1 Interlinear citations are to the reports of the National Reporter System and to the official United States Supreme Court Reports in those cases in which the proceeding, or proceedings, as the case may be, have been there reported. Such cases do not include the decisions of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, nor, in all cases, some of the other proceedings set forth in the above table, and described or reported in the Commission's Decisions and the Commission publications entitled "Statutes and Decisions—1914-1929," and "Statutes and Decisions—1930-1938," which also include cases here involved, for their respective periods.

Said publications also include Clayton Act cases bearing on those sections of said Act administered by the Commission during the aforesaid period, but in which Commission was not a party. "S. & D." refers to earlier publication, reference to later being "1938 S. & D. ". For "Memorandum of Court Action on Miscellaneous Interlocutory Motions" during the period covered by the second compilation, namely, 1930-1938, see said compilation at page 185 et seq.

2 For Interlocutory order of lower court, see "Memoranda," 28-1966 or 1938 S. & D. 487.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

FINDINGS AND ORDERS, JANUARY 1, 1939, TO MAY 31, 1939

IN THE MATTER OF

WILLARD TABLET COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 20, 1914

Docket 3100. Complaint, Apr. 8, 1937—Decision, Jan. 5, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of certain medicinal tablets, together with printed matter containing advice of a dietary and hygienic nature, together referred to as the “Willard Treatment,” and sold to retail druggists and, to a relatively small extent, by mail direct to ultimate purchasers at price of $5 a bottle, along with which was included, as aforesaid, such printed matter with directions for diet, rest, and other hygienic measures, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of medicinal and other preparations and products designed and intended for use in treatment of same ailments and conditions as those for which it recommended its aforesaid tablets and treatment, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations and products or therapeutic properties thereof or make any false statements in connection with sale and distribution of such preparations and products; in advertising its said preparation and treatment in newspapers and other publications circulated between and among the various States and in bulletins distributed from its place of business to prospective purchasers in other States and in broadcasts from radio stations which conveyed programs emanating therefrom to listeners in various States—

Represented, through statements there made and reproductions therein of purported testimonials, that its said tablets and aforesaid printed material sold together therewith, or treatment, constituted a competent and adequate cure or remedy for, and had substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, stomach and duodenal ulcers due to hyperacidity, poor digestion, acid dyspepsia, sour or upset stomach, gaseousness, bloating, heartburn, constipation, bad breath, sleeplessness, headaches, and jaded appetite, when such conditions were due to or persisted because of excess acid, and that said tablets were compounded pursuant to an unique formula and that said treatment was a remarkable or marvelous one for aforesaid ailments and conditions and was more dependable than any other for correcting the same, through such statements as “This unique formula has brought definite relief to hundreds,” etc.,

1 For original findings and order, see 27 F. T. C. 1076.
"* * * This marvelous treatment has brought amazing relief to such stomach sufferers everywhere," "There is probably no treatment more dependable for correcting those conditions at once than the WILLARD TREATMENT," and "The reports sent to us by those who have been seeking desperately to find relief from ulcers, and who finally found that prayed-for help in the WILLARD TREATMENT should prove an inspiration to every person so afflicted," and, such purported testimonial quotations, among others, as "* * * can eat anything now and work hard every day * * * had ulcers of the stomach for fourteen years," etc.;

Facts being said tablets and literature or treatment were not a competent and effective remedy or cure for stomach or duodenal ulcers due to hyperacidity or to any other cause; therapeutic value of tablets concerned was limited to neutralizing excess acid in stomach and producing soothing effect on irritations therein caused by such excess acid, and to temporarily relieving symptoms of distress due to said condition; any benefit obtained other than relief which said preparation, used with such treatment, might provide from symptoms of distress caused by said condition and by stomach and duodenal ulcers due thereto or persisting by reason thereof, would be variable, depending on individual's reaction to said preparation and to such standardized treatment, which was neither remarkable nor marvelous and did not involve unique formula, insofar as concerned said tablets, ingredients of which were commonplace in medical literature and had been used for years, singly and in combination; usual and ordinary treatment for stomach and duodenal ulcers, due to or persisting because of excess acid, consists as a rule in administering or prescribing alkalis to neutralize excess acid and bland diet, along with rest and relaxation, in varying proportions from day to day in accordance with patient's reaction, and it is not equipped to and does not give advice to purchasers relative to varying alkalis and diet and amounts in accordance with such reaction, and ordinary purchaser of its said preparation is incapable of determining whether or not his particular ailment or condition is due to or persists because of such acid; and said standardized treatment with its prescription of same alkalis and diet and amounts for all users, irrespective of individual's reaction thereto, is not the most dependable one for correcting such ailments and conditions at once or during any period of time;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that its said preparation and treatment possessed properties claimed and represented and would accomplish results indicated, and of causing substantial portion of such public, by reason of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its said preparations, and of thereby diverting trade unfairly to it from its said competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and use of their respective preparations and products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. T. H. Kennedy and Mr. John N. Wheelock for the Commission.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Willard Tablet Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The Willard Tablet Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and its principal place of business and legal address is 215 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as “Willard Tablets” which is recommended for various and sundry diseases and ailments as will be more fully set out hereinafter. Respondent causes said product, when sold, to be shipped and transported in interstate commerce from its place of business, located in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. It now maintains, and has at all times mentioned herein maintained a constant current of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, is now, and at all times herein referred to has been, in active substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of other preparations prepared, manufactured, advertised, recommended, and sold for substantially the same purpose and use for which respondent’s product is advertised and sold.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase said preparation, Willard Tablets, has advertised through radio broadcasts and has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, and has printed and circulated throughout the several States of the United States by United States mail and otherwise, to customers and prospective customers, certain advertising, folders and literature, and other advertising matter, in all of which the respondent has caused its corporate name and the name of said product to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, and in which the following statements are made:

This unique formula has brought definite relief to hundreds of such stomach suffers everywhere.

It explains the remarkable Willard Treatment for stomach distress, such as heartburn, poor digestion, acid dyspepsia, and stomach ulcers, due to excessive acid. This marvelous treatment has brought amazing relief to such stomach sufferers everywhere.

The Willard Treatment is intended for the relief of stomach and duodenal ulcers due to hyperacidity—poor digestion, acid dyspepsia—sour or upset stomach—gasiness—bloating—heartburn—constipation—bad breath—sleeplessness—headaches—jaded appetite, when these conditions are due to or persist because of excess acid.

The reports sent to us by those who have been seeking desperately to find relief from ulcers, and who finally found that prayed-for help in the Willard Treatment should prove an inspiration to every person so afflicted.

There is probably no treatment more dependable for correcting these conditions at once than the Willard Treatment.

By way of quoting purported testimonials, the respondent states:

I have started on my second treatment of Willard's, and highly recommend it for stomach ulcers. I have been bothered with my stomach for about six years. I took about four bottles of the Willard Treatment, and I can eat anything now and work hard every day. I was in an awfully bad condition, but I believe I am entirely relieved. I had ulcers of the stomach for fourteen years.

It is with great pleasure that I write you and thank you for what your wonderful Treatment has done for me. I have suffered with ulcers of the stomach for the past eighteen years. I have taken many different kinds of medicine.

Before taking your Treatment, I suffered for five years with ulcers and gas. In fact, I suffered so much that I did not care to live any longer.

Par. 5. All of the above statements, together with many other similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising and literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's product, Willard Tablets. In all of the respondent's advertising matter and literature, the respondent represents, through the statements as above set out and through other statements of like import and effect, that said product is a competent treatment and an effective remedy for stomach and duodenal ulcers; that said preparation is a competent treatment for all stomach disorders; that said preparation is a competent treatment for hyperacidity; and that said preparation will correct an abnormal acid condition at once.

Par. 6. The claims and representations made by the respondent with respect to the efficacy and therapeutic value of the preparation, Willard Tablets, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's product, Willard Tablets, is not a competent treatment for stomach and duodenal ulcers. Neither will it relieve the discomforts caused therefrom. Said preparation is not a competent treatment for stomach troubles or stomach disorders. Said preparation will not correct an abnormal acid condition at once or in any stipulated length of time. Said preparation is not a treatment for the physical ailments above mentioned, nor is it a competent treatment for any physical ailment. Said preparation is no more than a remedy, and its value as a remedy is limited to cases of simple gastric hyperacidity.

Par. 7. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture and prepare medicines for stomach troubles, stomach disorders, stomach and duodenal ulcers, hyperacidity, hypoacidity, and abnormal acid conditions, and sell and distribute said preparations to the purchasing public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and who in no way misrepresent the quality, efficacy, or therapeutic value of their product.

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating and describing its product, Willard Tablets, and the effectiveness thereof as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling said product, were and are calculated to, and had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said claims and representations are true. As a direct consequence of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by respondent's acts and representations as hereinabove set out, members of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's product and thereby trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from those competitors referred to in paragraph 7 hereof. As a result of the aforesaid false and misleading representations, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and have been and are unfair methods of commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 8th day of April 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Willard Tablet Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Thomas H. Kennedy, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of John N. Wheelock, attorney for the Commission, and John A. Nash, attorney for respondent; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being fully advised in the premises, and finding that the proceeding was in the interest of the public, on the 15th day of October 1938, made and issued its findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and issued its order to cease and desist from the practices charged. Subsequently respondent filed a motion to modify the findings as to the facts and order to cease and desist, and the Commission having duly considered said motion and the record herein, and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its modified findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Willard Tablet Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its office and principal place of business at 215 West Randolph Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent was incorporated in 1932. Respondent has been engaged for three years last past in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Willard Tablets." Respondent also distributes to the purchasers of such tablets certain literature containing advice of a dietary and hygienic nature. Respondent refers to the said preparation and such literature as the "Willard Treatment." Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States, and causes the said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing medicinal and other preparations and products designed and intended for use in the treatment of the same ailments and conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not, in any manner, misrepresent their said preparations and products or the therapeutic properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective preparations and products.

PAR. 3. The said preparation "Willard Tablets" contains the following ingredients:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Ingredient</th>
<th>Quantity</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sodium Bicarbonate</td>
<td>10 grs.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magnesium Oxide</td>
<td>10 &quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bismuth Subnitrate</td>
<td>10 &quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pancreatin</td>
<td>1 gr.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

To the above ingredients, respondent adds flavoring of peppermint and saccharin and a sweetening or filler of starch and talc which are without therapeutic value. The average dose recommended by the respondent is one tablet immediately after each meal three times a day. The tablets are 37 gr. tablets. The "Willard Tablets" are not manufactured by the respondent, but are compounded for the respondent by a laboratory pursuant to respondent's special formula.
Respondent bottles, packs, and distributes the said preparation. Approximately seven-eighths of respondent's aforesaid business is with retail drug stores, and approximately one-eighth of such business is done by mail direct to the ultimate purchaser. For the past three years the gross dollar value of respondent's business has been approximately $400,000 per annum. The said preparation is packed 100 tablets to the bottle, and sells for $5 per bottle. Respondent distributes to every purchaser of such tablets the aforesaid literature containing directions for diet, rest, and other hygienic measures.

Findings 28 F. T. C.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation, the respondent has caused advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and treatment, and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in newspapers and other publications having a circulation between and among the various States of the United States, in bulletins distributed from respondent's aforesaid place of business to prospective purchasers of said preparation located in other States, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States. The following statements and representations are typical of those made in the aforesaid advertisements:

This unique formula has brought definite relief to hundreds of such stomach sufferers everywhere.

It explains the remarkable Willard Treatment for stomach distress, such as heart-burn, poor digestion, acid dyspepsia, and stomach ulcers, due to excessive acid. This marvelous treatment has brought amazing relief to such stomach sufferers everywhere.

The reports sent to us by those who have been seeking desperately to find relief from ulcers, and who finally found that prayed-for help in the Willard Treatment should prove an inspiration to every person so afflicted.

There is probably no treatment more dependable for correcting these conditions at once than the Willard Treatment.

By way of quoting purported testimonials, the respondent represented:

I have started on my second treatment of Willard's, and highly recommend it for stomach ulcers. I have been bothered with my stomach for about six years. I took about four bottles of the Willard Treatment, and I can eat anything now and work every day. I was in an awfully bad condition, but I believe I am entirely relieved. I had ulcers of the stomach for fourteen years.

It is with great pleasure that I write you and thank you for what your wonderful Treatment has done for me. I have suffered with ulcers of the stomach for the past eighteen years. I have taken many different kinds of medicine. Before taking your treatment, I suffered for five years with ulcers and gas. In fact, I suffered so much that I did not care to live any longer.

Par. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and treatment and its effectiveness in the treatment of various ailments and conditions of the human body and the causes thereof, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that the Willard Tablets and the aforesaid literature containing certain dietary and hygienic advice, which is referred to by the respondent, jointly, with such tablets as the "Willard Treatment," are a competent and adequate cure or remedy for, and have substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of stomach and duodenal ulcers due to hyperacidity, poor digestion, acid dyspepsia, sour or upset stomach, gaseousness, bloating, heartburn, constipation, bad breath, sleeplessness, headaches and jaded appetite, when such conditions are due to or persist because of excess acid; that the Willard Treatment is a remarkable or marvelous treatment for the said ailments and conditions of the human body; that the Willard Tablets are compounded pursuant to a unique formula; that the Willard Treatment has brought definite relief to hundreds of persons suffering from the aforesaid ailments and conditions of the human body; that there is no treatment more dependable for correcting the aforesaid ailments and conditions at once than the Willard Treatment.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, the Willard Tablets and the aforesaid literature of respondent jointly referred to by respondent as the Willard Treatment are not a competent and effective remedy or cure for stomach or duodenal ulcers due to hyperacidity or to any other causes.

Par. 7. The therapeutic value of the Willard Tablets is limited to neutralizing excess acid in the stomach and producing a soothing effect on the irritations in the stomach caused thereby and temporarily relieving the symptoms of distress due to an excess acid condition. Such preparation when used with such treatment may provide relief from the symptoms of distress caused by an excess acid condition and by stomach and duodenal ulcers which are due to or persist because of excess acid, but any benefit obtained other than such relief will be variable depending on the individual's reaction to such preparation and such standardized treatment.

Par. 8. The Willard Treatment is not a remarkable or marvelous treatment. The Willard Tablets are not compounded from an unique formula. The drugs employed in the Willard Tablets are commonplace in medical literature and have been used for many years singly and in combination.

Par. 9. The Willard Treatment is not the most dependable treatment for correcting the aforesaid ailments and conditions of the human body, at once, or during any period of time. The usual and ordinary treatment for stomach and duodenal ulcers, which are due to or persist because of excess acid, does not generally include, except in surgical cases, a direct treatment for the ulcer itself but consists of administering or prescribing of alkalis to neutralize the excess acid and the prescribing of a bland diet together with rest and relaxation by the patient, the alkalis and the diet, and the amounts thereof, being varied from day to day in accordance with the reaction of the patient.
Willard Treatment is a standardized treatment which prescribes the same alkalis and diet, and the same amounts thereof, for all users of such treatment, irrespective of the reaction to such treatment of the individual user. The respondent is not equipped for and does not give advice to the purchasers of its treatment relative to varying the alkalis and the diet, and the amounts thereof, in accordance with the reaction of the patient.

The aforesaid ailments and conditions may be caused by reasons other than an excess acid condition and the ordinary purchaser of respondent’s preparation is incapable of determining whether or not his particular ailment or condition is due to or persists because of excess acid.

Par. 10. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the Willard Tablets and Treatment, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and that respondent’s said preparation and treatment possess the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s said preparation.

As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations and products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by John N. Wheelock, counsel for the Commission, and by John A. Nash, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission, on the 15th day of October 1938, having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and having issued its order to cease and desist on the 15th day of October 1938, and the Commission having on the 5th day of January 1939, modified its said findings of facts and conclusion, now modifies its said order to cease and desist so as to conform with its said modified findings of facts and conclusion, and being fully advised in the premises.

It is ordered, That the said order to cease and desist be, and the same hereby is, modified to read as follows:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Willard Tablet Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Willard Tablets," and literature containing certain standardized dietary and hygienic advice referred to jointly with such preparation as the "Willard Treatment," or any other preparation or treatment of substantially the same composition and ingredients, sold under the above-mentioned names or any other names, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

(a) That such preparation and treatment constitute a competent and adequate remedy or cure for stomach and duodenal ulcers which are due to or persist because of an excess acid condition.

(b) That such preparation will do more than neutralize excess acid in the stomach and produce a soothing effect on the irritations in the stomach caused thereby and temporarily relieve the symptoms of distress due to an excess acid condition.

(c) That such preparation when used with such treatment will do more than provide relief from the symptoms of distress caused by an excess acid condition and by stomach and duodenal ulcers, which are due to or persist because of excess acid, unless such representation also states that any benefit obtained other than such relief will be variable depending on the individual's reaction to such preparation and such standardized treatment.

(d) That such preparation and treatment will provide "definite relief," unless such statement is qualified by the phrase "from symptoms of distress" in equally conspicuous terms indirect connection with such representation.

(e) That such preparation and treatment are "remarkable" or "marvelous."
(f) That such preparation is compounded from an "unique" formula.

(g) That such treatment is more dependable than any other treatment for correcting the aforesaid ailments and conditions of the human body.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
LEOPOLD LEVOY AND NATHAN C. BLACHER TRADING AS SUNBEAM LABORATORIES

Where two individuals engaged in sale of a cosmetic designated "Nailife" and composed of about 90 percent lanolin and 10 percent wax, along with very small amount of coloring and perfuming matter, and in distribution of said product to retail dealers for resale to members of the purchasing public, directly and through its brokers or agents, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of preparations designed and intended for and used for same general purposes, and including those who do not, in any manner, misrepresent their preparations or properties thereof and do not make any other false statements in connection with sale and distribution thereof; in advertising their said products on display cards distributed to retailer dealer purchasers in various States—Represented, through use of "Before" and "After" pictures and statements thereon made, that said "Nailife" was a scientific preparation which would transform irregular, broken nails into well-formed, symmetrical ones, and was beneficial for dry or splitting nails and the perfect nail food, and would make nails strong and healthy, facts being nails of the fingers cannot be fed by an external application such as preparation aforesaid, which was not a scientific one, use thereof would not make nails strong and healthy, value thereof was limited to forming a protective coating for the nails, and said various claims were grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading and greatly exceeded any claims as to the efficacy of said product which might truthfully be made;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that said preparation possessed the properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish the results indicated, and of causing substantial portion of such public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its said preparation, and with result of thereby diverting unfairly trade to them from competitors who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini, trial examiner.

Mr. S. Brodyne Teu, II and Mr. Clarence T. Sadler for the Commission.

Mr. A. Frederick Lamken, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Leopold Levoy and Nathan C. Blucher, individually and trading under the trade name "Sunbeam Laboratories," hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Leopold Levoy and Nathan C. Blucher, are individuals trading under the trade name Sunbeam Laboratories, and having their principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. They are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a certain cosmetic commodity known as "Nailife" in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. When said product is sold respondents transport or cause the same to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, State of California, to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said above-described product sold by respondents, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other partnerships, and with individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing like and similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their product, respondents have caused to be printed and circulated through the United States mails, and by other means, to their customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States price lists and other printed matter.
The respondents have caused, and still cause, advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general interstate circulation. And further, they have caused, and still cause, to be imprinted on their display cards and on the containers in which said product is sold, words and phrases purporting to be descriptive of the said product. Among the statements made in the aforesaid catalogs, price lists, and newspaper and magazine advertisements, and among the words and phrases imprinted on respondents’ display cards and the containers in which said product is sold, the following are representative:

FOR DRY BRITTLE SPLITTING NAILS USE Nailife THE PERFECT NAIL FOOD

BE PROUD OF YOUR NAILS NAILIFE, A SCIENTIFIC PREPARATION WILL TRANSFORM IRREGULAR BROKEN NAILS INTO WELL FORMED SYMMETRICAL ONES.

MAKE YOUR NAILS STRONG AND HEALTHY

(C) 1936 by

SUNBEAM LABORATORIES LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

The foregoing statements and representations made by the respondents are false and misleading. They serve as representations to customers and prospective customers:

That respondents’ said product constitutes a competent and effective treatment for dry, brittle, and splitting nails; that Nailife is the perfect nail food and is actually a food for nails and nourishes nails; that Nailife is a scientific preparation; that Nailife will transform irregular, broken nails into well-formed symmetrical ones; and that Nailife will make nails strong and healthy.

