of the respondents' competitors who distribute and sell ribbons and narrow fabrics do not manufacture products sold by them and do not in any way represent that they are the manufacturers of said products.

PAR. 8. The false and misleading representation made by the respondents in designating themselves, through the use of their firm name "Colonial Ribbon Mills," as manufacturers of the products which they distribute and sell was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representation is true and that the respondents are actually manufacturers of the products which they sell. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced as aforesaid, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of ribbons and narrow fabrics sold by the respondents with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and character of their business. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on September 16, 1936, issued, and on September 18, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, partners, trading as Colonial Ribbon Mills, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Joseph C. Fehr, attorney for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas and John W. Addison, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Gustave A. Steckenberg, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument having been waived by respondents); and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, are trading and doing business under the trade name and style of Colonial Ribbon Mills. Their office and principal place of business is located at 95 Madison Avenue, New York City, N. Y. Respondents engage three employees. Ever since starting in business together in 1932, respondents have been engaged in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics made of silk and of rayon to manufacturers of handkerchiefs, ladies' and children's underwear, greeting cards, dolls, candies and toys, and novelties.

PAR. 2. In the operation of their business, as aforesaid, respondents have at all times maintained a course of trade in said ribbons and narrow fabrics thus sold and distributed by them, and have caused a substantial part of said ribbons and narrow fabrics, when sold, to be transported from their office and place of business in New York City, N. Y., to purchasers thereof at various points in other States of the United States. Ever since the year 1932, respondents have been in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in selling and distributing ribbons and narrow fabrics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course of the operation of said business, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations to purchase the ribbons and narrow fabrics sold by them, respondents have caused cards, invoices, letterheads, and other business stationery to be printed and circulated throughout the various States of the United States to customers and prospective customers. In all of said cards, invoices, letterheads, and other business literature, respondents have caused their firm name "Colonial Ribbon Mills" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed.

The use of the word "Mills" in their firm name serves, and has served, as a representation to the respondents' customers, prospective customers, and the general buying public that the respondents own, operate, or control a mill wherein said ribbons and narrow fabrics are manufactured by them.

PAR. 4. Respondents do not actually own and operate, or control, any manufacturing plant or mill, and do not make the ribbons and narrow fabrics sold by them. The ribbons sold by respondents are made for respondents by the Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., of East Stroudsburg, Pa., and the Champin Ribbon Mills of Paterson, N. J. Respondents own no interest in either of said manufacturers.

PAR. 5. Respondents have a written arrangement with the Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., called a lease, whereby the Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., allocates five of its looms, and the workers at said looms, to the manufacture into finished products of the material that respondents send to said factory or mill from time to time. By this arrangement, respondents agree to pay said Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., the cost of manufacture and incidental overhead expenses necessary for the maintenance and operation of said five looms. The said five looms are at no time operated, supervised, or controlled by respondents. They are at all times managed, controlled, and supervised by said Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., the owner of said looms and not by the respondents herein.

PAR. 6. Respondents have a similar arrangement with the Champin Ribbon Mills, by which the said Champin Ribbon Mills supplies respondents with ribbons and other narrow fabrics manufactured at the instance of respondents and in accordance with certain instructions submitted to said manufacturer by respondents. For this purpose the Champin Ribbon Mills allocates four looms in its factory, located at Paterson, N. J., for the manufacture of finished products for and on behalf of respondents.

PAR. 7. There is usually one worker, or operator, to every two looms in both said mills. These workers are employed by, and receive their wages from, the owners of said mills. The owners of said mills also pay all the taxes on said properties, pay all other overhead charges, and otherwise manage, supervise, operate, and control said establishments without interference of any character whatsoever by, or from, respondents, or anyone else. For the work done by these mills for and upon the order of respondents, the said Rose Ribbon Mills, Inc., and Champin Ribbon Mills receive checks approximately twice a month from the respondents, which checks vary in amount according to the amount of work and time spent on said looms.

PAR. 8. Respondents are not engaged in the business of manufacturing, and are not manufacturers, as those terms are understood by the trade and the purchasing public, generally, but are engaged in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics manufactured by others. Respondents are regarded in the trade and in the industry as selling agents or jobbers. A selling agent is one who receives the products of looms owned by others on consignment and returns to the principal all monies except the selling commission. A jobber is one who buys the products from a manufacturer and pays for them outright for resale. A manufacturer in the ribbon industry is understood to be one who weaves fabrics, under 18 inches, of silk, rayon, cotton, or mixed fabrics on a plain, jacquard, or Sauer loom.

PAR. 9. A substantial portion of the wholesale and retail purchasers of ribbons and narrow fabrics have expressed, and have, a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased. Such purchasers believe that they secure closer prices, superior quality, and other advantages in dealing direct with the manufacturer rather than a selling agency, or middleman, or anyone else.

PAR. 10. Many of the respondents' competitors who distribute and sell ribbons and narrow fabrics do not manufacture products sold by them, and do not in any way represent that they are the manufacturers of said products.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of the respondents in designating themselves, through the use of their firm name "Colonial Ribbon Mills," as manufacturers of the products which they distribute and sell, were and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representation is true and that the respondents are actually manufacturers of the products which they sell. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs so induced, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of ribbons and narrow fabrics sold by the respondents, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling ribbons and narrow fabrics who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and character of their business. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, partners, trading as "Colonial Ribbon Mills," are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and John W. Addison, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs filed herein by Joseph C. Fehr and James T. Welch, counsel for the Commission, and by Gustave A. Steckenberg, counsel for the respondents (oral argument having been waived by respondents), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Samuel Steckenberg and Abraham M. Fynke, partners trading as Colonial Ribbon Mills, or under any other trade name, their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of ribbons and narrow fabrics in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or indirectly, through the use of the word "Mills," or any other word or term of similar import and meaning, in their trade name, or in any other manner, that they are manufacturers, mill operators, or mill owners, unless and until they actually own and operate, or directly and absolutely control, a factory, plant, or mill wherein said products are made by them.

It is further ordered, That the said respondents shall, within 30 days from the date of service upon them of this order, file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
FRANK URBAN, GEORGE A. URBAN, AND E. T. URBAN, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS CLOSE & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3144. Complaint, June 4, 1937—Decision, Jan. 19, 1938

Where two partners engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which were composed of a number of individually wrapped penny pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with number of other articles of merchandise to be given as prizes to chance purchasers of relatively few of said pieces centers of which differed in color from majority thereof, and to purchaser of last of said uniform pieces in assortment—

Sold to wholesalers and jobbers for display and resale to purchasing public by their retailer vendees, in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with aforesaid plan, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell candy so packed and assembled, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by said method and manner of packing said product and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and thereby induced to purchase said candy, thus packed and sold by them, in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to them trade and custom from their said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition therein and tend to create monopoly thereof in them and such other distributors as use same or equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and eliminate therefrom all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, individually and as co-partners trading as Close & Company, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, are individuals and are doing business as a co-partnership with their principal office and place of business located at 2021 Fulton Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondents cause and have caused their said products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candies between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and individuals and with corporations engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve or which are designed to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof. Such assortments are composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of other articles of merchandise, which other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of the pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are each contained within wrappers and retail at the price of 1 cent each. The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are of the same color throughout, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a color different from the majority. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the wrapper removed.

Purchasers procuring one of the pieces of candy having a center colored differently from the majority are entitled to receive free of charge and are to be given as a prize one of the other articles of merchandise included in said assortment, and the purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment is entitled to receive free of charge and is to be given as a prize one of the said other articles of merchandise. The other articles of merchandise contained in said assortment are thus distributed to purchasers of candy from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents manufacture, sell, and distribute several assortments involving lot or chance in their distribution to the public, but all of said assortments involve the same principle as set forth above and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell their assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth; and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure other articles of merchandise. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

as copartners trading as Close & Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, are individuals doing business as a copartnership under the firm name and style of Close & Company, and have their principal office and place of business located at 2021 Fulton Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now and for some time last past have been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States, and cause said products when so sold to be transported from their place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States as their respective places of business. There is now and has been for several months last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said assortments are composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of other articles of merchandise, which other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of the pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are contained within wrappers and retail at the price of 1 cent each. The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are of the same color throughout, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a color different from the majority. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the wrapper removed. Purchasers procuring one of the pieces of candy having a center colored differently from the majority are entitled to receive free of charge and are to be given as a prize one of the other articles of merchandise included in said assortment, and the purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment is entitled to receive free of charge and is to be given as a prize one of the said other articles of merchandise. The other articles of merchandise contained in said assortment are thus distributed to purchasers of candy from said assortment wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell their assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise.

The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondents are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondents has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, individually and as copartners trading as Close & Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the amended answer of respondents, Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, individually and as copartners trading as Close & Company, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Frank Urban, George A. Urban, and E. T. Urban, individually and as copartners trading as Close & Company, or trading under any other name, their agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with other articles of merchandise which said articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF
N. R. BASKIN, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS AMERICAN RADIO COMPANY, AMERICAN NOVELTY COMPANY, AND AMERICAN RADIO AND NOVELTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2401. Complaint, May 20, 1935—Decision, Jan. 20, 1938

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of radios, bathroom scales, clocks, cameras, and variety of other so-called novelty merchandise, together with "sales booklets," and "sales cards" or "pull boards" and "punch boards" as instrumentality for sale of his said products in conjunction therewith and through use of lottery and chance schemes thereby entailed, as operated by customers whom he (1) solicited thus to sell his said products, (2) supplied, in response to their inquiry, with certain literature and materials descriptive of one or more of his aforesaid articles, and with circular letter descriptive of his sales plans and methods of operation, list of prizes and order blank, and (3) compensated, upon undertaking such sale, through merchandise or money, as case might be—

- (a) Represented, in soliciting customers and persons to buy and sell his said products under aforesaid plan, in advertising therefor in various magazines circulated among members of the buying public, that he was offering "New Sales Plan" and "New Free Gift Plan" involving giving away of radios and other products, and that persons made as much as $100 a week under former and $150 a week under latter, while giving away merchandise, facts being said scheme did not constitute "New Sales Plan" or "New Free Gift Plan," neither he nor his customers or customers' agents handed out or distributed free gifts, but each article distributed required payment of valuable consideration, and he was thus compensated, either in money or services or both, representations as to earnings, as possibility and representation applicable to most, constituted gross exaggeration of benefits or profits to be expected or derived by persons dealing with him, who could not determine whether or not they could make any such sums until after purchase and resale of his said merchandise, with resultant benefits to him of such sales as they might and did effect;

With tendency and capacity to induce members of public to buy his said products and undertake and effect distribution thereof to members of buying and consuming public, and with result, substantially, of such sale and distribution, to his benefit and profit and to injury and prejudice of competitors; and

- (b) Offered, sold, and distributed his aforesaid products as above set forth, together with sales cards, pull boards, or punch boards, for distribution to ultimate consumers or purchasers under plans by which, as case might be, chance purchaser received article being thus disposed of or nothing other than chance, dependent upon success or failure in selection of right name, as finally revealed under so-called master seal, and paid, in accordance with particular plan, fixed or varying amount or nothing, dependent upon disclosure after purchase, selection and removal of seal, in competition with many who condemn use and encouragement of such cards or methods as not legitimate and as gambling devices and involving operation in violation of law and public policy of most of the States and of the United States, and as a lottery, and involving acquisition of business unfairly among members of the trade, and as otherwise contrary to good morals, and refrain therefrom;

With effect of diverting substantial trade in commerce to said individual from competitors who do not encourage or employ such methods and are not free so to do:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Bennett and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. Jay L. Jackson for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that N. R. Baskin, an individual doing business under the trade names American Radio Company, American Novelty Company, and American Radio and Novelty Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating therein its charges as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade names American Radio Company, American Novelty Company, and American Radio and Novelty Company, with his principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent, for more than one year last past, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, liquor serving sets, sales booklets, punch sales cards, punch sales boards, and other articles of merchandise to wholesale dealers, retail dealers, distributors, and agents located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products when so sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., or from the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of business and there is now and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in commerce by the said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, liquor serving sets, other merchandise, sales books, punch sales cards and punch sales boards in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, retail dealers and to individual distributors merchandise so arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when resold and distributed to the ultimate purchasers thereof in accordance with respondent's sale plan.

The said sales books, punch sales cards, and punch boards are sold separately and also in combination with other merchandise. Several of said merchandise combinations are composed of radios and sales books, radios and 100-hole sales boards, liquor serving sets and punch sales cards, and other merchandise in combination with the sales books, punch sales cards, and 100-hole sales boards, respectively, which radios, liquor serving sets, and other merchandise is to be given to agents in furtherance of said sale plan as compensation for services rendered in the promotion of a lottery scheme or game of chance and as prizes to purchasers who are holders of chances bearing a name or other legend as follows:

The booklets, punch sales cards, and punch boards contain 100 names more or less or other legends which are sold at not less than 1 cent nor more than 35 cents (with 10 names free). The said names or other legends have concealed thereunder from the purchasers the figures indicating the amount to be paid therefor, and they do not know until after the selection has been made and the secret purchase price has been disclosed how much they must pay for the privilege of selecting the chance or whether they will receive one of the free chances. The booklets, punch sales cards, and punch boards contain a master seal, and the name, number, or other legend concealed thereunder is not disclosed until after all the chances have been sold and the purchaser receiving the chance bearing the name or other legend corresponding to the name or other legend appearing under the master seal receives the merchandise offered as a prize and the other purchasers receive nothing of value for the money which they have paid.

The purchasing public, in accordance with respondent's sale plan, are thus induced to purchase the name, number, or other legend from the booklet, punch card, punch board, or other method of lottery scheme or game of chance in the hope that they may select by chance and purchase the prize winning name, number, or other legend concealed under the master seal and thus obtain a valuable article of merchandise either free or at a cost not to exceed 35 cents, which article of merchandise is distributed wholly by chance, and which has a value much greater than the maximum charge of 35 cents.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers, retail dealers, and individual distributors to whom respondent sells his merchandise expose said booklets, punch cards, punchboards, and said merchandise combinations for sale and resell said booklets, punch cards, punchboards, and merchandise combinations to individuals who sell the chances in the said sales books, punch sales cards, and 100-hole punch sales boards, respectively, to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of his customers the means of conducting lotteries in the sales of his merchandise as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by his competitor.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public as above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure such merchandise in the manner alleged. Such game of chance and the sale of such chance to procure such merchandise in the manner alleged are contrary to the established public policy of the State of Illinois and of the Government of the United States, and are contrary to local criminal statutes of many States of the United States.

By reason of said facts, many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute such merchandise in competition with respondent as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale, and they refrain from selling, merchandise so assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a lottery or a game of chance.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of such merchandise are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of combining said merchandise and by the element of chance involved in the sale and distribution thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise sold by respondent in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of the respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Many dealers are induced to purchase such merchandise so offered for sale and sold by respondent in preference to similar merchandise sold by competitors, because said ultimate purchasers thereof give preference to respondent's said merchandise on account of said lottery and game of chance so involved in the sale whereby the recipient has the chance of obtaining the merchandise free or at a cost not exceeding 35 cents rather than at the normal retail price, which is much greater than 35 cents.

PAR. 6. During the times above mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent in the regular course of his business has been and now is soliciting the sale of merchandise through advertisements published in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals circulating among the public and among the various States of the United States, and in circulars, pamphlets and booklets which respondent has caused to be distributed among the public of the various States.

In these advertisements, the respondent has caused statements to be made, among others, as follows:

The total receipt from this salesbook is $21.50 and you deliver two Beautiful Liquor Serving Sets, costing you $5.35 each, which leaves you a net profit of $10.70 on each deal.

It has been proved that the most effective manner of securing agents for the distribution of these salesbooks is to have a sample of the article to show. This is particularly true where you are securing agents who happen to be clerks in stores, refreshment establishments, etc., or employed in offices or factories. The instant you show these articles, they want them! And when you tell them that they can actually get them Absolutely Free, simply by co-operating with you, You Have Another Agent Started.

PAR. 7. The statements in the advertisements mentioned above in paragraph 6 hereof that the "New Free Gift Plan Brings You Up to $150 Weekly," "Make Up to $100 a Week With Our New Sale Plan," "Biggest Money-Maker Out," "Distributors Are Now Making Up to $100 Weekly With New 100 Hole Sales Board," and that the radios or other merchandise are being given away free are false and misleading statements in that the plan is not new, the distributors or agents do not regularly earn up to $100 per week as alleged therein, such earnings being special and unusual, and they are not the normal results which may be expected in the distribution of respondent's merchandise; no radios, liquor serving sets, or other merchandise are given away free but the respondent receives the full wholesale value thereof for all articles distributed by him; the agent receives merchandise as compensation for his services; and the ultimate purchaser, or recipient, receives merchandise through devices or plans of merchandising which involve the operation of lottery schemes or games of chance in violation of public policy and certain criminal statutes. Such false and misleading statements and advertisements of such lottery schemes and games of chance induce agents or individuals to solicit the sale of and sell the merchandise of the respondent, and thus prevent them from soliciting the sale and selling the merchandise of competitors of the respondent, thereby diverting substantial trade from the competitors of the respondent to the respondent.

PAR. 8. The use of said methods by respondent has and has had the tendency and capacity unfairly, because of said lottery scheme and game of chance and said false and misleading advertising, to divert and has diverted to respondent trade and custom from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. It has and has had the tendency and capacity unfairly to exclude from said merchandise trade all actual and potential competitors who are unwilling to and do not use the same or equivalent methods which are contrary to public policy, detrimental to public morals, and in violation of the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States; to substantially lessen competition in the sale of said merchandise and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in those said commodities.

PAR. 9. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's competitors, as herein alleged. Such methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on May 20, 1935, issued, and on May 22, 1935, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, N. R. Baskin, an individual and doing business under the separate trade names of American Radio Company, American Novelty Company, and American Radio and Novelty Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Jay L. Jackson, attorney for the Commission, in part before John W. Bennett, Esq., and in part before John J. Keenan, Esq., examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Messrs. John A. Nash and Horace J. Donnelly, attorneys for respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, N. R. Baskin, is an individual, operating and trading under the trade names American Radio Company, American Novelty Company, and American Radio and Novelty Company, with his principal place of business located at 32 Randolph Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and under these names is now, and at all times material to the complaint in this proceeding has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing radios, liquor serving sets, bathroom scales, clocks, cameras, smoking sets, fountain pens, and a variety of other so-called novelty merchandise, together and in connection or in combination with so-called "sales booklets," sometimes described as "sales books" and "sales cards," including sales cards commonly designated as "pull boards" and "punchboards." Respondent solicits customers and sells his said products, by the methods hereinafter described, in most of the States of the United States, and causes said products, when sold or ordered, to be shipped and transported from his said place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to customers and to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the business of respondent, as aforesaid, respondent has been, and is now, in competition with corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling and distributing radios, liquor serving sets, bathroom scales, clocks, cameras, smoking sets, fountain pens, and a variety of other so-called novelty merchandise like that offered and sold by respondent, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the business, as aforesaid, it has been, and is, the practice of respondent, through the medium of advertising in various magazines, circulated to and among members of the buying public, such as Billboard, Opportunity, How to Sell, Specialty Salesmen, and Radio Guide, to solicit customers and persons to buy and sell respondent's products, in the course of which respondent states and represents, among other things, that respondent offers a "New Sales Plan" under which persons make as much as $100 a week while giving away merchandise; that respondent offers a "New Free Gift Plan" which involves the giving away of radios and other merchandise, and that under said plan persons make up to $150 a week while giving away merchandise. Upon response to such advertisements, respondent mails certain literature to the responding person, inclusive of materials descriptive of one or more of respondent's products, a circular letter descriptive of respondent's sales plan and method of operation, list of prices, and an order blank. In some instances one of respondent's so-called "sales booklets" or "sales card" is further included with such literature. Respondent also circularizes and solicits members of the public direct with sales literature descriptive of his products and sales plan and with sales cards for use in the distribution and sale of his products.

PAR. 4. As more fully hereinafter shown, the aforesaid sales cards are devices or instruments used, and intended to be so used, in effecting sale and distribution of respondent's products to members of the buying and consuming public. In some instances they appear as a single or double leaf card and sometimes are attached to, or within, a so-called "booklet." In either instance these materials carry, together with one or more of the aforesaid trade names of respondent and business address, pictorial and printed matter descriptive of one or more of the products offered and sold by respondent. The cards themselves are the devices for effecting the sale and disposition of the particular article or articles of merchandise so described and represented. Some of said cards entail disposition by respondent of two units of the same article of merchandise, one unit of which follows the sales card while the other unit is delivered to, and taken by, respondent's customer or the operator of the card as his consideration for effecting disposition and sale of the names appearing on the said card, the money income from which is remitted to respondent. In other instances the respondent's customers buy only one article of merchandise incident to each card and are left to take their profits in the form of money retained out of the money taken in from completed disposition and sale of the cards. Customers are encouraged and urged to employ others to effect disposition and sale of the cards and the merchandise incident thereto, this to the end of promoting a maximum business with customers. The merchandise incident to each card is sold and delivered to the customer in combination with the card, but in connection with a great number of these cards, the merchandise may be ordered and purchased by the customer subsequent to order and purchase of the cards. Each card, therefore, is so arranged and intended to entail and effect, and the said cards do effect, either immediately or eventually, the order and purchase from respondent of one or more articles of merchandise for each card eventually sold and disposed of by respondent's customers.

PAR. 5. The sales cards employed by respondent, as aforesaid, vary with the particular product or products offered and sold in connection therewith, but they all work and are operated on the same principle. Each entails the ultimate solicitation and sale to members of the buying and consuming public of one or more of the names, representing chances, appearing on the face of seals, one name to each seal. In some instances the seals are arranged in such a way as to be pulled off, in others punched or pushed out. Accordingly, the cards are appropriately described as "pullboards" or "punchboards," depending upon the manual method by which the seal is either pulled off or pushed out. Each person solicited and selecting a name pays a consideration for each name drawn, except that with certain cards 10 free names or selections are provided for, the amount of which consideration is not disclosed at the time of purchase and selection, but immediately thereafter upon the inside portion of the seal after the same has been pulled off or punched out. With some cards the consideration varies from 1 cent to 29 cents; with others, from 1 cent to 35 cents. In all cases the total moneys taken by the completed sale of names on each card is sufficient to cover, and respondent receives from his customers, the list purchase price of all merchandise, and for each unit thereof, delivered by respondent to customers in connection with such card, and in most instances the total money taken in by completed sale and disposition of such cards is greatly in excess of all or any cost incident to purchase and supply of the merchandise connected therewith.

The purchase and selection of the names appearing on the so-called sales cards are all made by purchasers with a view to selecting that name which will correspond with the name which appears under a master seal in the upper corner of the card when the said seal is removed. The master seal is removed and the winning name therein disclosed only after all the visible names on the card have been purchased and drawn. Thus, at the time of purchase and drawing, the purchaser does not and cannot know either the amount of the consideration he pays for the same or whether or not he becomes thereby entitled to receive such article of merchandise as is described and offered in connection with the said card. A few of said cards allow of more than one winner, sometimes as many as three articles of merchandise being offered, but in most instances only one article of merchandise is offered, and only one purchaser of the group purchasing from the card receives, or becomes entitled to receive, the particular article so offered.

PAR. 6. Contrary to the advertising representations made by respondent, the selling plan under which he has been operating and operates is not a "new sales plan" or a "new" or "free gift plan." Neither respondent nor his customers or customer's agents "hand out" or distribute "free gifts," but each article of merchandise distributed by respondent, his customers, or customer's agents requires the payment of a valuable consideration, and for all merchandise distributed by respondent he receives a valuable consideration, either in the form of money or services, or both. Further contrary to respondent's advertising representations, it does not appear that any of his customers have made or make as much as $150 or $100 a week. As a possibility and representation applicable to most persons undertaking to operate under respondent's selling plan, the said representation is a gross exaggeration of the benefits or profits to be expected or derived by persons dealing with respondent. Persons dealing with respondent in response to the said representations have no way of determining whether they can make $150 or $100 a week until after they have undertaken the purchase and resale of respondent's merchandise, during which, however, respondent receives the benefits of such sales as such persons may and do effect.

The aforesaid representations to the effect that respondent operates a new selling plan by which persons hand out, or give away, free gifts, and by which persons can make up to $150 and $100 per week are, and each of them is, false and misleading and have the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public to buy products of respondent, and to undertake and effect distribution of respondent's products to members of the buying and consuming public. The same substantially results in the sale and distribution of respondent's products to members of the buying and consuming public, inures to the benefit and profit of respondent, and is all to the injury and prejudice of respondent's competitors.

The aforesaid sales cards, otherwise known as "pullboards" and "punchboards," are gambling devices used and useful only in the operation of a lottery or sale by chance. The operation of said cards constitutes a lottery under the laws of the United States and statutory laws of most of the States of the United States, and under the public policy proclaimed by these laws, use of such cards and sale methods, and the encouragement of such use, is condemned and prohibited. Many of respondent's competitors refrain from the use of such cards or methods and condemn their use and encouragement upon the ground that the same are not legitimate, that the said sales cards are gambling devices and their operation a violation of the law and public policy of most of the States of the United States, that their operation constitutes a lottery and that the acquisition of business through such means is unfair among members of the trade and otherwise contrary to good morals.

The aforesaid representations and practices employed by respondent have the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert, and do divert, substantial trade in said commerce to respondent from his competitors, who do not employ or encourage such methods and who are not free to use the same.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent N. R. Baskin are to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard before the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Bennett and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Jay L. Jackson, counsel for the Commission, and by John B. Nash, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondent, N. R. Baskin, his representatives, agents, and employes, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of all so-called novelty products offered for sale or sold by respondent, including radios, liquor serving sets, bathroom scales, clocks, cameras, smoking sets, fountain pens, and other similar or like articles of merchandise, and of so-called sales books or booklets and sales cards, cease and desist:

1. From in any way representing, directly or indirectly, to members of the buying and consuming public, that respondent offers or employs a sales plan in connection with his products, which plan is "new," or a "free gift plan," or a plan under which persons hand out or give away merchandise, and make up to $150 or $100 a week, when in fact the plan offered or employed by respondent is not "new," or is not a "new free gift plan," or under which merchandise is not given away free, or when in fact no substantial number of persons dealing with respondent make as much as $150 or $100 a week under the plan offered and employed by respondent.

2. From offering for sale, selling, or distributing, in connection with the sale and distribution of said so-called novelty products, any instrument or means, inclusive of sales books or sales cards, pullboards, or punchboards, which may be employed or used as a gaming device,

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF
CAPON WATER COMPANY ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2736. Complaint, Mar. 3, 1936—Decision, Jan. 20, 1938

Where two corporations engaged, as case might be, in ownership and operation of certain springs and sale of water therefrom, and the president and manager thereof and owner of the majority of stock in both and controller and director of their activities in sale and distribution of said water, and in substantial competition, as thus engaged in sale of said water through dealers and direct to purchasing and consuming public in the several States and in the District of Columbia, with others engaged in sale and distribution of so-called mineral waters and drugs and medicinal preparations used and useful for treatment of the various diseases, ailments, and conditions for which they recommended their said water; in describing said water in advertising matter sent to those making inquiry in response to label contained on containers thereof and inviting such inquiry "For Specific Purposes and Physicians' Statements"—

Represented, through pamphlets, booklets, leaflets, and other written matter containing many statements purportedly made by doctors and laymen, as well as directly, that use of said water alone would cure kidney and bladder trouble, and gout and rheumatism, as well as nephritis, arthritis, neuritis, high blood pressure, constipation, and numerous other ailments and conditions, as there specified, notwithstanding fact use of said water alone would not, either externally or internally, cure said various diseases, ailments, and afflictions;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasing public and causing them erroneously to believe that use thereof alone would cure such various diseases, ailments, and conditions for which they represented same as a cure, and to cause such public, by reason of such erroneous belief, to buy their said water, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to them from their competitors who do not use such acts and practices, to their substantial injury and to that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Phillip W. Austin, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Capon

Water Company, a corporation, the Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., a corporation, and Louis Austin, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Capon Water Company, is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business at 1712 Walnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. Respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its office and principal place of business at 1712 Walnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, and a branch office and place of business at Capon Springs, State of West Virginia. Respondent Louis Austin is president of, and the majority stockholder in, both of the other respondents, with his office and principal place of business at 1712 Walnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, and with a branch office and place of business at Capon Springs, State of West Virginia.

Respondents are now, and have been for the several years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution, under the name Capon Springs Water, of a purported mineral water for human consumption and for external application to the body, and respondents cause said water, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in Philadelphia, Pa., and Capon Springs, W. Va., into and across the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in said several States of the United States, other than in the States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents make sales direct to consumers and through agents to said consumers.

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, the respondents have been and are in substantial competition in commerce between and among the said several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals, who truthfully advertise their products, engaged in said commerce in the sale and distribution of mineral waters and other products used and useful for the same purposes for which respondents recommend their said water. In the course and conduct of their said business as aforesaid, and in the use of the acts, practices, and methods hereinafter alleged, the said respondents have acted and do act together and in cooperation with each other.

PAR. 2. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, distribute and circulate, among prospective purchasers of their said water, booklets, leaflets, circulars, and other written matter which contain many statements concerning the curative qualities of respondents' said water. Many of said statements are purportedly made by doctors and laymen and the remainder by the respondents. In said booklets, leaflets, circulars, and other written matter respondents falsely represent and imply that said water will cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by the respondents in their said booklets, leaflets, circulars, and other written matter, so distributed and circulated among prospective purchasers of their said water, as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which their said water will cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, are the following: Kidney troubles, kidney pains, nephritis; bladder trouble; gout, rheumatism, syphilitic rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis; hyperacidity, uric acid, toxic poisons, acid conditions, acid poisons; catarrhal affections of the stomach and bowels, catarrhal affections of the organs of respiration, catarrhal affections of the kidney and bladder, uterine catarrh; scrofulosis; diabetes mellitus, diabetes; skin diseases, all affections of the skin, poison oak, ivy poison, and other skin affections; diseases of the urinary, digestive and reproductive organs, diseases peculiar to women, female disorders, dysmenorrhea, leucorrhoea, amenorrhoea, chronic cervical, corporeal endometritis; high blood pressure; chronic pneumonia; constipation; irregular bowels; calculi (kidney and gall stones), gall disorders; prostate troubles, chronic inflammation, enlargement and irritation of the prostate gland; stomach disorders; indigestion; chronic sinus infections; diseases of the liver, particularly hyperemia and fatty degeneration; aching joints, lameness; sterility; pyorrhoea; hives; obesity; and general debility.

In truth and in fact the use of respondents' said water, whether by drinking or external application, will not cure, nor is it beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions above set out.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in said booklets, leaflets, circulars, and other written matter so distributed and circulated among prospective purchasers of their said water, falsely represent and imply that their said water acts "like magic"; "cures almost everything"; "aids digestions"; "restores energy"; is "beneficial to general health"; "keeps you fit"; "keeps you well"; that it has "eliminated tired feeling"; "maintains healthy digestive tract"; that it has "improved hearing"; is "indispensible to health"; "acts as a natural tonic"; "restores mental alertness and vigor"; "will help every living thing"; assures "all year round health and long life"; "supplies every one of the 16 elements in body"; and contains "valuable medicinal properties."

In truth and in fact respondents' said water not only has not acted and does not act like magic, but has not acted and does not act at all on the human body in any different manner than does any pure, potable water, nor does it contain any elements or medicinal properties in sufficient quantities to render it different from, or of any greater benefit than, any pure, potable water, and its use has not resulted and does not result in the benefits claimed for it by said respondents as above set out.

PAR. 4. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and by the means and in the manner aforesaid, falsely represent and imply that the use of their said water "reduces surplus weight naturally, dissolving excess fat." In truth and in fact the use of respondents' said water, whether internally or externally, not only will not reduce surplus weight naturally, but it will not reduce surplus weight at all, nor will it dissolve excess fat.

PAR. 5. Many persons located in the said several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia desire to purchase or obtain a remedy or treatment that will cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions about which said respondents have made and do make the representations and implications as hereinabove alleged. The acts, practices, and methods of the respondents, as hereinabove alleged, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of said prospective purchasers, and have caused and do cause such purchasers erroneously to believe that the said false representations and implications are true and that the respondents' said water will cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, said diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions, and cause a substantial portion of such persons, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase respondents said water, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from their competitors who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondents, to the substantial injury of said competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 6. The acts, practices, and methods of the respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' said competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 3, 1936, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents Capon Water Company, a corporation, Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., a corporation, and Louis Austin, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Edward W. Thomerson, attorney for the Commission, before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Phillip W. Austin, attorney for the respondents; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Capon Water Company is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and has its principal office and place of business at 1712 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of a so-called mineral water which it secures from the respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc.

Respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business at Capon Springs, W. Va. This respondent owns and operates certain springs located at Capon Springs, W. Va., from which it secures so-called mineral water which it sells to the respondent Capon Water Company, and to other purchasers located at various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., also has an office and place of business at 1712 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., which is the principal office and place of business of the respondent Capon Water Company.

Respondent Louis Austin is an individual, and he is president and manager of, and owns the majority of the stock in, both of the corporate respondents, and in his capacity as president and manager he controls and directs the activities of the two corporate respondents in the sale and distribution of said water. Respondent Louis Austin has so intermingled the affairs and the businesses of the two corporate respondents that it is not possible to differentiate the acts of one of the corporate respondents from the acts of the other of the corporate respondents, and both of said corporate respondents have been used by the respondent Louis Austin as instrumentalities in the furtherance of his policies in connection with the sale and distribution of said water. Said corporate respondents and the said respondent Louis Austin have cooperated fully and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter set out.

PAR. 2. Respondent Louis Austin causes all sales of said water in Philadelphia and vicinity to be made by and through the respondent Capon Water Company, and causes all sales of said water to customers located in States other than the States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia to be made by and through the respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc. When orders for water from out-of-State customers are received by either of said corporate respondents, the order is transmitted to, and filled by, the corporate respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc. In the course and conduct of their business, as above stated, said respondents cause said water, when sold, to be shipped from said place of business in the State of Pennsylvania, or said place of business in the State of West Virginia, into and across the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in said several States of the United States, other than in the States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents market said water through dealers for resale to the public and by sales direct to the purchasing and consuming public.

PAR. 3. Respondents are in substantial competition in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations, who are engaged in said commerce in the business of selling and distributing so-called mineral waters and drugs and medicinal preparations used and useful in the treatment of the various diseases, ailments, and conditions in which the respondents recommend the use of their said water.

PAR. 4. Said respondents cause to be placed upon the containers in which said water is sold and distributed in interstate commerce by Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., a label upon which appears, among others, the following statement:

For Specific Purposes and Physicians' Statements Consult Capon Water Co.
1712 Walnut St.
Philadelphia

When requests for advertising matter are received by either the respondent Capon Water Company or the respondent Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., such requests are usually complied with by the respondent Capon Water Company mailing to the person making the request one or more of the pamphlets, booklets, or leaflets hereinafter described, though on occasions the respondent Capon Spring Mineral Water, Inc., mails from its Philadelphia office such advertising matter in response to such requests.

PAR. 5. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, distribute and circulate among prospective purchasers of their said water pamphlets, booklets, and leaflets and other written matter containing many statements concerning the curative qualities of said water. Many of said statements are purportedly made by doctors and laymen, and the remainder by the respondents. In said pamphlets, booklets, and leaflets respondents represent and imply that the use of said water alone will cure kidney troubles; kidney pains; nephritis; bladder trouble; gout; rheumatism; syphilitic rheumatism; arthritis; neuritis; hyperacidity, uric acid, toxic poisons, acid conditions, acid poisons; catarrhal affections of the stomach, bowels, organs of respiration, kidneys and bladder; uterine catarrh; scrofulosis; diabetes mellitus; diabetes; skin diseases, ivy poison, and other skin affections; diseases of the urinary, digestive and reproductive organs; diseases peculiar to women, female disorders, dysmenorrhea, leucorrhea, amenorrhea; high blood pressure; constipation and irregular bowels; kidney and gall stones and gall disorders; prostate troubles, chronic inflammation, enlargement and irritation of the prostate gland; stomach disorders and indigestion; chronic sinus infections; diseases of the liver; aching joints; lameness; sterility; pyorrhea; hives; obesity and general debility.

In truth and in fact the use of said water alone, either externally or internally, will not cure kidney troubles, kidney pains, nephritis, bladder trouble; gout; rheumatism; syphilitic rheumatism; arthritis; neuritis; hyperacidity, uric acid, toxic poisons, acid conditions, acid poisons; catarrhal affections of the stomach, bowels, organs of respiration, kidneys and bladder; uterine catarrh; scrofulosis; diabetes mellitus; diabetes; skin diseases, ivy poison and other skin affections; diseases of the urinary, digestive and reproductive organs; diseases peculiar to women, female disorders, dysmenorrhea, leucorrhea, amenorrhea; high blood pressure; constipation and irregular bowels; kidney and gall stones and gall disorders; prostate troubles, chronic inflammation, enlargement and irritation of the prostate gland; stomach disorders and indigestion; chronic sinus infections; diseases of the liver; aching joints; lameness; sterility; pyorrhea; hives; obesity; and general debility.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondents, as hereinabove set forth, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public and cause them erroneously to believe that the use of said water alone will cure the various diseases, ailments, and conditions for which the respondents represent that said water is a cure, and cause them, because of said erroneous belief, to purchase respondents' said water. As a direct consequence of the acts and practices of the respondents, as hereinabove set forth, trade in said commerce is unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors who do not use the acts and practices used by the respondents to the substantial injury of such competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents Capon Water Company, Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., and Louis Austin are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

to the facts and its conclusion that the said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Capon Water Company, a corporation, and Capon Springs Mineral Water, Inc., a corporation, their officers, directors, agents, and employes, and Louis Austin, in connection with the offer for sale, sale, and distribution of the water known and described as "Capon Springs water" in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication, that the use of said water alone, either externally or internally, will cure kidney troubles; kidney pains, nephritis; bladder trouble; gout; rheumatism; syphilitic rheumatism; arthritis; neuritis; hyperacidity, uric acid, toxic poisons, acid conditions, acid poisons; catarrhal affections of the stomach, bowels, organs of respiration, kidneys and bladder; uterine catarrh, scrofulosis; diabetes mellitus; diabetes; skin diseases, ivy poison and other skin affections; diseases of the urinary, digestive and reproductive organs; diseases peculiar to women, female disorders, dysmenorrhea, leucorrhoea, amenorrhoea; high blood pressure; constipation and irregular bowels; kidney and gall stones and gall disorders; prostate troubles, chronic inflammation, enlargement and irritation of the prostate gland; stomach disorders and indigestion; chronic sinus infections; diseases of the liver; aching joints; lameness; sterility; pyorrhoea; hives; obesity; and general debility.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF DILLING & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 2915. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1936—Decision, Jan. 20, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including various packages or assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which included assortments composed of (1) number of pieces of candy, together with number of larger pieces and push card, for sale under a plan, and in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received, for penny paid, one of smaller pieces or one of larger pieces, in accordance with number pushed by chance, and purchaser of last push received one of aforesaid larger pieces, and (2) number of candy bars, together with box of chocolate and punchboard, for sale under a plan, and in accordance with said board's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received one or two additional bars of candy, in accordance with number punched by chance, and purchaser of last punch received box of candy, and, thereby, value in excess of 5 cents paid, as did chance procurers of bars of candy as aforesaid—

Sold to retailers for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plans said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said products in accordance with aforesaid sales plans, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public, so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by its said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and thereby induced to purchase said candy, thus packed and sold by it, in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to it trade and custom from its said competitors as aforesaid, exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition in said trade and tend to create a monopoly thereof in it and such other distributors as use same or equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.
Mr. Oren S. Hack, of Indianapolis, Ind., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Dilling & Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business at Dakota and Morris Streets and Chocolate Avenue, in the city of Indianapolis, State of Indiana. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Indianapolis, State of Indiana, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to retail dealers various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Certain of said packages are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but this list is not all inclusive of the various packages, nor does it include all the details of the several sales plans which respondent has been or is using in the distribution of candy by lot or chance:

(a) One of said assortments manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of pieces of candy and a number of larger pieces of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a legend or number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified legends or numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the small pieces of candy, and that certain other specified legends or numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the larger pieces of candy. The purchaser of the last push from said card is also entitled to one of the larger pieces of candy. The legends or numbers on the discs or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disc separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small bars of candy or one of the larger bars of candy for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of bars of candy and a box of chocolate, together with a device commonly called a punch board. The said bars of candy and box of chocolate are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punch board in the following manner:

The bars of candy are offered for sale at a price of 5 cents each. Each purchase of a bar entitles the purchaser to one push on the punch board. When punch is made from said board, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement informing the customer as to which numbers receive one or two additional bars of candy. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from the purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The purchaser qualifying for the last punch on the board receives the box of chocolate. The several bars of candy and box of chocolate are worth more than 5 cents, and a purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for additional bars of candy, or the box of chocolate, receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The bars of candy and the box of chocolate are thus distributed from punches on said board wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The retail dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, with the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure (a) larger pieces of candy, (b) additional bars of candy, or (c) boxes of chocolate.

The use by respondent of said method of the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on August 28, 1936, issued, and on August 31, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Dilling & Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business at Dakota and Morris Streets and Chocolate Avenue, in the city of Indianapolis, State of Indiana. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Indianapolis, State of Indiana, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been, for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to retail dealers various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of pieces of candy and a number of larger pieces of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a legend or number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified legends or numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the small pieces of candy, and that certain other specified legends or numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the larger pieces of candy. The purchaser of the last push from said card is also entitled to one of the larger pieces of candy. The legends or numbers on the discs or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disc separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small bars of candy or one of the larger bars of candy for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of bars of candy and a box of chocolate, together with a device commonly called a punch board. The said bars of candy and box of chocolate are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punch board in the following manner:

The bars of candy are offered for sale at a price of 5 cents each. Each purchase of a bar entitles the purchaser to one push on the punch board. When a punch is made from said board, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement informing the customer as to which numbers receive one or two additional bars of candy. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from the purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The purchaser qualifying for the last punch on the board receives the box of chocolate. The several bars of candy and box of chocolate are worth more than 5 cents each, and a purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for additional bars of candy, or the box of chocolate, receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The bars of candy are thus distributed from punches on said board wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The retail dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy or additional bars of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Dilling & Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Dilling & Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offer-

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punch board, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

4. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punch board, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card or punch board is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Dilling & Company, a corporation, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of face powders, skin tonics, and skin creams—

- (a) Represented, through expression "CERTIFIED COSMETICS" displayed on labels of practically all of its products, that its said cosmetics had been certified by some governmental or official authority;
- (b) Represented, through such expressions on labels of its "Wrinkle Eradicator" or "Wrinkle Creme" as "Combined with 100% Pure Turtle Oil" or "Combined with pure turtle oil," and "Rejuvenates the skin and removes lines and wrinkles * * *," and "Will soften and nourish the skin. * * *," that its said skin cream, as thus variously designated, had such qualities or properties and would accomplish said results, and contained turtle oil; and

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.

Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Moody, Eberle, Dierssen & Crane, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Arabian Toilet Goods Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been, and is now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Arabian Toilet Goods Company, is a corporation, organized in 1923, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal office and place of business at 225-227 West Huron Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and sale of cosmetics to the purchasing and consuming public located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent now causes, and for several years last past has caused, its products, when sold by it, to be shipped from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof, located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce, by the respondent, in cosmetics, between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships, engaged in the sale of cosmetics in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent offers for sale and sells its cosmetics, some of which are labeled as follows:

WRINKLE CREME

Combined with pure turtle oil. Will soften and nourish the skin. Leave on over night. If skin is abnormally dry and wrinkled, use "Wrinkle Creme and Muscle Oil mixed."

Complaint

"ARABIAN WRINKLE ERADICATOR

Combined With

100% Pure Turtle Oil

Rejuvenates the skin and removes lines and wrinkles around the eyes, throat, and mouth. First cleanse with Arabian Cleansing Cream, then apply Arabian Wrinkle Eradicator, leaving it on over night. Arabian Muscle Oil may be applied to give added strength and nourishment to the tissues."