In truth and in fact the respondents’ product has no value whatever in the treatment of dry, brittle, and splitting nails, and does not constitute a competent and effective treatment for nails. Said product is not the perfect nail food, and has no value as a nail food. It is not a scientific preparation, and it will not transform irregular broken nails into well-formed symmetrical ones. Said product does not make nails strong and healthy or have any value other than a protective covering for nails or as a nail polish.

Par. 5. There are among the competitors of respondents as herein set out manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and merit of their respective products, and who refrain from advertising or representing through their catalogs, brand marks, and other advertising media that the merchandise offered for sale by them has a nature and merit that it does not have.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements made by the respondents in designating or describing their product, and in offering for sale and selling the same, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to, and do mislead a substantial part of the consuming public into the erroneous belief that all of the said representations are true, and into the purchase of respondents' said product on account of said erroneous belief.

Par. 7. As a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted from those competitors of respondents engaged in similar businesses herein referred to. As a consequence thereof substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 16th day of November 1937, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Leopold Levoy and Nathan C. Blacher, individually and trading as Sunbeam Laboratories, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Clarence T. Sadler, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by A. Frederick Lamken, attorney for the respondents, before Charles P. Vicini, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint, respondents not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Leopold Levoy and Nathan C. Blacher, are individuals trading as Sunbeam Laboratories and having their principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, State of California.

Par. 2. Respondents are now and have been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing a cosmetic designated as "Nailife." Respondents sell said preparation direct to retail dealers for ultimate resale to members of the purchasing public and also cause said preparation to be sold to such retail dealers by respondents' brokers located in Chicago, Ill., and New York City, N. Y. Respondents cause said preparation, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of California or from the State of origin of shipment thereof to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of the origin of the shipment thereof.

Par. 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of selling and distributing preparations designed and intended for, and used for, the same general purposes for which respondents recommend the use of their said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their preparations or the properties thereof and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective preparations.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said preparation, respondents cause advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and the results which may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof to be inserted on display cards which the respondents distribute to retail dealers, purchasers of said preparation, situated in various states of the United States, for the use of such retail dealers in inducing members of the public to purchase such preparation. Among and typical of the representations contained in said advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Use Nailife. The perfect nail food for dry brittle splitting or soft nails.
For dry brittle splitting nails use Nailife the perfect nail food. Be proud of your nails. Nailife, a scientific preparation, will transform irregular broken nails into well formed symmetrical ones.

Use Nailife. The perfect nail food for dry brittle splitting or soft nails.

On various of the aforesaid display cards used and disseminated as aforesaid, the respondents caused to be pictorially represented two human hands. On one of such hands the nails of the fingers are irregular and under which appears the word “Before.” On the other of such hands the nails of the fingers are perfectly regular and under which appears the word “After.”

Par. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondents’ preparation and its effectiveness in use, the respondents have represented directly and by implication, among other things, that the use of said preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for dry, brittle, and splitting nails; that such preparation is the perfect nail food and nourishes the nails; that such preparation is a scientific preparation; that such preparation will transform irregular, broken nails into well-formed, symmetrical nails; and that such preparation will make nails strong and healthy.

Par. 6. “Nailife” is the trade name for respondents’ preparation which is a liquid paste composed of lanolin, wax, perfume, and coloring. Such preparation contains approximately 90 percent lanolin, 10 percent wax, and a very small amount of coloring and perfuming matter.

Par. 7. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, the use of such preparation is not a competent and effective treatment for dry, brittle, and splitting nails. Such preparation is not the perfect nail food. Such preparation has no value as a nail food. The nails of the fingers cannot be fed by an external application such as respondents’ preparation. Such preparation is not a scientific preparation. The use of such preparation will not transform irregular, broken nails into well-formed, symmetrical nails. The use of such preparation does not make nails strong and healthy. The value of the use of such preparation is limited to forming a protective covering for nails. The claims of the respondents as to the efficacy in use of the said preparation are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading and greatly exceed any claims as to the efficacy of said preparation which might truthfully be made.

Par. 8. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondents' said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said preparation. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That respondents, Leopold Levoy and Nathan C. Blacher, individually and trading as Sunbeam Laboratories, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a cosmetic preparation for use on finger nails now known as “Nailife,” whether sold under that name or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparation is beneficial for dry or splitting nails.
2. Representing that said preparation is the perfect nail food.
3. Representing that “Nailife” is a scientific preparation which will transform irregular, broken nails into well-formed, symmetrical ones.
4. Representing that said preparation will make nails strong and healthy.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

AL DUNLAP, TRADING AS THE DETECTIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in the manufacture of a shield or vest designated by him "Durite Bullet Proof Vest," and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, and in competition with those engaged in offer and sale of similar products, who truthfully describe or designate the same; in advertising his said vests in periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States—

Represented that said "new Durite Bullet Proof Vest" had "stood the highest Government test of All Bullet Proof Vests," facts being his said product did not, upon tests thereof by Government agencies, stand the highest test of all such products, and never had stood the highest Government test;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that all said claims and representations were true, and with the result, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief thus induced, that a substantial number of such public bought substantial quantity of his said products and trade was diverted unfairly to him from competitors engaged in manufacture and sale of so-called bullet proof vests and who do not misrepresent quality or efficacy thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Floyd O. Collins for the Commission.

Smith, Marx & Smith, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Al Dunlap, trading as The Detective Publishing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Al Dunlap, is an individual trading as The Detective Publishing Co. The principal place of business of the said respondent is 1029 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Re-
Complaint 28 F. T. C.

The respondent is now, and has been for the past several years, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a shield or vest which he designates "Dunrite Bullet Proof Vest." Respondent causes said vest when sold to be shipped and transported from his place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and has at all times herein mentioned maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent in the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, is now, and at all times herein referred to has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of other articles which are advertised and sold for the same and similar purposes and uses for which respondent's product is advertised and sold.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing members of the purchasing public to purchase his said product, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States. In all of said advertising matters, as hereinabove alleged, respondent has caused his trade name and the name of said product to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

'This new Dunrite Bullet Proof Vest has stood the highest Government test of All Bullet Proof Vests.

From our laboratories has come a new invention which gives this new Dunrite Bullet Proof Vest 20% more resistance, and yet It Is Lighter, Better-Fitting and More Comfortable than any other vest.

Par. 4. All of said statements, as above set out, together with many other similar statements appearing in the respondent's advertising and literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's product, Dunrite Bullet Proof Vest. In all of the respondent's advertising matter and literature, the respondent represents, through the statements herein set out and other statements of like import and effect, (a) that said vest is bulletproof; (b) that said vest will effectively deflect bullets fired by or from all makes of revolvers and rifles now in use; (c) that said vest will pass all Government tests for bulletproof vests; (d) that said vest has been submitted to and has withstood the highest Government tests; (e) that the said Al Dunlap maintains a labora-
Par. 5. All of the claims and representations made by the respondent with respect to the quality and efficacy of his said product are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, said vest is not bulletproof, for it will not effectively deflect bullets fired from all makes of rifles, pistols, or revolvers now in use. There are many makes of rifles, pistols, and revolvers which, when fired, propel a bullet with sufficient force to perforate said vest. Said product is not now, and never has been, capable of withstanding the highest Government test for like articles. Respondent does not now maintain, and never has maintained, a laboratory or laboratories for testing said article or similar articles. Said product is not bulletproof and never has been bulletproof.

Par. 6. The various statements and representations made by the respondent in describing his product, Dunrite Bullet Proof Vest, and the quality and efficacy of said product when used, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said claims and representations are true. As a direct consequence of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of respondent, as hereinabove set out, a substantial number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial number of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors who are likewise engaged in manufacturing and selling so-called bulletproof vests, and who do not misrepresent the quality or efficacy of their respective products. As a direct result of the aforesaid unfair acts, and false and misleading representations of the respondent, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its power and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondent, Al Dunlap, an individual trading as the Detective Publishing Co., charging respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of section 5 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by F. O. Collins, an attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Emory J. Smith, attorney for the respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent is an individual, Al Dunlap, trading as Detective Publishing Co. His principal place of business is 1029 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. He now is and has been for several years past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a shield or vest which respondent designates "Durite Bullet Proof Vest." Respondent causes said vest, when sold, to be shipped and transported from his place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof located at various points in States in the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. He has during such time maintained a course of trade in such product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. The respondent in the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing members of the purchasing public to purchase his product aforesaid, has caused advertisements to be inserted in periodicals of general circulation, throughout the United States. In such advertising method, respondent has caused his trade name and the name of said product to be prominently and conspicuously displayed with the following statement:
This new Durite Bullet Proof Vest has stood the highest Government test of All Bullet Proof Vests.

Par. 3. Respondent manufactures two types of vests and designates them bulletproof vests. These types are manufactured alike. They are termed "super model" and "standard model." The latter has fewer plates than the former. They are constructed with thin layers of steel about the thickness of a razor blade. These plates are placed in overlapping pockets, then laminated together in order to conform to the shape of the body. Such compose a complete coverage of the body and are worn like unto a corset. They are calculated to repel bullets discharged from small firearms such as pistols.

Par. 4. The Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice requested the National Bureau of Standards to make tests of the respondent's product, and also tests of similar products manufactured and sold by competitors, and such tests disclosed the respondent's product did not stand the highest Government test of all bulletproof vests, and has never stood the highest Government test.

Par. 5. There have been and are individuals, partnerships, and corporations, offering for sale and selling in competition with respondent in interstate commerce, bulletproof vests and such other competitors of respondent offering for sale and selling in like commerce such product truthfully describe or designate such in their course of commerce of such product.

Par. 6. The statements and representations made by respondent in describing his product as hereinabove set out were and are calculated to, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said claims and representations are true. As a direct consequence of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of respondent, as hereinabove set out, a substantial number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial number of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors who are likewise engaged in manufacturing and selling so-called bulletproof vests, and who do not misrepresent the quality or efficacy of their respective products. As a direct result of the aforesaid unfair acts, and false and misleading representations of the respondent, injury has been, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Al Dunlap, trading as The Detective Publishing Co., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs filed herein (oral arguments having been waived), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Al Dunlap, individually and trading as The Detective Publishing Co., or trading in any other manner, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of armored vests in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

Representing, directly or otherwise, that said armored vests have successfully stood the highest Government test of all bulletproof vests.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF FREDERICK LOESER & COMPANY, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in sale of garments of various kinds, ladies' wearing apparel, fabrics, and other like articles of merchandise, to members of the purchasing and consuming public in various States and in the District of Columbia, including certain products not composed entirely of silk, product of cocoon of the silkworm, as long definitely understood in minds of purchasing and consuming public from said word, and held in high esteem and confidence for its preeminent qualities in products made thereof, but composed in part of chemical fiber or fabric rayon, which simulates other in appearance and feel and is practically indistinguishable therefrom by purchasing and consuming public, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of garments of various kinds, ladies' wearing apparel, fabrics, and other like products, in commerce and in said District, and including those who do not misrepresent, in any manner, the nature, character, or quality of the products offered and sold by them; in advertising its said merchandise in newspapers and other publications of general circulation among the various States—

(a) Made use of such words as “Satin,” “Taffeta,” and “Crepe,” and of such words as “Acetate,” “Celanese,” “Bemberg,” “Seraceta,” and “Mallinson’s” in connection therewith, through such statements as “Mallinson’s Pure Dye Washable Sheer Bembergs,” “Acetate Crepe,” “H. R. Mallinson’s Washable Bemberg Printed Triple Sheers,” “Seraceta Taffeta,” “Silky Acetate,” and “Celanese Jersey,” in describing and referring, as the case might be, to various dresses, frocks, and dress fabrics, and to certain blouses and bathing suits, and thereby represented that products thus referred to were composed entirely of silk, product of cocoon of silkworm, as long associated in the public mind with dress goods and other items of wearing apparel designated, described and referred to as “satin,” “taffeta,” and “crepe,” and, through long and favorable association on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public of name “Mallinson’s,” as standing for manufacturer of silk, facts being they were composed entirely of rayon, and words “Celanese,” “Acetate,” “Bemberg,” and “Seraceta,” used separately or in combination with other words aforesaid, were not sufficiently well-known and understood by purchasing and consuming public to inform them that merchandise thus described, designated and referred to, was made in whole or in part of rayon, and not silk;

(b) Made use of words “Silk” and “Pure Dye,” through such statements under caption “Pure Dye Silks,” as “Pure Dye Woven Sport Stripes,” with word “Acetate” in parentheses in small letters immediately thereafter, and words “Chalk White Plain and Novelty Sharkskin Suiting” in large type, followed immediately by word “Acetate” in parentheses and in small letters, and thereby represented that fabrics thus described were composed wholly of unweighted silk, product of cocoon of silkworm, as long understood from word "Silk" as aforesaid, and from words "Pure Dye," by substantial portion of purchasing and consuming public, as meaning silk, product of cocoon of silkworm, not subjected to metallic bath resulting in the impregnating of the silk fiber by the metallic substance or substances, facts being they were composed of rayon entirely; and

(c) Represented certain product as composed of silk, as aforesaid, through use of words "Frosted Shan—The Soft Washable Shantung Weave Acetate," and other fabric as part silk through words "Frosted Crepe (Silk and Acetate)," and certain slips as combination weave of various silks through phrase "Crys-Glo—a certain fabric that is 50% silk and 50% Bemberg," facts being fabrics aforesaid were respectively composed of rayon and spun silk, and of rayon entirely, and slip fabric was made of silk and rayon; and

(d) Made use of words "Linen Silks" to describe certain hats, and of word "silk" to refer to certain ties, facts being hats thus represented were composed neither of linen nor silk, nor ties of unweighted silk as aforesaid, but hats in question were made entirely of rayon, and ties of said substance and weighted silk;

With capacity and tendency, through failure to describe fabrics and garments aforesaid as composed in whole or in part of rayon, or to use word "rayon" in immediate connection and conjunction with descriptive words or phrases aforesaid, and use of word "silk" to describe garments made of weighted silk, and use of words "Linen Silks" to designate those containing neither linen nor silk, to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing and consuming public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, and with result that substantial portion of such public, on account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, was induced to purchase fabrics, garments, and other articles of merchandise from it, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from competitors in commerce as aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.

Cullen & Dykman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., a body corporate, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Fulton and Bond Streets, Brooklyn, N. Y., is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store, and in selling and delivering therefrom garments of various kinds, ladies' wearing apparel, fabrics, and other articles of merchandise. It sells, and has sold and distributed, such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing and consuming public located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. It causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise to be shipped from its place of business in Brooklyn, State aforesaid, to the various purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, other than the said State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondent in said merchandise sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of women's wearing apparel and other allied products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of, and selling, such merchandise, caused, and now causes, advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having an interstate circulation. In certain of said advertisements respondent has made various statements purported to be descriptive of the nature, quality, and character of its merchandise, among which are the following:

Dresses and hats as "Linen Silks";
Dresses as "Silk Jersey";
Men's neckties as "Silk" (the same being in fact composed of weighted silk and rayon);
Certain Couturier's Blouses as "in silk pique";
Women's slips as "Crys-Glo—a satin fabric that is 50% silk and 50% bemberg" (the same being in fact composed of silk and rayon);
Women's slips as "Seraceta Taffeta";
Said advertisement covering preceding two items is headed by a large caption featuring "Pure Dye Silks";
Fabrics as "Pure Dye Woven Sports Stripes" in large caps with "acetate" in parentheses in small lettering immediately following same;
"Chalk White Plain and Novelty Sharkskin Suiting" in large caps immediately followed by the word "acetate" in parentheses and small lettering. (The last two items being contained in one advertisement captioned in display form by the words "Pure Dye Silks");
Dresses as "Frosted Shan—The soft washable Shantung-weave acetate" (a fabric in fact composed of rayon and spun silk);
Swimming suits as "silky acetate";
Dresses as "Mallinson's Pure Dye Washable Sheer Bembergs"; Frocks as "Acetate Crepe";
Bathing suits as "Celanese Jersey";
Dresses as "frost-crepe (silk and acetate)";
Summer dress fabrics as "H. R. Mallinson's Washable Bemberg Printed Triple Sheers."

The use by the respondent of the descriptive words above set out, and as above set out, had, and has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief, except where otherwise specifically indicated herein, that such products were, and are, made entirely of unweighted silk or some fiber or fabric other than rayon, or unweighted silk and linen or of materials other than rayon, when, in truth and in fact, said products were made wholly of rayon, except where otherwise specifically indicated herein.

The representations above set forth were, and are, false and misleading in that said garments and fabrics so represented, designated and referred to are not described as being composed in whole or in part of rayon, as the case may be, in that the word "rayon" was not used in immediate connection and conjunction with such descriptive words and phrases, and such representations had, and have, the tendency and effect of concealing the fact that such fabrics and garments were, and are, made in whole or in part of rayon, as the case may be, when it was, and is, the duty of respondent to make disclosure of the fact that such fabrics and garments were, and are, composed in whole or in part of rayon, by using the word "rayon" in immediate connection and conjunction with such descriptive words or phrases except the term "Pure Dye," which may not be used in connection with any such articles but those composed of unweighted silk, in such a way and manner as to apprise and inform the purchasing public that such fabrics and garments were, and are, composed in whole or in part of rayon, as the case may be, and in that certain of said garments were, and are, designated and described as being made of "silk" when they were, and are, in fact made of weighted silk, but were not designated or described in such a way as to indicate that the same were, and are, made of weighed silk, and in that certain of said garments were designated as "linen silks" when, in truth and in fact, the same were not composed, in any part, of either linen or silk.

Par. 3. The word "Silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of treatment and weaves of silk fiber. Dress goods and other similar products, designated, described or referred to as “Satin,” “Taffeta,” “Crepe,” and words of similar import and meaning, when used alone, and until qualified, designate or describe the materials from which the fabric or garment is made, and have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with materials made from the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, commonly known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public as silk.

“Rayon” is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is, by the purchasing and consuming public, practically indistinguishable from silk.

The words “Celanese,” “Acetate,” “Bemberg,” and “Seraceta,” when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the words “Crepe,” “Satin,” “Taffeta,” or other words or phrases of similar import or meaning, are not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to indicate to, or inform them, that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk, to wit, rayon.

“Linen” is the name of a thread, yarn, fabric, or article made wholly of fiber or flax.

The words “Pure Dye” have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public, with and as designating or meaning, unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, and also with garments made therefrom; that is to say, said words are understood by a substantial portion of said public to refer to silk that has not been subjected to a metallic bath, resulting in the metallic substance or substances being absorbed by the silk fiber.

The use of the word “Mallison’s,” a name long and favorably known to at least a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public as a manufacturer of silk and as being associated with silk exclusively, in connection with the word “Bemberg” (as above used) and without qualifying the same by the word “rayon,” creates the implication that the article of merchandise referred to is silk, which implication is emphasized by the further use of the words “Pure Dye,” a term synonymous with silk.
Par. 4. There are now, and have been at all times mentioned herein, competitors of respondent engaged in selling and distributing silk, rayon, and other fabrics and garments and other articles of merchandise made therefrom, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misrepresent in any manner the nature, character, or quality of the products offered for sale and sold by them.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the representations set forth hereinabove, and as used, has had, and has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were, and are, true. On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public has been, and is being, induced to purchase fabrics, garments, and other articles of merchandise from respondent, and thereby trade has been, and is being, diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors named in paragraph 1 hereof. As a result thereof injury has been, and is now being, done, by respondent, to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 20, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 20, 1938, respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FREDERICK LOESER & CO., INC.

Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business located at Fulton and Bond Streets, Brooklyn, N. Y. It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling garments of various kinds, ladies' wearing apparel, fabrics, and other like articles of merchandise. It sells and has sold and distributed such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing and consuming public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise when sold to be shipped from its place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the various purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said merchandise sold by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of garments of various kinds, ladies' wearing apparel, fabrics, and other like products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business and in soliciting the sale of and selling such merchandise, the respondent caused certain advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having a general circulation between and among the various States of the United States. Certain of these advertisements purporting to be descriptive of the nature, quality, and character of respondent's merchandise were in fact false and misleading.

In respondent's advertising with reference to various dresses, frocks, and dress fabrics, the respondent, among others, used the following descriptive words or phrases: "Linen Silks," "Silk Jersey," "Mallinson's Pure Dye Washable Sheer Bembergs," "Acetate Crepe," and "H. R. Mallinson's Washable Bemberg Printed Triple Sheers." In other descriptive advertising the respondent represented hats as "Linen Silks"; certain couturier blouses as "In Silk Pique" and "Seraceta Taffeta"; and bathing suits as "Silky Acetate" and "Celanese Jersey."

By means of the above descriptive words and phrases and others of similar import, the respondent represented that said articles of merchandise were composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, while in truth and in fact the products so described were composed entirely of rayon.

In its advertising under the caption “Pure Dye Silks” the respondent made the following representations: “Pure Dye Woven Sport Stripes” with “Acetate” in parentheses in small letters immediately following same and “Chalk White Plain and Novelty Sharkskin Suiting” in large type immediately followed by the word “Acetate” in parentheses in small letters.

By this means the respondent represented that the fabrics so described were composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, while in truth and in fact said fabrics were entirely composed of rayon.

In certain advertising the respondent, by use of the words “Frosted Shan—The Soft Washable Shantung Weave Acetate,” represented said fabric to be composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, when in truth and in fact said fabric was instead composed of rayon and spun silk. In the same manner, by the use of the words “Frosted Crepe (Silk and Acetate),” respondent represented said fabric to be composed of part silk, while in fact said fabric was composed entirely of rayon. Also, in describing women’s slips the respondent by use of the phrase “Crys-Glo—a certain fabric that is 50% silk and 50% Bemberg” represented said fabric to be a combination weave of various silks when in fact said fabric was composed of silk and rayon. In connection with describing men’s neckties, respondent represented by the use of the word “silk” that the fabric in said ties was composed of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, when in fact said ties were made of weighted silk and rayon.

Par. 3. By reason of the fact that “rayon” is a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing and consuming public, practically indistinguishable from silk, the use by this respondent of the various descriptive words and phrases above set out, as well as others of similar import and meaning, has had and does have a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that such products were and are made entirely of unweighted silk or unweighted silk in combination with some fiber or fabric other than rayon.

Furthermore, the respondent in connection with the garments and fabrics so designated has not described them as being composed in whole or in part of “rayon,” nor has the respondent used the word rayon in immediate connection and conjunction with such descriptive words and phrases which has the result of concealing that such garments and fabrics are in fact composed in whole or in part of rayon. Furthermore, certain of said garments and fabrics are designated as being made of "silk" when they were and are made of weighted silk. Certain other garments and fabrics were designated "Linen Silks" when in truth and in fact they were not composed in any part of linen or silk.

Par. 4. The word "silk" for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving of silk fiber. Dress goods and other items of women's apparel designated, described and referred to as "Satin," "Taffeta," and "Crepe," have been for a long time and at the present time still are associated in the public mind with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

The words "Celanese," "Acetate," "Bemberg," and "Seraceta," when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the words "Crepe," "Satin," "Taffeta," or other words or phrases of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe rayon, are not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to indicate to, or inform, them that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk, to wit, rayon.

The words "Pure Dye" have been for a long time, and still are, associated in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public, with and as designating or meaning, unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, and also with garments made therefrom; that is to say, said words are understood by a substantial portion of said public to refer to silk that has not been subjected to a metallic bath, resulting in the metallic substance or substances impregnating the silk fiber.

The name "Mallinson's" is a name long and favorably known to a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public as a manufacturer of silk and as being associated with silk exclusively, and when used in connection with the word "Bemberg" (as above used) to designate or describe rayon and without qualifying the same by the word "rayon," creates the implication that the article of merchandise referred to is silk, which implication is further emphasized by re-respondent by the use in conjunction therewith of the words "Pure Dye," a term synonymous with silk.

PAR 5: There are now, and have been at all times mentioned herein, competitors of respondent engaged in selling and distributing silk, rayon, and other fabrics and garments and other articles of merchandise made therefrom, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misrepresent in any manner the nature, character or quality of the products offered for sale and sold by them.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the representations as herein-above set forth, and as used, have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were, and are, true. On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public has been, and is being, induced to purchase fabrics, garments, and other articles of merchandise from respondent, and thereby trade has been, and is now being, diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Com-mision upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of fabrics, ladies' wearing apparel, and garments and other like articles of merchandise in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "Satin," "Taffeta," "Crepe," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, unless said descriptive word or words are used to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such words shall be qualified by using in immediate connection and conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fiber or material from which said fabric or product is made.

2. Using the word "silk," or the term "pure dye," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe fabrics which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, provided that, in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of unweighted silk and in part of rayon or a material or materials other than unweighted silk, there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words accurately describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

3. Using the words "Acetate," "Celanese," "Bemberg," "Seraceta," or "Mallinson," either alone or in combination with any other word or words, as descriptive of garments, fabrics, or material not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, unless such words are immediately accompanied by a word or words designating the substance, fiber or material other than silk of which said garments, fabrics, or material are composed with designation of each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Frederick Loeser & Co., Inc., shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

HARRY GOROV TRADING AS ISABELLA LABORATORIES, HARTMAN WHOLESALE DRUG CO., INC., ET AL.

Where an individual, corporate wholesale drug concern, and eight retail drug companies located in Chicago, and engaged in sale and distribution, under trade name "281," of medical preparation for reducing, active ingredient in which was a powerful stimulator of body metabolism which resulted, through accelerated rate thereof, in the more rapid destruction of body tissues and particularly fat, and also in marked toxic effect, causing, in some cases, direct degenerative changes in the vital organs and formation of bilateral cataracts on the eyes of users—

Caused to be disseminated false advertisements which contained, as typical, such representations as that said compound was recognized and widely prescribed by practicing physicians as aid in weight reduction, requiring no change in diet or normal mode of living or exercising, and that voluntary letters received during the past 4 years testified to the effect that no ill effects were experienced, and thereby disseminated, or caused to be disseminated, false advertisements in commerce which induced, or were likely to induce, purchase of aforesaid drug and were intended so to do;

Facts being preparation in question was not widely prescribed as aforesaid, many ill effects were often experienced from use thereof, and such use, under conditions prescribed in said advertisements and under such conditions as were customary and usual, was injurious to the health of the users and caused loss or serious impairment of eyesight, and injured and impaired other functions of the body;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that their said representations were true, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.

Waller & Nedov, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents, with the exception of Harry Gorov, who was represented by Mr. Eugene Bernstein, of Chicago, Ill.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Harry Gorov, an individual trading as Isabella Laboratories, and Hartman Wholesale
Complaint

Drugs Co., Inc., Hartman Wabash Drug Co., Hartman Drug Co., Hartman North Shore Drug Co., Hartman Pharmacy, Inc., Hartman Medinah Drug Co., Hartman LaSalle Drug Co., Hartman Stony Island Drug Co., and Hartman Sheridan Drug Co., corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Harry Gorov is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Isabella Laboratories with his principal place of business located at 220 South State Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Wabash Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 401 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 338 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman North Shore Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 4600 Broadway, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Pharmacy, Inc., is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 2059 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Medinah Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 507 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman LaSalle Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 41 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Stony Island Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 6701 Stony Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Hartman Sheridan Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 701 Sheridan Road, Chicago, Ill.

Paragraph 2. The individual respondent and corporate respondents, hereinafter named, have acted together and in cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices herein alleged.
PAR. 3. The individual respondent, Harry Gorov, trading and doing business as Isabella Laboratories, is engaged in distributing a medical preparation sold under the trade name of "281."

Corporate respondent Hartman Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., is engaged in wholesaling drugs to the other corporate respondents named herein. Included among the drugs so sold to the other corporate respondents is the preparation known as "281." All of said other corporate respondents are engaged in the retail drug business and sell among other drugs the preparation known as "281."

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said businesses, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the preparation known as "281," respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations as to the safety with which said medicine product "281" may be used to be disseminated by means of the United States mails, by means of circulars and other advertising material distributed between and among the various States of the United States, and by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and other publications distributed and circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

A SIMPLE METHOD FOR REDUCING WEIGHT

"281" is a compound recognized and widely prescribed by practicing physicians as aids in weight reduction. No change in diet or the normal mode of living or exercising is necessary. Voluntary letters received during the past 4 years testify to the fact that no ill effects are experienced.

The representations contained in the advertisement hereinabove set out, and in other advertisements similar thereto but not set out herein, are false, misleading, and untrue. This preparation is not widely prescribed by practicing physicians, as an aid in reducing weight. Many ill effects are often experienced from its use. Said advertisements of respondents are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of this product under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, and under such conditions as are customary and usual, may be injurious to the health of the user thereof by causing loss or serious impairment of eyesight and in other ways injuring or impairing the functions of the human body.

The true facts are that the active agent contained in said preparation "281" is the drug dinitro cresol. This drug is a powerful stimulator of body metabolism. Through the accelerated metabolism rate caused by the use of this drug body tissues, particularly fat, are more rapidly destroyed. This drug, however, has a marked toxic effect, causing, in some cases, direct degenerative changes in the vital organs and the formation of bilateral cataracts on the eyes of the persons subjected to its use.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in commerce in the manner above described induce, or are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a drug, to wit: the preparation known as “281.”

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the product “281” disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondent’s said medical preparation as a result of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 28, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 19, 1938, respondent Harry Gorov, trading as Isabella Laboratories, filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. On November 18, 1938, all of the other respondents named herein filed their answer, in which answer they also admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent Harry Gorov is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Isabella Laboratories with his principal place of business located at 220 South State Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Wabash Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 401 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 338 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman North Shore Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 4600 Broadway, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Pharmacy, Inc., is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 2059 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Medinah Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 507 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman LaSalle Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 41 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Stony Island Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its office and principal place of business located at 6701 Stony Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Hartman Sheridan Drug Co. is a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 701 Sheridan Road, Chicago, Ill.

Paragraph 2. The individual respondent and corporate respondents, named in paragraph 1, have acted together and in cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices herein found.

Paragraph 3. The individual respondent, Harry Gorov, trading and doing business as Isabella Laboratories, is engaged in distributing a medical preparation sold under the trade name of "281."

Corporate respondent Hartman Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., is engaged in wholesaling drugs to the other corporate respondents named herein.
Findings

Included among the drugs so sold to the other corporate respondents is the preparation known as "281." All of said other corporate respondents are engaged in the retail drug business and sell among other drugs the preparation known as "281."

Par. 4. For the purpose of inducing the purchase of the preparation known as "281," all respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations as to the safety with which said medicinal product "281" may be used to be disseminated by means of the United States mails, by means of circulars and other advertising material distributed between and among the various States of the United States, and by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and other publications distributed and circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

A SIMPLE METHOD FOR REDUCING WEIGHT

"281" is a compound recognized and widely prescribed by practicing physicians as aids in weight reduction. No change in diet or the normal mode of living or exercising is necessary. Voluntary letters received during the past 4 years testify to the fact that no ill effects are experienced.

The Commission finds that the representations contained in the advertisement hereinabove set out, and in other advertisements similar thereto but not set out herein, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the preparation designated "281" is not widely prescribed by practicing physicians as an aid in reducing weight. The Commission finds that many ill effects are often experienced from its use. The Commission further finds that the use of said product under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, and under such conditions as are customary and usual, is injurious to the health of the users thereof. Use of the product causes loss or serious impairment of eyesight. Use of the product also injures and impairs other functions of the human body.

The Commission finds that the active agent contained in said preparation "281" is the drug dinitrocresol, which drug is a powerful stimulator of body metabolism. Through the accelerated metabolism rate caused by the use of this drug body tissues, particularly fat, are more rapidly destroyed. This drug, however, has a marked toxic effect, causing, in some cases, direct degenerative changes in the vital organs and the formation of bilateral cataracts on the eyes of the persons subjected to its use.

Par. 5. The aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in commerce in the manner above described induce, or are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a drug, to wit: the preparation known as "281."

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondents in their advertising in newspapers and other publications and by means of circulars and other advertising material, in offering for sale and selling the product "281," had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations, herein above found, the public has purchased a substantial volume of the medicinal preparation designated "281."

CONCLUSION

The above acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of respondents in which answers respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Harry Gorov, trading as Isabella Laboratories, or under any other trade name, and respondents Hartman Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., Hartman Wabash Drug Co., Hartman Drug Co., Hartman North Shore Drug Co., Hartman Pharmacy, Inc., Hartman Medinah Drug Co., Hartman LaSalle Drug Co., Hartman Stony Island Drug Co., and Hartman Sheridan Drug Co., their officers and their respective representatives, agents, and employees do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of the drug known as "281" whether sold under the same name or under any other trade name, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase in commerce of said preparation "281" which advertisements represent that the preparation "281" is prescribed by practicing physicians as an aid in reducing weight and that no ill effects are experienced from its use, and which advertisements fail to state that the use of this preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary and usual may be injurious to the health of the user thereof by causing loss or serious impairment of eyesight and in other ways injuring and impairing the functions of the human body.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall within 10 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order and if so, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon them of this order said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of emblem jewelry and of pen-knives which were made in such a manner as to cause a thin gold shell or covering to be placed upon or over, and to conceal completely, a base metal filling, so that in completed product entire casing or covering or handle of the knife, with exception of skeleton holding blades, appeared to be of gold, as marked thereon as below indicated, and in sale and distribution of said knives in commerce among other States, along with other manufacturers of gold penknives who advertise and sell their products in commerce as aforesaid and in the District of Columbia, and who do not in any manner misrepresent their products, and with others who make pen-knives of part gold and part base metal mountings and sell and ship their products in commerce as aforesaid and disclose the true composition and character of their said products, and all of whom suffer loss in trade as result of its methods of doing business as below set forth, and, as thus engaged, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar products—

Caused figures and letters 10K and 14K to be stamped, branded, or imprinted upon the balls of its aforesaid penknives, manufactured as above set forth, and thereby represented to members of purchasing public and purchasers that entire casing or mountings thereof were composed wholly of gold of the fineness in quality represented thereon, facts being they were not thus composed as above set forth, in accordance with practice of jewelry manufacturers generally and, more specifically, manufacturers of solid gold penknives, of using such figures and letters to indicate mountings consisting solely of gold of 10K or 14K fineness respectively, nor in accordance with the significance of said figures and letters, as understood by substantial portion of retail dealers and members of purchasing public, as descriptive of the process of manufacture of solid gold knives, and as designating the quality, quantity, character, and fineness of the gold thereon, and as serving as representations to the general purchasing public that the mountings of said knives thus marked or branded consisted of gold of the fineness indicated;

With result that substantial portion of such dealers and members of such public were misled by its said methods and representations into erroneous and mistaken belief that its said knives were solid gold of the thickness, fineness, and character indicated by the mounting or handle thereof, and including the brass or other base metal filler, and of thereby placing in the hands of unscrupulous retailers instrument and means whereby they might perpetrate fraud upon substantial portion of such public through enabling them falsely to represent, offer, and sell its said products as superior or equal to other manufacturers' penknives properly branded as to gold content and fineness, and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of said public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced as aforesaid, that number thereof bought substantial quantity of said knives and trade was unfairly diverted from others engaged in sale of similar products among the States, and who truthfully advertise and represent the same:

Held, That such acts, representations, and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and stockroom located at 15 Maiden Lane in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent owns, operates, and controls a manufacturing plant located in the city of Newark, State of New Jersey. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing emblem jewelry and penknives and in selling and distributing such products in commerce as hereinafter set out principally to the retail trade.

Para. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said emblem jewelry and penknives, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in New York and from its factory in New Jersey to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said emblem jewelry and penknives so sold and distributed by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Para. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, the respondent is now, and has been in substantial competition with other indi-individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the business of manufacturing emblem jewelry and penknives and in selling and distributing such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The respondent, Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., in the manufacture of its penknives first purchases from cutlery manufacturers or others, the skeletons. A completed knife consists of the skeleton, together with the mountings. The skeleton of a knife consists of the blades with the brass or steel sides riveted to and enclosing them. The mounting of a knife is that part which is attached to the sides of the skeleton to make the completed knife. The respondent, in its manufacture of mountings for its penknives, causes a thin gold shell or covering to be placed upon and over a base metal filling (usually brass) and then causes the thin gold shell or covering, together with the filling, to be attached to or riveted upon the skeleton of the knife. The thin gold shell or covering is so folded over the entire metal or brass filling, including the edges thereof, that in the finished product of respondent the metal or brass filling is completely concealed.

PAR. 5. Jewelry manufacturers generally, and more specifically, the manufacturers of solid gold penknives, have generally adopted the use of certain terms in describing solid gold penknives and the figures and letters 10K and 14K when used as a designation on penknives indicate that the mountings thereof consist solely of gold of 10K or 14K fineness respectively. The figures and letters 10K and 14K so used are descriptive of the process of manufacture of solid gold knives and designate the quality, quantity, and character of the gold thereon and serve as representations to the general purchasing public that the mountings of said knives so branded consist of gold of the fineness indicated. The purchasing public so understand said custom and representations made thereby.

As a means of inducing individuals, firms and corporations to purchase its knives the respondent caused and still causes the figures and letter 10K and 14K to be stamped, branded or imprinted upon the bails of said knives. Respondent thus represents to members of the purchasing public that the mountings of its said penknives are composed wholly of gold of the fineness and quality represented.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact the respondent's penknives so marked, branded, or designated as 10K or 14K do not have mountings composed wholly of gold of the character and quantity indicated. The only gold therein consists of the thin outer shell or covering which is placed over and which conceals the metal or brass filling.
Par. 7. There are a number of competitors of respondent who manufacture and sell in commerce as herein described penknives, the mountings of which are marked or stamped with the symbols "10K or 14K" respectively, and which said mountings are in fact composed wholly of the required number of parts or proportions of gold as indicated by said brands, stamps, or symbols used generally in the jewelry trade to denote or designate the percentage of gold or number of parts or proportions of gold in said product.

Par. 8. Respondent's acts and practices in stamping or imprinting the figures and letters 10K and 14K on the bail of its product and the representations made thereby, have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and were intended and calculated to, and do, mislead and deceive the retail trade and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the complete or entire mounting of respondent's knives consists solely of 10K or 14K gold respectively and into the purchase of respondent's products on account of such beliefs so induced. Said practices of respondent also place in the hands of unscrupulous retailers an instrument and means whereby said retailers may perpetrate a fraud upon a substantial portion of the purchasing public by enabling them to falsely represent, offer for sale and sell respondent's said penknives as being superior to other articles not so branded and as being equal to penknives properly so branded as to gold content and fineness.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent have a tendency and capacity to, and do, cause trade to be diverted unfairly to respondent and the dealers in its products from those competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 7 who do not misrepresent the character, quality or value of their respective products. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 12, 1938, issued, and on May 31, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive practices and acts in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondent filed its answer thereto admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., is a corporation, duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office, storeroom, and place of business at No. 15 Maiden Lane, New York City, State of New York. It maintains a factory or manufacturing plant at 120 South Street, Newark, N. J. Respondent has been for more than 3 years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling emblem jewelry and penknives, which said emblem jewelry and penknives have been manufactured at its manufacturing plant located in the city of Newark, State of New Jersey, during all of which time it has been selling and distributing such products in commerce among and between various States of the United States other than the States of New York and New Jersey, in which the respondent's principal office and manufacturing plant are located and from both of which shipments are made. In the course and conduct of its business respondent has been in competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business respondent, in the sale of its products and for the purpose of inducing the public to purchase said products, has used, caused, and still causes, the figures and letters 10K and 14K, indicating the fineness of the gold, to be stamped, branded or imprinted upon the bails of said penknives, which penknives have been manufactured in such manner as to cause a thin gold shell or covering to be placed upon or over a base metal filling (usually brass) and then causes the thin gold shell or covering, together with the filling, to be attached to or riveted upon the skeleton of the knife. The said gold shell or covering is so folded and impressed over the entire metal or brass filling including the edges thereof, that in the finished products of respondent the metal or brass filling is completely concealed, in such manner as to make it appear that the entire casing or covering or handle of the penknife with the exception of the skeleton holding the blades is of the 10K or 14K gold which is stamped, branded or imprinted upon the bails of the said knives as set forth above. Respondent thus represents to the members of the purchasing public and purchasers that the entire case or mountings of its said penknives are composed wholly of gold of the fineness and quality represented thereon.