In truth and in fact, the products so described and represented do not possess such properties as to nourish or rejuvenate the human skin, and neither will they eradicate wrinkles or give strength and nourishment to the tissues.

PAR. 3. Said respondent, acting through its duly authorized demonstrators and saleswomen whom it employs to display, demonstrate and sell its products in department stores, stated and represented to customers and prospective customers that its "Arabian Wrinkle Creme" is guaranteed by the United States Government to contain pure turtle oil; that such oil has been successfully used by the Government in removing scar tissue and wrinkles from wounded soldiers; and that the use of this ingredient is endorsed by the United States Government as a skin food and rejuvenator.

In truth and in fact, the United States Government has not used turtle oil in the manner described, and has not given any such guaranty or indorsement. The amount of turtle oil forming the fatty content of said product was not substantial nor sufficient to warrant the marking, branding, or representation of said product as containing "100% Turtle Oil."

PAR. 4. Said respondent further caused the words "Certified Cosmetics" to appear prominently on the labels affixed to the containers in which certain of its products were packed, sold, and distributed, as well as on the front page of price lists and other advertising literature distributed to purchasers and prospective purchasers wherein its products were sold.

In truth and in fact, said products were not certified, either as to their purity or in any other respect by any Government or other official authority.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and does mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said cosmetics from respondent on account of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph

1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of cosmetics who do not misrepresent the therapeutic qualities of their products, or otherwise publish claims for their products which are untrue, who likewise advertise, sell, and distribute their cosmetics among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 6. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 13, 1936, issued, and on November 17, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Arabian Toilet Goods Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by George J. Crane, attorney for the respondent, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (no oral argument having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Arabian Toilet Goods Company, Inc., is an Illinois corporation organized on August 3, 1923. Its principal office and place of business are at 225-227 West Huron Street, Chicago, Ill. It is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of cosmetics such as face powder, skin tonics and skin creams.

Respondent's cosmetics are manufactured at its place of business in Chicago, Ill., and distributed through department and drug stores throughout the United States. When orders are received for respondent's cosmetics, it causes them to be shipped from its place of business at Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Since the date of incorporation, the respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times since respondent entered into said business, it has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, of cosmetics in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent has advertised, and is now advertising, its cosmetics by means of labels attached to containers in which its products are packed, by sales talks, and by advertisements in daily newspapers having an interstate circulation. Until the early part of 1936, the front label of one of respondent's skin creams read as follows:

ARABIAN
WRINKLE ERADICATOR

The back label of said cream read as follows:

ARABIAN WRINKLE ERADICATOR
Combined with
100% Pure Turtle Oil
Rejuvenates the skin and removes lines and wrinkles around the eyes, throat and mouth. * * *

The front label in current use on said cream reads:

ARABIAN
CERTIFIED COSMETICS

The back label in current use on the cream reads as follows:

WRINKLE CREME

Combined with pure turtle oil. Will soften and nourish the skin. * * *

The expression "Certified Cosmetics" appears on the labels used on practically all of respondent's products.

The above statements serve as representations to purchasers and prospective purchasers and to the public generally that respondent's cosmetics have been certified by some governmental or official authority; that its skin cream, now designated Wrinkle Creme, will rejuvenate the skin and remove or eradicate wrinkles and lines; that said creme contains turtle oil and will nourish the skin.

One of respondent's methods of selling its products is through sales girls or demonstrators employed by respondent on a salary or commission basis. These sales girls or demonstrators occupy booths at appropriate places in the department stores which handle respondent's products. At these booths, the sales girls demonstrate and promote the sales of respondent's cosmetics. In promoting the sale of respondent's cosmetics, said demonstrators and sales girls have represented to purchasers and prospective purchasers (1) that respondents Wrinkle Creme was guaranteed by the United States Government to contain pure turtle oil; (2) that such oil has been successfully used by the United States Government in removing scar tissue and wrinkles from wounded soldiers; and (3) that the use of said turtle oil is endorsed by the United States Government as a skin food and rejuvenator.

PAR. 3. Respondent's skin creme, now labeled Wrinkle Creme, contains white wax, spermacetti, anhydrous lanolin, cocoa butter, water, liquid petrolatum, perfume oil, and coloring. At one time said creme contained turtle oil, 1 to 2 percent; aquaphill, 2½ to 5 percent; cocoa butter, 2 to 2½ percent; beeswax, 45 to 46 percent; spermacetti, 45 to 46 percent; and mineral oil.

Based upon the testimony and other evidence in this record, it is found that respondent's products have not been certified in any respect by any government or official authority; respondent's Wrinkle Creme will not rejuvenate the skin and remove or eradicate lines and wrinkles; it will not nourish the skin; and it does not now contain turtle oil. The United States Government has not guaranteed that respondent's Wrinkle Creme contains pure turtle oil. Turtle oil has not been successfully used by the United States Government in removing scar tissue and wrinkles from wounded soldiers and the use of turtle oil is not endorsed by the United States Government as a skin food or as a rejuvenator. The skin obtains its food or is nourished by the blood stream as are the other parts of the body and, although the use of creams or oils may tend to temporarily soften the skin and make lines and wrinkles less noticeable in some instances, nevertheless, they cannot be eliminated or eradicated thereby. Scars, especially superficial ones, can be made less noticeable through use of creams, oils, heat, and massage but they cannot be entirely eliminated by these treatments. The accepted specific treatment for removal of scars is surgery.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth above in its advertising literature and by its sales persons has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that respondent's cosmetics have been certified by some governmental or other official authority; that its facial cream designated Wrinkle Creme will eradicate or remove wrinkles and lines from the skin; that said Wrinkle Creme contains turtle oil and will nourish the skin; that said Wrinkle Creme has been guaranteed by the United States Government to contain pure turtle oil; that such oil has been successfully used by the United States Government in removing scar tissue and wrinkles from wounded soldiers; and that the use of said turtle oil is endorsed by the United States Government as a skin food and rejuvenator. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, or in the sale and distribution of cosmetics who truthfully represent the character and nature of their cosmetics and the efficacy and beneficial value of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Arabian Toilet Goods Company, Inc., a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Arabian Toilet Goods Company, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cosmetics in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That its cosmetics have been certified by any governmental or official authority;

2. That its skin cream now designated as Wrinkle Creme, or any other cream containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, sold under that name or any other name

(a) Will nourish or rejuvenate the skin;

(b) Will remove wrinkles and lines from the skin;

(c) Contains turtle oil or is guaranteed by the United States Government to contain pure turtle oil;

3. That turtle oil has been successfully used by the United States Government in removing scar tissue and wrinkles from wounded soldiers;

4. That the use of turtle oil has been endorsed or approved by the United States Government as a skin food and rejuvenator.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, The Federal Trade Commission did heretofore, to wit, on April 30, 1930, issue its complaint herein, charging and alleging that respondent herein was and had been guilty of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes"; and

Whereas, This Commission having reason to believe that respondent herein has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint as aforesaid, and it appearing to said Commission that a further proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest;

Now, therefore, Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of the Act of September 26, 1914, aforesaid, the Federal Trade Commission charges that the National Candy Company, Inc., has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 208 North Broadway, in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and with a place of business located at 341 West Erie Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent conducts its business from its principal office and place of business in St. Louis, Mo., as the National Candy Company, Inc., and it does business at its Chicago office and place of business as the Pan Confection Factory, National Candy Company, Inc.

Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States. It causes said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and from its place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof in the State of Missouri and in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of pieces of chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape, together with certain other articles of merchandise, which other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said chocolate-covered candies in the following manner:

The majority of said chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape have centers of the same color, but a small number thereof have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 2 for 1 cent, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a center of a color different from the majority of said candies is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the said other articles of merchandise hereinbefore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the other articles of merchandise. The color of the center of said pieces of chocolate-covered candy is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies who procure a piece of candy having a center colored differently from the majority and the purchaser of the last piece of candy in said assortment are thus to procure one of the other articles of merchandise wholly by chance.

Respondent furnishes to said wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers with each of said assortments a display card to be used by the retail dealer in offering said candies for sale to the public, which display card bears a legend or statement informing the prospective purchaser that the candy contained in said assortment is being distributed in accordance with the above-described sales plan.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of chocolate-covered candy malted-milk balls, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to the consuming public by means of the said push card in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and the said disks are arranged on said card in four sections. Concealed within each of said disks is a legend. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card has statements or legends at the top thereof stating that certain specified legends entitled the purchaser to 1 of said chocolate-covered malted-milk balls; that certain other specified legends entitled the purchaser to 2 of said candy balls; others to 3 candy balls; others to 5 candy balls; others to 6 candy balls; others to 8 candy balls; others to 10 candy balls; and others to 20 candy balls. The card also bears statements or legends stating that the last play in each of the first 3 sections completed receives 5 balls. The last play on the card receives 15 balls. The statements or legends in said partially perforated disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 10, 15, or 20 of said chocolate-covered malted-milk balls is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortments of candy resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. Such sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure (a) another article of merchandise; or (b) additional chocolate-covered malted-milk balls.

The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on April 30, 1930, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, National Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, in its own name and right and trading as Pan Confection Factory, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, on April 22, 1937, the Commission issued and served its amended and supplemental complaint on the respondent, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint on April 30, 1930, as aforesaid. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the amended and supplemental complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended and supplemental complaint and amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 208 North Broadway, in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and with a place of business located at 341 West Erie Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent conducts its business from its principal office and place of business in St. Louis, Mo., as the National Candy Company, Inc., and it does business at its Chicago office and place of business as the Pan Confection Factory, National Candy Company, Inc.

Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States. It causes said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and from its place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof in the State of Missouri and in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of pieces of chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape, together with certain other articles of merchandise, which other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said chocolate-covered candies in the following manner:

The majority of said chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape have centers of the same color, but a small number thereof have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 2 for 1 cent, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a center of a color different from the majority of said candies is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the said other articles of merchandise hereinbefore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of chocolate-covered candies of uniform size and shape is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the other articles of merchandise. The color of the center of said pieces of chocolate-covered candy is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies who procure a piece of candy having a center colored differently from the majority in said assortment are thus to procure one of the other articles of merchandise wholly by chance.

Respondent furnishes to said wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers with each of said assortments a display card to be used by the retail dealer in offering said candies for sale to the public, which display card bears a legend or statement informing the prospective purchaser that the candy contained in said assortment is being distributed in accordance with the above described sales plan.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of chocolate-covered candy malted-milk balls, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to the consuming public by means of the said push card in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and the said disks are arranged on said card in four sections. Concealed within each of said disks is a legend. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card has statements or legends at the top thereof stating that certain specified legends entitle the purchaser to 1 of said chocolate-covered malted-milk balls; that certain other specified legends entitle the purchaser to 2 of said candy balls; others to 3 candy balls; others to 5 candy balls; others to 6 candy balls; others to 8 candy balls; others to 10 candy balls; and others to 20 candy balls. The card also bears statements or legends stating that the last play in each of the first three sections completed receives 5 balls. The last play on the card receives 15 balls. The statements or legends in said partially perforated disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 10, 15, or 20 of said chocolate-covered malted-milk balls is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a number of pieces of candy, or other articles of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit; that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, National Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, in its own name and right and trading as Pan Confection Factory, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission and the amended answer of respondent, National Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, trading in its own name and right and trading as Pan Confection Factory, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, National Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, trading in its own name and right and trading as Pan Confection Factory, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise which said larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

5. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card or punchboard is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

Order

It is further ordered, That the respondent, National Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, in its own name, and right and trading as Pan Confection Factory, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT

tion in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Abraham and Straus, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business located at Fulton and Hoyt Streets in the city of Brooklyn in said State. It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells and distributes women's wearing apparel, pillows, and other allied products. It sells, and has sold and distributed, such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondent in said merchandise so sold by it between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of pillows, women's wearing apparel, and other allied products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 herein, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling said merchandise, caused, and now causes, advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers having an interstate circulation. In said advertising matter certain pillows were, and are, represented, designated, and referred to as "silk" and as "heavy silk." In such advertising matter certain items of women's wearing apparel were advertised, designated, and referred to as "seraceta taffeta," "pure dye, pure silk prints * * * many copies of imported silks * * * washable crepes * * * muffler silks * * * and silk jerseys."

Such statements and representations on the part of respondent serve as representations to members of the public that such products so advertised and offered for sale were silk products. The representations hereinabove set forth are, and were, grossly false and misleading in that said pillows and items of wearing apparel so represented, designated, and referred to are not, and were not, composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but were composed of materials other than silk.

PAR. 3. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the mind of the consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics. A variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving of silk fiber. Pillows, dress goods, and other items of women's wearing apparel, designated, described, or referred to as "silk," "heavy silks," "seraceta taffeta," "pure dye," "pure silk," "imported silks," "washable crepes," "muffler silks," and "silk jerseys" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as "silk."

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are, and were, true and to cause them to purchase such items of wearing apparel on account of such erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth. There are, among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale of pillows and women's wearing apparel who do not misrepresent the kind of wearing apparel offered for sale. By use of the representations aforesaid, trade has been, and is, unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors and thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Abraham & Straus, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, and Proskauer, Rose & Paskus, counsel for the respondent, executed a stipulation as to the facts wherein it was agreed that the statement of facts therein recited might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts was subsequently approved by the Commission and was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto and said stipulation as to the facts; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Abraham & Straus, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Fulton and Hoyt Streets in the Borough of Brooklyn, city of New York, in said State. It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells and distributes women's wearing apparel, pillows, and other allied products. It sells, and has sold and distributed, such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing public located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of pillows, women's wearing apparel and other allied products, in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, some of which said competitors sell and distribute their merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its said merchandise, caused, and now causes, advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers having an interstate circulation. In said advertising matter, certain pillows were represented, designated, and referred to as "silk" and "heavy silk." In such advertising matter, certain items of women's wearing apparel were advertised, designated, and referred to as "pure dye, pure silk prints * * * many copies of imported silks * * * muffler silks * * * and silk jerseys," and were advertised, designated, and referred to as "taffeta" and "crepe" without a modifying word to indicate the fiber of which the fabric was made.

PAR. 3. In the manner and through the means above stated, respondent represented, and represents, to members of the purchasing public that such products so advertised and offered for sale were silk products. The representations hereinabove set forth are, and were, misleading in that said pillows and items of wearing apparel so represented, designated, and referred to were not, and are not, composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but were composed of materials other than silk.

PAR. 4. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the mind of the consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics. A variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving of silk fiber. Pillows, dress goods, and other items of women's wearing apparel designated, described or referred to as "pure dye," "silk," "heavy silks," "pure silk," "imported silks," "muffler silks," and "silk jerseys" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as "silk." Pillows, dress goods, and other items of women's wearing apparel designated, described, or referred to as "taffeta" and "crepe" when used alone, without a modifying word descriptive of the fiber from which they are made, have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as "silk."

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the representations set forth herein have had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such articles were made of silk, and to cause them to purchase such articles on account of such erroneous beliefs. The representations made by respondent as aforesaid are deceptive and misleading and have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert trade to respondent from said competitors. Thereby substantial injury is being done and has been done by the respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Abraham & Straus, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That respondent, Abraham & Straus, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its merchandise, dress goods, and garments in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word or words "silk," "heavy silk," "pure silk prints," "imported silks," "muffler silks," or "silk jerseys," or any word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe products which are not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but which are composed of a material or materials other than silk.

2. Using the words "crepe" or "taffeta" to describe, advertise, brand, or label any product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless there is used in immediate connection and conjunction with said words "taffeta" or "crepe," in letters of equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words accurately describing the material or materials from which said products are actually made.

3. Using the words "pure dye" as descriptive of products which are not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pearson Candy Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of Minnesota with its principal place of business in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota. Respondent is now, and for several years last past, has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy, between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers, various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Certain of said packages are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent but this list is not inclusive of the various packages nor does it include all the details of the sales plan which respondent has been or is using in the distribution of candy by lot or chance.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces of candy and a small box of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortments is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers which numbers receive one of the small pieces of candy, which numbers receive one of the larger pieces of candy and that the purchaser of the last push from said card receives the small box of candy. The numbers on said card are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a push or selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small pieces of candy, one of the larger pieces of candy, or the small box of candy is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of candy bars, two small boxes of candy, and a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card is divided into two sections and each section has a number of partially perforated disks. When a push is made a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers receive one bar of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive two bars of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive three bars of candy, that the last push in one section receives one of the boxes of candy, and the last push on the board receives the other box of candy. The numbers on the disks or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. That fact as to whether a purchaser receives one candy bar, two candy bars, three candy bars or one of the small boxes of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(c) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent includes a number of boxes of candy of varying size and another article of merchandise together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The box of candy and the other article of merchandise are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

The board has a number of holes therein and secreted in each hole is a slip of paper bearing a number. When a punch is made from said board one of these slips is disclosed. The board bears legends or statements informing the customers and prospective customers as to which numbers receive particular pieces of candy and that the last punch of said board receives the other article of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy or by purchasing the last punch on the board receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The boxes of candy and other article of merchandise are worth more than 5 cents each. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the slip of paper separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives nothing for his money, one of the boxes of candy or the other article of merchandise for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure (a) and (b) larger pieces of candy or small box of candy, (c) boxes of candy or another article of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method of the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 31, 1936 issued, and on February 3, 1936 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Pearson Candy Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and amended answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of Minnesota with its principal place of business in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota. Respondent is now, and for several years last past, has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota, to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy, between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers, various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces of candy, and a small box of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortments is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers which numbers receive one of the small pieces of candy, which numbers receive one of the larger pieces of candy and that the purchaser of the last push from said card receives the small box of candy. The numbers on said card are effectively concealed from customers and prospective customers until a push or selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small pieces of candy or one of the larger pieces of candy is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of candy bars, two small boxes of candy, and a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card is divided into two sections and each section has a number of partially perforated disks. When a push is made a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers receive one bar of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive two bars of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive three bars of candy, that the last push in one section receives one of the boxes of candy and the last push on the board receives the other box of candy. The numbers on the disks or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one candy bar, two candy bars or three candy bars for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(c) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent includes a number of boxes of candy of varying size and another article of merchandise together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The box of candy and the other article of merchandise are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punch-board in the following manner:

The board has a number of holes therein and secreted in each hole is a slip of paper bearing a number. When a punch is made from said board one of these slips is disclosed. The board bears legends or statements informing the customers and prospective customers as to which numbers receive particular boxes of candy and that the last punch of said board receives the other article of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy or by purchasing the last punch on the board receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The boxes of candy and other article of merchandise are worth more than 5 cents each. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the slip of paper separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives nothing for his money or one of the boxes of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy, additional bars of candy, or boxes of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Pearson Candy Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the amended answer of respondent, Pearson Candy Company, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pearson Candy Company, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

4. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card or punchboard is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Pearson Candy Company, a corporation, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2696. Complaint, Jan. 31, 1936—Decision, Jan. 25, 1938

Where a firm engaged in manufacture and sale of packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, or so-called "draw" or "deal" assortments, sale, and distribution of which type candy, affording, in connection with sale thereof to public, means or opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children, who constitute substantial number of purchasers and consumers of such type of candy where prize in form of larger pieces is to them attractive, and appearance of which "draw" or "deal" assortments in the markets of manufacturers of "straight" merchandise has been followed by marked decrease in sale of such "straight" goods, due to gambling or lottery feature connected with other—

Sold to wholesalers and retailers lottery assortments as aforesaid, including those composed of number of small pieces of candy, together with number of larger pieces and push card for sale under a plan, and in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received, for 5 cents paid, one of the smaller or one of the larger pieces, in accordance with number secured by chance from aforesaid card, and others involving same principle and type of merchandise in which sales were 1 cent instead of 5 cents each, so packed and assembled that they were and might be displayed and used by numerous retail dealer purchasers thereof for distribution and resale to purchasing public by lot or chance, as packed as aforesaid and without alteration or rearrangement, with knowledge and intent that such candy should and would thus be resold to purchasing public by lot or chance by said retail dealers;

Contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who regard such sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling, and especially among children, and as injurious to the candy industry through resulting in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy, and as providing retail merchants with a means of violating the laws of the several States, and who refuse to adopt such method of selling as contrary to public policy, and some of whom, for such reasons, refuse to sell candy so packed that it can be resold to public by lot or chance;

With result that such competitors were put to a competitive disadvantage and retailers, finding that they could dispose of more candy by "draw" or "deal" method, bought from it and others employing same methods of sale, and trade was thereby diverted from said competitors to it and others using similar methods, and with effect of excluding from trade in question all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent method, and of lessening competition therein, and with tendency to

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Walter T. Hall and Minnie M. Hall, individually, and as copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company with their principal office and place of business located in the city of Ottumwa, State of Iowa. They are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and cause the said products, when so sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Ottumwa, Iowa, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and individuals, and with corporations engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said packages is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but this particular package is not all-inclusive of the various packages nor does it include all of the details of the several sales plans which respondent has been or is using in the distribution of candy by lot or chance. Certain of said assortments manufactured and distributed by the respondents are composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces of candy, and a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortments is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each and the card bears a statement or legend informing the customer and prospective customer which numbers receive the larger pieces of candy. All other numbers receive one of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on said card are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or disc separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small pieces of candy or one of the larger pieces of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents manufacture and distribute several assortments involving the same principle and the same type of merchandise as described in the assortment above where sales are 5 cents each, and also manufacture and distribute assortments involving the same principle where the sales are 1 cent each instead of 5 cents.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondents sell their assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondents sell direct, expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger or additional items of candy.

The use by respondents of said method of the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 31, 1936, issued and served its complaint upon the respondents, Walter T. Hall and Minnie M. Hall, individually, and as copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by P. C. Kolinski, attorney for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Respondents appeared by Attorney Walter C. Hughes, but offered no testimony in opposition to the allegations of the complaint. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Walter T. Hall and Minnie M. Hall, are individuals doing business as a copartnership under the firm name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company with their principal office and place of business located in the city of Ottumwa, State of Iowa. Respondents are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers and to retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and cause the said products, when so sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Ottumwa, Iowa, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and individuals, and with corporations engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortment was described by one of the respondents called as a witness on behalf of the Commission and was offered as an exhibit. This assortment is composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces of candy and a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each and the card bears a statement or legend informing the customer and prospective customer which numbers receive the larger pieces of candy. All other numbers receive one of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on said card are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or disc separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the small pieces of candy or one of the larger pieces of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents manufacture and distribute several assortments involving the same principle and the same type of merchandise as described in the assortment above where sales are 5 cents each, and they also manufacture and distribute assortments involving the same principle where the sales are 1 cent each instead of 5 cents each.

PAR. 3. Candy assortments involving the lot or chance feature as described in paragraph 2 above are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "draw" or "deal" assortments. Assortments of candy without any lot or chance feature in connection with their resale to the public are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "straight" merchandise. These terms will be used hereafter in these findings to distinguish the various types of assortments.

PAR. 4. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell their assortments, resell the same to retail dealers. Numerous retail dealers purchase the said assortments from said wholesale dealers and jobbers, and such retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondents sell direct, display said assortments for sale to the public as packed by the respondents, and the candy contained in the majority of said assortments is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push cards or punch boards in the manner hereinbefore described.

PAR. 5. All sales made by respondents to wholesale dealers and jobbers are absolute sales and respondents retain no control over said assortments after they are delivered to the wholesale dealer or jobber. The assortments are assembled and packed in such manner that they are, and have been, used, and may be used, by retail dealers for distribution to the purchasing public by lot or chance without alteration or rearrangement.

In the sale and distribution to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers of the assortments of candy hereinbefore described, respondents have knowledge that the said candy is to be resold to the purchasing public by retail dealers by lot or chance, and they pack such candy in the way and manner described so that, without alteration, addition, or rearrangement thereof, it will be, and may be, resold to the public by lot or chance by said retail dealers. Such packing and distribution of candies is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 6. There are in the United States many manufacturers of candy who do not manufacture and sell "draw" or "deal" assortments of candy and who sell their "straight" merchandise in interstate commerce in competition with the "draw" or "deal" candy, and manufacturers of "straight" merchandise have noted a marked decrease in the sales of their products whenever or wherever the "draw" or "deal" assortments have appeared in their market. This decrease in the sale of "straight" merchandise is due to the gambling or lottery feature connected with the "draw" or "deal" candy.

Witnesses from several branches of the candy industry testified in this proceeding to the effect that consumers preferred to purchase the "draw" or "deal" candy because of the gambling feature connected with its sale. The sale and distribution of "draw" or "deal" assortments of candy, or of candy which has connected with its sale to the public the means or opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children who comprise a substantial number of the purchasers and consumers of this type of candy. This is true where the prize is made attractive to children in the form of larger pieces of candy.

PAR. 7. The sale and distribution of candy by the methods described herein is the sale and distribution of candy by lot or chance, and constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise. Competitors of respondents appeared as witnesses in this proceeding and testified, and the Commission finds that many competitors regard such sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling, especially among children, and as injurious to the candy industry because it results in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy and has provided retail merchandise with a means of violating the laws of the several states. Such competitors also refuse to adopt such method of selling because it is contrary to public policy. Because of these reasons, some competitors of respondents refuse to sell candy so packed that it can be resold to the public by lot or chance. These competitors are thereby put to a competitive disadvantage. The retailers, finding that they can dispose of more candy by the "draw" or "deal" method, buy from respondents and others employing the same methods of sale, and thereby trade is diverted from said competitors to respondents and others using similar methods.

Such methods exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method, lessen competition in said candy trade, and tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and such other distributors who use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Walter T. Hall, and Minnie M. Hall, individually, and as copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and brief in support of the complaint filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Walter T. Hall and Minnie M. Hall, individually, and as copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company, or trading under any other name, their agents, representatives, and employees, in the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy and candy products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers packages or assortments of candy which are used or may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in the said assortment to the public;

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

4. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Walter T. Hall and Minnie M. Hall, individually, and as copartners doing business under the name and style of Walter T. Hall & Company, shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

THE GREAT ATLANTIC & PACIFIC TEA COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, "CONCLUSION," AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF PAR. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3031. Complaint, Jan. 13, 1937—Decision, Jan. 25, 1938

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, PAR. (c)—BUYER "BROKERAGE" PAYMENTS—NET PRICES THROUGH DEDUCTION EQUIVALENT FORMER "BUYER", AND CURRENT SELLER, BROKERAGE, AS INVOLVING "ALLOWANCE OR DISCOUNT IN LIEU" OF.

The supposed distinction between a discount or allowance equivalent to brokerage made as a part of the price of goods and a discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage reflected by the price of goods, is too tenuous for approval, and, in view of plain and simple meaning of words "in lieu of," "discount," and "allowance," it is impossible to say that net price arrived at by deducting from regular price amount equal to brokerage formerly, but no longer to be, paid by sellers to buyer through latter's agents and employees, and to that by sellers' currently paid own brokers, is price which does not involve discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, PAR. (a) AND (c), (d), AND (e)—BUYER "BROKERAGE" PAYMENTS—BUYER AGENTS' SELLER "SERVICES" RE MARKETING CONDITIONS, ETC., INCIDENT SUCH AGENTS PURCHASING ACTIVITIES AND EMPLOYER DUTY—"EXCEPT FOR SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH THE SALE OF GOODS"—ACT'S SCOPE, AS AMENDED.

The Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has a dual purpose apparent both from the act itself and from the Congressional committee reports, and was directed not only at price discriminations, but also at certain practices involving both such discriminations and unfair methods of competition, as there prohibited, and Congress intended to prescribe absolutely and unconditionally as an undesirable and unfair trade practice and method of competition payment of brokerage and granting of any allowance or discount in lieu thereof by sellers to buyers on latter's own purchases of goods, involving no savings to seller other than brokerage otherwise payable to independent broker as result of dealing direct through buyer's agent; said "services rendered" clause not being intended to set up a condition upon which such brokerage could be paid or such allowance or discount granted, but having relation to genuine seller brokerage services, and not, in any event, embracing activities of incidental benefit to seller, by buyer's employee agents in buyer's interest.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, PAR. (c) AND (a)—BUYER "BROKERAGE" PAYMENTS—FORMER'S INHIBITIONS AS NOT PERMITTING SELLERS' BROKERAGE SAVING PAYMENTS TO BUYER UNDER LATTER'S "DUE ALLOWANCE" PROVISIO.

While paragraph (a), prohibiting both direct and indirect discrimination in price, and paragraph (c), containing certain inhibitions with respect to payment or receipt of brokerage under certain conditions, as therein specified, have in common the purpose of eliminating unfair price discriminations, they were intended by Congress to be separately and independently applied, and it was not meant that paragraph (a), with its saving proviso that nothing therein contained should "prevent differentials which make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered," should limit or qualify the prohibition or application of the other, which is complete on its face and deals specifically with particular trade practice regarded by Congress as unfair method of competition and, per se, injurious to commerce, and therefore to be prohibited.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, PAR. (c)—BUYER "BROKERAGE" PAYMENTS—ADVERSE COMPETITIVE EFFECT SHOWING AS NOT PREREQUISITE IN PROCEEDINGS UNDER.

While acceptance of discounts in lieu of brokerage by corporation respondent in proceeding under aforesaid paragraph was found to tend to injure competition between such corporation and its competitors and to injure competition between sellers who granted such discounts and allowances to it and those who did not, such fact was not considered by Commission in arriving at its conclusion of violation of said paragraph, for the reason that, as matter of law, it is unnecessary for injurious effect upon competition, in proceedings instituted thereunder, to be shown.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, PAR. (c)—BUYER "BROKERAGE" PAYMENTS—NET PRICES AND "QUANTITY" DISCOUNTS IN LIEU OF—BENEFITS TO SELLERS INCIDENT TO BUYER-AGENTS' PURCHASING ACTIVITIES AND DUTIES, AND DIFFERENTIALS OR DISCOUNTS ASSERTEDLY REFLECTING COST DIFFERENCES UNDER PAR. (a), AS NOT SAVING.

Where corporation engaged, with affiliates, in ownership and operation of nearly 15,000 retail grocery stores in 38 States and in District of Columbia, in competition with many retail grocery concerns in every city in which it operated, and in purchasing for resale at its said stores through various, exclusively controlled, employee field buying agents, charged with finding it sources of supply, furnishing it market information, and purchasing, and

Who, (1) as incident to discharge of their said purchasing duties, and acting in its sole interest, advised, as customary, sellers as to market conditions, and as to improvement and quality of their products, containers, and routing, and relieved same, at times, and when not contrary to its interest, and with its authorization, of carry-overs or surpluses threatening markets' stability, or of large quantities of commodities to avoid acute financial embarrassment; and

Whom (2) it instructed, following said law's enactment, and fearing "brokerage" loss theretofore enjoyed, to purchase for it on either net price basis reflecting brokerage discounts theretofore paid it monthly through its said employee buying agents by sellers, and equivalent to brokerage paid by such sellers to brokers for bona fide selling services rendered, or on basis and pretext of "quantity discount agreements" reflecting aforesaid brokerage discounts, and, in case of those unwilling so to sell on either, to arrange for payment in escrow, or treatment as "abeyance accounts" on sellers' books, of such brokerage theretofore paid;

And neither intending to, nor rendering, directly or by or through any of its said field buying agents or employees, any true brokerage or selling services whatsoever, or any other form of services in connection with purchase of commodities by, or sale thereof to, it, and following aforesaid enactment—

- (a) Made purchases and received and accepted, from many competitively selling in interstate commerce through brokers, allowances, and discounts in lieu of brokerage, through purchase, as aforesaid, of commodities in interstate commerce, for resale in its aforesaid retail grocery stores, on aforesaid net price basis, reflecting reduction from sellers' current prices to other customers or from general market prices at which commodities were being sold by said sellers, of amount of brokerage paid by sellers to its said field buying agents prior to law's enactment, and currently paid by sellers to own brokers, and concession not accorded, with negligible and immaterial exceptions, to sellers' other customer purchasers; and
- (b) Made purchases and received and accepted, from many competitively selling in interstate commerce through brokers, allowances, and discounts in lieu of brokerage, through purchases, as aforesaid, of commodities in interstate commerce, for resale in its aforesaid retail grocery stores, on basis and pretext of so-called and pretended quantity discount agreements, providing for monthly payment to it, as so-called quantity discount, of amount equal to and reflecting brokerage paid monthly by sellers in question to its said field buying agents prior to aforesaid law, and currently paid by sellers to own brokers, and concession not accorded, with negligible and immaterial exceptions, to sellers' other customer purchasers;

With result that effect of receipt by it of such allowances and discounts in lieu of said "brokerage" was and would continue to be to cause substantial injury to competition between those sellers who had granted and paid such allowances and discounts to it and those who had refused to do so, by reason of diversion of its business from latter to former, and there was a direct and immediate tendency substantially to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between it and its competitors in resale of commodities, upon purchase of which it received aforesaid allowances and discounts, through enabling it thereby to purchase commodities at prices substantially lower than those at which its competitors could and did purchase same from sellers, and thereby to resell such commodities at prices substantially lower than those at which competitors could so resell:

Held, That such acceptance of such net prices and quantity discounts, as aforesaid, constituted acceptance of discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, in violation of provisions of section 2 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936.

Mr. J. J. Smith, Jr. and Mr. W. N. Baughman for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of Section 2 (c) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

Alton Canning Company, Inc., of Alton, N. Y. (a New York corporation); Fred B. Huxley, trading as F. B. Huxley & Son, of Alton, N. Y.; The H. J. McGrath Company, of Baltimore, Md. PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, since June 19, 1936, respondent has been and is now making purchases in commerce of goods, wares, and merchandise from said sellers, which said goods, wares, and merchandise the respondent has been and is now purchasing from said sellers, shipping, distributing, and causing to be sold, shipped, and distributed to it by said sellers in commerce from various States of the United States through, across, and into other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and since June 19, 1936, in the course of making said purchases in commerce of said goods, wares, and merchandise from said sellers, purchased, shipped, and distributed and caused to be sold, shipped, and distributed in commerce by respondent from various States of the United States through, across, and into other States of the United States and the District of Columbia as aforesaid, the respondent has been and is now receiving and accepting from said sellers allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage upon respondent's said purchases in commerce of said goods, wares, and merchandise from said sellers, for which said allowances and discounts upon respondent's said purchases in commerce of said goods, wares, and merchandise from said sellers no services whatsoever have at any time been rendered or are now being rendered by respondent or by any agent, representative, or intermediary subject to the direct or indirect control of respondent to, for, or on behalf of said sellers in connection with respondent's said purchases in commerce of said goods, wares, and merchandise from said sellers.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 2 (c) of the above mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (The Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on January 13, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, respondent herein, charging it with violating the provisions of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the said Act as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by J. J. Smith, Jr., and W. N. Baughman, attorneys for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, an examiner for the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Caruthers Ewing, Watson, King & Brode and George J. Feldman, attorneys for the said respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of the said J. J. Smith, Jr., for the Commission, and the said Caruthers Ewing for the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusions:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and maintains its principal office and place of business at 420 Lexington Avenue, in the city of New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. The respondent is engaged in the retail grocery business, and, together with its affiliates, owns and operates more than 14,800 retail grocery stores located in 38 States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent is engaged in competition with many retail grocery concerns in every city in which it operates a store or stores; and the respondent purchases for resale at its said stores commodities which it causes to be shipped in interstate commerce from the State in which said commodities are located at the time they are purchased by the respondent across State lines through and into States other than the State in which said commodities are located at the time they are purchased by the respondent, and the respondent ships commodities from its warehouses across State lines to its stores located in States other than the States in which its said warehouses are located.

PAR. 4. The respondent's organization is divided along geographical lines into a number of divisions, each division being composed of several units, a unit being the territory serviced by a central warehouse operated by the respondent and from which respondent's various retail stores in that territory obtain most of the commodities sold to the public by the respondent at its said stores. The purchasing operations of each division are under the general supervision and control of a purchasing director for that division. Each warehouse or unit, however, has a warehouse buyer, or unit buyer, hereinafter referred to as warehouse buyer, who is authorized to, and does, purchase commodities for distribution from that warehouse to the respondent's stores located in the territory serviced by it.

PAR. 5. Several years prior to the filing of the complaint herein, the respondent established, and has since continuously maintained and now maintains, geographically convenient to important sources of supply, a number of central buying offices, located in Rochester, N. Y.; Baltimore, Md.; New Orleans, La.; San Francisco, Calif.; Milwaukee, Wis., and other cities. These central buying offices continuously have been and now are in charge of and operated by agents employed by the respondent. The duties of said agents continuously have been and now are to find sources of supply for the respondent, to furnish the respondent with market information, and to purchase commodities for the respondent.

PAR. 6. Both before and after June 19, 1936, the agents in charge of said central buying offices were, and now are, employed by the respondent on a salary basis, and all of their office expenses were and now are paid by the respondent. Prior to June 19, 1936, respondent called said agents "brokers," thereafter, "purchasing agents," "field buying agents," or "buyers," but this change in name involved no change in said agents' aforesaid duties to the respondent or in their methods of operating in performing those duties. Said agents are hereinafter referred to as field buying agents.

PAR. 7. At all times during the period in which said field buying agents have been employed by respondent said field buying agents have been, and are now, employed solely by respondent, and by no individual, partnership, or corporation whatsoever other than respondent, and in all matters and transactions participated in by said field buying agents relative to or in connection with the business of respondent or the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent, said field buying agents acted, and now act, in fact for and in behalf, and as the agents and representatives of respondent only, and in such matters and transactions said field buying agents did not, and do not now, act in fact for or in behalf, or as the agents or representatives, of any individual, partnership, or corporation whatsoever other than respondent.

PAR. 8. At all times during the period in which said field buying agents have been employed by respondent said field buying agents were, and are now, subject to and under the sole control of respondent in all matters and transactions participated in by said field buying agents relative to or in connection with the business of respondent or the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent, and in such matters and transactions said field buying agents were not, and are not now, subject to or under the control of, or controlled by, any individual, partnership, or corporation whatsoever other than the respondent.

PAR. 9. The loyalty and allegiance of respondent's field buying agents are due solely to the respondent, and in all matters and transactions participated in by said field buying agents relative to or in connection with the business of respondent or the purchase of commodities by or the sale thereof to the respondent, said field buying agents devote their loyalty and allegiance solely to the respondent.

PAR. 10. The respondent is the sole direct and intended beneficiary of all activities of said field buying agents in connection with negotiations for the purchase and the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent, and the benefits to sellers from such activities are incidental to the services rendered by said field buying agents to the respondent.

PAR. 11. The field buying agents of the respondent operate as follows, to wit: From persons engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling commodities in the respective territories in which said field buying agents are located, such persons being hereinafter referred to as sellers, the field buying agents obtain prices on commodities being offered for sale by said sellers. If the price and quality of the commodities offered for sale by said sellers meet the approval of said field buying agents they communicate their information to the respondent's divisional purchasing directors, warehouse buyers, and others in the respondent's employ. If a field buying agent thinks that commodities offered for sale by sellers are not of proper quality or are not offered at a satisfactory price or that it would not be to the interest of the respondent to purchase said commodities, he either so informs the respondent's purchasing directors and warehouse buyers or he does not communicate those sellers' offerings to them. When a purchasing director or warehouse buyer desires any commodities concerning which he has received information from a field buying agent, or which he knows a field buying agent can purchase for him, he communicates that fact to the field buying agent whom he instructs to purchase the desired commodities. The field buying agent then negotiates with various sellers of said commodities for price and terms satisfactory to the respondent, and, if able to come to an agreement with a seller on such price and terms, purchases the desired commodities for the respondent. Having purchased commodities from a seller, the field buying agent usually confirms his purchase by executing a purchase order or contract which he signs for and on behalf of the respondent and as its agent and forwards to the seller.

PAR. 12. In the course of performing their duties to the respondent its field buying agents exchange with sellers, as is customary in the trade, information of all kinds affecting market conditions. At times said field buying agents visit the manufacturing establishments of sellers and advise sellers how to improve the quality of sellers' commodities and in what size containers said commodities should be packed. Said field buying agents also furnish sellers with traffic information concerning the routing of commodities purchased by the respondent. At times when sellers have made special drives to dispose of carry-overs or surplus commodities which have threatened to unstabilize markets, and at times when some sellers have needed immediately to dispose of large quantities of their commodities to avoid incipient bankruptcy or other acute financial embarrassment, the respondent's field buying agents, when not contrary to the interests of the respondent, have brought such matters to the attention of respondent's divisional purchasing directors and warehouse buyers, requesting them to cooperate with sellers in sellers' efforts to sell said commodities, and on instructions from said divisional purchasing directors and warehouse buyers have purchased for the respondent large quantities of commodities from such sellers. While sellers benefit from the information and advice of respondent's field buying agents with respect to market conditions, routing of shipments, improving the quality of commodities, and size of containers, and the activities of said field buying agents in cases of carry-overs, surpluses, and financial distress, it is the duty of respondent's field buying agents, and it is to the interest of the respondent, to develop and maintain adequate sources of supply of commodities of good quality packed in popular size containers and to have shipments of commodities routed as desired by the respondent; it is also to the interest of the respondent to avoid carry-overs and surpluses which threaten to destabilize markets. [In] The activities of respondent's field buying agents in connection with furnishing information and advice to sellers, and in bringing to the attention of respondent's divisional purchasing directors and warehouse buyers sellers' desires or necessities in connection with disposing of large quantities of their commodities and requesting their cooperation with such sellers, said field buying agents are rendering services to, and promoting the interest of, the respondent and are not performing or rendering to sellers any selling or brokerage service or any services whatsoever in connection with the sale of goods by said sellers to the respondent or the purchase thereof by the respondent from said sellers.

PAR. 13. On said field buying agents' purchases of commodities for respondent prior to June 19, 1936, the sellers of such commodities paid monthly to said field buying agents brokerage in the same amount paid by said sellers to brokers who sold commodities as agents of and for said sellers, which brokerage the said field buying agents received for and on behalf of respondent, and as the property of respondent, and paid over to the respondent, said field buying agents neither having nor claiming any right, title, or interest therein whatsoever.

PAR. 14. Shortly after June 19, 1936, the respondent instructed its field buying agents to accept no more brokerage on their purchases of commodities for respondent, and to make all future purchases of commodities for respondent on one of the following bases, to which instructions said field buying agents conformed, to wit:

(a) To purchase commodities for respondent on a net basis reflecting a reduction from sellers' current prices to other customers, or from the general market prices at which commodities were being sold by said sellers, of the amount of brokerage paid by said sellers to said field buying agents prior to June 19, 1936, as aforesaid in paragraph 13, supra, and currently being paid by said sellers to their brokers.

(b) To execute so-called "quantity discount agreements" with sellers upon the form appearing in the record herein as Respondent's Exhibit 18-C. Said agreement forms were filled in to provide for the payment to the respondent monthly, as a so-called "quantity discount," of an amount equal to the brokerage paid monthly by said sellers to said field buying agents prior to June 19, 1936, as aforesaid in paragraph 13, supra, and currently being paid by said sellers to their brokers. In some instances said agreements were made retroactive from the date of execution to June 19, 1936, and in some instances where said agreements purported to require the respondent to purchase a stipulated quantity of commodities during the existence of the agreement in order to earn the "discount" for which provision was therein made, it was understood and agreed between the respondent's said field buying agents and the sellers that the respondent was to receive said "discount" regardless of the provisions of said agreements with respect to the quantity of commodities to be purchased by the respondent thereunder.

(c) To make with sellers unwilling to sell on either of the two preceding bases an agreement providing that said sellers were to keep a record of all brokerage which but for the Robinson-Patman Act said sellers would have paid to said field buying agents as aforesaid in paragraph 13, supra, and to pay said brokerage in escrow, or set it up as an "abeyance account" on the sellers' books, said brokerage to be paid to the respondent when, as, and if, the legality of the payment thereof should be determined.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has purchased commodities in interstate commerce on each of said bases.

PAR. 15. Subsequent to the effective date of the Robinson-Patman Act the said field buying agents of the respondent knew the current prices at which sellers from whom they were purchasing commodities for the respondent, were selling those commodities to their customers other than respondent, and were at all times well posted and informed of the general market prices at which commodities being purchased by them for the respondent were being sold. In computing the net prices at which the said field buying agents purchased commodities for the respondent subsequent to the effective date of the Robinson-Patman Act, said field buying agents deducted from sellers' current prices to their customers other than respondent, or from the general market prices at which commodities were being sold, as the case might be, an amount equal to the brokerage which but for the Robinson-Patman Act said sellers would have paid to said agents as aforesaid in paragraph 13, supra.

PAR. 16. The respondent feared the loss of brokerage upon purchases of commodities made other than on the net basis, or on the quantity discount basis, as described respectively in sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) of paragraph 14, supra, and instructed its field buying agents to make all purchases possible on said net basis or on said quantity discount basis. On purchases of commodities made on said net basis or on said quantity discount basis the respondent did not request that brokerage be paid in escrow or set up as an "abeyance account" on sellers' books as aforesaid in sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph 14, supra, but on all purchases not made on one of said bases the respondent did request sellers to pay brokerage in escrow, or set brokerages up on their books as an "abeyance account" as aforesaid in sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph 14, supra.

PAR. 17. Not all of the net prices at which the said field buying agents purchased commodities for the respondent subsequent to June 19, 1936, reflected a reduction of the exact amount of brokerage which but for the Robinson-Patman Act said sellers would have paid to said field buying agents as aforesaid in paragraph 13, supra, because an exact reduction frequently resulted in a sale price involving fractions which were not used in the trade, and the respondent instructed its said field buying agents to avoid the use of such fractions wherever possible in agreeing upon the net price to be paid for commodities by the respondent so that said net prices would not appear to involve any allowance in lieu of brokerage.

PAR. 18. Other customers of sellers who sold commodities to the respondent on the bases outlined in paragraph 14, supra, purchased from those sellers in individual quantities as large as those in which the respondent purchased, but with extremely few exceptions, in no wise affecting the facts in this matter, the respondent was the only customer of said sellers to whom said sellers sold commodities on said bases, and the respondent's purchases from said sellers were made on one of said bases regardless of the quantity of commodities purchased by it.

PAR. 19. When the respondent's field buying agents purchase from sellers commodities for the respondent the services of no brokers are used or invoked by sellers or by the respondent, and said sellers do not receive or have the benefit of any selling or brokerage services rendered by any broker or by the respondent or by any agent or employee of the respondent, but in purchasing commodities on the net price and quantity discount bases above referred to in paragraph 14 the respondent obtains, receives, and accepts the equivalent of brokerage currently paid by sellers to their brokers for brokerage services actually rendered to said sellers by their said brokers in selling commodities for said sellers.

PAR. 20. Some sellers effect savings other than brokerage on purchases made for the respondent by the respondent's field buying agents, but the only savings represented by the net prices and quantity discounts above referred to in paragraph 14 were brokerage savings accruing to sellers as a result of having themselves made sales to the respondent without invoking or using the selling or brokerage services of another, and no savings other than brokerage savings were intended to be, or were, passed on by sellers to the respondent or received by the respondent from sellers.

PAR. 21. The function of, and the services performed by, brokers representing sellers in connection with the sale of commodities is to find customers for sellers and, acting under and subject to the control of sellers, to sell commodities to those customers for and on behalf of sellers and as the agents of said sellers; the brokers' function in such cases is a selling function, and the service rendered by them is a selling service rendered to sellers.

PAR. 22. In all matters and transactions wherein the respondent's field buying agents purchase commodities for respondent or negotiate or deal with sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by or the sale thereof to the respondent all of the services of said field buying agents are intended to be and in fact are rendered to the respondent solely, and in said matters and transactions said field buying agents intend to and in fact do represent the respondent solely as its purchasing agents and intend to and in fact do act for and in behalf of the respondent only and under its sole control, and in said matters and transactions said field buying agents do not intend to and in fact do not represent sellers as their agents or act for or in behalf or under the control of sellers and do not intend to and in fact do not render to sellers any brokerage or selling services whatsoever or any other form of services in connection with the sale of commodities to or the purchase thereof by the respondent.

PAR. 23. No brokerage or selling services whatsoever, or any other form of services in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent are intended to be or are rendered to sellers by the respondent or by any agents or employees of the respondent.

PAR. 24. Subsequent to June 19, 1936, for resale in its above-mentioned retail grocery stores, the respondent has purchased commodities in interstate commerce on the basis referred to in subparagraph (a) of paragraph 14, supra, from many sellers who are engaged in selling commodities through brokers in interstate commerce in competition with other sellers of similar commodities, and in so doing the respondent has received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage.

PAR. 25. Subsequent to June 19, 1936, for resale in its above-mentioned retail grocery stores, the respondent has made purchases of commodities in interstate commerce on the basis referred to in subparagraph (b) of paragraph 14, supra, from many sellers who are engaged in selling commodities through brokers in interstate commerce in competition with other sellers of similar commodities and has received and accepted on said purchases payment of the so-called "quantity discount" referred to in said subparagraph (b) of paragraph 14, supra, and in receiving and accepting payment of said so-called "quantity discounts" the respondent has received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage.

PAR. 26. The effect of the receipt of allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage by the respondent has been, and will continue to be, to cause substantial injury to competition between those sellers who have granted and paid such allowances and discounts to the respondent and those sellers who have refused to do so, in that there has been and there will continue to be a diversion of respondent's business from the latter to the former, and the effect of the receipt of allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage by the respondent has a direct and immediate tendency substantially to injure, destroy and prevent competition between respondent and respondent's competitors in the resale of commodities upon the purchase of which the respondent receives discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage in that the respondent, by the receipt of such discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, is enabled to and does purchase commodities at prices substantially lower than the prices at which its competitors can and do purchase the same commodities from the same sellers and the respondent is thereby enabled to resell said commodities at prices substantially lower than the prices at which its competitors can resell said commodities.

CONCLUSION

The respondent takes the position: First—That it has accepted no discounts or allowances in lieu of brokerage. Second—That if it be held to have accepted allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage it rendered to sellers services therefor within the meaning of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act. Third—That the provisions of Section 2 (c) of said act, as amended, must be held to be limited by the cost proviso or differentials provisions of paragraph (a) thereof, which should be construed to permit the passing on of brokerage savings by way of a net price differential or quantity discount.

The Commission is unable to adopt this reasoning, and concludes and finds that the respondent has received discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage in violation of said paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

The respondent contends that there is a vast difference and valid distinction between a differential which merely reflects or is the equivalent of brokerage savings and a discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage; that a discount or allowance made as a part of the price of goods can not come within the scope of paragraph (c), although equivalent to brokerage and intended to reflect it. .

We cannot accept this argument. The supposed distinction between a discount or allowance equivalent to brokerage, made as a part of the price of goods, and a discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage reflected by the price of goods appears to us as too tenuous for approval.

The argument assumes one of the fundamental issues in this case, namely, whether or not brokerage may be passed on to buyers as a savings in cost under the cost proviso or differentials provisions of paragraph (a) of Section 2 of the act.

If that may not be done, it cannot successfully be contended that there is any difference between a price reflecting an allowance in lieu of brokerage and a price reflecting brokerage savings—in each instance the price is mathematically the same, and the lower price is lower, by an amount wholly or partly equivalent to brokerage, for no other reason than that that price is given instead of brokerage being paid on the basis of a higher price.

The words “in lieu of,” “discount,” and “allowance,” are well understood and there can be no dispute as to their respective definitions.

“In lieu of” means instead of, in place of, or in substitution for.

“Allowance” means abatement, deduction, or concession.

“Discount” means deduction, allowance from a price asked, or deduction from the usual price made for some special reason.

Taking the plain and simple meaning of these words, it seems impossible to say that a net price arrived at by deducting from a regular price an amount equal to brokerage formerly paid, and now currently paid to brokers, because that brokerage is no longer to be paid, is a price which does not involve a discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage.

If and insofar as intent is an element of an allowance or discount in lieu of brokerage, the intent necessary to characterize as such the respondent's net prices and quantity discounts, referred to in paragraph 14, supra, existed here. The net price differentials and the quantity discounts in question were generally equal in amount to brokerage paid to the respondent's field buying agents prior to June 19, 1936, and currently being paid by sellers to independent brokers and were passed on by the sellers and accepted by the respondent to take the place of, and in substitution for, brokerage paid to the respondent's field buying agents prior to that date. Counsel for the respondent conceded in their brief that the net prices and quantity discounts allowed respondent did not represent any form of savings to sellers whatsoever other than the brokerage savings accruing to sellers as a result of having themselves made sales to the respondent without incurring any obligation to pay brokerage thereon to an independent broker. The Commission concludes that such net price differentials and quantity discounts were allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage and were affirmatively intended as such by both sellers and the respondent.

The Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has a dual purpose which is apparent both from the form of the Act itself and from the reports of the several Congressional Committees which considered and commented upon it. The Act was directed not only at price discriminations but also at certain practices which involved both price discriminations and unfair methods of competition.

Paragraph (a) generally prohibits both direct and indirect discriminations in price. If discriminations in price were the only evils sought to be terminated by the Act there was no necessity for including in it paragraphs (c), (d), or (e), because the practices thereby condemned, themselves involving indirect price discriminations, could have been terminated under paragraph (a) insofar as they could be shown injuriously to affect competition in particular cases. By directing those particular paragraphs at those particular practices, it is believed that Congress manifested a purpose and intent to condemn and proscribe such practices, not merely and simply because they involved price discriminations, but because they were considered by Congress to be inherently unfair methods of competition which were per se injurious to commerce.

As stated by the report of the House Committee on the Judiciary in reporting the Robinson-Patman Act, its purpose was * * * to restore, so far as possible, equality of opportunity in business

* * * by protecting trade and commerce against unfair trade practices and unlawful price discrimination, and also against restraint and monopoly for the better protection of consumers, workers, and independent producers, manufacturers, merchants, and other businessmen.

To accomplish its purpose, the bill amends and strengthens the Clayton Act
* * *

More than 20 years' experience and observation with respect to the operation of the Clayton Act, together with new methods of trade and industrial organization that have since developed, have convinced your committee of the shortcomings of existing legislation, and of the need for strengthening existing laws and of fitting them more perfectly to the methods and needs of today. This your committee has striven to do with a careful regard to the preservation of full freedom and sound and honest business methods * * * but with a firm resolve not to permit the desire of privilege to masquerade under the claim of right. (Report of House Committee on the Judiciary 74th Congress, 2nd Session, House of Representatives Report Number 2287, Pages 3, 6.)

It is thus apparent that the act is directed at a multiplicity of evils which may be classified generally as price discriminations and unfair trade practices.

The Commission concludes that it was the intention of Congress to proscribe absolutely and unconditionally as an undesirable and unfair trade practice and method of competition, the payment of brokerage and the granting of any allowance or discount in lieu thereof by sellers to buyers on the latter's own purchases of goods, and that the inclusion in paragraph (c) of the clause "except for services rendered in connection with the sale of goods" was not intended to set up a condition upon which such brokerage could be paid or such an allowance or discount be granted. This conclusion is sustained and, indeed, required by the reports of the various committees which dealt with the Act.

As originally introduced in the House and Senate, paragraph (c) (paragraph (b) at that time) unqualifiedly prohibited the payment of brokerage by a seller to any intermediary acting for the buyer or subject to the buyer's control. It did not prohibit the payment of brokerage directly to a buyer, however, or make any reference to "services rendered." The paragraph then read:

(b) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to pay or grant, or to receive or accept, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation to an agent, representative, or other intermediary in connection with the sale or purchase of goods, wares, or merchandise, where such intermediary is acting therein for or in behalf or is subject to the direct or indirect control, of any party to such purchase and sale transaction other than the person by whom such compensation is so granted or paid.

Upon being referred to the Committee on the Judiciary of the respective houses the paragraph was amended to read exactly as it now reads, except that the "services rendered" clause was not inserted by the Senate Committee.

The Senate amendment merely added to the existing prohibition of paragraph (c) an additional prohibition against the payment of brokerage direct to the buyer, reinforcing the paragraph with a provision that no discount or allowance in lieu of brokerage should be permitted. The paragraph as thus amended was reported to the Senate on February 3, 1936, as follows:

In section (b) the phrases "or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof," and "either to the other party to such transaction" are added by your committee's recommendation. As so revised, this section forbids the payment or allowance of brokerage, either to the other principal party, or to an intermediary acting in fact for or under the control of the other principal party, to the purchase and sale transaction.

Among the prevalent modes of discrimination at which this bill is directed, is the practice of certain large buyers to demand the allowance of brokerage direct to them upon their purchases, or its payment to an employee, agent, or corporate subsidiary whom they set up in the guise of a broker, and through whom they demand that sales to them be made. Whether employed by the buyer in good faith to find a source of supply, or by the seller to find a market, the broker so employed discharges a sound economic function and is entitled to appropriate compensation by the one in whose interest he so serves. But to permit its payment or allowance where no such service is rendered, where in fact, if a "broker," so labeled, enters the picture at all, it is one whom the buyer points out to the seller, rather than one who brings the buyer to the seller, is but to permit the corruption of this function to the purposes of competitive discrimination. The relation of the broker to his client is a fiduciary one. To collect from a client for services rendered in the interest of a party adverse to him, is a violation of that relationship; and to protect those who deal in the streams of commerce against breaches of faith in its relations of trust, is to foster confidence in its processes and promote its wholesomeness and volume. (74th Congress, 2nd Session, Senate Report Number 1502, Page 7.)

It is clear that paragraph (c), as it then stood, prohibited the payment of brokerage by a seller to a buyer, and the grant of any discount or allowance in lieu thereof, under all circumstances and without regard to any question of services rendered, and that the Senate so construed it.

On March 31, 1936, the House Committee on the Judiciary, having amended paragraph (c) to conform to the Senate amendment and added the services rendered clause thereto, reported the bill to the House with the following comments, the underscored parts of which were adopted word for word from the Senate report quoted above:

Section (b) deals with the abuse of the brokerage function for purposes of oppressive discrimination. The true broker serves either as representative of the seller to find him market outlets, or as representative of the buyer to find him sources of supply. In either case he discharges functions which must otherwise be performed by the parties themselves through their own selling or buying departments, with their respective attendant costs. Which method is chosen depends presumptively upon which is found more economical in the particular case; but whichever method is chosen, its cost is the necessary and natural cost of a business function which cannot be escaped. It is for this reason that, when free of the coercive influence of mass buying power, discounts in lieu of brokerage are not usually accorded to buyers who deal with the seller direct since such sales must bear instead their appropriate share of the seller's own selling cost.

Among the prevalent modes of discrimination at which this bill is directed is the practice of certain large buyers to demand the allowance of brokerage direct to them upon their purchases, or its payment to an employee, agent, or corporate subsidiary whom they set up in the guise of a broker, and through whom they demand that sales to them be made. But the positions of buyer and seller are by nature adverse, and it is a contradiction in terms incompatible with his natural function for an intermediary to claim to be rendering services for the seller when he is acting in fact for or under the control of the buyer, and no seller can be expected to pay such an intermediary so controlled for such services unless compelled to do so by coercive influences in compromise of his natural interest. Whether employed by the buyer in good faith to find a source of supply, or by the seller to find a market, the broker so employed discharges a sound economic function and is entitled to appropriate compensation by the one in whose interest he so serves. But to permit its payment or allowance where no such service is rendered, where in fact, if a "broker," so labeled, enters the picture at all, it is one whom the buyer points out to the seller, rather than one who brings the buyer to the seller, would render the section a nullity. The relation of the broker to his client is a fiduciary one. To collect from a client for services rendered in the interest of a party adverse to him, is a violation of that relationship; and to protect those who deal in the streams of commerce against breaches of faith in its relations of trust, is to foster confidence in its processes and promote its wholesomeness and volume.

Section (b) permits the payment of compensation by a seller to his broker or agent for services actually rendered in his behalf; likewise by a buyer to his broker or agent for services in connection with the purchase of goods actually rendered in his behalf; but it prohibits the direct or indirect payment of brokerage except for such services rendered. It prohibits its allowance by the buyer direct to the seller, or by the seller direct to the buyer; and it prohibits its payment by either to an agent or intermediary acting in fact for or in behalf, or subject to the direct or indirect control, of the other. (74th Congress, 2nd Session, House of Representatives Report Number 2287, Pages 14, 15.) [Italics supplied.]

This report shows on its face that paragraph (c) as it now stands, containing the "services rendered" clause, was given the same construction by the House Committee as it had theretofore been given by the Senate Committee before that clause was inserted. This in itself seems sufficient to require the conclusion that the House did not intend the "services rendered" clause to be construed as a condition upon which brokerage could be paid by sellers to buyers. Definite support for this conclusion is found in the Conference Report of the Committee of Conference of the House and Senate which considered the bills passed by each and reported out the Robinson-Patman Act in the form in which it was enacted. That report states:

Subsection (c) deals with brokerage. It is the same as subsection (b) in the House bill, which in turn is the same as subsection (c) in the Senate amendment, except that the words "except for services rendered," as contained in the House bill, do not appear in the Senate amendment. In the conference report these words are retained * * * With the words of the House bill thus retained, this subsection permits the payment of compensation by a seller to his broker * * * for services actually rendered in his behalf; * * * but it prohibits the direct or indirect payment of brokerage except for such services rendered. It prohibits its allowance * * * by the seller direct to the buyer * * * (74th Congress, 2nd Session, House of Representatives Report Number 2951, Page 7).

In line with this report Representative Utterback, one of the House managers of the Conference Committee, said of paragraph (c) in reporting the act from that Committee to the House:

* * * it prohibits the payment or allowance of * * * brokerage on the purchase * * * of goods * * * to the other party to the transaction * * * that is, the party other than the one who pays the * * * brokerage * * * (74th Congress, 2nd Session, 80 Congressional Record, Part 9, Page 9418).

He further stated:

* * * where sales are made from buyer to seller, in the nature of the case no brokerage services are rendered by either, and no payment or allowance on account thereof can be made * * * (Id.)

It thus seems entirely clear that paragraph (c) was intended by Congress to prohibit without qualification the payment of brokerage, and the granting of any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, by a seller to a buyer on the latter's purchases, and that the "services rendered" clause was not meant to limit that prohibition in any manner or to any degree whatsoever.

Legislative intent notwithstanding, however, it is urged that this clause must be construed to permit the payment of brokerage to a buyer in return for services rendered to a seller. The arguments are that since paragraph (c) as originally drawn, without the words "except for services rendered," prohibited only the payment of brokerage by sellers to buyers' agents, the exception to that limited prohibition must be held not to extend the prohibition but to relax it within its original limitations; and, as urged by the respondent, by writing the exception into paragraph (c) Congress in fact asserted a belief that a buyer could render services to a seller because the exception of a particular thing from general words proves that, in the opinion of the legislature, the thing excepted would be within the general clause had the exception not been made.

In the light of clear congressional intent to the contrary, the Commission cannot accept these arguments. Moreover, they ignore the well-established rule of statutory construction that exceptions are to be strictly construed, all doubts being resolved in favor of general provisions rather than exceptions, and the premise of the argument first stated is not entirely accurate.

It will be recalled that paragraph (c) as originally drawn, without the "services rendered" exception, prohibited the payment of brokerage not simply to anyone acting for the buyer but to any "intermediary * * * acting * * * for or in behalf of * * * subject to the direct or indirect control" of the buyer.

The Commission, in the exercise of its knowledge of the manner in which ordinary business affairs are transacted, knows that the language quoted was susceptible of a construction which might have prohibited in many cases the payment of brokerage by a seller to an independent broker for brokerage services actually rendered. A broker (and the reference is to selling brokers, as distinguished from buying brokers, so to speak) occupies an anomalous position in commerce and in law. He is an independent businessman in the sense that he is engaged in business for himself. But the business in which he is engaged is that of acting as a local sales representative for manufacturers. A broker pays the expenses of operating his business and is dependent for his income upon a commission, called "brokerage," paid to him on and measured by sales which he makes for the manufacturers whom he represents. The essential service which he performs for manufacturers, and the only service for which he is paid, is a selling service, although he renders many other services.

In the course of conducting his business a broker must and does also render services to buyers—but those services, unlike the services rendered to the respondent by its field buying agents, are not buying services. A broker is not employed by buyers. He is employed and paid by sellers as their selling agent and he represents his seller-principals only. His activities in connection with his representation of his seller-principals are controlled by them, but, paradoxically, because of the broker's anomalous position as an independent sales agent in business for himself, he does act for buyers in a sense and he is subject to a degree of control on their part.

This results from requests by buyers that brokers report complaints to their seller-principals, that brokers communicate cancellations of orders to their seller-principals, that brokers submit to their seller-principals offers of buyers to purchase commodities at prices stipulated by buyers, that brokers endeavor to make up "pool" cars of merchandise among several buyers so that the buyers may obtain the advantage of quantity prices and carload rates of freight, that brokers obtain quotations of prices from their seller-principals for the consideration of buyers, and, perhaps, in other ways. Naturally it is to the mutual interest and advantage of brokers and sellers to maintain the good will of their common customers, and brokers generally endeavor to comply with the reasonable requests of buyers along the lines indicated. In the course of negotiating sales from seller to buyer and bringing them into agreement brokers are necessarily guided somewhat by instructions from each, but in the essential particular of selling commodities and consummating sales they act for and are controlled by the latter alone, who in the absence of a contract may discharge them and substitute new brokers in their places at any time.

It is therefore apparent that paragraph (c) of the Robinson-Patman Act, as originally drawn, broadly prohibiting the payment of brokerage to anyone "acting * * * for or in behalf or * * * subject to the direct or indirect control" of buyers, without qualification as to the manner of acting or the degree or importance of control, and irrespective of services rendered to the seller, might possibly have been given a construction prohibiting the payment of brokerage to bona fide independent brokers—a construction which Congress manifestly did not intend it to be given.

Thus it is seen that paragraph (c) was susceptible of a construction extending its prohibitions to others than persons acting for and as agents of buyers. The insertion of the "except for services rendered" clause therein, it is believed, was intended by Congress not to permit the payment of brokerage to a buyer, but to make it clear that payment of brokerage to a bona fide broker in return for selling services rendered was not proscribed, thereby performing a legitimate function of a proviso "to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation."

This view finds affirmative and authoritative support in the above-cited Conference Committee report on the Robinson-Patman Act and in the remarks of Representative Utterback in reporting the act to the House.

The Conference report, after referring to the retention of the words "except for services rendered," stated:

With (these) words of the House bill thus retained, this subsection permits the payment of compensation by a seller to his broker * * * for services actually rendered in his behalf * * *

Mr. Utterback said:

The bill prohibits payment or allowance of brokerage * * * except for services rendered * * * this refers to true brokerage services rendered in fact for the party who pays for them * * * (74th Congress, 2nd Session, 80 Congressional Record, Part 9, Page 9418).

It does not appear that Congress thought a buyer capable of rendering "services" to a seller in connection with the buyer's own purchases of goods. In writing the "services rendered" clause into paragraph (c) Congress clearly had in mind true brokerage services rendered by bona fide independent brokers employed by sellers as their selling agents. In the opinion of the Commission that clause was inserted not by way of relaxing the limitations of paragraph (c) insofar as they applied to buyers or buyers' agents, but by way of excluding a possible misinterpretation that the paragraph might be held to prohibit the payment of brokerage for true brokerage services rendered by bona fide independent brokers.

Even if it were possible to hold that the payment of brokerage to buyers or the granting of any discount or allowance in lieu thereof is permissible under the "services rendered" clause, the services referred to therein, as plainly appears from the Committee reports heretofore quoted, are brokerage or selling services rendered to the seller, and the Commission finds and concludes that no such services were rendered to sellers by the respondent or by any agent or employee of the respondent. Whatever character may be ascribed to the various activities of the respondent's agents from which benefits were derived by sellers, those activities were not selling services nor were any services in connection with the sale of goods to the respondent rendered to sellers. The respondent's field buying agents and other employees acted in every case as agents of the respondent, having in mind and intending to serve and promote its interests, and not acting except when, and as they felt those interests could be served and promoted. The services thus rendered by the respondent's field buying agents and other employees were not selling services in character, nor were they rendered to sellers; their services were rendered to the respondent and to no one other than the respondent, and the benefits derived by sellers from such services were purely incidental.

Passing now to the third point made by the respondent, the Commission does not believe that Congress intended to permit brokerage savings to be passed on by sellers to buyers under that part of paragraph (a) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended, which provides as follows:

Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent differentials which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

While paragraphs (a) and (c) have in common the purpose of eliminating unfair price discriminations, the Commission is of the opinion that the paragraphs were intended by Congress to be separately and independently applied, and that the former was not meant to limit or qualify the prohibitions or application of the latter.

Paragraph (c) is complete on its face. It contains no ambiguous language necessitating reference to paragraph (a) for the purpose of determining its meaning. It deals specifically with a particular trade practice which was regarded by Congress as an unfair method of competition, per se injurious to commerce, and therefore to be prohibited. The intention of Congress to treat paragraph (c) as independent of paragraph (a) is apparent from both the form of the Robinson-Patman Act and from its legislative history.

As heretofore mentioned, since paragraph (a) prohibits both direct and indirect discrimination in price, if discrimination in price as such, were the only evils at which the act was directed there was no necessity for Congress to have enacted paragraphs (c), (d), or (e). Looking at the act as a whole it seems evident that the purpose of Congress was not merely to terminate the price discriminations effected by the practice of paying brokerage to buyers, but to terminate the practice itself because it was an undesirable practice and constituted an inherently unfair method of competition. Paragraph (c) is expressly limited in its application solely to transactions occurring in the course of interstate commerce, while paragraph (a) is not so limited. In addition to this, paragraph (b), relating to the burden of proof applies to proceedings instituted under paragraphs (a), (d), and (e) but, significantly, does not apply to proceedings under paragraph (c).

There is more than mere form, however, to indicate the independence of paragraph (c).

Upon reference to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, the act was amended in Committee by the addition to paragraph (a) of the words "other than brokerage" following the above-quoted language therein permitting differentials based on differences in cost. In reporting the bill the Senate Committee stated that the quoted words had been added to "harmonize this subsection (paragraph (a)) with (the) subsection * * * which deals directly with the question of brokerage" (74th Congress, 2nd Session, Senate Report Number 1052, page 5). It is noted that it was paragraph (a) which was amended to harmonize it with the provisions of paragraph (c), and that the latter was referred to as the subsection which dealt directly with brokerage. By thus adding to paragraph (a) an amendment having no other purpose whatsoever than expressly to exclude the cost proviso or differentials provision thereof from application to paragraph (c), the Committee evidenced an unmistakable intention to subordinate the former to the latter, leaving paragraph (c) to deal with the question of brokerage irrespective of and unaffected by the contents of paragraph (a).

Additional affirmative evidence of this legislative intent is found in the action taken by the Committee of Conference of the House and Senate. That Committee struck from the bill as passed by the Senate the words "other than brokerage" inserted in paragraph (a) as just mentioned. Its reason for doing so was that "the matter of brokerage is dealt with in a subsequent subsection of the bill" (74th Congress, 2nd Session, House of Representatives Report Number 2951, page 6).

The words "other than brokerage" had never been inserted in paragraph (a) of the House bill. Paragraph (c) standing alone clearly was not open to a construction permitting brokerage to be passed on to buyers by way of an allowance or discount based on savings in cost. By striking from paragraph (a) of the Senate bill the words "other than brokerage" for the reason stated in the Conference report, it appears to the Commission that Congress thereby exhibited not only a plain intention that paragraph (c) exclusively should govern questions of brokerage without regard to the contents of paragraph (a) but also the view that the words of paragraph (c) were, in themselves alone, sufficiently broad without the aid of the Senate amendment of paragraph (a) to prevent brokerage from being transmitted to buyers in the form of allowances based on savings in cost. Thus the Senate amendment was struck, in the opinion of the Commission, not for the purpose of changing the meaning of either paragraph (a) or paragraph (c), but because it was tautological. This legislative construction of paragraphs (a) and (c) as mutually independent is binding upon the Commission as a clear manifestation of legislative intent.

The Commission has not overlooked the fact that in reporting the Robinson-Patman Act to the Senate, after the Senate Committee on the Judiciary had amended paragraph (a) by the insertion of the words "other than brokerage," Senator Logan said:

In the second section of the Committee amendment there is a provision that in making discriminations or differentials, or whatever we may choose to call them, all costs other than brokerage shall be allowed; and it has been said that the words "other than brokerage" in that section ought to go out.

I have thought a good deal about that suggestion. I think perhaps legitimate brokerage ought to be allowed as a part of the costs; and I think when the bill was drafted * * * perhaps in the amendment which was inserted by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate we had in mind dummy brokerage, sham brokerage (74th Congress, 2nd Session, 80 Congressional Record, part 6, page 6285).

This statement, however, appears to support rather than to oppose the view that paragraph (c) is not susceptible of a construction permitting the passing on of brokerage savings as differentials in cost. It demonstrates effectively that the obvious intention and only purpose of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary in adding the words "other than brokerage" to paragraph (a) was to refute any possible contention that the differentials provisions of that paragraph could be read into paragraph (c). That action was thus affirmatively taken by the Committee is clearly indicative of the fact that it was not ever intended that the differentials provisions of paragraph (a) should be construed as qualifying the scope and application of paragraph (c). Recognizing an ambiguity inherent in the incompatibility of those paragraphs, the Committee acted to resolve that ambiguity in favor of their incompatibility. Had it been intended originally that paragraphs (a) and (c) were to be construed as interdependent, it seems clear that the Committee would have left the former unaltered or would have taken action to confirm, rather than to refute, their mutuality.

In addition to this primary evidence that Congress intended paragraph (c) as absolute, a further, and perhaps in itself sufficient and controlling, reason why that paragraph must be so construed lies in the duty of the Commission to apply a simple and fundamental rule of statutory construction. That rule is that as between general and specific provisions, in apparent contradiction, whether in the same or different statutes, the specific qualifies and overrules the general, that special provisions prevail over general ones which, in the absence of the special provisions, would control.

As heretofore stated, paragraph (a) is the general paragraph of the Robinson-Patman Act. Paragraph (c) is a special paragraph dealing with the matter of brokerage only. Unquestionably the provisions of paragraph (c) prohibit without qualification, and without reference to competition or differentials based on savings in cost, every form of concession whatsoever based on brokerage. To the extent that paragraph (a) requires a showing of injury to competition and permits all differentials based on savings in cost it obviously conflicts, and is inconsistent, with paragraph (c). That being true, under the rule just stated, paragraph (a) must be held to be subordinate to paragraph (c), and the conflicts and inconsistencies between them must be resolved in favor of the enforcement of the special provisions of the latter unqualified by the general provisions of the former.

If this construction of paragraphs (a) and (c) as mutually independent and absolute were not adopted, paragraph (c) would be deprived of all substance. Manifestly there is no difference between paying brokerage to a buyer and giving him credit for it, by way of a net price, on the purchase price of the commodities which he buys. Sellers ordinarily selling through brokers who do their own selling in particular cases always save brokerage in such cases, because no one else having performed a selling service which entitles him to receive brokerage the sellers incur no obligation to pay it. If they are permitted to pass that saving on to buyers paragraph (c) will be completely eviscerated, and the efforts of Congress to protect commerce against a practice by which it found that price concessions were being transmitted to buyers by way of an inherently unfair method of competition will be rendered vain and useless.

While the Commission finds as a fact in this proceeding that the acceptance of discounts in lieu of brokerage by the respondent tends to injure competition between the respondent and its competitors and does injure competition between sellers who grant such discounts and allowances to the respondent and those who do not, that fact has not been considered by the Commission in arriving at its conclusion herein, for the reason that the Commission concludes as a matter of law that it is unnecessary for an injurious effect upon competition to be shown in proceedings instituted under paragraph (c).

The Commission concludes that in accepting net prices and quantity discounts, as heretofore referred to in paragraph 14. supra, the respondent The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, has been and is now accepting discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage in violation of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., Title 15, Sec. 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, respondent, testimony and other evidence, taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed in support of said complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of J. J. Smith, Jr., counsel for the Commission, and Caruthers Ewing, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the said respondent has violated, and is now violating, the provisions of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., Title 15, Sec. 13), and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce from sellers who are engaged in selling commodities in interstate commerce to the respondent, The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, and to purchasers thereof other than the respondent, the said respondent, The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities, and the policy and practice of making purchases of commodities, at a so-called net price, and every other price, which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling said commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of said commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers, and:

2. Accepting, and the policy and practice of accepting, on its purchases of commodities from sellers any so-called quantity discounts and payments of all kinds representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of said commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers, and:

3. Accepting, and the policy and practice of accepting, on its purchases of commodities from sellers prices reflecting, and all allowances and discounts representing, brokerage savings effected by sellers on their sales of commodities to the respondent.

4. Accepting, and the policy and practice of accepting, on its purchases of commodities all allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage, in whatever form said allowances and discounts may be allowed, granted, paid or transmitted to the respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

Docket 3053. Complaint, Feb. 10, 1937—Decision, Jan. 25, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of rotary clocks, automatic vibro shavers, cameras, and various other articles of merchandise—Furnished and distributed to members of the general public in practically all States and in the District of Columbia, push cards, order blanks, and advertisements depicting particular items of its said merchandise and instructions for sale thereof under plans by which chance purchaser paid for chance varying amount, dependent upon number disclosed within various disks of aforesaid cards, and received article of merchandise or nothing other than push, dependent upon success or failure in selecting girl's name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal, and it compensated by merchandise its operator or representative, and thereby placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of its said merchandise, with knowledge and intent that said cards had been, were, and would be, used in sale and distribution of its said products to public by lot or chance, contrary to public policy, and in competition with many who are opposed to use of such cards in sale and distribution of their merchandise and refrain from furnishing same;

With result that sale of similar or like merchandise by aforesaid competitors was thereby injuriously affected and trade was diverted from them to it by reason of said furnishing of such cards or like devices, and there was a restraint upon and detriment to the freedom of sale and legitimate competition; to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Manufacturers Distributing Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, National Manufacturers Distributing Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1420 South Halsted Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. It is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of rotary clocks and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described above, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, has adopted and pursued and still continues the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public, through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of rotary clocks and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push card.

Respondent's push card bears 24 feminine names with ruled columns on reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 24 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on reverse side of card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has one large red seal, and concealed under this seal is one of the feminine names appearing on reverse side of the said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions, as follows:

Name under seal receives
FAMOUS ROTARY CLOCK
 The world's newest time teller
UNIQUE UNUSUAL DEPENDABLE
$5.00 VALUE
 Nos. 1 to 29 pay what you draw
 Over 29 pay only 20¢
NO HIGHER

Write your name opposite name you select on reverse side

Sales of rotary clocks by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said prize or premium is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 29 cents for a rotary clock, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes one rotary clock and additional merchandise to its representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnishes its representative with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of said printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:

WHAT TO DO. There is nothing complicated—you merely show the clock-illustration to your friends, neighbors, co-workers in the office, shop, etc.—explain to them how they may obtain a beautiful modern Rotary Clock for the small sum of 1¢ to 29¢. The enclosed sales card contains 24 girls' names and under each is a concealed number. Persons selecting numbers 1 to 29 pay what they draw. All numbers over 29 pay only 29¢—no higher. When the sales card is completed the amount taken in will be $6.52. For your cooperation in completing the sales card you will receive absolutely free a Rotary Clock and the person selecting the correct name corresponding with the one under the large seal will also receive a Rotary Clock.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling its said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push card, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

The sale of respondent's said merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise contrary to the established public policy of the United States and contrary to criminal statutes of many of the States of the United States. By reason of said facts, many competitors of respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many purchasers of clocks are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method, as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 4. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to respondent, because of said game of chance, trade, and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said clock trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to lessen competition in said clock trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said clock trade in respondent and such other competitors as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said clock trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said clock trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win clocks by chance, because such method is contrary to public policy or to the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States, or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the purchasers of said clocks, or because of any or all of such reasons.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on February 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, National Manufacturers Distributing Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent National Manufacturers Distributing Company is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1420 South Halsted Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of rotary clocks, automatic vibro shavers, cameras, and various other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business, respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 above, respondent in soliciting the sale of, and selling, its products, has adopted and pursued, and still continues the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the members of the general public in practically all States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, through the United States mail, certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks and advertisements containing illustrations of particular items of merchandise which it is offering for sale, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to the operators of the said push card.

All of the said push cards involve the same principle or sales plan or method, but vary to some extent in detail. One of said push cards bears 24 feminine names with ruled columns on reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 24 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH", below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on reverse side of card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has one large red seal, and concealed under this seal is one of the feminine names appearing on reverse side of the said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions, as follows:

Name under seal receives
FAMOUS ROTARY CLOCK
 The world's newest time teller
UNIQUE UNUSUAL DEPENDABLE
$5.00 VALUE
 Nos. 1 to 29 pay what you draw
 Over 29 pay only 29¢
NO HIGHER

Write your name opposite name you select on reverse side

Sales of rotary clocks by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said prize or premium is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 29 cents for a rotary clock, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes one rotary clock and additional merchandise to its representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnishes its representative with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of said printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:

WHAT TO DO. There is nothing complicated—you merely show the clock-illustration to your friends, neighbors, co-workers in the office, shop, etc.—explain to them how they may obtain a beautiful modern Rotary Clock for the small sum of 1¢ to 29¢. The enclosed salescard contains 24 girls' names and under each is a concealed number. Persons selecting numbers 1 to 29 pay what they draw. All numbers over 29 pay only 29¢—no higher. When the sales card is completed the amount taken in will be $6.52. For your cooperation in completing the sales card you will receive absolutely free a Rotary Clock and the person selecting the correct name corresponding with the one under the large seal will also receive a Rotary Clock.

As stated above, the other push cards which respondent furnishes are identical in principle but vary in detail. Some of said push cards are furnished by respondent and are used by the public in purchasing and distributing automatic vibro shavers, cameras, and other merchandise sold and distributed by respondent. The members of the public to whom respondent furnishes its push cards and other literature use the same in the manner suggested by respondent, thereby distributing respondent's merchandise to others and procuring respondent's merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondent's merchandise through the use of or by means of the said push cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondent, in furnishing said push cards, puts in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of its merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in furnishing said push cards, has knowledge that said push cards are, and have been used, in distributing its merchandise, and furnishes said push cards so that its merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondent, who do not furnish push cards similar to those furnished by respondent, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondent who are opposed to use of push cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondent were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said push cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondent from its said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said push cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from its said competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of sale and legitimate competition.

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. As stated previously in these findings, the respondent sells its merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and, while the annual volume of respondent's business was not shown exactly, an officer of the respondent testified, and the Commission finds, that the respondent's annual volume of business is, and has been, substantial.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of clocks, automatic shavers, cameras, and other merchandise, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent National Manufacturers Distributing Company are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent National Manufacturers Distributing Company, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, automatic shavers, cameras, and other merchandise, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or other similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise.

Order

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to members of the public push cards or other similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of merchandise by the use of push cards or other similar devices, or in any manner selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise free of charge or at varying prices depending upon lot or chance.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. A. Leith, individually, and trading as Style Silk Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the name and style of Style Silk Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 529 South Franklin Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. He is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described above, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his products in interstate commerce, has adopted and pursued and still adopts and pursues the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public, through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of hosiery and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push card. In order to obtain addresses of "prospects," respondent addresses a letter to a woman employee of some firm or organization offering her a pair of ladies' silk hosiery free on condition that she send to respondent the names and addresses of 10 other women in different offices. If the person addressed complies, the pair of hosiery promised of the size and color indicated is sent to her by respondent, and to each of the other "prospects" respondent sends said sales literature, including a paper push card with printed instructions for its operation.

Respondent's push card bears 60 feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push card has 60 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the card. Concealed within.

each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push board also has a large red partially perforated disk and a large blue partially perforated disk, and concealed within each of these two disks is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions, as follows:

Sales of hosiery by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above described legends or instructions. Each of said prizes or premiums is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer receives one or two pairs of hosiery free or pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 15 cents, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid or receives one or two pairs of ladies' silk hosiery or three or six pairs of men's hosiery, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes two pairs of ladies' hosiery or six pairs of men's hosiery to his representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnishes his representative with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using his said push cards.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push card, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

The sale of respondent's said merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise contrary to the established public policy of the United States and contrary to criminal statutes of many of the States of the United States. By reason of said facts many competitors of respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many purchasers of hosiery are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method, as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 4. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to respondent, because of said game of chance, trade and custom from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said hosiery trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to lessen competition in said hosiery trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said hosiery trade in respondent and such other competitors as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said hosiery trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said hosiery trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win hosiery by chance, because such method is contrary to public policy or to the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States, or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the purchasers of said hosiery, or because of any or all of such reasons.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made upon advertising circulars accompanying sales outfits furnished to his representatives, as follows:

Full-Fashioned Guaranteed Ringless Pure Silk Hosiery

Value $1.50

In truth and in fact, the hosiery sold and offered for sale by the respondent, under the above-stated representation, at a price of $1.50 was not and is not of the type and brand of hosiery customarily sold at $1.50. The retail price so advertised was not and is not the price at which such hosiery was or is intended to be sold, but was and is greatly in excess of the price at which such hosiery is sold or intended to be sold in the usual course of trade.

PAR. 6. The false and misleading representation hereinabove set out, together with the false and fictitious price marking, on the part of the respondent, in the sale and offering for sale of hosiery, has the tendency and effect to mislead and deceive and does mislead a substantial portion of the consuming public by inducing them to believe that the price so advertised was and is the usual or customary price at which said hosiery was or is sold or intended to be sold in the course of regular retail trade.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of respondent many who do not falsely represent the price of hosiery offered by them for sale, or who do in fact sell and offer for sale hosiery which is truthfully represented as to value and price.

Respondent's false representation has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the consuming public into the erroneous belief that such representation is true, causing them to purchase respondent's product in reliance on same. Said false representation has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade to respondent from his competitors who truthfully advertise their products, thereby causing injury to substantial competition in commerce.

PAR. 8. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent W. A. Leith is an individual doing business under the trade name, Style Silk Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 529 South Franklin Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of silk hosiery, ladies' lingerie, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. He causes such merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all of the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 above, respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling his merchandise has adopted and pursued, and still continues, the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to members of the general public in practically all States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through the United States mail certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of the merchandise which he is offering for sale and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards.

All the push cards used by respondent involve the same principle or sales plan or method but vary to some extent in detail. One of the said push cards bears 60 feminine names with ruled columns opposite each for writing in the name of the customer selecting such name. Said push card has 60 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names above referred to. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has one large red seal and one large blue seal, concealed within each of which is one of the feminine names above referred to. The numbers concealed within each of the partially perforated disks cannot be ascertained until a push or selection has been made and the names concealed within the large red seal and large blue seal cannot be ascertained until these seals have been removed. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:

RED SEAL	10 Numbers are FREE	BLUE SEAL

	30—35—38—40
	45—48—50

The reverse of said card bears the following legend, among others:

Upon receipt of your order we will ship you, charges prepaid your choice of FIVE Pair of Ladies' Pure Silk Hosiery.

TWO pair are given you for disposing of the card. TWO pair given to the party drawing the lucky name found under the RED SEAL. ONE pair is given to the party drawing the lucky name found under the BLUE seal.

NOTICE: Regarding MEN'S HOSE. If Men's Hose are ordered we will send 3 Pair of Men's Pure Silk Sox in place of each pair of Ladies'.

If the order is sent us within ten days, we will include a SURPRISE GIFT for the person sending us the order.

All orders are shipped the same day received by Parcel Post or Express C. O. D. unless accompanied by POSTAL MONEY ORDER or CASHIER'S CHECK.

Do not credit for pushes; have them pay as they push. It is not necessary to return this card with the order blank.

Sales of silk hosiery by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Each of said prizes or premiums is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer receives one or two pair of hosiery free or pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 15 cents therefor and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes two pair of ladies' hosiery or six pairs of men's hosiery to his representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards.