Jewelry manufacturers generally and more specifically the manufacturers of solid gold penknives, have generally adopted the use of certain terms in describing solid gold penknives, and the figures and letters 10K and 14K when used as a designation on penknives indicate that the mountings thereof consist solely of gold of 10K and 14K fineness, respectively. The figures and letters 10K and 14K so used are descriptive of the process of manufacture of solid gold knives and designate the quality, quantity, character, and fineness of the gold thereon and serve as representations to the general purchasing public that the mountings of said knives, so marked or branded, consist of gold of the fineness indicated. The representations by the respondent are similar to those generally used in the trade.

Par. 3. A substantial portion of retail dealers and members of the purchasing public in conformity with the custom of the manufacturers and jewelry trade in general, understand and believe that penknives offered for sale and sold by the jewelry trade and other stores, on the mountings or bails of which are stamped or imprinted the letters and figures 10K and 14K to be a representation that the said mountings consisting of the entire encasing of the skeleton of said penknives is of 10K or 14K gold and so understanding said custom, and based upon the method of manufacture and the representations of respondent to import and indicate that the penknives manufactured and sold by it were (except the skeleton and blades) solid gold penknives of the fineness and character indicated by the markings 10K and 14K on the mountings or bails, a substantial portion of said retail dealers and members of the purchasing public were misled by the methods and representations of respondent into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's penknives were solid gold of the thickness, fineness, and character indicated by the mounting or handle of same including the brass or other base metal filler.

The respondent's method and manner of manufacturing, representing, and selling said penknives is false, misleading, and untrue. The sacd penknives or the mountings thereof are not gold of 10 or 14 karat fineness or quality as indicated, but consist of a mounting composed for the most part of a base metal and so constructed as to appear as solid gold when in fact only a very small part of said mounting is solid gold.

Par. 4. There are other manufacturers of gold penknives who advertise and sell and ship their products and are now selling and shipping their products in commerce among and between various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and there are other manufacturers who make penknives of part gold and part base metal mountings, who sell and ship their products in commerce as above who disclose the true composition and character of their penknives, all of whom suffer a loss in trade as a result of respondent's methods of doing business.

The acts, practices, and representations of the respondent place in the hands of unscrupulous retailers an instrument and means whereby said retailers may perpetrate a fraud upon a substantial portion of the purchasing public enabling them to falsely represent, offer for sale and sell respondent's said penknives as superior or equal to other manufacturers' penknives properly branded as to the gold content and fineness.

Par. 5. The respondent's acts and practices in stamping or imprinting the figures and letters 10K and 14K on the bail of its penknives and the representations made thereby in offering for sale and selling its penknives were and are calculated to, and had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Further as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief, induced by said representations of respondent, as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said penknives with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale of penknives, who ship their said penknives from the States where manufactured into and among other States of the United States and who truthfully advertise and represent their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, representations, and practices of respondent, Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., have been and are, to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sinnock & Sherrill, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate, or other device, in connection with the manufacture, offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its penknives in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Marking or branding its penknives having an outer shell or covering of gold and an inner concealed sheet or filling of base metal with any word, marks or figures indicating gold fineness so as to import or imply that the entire filling and shell of the handle of said penknives with the exception of the skeleton are gold.

2. Marking or stamping any marks or figures on its penknives indicating the fineness of gold of which any part or parts of said penknives are made without correctly indicating the specific part or parts that are so composed.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
LA PERLA VINEYARD COMPANY AND HARRY EX, DOING BUSINESS AS S. GOLDENBURG & COMPANY, RAMSHEAD PRODUCTS COMPANY AND RAMSHEAD DISTILLING COMPANY, AND AS PRESIDENT OF LA PERLA VINEYARD COMPANY

Docket 3433. Complaint, May 21, 1938—Decision, Jan. 10, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in purchasing, processing, bottling, and distributing wines at wholesale to purchasers in other States, and in substantial competition with others engaged in purchasing, processing, and bottling wines, and also with those who own, operate, and control vineyards and manufacture wines from grapes grown therein and sell and distribute their said products in commerce among the States and in said District, and including among competitors aforesaid, thus owning, operating, and controlling vineyards and manufacturing wines from grapes therein, those who use term “vineyard” in their corporate or trade name and in their advertising literature, and those likewise engaged only as bottlers and wholesalers of wine who do not in any way misrepresent the character or nature of their business—

(a) Represented to vendees and ultimate consuming public, through use of word “vineyard” in its corporate name, on letterheads, invoices, and labels attached to bottles in which its wines were offered and sold, and in various other ways, that it was the producer and manufacturer of such products, facts being it neither owned, operated, nor controlled any vineyard, nor made any wine, but purchased its said products in the open market and bottled same on its premises; and

(b) Represented, through statements appearing upon its stationery and in various other ways, that it owned and operated the famous La Perla Vineyards at St. Helena, Calif., facts being it never at any time owned, operated, or controlled said long well-known vineyard with its 200 acres in grapes and winery thereon;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers of its said wines into the erroneous and mistaken belief that in buying products from it they were dealing with a concern which owned and operated its own vineyards and made therefrom wines which it offered and sold, and were dealing with owners and operators of aforesaid La Perla Vineyards, and that in thus buying its said wine, as from supposed owners and operators, they were gaining saving in middleman’s cost, and other benefits, as commonly believed among wholesalers, retailers, and purchasing public, which associate with such direct purchase superior grade of product, considerable saving in price, and other advantages; and

Where an individual engaged as wholesaler and retailer of wines and liquors, and president of aforesaid corporation, as of second company, and in direct control of the business policies and practices of both; and said second corporation, engaged as aforesaid in sale of their alcoholic beverages to purchasers in various States and in the aforesaid District, and in substantial competition with others engaged in alcoholic beverage industry as manufacturers or as rectifiers, blenders, and bottlers, and with wholesalers only, who sell and distribute their products in commerce among the various States and in said District, and including those who truthfully represent themselves as distillers, and rectifiers, blenders, bottlers, and wholesalers only, who in no way misrepresent the nature and character of their business—

(c) Represented, through use of word "distilling" in the corporate name of said company last referred to, in written agreements, newspaper advertising, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which they offered their products for sale, and in various other ways, to their customers and furnished same with means of representing to said customers' vendees and to ultimate consuming public that the alcoholic beverages thus offered were made by said second company through process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, facts being it was not a distilling company and did not own, operate or control any place or places where such beverages were made by process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into substantial purchase of their said alcoholic beverages by reason thereof, and with result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from their competitors aforesaid:

Heid, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Pam, Hurd & Reichmann, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that La Perla Vineyard Co., a corporation, and Harry Ex, an individual doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co., Ramshead Products Co., and Ramshead Distilling Co., and also as president of the La Perla Vineyard Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., is an Illinois corporation, organized in 1922. Its principal office and place of business are at 1404–1406 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. Said respondent maintains a branch office and distribution center at San Francisco, Calif. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in purchasing, processing, bottling, and distributing wines at wholesale.
The respondent, Harry Ex, is an individual doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co., Ramshead Products Co., and Ramshead Distilling Co., at 1404-1406 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. He is a wholesaler and retailer of wines and liquors. S. Goldenburg & Co. was organized as a partnership in 1902. Respondent Ex is the surviving partner and sole owner of the business. Ramshead Products Co. and Ramshead Distilling Co. are trade names used by respondent Ex in the conduct of his aforesaid business. Respondent Ex is also president of the respondent corporation, La Perla Vineyard Co., and as such directs and controls its business policies and practices. Both respondents have acted and now act in cooperation in carrying out the acts and practices herein charged.

The respondents now cause, and for several years last past have caused, their intoxicating beverages, when sold by them, to be shipped from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from the distribution center at San Francisco, Calif., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, other than the States of Illinois and California, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for several years last past has been, a course of trade in said alcoholic beverages so sold and distributed by the respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in purchasing, processing, and bottling wines. Said respondent is also in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals that own, operate, and control vineyards and manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein. Said competitors sell and distribute their said wines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent Ex, doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co., Ramshead Products Co., and Ramshead Distilling Co., is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with individuals, corporations, and partnerships engaged in the alcoholic beverage industry as manufacturers or as rectifiers, blenders, and bottlers, and with wholesalers only, that sell and distribute their products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. For a long period of time, the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of distillers, rectifiers, wholesalers, and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacture of such liquors by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled by the actual distillers and manufacturers thereof.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "distilling" in his trade name which appears in written agreements, in newspaper advertising, on the labels attached to bottles in which he offers his products for sale, and in various other ways, the respondent Ex represents to his customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees and to the ultimate consuming public that the alcoholic beverages thus offered for sale are manufactured by the said respondent through the process distillation from mash, wort, or wash. In truth and in fact, the respondent Ex is not a distiller and does not own and operate or con­ control any place or places where alcoholic beverages are manufactured by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

Par. 4. Among respondent Ex's aforesaid competitors, there are individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors who truthfully represent themselves as distillers. There are also among the aforesaid competitors of respondent Ex rectifiers, blenders, and bottlers, and wholesalers only, who in no way misrepresent the nature or character of the business they are engaged in.

Par. 5. The use by respondent Ex of the representations set forth herein, has had, and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's alcoholic beverages on account of such erroneous belief. As a result of the representations aforesaid, trade is being, and has been, diverted unfairly to respondent Ex from his aforesaid competitors and injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, the respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., has represented, and now represents to its vendees and to the ultimate consuming public, through the use of the word "vineyard" in its corporate name, which appears on its letterheads, invoices, and the labels attached to bottles in which its wines are offered for sale and sold, and in various other ways, that it is the producer and manufacturer of said wines. In truth and in fact, the respondent does not own and operate or control any vineyard or manufacture any wine, but its wines are purchased in the open market and bottled on its premises in Chicago, Ill.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., through statements appearing upon its stationery and in various other ways represents that it owns and operates the famous La Perla Vineyard at St. Helena, Calif. The said La Perla Vineyard, which consists of about 200 acres planted in grapes and on which is located a winery, has been a very well known vineyard since about 1880. A California corporation organized in 1903 as the La Perla Vineyard Co. owned and operated the La Perla Vineyard until it was purchased by the Windsor Vineyard Co. about 1935. The respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., has never at any time owned, operated, or controlled the said La Perla Vineyard.

Par. 8. It is the common belief among wholesalers, retailers, and the purchasing public that a superior grade of wine can be purchased direct from the owners and operators of vineyards who manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein and that a considerable saving in price and other advantages can be secured by dealing direct with such manufacturers. The representations made by the respondent, as alleged in paragraphs 6 and 7 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive purchasers of respondent's wines into the erroneous and mistaken belief that when they purchase said wines from the respondent they are dealing with a concern that owns and operates its own vineyards and manufactures therefrom the wines which it offers for sale and sells, and that they are dealing with the company which owns and operates the aforesaid La Perla Vineyards. Said purchasers are thus led to believe that when they purchase respondents' wine, they are gaining an advantage in price by saving the middleman's cost and are also gaining other advantages.

Par. 9. There are among the competitors of respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, and individuals that own, operate, and control vineyards and manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein who use the term "vineyard" in their corporate or trade names and in their advertising literature. There are also among respondent's said competitors, corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in business only as bottlers and wholesalers of wine who do not in any way misrepresent the character or nature of their business.

Par. 10. The use by respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., of the representations set forth herein, has had, and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said alcoholic beverages on account of such erroneous belief. As a result of the representations aforesaid, trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from its aforesaid competitors and injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 21, 1938, issued, and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, La Perla Vineyard Co., a corporation, and Harry Ex, an individual doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co., Ramshead Products Co., and Ramshead Distilling Co., a corporation, and also as president of the La Perla Vineyard Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer on June 11, 1938, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor answer dated October 17, 1938, admitting all the material allegations of facts set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the substitute answer and the record herein, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., is an Illinois corporation, organized in 1922. Its principal office and place of business are at 1404-1406 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. Said respondent maintains a branch office and distribution center at San Francisco, Calif. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in purchasing, processing, bottling, and distributing wines at wholesale.

The respondent, Harry Ex, is an individual doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co. and Ramshead Products Co. at 1404-1406 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. He is a wholesaler and retailer of wines and liquors. S. Goldenburg & Co. was organized as a partnership in 1902 and respondent Ex is the surviving partner and sole owner of the business. Respondent Ramshead Distilling Co. is an Illinois corporation organized in 1932. Its principal office and place of business are also at 1404-1406 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Ex is president of both respondent corporations and as such directs and controls their business policies and practices. All respondents have acted and now act in cooperation in carrying out the acts and practices herein charged.

The respondents now cause, and for several years last past have caused, their alcoholic beverages, when sold by them, to be shipped from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from the distribution center at San Francisco, Calif., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, other than the States of Illinois and California, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for several years last past has been, a course of trade in said alcoholic beverages so sold and distributed by the respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., is, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in purchasing, processing, and bottling wines. Said respondent is also in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals that own, operate, and control vineyards and manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein. Said competitors sell and distribute their said wines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent Ex, doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co. and as Ramshead Products Co., and the respondent Ramshead Distilling Co., are, and for several years last past have been, in substantial competition with individuals, corporations, and partnerships engaged in the alcoholic beverage industry as manufacturers or as rectifiers, blenders, and bottlers, and with wholesalers only, that sell and distribute their products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, the respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., has represented, and now represents to its vendees and to the ultimate consuming public, through the use of the word “vineyard” in its corporate name, which appears on its letterheads, invoices, and the labels attached to bottles in which its wines are offered for sale and sold, and in various other ways, that it is the producer and manufacturer of said wines. In truth and in fact, the respondent does not own and operate or control any vineyard or manufacture any wine, but its wines are purchased in the open market and bottled on its premises in Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co. through statements appearing upon its stationery and in various other ways represents that it owns and operates the famous La Perla Vineyard at St. Helena, Calif. The said La Perla Vineyard, which consists of about 200 acres planted in grapes and on which is located a winery, has been a very well known vineyard since about 1880. A California corporation organized in 1903 as the La Perla Vineyard Co. owned and operated the La Perla Vineyard until it was purchased by the Windsor Vineyard Co. about 1935. The respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., has never at any time owned, operated, or controlled the said La Perla Vineyard.

PAR. 4. It is the common belief among wholesalers, retailers, and the purchasing public that a superior grade of wine can be purchased direct from the owners and operators of vineyards who manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein and that a considerable saving in price and other advantages can be secured by dealing direct with such manufacturers. The representations made by the respondent, as alleged in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive purchasers of respondent’s wines into the erroneous and mistaken belief that when they purchase said wines from the respondent they are dealing with a concern that owns and operates its own vineyards and manufactures therefrom the wines which it offers for sale and sells, and that they are dealing with the company which owns and operates the aforesaid La Perla Vineyards. Said purchasers are thus led to believe that when they purchase respondent’s wine, they are gaining an advantage in price by saving the middleman’s cost and are also gaining other advantages.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent, La Perla Vineyard Co., as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, and individuals that own, operate, and control vineyards and manufacture wine from the grapes grown therein who use the term “vineyard” in their corporate or trade names and in their advertising literature. There are also among respondent's said competitors, corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in business only as bottlers and wholesalers of wine who do not in any way misrepresent the character or nature of their business.

Par. 6. For a long period of time, the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of distillers, rectifiers, wholesalers, and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacture of such liquors by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled by the actual distillers and manufacturers thereof.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "distilling" in the corporate name which appears in written agreements, in newspaper advertising, on the labels attached to bottles in which they offer their products for sale, and in various other ways, the respondents, Ramshead Distilling Co. and Harry Ex, represent to their customers and furnish them with the means of representing to their vendees and to the ultimate consuming public that the alcoholic beverages thus offered for sale are manufactured by the said Ramshead Distilling Co. through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash. In truth and in fact, the respondent Ramshead Distilling Co. is not a distilling company and does not own and operate or control any place or places where alcoholic beverages are manufactured by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

Par. 8. Among the competitors of respondents Ramshead Distilling Co. and Harry Ex, as set out in paragraph 1 hereof, there are individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors who truthfully represent themselves as distillers. There are also among the aforesaid competitors rectifiers, blenders, and bottlers, and wholesalers only, who in no way misrepresent the nature or character of the business they are engaged in.

Par. 9. The use by respondents of the representations set forth herein, has had, and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' alcoholic beverages on account of such erroneous belief. As a result of the representations aforesaid, trade is being, and has been, diverted unfairly to respondents from their aforesaid competitors.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, La Perla Vineyard Co., a corporation, Harry Ex, doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co. and as Ramshead Products Co., and Ramshead Distilling Co., a corporation, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the record herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, La Perla Vineyard Co., a corporation, and Ramshead Distilling Co., a corporation, and their respective officers, and respondent Harry Ex, an individual doing business as S. Goldenburg & Co. and as Ramshead Products Co. or under any other names, and all of their respective agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of wines, liquors, and other alcoholic beverages in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or through any corporate or other device or in any manner:

Representing through the use of the word "distilling," or the word "vineyard," or any other word or words of like import, in a corporate or trade name, on stationery, labels, or other advertising matter, or in any other manner (a) that they, or any of them, are distillers; or (b) that they, or any of them, manufacture the said wines or alcoholic beverages; or (c) that they, or any of them, own, operate, or control a vineyard, or place where wines or other alcoholic beverages are manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in manufacture and sale of so-called "Penny Nips" confection to dealers in the various States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising his said product in periodicals and newspapers of interstate circulation and other circulars distributed to prospective purchasers in commerce among the various States, or to agents—

(a) Represented that said product was a noncompetitive item, and that such or similar product had never been sold in the territories awarded to the particular dealers prior to the signing of their contracts, and that no State license would be required of them to sell his said confection in the various States in which he was attempting to operate, facts being it was not non-competitive, but many other confections of similar and better quality had been and were being sold in all parts of the United States at lower prices than those charged for said "Penny Nips," many similar products had been sold in territories awarded his said dealers, and similar products had been sold therein prior to the signing of their contracts, and State licenses were required of them as a condition to their being permitted to sell merchandise in question in their respective territories;

(b) Represented that said product would withstand 132° F. heat, and that it contained pure fruit juices, and that he would furnish purchaser with a copy of letter from the city of Fort Worth as to the purity of his said confection, facts being it would not withstand heat as above claimed, but would run and become of no value at a much lower temperature, such product did not contain pure fruit juices, but was composed of artificial coloring, acid, sugar, and water, and he had no letter from city officials of said city certifying as to purity and wholesomeness of his said confection;

(c) Represented that his agents would remain in the respective territories with the dealers involved to aid them in the sale of such confection, until the deposits of whatever amount paid by them had been returned to them through sales of such product, facts being such agents did not thus remain in the various territories involved with the dealers concerned to aid them as aforesaid, but, on the contrary, left such territories as soon as they secured the dealers' payments and did not thus help them; and

(d) Represented that merchandise in question would be shipped to a bonded warehouse, to which dealers might go and take out merchandise in such quantities as they might need by paying balance of $9 per case due thereon, and that a certain amount of free merchandise would be shipped to dealers to repay them for any expense incurred by shipping charges, and that a certain amount would be shipped to them direct, prepaid, facts being goods in question were shipped c. o. d., and he did not, as above represented, ship merchandise to warehouses prepaid, as aforesaid, so that such dealers might get such merchandise as above set out, nor send certain amounts of free merchandise to dealers to repay them for shipping expenses, nor ship goods directly to them prepaid;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of his said products as result of such erroneous belief, and with result of thereby diverting trade unfairly to him from competitor manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false and misleading representations concerning the same and their business methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Floyd Irl Sorrells, trading as Texas Tasty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Floyd Irl Sorrells is an individual trading under the name of Texas Tasty Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 904 West Richmond Street, Fort Worth, Tex. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of a confection known as "Penny Nips," and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused his said product, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such product in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar products, other confections, carbonated beverages, and chewing gum in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, through the media of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers of interstate circulation, circulars, and other advertising literature which are and have been distributed to prospective purchasers in commerce, representatives or agents, respondent makes and has made various deceptive, false, and misleading statements and representations to the following effect:

1. That respondent's product is a noncompetitive item.
2. That the product will withstand 132° F. heat.
3. That respondent will furnish the purchaser or dealer with a copy of a letter from the city of Fort Worth, Tex. as to the purity and wholesomeness of respondent's product.
4. That respondent's product contains pure fruit juice.
5. That the respondent's agents or representatives will remain in the territories with said dealers aiding them in getting their sales forces organized and will remain with them until the deposit of whatever amounts paid by said dealers have been returned to them through sales of said product.
6. That the merchandise will be shipped to a bonded warehouse and that said dealers may go to said bonded warehouse and take the merchandise out in such quantities as they may need by paying a balance of $9 per case due on the merchandise.
7. That a certain amount of free merchandise will be shipped to the dealers to repay them for any expenses they have incurred in paying shipping charges.
8. That a certain amount of goods will be shipped to said dealers direct prepaid.
9. That the respondent's product, or a similar product, has never been sold in the territories awarded said dealers prior to the signing of contracts by them.
10. That no State license will be required to sell respondent's products in the various States in which respondent is attempting to operate.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, respondent's product is not a noncompetitive article but, on the contrary, many other confections of similar and better quality are and have been sold in all parts of the United States at lower prices than those for which "Penny Nips" are sold; the product will not withstand 132° F. heat, but, on the contrary, at a much lower temperature will run, lose its shape, and become of no value; respondent has no letter from the city officials of Fort Worth, Tex., certifying to the purity and wholesomeness of his product; said product consists of a paraffin or wax container, containing artificial flavoring, artificial coloring, acid, sugar, and water, and does not contain pure fruit juices; respondent's agents or representatives do not remain in the territories with said dealers aiding them in getting their sales force organized and until the deposits made by said dealers have been earned and paid back to them, but, on the contrary, said representatives or agents of respondent leave the territories as soon as they get said dealers' payments and do not aid them in any manner in setting up their sales forces and helping them until they get back the amounts they have paid said representatives of respondent; respondent does not ship the merchandise to bonded warehouses prepaid so that said dealers may get such merchandise from said warehouses by paying for the amounts they desire to withdraw; respondent will not and does not send certain amounts of free merchandise to said dealers to repay them for expenses incurred in paying shipping charges; respondent will not ship goods direct to said dealers prepaid but invariably ships such goods to said dealers c. o. d.; there are many similar products sold in territories awarded said dealers and similar products have been sold prior to the signing of the contracts by said dealers; and said dealers do have to purchase State license before they are permitted to sell said merchandise of respondent in the territories assigned to them.