As stated above, the other push cards which respondent furnishes are identical in principle but vary in detail. The members of the public, to whom respondent furnishes his push cards and other literature, use the same in the manner suggested by respondent, thereby distributing respondent's merchandise to others by lot or chance and procuring respondent's merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondent's merchandise through the use of or by means of the said push cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondent in furnishing said push cards puts in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of his merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in furnishing said push cards, has knowledge that the same are, have been, and will be, used in distributing his merchandise, and furnishes said push cards so that his merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondent, who do not furnish push cards similar to those furnished by respondent, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondent who are opposed to use of push cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondent were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said push cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondent from his said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said push cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from his said competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 5. As stated previously in these findings, the respondent sells his merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. While the annual volume of respondent's business was not shown exactly, the respondent testified and the Commission finds, that the respondent's annual volume of business is, and has been, substantial. The respondent testified that during 1936 he distributed between 10,000 and 20,000 push cards per month, having a total of approximately 150,000 push cards for that year, and that for the year 1935 his sales were in excess of $100,000 and that for the year 1936 his gross sales were larger than for 1935.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise as described above, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, W. A. Leith, individually and trading as Style Silk Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. A. Leith, individually and trading as Style Silk Company, his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of hosiery, and other merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or other similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise;

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to members of the public push cards or other similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of merchandise by the use of push cards or other similar devices, or in any manner selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise free of charge or at varying prices depending upon lot or chance.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Albert J. Tarrson, individually and trading as the National Advertisers Company, the

Complaint

A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company, and the Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is an individual doing business under the following trade names and styles: National Advertisers Company, A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company, and Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, and has his principal office and place of business at 230 East Ohio Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of cameras, pen and pencil sets, radio receiving sets, safety razors, clocks, and various other articles of merchandise, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, retail dealers, and to the purchasing public. Respondent's customers are located at points in the various States of the United States, and respondent causes his said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and a distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards bear a number of girls' names; concealed under each name is a number; also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29

26 F. T. C.

(occasionally 1 to 35) pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 pay 29 cents (occasionally where the number is over 35, the purchaser pays 35 cents) for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push cards bear various legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. Certain push cards bear legends informing customers and prospective customers that a few of the numbers will be free to the person selecting such numbers. Illustrative of a few, but not descriptive of all of such legends, are the following:

Select your favorite girl's name and receive a New Modern Rotary Clock—the latest clock sensation—$5.00 value—Numbers under 29 pay what you draw—Numbers over 29 pay only 29 cents—No higher—Write your name opposite name you select on reverse side.

Persons selecting name under seal receive choice of articles for 1 cent to 35 cents.

FREE numbers 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, pay nothing.

4—EXTRA WINNERS—4

Numbers 23—33—43—and last sale, each receives a genuine Tarco Vacuum Pen—Pencil Set—$2.50 value

Numbers 1 to 35 pay what you draw

All numbers over 35 pay only 35 cents—No higher

Write purchaser's name on back of card opposite name selected

When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed, and the person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise described without further charge, and the salesman, agent, or representative or retail dealer, soliciting purchases of chances as above described, also receive an article of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names, or whether the same will be obtained free of charge, until the selection has been made and the name removed. Also the name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected, and the customers or purchasers do not know what they will receive for their name, if anything, until after the master seal has been removed. Those qualifying to receive one of the other articles of merchandise by selecting a particular number do not know what they will receive, if anything, until after their selection has been made and the name removed. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal, or who do not qualify for one of the other articles of merchandise by selecting a particular number, receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay.

The purchasing public are thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pushes from said cards in the hope that they may select a prize-winning name, or one of the prize-winning numbers, and thus obtain an article of merchandise free of charge or for a sum not in excess of 29 cents (occasionally 35 cents). The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells his merchandise resell the same to retail dealers, together with the push cards furnished by respondent, and such retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct offer for sale and sell said merchandise to the purchasing public by means of said push cards in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, and said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale and distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public, as above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure such articles of merchandise in the manner alleged.

The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale or sell merchandise by any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise as distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said methods or sales plans and by the element of chance involved in the sale or purchase thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise of respondent in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods or sales plans by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondent and such other distributors as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods or sales plans by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to his customers and prospective customers, by means and by the use of the trade name "A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company" and by the use of the words "Makers of Tarco products—Manufacturers" on his stationery, that he is the manufacturer of said articles of merchandise, or some of them, in which he deals. A substantial portion of the purchasing public, including wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, have expressed and have a preference for dealing direct with the manufacturer of products being purchased, such purchasers believing that they secure closer prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from a selling agency or middleman.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of said representation, that he is a manufacturer of the merchandise in which he deals, has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent's said customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is a business concern which controls, operates, or owns a factory in which said merchandise sold by respondent is manufactured, and that persons dealing with respondent are buying said merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including advantages in price, service, delivery, and adjustment of account, that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent neither owns, controls, nor operates any factory whatsoever, and does not manufacture any of the merchandise sold by him, but on the contrary purchases such merchandise from others.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who manufacture the merchandise which they sell, and who rightfully represent that they are the manufacturers thereof. There are others of said competitors who purchase the merchandise in which they deal and resell the same at a profit to themselves, and who in no wise represent that they manufacture said merchandise. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraphs 6 and 7 hereof, tend to and do divert trade and business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

PAR. 9. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on March 18, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Albert J. Tarrson, individually and trading as the National Advertisers Company, the A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company, and the Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Albert J. Tarrson is an individual doing business under the trade names and styles, National Advertisers Company, A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company and the Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 230 East Ohio Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise including clocks, cameras, radio receiving sets, pen and pencil sets, safety razors, washing machines, food mixers, vacuum cleaners, roasters, toasters, automatic razors and electric dry shavers, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. He causes such merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his principal place of business in Chicago, Illinois, to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all of the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 above, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his merchandise, has adopted and pursued and still continues the following methods and practices:

All of the said push cards involve the same principle or sales plan or method, but vary to some extent in detail. One of the said push cards bears 24 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 24 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names above referred to. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has one large red seal and concealed within this seal is one of the feminine names above referred to. The numbers concealed within each of the partially perforated disks cannot be ascertained until a push or selection has been made, and the name concealed within the large red seal cannot be ascertained until the seal has been removed. The push cards contain printed legends or instructions as follows:

Sales of rotary clocks by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said prize or premium is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 29 cents for a rotary clock and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes one rotary clock and generally an additional item of merchandise to his representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of said printed instructions bears the following legends, to wit:

SUGGESTIONS FOR USING SALES CARD

The push card contains 24 girl's names—beneath each is a concealed number. These numbers range from one upwards. All numbers under 29 pay amount of number (one pays 1¢—19 pays 19¢, etc.). Any number over 29 only pays 29¢. NO HIGHER.

Your friends select any name they choose and push out the corresponding hole. You write down your friend's names opposite the names they select. When all have been pushed out, you will find that you have collected $6.50. Then remove the large seal at the top. Under it is the fortunate name. The person who selected that name is entitled to a Modern Rotary Clock. NOW YOU CAN DESTROY THE CARD—THERE IS NO NEED TO RETURN IT TO US.

Fill out the order blank (see other side), specify the colors you wish—one for you and one for the person who selected the name under the seal. Send the order blank to us together with express money order or cashier's check for $6.50. The two clocks will be shipped to you prepaid. Thus you will receive your clock at no cost to you and the fortunate person will receive his or her ROTARY CLOCK at hardly any cost.

You will have a lot of fun getting folks to push out names on the cards. Show it to your fellow employees, friends, relatives, and acquaintances. Whenever there is a party or gathering at your home or your friends' home, bring out your card. Everyone will find it as much fun as any other game or pastime. You will have the card pushed out in no time.

If you mail the order within ten days, we will include a Surprise Present for you FREE. It's worth getting.

As stated above, the other push cards which respondent furnishes are identical in principle but vary in detail. Some of said push cards are furnished by respondent and are used by the public in purchasing and distributing cameras, radio receiving sets, and other merchandise sold and distributed by respondent. The members of the public to whom respondent furnishes his push cards and other literature use the same in the manner suggested by respondent, thereby distributing respondent's merchandise to others and procuring respondent's merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondent's merchandise through the use of or by means of the said push cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondent, in furnishing said push cards, puts in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of his merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in furnishing said push cards, has knowledge that the same are, have been and will be, used in distributing his merchandise, and furnishes said push cards so that his merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondent, who do not furnish push cards similar to those furnished by respondent, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondent who are opposed to use of push cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondent were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said push cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondent from his said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said push cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from his said competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 5. As stated previously in these findings, the respondent sells his merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, respondent having been called as a witness and having testified that he sells his merchandise throughout the entire United States. While the annual volume of respondent's business was not shown exactly, the respondent testified, and the Commission finds, that the respondent's annual volume of business is, and has been, substantial. The respondent testified that he distributed each week approximately 50,000 of his push cards offering rotary clocks for distribution, and that at the time of the hearing, April 27, 1937, has sold between 3,000 and 4,000 of said clocks during 1937, and that his business for 1937 was considerably less than for a similar period during 1936. He also testified that prior to September 1936, he distributed between 100,000 and 150,000 push cards offering cameras, and that during 1936 he distributed approximately 100,000 push cards offering radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise as described above, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Albert J. Tarrson, individually and trading as the National Advertisers Company, A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company, and the Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Albert J. Tarrson, individually and trading as the National Advertisers Company, A. J. Sales & Manufacturing Company, The Tarrson Company, and the Pla-Pal Radio & Television Company, his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including among others, clocks, cameras, radio receiving sets, pen and pencil sets, safety razors, washing machines, food mixers, vacuum cleaners, roasters, toasters, automatic razors, and electric dry shavers, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise;

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to members of the public push cards or other similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of merchandise by the use of push cards or other similar devices, or in any manner selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise free of charge or at varying prices depending upon lot or chance.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that C. J. O'Crowley, an individual trading as Excel Products and also as C. J. O'Crowley, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, C. J. O'Crowley, is an individual trading as Excel Products and also as C. J. O'Crowley. The legal residence and address of the respondent is 4336 Sheridan Road, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the transportation, sale, and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of a medicinal preparation recommended as a gland treatment, and known as and designated "Excel Gland Tablets." The respondent causes said product, when sold, to be shipped and transported in interstate commerce from his place of business located in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. He now maintains, and has maintained at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, is now, and at all times herein referred to has been in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of other preparations prepared, compounded, advertised, and sold as gland treatments in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and who in no way misrepresent the quality, efficacy, or therapeutic value of their product.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase said gland treatment, Excel Gland Tablets, has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, and has printed and circulated throughout the several States of the United States, through the United States mail and otherwise, to customers and prospective customers certain advertising literature in all of which respondent has caused his name and the name of the product to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, and in which the following statements are made:

Be young again.

Don't miss this—two gland medicines, each with imported ingredients.

Men and women, assist your glands with Excel Special.

If you want a "real article" try this and feel its stimulating effects.

Guaranteed relief on two or three treatments.

We recommend this medicine for use as a gland stimulant.

Men and women, assist your glands with "EXCEL" tablets. IMPORTED INGREDIENTS in this GLAND MEDICINE. If you want "STIMULATING EFFECTS" just try "EXCEL".

PAR. 4. All of said statements as above set out, together with many other similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising and literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's product, Excel Gland Tablets. In all of the respondent's advertising matter and literature, the respondent represents, through the statements herein set out, and through other statements of like import and effect, that the use of Excel Gland Tablets enables one to be young again; that Excel Gland Tablets consist of gland medicines; that said product is a gland stimulant and assists the glands of either men or women; that said product constitutes a competent aphrodisiac; and that the results from the use of said product are sure.

PAR. 5. The claims and representations made by the respondent with respect to the therapeutic value and efficacy of the product Excel Gland Tablets are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's product, Excel Gland Tablets, will not enable one to be young in the manner in which the respondent represents or in any manner whatever. The product Excel Gland Tablets does not contain gland medicines. The said product is not a gland stimulant, nor will it assist the glands of either men or women. The said product is not a competent aphrodisiac. The product is not in any sense a gland treatment, and is not a competent treatment for natural debility or for debility caused in any manner.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made by the respondent in designating and describing the product Excel Gland Tablets and its efficacy and therapeutic value as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling said product, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said claims and representations are true. As a direct consequence of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of respondent as hereinabove set out, a number of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's product with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in manufacturing, compounding, selling, and distributing gland treatments and who do not misrepresent the quality, efficacy, or therapeutic value of their respective products. As a result of the unfair acts and false and misleading representations of the respondent, injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 7. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are all to the prejudice and injury to the public and respondent's competitors, and have been and are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on April 1, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent C. J. O'Crowley, an individual, trading as Excel Products, and as C. J. O'Crowley, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Joe L. Evins and James McKeag, attorneys for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent C. J. O'Crowley is an individual trading under his own name and also under the name Excel Products. His place of business has been variously located at 4308 Sheridan Road and 4336 Sheridan Road, both addresses being located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. For the last four years respondent has been engaged in the transportation, sale, and distribution of medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations designated as "Excel" and "Excel Special." These products are recommended by respondent as competent and effective gland treatments. At the date the hearings were held, on September 11, 1937, respondent was still engaged in the sale and distribution of his said products. When the respondent receives orders for said preparations, he ships them from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Usually such shipments are made by parcel-post. For the past 4 years respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent has been, and is now, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations, likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, of medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations designed, distributed, and sold, for use in connection with the treatment of glandular disturbances or deficiencies, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. In compounding their respective products, said competitors make use of varying amounts or some or all of the same ingredients contained in respondent's products and do not misrepresent the quality, efficacy, or therapeutic value, of their respective products.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the preparations which he distributes and sells, the respondent has made use of advertisements inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States such as, Startling Detective, Hunter Trader Trapper, Illustrated Mechanics, and Screen Fun. In furtherance of the sale of said preparations, the respondent has also circulated throughout the several States of the United States, through the United States mail and otherwise, to customers and prospective customers, certain advertising literature. In the advertisements and advertising literature, above referred to, the respondent has caused his name, together with the names of his preparations, to wit: "Excel" and "Excel

Special" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed together with such statements as the following:

Be Young Again.

Don't miss this—two gland medicines, each with imported ingredients.

Men and women, assist your glands with Excel Special.

If you want a "real article" try this and feel its stimulating effects.

Guaranteed relief on two or three treatments.

We recommend this medicine for use as a gland stimulant.

Men and women, assist your glands with "EXCEL" tablets. IMPORTED INGREDIENTS in this GLAND MEDICINE. If you want "STIMULATING EFFECTS" just try "EXCEL."

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements, together with other similar statements appearing in respondent's advertisements and advertising literature which are not set out herein, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparations. Through such advertising matter and literature, the respondent represents that the use of said preparations enables one to be young again, that said preparations consist of gland medicines, that said preparations are a gland stimulant and assist the glands of either men or women, that said preparations constitute a competent aphrodisiac, and that the results of the use of said products are sure. While the preparations are loosely referred to by the respondent as gland medicines in general and indefinite terms, members of the purchasing public reading the aforesaid advertisements would form the mistaken and erroneous impression and belief that such preparations bring about sexual rejuvenation and are intended to overcome sexual deficiencies and allied conditions in men or women.

PAR. 5. Respondent's preparation designated as "Excel" is made up under a formula consisting of:

$\frac{1}{24}$ Gr. Yohimbine HCl

$\frac{1}{8}$ Gr. Lecithin

$\frac{1}{4}$ Gr. Po. Ext. Cascara

$\frac{1}{8}$ Gr. Po. Ext. Nux Vomica

The preparation designated as "Excel Special" consists of:

$\frac{1}{2}$ Gr. Yohimbine HCl

$\frac{1}{4}$ Gr. Lecithin

$\frac{1}{16}$ Gr. Po. Ext. Cascara

$\frac{1}{16}$ Gr. Po. Ext. Nux Vomica

$\frac{1}{2}$ Gr. Po. Yeast

From the expert testimony adduced at the hearings, it is found that the ingredients of respondent's preparations are present in such small quantities as to be considered homeopathic doses and thereby totally ineffective. It is further found that neither of said preparations constitutes a competent and effective gland stimulant. Yohimbine was at one time frequently prescribed in doses of one to three grains as a sexual rejuvenator, but present-day medical opinion is that said drug is absolutely ineffective and has no medicinal value whatever. Cascara is laxative in its properties. Nux Vomica is claimed to have a tonic effect upon the circulatory system and is often prescribed as a tonic in combination with iron for loss of appetite. Its active principal is strychnine. Lecithin is one of the active organic compounds found in the brain and is infrequently prescribed. It is not known to possess any therapeutic value. From the medical testimony, it is found that neither of the formulas above set out assists or stimulates the glands of either men or women or has any effect thereon. Neither of the aforesaid formulas constitutes a competent or effective aphrodisiac. Impotency or glandular deficiencies may be due to any one of a number of debilitating diseases such as syphilis, tuberculosis, diabetes, or severe grades of anemia. Such conditions may also be psychic, resulting from mental shock or trauma. No prescription or specific medicine will be applicable in all cases, and it is impossible to prescribe for such conditions without a thorough diagnosis as to the cause thereof by a competent physician.

The claims and representations made by the respondent to the effect that said preparations consist of gland medicines, are competent and effective gland treatments, and constitute competent treatments for glandular debilities, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

PAR. 6. The false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in advertising and describing his preparations designated as "Excel" and "Excel Special" have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said preparations do enable one to be young again, that said preparations consist of gland medicines, that said preparations are gland stimulants and assist the glands of either men or women, that said preparations constitute competent aphrodisiacs, and that said preparations bring about sexual rejuvenation and are competent and effective treatment for sexual deficiencies. As a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a number of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's preparations with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in distributing and selling, or manufacturing and selling, various medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations containing some of the same ingredients as respondent's preparations and used and prescribed by physicians for the same purpose for which respondent's preparations are advertised and sold, who do not misrepresent the character, efficacy, or therapeutic value of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, C. J. O'Crowley, an individual, trading as Excel Products, and as C. J. O'Crowley, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent C. J. O'Crowley individually and trading under the names Excel Products and C. J. O'Crowley, or under any other names, his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the sale of medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations now designated as "Excel" and "Excel Special," or any other preparations containing the same or substantially the same ingredients and possessing the same properties, sold under those names or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

1. That the use of said preparations enables one to be young again;
2. That said preparations consist of gland medicines;
3. That said preparations are gland stimulants or assist the glands of either men or women;
4. That said preparations constitute competent and effective aphrodisiacs;

Order

26 F. T. C.

5. That said preparations constitute competent and effective remedies or treatments for sexual deficiencies, or will bring about sexual rejuvenation.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days from the date of service upon him of a copy of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth the manner and form in which he has complied with the order herein set forth.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Consolidated Candy Company, a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Texas, with its principal office and place of business located at 826 Exposition Avenue, Dallas, Tex. Respondent is now, and for 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Dallas, Tex., to purchasers thereof in the State of Texas and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers, various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy and two other articles of merchandise, which larger pieces of candy and other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner:

The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have white centers, but a small number of the said pieces of candy have pink centers and one piece of the said candy has a yellow center. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1 cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of the said candies having a pink center is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the said larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser who procures one of the said candies having a yellow center is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the other articles of merchandise heretofore referred to; and the purchaser of the last piece of candy is to be given free of charge the other article of merchandise contained in said assortment heretofore referred to. The color of the center of said pieces of candy is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candy obtaining a piece of candy having a pink or yellow center, or purchasing the last piece of candy in said assortment, thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy or one of the other articles of merchandise wholly by lot or by chance. The respondent manufactures and distributes several assortments involving the above described sales plan in which there is some variation as to the details.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces or bars of candy, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the customers to one of the larger pieces or bars of candy, and that the last sale from said assortment entitled the purchaser to one of the larger pieces or bars of candy, and that all other numbers entitled the purchaser to one of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on the disks or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the larger pieces or bars of candy or one of the small pieces of candy for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures and distributes several assortments involving the above described sales plan, some of which vary in detail; namely, with some assortments articles of merchandise other than candy are included and the purchaser obtaining certain specified numbers are entitled to one of these articles.

(c) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of bars of candy, a number of boxes of candy, and a device commonly called a "push card." The candy bars and the boxes of candy contained in said assortments are distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each, and the card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the boxes of candy, and that all other numbers receive one of the bars of candy, and that the last purchase from said assortment entitles the purchaser thereof to one of the boxes of candy. The numbers on the disks are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the boxes of candy or one of the bars of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, and said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy, or other articles of merchandise, larger pieces of candy, and a box of candy.

The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said methods has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery scheme.

Wherefore, many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 6, 1936 issued, and on November 9, 1936 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Consolidated Candy Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondent filed in the office of the Commission an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further testimony and all other intervening procedure. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Texas, with its principal office and place of business located at 826 Exposition Avenue, Dallas, Tex. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Dallas, Tex., to purchasers thereof in the State of Texas and in various other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers, various packages or assortments of candy, so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

(a) One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy and two other articles of merchandise, which larger pieces of candy and other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner:

The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have white centers, but a small number of the said pieces of candy have pink centers and one piece of the said candy has a yellow center. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1 cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of the said candies having a pink center is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the said larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser who procures one of the said candies having a yellow center is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the other articles of merchandise heretofore referred to; and the purchaser of the last piece of candy is to be given free of charge the other article of merchandise contained in said assortment heretofore referred to. The color of the center of said pieces of candy is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candy obtaining a piece of candy having a pink or yellow center thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy or one of the other articles of merchandise wholly by lot or by chance. The respondent manufactures and distributes several assortments involving the above described sales plan in which there is some variation as to the details.

(b) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of small pieces of candy, a number of larger pieces or bars of candy, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the customer to one of the larger pieces or bars of candy, and that the last sale from said assortment entitles the purchaser to one of the larger pieces or bars of candy, and that all other numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on the disks or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the larger pieces or bars of candy or one of the small pieces of candy for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(c) Another assortment manufactured and distributed by the respondent is composed of a number of bars of candy, a number of boxes of candy, and a device commonly called a "push card." The candy bars and the boxes of candy contained in said assortments are distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 5 cents each, and the card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser to one of the boxes of candy, and that all other numbers receive one of the bars of candy and that the last purchase from said assortment entitles the purchaser thereof to one of the boxes of candy. The numbers on the disks are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the boxes of candy or one of the bars of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortments for sale, and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Consolidated Candy Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

26 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, Consolidated Candy Company, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Consolidated Candy Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise which said larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color;

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling the said candy to the public at retail;

5. Furnishing to dealers a device commonly called a push card, or a device commonly called a punchboard, either with packages or assortments of candy or separately, which push card or punchboard is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Consolidated Candy Company, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3044. Complaint, Jan. 29, 1937—Decision, Jan. 27, 1938

Where two partners engaged in sale and distribution of clocks, radios, vacuum cleaners, razors, and fountain pen sets, and other merchandise—

Furnished and distributed to members of the general public in practically all States and in the District of Columbia, push cards, order blanks, and advertisements depicting merchandise thus being offered, and instructions, suggestions, and circulars describing their said plan of selling such merchandise, by which chance purchaser paid for chance varying amount, dependent upon number disclosed within various disks of aforesaid cards, and received rotary clock (or other articles or merchandise as aforesaid), or nothing, depending upon success or failure in selecting feminine names corresponding to those concealed under card's two master seals, and they compensated by one or more items of merchandise operator or representative, and thereby placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of their said merchandise, with knowledge and intent that said cards had been, were, and would be used in sale and distribution of their said products to public by lot or chance, contrary to public policy, and in competition with many who are opposed to use of such cards in sale and distribution of their merchandise and refrain from furnishing same;

COMPLAINT

are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are individuals doing business as co-partners under the name and style of J. Arthur Warren Company, with their principal office and place of business located at 318 West Washington Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. They are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of rotary clocks and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and cause and have caused said products when sold to be shipped from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described above, respondents in soliciting the sale of and selling their products in interstate commerce have adopted and pursued and still maintain the following methods and practices:

Respondents distribute to the public through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of rotary clocks and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push card.

Respondents' push card bears 32 feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push card has 32 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has two large red partially perforated disks, and concealed within each of these two disks is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:

2 WINNERS 2
RECEIVE
$5.00 ROTARY CLOCKS
FOR 1¢ to 29¢

numbers from 1 to 29 pay what you draw, numbers over 29 pay only 29¢
write purchaser's name on back opposite name selected

INSTRUCTIONS: There are 32 mixed numbers in this card, printed from 1 upwards. Numbers under 29 pay what numbers call for. All numbers over 29 only pay 29¢. When card is completely sold, open large seals at top and Parties who selected the names which correspond with names under seals receive the ROTARY CLOCKS.

Sales of rotary clocks by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above described legends or instructions. Each of said prizes or premiums is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 29 cents for a rotary clock, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish one rotary clock and additional merchandise to their representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondents also furnish their representative with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards.

PAR. 3. Respondents in selling their said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push card, conduct lotteries or place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

The sale of respondents' said merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondents' merchandise contrary to the established public policy of the United States and contrary to criminal statutes of many of the States of the United States. By reason of said facts, many competitors of respondents are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many purchasers of clocks are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondents' sales method, as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondents' merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondents' competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 4. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to respondents, because of said game of chance, trade, and custom from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said clock trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to lessen competition in said clock trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said clock trade in respondents and such other competitors as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said clock trade. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said clock trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win clocks by chance, because such method is contrary to public policy or to the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States, or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the purchasers of said clocks, or because of any or all of such reasons.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on January 29, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Joseph H. Robinson and S. J. Robinson, copartners, trading as J. Arthur Warren Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondents, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Joseph H. Robinson and S. J. Robinson, are individuals doing business as copartners under the name and style of J. Arthur Warren Company, with their principal office and place of business located at 318 Washington Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause such merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all of the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in commerce by said respondents in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business, respondents are, and have been, engaged in active competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 above, respondents in soliciting the sale of and selling their merchandise have adopted and pursued, and still continue, the following methods and practices:

Respondents distribute to members of the general public in practically all States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through the United States mail certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of the merchandise which they are offering for sale and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards.

All of the push cards used by respondents involve the same principle or sales plan or method but vary to some extent in detail. One of the said push cards bears 32 feminine names with rule columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 32 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," above each of which is printed one of the feminine names heretofore referred to. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has two large red seals, concealed within each of which is one of the feminine names above referred to. The numbers concealed within each of the partially perforated disks cannot be ascertained until a push or selection has been made and the names concealed within the large red seals cannot be ascertained until the seals have been removed. The push card contains printed legends or instructions as follows:

 Receive
 $5.00 Rotary Clocks
 For 1c to 29c
 Numbers from 1 to 29
 Pay What You Draw,
 Numbers Over 29 Pay
 Only 29c
 Write Purchaser's Name on Back Opposite Name
 Selected

The reverse of the said card bears the following legend, among others:

INSTRUCTIONS: There are 32 mixed numbers in this card, printed from 1 upwards. Numbers under 29 pay what numbers call for. All numbers over 29 only pay 29c. When card is completely sold, open large seals at top and Parties who selected the names which correspond with names under seals receive the ROTARY CLOCKS.

Sales of rotary clocks by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 29 cents for a rotary clock, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

In addition to the two clocks distributed to purchasers from the said push card, the respondents furnish one rotary clock and generally an additional item of merchandise to their representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondents also furnish their representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of the said printed instructions bears the following legends, to wit:

HOW TO OBTAIN YOUR MODERNE ROTARY CLOCK FREE

This card consists of 32 girls' names—beneath each name is a concealed number which shows the amount the person selecting that particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity

These concealed numbers range from No. 1 to No. 52, but your customers pay only 1c to 29c, according to the number disclosed under the disc punched. For instance, if customer punches 1 he pays 1c. If 10 is punched, he donates 10c, or if 50 is punched, he pays only 29c. NOTHING HIGHER THAN 29c—29c is maximum cost. (Total $8.60.)

When all names have been punched and collections made, you then remove the large seals and disclose the winners—the persons who punched the corresponding name is awarded One (1) Moderne Rotary Clock, valued at $5.00.

Don't forget the surprise gift—send your order and remittance within 15 days and the FREE gift will certainly surprise you.

As stated above, the other push cards which respondents furnish are identical in principle but vary in detail. Some of said push cards are furnished by respondents and used by the public in purchasing and distributing radios, vacuum cleaners, razors, and fountain pen sets, and other merchandise sold and distributed by respondents. The members of the public, to whom respondents furnish their push cards and other literature, use the same in the manner suggested by respondents, thereby distributing respondents' merchandise to others by lot or chance and procuring respondents' merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondents' merchandise through the use of or by means of the said push cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondents in furnishing said push cards put in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of their merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondents, in furnishing said push cards, have knowledge that the same are, have been and will be, used in distributing their merchandise, and furnish said push cards so that their merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondents, who do not furnish push cards similar to those furnished by respondents, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondents who are opposed to use of push cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondents were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said push cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondents from their said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said push cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondents' competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondents from their said competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 5. As stated previously in these findings, the respondents sell their merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. While the annual volume of respondents' business was not shown exactly, one of respondents testified, and the Commission finds, that the respondents' annual volume of business is, and has been, substantial. One of the respondents testified that from August 1936 to December 31, 1936, they distributed approximately 250,000 push cards and that their sales for the same period were approximately $20,000.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise as described above, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Joseph H. Robinson and S. J. Robinson, copartners, trading as J. Arthur Warren Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitutes a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

THE BALL COMPANY, INCORPORATED

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3293. Complaint, Jan. 4, 1938—Decision, Jan. 27, 1938

Where a corporation engaged as wholesale jeweler in sale of diamonds and diamond rings to purchasers at points in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in offer and sale of such products to dealers and members of the general public in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including many competitors who do not misrepresent, as below set forth, their said products and basis of their guarantees—

Represented and implied, through certificates and guarantees given by it on sheets similar to those commonly used for security certificates, and featuring, in arrangement and type, words "Federal Trade Commission" as part of statement certifying that "diamond ring sold this day to ----- of ----- is set with selected blue-white diamonds and that they have been found to be PERFECT in accordance with the required standard of the FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION" (together with picture of dome of Capitol above an eagle), that diamonds thus sold by it were in fact perfect in accordance with required Commission standard and had been inspected, found and certified as such by aforesaid Government agency, facts being Commission had neither fixed nor promulgated any standard for perfect or other diamonds, or inspected, found, or certified said or any other as perfect diamonds, and said statements, representations, and implications were deceptive, misleading, and false;

With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true and into purchase of its said diamonds and diamond rings by reason of erroneous and mistaken beliefs thus induced, and with result that substantial trade, as consequence thereof, was unfairly diverted to it from those of its said competitors who do not misrepresent their guarantees or aforesaid products; to the injury of competitors in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Wm. T. Chantland for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Ball Company, Incorporated, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Ball Company, Incorporated, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its office and principal business at 58 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., and with branches at Cleveland, Ohio; Birmingham, Ala.; Denver, Colo.; San Francisco, Calif.; and St. Paul, Minn. Respondent is now and for some time past has been engaged in business as a wholesale jeweler selling among other items diamonds and diamond rings. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business sells and distributes its diamonds and diamond rings to dealers and members of the public and causes said wares, when sold, to be transported from the State of Illinois and the other States of origin of its shipments, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a course of trade in commerce in diamonds and diamond rings between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, engaged in substantial competition with various other corporations and with individuals and firms engaged in offering for sale and selling diamonds and diamond rings to dealers and members of the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business of selling diamonds and diamond rings in interstate commerce, and to induce the purchase of certain of its said diamonds and diamond rings, respondent distributes among and issues to the purchasers of said rings, a "Diamond Ring Guarantee" and certificates printed on fancy bordered lithographed sheets similar in size, form, and general characteristics to some of those commonly used for stock and security certificates, with blank spaces for numbers, amounts, signatures, and text, on each of which appears as part of the guarantee the following: "This is to certify that the Garland diamond ring sold this day to _____ of _____ is set with selected blue-white diamonds and that they have been found to be PERFECT in accordance with the required standard of the FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION." The words "Federal Trade Commission" are in prominent black block capital letters in a separate line near the center of each certificate.

The said certificates and guarantees constitute and are representations by respondent that the diamonds sold by it, when accompanied by such certificates and guarantees, are in fact perfect in accordance with a standard required by the Federal Trade Commission. The intent of respondent in so representing and guaranteeing its said diamond rings, and the effect thereof, is to mislead and deceive dealers and other purchasers of such diamond rings into the erroneous belief that the Federal Trade Commission has in fact fixed and promulgated a required standard for perfect diamonds, and that these diamonds of respondent meet that requirement.

In truth and in fact the Federal Trade Commission has neither fixed nor promulgated any standard for perfect or other diamonds.

The general form, arrangement and text of said guarantee certificate is also intended by respondent to imply, and it does imply, that the diamonds sold with such certificates and guarantees have been inspected, found, and certified by a United States Government agency, to wit: The Federal Trade Commission, to be perfect diamonds. To aid in such implication, the certificate has on its face a picture of the dome of the United States Capitol at Washington, D. C., above an eagle, the United States emblem bird. In truth and in fact the Federal Trade Commission has neither inspected nor found nor certified said diamonds to be perfect diamonds.

All of said statements, representations, and implications are deceptive, misleading, and false, and tend to and do deceive and mislead dealers and other purchasers into the purchase of said diamonds and diamond rings in the erroneous belief that said representations and implications are true.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent many who do not so misrepresent their diamonds and diamond rings, and the basis of their guarantees.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent as above alleged in the course of selling and offering for sale its diamonds and diamond rings in commerce as described herein, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of respondent's diamonds and diamond rings on account of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof, substantial trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from those of its competitors referred to in paragraph 4 hereof who do not misrepresent their guarantees or their diamonds and diamond rings. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is being, done to respondent's competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing acts and practices have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on January 4, 1938 issued, and on January 6, 1938 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Ball Company, Incorporated, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance and service of said complaint, the respondent filed an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, no briefs having been filed or oral arguments heard, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Ball Company, Incorporated, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its office and principal business at 58 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., and with branches at Cleveland, Ohio; Birmingham, Ala.; Denver, Colo.; San Francisco, Calif.; and St. Paul, Minn. Respondent is now and for some time past has been engaged in business as a wholesale jeweler selling among other items diamonds and diamond rings. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business sells and distributes its diamond rings to dealers and members of the public and causes said wares, when sold, to be transported from the State of Illinois and the other States of origin of its shipments, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a course of trade in commerce in diamonds and diamond rings between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, engaged in substantial competition with various other corporations and with individuals and firms engaged in offering for sale and selling diamonds and diamond rings to dealers and members of the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business of selling diamonds and diamond rings in interstate commerce, and to induce the purchase of certain of its said diamonds and diamond rings, respondent distributes among and issues to the purchasers of said rings, a "Diamond Ring Guarantee" and certificates printed on fancy bordered lithographed sheets similar in size, form, and general characteristics to some of those commonly used for stock and security certificates, with blank spaces for numbers, amounts, signatures, and text, on each of which appears as part of the guarantee the following: "This is to certify that the Garland diamond ring sold this day to ----- of ---- is set with selected blue-white diamonds and that they have been found to be PERFECT in accordance with the required standard of the FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION." The words "Federal Trade Commission" are in prominent black block capital letters in a separate line near the center of each certificate.

PAR. 4. The said certificates and guarantees constitute and are representations by respondent that the diamonds sold by it, when accompanied by such certificates and guarantees, are in fact perfect in accordance with a standard required by the Federal Trade Commission. The intent of respondent in so representing and guaranteeing its said diamond rings, and the effect thereof, is to mislead and deceive dealers and other purchasers of such diamond rings into the erroneous belief that the Federal Trade Commission has in fact fixed and promulgated a required standard for perfect diamonds, and that these diamonds of respondent meet that requirement. The general form, arrangement, and text of said guarantee certificate is also intended by respondent to imply, and it does imply, that the diamonds sold with such certificates and guarantees have been inspected, found, and certified by a United States Government agency, to wit, the Federal Trade Commission, to be perfect diamonds. To aid in such implication, the certificate has on its face a picture of the dome of the United States Capitol at Washington, D. C., above an eagle, the United States emblem bird.

PAR. 5. All of said statements, representations, and implications are deceptive, misleading, and false in that the Federal Trade Commission has neither fixed nor promulgated any standard for perfect or other diamonds or inspected or found or certified said or any other diamonds to be perfect diamonds.

PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of respondent many who do not so misrepresent their diamonds and diamond rings, and the basis of their guarantees.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent as above alleged in the course of selling and offering for sale its diamonds and diamond rings in commerce as described herein, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of respondent's diamonds and diamond rings on account of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof, substantial trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from those of its competitors referred to in paragraph 6 hereof who do not misrepresent their guarantees or their diamonds and diamond rings. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is being, done to respondent's competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, The Ball Company, Incorporated, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission heretofore on the 28th day of August 1936, issued its complaint charging C. E. Gheens, an individual trading as Bradas & Gheens, with using certain unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it since having appeared to the Commission that Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, a body corporate, with the aforesaid C. E. Gheens as principal stockholder thereof, on January 1, 1935, became and was the successor to the business theretofore carried on by the aforesaid C. E. Gheens:

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of the aforesaid act, the Commission having reason to believe that Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, a corporation, as well as C. E. Gheens, an individual trading as Bradas & Gheens, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues this its amended and supplemental complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, C. E. Gheens, from December 31, 1920, to December 31, 1934, was the sole owner of and conducted the business known as Bradas & Gheens, with his principal office and place of business located at 817 South Floyd Street in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, and was engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing candy to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and caused said products, when so sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Kentucky to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there was a constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

The respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Kentucky, with its office and principal place of business located at 817 South Floyd Street in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, and on the said 1st day of January 1935, said corporation became and was the successor to the business theretofore carried on by the aforesaid C. E. Gheens and thereafter was and has been engaged in manufacturing candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Kentucky to purchasers thereof in the State of Kentucky and in the other States of the United States at their respective places of business, and there is now and has been since January 1, 1935, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of the said business, respondents have been in competition with other corporations and individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold since on or about November 1935, to wholesale and retail dealers packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment retail at the price of 1 cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a center colored differently from the majority is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy having a center colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment, thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondents have sold said assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondents sell and have sold direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, with the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of candy.

The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on August 28, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, a corporation, and C. E. Gheens, an individual trading as Bradas & Gheens, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, on January 14, 1937, the Commission issued and served its amended and supplemental complaint on the respondents, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint on August 28, 1936, as aforesaid. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted the request of respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, for permission to withdraw its answer and to substitute therefor an amended answer admitting all the material allegations of the amended and supplemental complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which amended answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended and supplemental complaint and amended answer of respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated; and answer of respondent, C. E. Gheens; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, C. E. Gheens, from December 31, 1920, to December 31, 1934, was the sole owner of and conducted the business known as Bradas & Gheens, with his principal office and place of business located at 817 South Floyd Street in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, and was engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing candy to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and caused said products, when so sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Kentucky to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. On January 1, 1935, said respondent, C. E. Gheens, transferred and conveyed his said business known as Bradas & Gheens to the respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated. Respondent, C. E. Gheens, as an individual, has not engaged in the manufacture and sale of candy since January 1, 1935.

The respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Kentucky, with its office and principal place of business located at 817 South Floyd Street in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, and on the said 1st day of January 1935, said corporation became and was the successor to the business theretofore carried on by the aforesaid C. E. Gheens and thereafter was and has been engaged in manufacturing candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes said products, when so sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Kentucky to purchasers thereof in the State of Kentucky and in the various other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now and has been since January 1, 1935, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of the said business, respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, is in competition with other corporations and individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, sells and has sold since on or about November 1935, to wholesale and retail dealers packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner:

The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment retail at the price of 1 cent each, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a center colored differently from the majority is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, one of the larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy having a center colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment, thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent has sold said assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells and has sold direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, with the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a number of larger pieces of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candies, and the sale of candies by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answer of C. E. Gheens dated February 3, 1937, denying the allegations of the said amended and supplemental complaint, and the amended answer of respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, admitting all the material allegations of the amended and supplemental complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public;

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of different colors together with larger pieces of candy which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the amended and supplemental complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the individual respondent, C. E. Gheens.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Bradas & Gheens, Incorporated, a corporation, shall within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF
JOSEPH WEIDENHOFF, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2675. Complaint, Dec. 31, 1935—Decision, Jan. 31, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of electrical devices and automobile motor-testing devices, together with accessories, and constituting largest manufacturer and distributor of such devices in the United States, and in selling and shipping its various products among the various States to customers consisting generally of wholesale automotive supply dealers, for resale to purchasing public; following purchase of patent on vacuum gauge which it included as one of numerous parts made use of in its manufacture of certain testing devices or motor analyzers, and which (1) was only part therein so patented, (2) constituted only a small and minor part thereof in cost, in relative value, and in functioning of the complete device, and (3) was unrelated to many of the other unpatented parts included therein as aforesaid; and in competition with others likewise engaged in manufacturing, assembling, and selling in commerce similar testing devices consisting of a large number of separate and unrelated parts and items assembled as aforesaid—

- (a) Entered into and carried out agreements and understandings between itself and other manufacturers or distributors of such devices to fix and maintain prices to be exacted from purchasers thereof through the medium of license agreements or contracts negotiated by it through threatened infringement suits based on said patented vacuum gauge; and
- (b) Coerced, intimidated, and induced competitor manufacturers and distributors of such devices to raise and change their quoted prices to uniform prices fixed by understanding and agreement between it and them through such threatened suits based on presence of such small and relatively unimportant patented item in its said devices, and without confining itself in its said agreements to the use of said gauge as described and covered by its said patent or confining same to gauge itself, but including complete device with all its separate and unrelated parts and items in no way covered by its said patent;

With result that it was enabled, through said unlawful plan and scheme to control and restrain interstate commerce in such devices extending far beyond limits of its rights as owner of patent on specified use of said gauge, to control and restrain, as aforesaid, competition in commerce in such devices, and particularly and to a substantial extent, prices paid and to be paid for such devices by purchasers thereof, and to bring about an enhancement of such prices over those prevailing prior to said unlawful acts, and which, but therefor, would have continued to prevail, competitors were coerced and compelled by such acts to enter involuntarily into agreements restricting and preventing sales of such devices as aforesaid in free and open competition with each other or otherwise than at stipulated and fixed minimum prices, and there was a tendency to restrain, suppress, and unduly hamper and restrict free flow of said motor-testing devices in commerce among the various States and in said District, and otherwise to prejudice and injure said competitors, purchasers of such devices, and public generally, caused thereby to pay price therefor higher than would have been price under conditions of free and open competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Mr. C. C. Batz of Chritton, Wiles, Davies, Hirschl & Dawson, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, and entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph Weidenhoff, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at Chicago in said State. Respondent is now and for a number of years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing certain devices used by garage owners and others in testing the functioning and efficiency of automobile motors, various parts thereof and accessories thereto. Respondent utilizes for this purpose wholesale automotive supply dealers and also employs a certain number of salesmen. About 5 percent of respondent's business is conducted direct with large garages. Respondent manufactures and sells approximately $450,000 of these testing devices annually, being considerably the largest manufacturer and distributor of testing devices of that and similar character in the United States. Respondent manufactures said devices in the State of Illinois and sells them not only in said State but in other States of the United States and throughout the Nation and in the course of its said business, ships or causes its said products to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. The principal portion of said business of respondent is in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

There are, in all, in the United States, five other manufacturers of the same or substantially similar and competing testing devices as those manufactured by respondent, three of said five manufacturers being licensees of respondent under formal written license agreements with respondent, which stipulate the terms and conditions of the sale of said testing devices by said three other manufacturers. Respondent has made several attempts to negotiate with the fourth competitor a similar price-fixing agreement providing for minimum price increases of more than 70 percent on the testing devices manufactured by it but no agreement has yet been consummated with this manufacturer. The remaining manufacturer in the United States has refused to enter into any agreement whatever with respondent regarding the manufacture of testing devices but has temporarily discontinued manufacturing such testing devices.

Respondent has been and is in competition in interstate commerce with each and all of said five manufacturers in all respects as regards the manufacture, sale, distribution, shipment, and servicing of their respective testing devices, except that respondent is not in competition in interstate commerce as to price with two of said manufacturers because they have entered into license agreements with respondent to sell their products at not less than certain stated prices stipulated and fixed in said license agreements.

PAR. 2. In connection with and in the conduct of its said business and in furtherance of a plan and scheme of respondent to control and restrain free and open competition in interstate commerce in automobile motor-testing devices of the same or of a substantially similar and competing kind as those manufactured by respondent, respondent has done and committed and does commit the following acts and things which form successive and integral parts of its said plan and scheme:

Respondent in 1932 purchased a certain patent issued by the United States on December 2, 1919, for the use of a vacuum gauge "in combination with an internal combustion engine * * * as an indicator of the load factor and relative fuel economy in the motor," together with all the rights of the owner under such a patent, which will expire in or about the year 1936.

Following such purchase respondent began to manufacture and has manufactured and does manufacture certain testing devices consisting of a large number of separate and unrelated parts and items which respondent assembles into a single, complete testing device of various types and kinds and models which respondent thereupon has sold and sells in interstate commerce at prices ranging from $175 to $1,000 per device. Such complete device is used not only for testing the load factor and relative fuel economy in automobile motors, but also for testing other independent parts of automobiles, such as spark plugs, ignition, condensers, voltmeters, ammeters, etc., which were and are nonessential to the use of the said vacuum gauge. One alone of said large number of separate and unrelated parts and items so assembled into single, complete testing devices of said various types and kinds and models is the said vacuum gauge, which itself is not patented, only the use of which as above described being covered by said letters patent purchased and owned by respondent. Said vacuum gauge is only a small and minor part in cost, in relative value, and in functioning of each such complete testing device. None of the remaining large number of said separate and unrelated parts and items so assembled into single complete testing devices is protected by patent or otherwise, but each is an item which can be freely and without any restraint whatever purchased by respondent's said competitors in the ordinary course of trade and commerce in the United States. The complete assembled device is called a motor analyzer and is not itself patented.

Following such purchase of said patent covering the use of said vacuum gauge as above described and nothing else and in 1933, respondent, either directly or through one, National Patent Corporation, which for a consideration insured respondent's said patent rights and acted in respect of the matters and things herein alleged as the agent of respondent, has threatened in the case of three, and has actually commenced against one, of respondent's five competitors above-mentioned suits to recover damages for the alleged infringement of said patent so purchased by respondent, the basis of such suit being that said competitor had embodied and comprised said vacuum gauge in testing devices manufactured by said competitor, when in fact said devices contain many other and different parts and items of construction from those used by respondent in his said complete testing devices. One of the competitors of respondent so threatened with an infringement suit, rejected a proposition of respondent to accept a license agreement with a stipulated minimum price increase of more than 80 percent in the testing devices manufactured by it and, in order to avoid such litigation temporarily ceased to manufacture testing devices. In the suit actually commenced, and in each of the other two threatened suits, the competitor sued by respondent has claimed and claims that, in order to avoid the expense of such litigation, it was compelled to and did involuntarily and under such coercion and compulsion, compromise and settle such suit and negotiate and effect the withdrawal of such threatened suits by entering into an agreement with respondent under the terms of which respondent purported to issue to said competitor a license for the manufacture, use, and sale of automobile motors testing devices embodying and comprising said vacuum gauge claimed by respondent to be covered by its said patent as one of its parts and features, but all on the distinct understanding and condition that said competitor and licensee would not sell testing devices or any one of them at less than the certain stated prices for each type and kind and model of testing devices stipulated and fixed in said agreement, and limiting the license strictly to testing devices sold by said competitor at not less than such minimum prices, on the penalty of an admitted violation of the license and infringement of said patent and termination of the license by the respondent. Each of said license agreements, in addition to containing the aforesaid price-fixing provisions, did not confine itself either to the use of the said vacuum gauge in the manner above described and covered by respondent's said patent or to the vacuum gauge itself, but included the complete testing devices with all of their separate and unrelated parts and items in no way covered by respondent's said patent.

Complaint

Since respondent and its three competitors above mentioned entered into said license agreements the catalog prices of the testing devices of said three competitors have been substantially advanced over the prices quoted by said competitors on the same type and kind and model of testing devices manufactured and distributed by said competitors prior to the making of said license agreements, such increases being approximately 25 percent of the preagreement prices, which themselves carried a profit to said competitors.

Respondent purchased said patent covering the use of said vacuum gauge as above described for the purpose of unlawfully restraining interstate trade and commerce, and combined said vacuum gauge in single, complete testing devices as above stated for the same unlawful purpose, and did all of the acts and things above described among others as integral parts of its said plan and scheme unlawfully to control and restrain interstate commerce in said testing devices.

PAR. 3. By means of said unlawful plan and scheme to control and restrain interstate commerce in said testing devices, which extended far beyond the limits of respondent's rights as owner of the patent on the specified use of said vacuum gauge, respondent has been and is enabled to control and to restrain competition in interstate commerce in said testing devices and particularly to control, to a substantial extent, the prices paid and to be paid for said testing devices by the purchasers thereof and to bring about an enhancement of such prices over those that prevailed prior to said unlawful acts of respondent and that would have prevailed and would continue to prevail except for said unlawful acts of respondent and if there had been a continuation of free and open competition in said testing devices, and by and from such unlawful acts of respondent injury has resulted to the purchasers of such devices and to the public.

The aforesaid unlawful acts of respondent have had the capacity and tendency to cause and have caused the purchasing public to pay a higher price for the testing devices purchased than would have been the price under conditions of free and open competition, and the public receiving services from such devices to pay a higher price for such services than would have been the price had the testing devices been purchased under conditions of free and open competition.

PAR. 4. There were and are, among the competitors of respondent as above stated in paragraph 1, other manufacturers of the same or substantially similar and competing automobile motor-testing devices, who have been coerced and compelled by said unlawful acts of respondent to enter involuntarily into agreements restricting and preventing sales of said testing devices in interstate commerce in free and open competition, or otherwise than at stipulated and fixed minimum prices; and one of said competitors has actually been driven temporarily by respondent's said unlawful acts out of the business of manufacturing said testing devices, thereby interfering with the free flow of interstate commerce in the shipment of testing devices which otherwise would have been manufactured by one of said competitors. Consequently, said unlawful acts of respondent have tended and do tend to restrain, prevent, and suppress the interstate commerce of respondent's said competitors in the testing devices which were and are or would otherwise be manufactured and shipped by said competitors in interstate commerce and have tended and do tend otherwise to prejudice and injure said competitors and the public.

PAR. 5. The above acts and practices of respondent are to the injury and prejudice of the public and of competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on December 31, 1935, issued, and on January 2, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Joseph Weidenhoff, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (respondent having filed no answer), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry Junge, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by C. C. Batz, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (brief on behalf of respondent not having been filed and oral argument not having been requested by counsel for respondent), and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Joseph Weidenhoff, Inc., is an Illinois corporation, having its principal office and manufacturing plant located at 4344 West Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is, and for a number of years has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing electrical devices and automobile motor-testing devices, together with all accessories.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent causes the products which it manufactures to be sold and shipped in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to customers, generally wholesale automotive supply dealers, located in various parts of the United States, who resell said products to members of the purchasing public. The volume of respondent's business in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of these automobile-testing devices amounts annually to approximately $450,000. Respondent is the largest manufacturer and distributor of automobile testing devices in the United States. The principal portion of respondent's business is in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. For the purpose of effectuating sales, respondent utilizes wholesale automotive supply dealers and also employs a number of salesmen. In the conduct of its business, respondent has been, and is, in competition with each and all of five manufacturers as regards the manufacture, sale, distribution, shipment, and servicing of their respective automobile-testing devices.

PAR. 3. On or about December 19, 1932, the respondent purchased from one Edward R. Hewitt, an inventor and engineer of Washington, D. C., a patent (carrying patent No. 1,323,531) issued by the United States Patent Office on December 2, 1919, pertaining to a vacuum gauge used "in combination with an internal combustion engine * * * as an indicator of the load factor and relative fuel economy in the motor," together with all the rights of the owner under said patent. This said patent expired on December 2, 1936.

PAR. 4. Following the purchase of this patent, respondent began to manufacture, and continues to manufacture, certain testing devices consisting of a large number of separate and unrelated parts and items which are assembled into a single complete testing device in various types and models. Respondent has sold these assembled devices in interstate commerce at prices ranging from $175 to $1,000 per device. Such completely assembled device contains not only a vacuum gauge used to measure the suction in the manifold of internal combustion engines, but also devices used in testing other parts of the engine, such as spark plugs, igniters, condensers, and batteries. Such devices consist of coil heater, ammeter, condenser tester, voltmeter, comparative coil tester, time clock, compression gauge, spark gap, etc., each one of these testing devices being separate and unrelated to the vacuum gauge. The completed testing device consists of a steel bench mounted on rollers. The various testing devices and gadgets are attached to the bench. There are also various odds and ends of wires, lights, and other accessories fastened to the bench and in the drawers, but said vacuum gauge is only a small and minor part in cost, in relative value, and in functioning of each such complete testing device. Only the vacuum gauge was patented. None of the remaining large number of said separate and unrelated parts and items so assembled into single complete testing devices is protected by patent, or otherwise, but each is an item which can be freely and without any restraint whatever purchased by respondent's said competitors in the ordinary course of trade and commerce in the United States. The complete assembled device is called a motor analyzer and is not itself patented.

PAR. 5. Respondent had, and still has, several competitors, all of whom likewise manufacture, assemble, and sell in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia similar testing devices consisting of a larger number of separate and unrelated parts and items assembled into a single and complete testing device having different sizes of completed devices and different models.

PAR. 6. After purchasing the aforesaid patent, the respondent directly, or through one National Patent Corporation, which, for a consideration, insured respondent's said patent rights and from time to time acted as the agent of respondent, endeavored to induce respondent's competitors to enter into license agreements whereby, among other things, said competitors were to agree as to the selling price of their respective testing devices and to pay respondent royalties. The inducement was negotiated by threatening infringement suits. As a result of these negotiations an infringement suit was filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Michigan, against the Allen Electric and Equipment Company, of Kalamazoo, Mich., one of respondent's competitors. This suit was later withdrawn. Subsequently a license agreement was entered into between said Allen Electric and Equipment Company and respondent, which contained no mention of selling price.

PAR. 7. Respondent did succeed in inducing the Electric Heat Control Company of Cleveland, Ohio, a competing manufacturer of internal combustion engine testers, of which the vacuum gauge is one of the several testing devices assembled into the completed device, to enter into a license agreement, which set forth prices that were substantially 25 percent higher than said company's previously published prices. The largest testing machine made by said Electric Heat Control Company was sold at a price of $340, and the vacuum gauge used in this device cost less than $1.00 to manufacture. Respondent also entered into a similar license agreement with the Sun Manufacturing Company of Chicago, Ill., another competitor, whereby said company, a partnership, agreed to pay royalties to the respondent to cover the use of a vacuum gauge in connection with its testing apparatus, and agreed to maintain a certain price schedule on its testers in the sale of them to the trade. Among the conditions which were made a part of such license agreements was in each instance one relating to the price or prices at which the licensee's products should be sold. The following provision from respondent's said license agreement with the aforesaid Electric Heat Control Company is typical of these agreements:

The foregoing license is expressly limited to the sale by the licensee of machines, coming within the terms of this license agreement, for a price of not less than thirty dollars ($30) each at retail on the 1st named machine in paragraph (2) one hundred dollars ($100) each at retail on the 2nd named machine in paragraph (2); one hundred and seventy-five dollars ($175) each at retail on the 3rd named machine in paragraph (2) and three hundred dollars ($300) each at retail on the 4th named machine in paragraph (2), and any sale for less than said sum shall be a violation of this license and an infringement of said Letters Patent.

The Stromberg Motor Corporation of Chicago, Ill., also a competitor, refused to enter into any license agreement, and continued to operate its business as a manufacturer and vendor of engine-testing devices containing the vacuum gauge with other apparatus, regardless of respondent's threats of infringement suits.

PAR. 8. Each of said license agreements, in addition to containing price-fixing provisions, except for the license agreement which the Allen Electric and Equipment Company entered into with respondent, did not confine itself either to the use of the said vacuum gauge in the manner above described and covered by respondent's said patent or to the vacuum gauge itself, but included the complete testing devices with all of their separate and unrelated parts and items in no way covered by respondent's said patent.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid license agreements entered into between the respondent and its various competitors were kept in effect for some time, and the licensees sold their respective testing devices at the stipulated prices until on or about January 1, 1936. Said license contracts terminated on December 2, 1936, with the death of the aforesaid patent (patent No. 1,323,531). The record does not indicate that since that time respondent has entered into other or similar agreements with any of the said licensees, or other competitors for the purpose of stipulating the terms and conditions of the sale of automobile-testing devices by such competitors.

PAR. 10. By means of said unlawful plan and scheme to control and restrain interstate commerce in said testing devices, which extended far beyond the limits of respondent's rights as owner of the patent on the specified use of said vacuum gauge, respondent has been enabled to control and to restrain competition in interstate commerce in said testing devices, and particularly to control, to a substantial extent, the prices paid, and to be paid, for said testing devices by the purchasers thereof, and to bring about an enhancement of such prices over those that prevailed prior to said unlawful acts of respondent and that would have continued to prevail, except for said unlawful acts of respondent. By such unlawful acts of respondent injury has resulted to the purchasers of such devices and to the public. Further, said unlawful acts of respondent have caused the purchasing public to pay a higher price for the testing devices purchased by them than would have been the price under conditions of free and open competition.

PAR. 11. There were, and are, among the aforesaid competitors of respondent, other manufacturers of substantially similar and competing automobile motor-testing devices, who have been coerced and compelled by said unlawful acts of respondent to enter involuntarily into agreements restricting and preventing sales of said testing devices in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in free and open competition with each other or otherwise than at stipulated and fixed minimum prices. Said unlawful acts of respondent have tended to restrain, suppress, and unduly hamper and restrict the free flow of said motor-testing devices in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and have tended otherwise to prejudice and injure said competitors and the public generally.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Joseph Weidenhoff, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph Weidenhoff, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale of electrical devices and automobile testing devices, together with accessories thereto, in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Entering into and carrying out any agreement, combination, or understanding between itself and any other manufacturer or distributor of electrical devices and automobile testing devices, through the use of license agreements and contracts, or otherwise, to fix and maintain prices, whether enhanced or otherwise, to be exacted by them or by any of them from the purchasers of electrical devices and automobile testing devices;

2. Coercing, intimidating, and inducing any of its competitors who manufacture and distribute electrical devices and automobile testing devices to raise or change the prices quoted by them to uniform prices fixed by an understanding and agreement between the respondent and any of them.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent shall within 60 days from the date of service upon it of this order file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

- (b) Reported to their said association and its successor institute information as to prices, suggested resale prices, and terms of sale and discounts subject to change without notice, at which they were selling their said various products; and

Where aforesaid association and its successor institute—

PAR. 15. All of said corporate respondents for a long time, to wit, more than 1 year last past, have been and now are engaged in the manufacture and distribution of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies, which the said respective corporate respondents sell to their respective customers located in the various States of the United States, causing said products, when sold, to be transported in interstate commerce from the State of their respective manufacture to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States. Except for the said practices engaged in by said corporate respondents as hereinafter set forth, said corporate respondents would be in free, open, and active competition with each other in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of their respective products.

PAR. 16. Each of said corporate respondents, with the exception of Art Crayon Company, is now and has been since December 1934, a member of said respondent association, Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute, and has been represented at the meetings of said association.

Said corporate respondent, Art Crayon Company, was formerly a member of said respondent association, Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute, and during the time it was a member of said respondent association was represented at the meetings of said association. Said corporate respondent, since its resignation as a member of said respondent association, Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute, has continued to cooperate with said respondent association and with said other corporate respondents in their activities.

PAR. 17. Said corporate respondents, acting in cooperation with each other and through and in cooperation with said respondent association for more than 1 year last past, and particularly since December 1934, have entered into an understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy among themselves and with and through said respondent association to restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in the sale and distribution of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies to customers located throughout the several States of the United States, as aforesaid, by agreeing to fix and maintain uniform prices, terms, and discounts at which said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies are to be sold, and to cooperate with each other in the enforcement and maintenance of said fixed prices, terms, and discounts by exchanging information through said respondent association as to the prices, terms, and discounts at which said corporate respondents have sold and are offering to sell said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies to said customers.

PAR. 18. Said corporate respondents, in furtherance of their aforesaid understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, on December 15, 1934, organized a voluntary trade association known as the Paint and Crayon Industry. Subsequently, to wit, on May 14, 1936, said voluntary trade association was incorporated under the Non-Profit Corporation Statute of the State of New York and its name was changed to Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute. Said respondent association the, aforesaid Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute, is composed of manufacturers of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies, located throughout the several States of the United States, and has as its principal members said corporate respondents herein named, which said corporate respondents manufacture and sell a large majority of the total volume of chalk, wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies used and sold in interstate commerce in the United States. Said respondent association, since its organization, has acted as a clearing house for the exchange of information submitted by said corporate respondents including reports as to the sales of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors and other similar items of school supplies, together with prices, discounts and terms at which said chalk, wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other similar items of school supplies are sold or offered to be sold. Headquarters of said respondent association, since its organization, have been and now are maintained at 386 Fourth Avenue in New York City within the State of New York, and regular meetings of the members of said respondent association have been and are held from time to time, at which meetings said corporate respondents discuss trade and competitive conditions in the chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other similar items of school supplies industry, and agree upon and establish trade policies to be followed and prices to be charged by said corporate respondents in the sale and distribution of their said products and resale prices at which said products are to be sold, and perform the acts and things hereinbefore alleged in paragraph 17.

PAR. 19. The result of the acts and conduct of the said corporate respondents and of the said respondent association, as hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 17 and 18 has been and now is to unduly tend to substantially lessen, restrict, and suppress competition in the interstate sale of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other similar items of school supplies throughout the several States of the United States, particularly in the prices quoted and discounts allowed by said corporate respondents, and to enhance the prices of said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other similar items of school supplies, above the prices which had theretofore prevailed and which would prevail in normal natural and open competition between said corporate respondents, and also to tend to create a monopoly in the said corporate respondents in the manufacture and sale of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other similar items of school supplies in interstate commerce.

PAR. 20. The foregoing alleged acts and practices of the said corporate and association respondents have been and still are to the prejudice of the buying public generally and customers of said corporate respondents in particular, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on November 4, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, American Crayon Company, Binney & Smith Company, Milton Bradley Company, Talens School Products, Inc., Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, Standard Crayon Manufacturing Co., National Crayon Company, New Jersey Crayon Company, Pennart Crayon Co., Creston Crayon Company, Weber Costello Co., American Art Clay Co., Globe Crayon Company, Art Crayon Company, and Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, the attorneys of record for all said respondents tendered and entered into a stipulation as to the facts with the Chief Counsel for this Commission subject to the approval of the Commission, by which it is agreed that the statement of facts therein contained may be taken as the facts in this proceeding, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, and in opposition thereto; and that the Commission may proceed on said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceedings without presentation of argument or the filing of briefs; which said stipulation has been by the Commission approved. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto and the said stipulation and statement of facts, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. All of the respondents above named are now and were at all times hereinafter mentioned corporations duly organized under the laws of the States of Ohio, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Delaware, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Indiana, New York, New York, and New York, respectively.

PAR. 2. All of the respondents are now and for a number of years past have been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies, except that the Standard Crayon Manufacturing Co. at the times herein material manufactured and sold only chalk and wax crayons, and the Weber Costello Co. and American Art Clay Co. manufactured and sold only chalk. Pursuant to such sales and as a part thereof, respondents have regularly made shipment of said products from their respective places of business through and into the District of Columbia and States of the United States other than the States of the point of origin of such shipments. The chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies manufactured and sold by each respondent have been and are similar to and have the same or similar uses and purposes as the chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies of all other respondents; they seek and have sought to sell the same to the same trade and all dealers in and users of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies in the various States and in the District of Columbia are and have been the customers of or the potential customers of each and all of the respondents. Respondents represent and have represented practically the entire source of supply of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies in the United States.

PAR. 3. Prior to the year 1933, these respondents had been offering for sale and selling competitive chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies at prices determined by competition among them and these prices in many instances varied as among said respondents. In the year 1933, the respondents organized their industry under the name of the Paint & Crayon Industry Association. In the years 1934, 1935, and 1936, these respondents held meetings from time to time at various places, at which meetings they discussed and compared prices, terms, and discounts at which they were offering for sale and selling competitive chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies and prices at which they were suggesting that said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies were to be resold or offered for resale. At and by means of said meetings and discussions, respondents came to an agreement or understanding to fix the prices, terms, and discounts at which they would and thereafter to a substantial extent did offer for sale and sell competitive chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies at prices substantially uniform as among the respondents, and fixed and maintained substantially uniform resale price schedules containing prices at which said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies were suggested to be resold. From time to time thereafter, pursuant to such understanding, respondents made substantially uniform changes in said prices and in said resale price schedules.

On or about May 1936, the respondents formed the Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute which is named as one of the respondents herein. Since the formation of the Association hereinbefore referred to and since the formation of the respondent Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute, the respondents have reported to said Association and to said Institute information as to the prices, suggested resale prices, terms of sale, and discounts subject to change without notice at which these respondents had sold and were selling said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies. All of said information has been duly disseminated by said Association and by said Institute to its members; and during all of this period of time, the said Association and the said Institute have acted as a clearing house for the exchange of information submitted by said corporate respondents.

The respondent, Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, resigned from the respondent Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute on June 19, 1936, and at all times material herein was engaged only in the sale of wax crayons manufactured by others and in certain other items of school supplies which it manufactured, to wit, compressed crayons.

Respondent, Art Crayon Company, resigned from the Paint & Crayon Industry Association on June 4, 1935, and has never been a member of respondent, Crayon, Water-Color and Craft Institute. Said respondent did not report in writing to the Paint & Crayon Industry Association subsequent to its resignation therefrom and has not so reported to the Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute. It has at times discussed with the Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute information as to prices, suggested resale prices and terms of sale and discounts at which it has sold and was selling said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies.

Order

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. The result of said meetings and discussions and understandings and the things done pursuant thereto as above stated, has been to cause and to tend to cause respondents to offer for sale and sell competitive chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies at prices substantially uniform among said respondents, to fix and maintain substantially uniform resale price schedules of chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies and to substantially restrict price competition among and between said respondents and to keep prices at an artificial level.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is further ordered, That said respondent association, Crayon, Water-Color & Craft Institute, its officers, agents, and employees do cease and desist from cooperating with said corporate respondents by holding meetings of the members of said respondent association at which said meetings said corporate respondents enter into agreements to fix prices, terms, and discounts at which said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies are sold or offered to be sold by said corporate respondents to their said customers located throughout the several States of the United States in interstate commerce; and from acting as a clearing house for the exchange of information submitted by said corporate respondents as to said prices, terms, and discounts fixed by agreement at which said chalk and wax crayons, water colors, tempera colors, and other items of school supplies are offered to be sold, or at which they are to be resold or offered for resale in interstate commerce as aforesaid in the enforcement and maintenance of said agreements; and from doing any acts or taking any action in the enforcement and maintenance of said agreements.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Banner Manufacturing Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Banner Manufacturing Company, is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York with its principal place of business at 841 East Forty-third Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PAR. 2. The respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling certain automobile accessories and other products used in the operation and upkeep of automobiles. The respondent causes these products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business to purchasers thereof located in various States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia, and maintains a constant course of trade in said products so distributed and sold by it in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent has been, and is, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, and individuals and partnerships engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale of similar products and other products intended and designed for similar use in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Some of the products marketed by respondent are anti-freeze preparations for use in automobile radiators, designated as Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, Globe, and Banner Radiator Glycerine.

PAR. 4. In the operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said antifreeze products on the part of members of the purchasing public respondent has made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, circulars, and show-window displays represented to be descriptive of the various products herein named. The advertising literature herein referred to is distributed to members of the purchasing public through the medium of automobile service stations, hardware stores, automobile accessory stores, and through the United States Mails direct to prospective purchasers and in other ways.

With reference to the product designated as Banner Radiator Glycerine, the following representation is made in the advertising and branding of the product:

THE SAFE ANTI-FREEZE

* * * * *

With reference to the Banner Radiator Glycerine, and other anti-freeze preparations, namely, Super Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, and Globe, the following representations are made in the advertising and branding of the product:

FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE USER against inferior compounds we certify that the product on which our name appears is made in strict conformity of standard under the strict supervision of our laboratories

COMPOUNDED FOR AUTOMOBILE RADIATORS

BANNER MANUFACTURING COMPANY

In said statements as set for above, together with other similar statements not herein set out, and in its general advertising respondent represents, and as the result of said representations the public is led to believe; that the above named antifreeze products are safe and harmless antifreeze solutions for general use both from the standpoint of giving protection against freezing or damage due to freezing and from the standpoint of causing corrosion in the cooling system in which they are continually used and causing corrosion on spark plugs, ignition wires, and other metal parts of the automobile with which they might come in contact when used as directed; that its products generally are made under strict laboratory supervision; and that the respondent manufactures its antifreeze products at its premises.

In truth and in fact the said Banner Radiator Glycerine and other antifreeze preparations, namely, Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, Globe, and Banner are not safe antifreeze preparations for general use from the standpoint of corrosion, as they will cause corrosion in the cooling system in which they are continually used, which will, in many instances, lessen the effectiveness of the cooling system and cause the engine to overheat; and they will cause corrosion on spark plugs, ignition wires, and other metal parts of the automobile with which such products come in contact, which will, in many instances, lessen the effectiveness of the ignition system by causing "shorts" therein. The respondent does not manufacture or supervise the manufacturing or make-up of these products, and the respondent does not operate any laboratory for the purpose of manufacturing, compounding, and testing these products along scientific lines.

PAR. 5. There are among the respondent's competitors in commerce as herein set out those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective businesses, and who do not in any way represent to the purchasing public that their products are generally safe for use as antifreeze products for automobile radiators when they are not, and do not make use of the other misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations as used by the respondent in its offering for sale and selling its various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 7. The methods, acts, and practices of respondent herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on August 28, 1937, issued, and on September 2, 1937, served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Banner Manufacturing Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said amended complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the amended complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint and the substitute answer, no briefs having been filed or oral argument made, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

PAR. 2. The respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the business of distributing and selling certain automobile accessories and other products used in the operation and upkeep of automobiles. PAR. 3. Some of the products marketed by respondent are antifreeze preparations for use in automobile radiators, designated as Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, Globe, and Banner Radiator Glycerine.

Chemical examination of the products known as Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, and Globe showed the following results:

Nature of sample.....	clear, violet-colored, mobile liquid
Reaction to litmus.....	neutral
Specific gravity at 15.5° C.....	0.920
Methanol (Methyl Alcohol).....	present
Residue at 105° C.....	0.76%
Calcium chloride (CaCl ₂ , anhydrous).....	0.58%
Acetone.....	not detected
Borax.....	not detected

Probable Composition:

Methanol.....	49% by weight
Water.....	50.4% by weight
Calcium chloride, anhydrous.....	0.6% by weight
Coloring matter.....	present

This solution has a freezing point below -40° F. so it will give protection at all temperatures normally encountered. Since the solution is approximately half water, larger quantities of this material will be required for protection at temperatures down to -40° F. than is the case with denatured alcohol or with the usual grades of "antifreeze methanol."

Chemical analysis of the Banner Radiator Glycerine shows the following:

Nature of sample.....	clear, pale yellow, viscous liquid
Reaction to litmus.....	neutral
Specific gravity at 20° C.....	1.240
Glycerine.....	present
Calcium chloride (CaCl ₂ , anhydrous).....	12.9%
Sugar.....	not detected
Borax.....	not detected
Sodium nitrite (NaNO ₂).....	not detected

Probable Composition:

Glycerine.....	47% by weight
Water.....	40% by weight
Calcium chloride, anhydrous.....	13% by weight

This solution (undiluted) starts to freeze at -36° F. When diluted with an equal volume of water, it starts to freeze at $+8^{\circ}$ F. and, when diluted with one third its volume of water, it starts to freeze at -11° F. These figures show that the proportions recommended on the can for use at various temperatures will give protection against freezing.

The presence of calcium chloride in both these solutions is likely to give rise to electrolytic corrosion. The calcium chloride concentration in the cooling system will gradually increase due to successive additions of the antifreeze solution made necessary by evaporation of the methanol. With calcium chloride in the cooling system, care must be taken to see that none of the solution comes in contact with spark plugs or ignition wires. The salt deposited when the water evaporates is very difficult to remove and when it cools it absorbs water and becomes a good electrical conductor, causing short circuits which are not easy to locate as they disappear when the engine is heated up.

PAR. 4. In the operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said antifreeze products on the part of members of the purchasing public respondent has made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, circulars, and show-window displays represented to be descriptive of the various products herein named. The advertising literature herein referred to is distributed to members of the purchasing public through the medium of automobile service stations, hardware stores, automobile accessory stores, and through the United States Mails direct to prospective purchasers and in other ways.

With reference to the product designated as Banner Radiator Glycerine, the following representation is made in the advertising and branding of the product:

* * * * *

With reference to the Banner Radiator Glycerine, and other antifreeze preparations, namely: Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, and Globe, the following representations are made in the advertising and branding of the product:

FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE USER against inferior compounds we certify that the product on which our name appears is made in strict conformity of standard under the strict supervision of our laboratories

COMPOUNDED FOR AUTOMOBILE RADIATORS
BANNER MANUFACTURING COMPANY

In said statements as set forth above, together with other similar statements not herein set out, and in its general advertising respondent represents, and as the result of said representations the public is led to believe; that the above-named antifreeze products are safe and harmless antifreeze solutions for general use both from the standpoint of giving protection against freezing or damage due to freezing and from the standpoint of not causing corrosion in the cooling system in which they are continually used and not causing corrosion on spark plugs, ignition wires, and other metal parts of the automobile with which they might come in contact when used as directed; that its products generally are made under strict laboratory supervision; and that the respondent manufactures its antifreeze products.

In truth and in fact the said Banner Radiator Glycerine and other antifreeze preparations, namely, Super-Artic, Gold Seal, Colonial, Globe, and Banner are not safe antifreeze preparations for general use from the standpoint of corrosion, as they will cause corrosion in the cooling system in which they are continually used, which will, in many instances, lessen the effectiveness of the cooling system and cause the engine to overheat. Said preparations will cause corrosion on spark plugs, ignition wires, and other metal parts of the automobile with which they come in contact, which will, in many instances, lessen the effectiveness of the ignition system by causing "shorts" therein. The respondent does not manufacture or supervise the manufacturing or make-up of these products, and the respondent does not operate any laboratory for the purpose of manufacturing, compounding, and testing these products along scientific lines.

PAR. 5. There are among the respondent's competitors in commerce as herein set out those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective businesses, and who do not in any way represent to the purchasing public that their products are generally safe from the standpoint of corrosion for use as antifreeze products for automobile radiators when they are not, and do not make use of the other misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations as used by the respondent in its offering for sale and selling its various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's various products as a result of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs engendered as aforesaid.

Order

26 F. T. C.

As a result thereof trade in said commerce is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Banner Manufacturing Company, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission and the answer thereto filed herein on December 28, 1937, by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the amended complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Banner Manufacturing Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of antifreeze preparations for use in automobile radiators in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparations are safe and harmless solutions for general use in automobile radiators; provided, however, respondent is not prohibited from representing that said products, as now composed, when used under the suggested directions of respondent as to proper quantities thereof for designated temperatures, are effective as antifreeze solutions.

2. Representing, through the use of the word "manufacturing" or any other word or term of similar import and meaning in its corporate name, or in any other manner, or through any means or device, that it is the manufacturer of said antifreeze preparations or that said preparations are made in its laboratories under its strict supervision unless and until it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a factory or manufacturing plant wherein such preparations are made by it under such supervision.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3018. Complaint, Feb. 25, 1937¹—Decision, Feb. 3, 1938*

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of hosiery, lingerie, men's shirts, tablecloths and napkins, and various other articles and items—

Furnished and distributed to members of the general public in practically all States and in the District of Columbia push cards, order blanks, and advertisements depicting merchandise thus being offered, and instructions, suggestions, and circulars describing his said plan of selling such merchandise, by which chance purchaser paid for chance varying amount, or nothing, dependent upon number disclosed within various disks of aforesaid cards, and received one or two pairs of women's hosiery (or three or six pairs of men's, or other merchandise thus being offered and sold, as the case might be), or nothing, depending upon success or failure in selecting feminine names corresponding to those concealed under card's red and blue seals, respectively, and he compensated by similar merchandise operator or representative, and thereby placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of his said products, with knowledge and intent that said cards had been, were, and would be used in sale and distribution thereof to public by lot or chance, contrary to public policy, and in competition with many who are opposed to use of such cards in sale and distribution of their merchandise and refrain from furnishing same;

With result that sale of similar or like merchandise by competitors was injuriously affected, and trade was diverted from them to him by reason of said furnishing of such cards or like devices, and there was a restraint upon and detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition; to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors:

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, The Federal Trade Commission did heretofore, to wit, on December 21, 1936, issue its complaint herein charging and alleging that respondent had been guilty of unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in an Act of Congress,

approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes"; and

Whereas, This Commission having reason to believe that respondent herein has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint as aforesaid, and it appearing to said Commission that a further proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest;

Now, therefore, Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of the act aforesaid, the Federal Trade Commission charges that Henry R. Shapiro, individually, and trading as Monarch Fashion Company, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the name and style of Monarch Fashion Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 1414 South Wabash Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. He is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, ladies' lingerie, men's shirts, tablecloths, napkins, bedspreads, pillows, blankets and comforters, silverware, and pen and pencil sets, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes, and has caused said products when sold to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described above, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his products in interstate commerce, has adopted and pursued and still adopts and pursues the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public, through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of his merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards. In order to obtain addresses of "prospects," respondent addresses a letter to a woman employee of some firm or organization offering her a pair of ladies' silk hosiery free on condition that she send to respondent the names and addresses of ten other women in different offices. If the person addressed complies, the pair of hosiery promised of the size and color indicated is sent to her by respondent, and to each of the other "prospects" respondent sends said sales literature, including a paper push card with printed instructions for its operation.

Respondent's push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push cards also have a large red partially perforated disk and a large blue partially perforated disk, and concealed within each of these two disks is one of the names appearing elsewhere on said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

The other push cards bear similar legends but vary in detail. Such variations cover the merchandise to be distributed, the price to be paid, and the number of pushes which are free. The said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card.

Sales of merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. Each of said prizes or premiums is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the legends contained on said push cards. The fact as to whether a customer receives specified merchandise free or pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 15 cents, or in other cases from 1 cent to 20 cents, and in still other cases from 1 cent to 25 cents, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid or receives certain specified merchandise, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes specified merchandise to his representatives making sales by means of said push cards. Respondent also furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using his said push cards.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push cards, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

The sale of respondent's said merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise contrary to the established public policy of the United States and contrary to criminal statutes of many of the States of the United States. By reason of said facts many competitors of respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many purchasers and ultimate consumers of respondent's merchandise are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method as above described and are thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make or sell merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert trade and custom to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of respondent's merchandise are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and trade is thereby diverted to respondent from his said competitors.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said amended and supplemental complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said amended and supplemental complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Morris Blank and John A. Nash, attorneys for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended and supplemental complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (counsel for the respondent having failed to file any brief and having indicated their desire not to orally argue the matter); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Henry R. Shapiro, is an individual trading under the name and style, Monarch Fashion Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 1414 South Wabash Avenue in the city of Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, ladies' lingerie, men's shirts, table cloths, table napkins, bedspreads, pillows, blankets, comforters, silverware, pen and pencil sets, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. He causes such merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all of the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business, respondent is, and has been, engaged in active competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 above, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his merchandise, has adopted and pursued, and still continues, the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to members of the general public in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through the United States mail certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, advertisements containing illustrations of the merchandise which he is offering for sale, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling such merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards.

All of the said cards used by respondent involve the same principle or sales plan or method but vary to some extent in detail. One of the said push cards bears 60 feminine names with ruled columns for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 60 small round partially perforated disks marked "PUSH," above each of which is printed one of the feminine names heretofore referred to. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has one large red seal and one large blue seal, concealed within each of which is one of the feminine names above referred to. The numbers concealed within each of the partially perforated disks cannot be ascertained until a push or selection has been made and the names concealed within the large red and blue seals cannot be ascertained until the seals have been removed. The push card bears printed legends or instructions, among others, as follows:

Sales of hosiery by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum from 1 cent to 15 cents for one or two pair of ladies' hosiery, or three or six pair of men's hosiery, or receives the same free of charge, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

In addition to the three pair of ladies' hosiery or nine pair of men's hosiery distributed to purchasers from said push card, the respondent furnishes two pair of ladies' hosiery or six pair of men's hosiery and generally an additional item of merchandise to his representative making sales by means of said push card. Respondent also furnished his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of the said printed instructions bears the following legends, to wit:

Over each girl's name there is a concealed number. This number represents the amount each person pushing out the number is to pay.

The concealed numbers under the small seals range from Numbers 1 to 60 inclusive, but the customer pays only 1¢ to 15¢ per drawing, according to the number drawn, no higher. Any number over 15 pays only 15¢.

Be sure and write name of persons pushing out numbers on the line opposite the number they have selected.

Persons pushing out number 5-15-20-25-

Persons pushing out number 5-15-20-25-30-35-38-40-45-48-50-55-58-60 are not to pay anything, as these numbers are FREE, but they have equal chance with the other numbers for winning the name shown under the large RED and BLUE SEALS.

After all the numbers have been pushed and collections made, the large RED and BLUE SEALS are pushed out, and the person holding the name corresponding to the one shown on the large RED SEAL is awarded FREE, TWO pairs of ladies' Silk Hose. Also ONE pair of Ladies' Silk Hose is awarded to the person pushing out the name corresponding to the one shown under the BLUE SEAL.

The person selling the card receives ABSOLUTELY FREE, their choice of TWO pairs of Ladies' Silk Hose for their efforts put forth in selling the card.

When payment is received for all the numbers sold on the card, the amount collected will be $5.95, for which Cashier's Check or Money Order may be purchased and remitted with the order, or we will ship C. O. D.

We will then ship any FIVE pairs of Ladies' Hose of which TWO may be given to the holder of the lucky name shown under the large RED SEAL and one pair of Ladies' Silk Hose to the holder of the lucky name shown under the BLUE seal, and the other TWO given to the party that disposes of the card for their efforts. NOTE—If Men's Hose are ordered, we will send 3 pairs of Men's Silk Hose instead of Each Pair of Ladies'.

As stated above, the other push cards which respondent furnishes are identical in principle but vary in detail. Some of the said push cards are furnished by the respondent and used by the public in purchasing and distributing the other merchandise sold and distributed by respondent and heretofore referred to. The members of the public to whom respondent furnishes his push cards and other literature, use the same in the manner suggested by respondent, thereby distributing respondent's merchandise to others by lot or chance and procuring respondent's merchandise for themselves. The sale and distribution of respondents' merchandise through the use of or by means of the said push cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondent in furnishing said push cards puts in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance or gift enterprises in the distribution of his merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in furnishing said push cards, has knowledge that the same are, have been, and will be used in distributing his merchandise, and furnishes said push cards so that his merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondent, who do not furnish push cards similar to those furnished by respondent, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondent who are opposed to use of push cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. Competitors of respondent were called as witnesses and testified in this proceeding, and the Commission finds that the sale of merchandise by means of said push cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors, and that trade is diverted to respondent from his said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said push cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondent, in the sale and distribution of his merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from his said competitors and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 5. As stated previously in these findings, the respondent sells his merchandise in practically all of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, the respondent having testified that his customers are located pretty generally throughout the United States. While the annual volume of respondent's business was not shown exactly, the respondent testified and the Commission finds, that for the period beginning January 1, 1936, and ending November 30, 1936, the respondent distributed approximately 207,000 push cards. The Commission further finds that his sales of merchandise are, and have been, substantial.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise as described above, by means of lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Henry R. Shapiro, individually and trading as Monarch Fashion Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein on behalf of counsel for the Commission (brief of respondent and oral argument having been waived), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Henry R. Shapiro, individually and trading as Monarch Fashion Company, his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of hosiery, ladies' lingerie, men's shirts, tablecloths, table napkins, bedspreads, pillows, blankets, comforters, silverware, pen and pencil sets, and other merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or other similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise;

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to members of the public push cards or other similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of merchandise by the use of push cards or other similar devices, or in any manner selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise free of charge or at varying prices depending upon lot or chance.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that University Forum, Inc. and The National Association of Delta Theta Chi (corporations), and P. Guillot, University Forum, Inc., and The National Association of Delta Theta Chi, and is now and has been at all times herein mentioned doing business at 1811 Prairie Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and at the Allerton Hotel in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and at 354 O'Farrell Street in the city of San Francisco, State of California. Said respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of selling "University Forum" and "Effective Speech" series of books to individuals and organizations in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 5. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said books "University Forum Series" and "Effective Speech Series" to be transported from their principal offices and places of business in the State of Illinois and in the State of California, to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade in said books so sold and distributed by the respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now and have been in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing encyclopedias, treatises, home-study, and correspondence school courses adapted to and used for the self-advancement of adult education in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as detailed in paragraphs 1 and 6 hereof, have made oral and printed representations to their customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States regarding the products offered for sale by them. These representations made and circulated purport to be descriptive of the commodities offered for sale and sold by respondents, as follows:

The respondents herein, and their agents, are engaged in the offering for sale and in the selling of the above described "University Forum" and "Effective Speech" series of books. The "University Forum" series of books is purported to be a 20-volume set of books adapted for the advancement of adult education. The "Effective Speech" series of books is a 12-volume set of books purported to be adapted for self advancement in effective speech making. The said respondents merchandise the above referred to and described series of books in the following manner:

Respondents, or their agents and representatives, establish contacts in a city where it is their intention to establish an alleged chapter of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi. The said respondents, directly and through their agents or representatives, represent to the prospective members of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi that it is a legitimate professional or business woman's sorority; that while the prime purpose of the sorority is social, yet it has certain cultural aspects. In connection with the establishment of an alleged local chapter of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi, prospective members are informed that to further the cultural aspect of the sorority hereinbefore referred to, the local chapter will be given two sets of the "University Forum" series and two sets of the "Effective Speech" series. One set each are to remain at the local chapter rooms or headquarters for the use of the members of the sorority, the other or second set are to be placed in the possession of the educational director of the local chapter.

The National Association of Delta Theta Chi is only a sham and an outlet for the publications described as "University Forum" and "Effective Speech" series of books. The National Association of Delta Theta Chi is not a sorority in any sense of the word whatsoever or within the meaning of the term, "sorority," as it is generally understood.

Further, the representations made by respondents that members of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi will receive supervised instruction under a college or university professor are untrue. No member of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi has ever received in any form whatsoever instructions from a college or university professor because of their membership in said sorority.

PAR. 8. By reason of the foregoing acts, exaggerations and misrepresentations, statements, and inducements as herein set forth, members and prospective members of The National Association of Delta Theta Chi have been led into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are joining a legitimate sorority, a sorority within the general meaning of the term "sorority."

Further, as a result of the aforesaid acts, exaggerations and misrepresentations, statements, and inducements, the respondents have sold and are now selling memberships in The National Association of Delta Theta Chi, and have sold and are now selling the "University Forum" and "Effective Speech" series of books to various members and prospective members of the consuming public in the United States who have a right to and do rely on the acts, statements, representations, and inducements of the respondents, and who, as a result of the acts, statements, representations, and inducements, have joined and are joining the purported sorority and purchase the above referred to series of books.

PAR. 9. As a result of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations on the part of the respondents, trade has been unfairly diverted from legitimate competitors engaged in the sale of encyclopedias, treatises, home-study, and correspondence school courses. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 10. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Each and all of the false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made by respondent, as hereinabove set forth, in its advertising in newspapers, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, in offering for sale and selling its products, had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the advertisements and misrepresentations of respondent, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchase a substantial volume of respondent's products. As a result, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the preparation and selling of hair preparations and cosmetics, who truthfully advertise their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on October 25, 1937, issued and, on October 26, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Royal Lotus Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 24, 1938, the respondent filed a substitute answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and stated that it waived hearing on the charges set forth in the complaint and that, without further evidence or intervening procedure, the Commission might issue and serve upon it findings as to the facts and conclusion, and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Royal Lotus Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 13 Ackerman Avenue, Ramsey, N. J. Respondent is now, and has been for some time, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a hair preparation designated "Royal Lotus," and a line of cosmetics designated "Creme Royale" and "Creme Helies."