Par. 4. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations above referred to have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true and to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's product as a result of such erroneous belief. There are among said competitors of respondent, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products and their methods of doing business. By the statements and representations by respondent as aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 12, 1938, issued, and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Floyd Irl Sorrells, individually and trading as Texas Tasty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Floyd Irl Sorrells, is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of Texas Tasty Co. with his principal place of business and office located at 904 West Richmond Street, Fort Worth, Tex. He is now and for some time last past, has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of a confection known as "Penny Nips" and in the distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused the said product, when sold, to be transported from his place of business as aforesaid to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 2 years last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such product in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar products, other confections, carbonated beverages, and chewing gum, in commerce between the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in magazines and newspapers of interstate circulation and other circulars distributed to prospective purchasers in commerce among and between the various States of the United States or agents, has advertised said product and has made representations respecting the same to the following effect:

1. The respondent's product is a noncompetitive item.

2. That the product will withstand 132° F. heat.

3. That respondent will furnish the purchaser with a copy of a letter from the city of Forth Worth, Tex., as to the purity of respondent's product.

4. That respondent's product contains pure fruit juice.

5. That respondent's agents will remain in the respective territories with said dealers to aid them in the sale of said product until the deposit of whatever amounts paid by said dealers has been returned to them through sales of said product.

6. That the merchandise will be shipped to a bonded warehouse to which said dealers may go and take the merchandise out in such quantities as they may need by paying a balance of $9 per case due thereon.

7. That a certain amount of free merchandise will be shipped to the dealers to repay them for any expense incurred by shipping charges.

8. That a certain amount of goods will be shipped to said dealers direct prepaid.

9. That the respondent's product or similar product has never been sold in the territories awarded said dealers prior to the signing of contracts by them.

10. That no State license will be required to sell respondent's product in the various States in which respondent is attempting to operate.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact respondent's product is not a noncompetitive article but on the contrary many other confections of similar and better quality are and have been sold in all parts of the United States at lower prices than those for which "Penny Nips" are sold; the product will not withstand 132° F. heat, but it will run and become of no value at a much lower temperature; respondent has no letter from the city officials of Forth Worth, Tex., certifying to the purity and wholesomeness of his product; said product contains artificial flavoring, artificial coloring, acid, sugar, and water and does not contain pure fruit juices; respondent's agents do not remain in the territories with said dealers aiding them in their sales until the deposit made by said dealers has been earned and paid back to them but on the contrary said agents leave the territories as soon as they get said dealers' payments and do not aid them in sales; respondent does not ship the merchandise to bonded warehouses prepaid so that said dealers may get such merchandise from said warehouse by paying for the amount they desire to withdraw; respondent does not send certain amounts of free merchandise to said dealers to repay them for expenses incurred in shipping charges; respondent will not ship goods direct to said dealers prepaid but ships such goods c. o. d.; there are many similar products sold in territories awarded said dealers and similar products have been sold prior to the signing of the contracts by said dealers; that said dealers do have to purchase State licenses before they are permitted to sell said merchandise of respondent in the respective territories assigned to them.

Par. 4. The use by respondent of the statements and representations above referred to have had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's product as a result of such erroneous belief. There are among said competitors of respondent manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false and misleading representations concerning their products and their methods of doing business. By the statements and representations of respondent, as aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order to Cease and Desist

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Floyd Irl Sorrells, an individual trading as the Texas Tasty Co. or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of confections known as "Penny Nips," whether sold under the name or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing directly or in any manner whatever
1. That such confection is a noncompetitive article of merchandise.
2. That such confection will remain in marketable condition in weather temperature up to 132° Fahrenheit.
3. That the city officials of Fort Worth, Tex., or of any other city, have certified the purity of such confection, until and unless such officials have so certified respondent's confection.
4. That the liquid in such confection is pure fruit juice.
5. That respondent's representatives or agents will remain in the territory allotted to a dealer under contract, for the purpose of aiding the dealer in his sale of respondent's product, until the dealer has sold merchandise equaling the amount the dealer advanced to respondent's representative or agent as a consideration for the contract.
6. That such confection will be shipped by respondent to a bonded warehouse, where the dealer may withdraw it in small quantities by paying the amount due on each small box so withdrawn.
7. That free merchandise will be shipped to the dealer to reimburse him for expense incurred in paying shipping charges, unless such merchandise is actually shipped.
8. That such confection will be shipped to purchasers charges prepaid, unless it is in fact so shipped.
9. That products similar to respondent's confection or respondent's confection have never been sold in the territory allotted to the dealer, when such is not the fact.
10. That no State or municipal license will be charged the dealer for selling respondent's confection in the territory allotted to such dealer.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

EDWARD E. PARTAIN, TRADING AS PAR-TEX HOSIERY MILLS

Docket 3510. Complaint, July 26, 1938—Decision, Jan. 10, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale of men's and women's hosiery through agents whom he supplied with samples, sales kits, letter of introduction, and other supplies and printed matter, and who solicited sale of his said products directly by house-to-house canvassing—

(a) Represented, directly, that hosiery purchased would be of quality, grade, texture, and color corresponding to samples selected by purchaser, and that it was woven with a special lock stitch which prevented it from snagging, running, or developing holes, and that it would last from 6 to 12 months and was guaranteed, and that he would replace, with new, worn hosiery which failed to wear as represented, facts being hosiery supplied was inferior in grade, texture, and quality to that represented by his said agents and, in many instances, not of size and color indicated by purchaser, was not woven as above set forth, nor so as to prevent it from snagging, running, or developing holes, and it did not last for period of time specified and he did not make replacements as promised and guaranteed, but included with goods shipped guarantee which differed from that represented by his salesmen or representatives;

(b) Made use of word “Mills” in trade name employed by him, and represented that he was the only hosiery manufacturer in the State of Texas selling direct to the consumer, facts being he did not make women's hose offered and sold by him, but purchased said product from various manufacturers thereof; and

(c) Delayed unduly and unreasonably correction of mistakes in filling orders, and failed and neglected to make promised adjustments, and retained hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failed and neglected to refund purchaser's money and refused adjustments on ladies' hose without payment ranging from 35 to 45 cents a pair;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of his said product in and on account of such beliefs, and with result that trade was thereby unfairly diverted to him from competitors who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their products or their business status:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.
Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.
Coke & Coke, of Dallas, Tex., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Edward E. Partain, trading as Par-Tex Hosiery Mills, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Edward E. Partain, is an individual trading as Par-Tex Hosiery Mills, having his principal office and place of business at 2814 Elm Street, in the city of Dallas, State of Texas. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of selling men’s and ladies' hosiery in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said hosiery, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Texas to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than Texas and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 1 year last past, and still is, a constant current of trade in commerce in said men's and ladies' hosiery thus sold and distributed by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of men's and ladies' hosiery in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent purchases his ladies' hose from various manufacturers. Respondent's best grade and first line of ladies' hosiery is purchased at a cost of from $5.50 to $6.50 per dozen pairs to respondent. Respondent has agents and representatives who are given samples of various men's and ladies' hosiery, certain sales kits, and letter of introduction and authority as agent, along with other supplies and literature furnished by respondent. Respondent, by and through said sales agents and representatives, solicits the sale of and sells and has sold men's and ladies' hosiery directly to the persons by whom said hosiery is to be worn, through house to house canvassing. Orders so solicited and received are forwarded to the respondent at his principal place of business in the city of Dallas, in the State of Texas, and shipments are made pursuant thereto. Said sales agents and representatives of respondent represent that said orders, when received by respondent, are filled according to the statements and representations made by them and with hosiery of a grade, quality, and texture as shown by samples displayed by said sales agents and representatives, and of a color and size selected by the customer.

PAR. 3. Respondent in the course and conduct of his business, in commerce, as aforesaid, represents by and through his sales agents and representatives:

(a) That the hosiery purchased from respondent will be of a grade, texture and quality corresponding to the sample selected by the purchaser from the samples exhibited by said sales agent or representative, and of the color and size selected by such purchaser;

(b) That the “Par-Tex” hosiery sold by him is woven with a special lock stitch which prevents them from snagging, running, or developing holes;

(c) That such hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof from 6 to 12 months.

PAR. 4. Respondent in the course and conduct of his business in said commerce, as aforesaid, through his sales agents and representatives makes use of, and has made use of, the following methods and practices:

(a) Sending to purchasers hosiery of a grade, texture, and quality different from that of the samples exhibited by the sales agent and representatives of the respondent and from which the purchaser had made the selection and in forwarding the purchaser hosiery of a different color and size from that selected by such purchaser;

(b) Unduly and unreasonably delaying the correction of mistakes in filling orders, or failing and neglecting to make adjustments as promised;

(c) Retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failure or neglecting to refund the money paid by the purchasers;

(d) Refusing to make adjustments on ladies’ hose unless and until purchasers remit or agree to pay from 35 to 45 cents per pair for each pair of ladies’ hosiery on which adjustment is made;

(e) By including in each parcel or envelope in which his hosiery is shipped a guarantee different from that represented by his salesman or representative, to wit:

GUARANTEE

We guarantee our merchandise to be perfect in material and workmanship and with reasonable care and proper laundering to give service as follows:
Complaint

No. 286  Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 360  Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 205  Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 1200 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 8 months
No. 1240 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 8 months

All women's hose guaranteed 6 pairs to wear 6 months.

With proper laundering and care you will have no difficulty whatever in securing the maximum wear from every pair. If, however, you are not satisfied with the service you receive, return the hose to us laundered, and adjustment will be made in accordance with the amount of wear you have received.

Notice: For best results silk stockings should be washed after each wearing.

PAR-TEX HOSIERY MILLS
2814 Elm Street
Dallas, Texas

The only hosiery manufacturer in Texas selling direct to the consumer.

Par. 5. The representations of respondent set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof, and others similar thereto, have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and do deceive and mislead, purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's said hosiery into the false and erroneous belief:

(a) That the men's and ladies' hosiery sold and distributed by respondent are made of fabrics of the grade, texture, and quality corresponding to the samples displayed by respondent's sales agents and representatives and as selected by said purchasers, and of the size and color indicated by the purchaser;

(b) That correction of mistakes in filling orders will not be unduly and unreasonably delayed;

(c) That deposits made on hosiery purchases by purchasers will be refunded unless exchange or other satisfactory adjustment is made;

(d) That respondent's hosiery is woven with a special lock stitch, preventing it from snagging, running, or developing holes;

(e) That respondent's hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof, snag-proof, or run-proof for a period of from 6 to 12 months;

(f) That purchasers of respondent's hosiery will get a new pair in exchange without additional charge if and when it develops holes within the period guaranteed;

(g) That respondent is the manufacturer of the ladies' hosiery sold and offered for sale by him.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact respondent ships to purchasers hosiery of a grade, texture, and quality inferior to the samples selected and of a grade, texture, and quality inferior to that represented by his sales agents and representatives, and, in many instances, not of the size and color indicated by the purchaser. Respondent unduly and unreasonably delays correction of mistakes and filling orders, and neglects to make adjustments as promised. Respondent does not re­fund the deposit made on hosiery purchases by purchasers when ex­changes or other adjustments are not made. The hosiery sold by the respondent is not woven with a special lock stitch, nor does the weave or stitch prevent said hosiery from snagging, running, or developing holes. Said hosiery will not, and does not, under normal wear, last for the period of time specified and the respondent will not, and does not, replace worn hosiery with new hosiery within the period of time promised in said guarantee. Respondent does not replace a pair of ladies’ worn hosiery unless the purchaser will pay from 35 to 45 cents per pair for each pair replaced, which in truth and fact practically covers the actual cost to respondent of a new pair of respondent’s best grade and first line of ladies’ hose. Respondent does not manu­facture the ladies’ hosiery sold and offered for sale by him.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of the respondent, in said commerce, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of hosiery who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and who do not use the methods or practices used by the respondent as hereinbefore alleged in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their products.

PAR. 8. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs described in paragraph 5, hereof, and into the purchase of respondent’s said hosiery in and on account of such beliefs. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors, and, as a consequence thereof, substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Com­mission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 26, 1938, issued, and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Edward E. Partain, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in com­merce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent’s answer, the Com­mission, by order entered herein, granted respondent’s motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Edward E. Partain, is an individual trading as Par-Tex Hosiery Mills, having his principal office and place of business at 2814 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling men's and women's hosiery in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said hosiery, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Texas to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than Texas and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 1 year last past and still is a constant current of trade in commerce in said men's and women's hosiery thus sold and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of men's and women's hosiery in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent purchases his women's hose from various manufacturers. He has agents who are given samples of various men's and women's hosiery, certain sales kits, a letter of introduction and authority as agent along with other supplies and literature furnished by respondent. Through these agents he solicits the sale of and sells and has sold men's and women's hosiery directly to the persons by whom said hosiery is to be worn by means of house to house canvassing. Orders so solicited and received are forwarded to the respondent at his place of business in Dallas, Tex., and shipments are made pursuant thereto. Said sales agents of respondent represent that said orders, when received by respondent, are filled according to the statements made by them and with hosiery of a quality and texture as shown by samples displayed by said sales agents and of a color and size selected by the customer.

Par. 3. Respondent, in the course of his business in commerce as aforesaid, represents directly and by and through his sales agents:

(a) That the hosiery purchased will be of a grade and quality corresponding to the samples selected by the purchaser from the samples exhibited by said sales agent, and of the color and size selected by said purchaser;

(b) That the "Par-Tex" hosiery sold by him is woven with a special lock stitch which prevents them from snagging, running, or developing holes;

(c) That such hosiery is guaranteed to be hole-proof from 6 to 12 months;

(d) That respondent is the only hosiery manufacturer in Texas selling direct to the consumer.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact respondent ships to purchasers hosiery of a grade, texture, and quality inferior to that represented by his sales agents and in many instances such hosiery is not of the size and color indicated by the purchaser. The hosiery sold by the respondent is not woven with a special lock stitch nor does the weave or stitch prevent said hosiery from snagging, running, or developing holes. Said hosiery will not and does not, under normal wear, last for the period of time specified and the respondent will not and does not replace worn hosiery with new hosiery within the period of time promised in said guarantee. Respondent does not manufacture the ladies' hosiery sold and offered for sale by him.

Par. 5. Respondent in the course and conduct of his business in said commerce, as aforesaid, through his sales agents and representatives make use of, and has made use of, the following methods and practices:

(a) Sending to purchasers hosiery of a grade, texture, and quality different from that of the samples exhibited by the sales agent and representatives of the respondent and from which the purchaser had made the selection and in forwarding the purchaser hosiery of a different color and size from that selected by such purchaser;

(b) Unduly and unreasonably delaying the correction of mistakes in filling orders, or failing and neglecting to make adjustments as promised;

(c) Retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failing or neglecting to refund the money paid by the purchasers;
(d) Refusing to make adjustments on ladies' hose unless and until purchasers remit or agree to pay from 35 to 45 cents per pair for each pair of ladies' hosiery on which adjustment is made;

(e) Including in each parcel or envelope in which his hosiery is shipped a guarantee different from that represented by his salesman or representative, to wit:

GUARANTEE

We guarantee our merchandise to be perfect in material and workmanship and with reasonable care and proper laundering to give service as follows:

No. 286 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 300 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 205 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 12 months
No. 1200 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 8 months
No. 1240 Men's Socks, 6 pairs guaranteed for 8 months

All women's hose guaranteed 6 pairs to wear 6 months.

With proper laundering and care you will have no difficulty whatever in securing the maximum wear from every pair. If, however, you are not satisfied with the service you receive, return the hose to us laundered, and adjustment will be made in accordance with the amount of wear you have received.

Notice: For best results silk stockings should be washed after each wearing.

PAR-TEX HOSIERY MILLS

2814 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas

The only hosiery manufacturer in Texas selling direct to the consumer.

PAR. 6. The above acts and representations of respondent have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs that such representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's said hosiery in and on account of such beliefs. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their products or their business status.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substituted answer of respondent filed herein on November 28, 1938, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of facts set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act,

It is ordered, That the respondent, Edward E. Partain, an individual trading as Par-Tex Hosiery Mills, or under any other name, his agents, servants, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of hosiery in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or through any corporate or other device—

(a) Representing directly or by means of sales agents or otherwise that the hosiery purchased will be of a grade, quality, texture, and color corresponding to samples selected by the purchaser unless he does in fact deliver to such purchasers, hosiery of the same grade, quality, texture, and color as that selected by the purchaser.

(b) Representing that his hosiery is woven with a special lock-stitch.

(c) Representing that the weave or stitch in his hosiery will prevent the hosiery from snagging, running, or developing holes.

(d) Representing by means of a guarantee, or by other means, that under normal wear, his hosiery will last from 6 to 12 months or any other specified period of time.

(e) Representing by means of a guarantee, or by other means, that he will replace worn hosiery with new hosiery within any specified time provided by such guarantee unless he does in fact make replacements in accordance with such guarantee.

(f) Representing, through use of the word "Mills," or any other word or term of similar import or meaning, in his trade name or in any other manner, or through any means or device, that he manufactures ladies' hosiery until and unless he owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a manufacturing plant wherein ladies' hosiery is manufactured by him.

(g) Supplying purchasers with hosiery of a grade, texture, and quality different from that of the samples exhibited by the sales agents and representatives of respondent, from which the purchasers have made selections and from forwarding to purchasers hosiery of a different color and size from that selected by such purchasers.

(h) Unduly and unreasonably delaying the correction of mistakes in filling orders, or failing and neglecting to make adjustments as promised.
(i) Retaining hosiery sent in for exchange or adjustment of mistakes and failing or neglecting to refund the money paid by such purchasers.

(j) Refusing to make adjustment on ladies' hosiery returned where such hosiery is not accompanied by a remittance of from 35 to 45 cents per pair unless and until he informs the purchasers at the time of the placing of the original order for said hosiery that adjustments will only be made when accompanied with such remittances.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Roxie Thorson, trading as Thorson’s Soap Lake Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Roxie Thorson, trading as Thorson’s Soap Lake Products Co., has her place of business at Soap Lake, in the State of Washington. Respondent is now, and has been for some years, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, certain packaged mineral salts designated as “Thorson’s Soap Lake Salts,” “Thorson’s Effervescent Soap Lake Salts,” and packaged kindred products designated as “Thorson’s Soap Lake Liniment,” “Thorson’s Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment,” “Thorson’s Soap Lake Shampoo,” and “Thorson’s Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap,” obtained from Soap Lake, located in the State of Washington.