PAR. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in said products manufactured, distributed, and sold by it between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling hair preparations and cosmetics and kindred preparations for treatment of the hair and skin in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase the preparation "Royal Lotus," respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers of general circulation throughout the United States, and has printed and circulated throughout the various States to customers and prospective customers advertising folders and literature. Among others of similar import, the following statements are made in said advertisements concerning the efficacy of the preparation "Royal Lotus," in treating the hair and scalp:

GROW HEALTHY, LUXURIANT, BEWITCHING HAIR

Father Lepetitjean's marvelous French discoveries now yours.

This astonishing Regenerateur restores true, natural color, beautifies, preserves and grows hair—prevents hair diseases—overcomes falling hair, dandruff, itching scalp—remedies and prevents brittleness of permanents without affecting wave. Royal Lotus is absolutely harmless—truly a miracle of rare herbs. Not a dye.

Royal Lotus is in no sense a hair dye and leaves no stains on scalp or linen.

It is an unadulterated, pure hygienic product—a positive corrective for dandruff, scurf and itching, and an unfailing restorative of the natural color to the hair. It also strengthens the scalp and stops falling hair, and generally cures alopecia (baldness).

Not only rejuvenates the color of the hair, but also has an added and almost miraculous bonus—it protects and helps to grow hair.

In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents, through statements and representations herein set out and through statements of similar import and effect, that its product designated “Royal Lotus”: (1) Will restore faded, streaked, or gray hair to its natural color or will reproduce or bring back the natural color of such hair of whatever type, shade or color; (2) is not a dye and does not impart an artificial color to the hair; (3) stops or overcomes falling hair and is a positive corrective for dandruff and itching scalp, and generally cures alopecia; (4) is absolutely harmless; and (5) preserves and grows hair and prevents all hair diseases, and corrects “dry hair.”

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the efficacy of its product designated “Royal Lotus” are misleading. In truth and in fact, said “Royal Lotus” will not restore faded, streaked, or gray hair to its natural color, and will not reproduce or bring back the natural color of hair of whatever type, shade, or color. Said preparation is a dye and imparts an artificial color to the hair. Royal Lotus does not stop or overcome falling hair and is not a positive corrective for dandruff and itching scalp and does not cure alopecia. Said preparation is not absolutely harmless and does not preserve and grow hair and prevent all hair diseases. Royal Lotus does not correct “dry hair.”

PAR. 6. Respondent manufactures and sells a line of cosmetics designated “Creme Royale” and “Creme Helies,” and in order to induce individuals to purchase said cosmetics, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers of general circulation throughout the United States, and has printed and circulated throughout the various States to customers and prospective customers advertising folders and literature. Among others of similar import, the following statements are made in said advertisements concerning the benefits to be obtained from using said preparations “Creme Royale” and “Creme Helies”:

CREME HELIES clears and rejuvenates the skin. Removes wrinkles, transforms the complexion. Keeps skin fresh, soft and velvety.

Creme Helies * * * keeps the skin free from those impurities which, after all, usually cause poor complexions.

Fine lines, wrinkles, sunburn, enlarged pores, tender, irritated skin can all be guarded against by the use of Creme Helies.

Creme Royale * * * because of its very nature * * * penetrates the outer layers of the skin and reaches within.

* * * it is behind the skin that Creme Royale does its best work.

Fine lines, wrinkles, sunburn, the harmful effects of wind and sun, dust and chemicals in the air, enlarged pores, blackheads, tender, irritated skin—all of these can be largely negated by the protective qualities of Creme Royale.

Creme Royale * * * penetrates the outer portions, soothing and softening them and * * * aids the growing tissues and encourages the living cells.

In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents through statements and representations herein set out and through statements of similar import and effect that its cosmetics designated "Creme Royale" and "Creme Helies": (1) Renovate and tone the skin; (2) penetrate to the lower fleshy layers of the skin; (3) benefit the skin tremendously and assist nature to counteract the causes of blemished skin; (4) prevent lines and wrinkles; (5) keep the skin free from impurities; and (6) protect the skin against enlarged pores, blackheads and sunburn.

PAR. 7. The representations made by respondent with respect to the beneficial value of its preparations "Creme Royale" and "Creme Helies," are misleading.

In truth and in fact, said preparations do not renovate the skin, nor do they penetrate to the lower fleshy layers of the skin. Creme Royale and Creme Helies do not benefit the skin and assist nature to counteract the causes of blemished skin. Said cosmetics do not prevent lines and wrinkles and do not keep the skin free from impurities. They do not protect the skin against enlarged pores, blackheads, and sunburn.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent as hereinabove set forth, in using said false representations in its advertising in newspapers, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, in offering for sale and selling its products, as above set forth, had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the advertisements and misrepresentations of respondent, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchase a substantial volume of respondent's products. As a result, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the preparation and selling of hair preparations and cosmetics, who truthfully advertise their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Royal Lotus Corporation, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer filed herein on January 24, 1938, by respondent admitting all of the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Royal Lotus Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cosmetic and toilet preparations now designated as "Royal Lotus," "Creme Royale," and "Creme Helies," or any other products of substantially the same ingredients sold under those names, or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That the preparation now designated as "Royal Lotus" (a) is not a dye and does not impart an artificial color to the hair, and that it will restore, reproduce, or bring back the natural color of hair of any type, shade, or color which has become faded, streaked, or gray; (b) is harmless and prevents all hair diseases, stops or overcomes falling hair, and is a corrective or cure for dandruff, itching scalp, "dry hair," and alopecia, and preserves and grows hair.

2. That the preparations now designated as "Creme Royale" or "Creme Helies" will penetrate the outer epidermis of the skin so as to reach and benefit the lower fleshy layers of the skin, or so as to have any beneficial value in renovating the skin, counteracting, or overcoming blemishes, lines, wrinkles, blackheads, sunburn, enlarged pores, and impurities; and from making any other representations of similar tenor or import.

It is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall, within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2294. Complaint, Feb. 7, 1935—Decision, Feb. 9, 1938*

Where three partners engaged in sale and distribution of radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise to purchasers in practically all the States and in the District of Columbia, in soliciting sale thereof—

Furnished and sent, in response to its advertisements for agents and representatives in periodicals of general circulation, sample pull cards, order blanks, descriptive literature, and advertisements depicting merchandise thus being offered, and circulars describing their said plan of selling such merchandise and of allotting same as prizes to operators of such cards, under plan by which chance purchaser paid for chance varying amount, or nothing, dependent upon number disclosed under various tabs of aforesaid cards, and received radio, or nothing, dependent upon success or failure in selecting feminine name corresponding to that concealed under card's seal depicting such instrument, and thereby placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in distribution of their products, with knowledge and intent that said cards had been, were, and would be used in sale and distribution of their said merchandise to public by lot or chance, contrary to public policy, and in competition with many who were opposed to use of such cards in sale and distribution of their products and refrained from furnishing same;

With result that sale of similar and like merchandise by such competitors was thereby injuriously affected, and trade was diverted from them to said partners by reason of said furnishing of such cards or like devices, and there was a restraint upon and detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition, and with tendency and capacity unfairly to divert such trade, as aforesaid; to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors:

COMPLAINT

ners trading under the name and style of DeLuxe Manufacturing Company, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are individuals doing business as a co-partnership under the name and style of DeLuxe Manufacturing Company, with their principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in selling radio-receiving instruments to wholesale and retail dealers located in various States of the United States. They cause said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business, and there is now and has been for more than 1 year a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such merchandise between and among different States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are in competition with other partnerships, individuals, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving instruments in commerce between and among various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof the respondents have been and are now soliciting the sale of and selling said radio receiving instruments by means of advertisements inserted in periodical publications having an interstate circulation. These advertisements solicit salesmen for the sale of said radio receiving instruments. Among such advertisements is one inserted in the Specialty Salesman Magazine for the month of January 1935, reading in part as follows:

Make up to $150 weekly giving away free automobile radios and home sets. * * * With our new unique "punch sales card plan," the only one of its kind in the country, you actually give away free fine automobile radios and beautiful ultra-modern home sets.

In another advertisement inserted in the same magazine in the June 1934, issue appears, among others, the following representation:

Who else wants up to $150 weekly giving away free radios? Automobile and home set radios actually given away absolutely free with a most sensational unique punch sales card plan.

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

Said advertisements are false, misleading, and deceptive and have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive prospective salesmen. In truth and in fact the respondents do not give away radio-receiving instruments free but receive the full wholesale value thereof for all instruments distributed by them, and their agents do not regularly make $150 weekly. Such earnings are the exception and are unusual and are not the usual result to be expected in distributing the respondents' merchandise. The said plan and method of sale is not sensational nor unique and is not new.

PAR. 3. The use by respondents of the above-quoted advertisements and advertisements of like nature and to the same effect are unfair to manufacturers and distributors manufacturing and distributing radio-receiving instruments who do not use the same or similar false and misleading representations in soliciting representatives to sell their product.

By reason of the said false and misleading advertisements, agents are thus induced and persuaded into representing the respondents and in soliciting the sale of and selling respondents' products, all to the injury of the public and respondents' competitors.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof the respondents have been and are now soliciting the sale of and selling and transporting in commerce to retail dealers in various States of the United States radio-receiving instruments and in the sale and distribution of said radio-receiving instruments respondents have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and said radio-receiving instruments are distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which by retail dealers in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondents' said radio-receiving instruments and the method or plan suggested by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards consist of a booklet containing 110 girls' names and concealed under each name is a number; also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the 110 names. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same, disclosing the number thereunder. Numbers from 1 to 35 pay in cents the amount of such number. Persons selecting numbers over 35 pay 35 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push card bears a legend informing the prospective purchaser that the persons selecting a few of the numbers will receive the same free. For illustration:

TEN FREE NUMBERS. NUMBERS 2—3—4—5—6—7—8—9—10—11
ARE FREE

When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed and the person selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives a radio-receiving instrument without further charge and the salesman, agent, representative, or retail dealer soliciting purchasers of chances as above described also receives a radio-receiving instrument without further charge or additional services. The numbers under the names are concealed from the prospective purchasers and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names, or whether the same will be obtained free of charge, until the selection has been made and the name removed. Also, the name under the master seal is concealed from the prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected, and the customers or purchasers do not know what they will receive for their money, if anything, until after the master seal has been removed. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay.

The purchasing public are thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pushes from said card in the hope that they may select the prize-winning name and thus obtain the radio-receiving instrument free of charge or for a sum of money not in excess of 35 cents. Radio-receiving instruments are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents occasionally sell and distribute other articles of merchandise by the method above described but the sale and distribution of radio-receiving instruments constitute the major portion of their business.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid agents, representatives, salesmen, and retail dealers of the respondents expose said radio-receiving instruments in connection with the aforesaid push cards and sell pushes to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid plan whereby the said radio-receiving instruments are distributed to the purchasers of pushes from the said cards wholly by lot or chance. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the distribution of its radio-receiving instruments, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing the consuming public to purchase pushes from said cards in an effort to procure respondents' radio-receiving instruments in preference to purchasing the same from respondents' competitors.

PAR. 6. The sale and distribution of radio-receiving instruments to the purchasing public as above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure such articles of merchandise in the manner alleged. Such game of chance and the sale of such chance to procure such articles of merchandise in the manner alleged are contrary to the established public policy of the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia and of the Government of the United States, and in many of the States of the United States are contrary to local criminal statutes.

By reason of said facts, many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute such merchandise in competition with the respondents as above alleged are unwilling to furnish push cards or to offer for sale or sell their merchandise in connection with such lotteries or gaming devices, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 7. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of such merchandise are attracted by respondents' said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase such merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale by competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. Many dealers in such merchandise are induced to purchase the same so offered for sale and sold by respondent in preference to all other similar merchandise because said ultimate consumers thereof give preference to respondents' merchandise on account of the game of chance so involved in the sale thereof.

Respondents' sales plan as mentioned above tends to and does induce many of the consuming public to purchase respondents' merchandise in preference to the merchandise of respondents' competitors because of the chance of obtaining one of said radio-receiving instruments free of charge or at a price not exceeding 35 cents rather than at the nominal retail price of the same, which is many times greater than 35 cents.

PAR. 8. The use of said method by respondents has a tendency and capacity unfairly and because of said game of chance alone to divert to respondents trade and custom from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to lessen competition in said trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondents and such other distributors as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt or use said method or equivalent methods that are contrary to public policy and to criminal statutes as above alleged. Many of said competitors of respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win a radio-receiving instrument by chance, because such methods are contrary to public policy or to the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States or because they are of the opinion that such methods are detrimental to the merchandising business or are detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the purchasers of said merchandise or because of any or all of such reasons.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid methods, acts, and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on February 7, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Max Schreiber, Philip W. Simons, and William Klompus, individually and as copartners, trading under the name and style of De Luxe Manufacturing Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondents, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the

Findings

26 F. T. C.

Commission, having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Max Schreiber, Philip W. Simons, and William Klompus, are individuals, and at the time of the issuance of said complaint and for some time subsequent thereto were copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of De Luxe Manufacturing Company, with their principal office and place of business located at 173 West Madison Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. At the time of the taking of testimony in this matter, April 27, 1937, the partnership was composed of Max Schreiber, and William Klompus, the said respondent Philip W. Simons having withdrawn from said partnership approximately 2 months prior to said hearing. The respondents Max Schreiber and William Klompus are now, and all of the said respondents for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause, or have caused, such merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in practically all of the other States of the United States, as well as in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now a course of trade in commerce by said respondents Max Schreiber and William Klompus, and has been for some time past a course of trade in commerce by all of said respondents in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on said business, respondents are, or have been, engaged in active competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations engaged in the manufacture of similar or like articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 above, respondents in soliciting the sale of and selling their merchandise have adopted and pursued, and still continue, the following methods and practices:

Respondents have caused to be inserted in magazines and periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States various advertisements soliciting agents, representatives, or salesmen for their merchandise, and upon receipt of inquiries from members of the public or prospective agents, representatives, or salesmen, send to such persons sample pull cards, order blanks, descriptive literature, and advertisements containing illustrations of the merchandise which they are offering for sale, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling such merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said pull cards.

All of the pull cards used by respondents involve, or have involved, the same principle or sales plan or method but vary to some extent in detail. One of the said pullcards bears 110 feminine names with ruled columns for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said pull card has 110 small partially separated tabs on each of which is printed one of the feminine names heretofore referred to. Concealed under each tab is a number which is disclosed when the tab is pulled or separated from the card. At the top of said pull card there is a partially perforated seal, concealed under which is one of the feminine names heretofore referred to. The numbers concealed under each of the tabs cannot be ascertained until a pull or selection has been made, and the name concealed under the seal cannot be ascertained until the seal has been removed. The pull card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:

PERSON SELECTING NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES A RADIO

(Picture of radio) Do not remove seal until all donations are made.

10 FREE NUMBERS

NUMBERS 2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10-11 ARE FREE

Numbers 1 to 35 Pay What you Draw

Numbers Over 35 Pay Only 35¢

NO HIGHER

DIRECTIONS

This catalogue consists of 110 girls' names. The amount of each sale ranges from 1¢ to 35¢. No higher. No sale over 35¢.

There are 10 FREE numbers. Persons selecting numbers 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 pay NOTHING. As each person selects a name the amount to be paid appears on the inside of each slip; for instance: If No. 1 is selected the amount required to pay is 1¢, if No. 26 is selected the amount is 26¢.

Those selecting numbers over 35 pay only 35¢.

Each payment entitles the payee to a free drawing on the radio illustrated in this catalogue when the seal is opened.

Do not remove seal until all money has been collected.

Sales of radio-receiving sets by means of said pull cards are made in accordance with the above described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether a customer pays a sum of money from 1 cent to 35 cents for a radio-receiving set or receives the same free of charge, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing for the amount paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

As stated above, the other pull cards which respondents furnish are identical in principle but vary in detail. The members of the public to whom respondents furnish their pull cards use the same in the manner suggested by respondents, thereby distributing respondents' merchandise to others by lot or chance. The sale and distribution of respondents' merchandise through the use of or by means of said pull cards constitutes the operation of lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, and the respondents in furnishing said pull cards put in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the distribution of their merchandise.

PAR. 3. The respondents, in furnishing said pull cards, have knowledge that the same are, have been and will be, used in distributing their merchandise, and furnish said pull cards so that their merchandise may be sold or distributed to the public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. There are in the United States many manufacturers and distributors selling and distributing similar or like merchandise to that distributed by the respondents, who do not furnish pull cards similar to those furnished by respondents, and who do not furnish any device by which their merchandise can be distributed to the public by lot or chance. There are also many competitors of respondents who are opposed to the use of pull cards in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and such competitors refrain from furnishing such devices. The sale of merchandise by means of said pull cards injuriously affects the sale of similar or like merchandise by such competitors who do not use similar devices in connection with the sale of their merchandise, and trade is diverted to respondents from their said competitors by reason of the furnishing of said pull cards or like devices. The use of such methods by the respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondents' competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondents from their said competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondents, as above set out, have the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade in said commerce to the respondents from their competitors, to the injury of such competitors, and to the injury of the public. The sale and distribution in interstate commerce of merchandise by lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises as herein described by lot or chance is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Max Schreiber, Philip W. Simons, and William Klompus, individually and as copartners trading as De Luxe Manufacturing Company, their agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of radio receiving sets and other merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

H. C. BRILL COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, CONCLUSION, OPINION AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3299. Complaint, Jan. 15, 1938—Decision, Feb. 10, 1938

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, SUBSEC. (a)—CUMULATIVE QUANTITY DISCOUNTS—WHERE IRRELATED SIZE OF INDIVIDUAL SHIPMENTS, ORDERS, ETC.

Savings in the cost of serving different customers, aside from differences in methods of sale and delivery, result from the differences in the size of the individual order placed by such customers, irrespective of the aggregate purchases for a given period of time, and a distinction in price between shipping cartons or shelf packages and broken packages is readily understood, and a difference in price based upon the size of individual purchases and shipments is likewise appreciated, large orders ordinarily being obtained, assembled, priced, packed, billed, and delivered at a lower cost per dollar of sales than small orders. Under discount plan, however, based on aggregate volume purchases for given period, it may cost seller more per dollar of sales to serve customer who places large number of small orders, sufficient in aggregate to earn discounts, than customer who places few large orders, total of which is not sufficient to obtain discount, since, while purchasers of large annual amount sometimes buy in larger individual shipments than do buyers whose purchases do not amount to as large a sum, large buyers also place numerous small orders, average size of which is frequently less than that of orders placed by buyers whose aggregate annual purchases are less in volume. There is no certainty and scarcely any probability that the business of the buyer who purchases from $5,000 to $10,000 in the aggregate of merchandise within a year will cost the seller more or less in proportion to quantity than the one who purchases more than $30,000 or less than $35,000, and cumulative discount is sound only where savings have been achieved by the seller with respect to individual sales made to a particular buyer over a period of time, not reflected in price at which buyer purchased and reserved for purpose of refunding at end of such period.

DISCRIMINATION IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, SUBSEC. (a)—COMPETITIVE EFFECT—SMALL DIFFERENTIALS—WHERE RELATIVE IMPORTANCE PRODUCT, NOT GREAT.

While price differential of 2¼ percent on single product such as ice cream powder, is not sufficient to give chain store organization of national scope any appreciable competitive advantage in all of its business, such organization does receive definite advantage in sale of that particular commodity, and such competitive advantage becomes greater when such company is permitted to obtain such differential from considerable number of sellers; such sum, i. e., 2¼ percent, in case of Nation-wide and of many food chains representing difference between profit and loss, and such differentials, even though individually of relatively little importance, in the aggregate giving buyer, whether retail or wholesale, decided competitive advantage, and tending inevitably toward centralization of retail or wholesale trade, by tending to eliminate smaller buyer and building up larger one at former's expense, through securing of lowest price by largest.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, SUBSEC. (a)—LARGE CUSTOMER DIFFERENTIALS AND SELLER INTEREST AS NOT ALONE CONTROLLING.

While it may be to seller's interest to favor large customers, often doing a Nation-wide business, seller cannot regard his interest exclusively, but must subordinate same to requirement that his prices do not reflect unlawful discrimination.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2, SUBSEC. (a)—CUMULATIVE QUANTITY DISCOUNTS—WHERE DIFFERENTIALS UNRELATED INDIVIDUAL ORDER SIZE AND SHIPMENTS OR DELIVERY OR OTHER COSTS.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of preparation for making home-made ice cream, and in sale and distribution thereof (1) to and through Nation-wide and two other retail grocery chains competitively engaged in commerce in resale and distribution of its said preparation, and in dealing with whom it followed practice of treating various warehouses of each as individual customers and soliciting, independently, sales thereof, and shipping merchandise involved to, and billing, such individual warehouses, and (2) to and through wholesalers, and chains, other than aforesaid, under practice pursuant to which, without other exception, it sold all on basis of trade discounts, f. o. b. destination, specified minimum shipping quantities of 10 percent less 1 percent cash, for its liquid product, and 20 percent, less 1 percent cash, for its powder—

Entered into contracts with said three chains providing, in view of "purchases in large quantity, present and prospective," for 12-month period therein named, for cumulative quantity discounts of 1 percent on purchases aggregating therein from $5,000 to $10,000, 2 percent on those from 10 to 15, 3 percent on those ranging from 15 to 20, and similar increase for similar additional step, with 5 percent on purchases aggregating over $30,000 during contract year, and, pursuant to provisions of said contract, or method and amount claimed and insisted on thereunder, paid Nation-wide chain rebates exceeding $400 and amounting to 3 percent on contract periods aggregate excess purchases of chain's various warehouses, no one of which alone bought sufficient quantity to earn discount in any amount under contract agreement, and to second chain on similar excess aggregate of purchases of such separate warehouse units, no single one of which bought in sufficient quantity to earn rebate, as aforesaid, $3.53 or 1 percent on such excess aggregate, and to third, for aggregate purchases under contract discount minimum of various warehouses thereof, nothing;

With result that first referred-to chain received definite advantage in sale of particular commodity, and such discrimination tended toward centralization of retail or wholesale trade through giving largest retailer or wholesaler lowest price, and thus tending to build up large, at expense of small, buyer, and latter's elimination:

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

Held, That such contract did not result in economy in selling, credit, ordering, shipping, advertising, or other elements that can be considered as producing a differential in cost, and so-called discount granted aforesaid Nation-wide chain cannot be justified on basis of savings in distribution costs, and so-called discounts paid as aforesaid constituted discriminations in price in violation of provisions of Section 2 (a) of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

Mr. A. W. DeBirny for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the H. C. Brill Company, Inc., hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and is now violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Public, No. 212, the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (Public, No. 692, the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PAR. 4. Shortly after the effective date of the Robinson-Patman Act, June 19, 1936, a representative of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company presented a so-called quantity discount agreement to the respondent herein, which agreement was executed by respondent in words and figures as follows:

PAR. 6. The total purchases of the various warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, as aforesaid, amounted to $18,670.57. No single unit purchased in sufficient quantity to earn any rebate under the contract agreement. Each of said warehouses is treated by respondent as an individual customer, sales are solicited independently and the merchandise was shipped and billed to the individual warehouses. On July 21, 1937, respondent sent The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company a check for $260.12. This amount was arrived at by granting to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company a rebate of 1 percent on its purchases between $5,000 and $10,000, 2 percent on its purchases between $10,000 and $15,000, and 3 percent on its purchases in excess of $15,000. The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company objected to this method of computing its rebate, claiming that it was entitled to the full 3 percent rebate on all purchases in excess of $5,000. Accordingly, on July 26th, 1937, respondent paid to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company an additional sum of $150.00, making the total rebate $410.12.

PAR. 7. Respondent executed a contract in the same form with The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company covering the period commencing on June 20, 1936 and expiring June 19, 1937. The respondent sold and shipped said commodity from its said plant to the various warehouses of The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company between June 20, 1936 and June 19, 1937 as follows:

treated by said respondent as an individual customer, sales are solicited independently and the merchandise is shipped and billed to the individual warehouses. On September 20, 1937 respondent sent The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company a check in the amount of $3.53. This amount was arrived at by granting to The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company a 1 percent rebate on its purchases in excess of $5,000, namely $353.44.

PAR. 9. Respondent executed a contract in the same form with the American Stores Company covering a period commencing on October 20, 1936 and expiring October 19, 1937, during which period the American Stores Company purchases amounted to the sum of $4,150.01. The respondent sold and shipped said commodity from its said plant to seven warehouses of the American Stores Company located respectively in Baltimore, Md.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Johnstown, Pa.; Orange, N. J.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and two warehouses located in the city of Philadelphia, Pa. No rebate was paid to the American Stores Company inasmuch as the total purchases did not aggregate more than the sum of $5,000.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid rebate agreements were entered into by respondent with the aforesaid three large corporate chain store companies and with no other customers. Respondent made an additional special arrangement with most customers by which a special discount of 5 percent on E-Zee Freez powder was allowed and 10 percent on all purchases of liquid E-Zee Freez in consideration of the distributor contracting for and agreeing to purchase an agreed number of dozens of said commodities during a year's time and such discounts or allowances were granted, paid, or allowed to the aforesaid corporate chains in addition to the rebate, if any, which each of said corporate chains received. Purchasers who would not contract for their purchases at the beginning of the year were not allowed the additional special discounts or if they did not take the amount contracted for respondent was entitled to a charge-back of 5 percent on all E-Zee Freez powder drawn against the said contract or 10 percent on all liquid E-Zee Freez drawn against said contract.

PAR. 11. Upon the termination of the aforesaid rebate contract with The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, a second contract in the same form was executed by respondent covering the period commencing on June 20, 1937 and expiring June 19, 1938. This second contract had an additional clause providing that Canadian purchases applied.

PAR. 12. Since June 19, 1936 many purchasers of said commodity, E-Zee Freez, from respondent and who did not receive any rebate have been and are now in substantial competition in the sale, resale, and distribution of said commodity with The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company and many units of The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company and American Stores Company, as aforesaid, are likewise in substantial competition with The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company.

PAR. 13. The effect of the discriminations in price referred to in paragraph 3 may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondent is engaged or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with the respondent or The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, or other beneficiary of like discrimination.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on January 15, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, H. C. Brill Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with discriminating in price between different purchasers of liquid and powder preparations for the manufacture of home made ice cream in violation of subsection (a) of Section 2 of the aforesaid act.

After the issuance of said complaint, respondent filed answer thereto admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving intervening procedure, briefs, argument, and final hearing, which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Brill Company, Inc., now is, and at all times since June 19, 1936, has been a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey with its principal office and plant located at 101-111 New Jersey Railroad Avenue in the city of Newark, N. making of home made ice cream from its said place of business in the State of New Jersey to various purchasers of said preparation located in the State of New Jersey and the several States of the United States and there has been and is now between the respondent and purchasers of said preparation a course of trade and commerce in said preparation in and between the State of New Jersey and the several States of the United States. The said respondent in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid has been and is now in direct active competition with other persons, partnerships, and corporations similarly engaged.

PAR. 2. Said respondent's customers are generally food wholesalers and retail grocery chain stores. Certain of the chain stores are competitively engaged in commerce in the resale and distribution of the said preparation with other of respondent's customers. The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company is generally in competition in the resale and distribution of the said preparation with most of respondent's other customers. The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company directly competes with The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company and the American Stores Company in the resale and distribution of the said preparation.

PAR. 3. Shortly after the effective date of the Robinson-Patman Act, June 19, 1936, a representative of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company presented a so-called quantity discount agreement to the respondent herein, which agreement was executed by respondent and The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company in words and figures as follows:

pendently and the merchandise was shipped and billed to the individual warehouses. On July 21, 1937, respondent paid The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company $260.12. This amount was arrived at by combining all purchases and granting to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company 1 percent on its purchases between $5,000 and $10,000, 2 percent on its purchases between $10,000 and $15,000, and 3 percent on its purchases in excess of $15,000. The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company objected to this method of computation and claimed it was entitled to the full 3 percent on all purchases in excess of $5,000. Accordingly, on July 26th, 1937, respondent paid to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company an additional sum of $150.00, making the total rebate $410.12.

No single unit purchased in sufficient quantity to earn any rebate under the contract agreement. Each of said warehouses is treated by said respondent as an individual customer, sales are solicited independently and the merchandise is shipped and billed to the individual warehouses. On September 20, 1937 respondent sent The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company a check in the amount of $3.53. This amount was arrived at by granting to The Kroger Grocery and Baking Company a 1 percent rebate on its purchases in excess of $5,000, namely $353.44.

PAR. 8. Respondent executed a contract in the same form with the American Stores Company covering a period commencing on October 20, 1936 and expiring October 19, 1937, during which period the American Stores Company purchases amounted to the sum of $4,150.01. The respondent sold and shipped said commodity from its said plant to seven warehouses of the American Stores Company located respectively in Baltimore, Md.; Syracuse, N. PAR. 9. Respondent sells to wholesalers and to chain stores as follows:

Liquid E-Zee Freez is packed in cases containing 2 dozens and 12 dozens. The price is 85 cents a dozen with a trade discount of 10 percent, less 1 percent cash discount f. o. b. destination. Minimum shipping quantity 24 dozens. Powder E-Zee Freez is packed 1 dozen to the carton, 15 cartons to the shipping case. The price is 90 cents a dozen with a trade discount of 20 percent, less 1 percent cash discount f. o. b. destination. Minimum shipping quantity 30 dozens. Brokerage is allowed and paid to independent food brokers on all sales within such brokers' territory and was allowed and paid on the sales to the said retail food chains.

PAR. 10. The 10 percent trade discount allowed on liquid E-Zee Freez was originally intended as a special trade discount for contract as distinguished from spot purchases; similarly, 5 percent of the 20 percent allowed on the powder E-Zee Freez was so intended. However, only a few of such contracts were entered into when respondent changed its plan and sold all, whether on spot or contract purchases, on the same terms with the exception of the so-called quantity discount allowances referred to in paragraph 3.

CONCLUSION AND OPINION

From the facts as herein found, the first question that arises concerns the offer by respondent of varying discounts to customers based on the amount each customer purchased annually.

The consideration on which the offer is made, as stated in the contract, is "in view of the purchases in large quantity, present and prospective, the manufacturer agrees to allow the following quantity discount on amounts bought by the purchaser, between the period commencing on June 20, 1936 and expiring on June 19, 1937.

$5,000 to $10,000	—1%
10,000 to 15,000	—2%
15,000 to 20,000	—3%
20,000 to 30,000	—4%
30,000 to over	—5%

The consideration is the purchase "in large quantity" of the goods sold by respondent. However, the offer neither expressly nor by implication can be construed to relate to the purchase of single shipments of the value specified nor was it so construed by the parties as evidenced by the settlements.

Purchasers of large annual amounts sometimes buy in larger individual shipments than do buyers whose purchases do not amount to as large a sum. Large buyers, however, also place numerous small orders and the average size of such orders is frequently less than the average size of orders placed by buyers whose aggregate annual purchases are less in volume. Indeed under a discount plan based on aggregate volume purchases for a given period, such as that contained in the aforesaid contract, it may cost the seller more per dollar of sales to serve a customer who places a large number of small orders which are sufficient in the aggregate to earn the discounts, than to serve the customer who places a few large orders whose total is not sufficient to obtain the discount.

Large wholesalers and chain retailers often obtain concessions in the form of cumulative discounts in the belief that their transactions, in proportion to the amount purchased, are fewer in number, take less of the time and attention of the seller, and cost the seller less. However, when such a belief is not supported by the facts the conclusion obviously is erroneous and an offer predicated thereon discriminatory. There is no certainty and scarcely any probability that the business of the buyer who purchases from $5,000 to $10,000 in the aggregate of merchandise within a year will cost the seller more or less in proportion to quantity than the business of one who purchases more than $30,000 or less than $5,000.

A distinction in price between shipping cartons or shelf packages and broken packages is readily understood and a difference in price based upon the size of individual purchases and shipments is likewise appreciated but no such distinction is made in this offer. One whose individual purchases were in thousand dollar lots would if his purchases amounted to, let us assume, $8,000 be required to pay a higher price than another whose individual purchases were in hundred dollar lots but whose total for the year amounted to more than $10,000. Such a differential producing an injurious effect in any line of commerce cannot be justified.

No justification has been affirmatively shown for the discrimination in price found herein and the Commission finds no substantial difference between the respondent's cost of selling and delivering ice cream powder to the individual warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, and its cost of serving the individual warehouses of any other chain store company, or any other customer purchasing the said merchandise in quantities comparable to those purchased by the individual warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company. Aside from differences in methods of sale and delivery, savings in the cost of serving different customers aside from result from the differences in the size of the individual orders placed by such customers, irrespective of the aggregate purchases for a given period of time. Ordinarily large orders are obtained, assembled, priced, packed, billed, and delivered at a lower cost per dollar of sales than small orders. In the instant case, the respondent employed the same methods of sale and delivery in serving the individual warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company as it used in serving its other customers. The record contains no evidence that the individual orders for ice cream powder placed with the respondent by the several warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company were any larger than the orders placed with the said respondent by other customers. Indeed, for the year covered by the aforesaid contract, the aggregate amount of ice cream powder purchased from the respondent by the individual warehouses of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company ranged from less than $3.40 to not more than $1,994.30, while the individual orders of the said warehouses were even smaller. It cannot be assumed that the respondent's individual sales or shipments to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company were fewer in number, and therefore larger, than its sales to other customers, or that it cost said respondent less per dollar of sales to make these individual sales or shipments to the said Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company than it did to make individual sales or shipments to other customers. In view of these facts, the Commission finds, therefore, that the so-called discount granted to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company cannot be justified on the basis of savings in distribution costs. The contract did not result in economy of selling, credit, ordering, shipping, advertising, or other elements that can be considered as producing a differential in cost.

A cumulative discount is sound only where savings have been achieved by the seller with respect to individual sales made to a particular buyer over a period of time, which savings were not reflected in the price at which the buyer purchased and which are reserved for the purpose of refunding at the end of a period of time. But any system of discounts based on the amount of annual sales is a price discrimination contrary to Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended, if it has any of the injurious effects on competition enumerated in the statute, unless justified as by making only due allowance for differences in cost not previously allowed and resulting from the quantities sold or delivered.

Many food chains, including the three aforesaid grocery chains, operate on a net margin of profit of $1\frac{1}{2}$ percent to 2 percent. The sum of $2\frac{1}{4}$ percent represents a difference between profit and loss. Of course a price differential of $2\frac{1}{4}$ percent on a single product of no greater importance than ice cream powder is not sufficient to give The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company any appreciable competitive advantage in all of its business, but it does receive a definite advantage in the sale of that particular commodity. The competitive advantage becomes the greater when a company doing a Nation-wide business is permitted to obtain a $2\frac{1}{4}$ percent differential from a considerable number of sellers. Even though individually they are of relatively little importance, the sum of the differentials would undoubtedly give the buyer a decided competitive advantage. Such discrimination inevitably tends toward centralization of retail or wholesale trade, for the largest retailer or wholesaler gets the lowest price—it thus tends to eliminate smaller buyers and builds up the large buyer at the expense of small ones.

It may be to respondent's interest to favor large customers often doing a Nation-wide business. However, the seller cannot regard his interests exclusively and must subordinate such interest to the requirement that his prices not reflect an unlawful discrimination.

The so-called discounts paid, as provided for and more fully set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, constitute discriminations in price in commerce in violation of Section 2 (a) of said Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, section 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings and conclusion are hereby made a part hereof, that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended:

It is ordered, That the respondent, H. C. Brill Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia of liquid and powder preparations for the manufacture of home made ice cream, do forthwith cease and desist from granting or paying, or agreeing to grant or pay, sums amounting to discriminations in price in the form of cumulative discounts described in paragraph 3 of the findings as to the facts and conclusion; and from granting or paying, or agreeing to grant or pay, sums amounting to discriminations in price in the form of cumulative discounts, except where such discount makes only due allowance for differences in cost which have been achieved with respect to individual sales made to a particular buyer over a period of time, which differences in cost were not reflected in the price at which the buyer purchased.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent, H. C. Brill Company, Inc., within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. W. McPHEETERS, TRADING AS MID-WEST SOAP COMPANY, AND AS SAVON PRODUCTS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2995. Complaint, Nov. 27, 1936—Decision, Feb. 11, 1938

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of a cheap, inferior cold process soap of a grade and quality generally not used as a toilet soap, and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesalers and dealers at various points in other States for resale to house-to-house canvassers or peddlers, at cost thereto of approximately $4\frac{1}{2}\text{¢}$ per three-cake carton, in competition with many who sell, in commerce as aforesaid, soap similar in grade and quality to that sold by him, and many who sell soap of a far superior grade and quality and which has a retail value of, and sells for, price marked by him on his said containers, and who do not in any way misrepresent the price, quality, or character of their products—

Placed on three-bar containers of brands of his aforesaid cheap and inferior soap, words "3 bars—75¢," together with words "Toilet," "Bath," "Shampoo," and trade name and address, notwithstanding fact price thus marked and indicated was many times in excess of selling price of said soaps to aforesaid canvassers, and many times in excess of true value thereof, and much greater than actual price at which such containers were sold to ultimate purchaser, and price indicated was not intended to be true retail price of products in question, but was wholly false and fictitious and in no way represented true value or selling price of products so marked; and thereby put in hands of its purchasers and of said house-to-house canvassers or peddlers instrument or means whereby they could and did commit a fraud upon substantial portion of purchasing and consuming public, through enabling them to represent to purchasers and prospective purchasers, and to cause such purchasers to believe, that said products were in fact high grade and of a retail value substantially as marked and indicated, and represented through statements on containers in question;

With result that such canvassers or peddlers could and did sell said soap at price greatly in excess of fair and reasonable value thereof and of prices at which soap of similar grade and quality was usually and customarily sold, and of aiding and abetting them in misleading and deceiving purchasing and consuming public through such fictitious markings, and of furthering deception thus occasioned through placing on said containers statements falsely indicating soap in question was of grade and quality of soap which had retail value of, ordinarily sold for, price marked thereon, and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such soap had the value of and ordinarily retailed for the price thus marked and indicated, and that said representations and statements as to grade and quality thereof were true, and with result that substantial number of consuming public, as true consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by his said acts and practices, purchased substantial volume of his said products and trade was unfairly diverted to him from

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. W. McPheeters, trading as Mid-West Soap Company, and as Savon Products, hereinafter referred to as "respondent," has been, and now is, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. W. McPheeters, trading as Mid-West Soap Company, and as Savon Products, personally and through said Mid-West Soap Company and said Savon Products, with office and principal place of business at 901 High Street, Indianapolis, Ind., is now and for some time has been engaged in the business of distributing, and selling in commerce, as herein set out, certain alleged toilet soaps.

PAR. 2. Said respondent being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said soaps, when sold, to be transported from his office and place of business in the State of Indiana to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made. Respondent now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in said soaps, distributed and sold by him between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations engaged in the business of distributing and selling toilet soaps, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and operation of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said soaps, respondent has been, and is now, engaged in misbranding, fictitious price marking, misrepresentation, and false and misleading advertising.

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

Among the acts done and representations made by respondent are the following:

1. Under the trade name "Mid-West Soap Co., Indianapolis," respondent sells a three-bar or cake soap combination called and labelled "Burberry," in a box marked "3 bars—75;" and each cake stamped—"25¢," and advertised on the box as "A toilet and bath soap"; "Use as a shampoo," and "Excellent for shaving."

2. Under the trade name "Savon Products, Indianapolis," respondent sells:

(a) A three-bar or cake soap combination called and labelled "Vello," in a box marked "3 bars—Price 75¢," and advertised on the box as for "Toilet—Bath—Shampoo."

(b) A three-bar or cake soap combination called and labelled "Creem—O," in a box marked "3 bars—Price 75¢," and advertised on the box as for "Toilet—Bath—Shampoo."

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the prices, nature, and effective qualities of said soaps are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. The truth and facts are that said soaps are never sold or offered for sale at the excessive prices marked on the boxes; neither are such soaps the fine toilet soaps which such fictitious high prices and the labels are intended to, and do, claim, and imply, but are in fact cheap grades of soaps without valuable qualities as indicated by their names.

The truth and facts are that said soaps are sold by respondent to its peddlers at 4 cents per box of 3 cakes, and that the cheap, printed, cardboard containers cost about as much or more to make as the three small cakes of inferior soap contained therein.

The said products above mentioned are sold by the respondent principally to house to house canvassers for resale to ultimate consumers. The prices marked on the boxes in which the products above mentioned are sold are many times in excess of the actual selling price to said house to house canvassers and many times in excess of the actual value thereof and are much greater than the actual price at which said products are sold by said canvassers to said ultimate purchasing and using public. The prices so indicated were not intended by respondent to be the true retail price or the true retail value of said products, and are false and fictitious and in no sense represents either the true value or the true selling price of the products so price marked. The prices marked as above indicated were intended by respondent and the canvasser purchasing for resale to be far in excess of the price actually charged the ultimate consumer.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who distribute and sell toilet soaps which have ingredients and qualities which may justify prices somewhat in line with respondent's fictitious prices and often at much less than such fictitious prices, who do not in any way misrepresent the prices, quality or character of their respective products.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements, representations and implications made by the respondent in pricing, designating and describing his products, and the quality of said products, as hereinabove set out, in the labels and advertising, in the course of distributing said products, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true.

Further, as a true consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts, labeling and representations of respondent, as hereinbefore set out, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling toilet soaps which have the qualities and values claimed by respondent for his products, who truthfully advertise their respective products and sell them at such higher prices as their quality warrant. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competitors, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above, and foregoing acts, practices, and representations, actual and implied, of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 27, 1936, issued and, on November 30, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent J. W. McPheeters, trading as Mid-West Soap Company, and as Savon Products, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William T. Chantland and George Foulkes, attorneys for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in defense of the allegations of the complaint by Harry A. Weaver, Jr., attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint, no brief having been filed by the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. W. McPheeters, trading and doing business as Mid-West Soap Company and Savon Products, at Indianapolis, Indiana, is now and since the 9th day of November 1934, has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing and selling certain soaps. The respondent has caused and still causes said soaps when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Indiana to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment. Respondent has maintained and still does maintain a constant current of trade in commerce in said soaps distributed and sold by him between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent manufactures all of the soap sold and distributed by him at his plant in Indianapolis, Ind. The respondent sells to wholesalers and dealers who resell said soap through house-to-house canvassers, commonly known as peddlers. The respondent's said soaps cost the peddlers approximately $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents per carton of three cakes. The respondent formerly manufactured, sold and distributed three brands of soap, named, packaged, marked, and priced as hereinafter set out:

"Burberry" brand soap was sold three bars in a container, marked "3 bars—75¢", whereon appeared the following statements: "Toilet and Bath Soap" "Used as a Shampoo" "Excellent for Shaving";

"Mid-West Soap Co., Indianapolis." Each bar of said soap had stamped thereon the following: "25¢—Burberry." The manufacture, sale, and distribution of "Burberry Brand" of soap was discontinued approximately one year ago. Sales of this brand were confined to the State of Indiana.

"Vello" brand soap was and is sold three bars in a container, marked "3 bars—75¢" "Toilet—Bath—Shampoo"; "Savon Products, Indianapolis." This brand was and is sold and distributed to purchasers located in States other than Indiana.

"Cream-O" brand soap was and is sold three bars in a container, marked "3 bars—price 75¢" "Toilet—Bath—Shampoo"; "Savon Products, Indianapolis." This brand was and is sold and distributed to purchasers located in States other than Indiana.

The soap offered for sale and sold in said containers, marked and priced as above set forth, weighs approximately three ounces or less per bar and was and is a cheap, inferior cold process soap of a grade and quality not generally used as a toilet soap.

PAR. 3. The price of 75 cents marked and indicated on said containers as above set out is many times in excess of the selling price of said soaps to said house-to-house canvassers, and many times in excess of the true value of the soaps therein contained. The price so marked is much greater than the actual price at which said container of soap is sold to the ultimate purchaser. The price so indicated was not intended by the respondent to be the true retail price of said products but was and is wholly false and fictitious and in no way represents the true value or the true selling price of the products so marked.

PAR. 4. The fictitious and exaggerated price markings placed by the respondent on said containers, containing said cheap, inferior soap, places in the hands of purchasers from the respondent and the house-to-house canvassers or peddlers an instrument or means whereby said house-to-house canvassers or peddlers can and do commit a fraud upon a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public in that it enables said canvassers or peddlers falsely to represent to their purchasers and prospective purchasers, and to cause said purchasers and prospective purchasers to believe that said products are in fact high-grade soaps and of a retail value substantially as marked and indicated on said containers and as represented in the statements on said containers. As a result said house-to-house canvassers or peddlers can and do sell said soap at prices greatly in excess of the fair and reasonable value thereof and greatly in excess of the prices at which soap of a similar grade and quality is usually and customarily sold. By placing such fictitious markings on said containers, the respondent has aided and abetted and now aids and abets house-to-house canvassers or peddlers in misleading and deceiving the purchasing and consuming public. The respondent furthers the deception occasioned by the use of said fictitious price markings by placing on said containers the statements above set out indicating that the soap therein contained is of the grade and quality of soap which has a retail value of, and ordinarily sells for, the price marked on said containers, when in truth and fact the soap in said containers is grossly inferior to soaps which ordinarily retail at the prices indicated on the containers.

PAR. 5. There are among respondent's competitors in said commerce many who sell soap similar in grade and quality to that sold by the respondent and many who sell soap of a grade and quality which has a retail value of, and sells for, the price marked by the respondent on said containers who do not in any way misrepresent the price, quality, or character of their products.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein above set out, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said soap is of the value of, and ordinarily retails for, the price marked and indicated by the respondent, and to believe that said representations and statements as to the grade and quality of said soap are true.

PAR. 7. As a true consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and practices of the respondent as herein above set out, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competitors in said commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, J. W. McPheeters, are to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. W. McPheeters, individually, or trading as Mid-West Soap Company, and as Savon Products, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of soap in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly, either personally or through any corporate or other device:

1. Representing through the use of fictitious price marks, or in any other manner, that said soap has a retail value or price in excess of the actual customary retail value or price thereof;

2. Representing that said soap is generally offered for sale and sold at retail at a price in excess of the usual and customary price at which such soap is actually and customarily offered for sale and sold to the ultimate purchaser;

3. Representing, by price markings, or in any other manner, that the soap now sold and distributed by the respondent, or any other soap of similar grade and quality, has a retail value of, and ordinarily sells for, 75 cents per box of three bars.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3073. Complaint, Mar. 10, 1937—Decision, Feb. 11, 1938

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of his "T. B. Compound" proprietary preparation for tuberculosis in various forms and for chronic bronchitis and other ailments, and in sale and distribution thereof to individual purchaser users and to members of the medical profession; in advertising the same in newspapers of general circulation and posters and circulars mailed to purchasers and prospective purchasers throughout the country and through legend captioned "Pass This On!" contained on label of each package thereof, and through advertising leaflets—

- (a) Represented that said product was a cure and remedy for tuberculosis of the lungs, larynx, intestines, and other parts of the body and that such malady had been cured thereby and that victims thereof could verify the astonishing results achieved with the herbs, roots, and other ingredients which were used therein;
- (b) Made use of the abbreviation "Dr." and represented himself as a "naturopathic doctor," and that physicians had prescribed his said product for patients suffering from tubercular conditions and had sent to him patients suffering from such ailments and that it was not necessary for him to diagnose or see patients for their treatment which they took at home, and which consisted of two teaspoons of his said compound daily for "proper results"; and
- (c) Represented that his said product also constituted cure for chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum and ailments of the stomach or intestines;

Facts being said compound had no curative, remedial, or therapeutic value in the treatment of the various types of tuberculosis or causes thereof or various other ailments or conditions above specified and was of no beneficial value whatever in the treatment thereof, no one had been cured of tuberculosis by its use, nor had physicians successfully prescribed it in treatment of patients with tuberculosis or other diseases for which he claimed his product to be a cure, said product was not an original or secret discovery and use thereof by persons afflicted with tuberculosis might delay the securing of essential medical care and hospitalization so long that there was no possibility of arresting the disease, through attempted self-medication without proper and necessary advice or otherwise, and said individual had had no medical training and was not a physician and maintained no office nor place where condition of purchasers or prospective purchasers might be determined;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial part of purchasing public into false and erroneous belief that said representations were true and that his said preparation was a cure for all types of tuberculosis and causes thereof and other ailments and conditions above specified, and that public acting in the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and exaggerated statements and representations bought a substantial volume of his said product and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors likewise engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of treatments intended and used for relieving pains incident to diseases and afflictions of the body and for which said individual recommended his said compound, or for building up resistance of patients to such diseases and afflictions and who truthfully represent the extent of the therapeutic value of their respective products:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Norwood, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Emile Carpentier, an individual trading as "Dr. Emile Carpentier," hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Emile Carpentier, an individual trading as "Dr. Emile Carpentier," has his principal office and place of business located at 68 Chestnut Street, in the city of Hillsdale, State of New Jersey. Respondent has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a compound that is an alleged cure for tuberculosis, chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, ulcerated stomach, and ulcerated intestines. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent offers said compound for sale and sells the same in commerce between the State of New Jersey and the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

When said product is sold, respondent transports it, or causes it to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State in which said shipments originated, and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 1 year last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said product so manufactured, sold, and shipped by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent has been, for more than 1 year last past, and is now engaged in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of like and similar products, or other products, and treatments intended, designed, and used for similar purposes in the treatment of tuberculosis, and for the treatment of chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, ulcerated stomach, and ulcerated intestines, and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his commodity, and for the purpose of creating a demand for it on the part of the consuming public, causes his commodity to be advertised through the medium of printed matter published, issued, and circulated to customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has advertised in various printed media, as follows:

The aforesaid statements, together with other similar statements not set out herein, serve, directly or through implication, as representations with respect to the efficacy and therapeutic value of said compound in use, to the effect that it will cure tuberculosis of the lungs, larynx, bones, intestines, kidneys, and brain; that it will cure chronic bronchitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, stomach, and intestines; that it contains exhilarating and vitalizing herbs and roots; that it will cure tuberculosis in all climates and in all countries; that the results achieved can be verified by many persons who have been cured of tuberculosis through the use of said compound; and that physicians send critical and incurable consumptive patients to respondent.

Over a period of many years the universally used professional designations for a Medical Doctor or a Doctor of Medicine have been, and now are, the abbreviations "Dr." and "M. D." The abbreviation "N. D." when used with respondent's name in connection with the representations or statements herein set out is a colorable simulation and imitation of the well known and long used term "M. D." The respondent's use of the terms "Dr." and "N. D." in close proximity to his name in the aforementioned statements and representations serves as a representation to prospective purchasers that respondent is a Medical Doctor or a Doctor of Medicine and tends to and does lead them into the mistaken and erroneous belief that he is a Medical Doctor.

The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of his compound when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the alleged compound will not cure tuberculosis of the lungs, larynx, bones, intestines, kidneys, or brain; and it will not cure chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, ulcerated stomach, and ulcerated intestines. It does not contain any exhilarating and vitalizing herbs, roots, or ingredients. It will not cure the victims of tuberculosis in any climate or any country. No victim of tuberculosis can, or is competent to, verify the statements made by respondent that such person has been cured of tuberculosis through use of said compound. Physicians do not send to respondent critical or incurable consumptive patients. The respondent is not either medically trained or a medical practitioner and is not a Doctor of Medicine.

PAR. 3. The effect of the foregoing false and misleading representations of the respondent in selling and offering for sale the alleged tuberculosis compound is to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the consuming public in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that said tuberculosis compound will cure consumption of the lungs, larynx, bones, intestines, kidneys, and brain, and will cure chronic bronchitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, ulcerated stomach, and ulcerated intestines; that the said compound contains exhilarating and vitalizing herbs and roots; and it will cure tuberculosis in all climates and in all countries; that the victims of tuberculosis can verify the results achieved by the use of the alleged compound; that physicians send critical, incurable consumptive patients to respondent; and that Emile Carpentier is a medical doctor and practitioner.

PAR. 4. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondent in designating and describing his compound and the effectiveness of said compound for curing, treating, or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body herein named, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true and that said compound will in truth accomplish the results claimed.

Further as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of the respondent hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's compound, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended, and sold for use in the cure, relief, or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, and afflictions, and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 10, 1937, issued, and on March 12, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Emile Carpentier, an individual, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by S. Brogdyne Teu, II, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Emile Carpentier, before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Emile Carpentier, trading as Dr. Emile Carpentier, is an individual. His principal office and place of business are at 68 Chestnut Street, Hillsdale, Bergen County, N. J. He is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a product called "T. B. Compound," a proprietary preparation advertised and sold as a cure for tuberculosis of the lungs, larynx, bones, intestines, kidneys, and brains, and as a cure for chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum, stomach, and intestines.

PAR. 2. Respondent's said product is compounded and packaged at his place of business in Hillsdale, Bergen County, N. J., and sold and distributed to individual purchasers and to members of the medical profession. When orders are received for respondent's said product he causes it to be shipped by railway express from his place of business at Hillsdale, Bergen County, N. J., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the various States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey. Since the date the respondent began the compounding of his said product he has maintained a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. At all times since respondent entered into said business he has been in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of preparations designed and sold as treatments for relieving the pain incident to or for building up the resistance of the patient to such diseases and afflictions of the human body as those for which respondent recommends his said compound as being a cure in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The respondent advertises his said product in newspapers having a general interstate circulation, and by posters at expositions. Respondent has also advertised and now advertises his product by means of circulars mailed to purchasers and prospective purchasers throughout the country. He also advertises his product by means of a label on each package of his T. B. Compound bearing the legend "PASS THIS ON!" as follows:

Ample verifications have proved absolute cures in from 6 weeks to 6 months' time. In all of the diseases involving tuberculosis of the lungs, the larynx, the bones, the intestines, the kidneys, or the brains. Chronic bronchitis, which means congested lungs, colitis, chronic gastritis, ulcerated duodenum, stomach or intestines. Intestinal tuberculosis of 9 years standing was completely cured in six weeks in 1927. A case of hasty consumption was cured in six weeks in 1928.

Respondent, in addition to advertising his compound as set out above, has advertised and now advertises his T. B. Compound by advertising leaflets. The following is representative of the statements and claims as to the therapeutic and curative values of respondent's compound, made by him in said advertising leaflets:

Tuberculosis is cured since 1927 by the Specific which is on sale by its discoverer, Dr. Emile Carpentier, Naturopathic Doctor. He does not diagnose nor need he ever see the patients to treat them. They must take two level teaspoons of his T. B. Compound each day. He was publicly and judicially acquitted of Fraud in 1935 in the U. S. Federal Court in spite of continuous persecutions and prosecutions for many years by the American Medical Association and the American Tuberculosis Association. Barred from the mail, then arrested and put under $2,000 bond for committing the crime of curing the White Plague.

Findings

The following representations appeared in a current circular or broadside which respondent sends out to purchasers and prospective purchasers:

EUREKA!

Victims of Tuberculosis can verify the astonishing results achieved with the herbs, roots and other ingredients which are used in the T. B. Compound of Mr. Emile Carpentier of Hillsdale, Bergen County, N. J.

Physicians of New York and New Jersey send critical and incurable consumptive patients to take his medicine. Ample verifications have conclusively proven its value in open court where 50 past victims presented themselves as evidence in the First District Court of Bergen County at Englewood, N. J., on Oct. 22, 1929. The patients stay at home and take two teaspoons of this compound each day to obtain proper results.

By means of the foregoing statements the respondent represents to purchasers and prospective purchasers, that his T. B. Compound is an effective cure for all types and forms of tuberculosis, and for chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum, stomach, and intestines, whether caused by or associated with a tubercular condition or any other affliction or condition of the human body.

PAR. 5. A qualitative analysis of respondent's T. B. Compound was made by a government agency. This analysis showed the respondent's compound to contain:

Total solids:

(5 hrs. at 100° C.)-----	84.94%
Water (Xylene method)-----	18.8 %
Ash (Chiefly magnesium, carbonate and sulphate with traces of iron, calcium and chloride)-----	.41%
Acidity of steam distillate as acetic acid-----	.77%
Chloroform soluble material-----	42.45%
Saponification value of chloroform soluble material (U. S. P. XI for lard=195-203)-----	201.2 %
Iodine value of chloroform soluble material (U. S. P. XI for lard=46-70)-----	52.1 %
Reducing sugars before inversion as invert sugar-----	30.52%
Reducing sugars after inversion as invert sugar-----	31.10%

A reading at 87° C. on an inverted half normal solution of the same gave only 0.5° V. At 25° C., the solution was levorotatory. This shows the absence of glucose and indicates that either simple syrup or honey was used.

The product is a semi-solid preparation consisting chiefly of lard and a syrupy liquid. There is a small amount of acetic acid present and some unidentified plant material. The syrup was originally either simple syrup (sucrose and water) or honey, but because of the action of the acetic acid now consists chiefly of invert sugar.

Small amounts of bark or pithy material are present.

PAR. 6. Uncontroverted medical testimony is to the effect that there is no known cure for tuberculosis.

PAR. 7. It is found that respondent's T. B. Compound has no curative, remedial, or therapeutic value in the treatment of the various types of tuberculosis or the various causes thereof and has no beneficial value whatever in the treatment of such conditions and ailments. It is further found that said T. B. Compound will not cure or in any way be beneficial in the treatment of chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum, stomach, and intestines, whether caused by or associated with a tubercular condition or any other affliction or condition of the human body.

PAR. 8. Upon the testimony and other evidence in the record it is found that the representations as to the therapeutic and curative values of respondent's T. B. Compound are untrue; that no one has been cured of tuberculosis by its use; that physicians have not successfully prescribed it in the treatment of patients with tuberculosis or other diseases for which the respondent claims his product a cure, and that respondent's compound is not an original or secret discovery. The ingredients of his compound have long been known. It is also found that by the use of respondent's compound persons afflicted with tuberculosis may delay the securing of essential medical care and hospitalization so long that there is no possibility of arresting the disease.

Respondent's product is sold direct to purchasers who can and do attempt self medication without the proper and necessary advice as to their condition and proper treatment therefor. This oftentimes results in the condition of the patient reaching a point where it is beyond the aid of medical treatment.

PAR. 9. Respondent is not a medical doctor, he has never had any medical training; never served an internship in any hospital or been connected with the medical profession in any way other than as an orderly in hospitals. Respondent maintains no office or place where the condition of purchasers and prospective purchasers of his compound may be determined.

The use by respondent of the representations set forth above in his advertising literature has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that said representations are true and that said T. B. Compound is a cure for all types of tuberculosis and the causes thereof, chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum, stomach, and intestines, whether caused by or associated with a tubercular condition or any other affliction or condition of the human body.

Acting under the above mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and exaggerated statements and representations by the respondent as above referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of the respondent's said product. As a result trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of treatments intended to be used and used for relieving the pains incident to the diseases and afflictions of the human body for which respondent recommends his compound, or for building up the resistance of the patients to such diseases and afflictions, who truthfully represent the extent of the therapeutic value of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Emile Carpentier, an individual, trading as Dr. Emile Carpentier, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Emile Carpentier, an individual, trading as Dr. Emile Carpentier, or trading under any other name, or through any corporate or other device, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a medicinal product now designated as "T. B. Compound," or any other medicinal product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing substantially the same properties, sold under that name or any other name in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Representing that said product has any curative, remedial, or therapeutic value, or is in any way beneficial in the treatment of tuberculosis of the lungs, larynx, intestines, kidneys, brains, or tuberculosis of any other part or parts of the human body.

2. Representing that said product has any curative, remedial, or therapeutic value, or is in any way beneficial in the treatment of chronic bronchitis, colitis, chronic gastritis, and ulcerated duodenum, or of diseases and maladies of the stomach and intestines, or of any other similar or allied condition or conditions of the human body.

3. Representing that said product contains any oriental herbs of any nature or description whatsoever.

4. Representing that physicians have prescribed said product for patients suffering from any tubercular conditions, or that physicians have sent critical and incurable consumptive patients to the said Emile Carpentier to take said product.

5. Representing that "Consumption" or tuberculosis in any form is cured by Emile Carpentier.

6. Representing through the use of the term medical doctor, or doctor of medicine, or any abbreviation thereof or any other professional designation of like or similar import that Emile Carpentier is a physician or doctor.

7. Representing that any one has been cured of tuberculosis in from 6 to 8 weeks, or any other period of time, by use of respondent's compound.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

INC.COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3226. Complaint, Sept. 14, 1937—Decision, Feb. 12, 1938*

Where a corporation, stock of which was owned by, and widely distributed to, general public, and which was engaged in advertisement, distribution, and sale of furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other wearing apparel; and its corporate advertising agency, under common control, and engaged in designing, modeling, advertising, and fostering sale exclusively of such products as were offered by said first-named corporation in cooperation with others, and in publishing periodical "Fashion Firsts," sold to first corporation as principal subscriber and to other retail dealers throughout the United States for distribution to their patrons under aforesaid title and with imprint thereon of particular retailer, and depictions of live models of furs, coats, dresses, hats, and other articles of wearing apparel selected by such agency from group of manufacturers who, in cooperation with, and at instance and request of, said first-named corporation and itself manufacture, sell, and distribute said merchandise exclusively to it and other retail dealer subscribers to said "Fashion Firsts," with exclusive right in their respective localities to sell merchandise therein depicted; in soliciting sale and in sale and distribution of garments and wearing apparel sold by said first corporation, and of aforesaid "Fashion Firsts" magazine, and cooperating together and with others—

Represented and implied that the garments and wearing apparel described and advertised in said magazines were designed, fabricated, tailored, and made in England through use in magazine in question of pictorial representations of the British Royal Coat of Arms and depictions of the Royal Hussars and of rural and other parts of the British Isles, together with illustrations of garments and other wearing apparel thus offered, and designated and described by distinctively English names, together with statements referring to some part of the aforesaid Isles, such as "Buckingham," "What would a collection of English coats be without a highbuttoning reefer?"; "York House," "Knize has made one (a coat) for Fashion Firsts in a new hairy Scottish woolen" and other references and names of similar tenor and implication, along with frequent references to England and English taste, styling, garments, and places, and thereby indicated to retail dealers and to consuming public, and especially to persons of English blood or origin and to other purchasers with preference for goods manufactured or tailored in England, that the garments and other wearing apparel designated, described, and represented as aforesaid were designed, made and tailored in England upon authority of the Royal Warrant Holders Association or members thereof or by the British Government or members of the British royal family;

With tendency and capacity to cause retail dealers and members of purchasing public to form erroneous belief that their said garments and wearing apparel were designed, tailored and made in, and imported from, England and with result of placing in the hands of others means whereby public might be deceived, and result that many retailers and members of purchasing public, acting under such erroneous beliefs induced by aforesaid misrepresentations, bought their said garments and wearing apparel and trade was unfairly diverted to them from competitors engaged in selling in commerce among the various States similar garments and wearing apparel truthfully advertised; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Russeks Fifth Avenue, Incorporated, and Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been, for more than 1 year last past and are now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress; and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Russeks Fifth Avenue, Incorporated, and Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, are corporations, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with their principal offices and places of business located at 390 5th Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

Said respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, has been and is now engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other articles of wearing apparel, and in offering such products for sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondent, Russeks, in the course and conduct of its said business, caused to be organized and incorporated, and controls respondent, Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, and uses said corporation as a medium or agency to design, fashion, model, and advertise the said furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other merchandise manufactured, sold, and distributed by respondent Russeks.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, is a corporation wholly managed, controlled, and operated by respondent, Russeks. Said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, in the course and conduct of its business designs, fashions, models, and advertises the said products manufactured and sold by said respondent, Russeks. Said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, in the course and conduct of the business of designing, fashioning, modeling, and advertising the said furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other products manufactured, sold, and distributed by said respondent, Russeks, has caused and now causes to be published, under the title "Fashion Firsts," certain magazines, booklets, brochures, circulars, and other periodicals which it circulates, sells, distributes, and transports through the mail and otherwise in interstate commerce from its principal place of business in the State of New York through and into other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to retail dealers and other purchasers thereof at their several places of location.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business as aforesaid, the said respondents, cooperating with each other and with others, in soliciting the sale, and in the sale and distribution of said products so manufactured and sold by the respondent Russeks and in the sale and distribution of said magazines, booklets, brochures, circulars, and periodicals, advertising said products, now represent and imply, and for more than 1 year last past have represented and implied, through said advertising media so sold, circulated, and distributed to dealers and others in said commerce as above alleged, that the coats, suits, and other apparel described and advertised in said magazines, booklets, brochures, circulars, and periodicals were and are designed, fabricated, manufactured, made, or tailored in England. Said representations and implications are made by the said respondents through the use in said advertising media of a pictorial representation of the British Royal Coat of Arms, consisting of a shield supported by a lion and a unicorn, upon which shield is superimposed a crown, underneath the whole of which is inscribed "Dieu et Mon Droit"; and pictorial representations and descriptions of typical English scenes, one of which shows soldiers standing at attention, dressed to represent the Royal Hussars, and others which show rural and other views of parts of the British Isles. These pictorial representations of the British Royal Coat of Arms and typical English scenes are used in connection with pictorial representations appearing in said advertising media of suits, coats, and other apparel designated and described by distinctively English names accompanied by statements referring to some part of the British Isles. These distinctively English names and the accompanying statements are, in part, as follows:

The said designations, descriptions, and representations hereinabove set out and described, and the pictorial representations of the British Coat of Arms and English scenes, as used and employed by said respondents, Russeks and Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, in cooperation with others, in describing the said products sold in interstate commerce are of English meaning, implication, and suggestion, and indicate to the retail dealers and to the consuming public, especially to persons of English blood or origin, and to other purchasers having a preference for goods fabricated, manufactured, tailored, or made in England, that the said furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other wearing apparel thus designated, described, and represented were designed, fabricated, manufactured, made, or tailored in England by and upon authority of Royal Warranty Holders and members of the Royal Warrant Holders Association when in truth such is not the fact.

PAR. 5. The British Royal Coat of Arms is the property of the British Government and the right to its use and to the use of pictorial representations thereof is limited to the British Government and its functions and to the British Royal family and to Royal Warranty Holders, and members of the Royal Warrant Holders Association, that is to say those corporations, partnerships, and individuals, who as a result of long continued, faithful service to members of the British Royal family have, by them, been granted special permission so to use said Coat of Arms in recognition of said service.

The said respondents, Russeks and Fashion Firsts, Incorporated, have not rendered any conspicuous service to the British Government or to the British Royal family, and neither the British Government nor the British Royal family, nor any member thereof, has ever granted or consented to the use by said respondents of the British Coat of Arms and the use thereof by said respondents and others is without authority, warrant, or consent of the rightful owners and users thereof.

PAR. 6. The said representations of said respondents and others, as aforesaid, are false and misleading and have had and do have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers and the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the furs, suits, coats, dresses, hats, and other wearing apparel so marked, branded, designated, advertised, and sold by respondents are manufactured by and with authority of the British Government, the Royal British family, or British Royal Warranty Holders and are designed, fabricated, manufactured, tailored, or made in England and imported from England when such is not the truth in fact. The said representations of said respondents and others, have had and do have the capacity to induce retail dealers and members of the purchasing public to buy respondents' said merchandise because of the erroneous beliefs engendered by said false and misleading representations, and to divert trade unfairly from competitors, who are engaged in the sale of like merchandise to that sold by respondents in commerce in and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not use such false and misleading representations. Said acts and practices deceive the public and injure competitors who do not misrepresent like products manufactured and sold by them and places in the hands of others the means whereby the public might be and are deceived.

PAR. 7. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on September 14, 1937, issued, and on September 15, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., corporations, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer, dated December 29, 1937, was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with their offices and principal place of business located at 390 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., is now, and for more than 1 year prior to the 14th day of September 1937, has been engaged in the business of advertising, distributing, and selling furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other wearing apparel. Said respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year prior to September 14, 1937, has caused its said products, when sold, to be transported and distributed from its aforesaid principal place of business in New York, and also from its branch outlet located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States, other than the States of New York and Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, said respondent, at all times herein mentioned, has been, and is now, engaged in substantial competition with various other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of similar garments and other wearing apparel in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The stock in respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., is owned and widely distributed to the general public.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., is a closed corporation sponsored by respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and a majority of its stock is owned by a few of the stockholders of respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., which said stockholders direct and control the business and policies of said respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc.

Respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., is an advertising agency for respondent Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc. Said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., in its business, designs, models, advertises, and fosters the sale of only such products as are offered for sale and sold by said respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., in cooperation with others.

Respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., publishes monthly and quarterly magazines under the title "Fashion Firsts," which are sold to retail dealers throughout the United States, including respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc. Respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., is the principal subscriber of said magazine service. Said magazines so purchased by said Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and said other retail dealers, are distributed to their patrons. When so distributed to the public, said magazines bear the imprint "Fashion Firsts, Inc.," and also the imprint of the particular retail dealer so distributing them.

Said "Fashion Firsts" magazines contain pictures and representations on live models of furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other articles of wearing apparel selected by Fashion Firsts, Inc., from a selected group of manufacturers who, in cooperation with, and at the instance and request of said respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., manufacture and sell and distribute said merchandise exclusively to said respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and other retail dealer subscribers to said "Fashion Firsts" magazines, who have the exclusive right, in their respective localities, for the sale of said merchandise so pictured and represented in said magazines, and who are advised by respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., of the names of the manufacturers from whom they may purchase said products.

Said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., caused and now causes said magazine, which it sells and distributes, to be shipped, through the mail and otherwise, in commerce from its principal place of business in the city of New York to retail dealers at their respective places of location in the various States of the United States, other than New York and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondent, Fashion Firsts, Inc., is now, and at all times since more than 1 year prior to September 14, 1937, has been, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in designing, modeling, advertising, and fostering the sale of garments and wearing apparel similar to or like the aforesaid products sold by respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and in publishing, circulating, selling, and distributing magazines and other periodicals and advertising media in connection therewith in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., in soliciting the sale and in the sale and distribution of garments and wearing apparel sold by respondent, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and in the sale and distribution of said magazine "Fashion Firsts," cooperating together and with others, now represent, and have represented and implied, that the garments and wearing apparel described and advertised in said magazines were designed, fabricated, tailored, and made in England. Said representations and implications are variously made by the said respondents through the use in said magazine, "Fashion Firsts," of pictorial representations displaying the British Royal Coat of Arms, consisting of a shield supported by a lion and a unicorn, upon which shield is superimposed a crown, under the whole of which is inscribed "Dieu et Mon Droit," and other pictorial representations and inscriptions of typical English scenes, one of which shows soldiers standing at attention, dressed to represent the Royal Hussars, and other scenes which show rural and other parts of the British Isles.

These representations of the British Royal Coat of Arms and typical English scenes are used in connection with pictorial representations of garments and other wearing apparel designated and described by distinctively English names, accompanied by statements referring to some part of the British Isles. These distinctively English names and accompanying statements, designations, descriptions, and representations are, in part, as follows:

The aforesaid designations, descriptions, and representations hereinabove set out, and the pictorial representations of the British Royal Coat of Arms and English soldiery and scenes, as used and employed by said respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., in cooperation with others, in describing said garments and wearing apparel sold in commerce as herein set out, are of English meaning, implication, and suggestion. Such designations, descriptions, and representations indicate to the retail dealers and to the consuming public, especially to persons of English blood or origin and to other purchasers having a preference for goods fabricated, manufactured, tailored, or made in England, that said garments and other wearing apparel thus designated, described, and represented were designed, fabricated, manufactured, tailored, and made in England upon authority of said Royal Warrant Holders' Association or members thereof, or by the British Government, or members of the British Royal Family, when in truth such is not the fact.

PAR. 5. The British Royal Coat of Arms is the property of the British Government and the right to its use and to the use of pictorial representations thereof is limited to the British Government and its functions, to the British Royal Family, and to Royal Warranty Holders and to members of the Royal Warrant Holders' Association, that is to say, those corporations, partnerships, and individuals who, as a result of long continued, faithful service to members of the British Royal Family, have been granted by them special permission to use said Coat of Arms, in recognition of said service.

The said respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., are not members of the Royal Warrant Holders' Association; and neither the British Government, nor any member of the British Royal Family, nor the Royal Warrant Holders' Association, or any member thereof, having the right to use the British Royal Coat of Arms, has ever granted or consented to the use of said respondents of the British Royal Coat of Arms, and the aforesaid use thereof by said respondents is without authority, warrant, or consent of the legal owners and users thereof.

The use by respondents of said pictures of the British Royal Coat of Arms and English soldiery and scenes, and said names and designations, in the manner hereinabove set out, serve as representations by respondents that the said garments and wearing apparel, so represented, sold, and transported, were designed, fabricated, manufactured, tailored, and made in England, and imported from England contrary to the facts.

PAR. 6. There are, among the competitors of respondents as referred to hereinabove, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of garments and wearing apparel similar to the garments and wearing apparel mentioned by respondents in their advertising, who do not advertise and represent that their garments and wearing apparel were designed, fabricated, tailored, or made in England, or imported from England, when such is not the fact.

PAR. 7. The use of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and practices on the part of respondents in the sale and offering for sale of their said furs, coats, suits, dresses, hats, and other wearing apparel, has had and now has, the tendency and capacity to cause retail dealers and members of the purchasing public to form the erroneous belief that respondents' said garments and wearing apparel are designed, fabricated, tailored, and made in England, and imported from England, when such is not the truth in fact. Such acts and practices also place in the hands of others a means whereby the public might be deceived. Acting under such erroneous beliefs, induced by the various misrepresentations of respondents as hereinabove detailed, many retail dealers and members of the purchasing public have purchased respondents' said garments and wearing apparel. As a result trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors engaged in selling, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, similar garments and wearing apparel which are truthfully advertised and represented. Thereby, substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Russeks Fifth Avenue, Inc., and Fashion Firsts, Inc., are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF
SHEFFIELD SILVER COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2638. Complaint, Nov. 21, 1935—Decision, Feb. 14, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale, to retail jewelers located throughout the United States, of silver-plated hollow ware made by the electro-plating process, in purchase of products of which process, absent fixed standard for composition of base metal or fineness or quantity of silver to be applied generally, public is obliged to depend upon reputation of maker or of trade name or brand attached to product, or representations of maker or seller thereof—

Used, in conduct of its business, corporate name including words "Sheffield Silver," and featured its said name containing word "Sheffield" on letter-heads and invoices distributed in interstate commerce, and on labels affixed to cartons in which its said products were packed and shipped, and supplied salesmen, for presentation to prospects, with photographs of its said ware featuring corporate name as aforesaid, notwithstanding fact its said products were not made or manufactured in accordance with Sheffield process, long theretofore employed and identified by name "Sheffield" with ware of high sales value made by historic process in question;

With result that its said products were advertised as "Sheffield Silverware by Sheffield Company," and with tendency and capacity to confuse and deceive purchasing public with regard to true nature and quality thereof, and to induce purchasers to buy same in and on account of mistaken belief that they were made by aforesaid Sheffield process, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to it from competitors engaged in sale in interstate commerce of products similar to those sold and distributed by it, and who truthfully and honestly advertise and represent the same, and of placing in hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retailers means and instrumentality whereby they might mislead members of purchasing public into erroneous belief that its said silver-plated hollow ware products were made in accordance with process aforesaid:

Held, That such practices, under the conditions and circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley and Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.

Mr. J. Leo Rothschild, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act of Congress, and in violation of Section 5 of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its principal office and place of business in Jersey City, N. J.; and is now and for more than 1 year last past, has been engaged in the business of manufacturing silver-plated hollow ware, and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail jewelry dealers located throughout the United States, and causes said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in Jersey City, State of New Jersey, or from its place of origin in other States, to purchasers thereof in the States of Tennessee, Texas, Georgia, and other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of business, and there is now, and there has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such silver-plated hollow ware, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of silver-plated hollow ware and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Competitors of the respondent, and the respondent, use, in the manufacture of their product, the electroplating process, which process involves the submersion of the base metal form in a chemical solution or bath and, by the electrolization of silicate salts, causes a coating of silver to adhere to this base metal form. The plated silver thus produced varies in quality and value according to the composition of the base metal, the workmanship upon its form and the decoration, the amount and fineness of the silver deposited upon it and left upon it after the finishing process, and the projection of the surfaces exposed to wear and abrasion. There is no fixed standard for the composition of the base metal, nor for the fineness or quality of silver to be applied generally or to wearing of surfaces, so that the purchasing public is obliged to depend upon the reputation of the maker of such plated silverware, or the reputation of the trade name or brand attached thereto, or the representations of the maker or seller thereof, in purchasing said silverware, since the quality of the ware cannot be determined except by laboratory tests.

PAR. 3. About the year 1742 there was originated in Sheffield, England, a process for the production of silver-plated ware, which process involved the welding of a silver plate to one or both sides of a sheet or bar of copper so as to form one thoroughly coherent mass, which was rolled to the desired gauge and subsequently worked into the desired form. The ware produced by this process was properly known as "copper-rolled plate," though this name was not used as a trade name or designation. The copper-rolled plate of Sheffield, England, acquired a very considerable reputation for excellency in quality, workmanship and design, and though the name "Sheffield" was not generally impressed upon or affixed to the ware itself, which was identified by the maker's registered marks, the copper-rolled plate came to be generally known and is still known as "Sheffield." While the cheaper electroplating process displaced the "Sheffield" copper-rolled plate which practically went out of production, there have been and still are, from time to time, importations of the "Sheffield" copper-rolled plate into the United States, and there is a considerable trade in "Sheffield" copper-rolled plate in this country at prices which reflect not only its value as silver-plated ware, but its artistic and historic value as well. The name "Sheffield" as applied to silverware at the present time, implies a quality and a value peculiar to the "Sheffield" copper-rolled plate itself as well as to the process itself, and the use of the term "Sheffield" is a representation thereof.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent, for more than 1 year last past, has been using as its corporate name, "Sheffield Silver Company, Inc.," and has caused said corporate name, containing the word "Sheffield," to be featured on its letter-heads and invoices distributed in interstate commerce and on its labels affixed to the cartons in which said products were packed and shipped in interstate commerce; and it has furnished to its salesmen for presentation to prospective customers in their sales talk, photographs of its silver-plated hollow ware featuring its corporate name; when, in truth and in fact said products sold by the respondent were not made or manufactured in accordance with the process used in the manufacture of Sheffield silver or Sheffield plate, nor are said products made or manufactured in Sheffield, England, in accordance with such process.

PAR. 5. The said representations made by the respondent in the use of the word "Sheffield" in its corporate name "Sheffield Silver Company, Inc.," as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, have, and have had, the capacity and tendency to deceive the purchasing public and induce purchasers to buy the products of respondent on account of the belief that said representations are true and that the respondent's product is "Sheffield," thus diverting trade to respondent from competitors of respondent engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of such products as are sold and distributed by respondent, which said competitors truthfully and honestly advertise and represent their products.

PAR. 6. The above acts and things done by the respondent as aforesaid, have tended to induce, and have induced, the purchase of respondent's products by various retail dealers of silver-plated hollow ware and have tended to divert trade, and have diverted trade, from competitors of respondent, and have thereby injured such competitors of respondent.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of the respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Such methods, acts, and practices constitute an unfair method of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 21st day of November 1935, issued, and on December 27, 1935, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Alden S. Bradley, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by J. Leo Rothschild and Walter S. Beck, attorneys for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an Examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs, and oral arguments by counsel aforesaid, in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its principal office and place of business in the city of Jersey City, N. J., and is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in manufacturing silver-plated hollow ware, and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail jewelry dealers located throughout the United States. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Jersey City, State of New Jersey, into the various States of the United States other than New Jersey, and in the District of Columbia, at the respective places of business of purchasers. There is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, a course of trade in commerce by said respondent in such silver-plated hollow ware between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of silver-plated hollow ware and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Competitors of respondent, and the respondent, use, in the manufacture of their products, the electroplating process, which process consists in taking a finished article, so far as its structure is concerned, and immersing it in a solution through which silver is electrolytically deposited on the base metal so that each part of the exposed surface is covered with a layer of silver. The plated silver thus produced varies in quality and value according to the composition of the base metal, the workmanship upon its form, the decoration, the amount and fineness of the silver deposited upon it, and left upon it after the finishing process.

There is no fixed standard for the composition of the base metal nor for the fineness or quantity of silver to be applied generally, so that the purchasing public, in purchasing said silverware, is obliged to depend upon the reputation of the maker of such plated silverware, or the reputation of the trade name or brand attached thereto, or the representations of the maker or seller thereof, since the quality of the silverware cannot be determined except by laboratory tests.

PAR. 3. About 200 years ago a process was developed at Sheffield, England, by which sheets of copper and silver were fused, then rolled to sheets of the desired thickness, and from these sheets various articles of hollow ware were made. Hollow ware made by this process is of high quality and has been known in the silver industry as "Sheffield." The word "Sheffield," when applied to silver-plated ware, has a sales value. The Sheffield process is not now generally employed in the manufacture of hollow ware, but existing pieces of ware made by that process carry a high sales value. The name "Sheffield" has thus become identified in the public mind with a high quality of silverware manufactured by the Sheffield process.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent, for more than 2 years last past, has been using as its corporate name Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., and has caused said corporate name containing the word "Sheffield" to be featured on its letterheads, and invoices distributed in interstate commerce and on its labels affixed to the cartons in which said products are packed and shipped in commerce as herein described, and has furnished its salesmen, for presentation to prospective customers in their sales talks, photographs of its silver-plated hollow ware featuring its corporate name. In truth and in fact, said products sold by the respondent were not made or manufactured in accordance with the process used in the manufacture of Sheffield silver or Sheffield plate, nor are said products made or manufactured in Sheffield, England, in accordance with said process.

As a result of the use of the word "Sheffield" in the manner herein described, in connection with the sale, advertising, and distribution of silver-plated hollow ware products of the Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., a retailer of Atlanta, Ga., advertised respondent's products in the Atlanta Journal, a newspaper having an interstate circulation, as "Sheffield Silverware by Sheffield Company."

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent in using the word "Sheffield" as part of its corporate name and otherwise, as herein described, in connection with the sale and distribution of silver-plated hollow ware in commerce, as herein set out, have had and have the tendency and capacity to confuse and deceive the purchasing public with regard to the true nature and quality of its products, and to induce purchasers to buy such products on account of the mistaken belief that respondent's products are made by the Sheffield process herein described. Trade is thereby unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of products similar to those sold and distributed by respondent, which said competitors truthfully and honestly advertise and represent their products.

Further, the acts and practices of respondent, as herein detailed, serve to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers may mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said silver-plated hollow ware products manufactured by the Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., are manufactured in accordance with the Sheffield process hereinbefore described.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid practices of said respondent, Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., under the conditions and circumstances hereinbefore set forth, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sheffield Silver Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its silver plated hollow ware, produced by electroplating, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the word "Sheffield" in its corporate name or in any other manner, so as to represent or imply that said electroplated hollow ware products are "Sheffield" or are made by the Sheffield process.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WILLARD F. MAIN, DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE TRADE
NAME AND STYLE OF W. F. MAIN COMPANY, THE MACHEN COMPANY, ETC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2892. Complaint, Aug. 8, 1936—Decision, Feb. 14, 1938

Where an individual engaged in distribution and sale of coin operated vending machines and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities usually sold or vended through such machines; in selling his aforesaid machines through salesmen instructed by him in, and supplied with, examples of high-pressure salesmanship and with suggested forms of contact advertisements for their use in newspapers in communities in which they were canvassing—

- (a) Falsely represented, through such contact advertisements under such headings as "Help Wanted," "Male Help Wanted," "Employment," "Local Manager Wanted," "Position Open," "Manager Wanted," "County Manager Wanted," or headings of similar import and effect, in classified advertising pages of newspapers or periodicals and through such statements therein as "Manufacturer, well-rated, wants RELIABLE MAN in (name of town) TO HANDLE BUSINESS PROVEN TO BE PROFITABLE," etc., "Field Superintendent will be in ——— for a few days to select through personal interviews, a local Manager for ——— and vicinity. We want a man of integrity and average ability to look after business here. $1,500 cash investment required. Investment protected. We are a national organization rated up to half million dollars. References required," etc., and others of similar tenor, that it had such positions or jobs at its disposal and was offering employment to persons who answered said advertisements;
- (b) Represented through his said agents, to prospective purchasers or "operators" of his said machines, thus contacted, that prospect's investment was fully protected and that cash return of 120 percent was guaranteed thereon and that if machines operating over a period of time varying from 18 months downward did not make such return, said individual would repurchase same at full purchase price, plus 6 percent interest, and less specified deductions, and that such undertaking was fully protected by guarantee bond and by his credit rating (operating under any one of various trade names employed by him) by Dun & Bradstreet, in claimed amounts ranging from $300,000 to $500,000;

Facts being contract employed by him in dealing with operators thus secured embodied large number of conditions precedent to such undertaking, or pretended undertaking, and it was his practice in case of operators failing to realize 120 percent on their investment and, after seeking diligently to comply with numerous terms and conditions imposed as aforesaid, to take advantage of such supposed repurchase agreement, to keep putting off such operators and finally refuse outright to repurchase machines in question, so that many of them, lacking funds, were unable successfully to prosecute suits instituted or were forced to settle for trivial amounts;

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, to prospects to whom his salesmen sold as many machines as prospect's cash on hand or to be raised would purchase, that he wanted a reliable operator in that particular community or territory to operate a chain of his machines and that he was a manufacturer and distributor of candies, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities usually sold in such machines, with his primary interest in the sale of the commodities, and that machines which operator was obtaining for cash were only beginning of a chain, which he would sell on terms of one-third credit or note, and two-thirds to be paid from one-third of profits derived from operation of machines purchased for cash over specified period of time, and that average minimum monthly net return from operation was $2 from each, with much higher maximum, and prepared and forwarded to operators letters or testimonials grossly exaggerating results obtained from operation of his said machines;

Facts being separate contract which prospective credit purchaser was required to sign made such credit expansion plan contingent upon prospect's furnishing to company, credit information or security satisfactory to his credit department, or payment of initial one-third by check or draft, it was known that prospective purchaser had no available credit recommendations or references and was raising all of his available cash for initial purchases, and purchasers, after consummation of initial transaction and signing of contract, almost uniformly found that said individual would not accept their note for one-third of machines to be purchased on credit, and that their credit was not satisfactory to his credit department, and misleading testimonials aforesaid were secured by him through gifts of one or two of his machines to operators for their signatures to such testimonials or letters, which did not represent average experience of operator; and

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that exclusive territory would be allotted to prospective purchaser for operation of machines to be purchased and no other would be sold or allowed to operate therein during continuance of operator's contract, and that competitors, and particularly those distributing cheaper machines, would not grant any such exclusive arrangement, but even sold machines to a number of people within same particular territory, and that contracts for locations of the machines had been obtained from operators of various business establishments, agreeing in some instances personally to locate and place machines for prospects and in many instances exhibiting separate location contracts, and in many instances stating to purchasers regardless of wording of the two contracts, that said individual would not accept cash contract without also accepting credit one, and in one or two instances that latter contract had already been approved;

Facts being said individual, operating under his various trade names, in many instances sold his machines to different purchasers within supposedly exclusive territory and thereby unfairly appropriated territory of other operators, granted to many purchasers identical territory already allotted under operator's term of contract, neither contract contained any provision for the locating or placing of machines which salesmen in almost every instance falsely agreed to, location contracts furnished operators were unauthorized by owners and in some instances at fictitious locations, and salesmen, after the signing of the contract and agreements, in many cases, to supervise or place machines for the operator, immediately left locality;

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

With effect of confusing, misleading, and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous beliefs as to actual or usual profits to be derived from operation of said individual's vending machines and into belief that their investment guaranteed them return of 120 percent, as aforesaid, and that, failing such, they were entitled to refund of their money, as above stated, and were entitled to benefit of additional machines on credit, as aforesaid, by giving their personal notes for one-third of purchase price, with remainder to be paid out of earnings, and with exclusive territory for operation of machines, and with result, as consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading representations, that such public purchased substantial volume of his said machines and confectionery products and trade was diverted to him from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of coin operated vending machines and candies, confectionery, peanuts, and commodities for resale therein, and who truthfully represent the possible or usual earnings of the operators of their machines and the terms and conditions of sale; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Willard F. Main, an individual doing business under the trade name and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company and New Specialty Company, being hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Willard F. Main, is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company and New Specialty Company, with his principal place of business at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The principal office and place of business of all the aforesaid companies are located in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in the same building which houses the W. F.