Par. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said salts and kindred products, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so prepared, distributed, and sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Complaint

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mineral salts or other products designed, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said salts and kindred products, respondent has printed and circulated throughout the several States to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and has made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States to advertise the products sold by her; in all of which advertisements, respondent has caused her trade name, Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their effectiveness in treating or curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body. In all of her advertising literature, respondent represents, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that her various packaged products to wit: Thorson's Soap Lake Salts, Thorson's Effervescent Soap Lake Salts, Thorson's Soap Lake Liniment, Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment, Thorson's Soap Lake Shampoo, and Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap, will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by the respondent in said radio broadcasts and advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which the use of said above-named packaged products will prevent and cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, are the following:

Stomach, liver, bowel and kidney troubles, rheumatism, diabetes, catarrh, skin diseases, female trouble, diseases of the blood, psoriasis, pyorrhea and sore gums, gangrene, foot trouble, eye trouble, eczema, lumbago, dropsy, pleurisy, dyspepsia, ivy oak poison, sunburn, insect bites, chilblains, frostbite, cramps of muscles, scalds, wounds and sores, high blood pressure, auto-intoxication, nervous ailments, excess acidity, constipation, arthritis, neuritis, and Buerger's disease.

Par. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of her products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's packaged products will not prevent and cure, nor are any of said products beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions hereinabove named. The benefits, if any, generally obtained from a use of any or all of said products are limited to those resulting from the laxative and diuretic properties and action of said products and the use of said products as either an external or an internal cleansing agent. Said packaged prod-products have no therapeutic value in the treatment of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions above named.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating some, or all, of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body hereinabove named and who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing her products and the effectiveness of said products for curing, treating, or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body herein named, in offering for sale and selling her said products were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended, and sold for use in the cure, relief, or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent’s answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent’s motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Roxie Thorson, is an individual trading as Thorson’s Soap Lake Products Co., with her principal office and place of business located at Soap Lake, in the State of Washington. Respondent is now and for some years last past has been engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling in commerce, certain packaged mineral salts designated as “Thorson’s Soap Lake Salts,” “Thorson’s Effervescent Soap Lake Salts” and kindred products designated as “Thorson’s Soap Lake Liniment,” “Thorson’s Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment,” “Thorson’s Soap Lake Shampoo,” and “Thorson’s Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap.”

The salt ingredients that go to make up these products are obtained by respondent from a body of water called Soap Lake, which is a lake located in the State of Washington.

Par. 2. Respondent causes her products when sold to be transported from her place of business at Soap Lake in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade and commerce by respondent in said products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. The respondent, in the course of the operation of her business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, is in competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling mineral salt products or other products prepared, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In order to induce customers and prospective customers to purchase her products, respondent causes to be printed and circulated throughout the various States of the United States certain advertising matter which consists for the most part of letters, pamphlets, and circulars. Respondent has also made use of the radio for the purpose of creating a demand for her products by broadcasting advertising statements concerning her products over radio stations which have sufficient power to reach audiences in other States.

In all of her advertising matter respondent has featured her trade name, Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., together with the following statements and representations which purport to be descriptive of respondent's products, the names of which are set forth in full in paragraph 1 hereof, and the effectiveness of said products in treating and curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body:

In all of her advertising literature respondent represents through statements and representations herein set out and through statements of similar import and effect that her products will prevent or cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of the following diseases, ailments and afflictions:

Stomach, liver, bowel and kidney troubles, rheumatism, diabetes, catarrh, skin diseases, female trouble, diseases of the blood, psoriasis, pyorrhea and sore gums, gangrene, foot trouble, eye trouble, eczema, lumbago, dropsy, pleurisy, dyspepsia, ivy oak poison, sunburn, insect bites, chilblains, frostbite, cramps of muscles, scalds, wounds and sores, high blood pressure, auto-intoxication, nervous ailments, excess acidity, constipation, arthritis, neuritis, and Buerger's disease.

PAR. 5. The Commission finds that the representations set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, which respondent makes with respect to the therapeutic value of her products when used, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the use of respondent's products will not prevent or cure all or any of the diseases, ailments, or afflictions set forth in paragraph 4 hereof. The use of said products in the manner prescribed by respondent or in any other manner does not constitute a treatment for all or any of the aforesaid diseases, ailments, and afflictions, nor are any of said products beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions set forth in paragraph 4 hereof. The benefits, if any, generally obtained from a use of any or all of said products are limited to those resulting from the laxative and diuretic properties and action of said products and the use of said products as either an external or an internal cleansing agent.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent, as hereinabove set forth, in her advertising, letters, circulars, pamphlets, and over the radio and by other advertising media in offering for sale and selling her products had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true.

As a direct result of these mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and misrepresentations of respondent as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling similar products or other products designed, intended, and sold for use in the cure, relief, or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named herein and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products.

As a result thereof substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material alle­

IN THE MATTER OF

J. A. SCHWARTZ TRADING AS NATIONAL SALES & NOVELTY COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise to purchasers in the various States, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale and distribution of similar articles in commerce as aforesaid; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished various devices and merchandising plans which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for distribution thereof to consumer wholly by lot or chance, and consisted of literature, instructions, and push cards for use in such offer and sale by operators of said cards, under scheme in accordance with which person paid for chance secured varying amount, dependent upon number revealed under disk, and received article being disposed of in accordance with such plan or nothing other than chance, dependent upon success or failure in selecting that one of feminine names disclosed on card corresponding with name concealed under card's master seal after sale of all chances, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise in accordance with sales plan above set forth, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in similar commerce of like and similar articles of merchandise who do not sell the same through use of lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers of his said products were attracted by element of chance involved in his sales method aforesaid, and thereby induced to purchase his merchandise in preference to same or similar goods of competitors who did not, and do not, use such or equivalent methods, and public, by reason of preference aforesaid, bought substantial volume of said goods and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. A. Schwartz, individually and trading as National Sales & Novelty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of National Sales & Novelty Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1407 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Ill. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and a distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards bear a number of girls' names. Concealed under each name is a number. Also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 35 pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 35 pay 35 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push cards bear various legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed, and the person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise described without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting purchases of chances, as above described, also receives an article of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names until the selection has been made and the name removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay. The said radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise each have a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card. The radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customers pay for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes said devices use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure radio receiving sets or other articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make, sell, or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale or distribution thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell or distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 25, 1937, issued, and on October 26, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon J. A. Schwartz, individually, and trading as National Sales & Novelty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. After the issuance of the said complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, respondent not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, J. A. Schwartz, is an individual trading under the name and style of National Sales & Novelty Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1407 Diversey Parkway, city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

In the fall of the year 1936 respondent began selling and distributing radio receiving sets and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States. This business was continued by respondent until the month of December 1937. During the time above mentioned, respondent caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made.

Respondent was, at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing, his merchandise, respondent furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise was to be distributed to the consumer wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent distributed to the public certain literature, instructions, and cards which are known in the trade as "push cards." The aforesaid literature describes the manner in which the push cards were to be used by the people who receive them. The literature also explained in detail the manner of allotting certain premiums or prizes by means of the push card.

Each of the push cards had printed thereon a number of feminine names, together with blank spaces opposite an alphabetical list of the names for writing in the names of customers who purchase chances on the push card.

Each push card had a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "PUSH." Below each disk was printed one of the feminine names printed elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk was a number, which was disclosed when the disk was pushed or separated from the card. Each card had a master disk, concealed within which was one of the feminine names.
Findings

When all the disks had been selected or “pushed” by customers, and the master seal removed from the master disk, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name concealed within the master disk, received the article of merchandise specified without further charge. Customers paid in cents the amount of money indicated by the number revealed when the disk was removed or “pushed” by them. Customers selecting who “pushed” or removed disks on said cards which revealed numbers higher than the number 35 paid only 35 cents. Customers selecting names which did not correspond with the name revealed by removal of the master seal received nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they paid. In this manner, the respondent sold and distributed a substantial number of New Monarch Radio receiving sets to members of the general public.

The Commission finds that respondent’s merchandise was distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and that the amount which a customer paid for a chance, or whether the same was free of charge, was determined wholly by lot or by chance.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished his push cards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent’s merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan.

Respondent thus supplied and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent’s merchandise to the purchasing public as hereinabove described involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent’s merchandise, and that the use of said lottery method in the distribution of merchandise was and is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and was and is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in similar commerce like and similar articles of merchandise, who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of respondent’s merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent’s sales method, and were thereby induced to purchase respondent’s merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent’s competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods.
Because of the said preference, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. A. Schwartz, individually, and trading as National Sales & Novelty Co., or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radio receiving sets, or any other merchandise, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell such or similar products by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents and to distributors or to members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such or similar products by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of such or similar products by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, he shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
Where a corporation which (1) was engaged in manufacture, offer, sale, and distribution in commerce of bakery and packaged food products including, chiefly, biscuits, (2) constituted, by volume of sales, largest concern in the United States in such business, and represented consolidation of several companies previously thus engaged, (3) had factories and plants in 21 of more different States and selling agencies or branches in some 257 cities in and through which it maintained very extensive sales and delivery organization for its products and stocks, and from which sales and deliveries to retailers, chiefly, could be and were made by truck, and, as aforesaid engaged in transporting its said products from its various places of business in various States and in the District of Columbia to purchasers in such and various other States and in said District, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale of similar products among the various States and in said District, and with many smaller concerns which were not able to carry on the same character of deliveries direct to retailers as conducted by it as above described, and could not be, and were not, sufficiently equipped as to localized storage and delivery facilities to their purchasers to be able so to do;

In dealing through agents and representatives with certain jobbers and wholesalers who performed little or no service for it, but whom its said agents and representatives certified as headquarters of retail group buyers located in the territory in which such jobbers and wholesalers sold and distributed their products, notwithstanding fact that they did not represent such buyers nor have any connection therewith—

(a) Entered into understandings, agreements, and combinations with jobbers and wholesalers aforesaid, under which (1) it undertook and agreed to, and did, pay to such jobbers and wholesalers percentage on, or discount upon, aggregate amount of purchases from it by retailers who were on lists allocated by such agents and representatives to each of said jobbers and wholesalers and were located in the territories thereof, and (2) said wholesalers or jobbers, in consideration of payment aforesaid, agreed not to deal in product of a competitor or competitors of it, and thereby paid them such percentages or discounts upon purchases by retailers aforesaid on condition or understanding that they would not deal in products of a competitor or competitors;

With intent and effect of preventing wholesalers and jobbers with whom it dealt, from dealing in products of competitors and of preventing them from rendering to competitors customary or ordinary services of jobbers or wholesalers, and of curtailing greatly services to competitors of jobbers or wholesalers in the marketing of competitors' products pending receipt by said jobbers and wholesalers of compensation from it as industry's largest and dominant factor:
Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition; and Where said corporation, engaged and acting as above described—
(b) Paid, under understandings, agreements, and arrangements above set forth, such discounts and percentages, both to many wholesalers and jobbers who were and continued to be its customers, as well as to noncustomers and jobbers;
With intent and effect aforesaid:
Held, That such acts and practices constituted a violation of Section 3 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, and amendments thereto.
Mr. Daniel J. Murphy for the Commission.
Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed and Mr. George H. Coppers, of New York City, for respondent.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Biscuit Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, National Biscuit Co., a corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business at 449 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y., with factories, branches, and selling agencies in many States of the United States. It is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce of bakery and packaged food products, chiefly biscuits, of which it makes and sells over 500 varieties. It has caused, and still causes, such products when sold by it to be transported from its various places of business in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the purchasers thereof, some located in the States in which it has its places of business and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, a constant current of trade in commerce by respondent in such products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of similar products, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, by volume of sales, is the largest concern in the United States engaged in the business hereinabove described, and is itself a consolidation or combination of several companies previously thus engaged, and it also owns several subsidiaries similarly engaged. Respondent has capital stock (common and preferred) issued and outstanding in excess of $85,000,000 par value. Respondent has factories and plants in 21 or more different States of the United States, and has selling agencies or branches in approximately 257 cities in various States of the United States. In and through its said selling branches, respondent maintains a very extensive sales and delivery organization for its products, and stocks from which sales and deliveries chiefly to retailers can be and are made by automobiles.

Among respondent's competitors in commerce, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, are many smaller concerns which cannot be and are not sufficiently equipped as to localized storage and delivery facilities to their purchasers, and which are not able to carry on the same character of deliveries direct to retailers as conducted by respondent in the manner hereinabove described. By reason thereof, such smaller competitors are in large measure dependent upon jobbers and wholesalers for their marketing outlets to retailers.

Well knowing its dominance in the manner hereinabove described and the consequent dependence of many of its smaller competitors upon jobbers and wholesalers, respondent, for the purpose of injuring such smaller competitors, enters into understandings, agreements, and combinations with jobbers and wholesalers by which, although they perform little or no service for respondent, respondent undertakes and agrees to, and does, pay to them a percentage on or discount upon the aggregate amount of purchases from respondent by retailers on lists of retailers allocated to and furnished by respondent to each such jobber and wholesaler. Such arrangements or agreements are commonly referred to as "headquarters discount agreements." Some of such payments are made direct by respondent, and others through other agencies. The lists of retailers thus made up and furnished by respondent are not confined to bona fide or actual customers of respondent or of its jobbers and wholesalers, but include many who are not customers of and who are not known to the jobbers or wholesalers to whom they are allocated. In some instances where listed retailers are not customers of jobbers, payments by respondent are made to such jobbers and wholesalers in arbitrary lump sums, and in various instances said alleged percentage, discount, or sum was in truth and in fact a payment without consideration other than the agreement of such jobbers or wholesalers not to deal in the products of a competitor or competitors of the respondent.

The purpose and effect of such lists so furnished and payments so made by respondent, is unfairly to induce and prevent said jobbers and wholesalers from rendering to competitors of respondent the customary and ordinary services of jobbers or wholesalers and greatly to curtail the services of jobbers and wholesalers to respondent's competitors in the marketing of their products, so long as said jobbers and wholesalers thus induced continue to receive compensation from respondent, the largest and dominant factor in the industry, in return for practically no service performed.

Par. 3. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the competitors of respondent and of the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented, competition in the sale of bakery and packaged food products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in such bakery and packaged food products; and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Biscuit Co., a corporation, hereinafter called respondent, has violated, and now is violating, the provisions of Section 3 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent, and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

Paragraph 1. For its charges under this paragraph of this count, said Commission relies upon the matters and things set out in paragraph 1 and the first and second subparagraphs of paragraph 2 of count 1 of this complaint to the same extent and as though the allegations thereof were set out in full herein, and they are incorporated herein by reference and made a part of the allegations of this count.

Par. 2. Respondent, in some instances, and in some portions of the United States, sells its products to jobbers and wholesalers who maintain sufficient stock to fill emergency and some other orders. In such instances and places respondent sells such stock to its said jobbers and wholesalers only upon the condition, agreement, and understanding that such jobbers or wholesalers will not deal in or sell products of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

The effect of said sales by respondent upon such conditions, agreements, and understandings may be, is, and has been, to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in bakery and packaged food products.

Par. 3. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of Section 3 of the hereinabove mentioned Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and amendments thereto, the Federal Trade Commission on September 24, 1938, issued its complaint in the above entitled proceeding and caused same to be served upon the respondent above named, National Biscuit Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts and practices in violation of the provisions of said acts. After the issuance and service of said complaint, a stipulation as to the facts was made and entered into by and between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, and the respondent, which stipulation was accepted and approved by the Commission on November 18, 1938. This stipulation provided that the statement of facts contained therein may be made a part of the record herein and taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto and that said Commission may proceed upon such statement and inferences that may be drawn therefrom, to make its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusions based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, National Biscuit Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business at 449 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y., and with factories, branches, and selling agencies in many States of the United States. It is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce of bakery and packaged food products, chiefly biscuits of which it makes and sells over 500 varieties. It has caused, and still causes, such products when sold by it to be transported from its various places of business in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the purchasers thereof, some located in the States in which it has its place of business and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, a constant current of trade in commerce by respondent in such products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of similar products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. The respondent, by volume of sales, is the largest concern in the United States engaged in the business described in paragraph 1 hereof, and is itself a consolidation or a combination of several companies previously thus engaged. Respondent has capital stock (common and preferred) issued and outstanding in excess of $85,000,000 par value. Respondent has factories and plants in 21 or more different States of the United States and has selling agencies or branches in approximately 257 cities in various States of the United States. In and through its said selling branches respondent maintains a very extensive sales and delivery organization for its products and stocks from which sales and deliveries, chiefly to retailers, can be and are made by motor trucks.

Paragraph 3. Among respondent's competitors in commerce, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, are many smaller concerns which cannot be and are not sufficiently equipped as to localized storage and delivery facilities to their purchasers and which are not able to carry on the same character of deliveries direct to retailers as conducted by re-
Findings

Respondent in the manner hereinabove described. By reason thereof such smaller competitors are in large measure dependent upon jobbers and wholesalers for their marketing outlets to retailers.

Par. 4. Agents and representatives of respondent, acting for and on behalf of respondent, have entered into understandings, agreements, and combinations with certain jobbers and wholesalers by which, although they performed little or no service for respondent, respondent undertook and agreed to, and did, pay to them a percentage on or discount upon the aggregate amount of purchases from respondent by retailers on lists of retailers allocated, by said agents and representatives, to each such jobber and wholesaler, said retailers having been in the territories of said jobbers and wholesalers. In consideration of the payment of said percentages or discounts, the said wholesalers or jobbers agreed, with said agents and representatives of respondent, not to deal in the products of a competitor or competitors of respondent. Some of such payments were made direct by respondent and others through other agencies. Said agents and representatives certified to respondent that said wholesalers and jobbers were the headquarters of retail group buyers located in the territory where the said jobbers and wholesalers sold and distributed their products, whereas in fact said retail buyers were not represented by nor connected with said wholesalers and jobbers. The result of said understandings, agreements, and combinations was that respondent paid to said wholesalers or jobbers said percentages on or discounts upon the purchases by said retailers on the condition or understanding that such jobbers or wholesalers would not deal in the products of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

Par. 5. Many of said wholesalers and jobbers referred to above were and continue to be customers of the respondent and they as well as noncustomer wholesalers and jobbers received said discounts and percentages on understandings, agreements, and arrangements as above set forth.

Par. 6. The purpose and effect of the understandings, agreements, or combinations described in paragraph 4 hereof, were to prevent the wholesalers and jobbers with whom respondent had dealings from dealing in the products of competitors of respondent, and further to prevent said jobbers and wholesalers from rendering to competitors of respondent the customary and ordinary services of jobbers or wholesalers and greatly to curtail the services of jobbers or wholesalers to competitors of respondent in the marketing of their products, so long as said jobbers and wholesalers continued to receive compensation from respondent, the largest and dominant factor in the industry.
CONCLUSIONS

The acts and practices of the respondent, as set out in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, and 6 hereof, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and to competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition, within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the acts and practices of the respondent as set out in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 hereof, constitute a violation of Section 3 of the Act entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,” approved October 15, 1914, and amendments thereto.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, National Biscuit Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of bakery and packaged food products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Entering into any contract, agreement, or understanding with wholesalers, jobbers, or any other dealer in bakery and packaged food products, that such wholesaler, jobber, and dealer shall not deal in bakery and packaged food products made by any one other than the respondent; and from agreeing to pay, and from paying, to any such wholesaler, jobber, or any other dealer commissions, discounts, or compensation of any kind upon the agreement or understanding of such wholesaler, jobber, or dealer, that he shall not deal in the products of a competitor of respondent.

2. Making any sale or contract for the sale of bakery and packaged food products for use, consumption, or resale, or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from, or rebate upon, such price, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, wares, merchandise, supplies, or other commodities of a competitor or competitors of the respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GUY J. BANTA DOING BUSINESS AS CAL-A-MO LABORATORIES

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of reducing preparation under name of “Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath” to purchasers in State of California and in various other States and in District of Columbia in substantial competition with others engaged in sale of reducing preparations among the various States and in said District of Columbia; in advertising his said product in newspapers of general circulation and through advertising folders and matter printed and circulated throughout the various States and through radio broadcasts:

(a) Represented that his said product was a reducing preparation which contained ingredients that would get rid of excess fat and that by means thereof the user would be enabled to bathe off excess fat or float fat away and that it dissolved fat and penetrated the pores of the skin so as to cause loss thereof and reduction in weight, and that it was harmless in all cases, through such statements, among others, as “The safe way to reduce,” “A healthful, harmless way to bathe off excess fat,” “The equivalent of a reducing bath in the famous European spas,” “Penetrates your pores and reaches your excess fat,” etc; facts being said product contained no ingredients which would get rid of excess fat, it was not a reducing preparation, and did not prove harmless in all cases, and claims and representations made by it as above indicated were false, misleading, and untrue.

(b) Represented, through use of words “Cal-A-Mo Laboratories” in his trade name and advertising matter, to members of the purchasing public that he owned, operated, or maintained a laboratory for the manufacture, experimentation, or testing of his aforesaid “Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath” product, facts being said preparation was not made by him but by a drug company and after purchase removed by him from the original package and repackaged and labeled for sale through department and drug stores and drug jobbers.

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of his aforesaid preparation and trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors who truthfully advertise and represent the place of manufacture of their product to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini, trial examiner.

Mr. Reuben J. Martin for the Commission.

Mr. Lee Roy Brigham, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Guy J. Banta, an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories," has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondent Guy J. Banta is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories" with his office and principal place of business located at 706 South Hill Street, in the city of Los Angeles, within the State of California. Said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past, has been engaged in the sale of a reducing preparation under the name of "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath," and in the distribution thereof between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent causes said reducing preparation when sold by him, to be transported to the purchasers thereof located in the State of California, in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in said reducing preparation between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, the said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with various other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale of reducing preparations.

PAR. 2. Said reducing preparation "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath," is a preparation composed of epsom salts, oil pine cones, oil white pine, and chamomile flowers, and is intended to be placed in the bath. It is manufactured for said respondent by the Brunswig Drug Co., of Los Angeles, Calif., and is purchased by said respondent from the said Brunswig Drug Co. Said respondent causes the said preparation "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" to be removed from the original package in which it is purchased by him, and the said preparation is then packaged and labeled by said respondent, and sold by said respondent through various department stores, drug stores, and drug jobbers.
Par. 3. In the regular course and conduct of his said business as hereinbefore set out, in paragraph 1, said respondent has been and now is engaged in extensive advertising as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of his said reducing preparation "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath." As media of advertising, said respondent has used, and is now using, newspapers of interstate circulation located in various cities throughout the United States, broadcasts over radio stations with interstate transmission and pamphlets, circulars, and folders distributed with the said product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath." All of said advertisements were and are intended by said respondent, Guy J. Banta, trading and doing business under the name and style of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories" to be read by the general public and in particular by the purchasers of reducing preparations and to cause and induce said purchasers to buy the reducing preparation "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" sold and distributed by said respondent.

Par. 4. Said respondent in his said advertisement of the reducing preparation known as "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" and sold by him, has made and is now making various false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning said preparation. Among the said statements which said respondent has used and is now using in his advertisements in newspapers, pamphlets, and in radio broadcasts are the following:

1. The safe way to reduce.
2. The safe road to slenderness.
3. A healthful, harmless way to bathe off excess fat.
4. Cal-A-Mo is the equivalent of a reducing bath in the famous European spas.
5. Let the soothing, medicinal ingredients of Cal-A-Mo float fat away.
7. You can lose from 2 to 5 lbs. or more from one bath without endangering your health.
8. You don't have to diet—you don't have to take any medicines—you don't have to take vigorous exercises.
9. There are actually thousands of men and women who have reduced weight easily and quickly with Cal-A-Mo.

The above statements, together with many other similar statements of like import made by the said respondent in his said advertisements in newspapers, pamphlets, and in radio broadcasts, are false, deceptive, and misleading because in truth and in fact, said "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" is not a reducing preparation, contains no ingredients which will get rid of excess fat, and its use will not prove harmless in all cases.

Said respondent, Guy J. Banta, in the regular course and conduct of his said business, trades under the name of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories" and advertises as "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories" whereas in truth and in fact, said respondent does not own, operate, nor maintain any laboratory for the manufacture, experimentation with, or testing of, the said product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" and does not manufacture nor test the said product, but simply packages and labels the said preparation which is bought by him in bulk.

PAR. 5. The use by the said respondent, Guy J. Banta, trading and doing business under the name and style of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories," of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading representations alleged to be used by the said respondent in paragraph 4 hereof, have had and do now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and untrue belief that said respondent is engaged in truth and fact in the manufacture of a reducing preparation known as "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" and maintains a laboratory for the purpose of manufacturing, experimenting with, and testing his said product, and that his said product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" is in truth and in fact, a safe, efficient, and harmless preparation, the use of which will effectively result in the reduction in weight and the loss of excess fat by the user thereof, and has thereby induced and does now induce the consuming public and especially that portion of the public using reducing preparations, acting in said erroneous belief to purchase "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" in preference to reducing preparations offered for sale by manufacturers and other distributors of reducing preparations who do not falsely, deceptively, and misleadingly advertise their said products. As a result of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations on the part of said respondent, trade has been diverted to respondent from such manufacturers and distributors of reducing preparations who do not falsely, deceptively, and misleadingly advertise their respective products, and thereby injury has been done and is being done by the said respondent.

PAR. 6. Said false, deceptive, and misleading representations of said respondent contained in his advertising have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers and distributors and in prejudice to the buying public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, and entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 23, 1937, issued, and on July 27, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Guy J. Banta, is an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories," with his office and principal place of business located at 706 South Hill Street in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a reducing preparation under the name of "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

The product, "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath," when sold, is transported by respondent from his office and place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the State of California and in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been, since the time respondent started selling his product, a course of trade and commerce by respondent in said product between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition in commerce with various other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale of reducing preparations between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 2. Respondent, for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase the product "Cal-A-Mo," has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers of general circulation throughout the United States, and has printed and circulated throughout the various States advertising folders and literature. Respondent has also made use of radio broadcasts in advertising said product.

Among the statements which respondent used in his advertising in newspapers, pamphlets, and over radio broadcasts are the following:

The safe way to reduce.
The safe road to slenderness.
A healthful, harmless way to bathe off excess fat.
Cal-A-Mo is the equivalent of a reducing bath in the famous European spas.
Let the soothing, medicinal ingredients of Cal-A-Mo float fat away.
Your fat slowly dissolves under the medicinal action of Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath.
You can lose from 2 to 5 lbs. or more from one bath without endangering your health.
You don't have to diet—you don't have to take any medicines—you don't have to take vigorous exercises.
There are actually thousands of men and women who have reduced weight easily and quickly with Cal-A-Mo.
Guaranteed safe reducing treatment.
Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath penetrates your pores and reaches your excess fat.

Respondent, by use of the name "Cal-A-Mo Laboratories" in his trade name and in his advertising matter, represents to members of the purchasing public that he either owns, operates, or maintains a laboratory for the manufacture, experimentation, or testing of the product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath."

Par. 3. Respondent's product is a preparation composed of Epsom salts, oil pine cones, oil white pine, and chamomile flowers and is used externally in a bath.

The product is manufactured for respondent by the Brunswig Drug Co., of Los Angeles, Calif.

Respondent causes the said preparation, "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" to be removed from the original package in which it is purchased by him and the preparation is then packaged and labeled by respondent. Respondent sells the product through various department stores, drug stores, and drug jobbers.

Par. 4. The statements and representations made by respondent, as hereinabove set forth, in his advertising, literature, in newspapers and in catalogs and other advertising media are false, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, respondent's product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath" is not a reducing preparation. The product contains no ingredients which will get rid of excess fat, and use of the product does not prove harmless in all cases.

Use of the product will not enable an individual to "bathe off excess fat" or "float fat away."

The product does not dissolve fat when used in the manner prescribed by respondent. The product does not penetrate the pores of the skin in such a manner as to cause loss of fat or to reduce weight.

In truth and in fact, respondent does not own and operate or maintain a laboratory for the manufacture, experimentation, or testing of the product "Cal-A-Mo Reducing Bath."

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent, individual firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling in interstate commerce reducing preparations who truthfully advertise their products.

Each and all of the false and misleading representations made by respondent in his advertising in newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, and over the radio, in offering for sale and selling his product, had, and now has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true.

Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations herein referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's product, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors who truthfully advertise their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent Guy J. Banta, individually and trading and doing business under the name and style of Cal-A-Mo Laboratories, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a pharmaceutical preparation designated "Cal-A-Mo" or any other preparation composed of like or similar ingredients or having the same properties under whatever name sold, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that Cal-A-Mo is a reducing preparation containing ingredients which will get rid of excess fat or that by the use of Cal-A-Mo the user will be enabled to bathe off excess fat or float fat away.

2. Representing that Cal-A-Mo dissolves fat or that it penetrates the pores of the skin in such a manner as to cause loss of fat and reduction in weight, or that Cal-A-Mo contains any ingredient which has a medicinal or therapeutic value or effect in reducing weight or contains any ingredient which affects the metabolism of fat.

3. Representing that the use of Cal-A-Mo is harmless in all cases.

4. Representing, by the use of the word "Laboratories" or any other term of similar meaning or like import as a part of his trade name, or in any other manner, that he owns, operates, or maintains a laboratory for the purpose of manufacturing, testing, or experimenting with his said preparation Cal-A-Mo until and unless he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a laboratory for said purposes.

5. Making any other similar representations of like import or effect as to the therapeutic or medicinal value of said preparation Cal-A-Mo or the benefits accruing from the use thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent Guy J. Banta, an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of Cal-A-Mo Laboratories, shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order hereinabove set forth.
IN THE MATTER OF

CARTER CARBURETOR CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AND OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3279. Complaint, Apr. 5, 1938—Decision, Jan. 18, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts for use in the automobile industry, and which—

1. Constituted one of the two largest manufacturers of carburetors in the United States, with more than 90 percent of passenger cars produced in the year 1937 equipped with its product or that of other concern;

2. Sold and distributed its said products through some 66 regional distributors to whom it granted exclusive territory covering, in the aggregate, the entire United States, some 86 zone distributors, 900 to 1,000 contract service stations, and about 6,000 service stations (a) equipped with cabinets and expert personnel (and supplied by it with a large amount of service and sales bulletins, charts, catalog sheets, and trade information of great value to it in the conduct of its business), and necessary for the effective servicing, both of equipment and "after market" sale of the highly complicated mechanism involved, and customarily maintained for such purposes by manufacturers, generally, of such devices, for the adequate servicing of which the average general garage and automotive dealer is not equipped with necessary parts, training or personnel, and which (b), prior to the below-mentioned acts and practices, were free, in accordance with general custom of such stations, to handle a variety of makes and thus be able to care for the needs of different models of the same manufacturer and various models of different manufacturers, as occasion arose;

Following the acceptance by one of the large automotive manufacturers of a competitive carburetor as equipment on one of the popular and widely sold models made by it, and which was beginning to emerge as the carburetor chiefly competitive with its own, and to the handling of which by its said stations it had not theretofore objected—

(a) Mailed to all its distributors, contract service stations, cabinet stations, and sales service personnel, its General Bulletin No. 134, notifying service stations that if they took on "a new carburetor line" without its written approval, preferential discount and service information (theretofore extended along with special training in service and repair of carburetors and engine tune-up), and its contract, if any, would be discontinued by its distributor, and instructed its field representatives to insist on enforcement of policy stated as aforesaid, and to see that distributors carried out same, and to aid latter in so doing, and to check on service stations with respect to whether they were handling a new line, so defined as to include competitive carburetor above referred to, and announced that "our outlets must choose" between its own and said competitive carburetor, and that "until they make up their minds twenty-five percent (its standard trade discount) will be their discount," and in the meantime suspended all contracts and special discounts;

1 Amended.
(b) Sent a "confidential" bulletin to all regional and zone distributors requesting them to call on all its service stations handling the competitive device or line referred to above, and stating that if they kept "the other line" after a shortly ensuing date specified "mailings to them would be discontinued," and its said contracts, if any, with them would lapse and standard trade discounts referred to would then apply, and thereupon, through its field representatives, distributors, and distributors' salesmen, did call upon service stations and notified and continued to inform them that policy stated in bulletin above set out would be enforced, and told stations found to be handling competing new line that they could not continue to carry same and retain their preferential discount and their contract, if any, with it, and asked them to notify them in writing that they had discontinued such competing line and returned their stock:

(c) Commenced to contact and seek out, through its field representatives and distributors, service stations through whom distributors thereof, in accordance with usual practice, had entered into sales agreements with a view to developing the after market business of the manufacturer of said increasingly competing line, and informed such stations that if they continued to deal in such particular competitive products they would no longer be permitted to purchase its own at a favorable discount and would cease to receive from its service bulletins and information, and that their contracts, in the case of the contract service stations, would be cancelled, and carried out policy set forth in its aforesaid General Bulletin and "confidential" bulletin, and cancelled contracts with, and reduced discounts available to, some 19 service stations refusing to discontinue dealing in the competitive products before referred to, and in some instances offered service-station privilege of purchasing its products at a more favorable discount than it was then receiving upon condition that it sever its connection with said competitor, while threatening to reduce discount if service stations would not do so:

With the result that, as a consequence of such concerted action by it, its field representatives and distributors, the independent carburetor and ignition stations throughout the country were given choice of losing privilege of handling on favorable terms carburetor which was standard equipment on a majority of automobiles in use and which furnished large part of their carburetor service business, or of giving up new carburetor line which was standard equipment on only a few cars and which, even as to those, had not been in the field long enough to require any substantial amount of service, and that, confronted with such alternatives, many service stations throughout the country cancelled their contracts with the manufacturer of said competitive line, returned their stock, or ceased to deal therein, and, in substantial number, severed their official connection therewith or returned its stock, or both, and, in some cases in which they did not return the stock of said competitor after receiving aforesaid General Bulletin, refrained thereafter from displaying or advertising said competitor's products as service stations contracting with said competitor had undertaken to do, and prominently, by the terms of their sales contracts with it, as well as to maintain mechanical equipment efficiently to service product of said competitor, and kept competitor's stock out of sight and ceased to promote sale thereof; and
(d) Entered into or renewed contracts for the sale of its products with more than 900 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof should not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of it, and fixed the prices charged for its products and discounts from such prices to approximately 7,000 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof should not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of it, and made such contracts and fixed such prices and imposed such condition and understanding in the course and conduct of its after market interstate business;

With the result that the effect of the contracts and conditions or understandings aforesaid had been and might be to substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of carburetors and carburetor parts in interstate commerce, and effect of its above-described acts and practices was to induce, coerce, and compel a large number of automobile service stations throughout the United States to cease and refuse to deal in or purchase products of competitors aforesaid, and to cancel or violate existing sales agreements with such competitor, and of thereby closing to it a substantial number of actual and potential service stations for its products, diverting business and trade from it and preventing such service stations from selling and dealing in a full line of standard carburetors and parts;

Held, That the sending and giving of such notices, information, and threats, and the taking of such action thereafter and thereunder, and the entering into such contracts and the fixing of such prices, etc., as hereinbefore described, constituted a violation and continued violation of section 3 of Clayton Act, and that its acts and practices as above set forth and indicated were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.
Mr. Cyrus B. Austin for the Commission.
Mr. Noah A. Stancliffe and Mr. George T. Barker of Hardy, Stancliffe & Hardy, of New York City, Mr. George R. Erickson, of St. Louis, Mo. and King & King, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Amended Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,” commonly known as the Clayton Act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Carter Carburetor Corporation, the respondent above named, has violated the provisions of section 3 of said act; and pursuant also to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” commonly known as the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission having reason to believe that the said Carter Carburetor Corporation has been using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act of Congress; and it appearing that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, the Commission hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in such respects as follows:

I

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 2820-56 North Spring Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale, among other things, of carburetors and carburetor parts for use in the automotive industry. In the course and conduct of its business respondent transports the said products, or causes the same to be transported, from the State and place of their manufacture or location, to its customers and purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia; and respondent is, and at all times herein mentioned has been, engaged in trade and commerce in said products between the State where respondent or said products are located and other States of the United States.

Paragraph 3. Respondent distributes and sells its said products for use, consumption, or resale within the United States and the District of Columbia, in the same territories and places as, and in substantial competition with, various other persons and corporations engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts in commerce between and among the several States.

Paragraph 4. Commerce in the sale and distribution of carburetors has two main divisions: First, the sale of carburetors to automobile manufacturers for use as original equipment; second, the sale of carburetors and carburetor parts for replacement and repair of original equipment. Respondent supplied more than 50 percent of carburetors used as original equipment in automobile production for 1937 and with one other manufacturer, supplied more than 95 percent of the carburetors so used.

The replacement and repair business is carried on chiefly by independent automobile service stations, electrical and carburetor repair shops and garages (hereinafter collectively referred to as "service stations") throughout the United States. Respondent sells its products to wholesalers, known as distributors, who contact and sell to the service stations in their respective territories. Said distributors generally handle only respondent's line of carburetors, are under contract with respondent, and are subject to the control and instructions of respondent in the distribution and terms of sale of respondent's products. Respondent also maintains direct contact with service stations through a staff of field representatives and through dissemination of literature. Respondent's distributors and the service stations handling its products are competively engaged in the resale of such products, at wholesale and retail, in the various territories and places where said customers, respectively, carry on their business.

PAR. 5. Respondent has entered into contracts, now in force, for the sale and governing the terms of sale of respondent's products, with more than 900 independent automobile service stations throughout the United States. Respondent's distributor servicing the territory in which the service station is located is also a party to such contract. The service stations holding said contracts are for the most part shops specializing in carburetor and electrical service and repair, with special equipment and mechanics specially trained for that work, and doing a large part of the carburetor service and repair business in their respective localities. Pursuant to the terms of said contracts, the service station receives a discount of 50 percent from list prices on carburetors and carburetor parts purchased thereunder, as against lesser discounts available to other service stations and to the retail trade generally. Said contracts generally run for a period of 1 year, subject to renewal, and subject to cancelation by any party on 30 days' notice. The power of respondent and its distributors arbitrarily to terminate such contracts on short notice and the relative importance of respondent's products in the automotive industry tend to make the service stations subservient to respondent's wishes and will as to the conduct of their business; and a large proportion are in truth subservient, lest they lose the benefit of said contracts and the preferential discount available thereunder.

PAR. 5-A. In addition to the above-mentioned contract service stations, respondent's said products are dealt in and carried in stock by approximately 6,000 so-called general cabinet service stations located throughout the United States. Said general cabinet service stations are not under contract with the respondent, but purchase respondent's said products at a discount of 40 percent from list price from respondent's distributors and receive directly from the respondent and from its distributors valuable service and sales bulletins and information.

PAR. 6. It is and has been the accepted trade practice of service stations specializing in automobile carburetor replacements and repairs to carry a complete line of all carburetors and parts sold or used as original equipment on current makes and models of automobiles so that they can make replacements or repairs on any automobile that may be brought to them for such service. Maintenance of such trade practice is in the interest and to the mutual advantage of the service stations and the public. On or about April 1, 1937, respondent inaugurated, has since actively pursued, and is now engaged in enforcing and maintaining, a policy and practice whereby it refuses to enter into, renew or continue the above-described service station contracts, or to grant or continue said preferential discounts (discounts in excess of 25 percent from list price) to service stations which sell or deal in carburetors and carburetor parts manufactured and placed on the market by a competitor or competitors of respondent not engaged in said business prior to June 23, 1934. One or more of respondent's competitors mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof have engaged in business and placed their carburetor products on the market since that date, distributing and selling a substantial amount of said products both to automobile manufacturers for original equipment and to service stations and shops for replacement and repair. Respondent, by printed bulletins, correspondence, personal calls by its field representatives, and through its distributors, has notified all service stations holding said carburetor sales contracts and all its general cabinet service stations that it and its distributors will reduce the discounts available to said service stations to 25 percent, discontinue service information, and terminate such contracts if the service station continues or commences to sell or deal in the said products of such competitor or competitors. The same policy has been and is being enforced as to service stations seeking new contracts with respondent. Respondent has required its distributors to aid and assist in the enforcement of this policy in their respective territories. Respondent and its distributors have terminated their contracts with certain service stations refusing to accept such conditions, and respondent has instructed its distributors thereafter to allow to such service stations only the 25 percent trade discount. The purpose and result of this policy and practice has been to persuade, intimidate, and coerce many service stations to cancel similar carburetor sales contracts with such competitor or competitors, to discontinue dealing in and selling the products of such competitor or competitors, and to refuse to deal in or purchase the products of such competitor or competitors.

PAR. 7. Each of the two divisions of the carburetor business described in paragraph 4 hereof is dependent upon and necessary to the maintenance of the other. The ability of a manufacturer to sell its carburetors to an automobile manufacturer for original equipment depends to a large extent upon a showing that its carburetors and parts are handled by service stations throughout the United States so that owners of cars equipped therewith can obtain satisfactory service. Respondent is a dominant factor in this industry, controlling a large part of the original equipment business. Its policy and practices herein complained of have the effect not only of persuading and coercing service stations to cease or refuse to handle the products of a competitor or competitors, thereby lessening competition in the repair and replacement field, but the consequence of such effect is to impair the marketability of the products of such competitor or competitors for use as original equipment, regardless of the intrinsic merit of the product itself. Said policy and practices are designed to preserve to respondent (and to its single major competitor in the original equipment field, against whom said practices are not directed) the bulk of the business in original equipment and, therefore, in the industry.

PAR. 8. By and pursuant to the policy and practices above described, respondent has made its said service station carburetor sales contracts subject to the condition, and is making and continuing such contracts and making sales thereunder in the course of its said business on the condition and with the agreement or understanding, that the service station purchasers of its products shall not use, sell, or deal in the carburetor products of a certain competitor or competitors of respondent. The effect of such contracts and sales, and such condition, agreement, or understanding, may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the distribution and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts in trade or commerce among the several States and such contracts and sales are, therefore, unlawful and in violation of the provisions of section 3 of said Clayton Act.

PAR. 9. Pursuant to and in furtherance of the policy and practices above described, respondent in the course of its said business has fixed a price for its said products and has fixed a discount from such price, available to a substantial class of purchasers of such products upon the condition, agreement, or understanding that such purchasers shall not use, sell, or deal in the carburetor products of a certain competitor or competitors of respondent. The effect of such condition, agreement, or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the distribution and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts in trade or commerce among the several States, and the fixing of such price and discount therefrom upon such condition, agreement, or understanding is, therefore, unlawful and in violation of the provisions of section 3 of said Clayton Act.
Findings

II

PARAGRAPH 1. Paragraphs 1 to 6, inclusive, of charge I hereof are hereby adopted and made a part of this charge as fully and with the same effect as though here set forth at length.

PAR. 2. Pursuant to and in furtherance of its policy and practices hereinbefore described, respondent, directly and through its distributors, has induced, coerced, and compelled, and has endeavored to induce, coerce, and compel, a substantial number of independent automobile service stations throughout the United States holding or seeking contracts with respondent, or receiving or seeking to obtain a preferential discount in the purchase of respondent's products, to cancel existing carburetor sales contracts between such service stations and a certain competitor or competitors of respondent and to cease and refrain from dealing in and selling the carburetor products of such competitor or competitors. As a means of such inducement, coercion, and compulsion respondent has threatened to withdraw and deny, and in some cases has withdrawn or denied, the benefits of its service station contract and preferential price discount, requiring such service stations either to discontinue existing business relations with such competitor or competitors or forfeit the opportunity to purchase and sell respondent's products on favorable terms. Thereby respondent closes to such competitor or competitors in the distribution and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts a substantial number of actual and potential service station outlets valuable to the consuming public.

PAR. 3. The tendency and effect of the policy methods and practices above complained of is and has been to hinder and lessen competition in the distribution and sale of carburetors and carburetor parts throughout the United States; to obstruct, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in such products; to injure those of respondent's competitors against whom said policy is directed by unfairly diverting business and trade from them and depriving them thereof; to prevent a substantial number of service stations from handling and selling a full line of carburetors and parts, to their prejudice and injury; all to the prejudice and injury of the public. Said policy, methods, and practices constitute unfair and unlawful methods of competition within the meaning of section 5 of the aforesaid Federal Trade Commission Act.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the Clayton Act (U. S. Code, title 15, sections 14 and 45) the Federal Trade Commission, on April 5, 1938, issued and served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, charging it with violation of section 3 of the Clayton Act and with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Thereafter, hearings were held and evidence was introduced by Cyrus B. Austin, attorney for the Commission, and by Noah A. Stancliffe, George T. Barker, and George R. Ericson, attorneys for respondent, before John W. Addison, trial examiner theretofore duly appointed by the Commission. Thereupon this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and briefs and oral arguments of counsel on behalf of Commission and respondents, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes its findings as to the facts and conclusions drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, is a Delaware corporation, organized in 1925 with factories and principal offices located at 2820-56 North Spring Avenue, St. Louis, Mo. It is engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling, chiefly, carburetors and carburetor parts for use in the automobile industry. It is the successor of Carter Carburetor Co., a corporation which was engaged in the same business from 1909 to 1921 when it went into bankruptcy.

Par. 2. The respondent and Bendix Products Corporation are the two largest manufacturers of automobile carburetors in the United States. More than 90 percent of the passenger cars produced in the United States in 1937 were equipped with Carter or Bendix (Stromberg) carburetors. Other carburetors adopted by automobile manufacturers as standard equipment on recent models are Chandler-Groves, on Packard Six, Plymouth, standard model, Lincoln-Zephyr and part of Ford; Marvel on Graham, part of Nash and part of Buick and Tillotson on Willys. Zenith Carburetor Co. is a subsidiary of Bendix and makes carburetors for replacement use on practically all makes of passenger cars and also truck carburetors.

Par. 3. Carter carburetors were standard equipment on 60 percent of 1937 passenger cars and trucks and on more than half of all passenger cars and trucks sold for 3 years prior to 1937. Respondent’s carburetors were standard equipment on 1937 and 1938 models of Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, LaSalle V-8, DeSoto, Hudson, Terraplane, and Reo; also Chrysler-Royal, Plymouth, DeLuxe Model,
Findings

Cadillac V-16, Dodge trucks, and some Studebaker cars and trucks. About 70 percent of the Carter carburetors used on Chevrolets are manufactured by the Chevrolet Co. in Bay City, Mich., under licenses from Carter. These are Carter carburetors and the parts are interchangeable with those manufactured by respondent. Respondent also makes and sells a number of carburetors which are designed for use in replacing carburetors of various makes and models on automobiles in use, such as the Universal, the Packard, and the Ford carburetors featured in its sales literature. Respondent sold 1,635,000 carburetors to automobile manufacturers in 1937 for use as standard equipment.

Par. 4. Trade and commerce in carburetors has two principal branches: First, the sale of carburetors to automobile manufacturers for original equipment of automobiles; second, the sale of carburetors and parts for replacement and service of carburetors in use, commonly referred to as "after-market" business. The acts and practices of respondent complained of have been in connection with the after-market branch of its business, but competition in the original equipment field as well is affected. Respondent's dollar volume of sales in the two branches is in the ratio of about 5 to 2, so that its after-market business amounts to a little less than 30 percent of the total. Respondent sold more than 103,000 replacement carburetors in 1937 in the after-market field, the list prices of such carburetors ranging from $10 to $28 each; and the volume of the after-market business was greatly increased by the sale of parts.

Par. 5. The after-market business in the service of carburetors of a new manufacturer entering the field is at first relatively small and takes 2 or 3 years to develop in any volume, because a carburetor ordinarily does not require replacement or repair during the first year or more of use. On recent models little service is required until after the car has been driven from 12,000 to 14,000 miles. In the early stages of respondent's business, after-market sales amounted to only 5 percent of its total volume. Nevertheless, service-station distribution is necessary at the start so that parts or new carburetors will be available if something goes wrong, and also to be able to assure the automobile manufacturer proper warranty service will be given on the carburetors.

Par. 6. The carburetor manufacturer customarily warrants his carburetor to the automobile manufacturer to be free from defect of material or workmanship in normal use and service, for the warranty period of the automobile (generally 90 days or 4,000 miles). Respondent has an agreement with practically all of its customers that warranty service will be given, and that repairs during the warranty period will be taken care of by respondent's service stations and distributors without expense to the automobile maker.

Par. 7. Most automobile makers desire and rely on the carburetor maker's retail outlets for warranty service and, after the warranty period, for service supplemental to that given by automobile dealers. The automobile dealers also rely on the service stations for a ready supply of carburetor parts for making repairs. Such service can be given by a carburetor maker only through a wide service-station distribution of its products, and the availability of such service is considered by most automobile makers (except Ford and possibly Chevrolet) to be a very important factor in connection with the approval of standard equipment. Lists of "official service stations" are issued by equipment manufacturers and distributed by automobile manufacturers to their dealers for the purpose of making this service available to the dealers and car owners.

Par. 8. The business of servicing, replacing, and repairing automobiles and automobile equipment is carried on in large part by about 60,000 independent service stations and garages located throughout the United States (not including automobile dealers). Seven thousand or more of these service stations specialize in the service of electrical equipment and carburetors. Practically all stations so specializing carry and sell respondent's products, its products being handled by about 6,000 general cabinet stations and more than 900 contract service stations, as hereinafter described.

Par. 9. Modern carburetors are complicated mechanisms, respondent's carburetors comprising some 150 to 175 parts. Competent carburetor service requires special equipment and training not possessed by the ordinary garage and garage mechanic or by many automobile dealers. For this reason the 7,000 specialized service stations above referred to handle a great bulk of the carburetor service business and the remaining 53,000 or more independent repair shops are chiefly garages not specializing in, and in most cases not giving, carburetor service.

Par. 10. It is the established custom of the specialized carburetor and ignition stations to offer service on all makes and models of automobiles in current use and to carry in stock and deal in various competing lines of standard equipment in use on such automobiles, so that service can be given on any car that may be driven in. Most service stations originally specializing in the service of electrical equipment have since taken on carburetor service. The larger and better-equipped service stations now carry practically all lines of such equipment standard on automobiles, and have contracts with competing manufacturers. A specialized carburetor service station must stock more than one line of carburetors, because the average automobile driver does not know the make of carburetor he has on his car, and different models of the same make of car may carry different carburetors.

PAR. 11. Respondent's original distributors had for years previously been specialized ignition service stations. The great majority of stations now dealing in respondent's products carried other carburetor lines before taking on respondent's line, and still deal in and give service on one or more competing carburetors. Respondent's is one of the newer carburetors in the automotive field, although it has succeeded in acquiring the bulk of the desirable equipment accounts.

PAR. 12. For many years it has been the custom for manufacturers of electrical equipment and carburetors, and their distributors, to enter into contracts with the larger independent service stations throughout the country governing the sale of their products, requiring the service station to carry a stock of the manufacturer's equipment and parts and providing for the price to be paid or discounts to be received by the service station. These contract service stations are known as official service stations of the equipment manufacturer, and are used as service references by the automobile manufacturer.

PAR. 13. Although respondent had some service-station distribution prior to 1927 it did not begin to enter the service field on a large scale until 1930, when it began to sell a general parts cabinet to stations throughout the country. Service stations which have purchased and maintained these cabinets now number about 6,000, are referred to as "general cabinet" stations, and are allowed a discount of 40 percent on purchases of respondent's products, as against respondent's general trade discount of 25 percent.

PAR. 14. In 1932, respondent commenced to enter into service-station contracts, as above described, offering such contracts in many cases to stations already handling Stromberg or other competing carburetors. Respondent now has between 900 and 1,000 official contract service stations (in addition to the 6,000 general cabinet stations), located in the larger towns, cities, and trading areas throughout the United States. These contracts provide that the service station shall receive a discount of 50 percent (in some cases 50 and 10 percent) from list price on purchases of respondent's products and that service station shall sell and exchange such products at prices and discounts "recommended" by respondent. Such contracts also provide that the service station shall give the warranty service above described and certain advertising services. The parties to such contracts are the respondent, the regional distributor, and the service station. Said contracts are made for a period of 1 year, subject to renewal and subject to cancelation by any party on 30 days' notice.

Par. 15. Respondent sells and ships its carburetors and carburetor parts f. o. b. St. Louis, to distributors or wholesalers of automotive equipment located in the various States of the United States, who are also under contract with respondent. Regional distributors (66) receive a discount of 60 and 10 percent, and are granted exclusive territory covering in the aggregate the entire United States. Thirty of said regional distributors have territory located in more than one State. Zone distributors (86) may purchase at 60 percent discount for shipment either direct from St. Louis or from the regional distributor.

Par. 16. Both regional and zone distributors' contracts provide that the distributor shall sell respondent's products at prices and discounts specified by respondent, and respondent, in practice, fixes the prices and discounts at which said distributors sell such products. List prices are published in respondent's catalog. The catalog list prices are the prices used by the distributors and service stations as a basis for the purchase and sale of Carter carburetors and parts.

Par. 17. Contract service stations purchase from distributors f. o. b. the distributor's city, but parts cabinets are generally shipped to the service station directly from St. Louis, and occasionally other shipments are so made at the distributor's request. General cabinet stations may purchase either from the distributor or a contract service station, at the prices fixed by respondent. Sales to contract service stations constitute the major part of the distributors' sales of respondent's products.

Par. 18. Respondent has a large mailing list, including all contract and general cabinet service stations and their personnel, and mails to said stations and personnel from time to time, a large amount of service and sales bulletins, charts, catalog sheets, and trade information. This literature is very valuable to the service station in the conduct of its business.

Par. 19. Respondent employs a staff of 19 field representatives who travel in the field and call upon distributors and service stations, maintaining direct contact between respondent and service stations located throughout the country. The country is divided into four districts, each under the supervision of a district manager, who supervises the work of the field representatives in his district. Respondent conducts short training courses at various distribution points, and a school at its factory in St. Louis, where many service-station mechanics have received special training in the service and repair of carburetors, and in engine tune-up.

Par. 20. On or about April 1, 1937, respondent mailed to all its distributors, contract service stations, cabinet stations, and sales-service personnel, its General Bulletin No. 134, notifying the service stations "that if you take on a new carburetor line without our written approval, preferential discount, service information, and Carter contract, if any, will be discontinued by the Carter distributor." A new carburetor was defined as a carburetor made only since the publication of respondent's Bulletin No. 77, which was dated June 23, 1934. Said Bulletin No. 77 was issued only to respondent's distributors, its gist being that if the distributor took on a competing line of carburetors, he could not expect to hold his Carter representation on an exclusive territorial basis. General Bulletin No. 134 is still in effect.

Par. 21. The manager of respondent's parts and service division instructed respondent's field representatives to insist on the enforcement of the policy stated in Bulletin No. 134, and told them to see that the distributors carried out such policy, and to aid the distributors in carrying it out. He also told them to check up on the service stations that they might visit to see whether the service station was handling a new line of carburetors. On April 5, 1937, he sent a telegram to one of his field representatives in Michigan announcing the issuance of Bulletin No. 134, and stating that "our outlets must choose between Chandler-Groves and Carter" and "until they make up their minds twenty-five percent will be their discount," and in the meantime "suspension all contracts and special discounts." Distributors were to be notified. Copies of this telegram were sent to all of respondent's field men.

Par. 22. Under date of April 7, 1937, a "confidential" bulletin was sent to all regional and zone distributors requesting them to call on all service stations handling the Chandler-Grove carburetor line, and stating that if service stations kept "the other line" after May 1, "mailings to them would be discontinued" and their Carter contracts, if any, would lapse. The standard trade discount of 25 percent would then apply.

Par. 23. Thereupon, respondent's field representatives, distributors, and distributors' salesmen called upon the service stations and notified them, and thereafter continued to inform them, that the policy stated in Bulletin No. 134 would be enforced. Service stations found to be handling a new competing line of carburetors were told that they could not continue to carry that line and retain their preferential discount and their Carter contract, if they held such contract, and were asked to notify respondent in writing that they had discontinued the competing line and returned their stock.

Par. 24. There appear to be three carburetors which have been made only since June 23, 1934—Chandler-Groves, Mallory, and Fish. Of these, Chandler-Groves is the only one which has been adopted as standard equipment on automobiles. Chandler-Groves carburetors and parts were manufactured by Chandler-Groves Co., a Michigan corporation organized in 1935, with offices and factory in Detroit. Chandler-Groves Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Holley Carburetor Co. of Detroit, a concern which has for many years manufactured electrical equipment, and formerly carburetors, for the Ford Motor Co. and other automobile manufacturers. After December 31, 1937, Chandler-Groves Co. ceased to do business, and since that time Chandler-Groves carburetors have been manufactured and sold by Holley Carburetor Co. through Chandler-Groves distributors and service stations.

Par. 25. In addition to carburetors, the Chandler-Groves Co. at first attempted to develop car heaters, inlet manifolds, fuel pumps, and various other automotive devices. Eventually it developed a single-barrel carburetor of the concentric type. Carburetors of that type in use in 1936 were made chiefly by respondent, whereas Bendix Products Corporation manufactured chiefly carburetors of the duplex or double-barreled type. For that reason, during 1936 and 1937, Chandler-Groves Co.’s competition was mainly with respondent.

Par. 26. In 1936, Chandler-Groves carburetors were adopted for use as standard equipment on Packard Six and Plymouth PT-50 (truck). In 1937, Chandler-Groves became standard equipment on Plymouth standard model passenger car and, late in the year, was adopted for Lincoln-Zephyr and for a part of Fords. In addition to the foregoing, Chandler-Groves was used on several Dodge and DeSoto export models and on the Chrysler industrial engine. The great majority of the carburetors produced by Chandler-Groves Co. have been for Plymouth and Packard.

Par. 27. Adoption of the Chandler-Groves carburetor by Plymouth was announced by Chandler-Groves in a bulletin dated March 10, 1937. Previously, all Plymouth passenger cars had been equipped with Carter carburetors. Respondent received a copy of this Chandler-Groves bulletin a short time before respondent issued its General Bulletin No. 134. Prior to that time, respondent had not objected to its service stations handling Chandler-Groves along with other competing lines.

Par. 28. In developing its after-market business, Chandler-Groves Co. followed the usual service station contract plan hereinabove described and, prior to April 1, 1937, had entered into sales agreements with a large number of independent service stations in various parts of the United States specializing in electrical and carburetor service. In soliciting these contracts, the Chandler-Groves distributors approached the larger and better-equipped service stations in their respective territories. The Chicago distributor contacted Auto-Lite (electrical equipment) service stations, and the Philadelphia distributor was also an Auto-Lite distributor and was already selling various kinds of electrical equipment to these service stations. The stations thus contracting with Chandler-Groves were established service stations carrying various lines of automotive equipment, and the great majority of them dealt in the products of respondent and other carburetor manufacturers, many of them being holders of respondent's service station contracts.

Par. 29. About April 1, 1937, respondent, its field representatives and distributors, commenced to contact and seek out said Chandler-Groves service stations and informed them that, if they continued to deal in Chandler-Groves products, they would no longer be permitted to purchase respondent's products at a favorable discount, would cease to receive service bulletins and information from respondent, and in the case of respondent's contract service stations, that such contracts would be canceled. Respondent's instructions to its distributors and field representatives, as indicated by its said General Bulletin No. 134 and its confidential bulletin under date of April 7 have been and are being carried out. Respondent has carried out this policy to the extent of canceling its contracts with and reducing the discounts available to some 19 service stations refusing to discontinue dealing in Chandler-Groves products. In some instances, respondent offered the service station the privilege of purchasing respondent's products at a more favorable discount than the station was then receiving, upon condition that the service station sever its connection with Chandler-Groves, at the same time threatening to reduce the discount if the service stations would not do so.

Par. 30. As a result of this concerted action by respondent, its field representatives, and its distributors, the independent carburetor and ignition stations throughout the country were given a choice of losing the privilege of handling on favorable terms the carburetor which was standard equipment on a majority of automobiles in use and which furnished a large part of their carburetors service business, or of giving up a new carburetor line which was standard equipment on only a few cars, which, even as to those, had not been in the field long enough to require any substantial amount of service. Confronted with these alternatives many service stations throughout the country canceled their contracts with Chandler-Groves, returning