Main Company. The respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of distributing and selling in commerce, as hereinafter set out, coin-operated vending machines and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines, and causes said vending machines, candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities, when sold, to be shipped and transported from his place of business in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to operators and purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Iowa. The vending machines sold by the respondent are those that are placed in public business places where members of the public may secure therefrom candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities by inserting a coin in the machine.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Willard F. Main, doing business under the trade name and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, and New Specialty Company, is in direct and substantial competition with individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in offering for sale and selling in interstate commerce among the several States of the United States, similar coin-operated vending machines.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, said Willard F. Main sells his vending machines through salesmen whom he employs on a commission basis; each of the purchasers of such machines, termed by him in his advertising literature "Operators," is required to purchase enough machines to equip and operate a "chain"; and a contract is executed and entered into between said Willard F. Main, doing business under all the aforesaid trade names, which contract, among other things, contains the following provision:

* * * The W. F. Main Company (or other trade name of respondent as is the case) guarantees that if a cash return of 120% is not realized on the investment in the machines ordered above, from the operation of a vending machine route for a period of 18 months after the receipt thereof, it will repurchase the same, provided—

Then follow many conditions to be performed by the purchaser, which may be summarized as follows:

- (1) Machines put in prompt operation;
- (2) Buy all products (for use in the machine) from respondent;
- (3) Keep machines in good order and clean;
- (4) Set machine to vend at 70 cents to 85 cents per pound;
- (5) Rotate the products;
- (6) Notify company of all locations and changes thereof;

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

- (7) Make changes of location to keep same in most profitable places;
- (8) Furnish report each six weeks, showing location and kind of products sold and amount, date serviced and the amount taken in by each machine;
- (9) Operate the machine with skill, care and diligence;
- (10) Notify company if machine is out of order and obtain repair parts immediately.

Thereupon, in said contract it is stated that—

It is agreed that the sole and only remedy shall be that the company will repurchase all the machines ordered above, if in good condition, and any remaining confection, at the full purchase price paid therefor, plus 6 percent interest per annum, less the retail price of products vended, after deducting 20% thereof to cover location rental.

* * * * *

In consideration for the above liberal guarantee provision, purchaser agrees that he will not rescind this agreement for any reason inhering in and inducing the contract.

Then follows an exclusive territory provision in the contract, as follows:

The W. F. Main Company (or other trade name of respondent as is the case) agrees from this date to sell the "Magina" model vending machines (or other machines of the style and type of other trade names) to purchaser herein exclusively for operation in _____ (City), _____ (State), so long as purchaser complies with the foregoing conditions and buys additional machines for _____ days until _____ machines are in operation, and continues to actively operate all of his machines.

Respondent furnishes to his salesmen much literature picturing the glowing success of vending machine operators, representing that each machine makes a minimum of $2 per month, emphasizing the fact that the more machines each operator has in use the more the profits to him depicting his guaranteed protection of investment against loss—some of which are as follows:

Regardless of where you start, you can develop a large route if you want to, as our credit plan enables the operator to go ahead without investing additional capital. It enables the operator to add machines and still make money for himself from their operation while the machines are paying for themselves. Our credit plan is very fair and wonderfully attractive, because it shows the faith we ourselves have in the earning power of these penny confection shops.

You can succeed with us. Our plan provides a history of 120% return, the first eighteen months, and we provide for this plainly in our sales agreement.

You are guarded against loss by our guarantee.

In this last paragraph it is stated, in small print, that—

We will repurchase your machines, plus 6% interest, just as provided in the order.

In said literature, under the heading "Earnings," it is stated that the average is over $4 per month per machine.

Another paragraph in said literature to be furnished proposed purchasers is entitled "The Liberal Credit Expansion Plan," in which it is stated that the initial one-third of the purchase price of additional machines may be paid by an acceptable 12-months' note, without interest, and the balance payable only from one-third of the net profits from the operation of said machines over a period of 30 months, and that after the initial purchase, the operator can have the right of expanding under this credit plan until a route of approximately 400 machines is formed.

At the time the proposed purchaser or "operator" signs the contract for the purchase of the first of the chain of machines, he is required also to execute another contract for a number of other machines, varying in number, according to the prospective purchaser's or "operator's" cash on hand. This contract for the purchase of additional machines plainly provides that the company will accept his personal note, payable in 12 months from date, for one-third of the purchase price, and the company will accept in full payment of the balance of the two-thirds of the price, a sum equal to one-third of the cash return from the merchandise sold through the machines purchased over a period of 30 months, provided the prospective purchaser, or "operator," furnishes to the company, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, credit information or security satisfactory to the company's credit department. If this note is not accepted by the company's credit department, the prospective purchaser or "operator" agrees to pay for this initial one-third by check or draft.

Although the wording in this last-named contract is clear, nevertheless, the respondent supplies to his salesmen literature and sales talk which said salesmen use to an unfair advantage upon the prospective purchaser or "operator," in that the salesmen know, in most instances, that the prospective purchaser or "operator" has no available credit recommendations or references except his initial cash outlay which they obtain; but they represent to him that his note will be acceptable, and in some cases go to the extent that they then and there approve the same.

The respondent, W. F. Main, trading and doing business under the various trade names hereinbefore enumerated, has granted in his contracts, and still does grant, to two or more different "operators" the same exclusive territory. This he accomplishes by using a different trade name in his sale to the respective operators.

Respondent prepares testimonial letters, not truthfully stating the facts, which he sends to operators and offers them one or two free machines if they will sign the same and return to him. Respondent further sends his check for $2, to local banks, with the request that they obtain a testimonial from the local operator.

Complaint

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the use by the respondent, operating under his various trade names, of his advertising literature and representations made by salesmen duly authorized to make such statements, has the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive purchasers or "operators" as to the real or usual profits to be derived from the operation of respondent's vending machines; also to confuse, mislead and deceive prospective purchasers or "operators" into the belief that their investment guarantees them a return of 120 percent and that the failure to earn such a percentage will entitle them to a refund of their money plus 6 percent interest; also to confuse, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers, or "operators" into the belief that they can purchase additional machines, as provided in said contracts, by giving their personal note for one-third of the purchase price, the remaining two-thirds to be paid out of one-third of the earnings from the sale of products in said vending machines; also to confuse, mislead, and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers or "operators" into the belief that they are obtaining an exclusive territory for the operation of said machines; also to confuse, mislead, and deceive prospective purchasers or operators as to the real value and earning capacity of said machines by the use of false and misleading testimonials, as aforesaid, when as a matter of fact, the earnings from respondent's machines do not average $4 or even $2 per month each, and respondent attaches so many conditions precedent on the part of the purchasers or "operators" in their contracts as to make it impossible for them to fully and substantially comply therewith and obtain the benefit of the repurchase agreement, and the 120 percent profit guarantee is a mere snare and subterfuge; also respondent uniformly refuses to accept the notes of the purchasers or operators for the third down payment on the additional machines and refuses them credit, and in the majority of cases, respondent's salesmen know that the credit of the prospective purchasers or "operators" will not be accepted, but misrepresent the true facts and say that said credit will be honored; also, the respondent, operating under his various trade names, in several instances did sell his machines to different purchasers within supposedly exclusive territory, using a different trade name in each of the purchaser's contracts, thereby unfairly appropriating the other "operator's" territory; also, the aforesaid testimonials do not represent the average experience of an operator, but in certain instances contain untrue statements and are procured through gifts or other inducements by the respondent to certain operators.

PAR. 5. There are many persons, firms, and corporations who manufacture, sell and distribute in interstate commerce coin-operated vending machines and coin-operated vending machines supplied with candy, confections, or other commodities similar to those of respondent, who truthfully represent the usual earning capacity of their products and their terms and conditions of sale, and who are in substantial competition with respondent.

PAR. 6. The foregoing false and misleading statements and representations of the respondent described and set forth herein have the capacity and tendency unfairly to divert trade to the respondent, Willard F. Main, trading as W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company and New Specialty Company, from competitors who sell similar products in interstate commerce, and to disrupt, demoralize, and otherwise injure the entire trade in coin-operated vending machines and in coin-operated vending machines supplied with the commodity for which such machines are to be used. The acts and practices of the respondent aforesaid have the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial number of prospective purchasers of coin-operated vending machines into the erroneous belief that said representations are true, and cause a substantial number of said prospective purchasers, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase the coin-operated vending machines of the respondent to the injury of said purchasers and to the injury of said competitors.

PAR. 7. The above acts and practices of the respondent are to the injury of the public and of respondent's competitors in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on August 8, 1936, issued, and on August 12, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Willard F. Main, an individual doing business under the trade names and styles of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, and New Specialty Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Morton Nesmith, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Elmer A. Johnson and Charles Rowan, attorneys for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Subsequently, the Commission closed its case and the respondent, through his counsel, waived the taking of further testimony on his behalf. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, the filing of briefs having been waived and oral argument of counsel for respondent not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Willard F. Main, is an individual doing business under the trade names and styles of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, and New Specialty Company, with his principal place of business at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The respondent, Willard F. Main, is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged under the aforesaid trade names in the business of distributing and selling coin-operated vending machines, and also candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities usually sold or vended through said machines, and has caused, and still causes, such vending machines, candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities, when sold, to be shipped and transported from his place of business in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to purchasers or "operators" thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Iowa. Respondent has sold and distributed, and still sells and distributes, a substantial portion of the coin-operated vending machines, and the confectionery products generally vended therein, which are sold and distributed throughout the United States. The respondent styles or designates a purchaser of his machines as an "operator," and, in the majority of cases, sells a number or chain of such machines to one purchaser or "operator." These machines are placed or located in public business establishments by the purchaser or "operator" or by respondent's salesmen, and the members of the public may, and do, secure candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities therefrom by inserting a coin and turning a knob or handle, pulling a lever, or other mechanical process.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Willard F. Main, doing business under the trade name and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, and New Specialty Company, is now, and has been, in direct and substantial competition with persons, firms, and corporations engaged in offering for sale and selling in commerce among and between the several States of the United States, coin-operated vending machines, candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities similar to those usually vended through respondent's machines.

PAR. 3. In connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of respondent's products, respondent employs salesmen on a commission basis. Before these salesmen are permitted to handle respondent's products they are given a correspondence course of instructions of eight or more lessons. The lessons comprising this correspondence course of instructions, together with the correspondence from respondent's sales managers, are replete with instructions and examples of "high pressure salesmanship."

The respondent also furnishes to his salesmen suggested forms of advertisements which he recommends that they run in newspapers of the local communities which they are canvassing, and a number of salesmen have inserted said advertisements to contact or "pull in" prospective purchasers. A few of such advertisements are as follows:

These advertisements are intended to be, and have been, run under such headings as "Help Wanted," "Male Help Wanted," "Employment," and similar headings.

In response to the above advertisements and other solicitations by respondent's salesmen, prospective purchasers or "operators" have contacted and called upon respondent's salesmen. At this interview or subsequent ones, the salesmen have ascertained how much cash the prospective purchaser or "operator" has on hand, or can possibly raise, and have thereupon proceeded to sell the prospect as many coin-operated vending machines as the cash on hand, or to be raised, will purchase. The salesmen have then represented to the prospective purchaser that his investment is fully protected, that a cash return of 120 percent is guaranteed upon the investment, and, if the machines operating over a period of time varying from 18 months downward do not make this return, that the respondent will repurchase the machines at the full purchase price thereof, plus 6 percent interest, less specified deductions; and further that all of this is fully protected by guaranty bond in the amount of $10,000, and also by a credit rating of respondent, operating under any one of his trade names, by Dun & Bradstreet, in amounts ranging from $300,000 to $500,000. The salesmen have also represented that the respondent wanted a reliable man or "operator" in that particular community or territory to operate a chain of his machines, that respondent was a manufacturer and distributor of candies, confections, peanuts, and other commodities usually sold through these machines, and was interested primarily in the sale of these commodities and not in the sale of vending machines, and, further, that the machines which the prospective purchaser or "operator" was obtaining for cash were only the beginning of a chain of machines which respondent would sell to the prospective purchaser or "operator" on terms of one-third credit or note, and two-thirds from one-third of the profits derived from the operation of the machines purchased for cash over a specified period of time. The salesmen then represented that an exclusive territory would be allotted to the prospective purchaser or "operator" for the operation of the machines to be purchased, and that no other purchaser or "operator" would be sold or allowed to operate respondent's machines within that territory during the continuance of the "operator's" contract. The salesmen also represented that respondent's competitors, and particularly those distributing cheaper machines, do not grant any such exclusive territory arrangement and even sold a number of machines to a number of people within the same particular territory. The salesmen also represented that respondent's machines were the best money making vendors on the market, and that the average minimum net return from the operation of each of these machines for 1 month was $2, and the maximum net return varied up to much higher figures. The salesmen then represented and elaborated upon the flexible credit expansion plan of the respondent which would enable the "operator" to develop a large route or chain of these machines without the investment of additional capital and without interest on the loan. A few of these representations are as follows:

Regardless of where you start, you can develop a large route if you want to, as our credit plan enables the operator to go ahead without investing additional capital. It enables the operator to add machines and still make money for himself from their operation while the machines are paying for themselves. Our credit plan is very fair and wonderfully attractive, because it shows the faith we ourselves have in the earning power of these penny confection shops.

You can succeed with us. Our plan provides a history of 120% return, the first 18 months, and we provide for this plainly in our Sales Agreement.

You are guarded against loss by our guarantee.

Please understand that this estimate of $2 net per machine per month is an arbitrary estimate. Some machines earn much more and some much less. The actual income will depend upon the skill, ability, and diligence with which the operator does the work.

The salesmen have also represented that contracts for locations for the machines have been obtained from the operators of various business establishments, and, in some instances, have agreed personally to locate and place the machines for the prospective purchaser or "operator" at these locations. In many instances, the salesmen have shown and exhibited separate location contracts.

All of the above representations made by respondent's salesmen have been, and are, actually or impliedly authorized by the respondent. The salesmen are directly authorized by respondent to make many of the misrepresentations above set out and respondent furnishes such salesmen with sales promotion lessons, instructions, and other literature incorporating such representations and recommending the use thereof in the sale of his machines. Respondent thus places in the hands of such salesmen a means to further said misrepresentations on apparent authority from him.

PAR. 4. After the respondent's salesmen have led the prospect to believe that all of the foregoing representations are true and have pictured the glowing success of other "operators," they have then informed the prospect of the price of these machines which have ranged per machine with 20 pounds of confections, from $28.50 upward. If the prospective purchaser is sold on the idea, a contract is produced which, among other things, contains the following:

The company (which may be any of respondent's trade names) agrees that if a cash return of 120% is not realized on the investment in the machines ordered above from the operation of same on a vending machine route for a period of 18 months after receipt thereof, it will repurchase same provided: (Explanation in parenthesis supplied.)

Then follow many conditions to be performed by the "operator," which may be summarized as follows:

- (1) Machines put in prompt operation.
- (2) Buy all products (for use in machines) from respondent.
- (3) Keep machines in good working order, clean, and attractive appearance and well filled with respondent's products.
- (4) Keep machine adjusted to vend products at an average of 65 cents to 85 cents per pound.
- (5) Rotate the different kinds of products.
- (6) Notify the company of all locations and changes thereof giving dates, names and addresses.
- (7) Keep machines located in the most profitable places.
- (8) Furnish a report to company every 30 days (6 weeks in some cases) giving name and business address of person with whom each machine is then located, the date serviced, the amount and kind of products vended, and the amount of money taken in by each machine, so that the company will know what the machines are doing.

(9) Continuously operate the machines with skill, care, and diligence.

(10) Pay all obligations entered into with the company incurred under the contract or any other contract, promptly when due.

(11) Notify company by registered mail if machine is out of order and obtain repair parts immediately.

Then follows a provision that:

In the event all the provisions herein to be performed by the operator, which are conditions precedent, are complied with by him, and if the above named cash return resulting from the operation of the above machines for the 18 months period is less than 120%, it is agreed that the sole and only remedy shall be that the company will repurchase all machines ordered above if in good condition with the exception of the usual wear from ordinary operation and any remaining confection at the full price paid therefor, plus 6% interest per annum, less the retail price of the products vended after deducting 20% thereof to cover location rental * * *

At the conclusion of said contract, and immediately above the places for the signature, there appears the following:

The company (name of one of respondent's trade names) agrees from this date to sell the above described (type) of Vending Machine to operator herein exclusive for operation in----- so long as operator complies with the foregoing conditions and buys additional machines every 30 days until ----- machines are in operation, and continues to actively operate all his machines. (Explanation in parentheses supplied.)

PAR. 5. If the purchaser or "operator" has been sold on the idea of purchasing a chain of machines and has not the cash available but wants to take advantage of the flexible credit expansion plan of respondent, he is then required to execute another contract providing for the purchase of additional machines. This contract, known as a credit order blank, among other things, contains the following:

This purchase is made with the understanding that the company will accept in full payment of $\frac{2}{3}$ of the price of above units a sum equal to $\frac{1}{3}$ the cash return from the merchandise sold through the above machines during the period of 30 months * * *

I am to have the privilege of giving my note without interest until due, payable in 12 months from the date hereof for my initial one-third of the purchase price of the units purchased hereunder, upon furnishing to the company at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, credit information or security satisfactory to the company's Credit Department; or, I will pay for this initial one-third of the purchase price by check or draft, payable to the order of the company, all before shipment is made; * * *

Although the wording of the foregoing contracts is as above set out, nevertheless, the respondent supplies to his salesmen literature and sales instructions as hereinbefore referred to which contain representations different from the provisions of these contracts, which said salesmen use to unfair advantage upon prospective purchasers or "operators" and which can be and have been used by respondent's salesmen in mulcting from a gullible and unsuspecting public many thousands of dollars. There is no provision in either contract for the location or placing of machines, yet salesmen have agreed, in almost every instance in the record, to furnish locations and have furnished to "operators" separate location contracts a number of which were unauthorized by the owner of the location and in some instances the locations were fictitious. The record shows also that, in many instances, respondent's salesmen have agreed to either supervise or actually have the machines placed for the operator, and, in a great number of instances, have skipped town immediately after the sale. There is evidence that respondent's salesmen have known in most instances that the prospective purchaser or "operator" has no available credit recommendations or references, and is raising all of his available cash for the initial purchase. This initial cash outlay is almost always obtained by the salesmen in the purchase under the first contract, but the salesmen have, in many instances, stated to the purchasers that regardless of the wording of the contracts the respondent will not accept the cash contract without accepting the credit contract. In one or two instances, salesmen have stated to prospective purchasers that the company had approved the credit contract by wire to them.

PAR. 6. After the deal has been consummated and the contract signed, the purchasers or "operators" almost uniformly find that the respondent will not accept their note for the one-third of the machines to be purchased on credit; that their credit is not satisfactory to the credit department in Cedar Rapids. In many instances, purchasers or "operators" executed only the cash contract. At the expiration of the time provided for in the contract, and after failing to realize 120 percent on their investment, and after having sought diligently to comply with all the terms and conditions imposed upon them, many purchasers or "operators" have sought to obtain a repurchase of the machines, as provided for in the contract. The evidence discloses that respondent has almost uniformly stalled them along, and finally has refused outright to repurchase the machines. Many operators have instituted suit at great expense to them, and because of their lack of funds have been unable to prosecute successfully these suits, or have been forced to settle for trivial amounts.

Many purchasers or "operators" have been granted exclusive territory for certain localities wherein the respondent has previously, or subsequently and during said "operator's" term of contract, granted the identical territory to other purchasers or "operators." Respondent also has prepared and forwarded to "operators" letters or testimonials, grossly exaggerating the results obtained from the operations of his machines, and has offered and given one or two of his machines free to them for their signatures to such testimonials or letters. He has also sent his check to local banks together with a copy of such letters, asking that the bank obtain the signature of one of his "operators," and said letters have been signed, returned to, and used by respondent in the sale of other machines.

PAR. 7. The respondent attaches so many conditions precedent on the part of the purchasers or "operators" in their contracts as to make it impossible for them fully and substantially to comply therewith and obtain the benefit of the repurchase agreement, and the 120 percent profit guarantee is mere snare and subterfuge. Respondent almost uniformly refuses to accept the notes of the purchasers or "operators" for the third down payment on the additional machines, and refuses them credit, and, in the majority of cases, respondent's salesmen know that the credit of the prospective purchasers or "operators" will not be accepted, but misrepresent the true facts and represent that said credit will be honored. The respondent, operating under his various trade names, in many instances, has sold his machines to different purchasers within supposedly exclusive territory, thereby unfairly appropriating the other "operator's" territory. The aforesaid testimonials do not represent the average experience of an "operator," but in certain instances contain untrue statements, and are obtained by respondent through gifts or other inducements to certain "operators," and these facts are not disclosed to prospective "operators"; also, respondent has no jobs or positions to offer or give as might be inferred from his advertisements "Local Manager Wanted," "County Manager Wanted," and "Help Wanted," but the same are in reality contact advertisements used in connection with the sale of respondent's products; and also, respondent does not furnish or agree to furnish locations for the machines sold by him.

PAR. 8. Many of respondent's competitors who sell and distribute, or manufacture, sell and distribute coin-operated vending machines and candy, peanuts, confectionery, and commodities for sale therein, do not, in any way, misrepresent the terms and conditions of sale or earnings of said machines and commodities.

Order

26 F. T. C.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to confuse, mislead, and deceive and has confused, misled, and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into erroneous beliefs as to the actual or usual profits to be derived from the operation of respondent's vending machines; that their investment guarantees them a return of 120 percent, and that failure to earn such a percentage will entitle them to a refund of their money plus 6 percent interest; that they can purchase additional machines as provided in said contract, by giving their personal notes for one-third of the purchase price, the remaining two-thirds to be paid out of one-third of the earnings from the sale of products in said vending machines, and that they are obtaining an exclusive territory for the operation of said machines. As a consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's machines and confectionery products with a result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing coin-operated vending machines, candies, confections, peanuts, and commodities for resale therein, who truthfully represent the possible or actual earnings of the operators of their machines and the terms and conditions of sale. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Willard F. Main, an individual, doing business under the trade names and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, and New Specialty Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, the respondent having waived the taking of further testimony and the filing of briefs on his behalf and not having requested oral argument and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent Willard F. Main, individually, or doing business under the trade name and style of W. F. Main Company, The Machen Company, Standard Mercantile Company, Appleton Novelty Company, or New Specialty Company, or under any other name or through any corporate or other device, his servants, employees, and representatives, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia of coin-operated vending machines, candies, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines, forthwith cease and desist:

1. From representing directly or indirectly, that a cash return of 120 percent on the investment is guaranteed from the operation of his machines for a period of 12 or 18 months, or for any other stated period of time.

2. From representing directly or indirectly that unless a specified percentage is realized by the purchaser from the operation of his machines over a specified period of time under stated conditions precedent he will repurchase the same at the purchaser's cost plus interest, unless and until he does so repurchase said machines, when the conditions precedent have been complied with or performed and said percentage is not realized from the operation of said machines over said specified period of time.

3. From representing directly or indirectly, that a profit of 120 percent, or any other sum, will be or is guaranteed from the operation of respondent's vending machines when in truth and in fact respondent's contracts do not so specify, and no guarantee is, or is intended to be, carried out.

4. From representing directly or indirectly, to purchasers or operators or prospective purchasers or operators, that they obtain an exclusive territory for the operation of said machines unless the territory described in their contracts is in truth and in fact exclusive and unless during the life of said contracts the respondent refrains from selling or offering for sale his vending machines in such territory to any person, firm, or corporation other than the holders of such contracts.

5. From representing directly or indirectly, that each machine nets a minimum average of $2 per month or any other amount, when such is not the fact.

6. From representing directly or indirectly, through the use of such statements or expressions as "at least" or "as much as," or any other statements or expressions of similar import and effect or through any other means or devices or in any other manner, that his machine's minimum, usual and customary, or maximum earnings for any fixed period of time, are any net amount in excess of amounts actually earned during said fixed period of time by the average operators of respondent's machines under normal conditions in due course of business.

7. From representing directly or indirectly, that additional machines can be purchased on a flexible credit expansion plan, when in truth and in fact the respondent or his servants, employees, or representatives have knowledge that the purchasers thereof have not sufficient credit rating to obtain the benefits of this plan.

8. From representing directly or indirectly, to prospective purchasers that when and if said purchasers buy or contract to buy any of respondent's machines for cash, that simultaneously therewith or because of this cash purchase respondent will grant them the privilege of buying additional machines on credit, unless and until respondent is prepared to and does grant them such credit privilege.

9. From representing directly or indirectly, through advertisements inserted by respondent's salesmen in classified advertising pages of newspapers, magazines, or other advertising literature, under such headings as "Help Wanted," "Male Help Wanted," "Employment," "Local Manager Wanted," "Position Open," "Manager Wanted," "County Manager Wanted," or headings of similar import and effect or through the use of any other means, that respondent has such positions or jobs at his disposal or that such employment is being, or will be, offered to persons who answer said advertisements, when said advertisements are in reality contact advertisements used in connection with the sale of respondent's vending machines and confections.

10. From representing directly or indirectly, that contracts for the location of machines to be sold to the prospective purchaser or operator have been obtained unless and until such is the fact.

11. From representing directly or indirectly that respondent is primarily engaged in the manufacture and sale of candies and similar commodities and that the sale by him of coin-operated vending ma-

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 90 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF PASCAL COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2945. Complaint, Oct. 15, 1936—Decision, Feb. 16, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of "Breatheasy," preparation, and atomizer or "nebulizer" for treatment of asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and in the sale and distribution thereof through distributors and drug stores in the various States, in substantial competition with those engaged in interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for, and useful in, treatment of such diseases, and of atomizers for use in connection therewith; in extensively advertising its said product through various newspapers of interstate circulation and through radio broadcasts having interstate transmission, and through booklets and circulars issued and distributed by it—

Represented that said preparation was a cure or remedy for asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, which could be used successfully without following any particular form of diet, and constituted a harmless remedy which would return the user to vigorous, buoyant health, had therapeutic value also in chronic bronchitis and numerous other specified ailments and conditions, including heart disease and cardiac distress, various skin diseases, and inflammations of the nose and throat, etc., and in neuralgia and neuritis, and was the one sure relief available for treatment of asthma, and a new medicament for such treatment, through such statements, among others, as "FOR ASTHMA * * * THE GREATEST DISCOVERY. Created by a physician to successfully cure his own asthma * * *." " * * * only one Remedy for ASTHMA And that Remedy is Breatheasy," " * * * beneficial, according to authorities, in asthma and chronic bronchitis, in heart disease and cardiac distress, in gastric ulcer, * * *," " * * * the one, sure asthmatic relief available today * * * gives a sense of well-being, a return to vigorous, buoyant health * * *," " * * * no diet is necessary. You may eat anything you may desire," "Introduces a new medicament of scientific formula which applies synthetic adrenal gland extract vaporized * * *," etc.;

Facts being asthma, as classified by medical profession, may result from many varying causes, no specific cure for asthma is recognized by said profession, and such preparation is not cure therefor nor for hay fever, and, while preparation in question, as well as many other remedies, containing adrenalin, may in some cases temporarily relieve asthma, it does not constitute treatment therefor, and use thereof will not bring about or restore vigorous, buoyant health or give absolute and instant relief to sufferers therefrom, should not be taken at all in many cases in which diet is essential, and is no less dangerous to user because taken through "nebulizer" than if taken through hypodermic injection, and is not beneficial in treatment of chronic bronchitis, heart disease and various other ailments and conditions specified, and, as equivalent, through epinephrin content, of synthetic adrenalin, is not new medicament;

Complaint

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive public into erroneous belief that said "Breatheasy" was in truth and in fact a remedy and cure for asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and that in use thereof it was not necessary to follow any particular diet, and to induce such purchasing public to buy said "Breatheasy" in preference to other preparations designed for treatment of aforesaid diseases and offered for sale by manufacturers, retailers and distributors, and with result of unfairly diverting trade to it from such manufacturers, retailers and distributors of such other preparations who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained in the use thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Henry M. White, trial examiner.

Mr. Reuben J. Martin for the Commission.

Mr. Clarence L. Gere, of Seattle, Wash., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pascal Company, Inc., has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Pascal Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 1014 American Bank Building, Second Street at Madison, in the city of Seattle, within the State of Washington. Said respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of a product known as "Breatheasy" for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of an atomizer or so-called "nebulizer" for administering the preparation "Breatheasy," and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said "Breatheasy" and the nebulizer, when sold by it, to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the State of Washington and in various States of the United States other than the State of Washington. There is now and has been for a long time, to wit, for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in said "Breatheasy" and said nebulizer, between and among the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent is now and for a long time, to wit, for more than 1 year last past, has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States with sundry other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of atomizers or nebulizers for use in connection therewith.

PAR. 2. The preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer used in connection therewith are manufactured by said respondent and are sold and distributed by said respondent through distributors and drug stores located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business as hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 1 and 2, has been and now is engaged in extensive advertisement of its said products as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer for use in connection therewith, and as media of such advertising it has been and now is using various newspapers of interstate circulation, and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate reception. Said respondent also issues booklets and circulars describing the said product "Breatheasy."

Said respondent in its said advertisements of the preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer used in connection therewith, manufactured and distributed by it, has made and is now making various false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning said products. Among the statements which said respondent has used and is now using in its advertisements in newspapers and over the radio and in its booklets and circulars distributed with its said products, are the following:

Breatheasy is a creation of a physician, who himself suffered from asthma, and was developed until now it gives absolute, instant and complete relief. For asthmatics who seek relief, they will find this remedy their "doctor" ever ready to relieve them.

BREATHEASY means exactly what the name implies. It is the one, sure asthmatic relief available today. In working its wonders, BREATHEASY gives a sense of well-being, a return to vigorous, buoyant health. BREATHEASY was developed by a physician who suffered from asthma, and, in striving for relief, he evolved this marvelous remedy. If YOU suffer from asthma or if any of your friends are afflicted with the symptoms stop in at the West End Drug Store, First and Monroe, and ask to have this thoroughly marvelous treatment demonstrated. Remember, there is no charge.

Asthmatics everywhere hail the BREATHEASY method as the one remedy that can be relied upon.

During the use of "Breatheasy," no diet is necessary. You may eat anything you may desire.

In truth and in fact, "Breatheasy" is not a remedy for and it does not cure asthma. In any treatment for asthma the proper diet is essential, as mucus-forming foods are injurious in cases of asthma.

Respondent in its said advertising has created and is now creating upon the public the false impression and erroneous belief that "Breatheasy" is a reliable and dependable remedy and cure for asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and that in the use of the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet. In fact, "Breatheasy" is not a reliable and dependable cure for asthma, hay fever, or kindred diseases.

PAR. 4. The use by the said respondent, Pascal Company, Inc., of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading representations has had and does now have the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and untrue belief that "Breatheasy" is in truth and in fact a remedy for and will cure asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and that in using the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet. Acting in such erroneous belief, the consuming public, and especially that portion of the public suffering from asthma, hay fever, or kindred diseases, have been induced and are now induced to purchase "Breatheasy" in preference to other preparations designed for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and offered for sale by manufacturers, retail dealers, and distributors. As a result of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations on the part of said respondent, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such manufacturers, retail dealers, or distributors of other preparations for treating asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results obtained from the use thereof.

PAR. 5. Said false, deceptive, and misleading representations of said respondent, contained in its advertisements, have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers, and in prejudice to the buying public, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 15th day of October 1936, issued and on October 20, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Pascal Company, Inc., charging said respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Reuben J. Martin, attorney for the Commission, before Henry M. White, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Clarence L. Gere, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, no oral argument having been heard, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Pascal Company, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 1014 American Bank Building, Second Street at Madison, in the city of Seattle, within the State of Washington. Said respondent is now, and has been since July 19, 1936, engaged in the manufacture and sale of a preparation known as "Breatheasy" for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of an atomizer or so-called "nebulizer" for administering the preparation "Breatheasy," and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said "Breatheasy" and the "nebulizer" when sold by it to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the State of Washington and in various States of the United States other than the State of Washington. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in said "Breatheasy" and said "nebulizer" between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and since July 19, 1936, has been, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States with sundry other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of atomizers or "nebulizers" for use in connection therewith, which said preparations are useful in the treatment of said diseases.

PAR. 2. The preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer," used in connection therewith, are manufactured by said respondent and are sold and distributed by said respondent through distributors and drug stores located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business has been, and now is, engaged in extensive advertising of its said products as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer" for use in connection therewith, and as media of such advertising it has been, and now is, using various newspapers of interstate circulation and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate transmission. Said respondent also issues and distributes booklets and circulars describing the said preparation "Breatheasy."

PAR. 4. The respondent, in its said advertisements of the preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer" used in connection therewith manufactured and distributed by it, has made, and is now making, various statements regarding the efficacy of said preparation known as "Breatheasy" in the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases. Among the statements which said respondent has used, and is now using, in its advertisements in newspapers and over the radio, and in its booklets and circulars distributed with its said products are the following:

BREATHEASY is beneficial, according to authorities, in asthma and chronic bronchitis, in heart disease and cardiac distress, in gastric ulcer, in serum rashes, urticaris (hives) and other skin diseases of the erythematous and eczematous types, in hay fever, in inflammation of the nose, throat, tonsils, larynx, and lungs, and in neuralgia and neuritis. This by no means completes the list, but it suffices to show the enormous value of this substance elaborated by the adrenal glands and what may happen if they are deficient.

PAR. 5. The respondent corporation is owned by Dr. Benjamin S. Paschall and other members of his family. Dr. Paschall is a physician and chief chemist of the respondent corporation. The respondent is engaged in the business of making pharmaceuticals and its principal product is epinephrin. The product epinephrin, together with the "nebulizer," an apparatus for administering the epinephrin, constitutes the commodity sold to the public in interstate commerce by the respondent under the trade name of "Breatheasy." The respondent maintains a laboratory in which the product epinephrin is manufactured. The product epinephrin is a solution of epinephrin hydrochlorides, at least 2½ percent, put up in physiological salt solution containing traces of carminatives and preservatives of chemically pure grade. Its structure is racemic.

PAR. 6. Epinephrin may be obtained in two ways, namely, by synthetically building it up in the laboratory, and also by extracting it from the glands of animals. The epinephrin sold by the respondent is obtained synthetically. The epinephrin is put into the "nebulizer" and by means of the "nebulizer" is breathed into the lungs of the user. The epinephrin is not injected into the user by means of a hypodermic needle. The "nebulizer" sold and distributed by the respondent is an instrument which turns liquid into vapor and is the means by which the user takes the medicine into the body. The "nebulizer" is manufactured by the respondent for use in connection with its product epinephrin and the epinephrin, together with the "nebulizer," constitutes the commodity sold as "Breatheasy." The chemical ingredients used by respondent in manufacturing its epinephrin are purchased by the respondent in the open market for use in respondent's laboratory. Epinephrin contains the same properties as adrenaline and is synthetic adrenaline. The preparation "Breatheasy" is sold by the respondent for the purpose of treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases. Adrenaline has been constantly used by the medical profession in the treatment of asthma for 30 years and has been customarily administered to the patient hypodermically.

PAR. 7. True asthma is defined as "A condition of shortness of breath caused by the constriction of the bronchial muscles and by the exudation of mucous into the narrow bronchial passages, the reason for which is a reflex due to the ingestion or inhalation of substances to which the patient is hypersensitive." There are many various forms of asthma or physical conditions which are generally classified by the medical profession as asthma. The basic causes of the ailments classified by the medical profession as asthma are not yet known to the medical profession, and asthma may result from many varying causes.

PAR. 8. There is no specific cure for asthma generally recognized by the medical profession. "Breatheasy" is not a cure for asthma nor is it a cure for hay fever. Asthma may be, and often is, cured when the cause of the asthma is known and eliminated. The elimination of the cause of asthma may sometimes be produced by surgery and by other methods, but it cannot be eliminated by "Breatheasy." "Breatheasy" as well as many other remedies containing adrenaline, may in some cases temporarily relieve asthma. "Breatheasy" does not constitute a treatment for asthma, and its use will not bring about or restore vigorous, buoyant health.

PAR. 9. "Breatheasy" will not give "absolute, instant, and complete relief" to sufferers from asthma and is not a sure relief for persons suffering with asthma. The use of "Breatheasy" is not harmless in all cases, and there are cases where its use would be distinctly dangerous. The use of "Breatheasy" is not beneficial in the treatment of chronic bronchitis, heart disease, cardiac distress, gastric ulcer, inflammation of the nose, throat, tonsils, larynx, lungs, neuralgia, or neuritis, and of urticaris (hives) except in very rare instances.

PAR. 10. In many cases of asthma, proper diet is very important and may become the means of effecting a cure. Many persons suffer from asthma due to being allergic to certain foods. In such cases diet is essential as only by refraining from using the particular food to which the sufferer is allergic may a cure be effected. In such cases diet is essential and "Breatheasy" will not give relief in these cases independent of the proper diet. In many of such cases "Breatheasy" should not be used at all. Epinephrin is no less dangerous to the user because it is taken by means of a "nebulizer" than it would be if taken by means of a hypodermic injection.

PAR. 11. The advertisements and representations made to the purchasing public by the respondent, as hereinbefore set out in paragraph 4, are false and misleading. They have had, and do now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and untrue belief that "Breatheasy" is in truth and in fact a remedy for, and will cure, asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and that in the use of the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet, and to induce such purchasing public to purchase "Breatheasy" in preference to other preparations designed for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases and offered for sale by manufacturers, retail dealers, and distributors. The result of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations on the part of said respondent is to unfairly divert trade to said respondent from such manufacturers, retailers, or distributors of other preparations for treating asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Pascal Company, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of

IN THE MATTER OF GOLDEN PEACOCK, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3156. Complaint, June 18, 1937—Decision, Feb. 16, 1938

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and "Miracream" facial preparations for bleaching and removing, as asserted, blemishes and disorders of the skin, to purchasers in other States and in District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in offering and selling in commerce, as aforesaid, compounds or preparations for use in treatment of some ailments, disorders, and conditions of the skin for which it recommended its aforesaid preparations, and including many who sell and distribute in commerce similar preparations without misrepresenting the properties or therapeutic efficacy thereof—

- (a) Represented, in radio broadcasts and advertisements in newspapers and periodicals of interstate circulation, that its said "Peacock" cream constituted an amazing new discovery, in the perfection of which 10 years was spent and in the development of which 30 eminent doctors and skin specialists worked, and that it contained costly refined ingredients from Spain and France which acted in a peculiar way on the outside layer of the skin and completely revitalized it and changed it in color and texture, and that no ordinary cream or lotion could bleach skin white and keep it white; and
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said creams, as the case might be, were new and different, and would remove freckles, blotches, tan, and blackheads, and every slight blotch, and result in the coming, in place thereof, of alluring alabaster clearness and a skin like ivory, flawless and soft, and bring out the clear look of youth;

Facts being said products did not contain refined ingredients which would revitalize the skin and change its color and texture as above set forth, were not new discoveries or developed as aforesaid, would not produce an ivory or soft and flawless skin or remove, under all conditions and in all cases, blotches, freckles, tan, deep-seated discolorations, etc., over night, or in any period of time, irrespective of the cause of the imperfections or conditions, and would not nourish, revitalize or rejuvenate the skin, and had not been indorsed by leading medical authorities;

With capacity and tendency to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that its aforesaid preparations were different from other creams or ointments offered in commerce, and were perfected by eminent doctors and skin specialists during a period of years, and that they had been indorsed by leading medical authorities and beauty specialists, and had the property to nourish and rejuvenate the skin and were active, effective treatments for all discolorations, blotches, and disorders and skin blemishes, no matter from what cause, and to induce members of the purchasing public to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs engendered as aforesaid, and unfairly to divert trade to it from its competitors, to their substantial injury:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Mr. Richard H. Rhodes, of Paris, Tenn., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Golden Peacock, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been, and now is, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Golden Peacock, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its factory and principal place of business located at Paris, in said State. Said respondent corporation is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in advertising, selling, and distributing toilet preparations including several designated as "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and "Miracream." It now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, said preparations, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in Paris, Tenn., to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Tennessee, and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of facial creams and other preparations similar to those sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale, and selling, its preparations designated as "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and "Miracream," respondent now represents, and for more than 1 year last past has represented, in radio broadcasts having an interstate circulation, in letters, pamphlets, newspapers, magazines, circulars, wrappers, and other forms of advertising media, as follows:

An amazing new discovery. It is called "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and marks one of the most important skin discoveries in years. Ten years were spent in perfecting it. Some thirty eminent doctors and skin specialists worked in its development.

It contains costly refined ingredients from Spain and France which act in a peculiar way on the outer layer of the skin—completely revitalizing it and changing it in color and texture to a child-like whiteness and texture.

But no ordinary cream or lotion * * * can bleach skin white and keep it white. You must use for this purpose a genuine bleach cream—Golden Peacock.

Smooth it on your skin tonight. Next morning notice how muddy sallowness has given way to unblemished whiteness * * * all imperfections that rob your true loveliness vanish too.

Give us 1 night to prove its effect; see freckles fade, blotches, tan, blackheads go.

Here's a chance to see this miracle of an ivory skin almost over night worked on your own face.

Do you want to see every freckle disappear from your face; every slight blotch leave; and in their place see alluring alabaster clearness come? A skin like ivory; flawless and soft.

Bring out * * * clear look of youth.

It's new! It's different! Just spread a little Miracream over your face and neck. It disappears into your skin like "magic", where it does its work fast and sure instead of staying on top like old-time sticky night bleaches that look messy and untidy * * * at night; after washing your face, your skin will be at least one shade lighter. Within 5 days you'll be tickled with the lovely white beauty Miracream gives you.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, the toilet preparations "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and "Miracream" do not contain costly refined ingredients imported from France and Spain which revitalize the skin and change its color and texture to a childlike whiteness and texture. Said preparations are not new discoveries developed after years of experimentation by eminent doctors and skin specialists. The use of said preparations will not produce or cause an ivory skin and will not make skin soft and flawless. The use of said preparations will not remove blotches, freckles, tan, pimples, liver spots, sallowness, deep-seated discolorations, imperfections, and blemishes overnight or in any other period of time and said preparations are not competent and effective treatments for the above-named conditions of the skin. Said preparations have not been endorsed by leading medical authorities and beauty specialists. Said products will not bleach skin white in all cases and will not keep skin white in all cases. Neither of said products nourishes, revitalizes, or rejuvenates the skin.

PAR. 4. The representations of respondent, as aforesaid, are false and grossly exaggerated, and have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that respondent's products designated "Golden Peacock Bleach Cream" and "Miracream" are different from other creams or ointments in existence and were perfected by eminent doctors and skin specialists during a period of years; that the preparations have been endorsed by leading medical authorities and beauty specialists; that said preparations have the property to nourish and rejuvenate the skin; and are effective treatments for all discolorations, blotches, skin disorders, skin defects, sallowness, liver spots, and skin blemishes, no matter from what caused. The said representations of respondent have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale of face creams and cosmetics similar to the preparations sold by respondent in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

There are among the competitors of respondent, many who sell and distribute in commerce similar face creams and preparations who do not misrepresent the properties or qualities or therapeutic virtues, functions, uses, or effects of their said competing products.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and the respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint, brief of counsel for the Commission, no brief having been filed by the respondent or oral argument having been heard; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:
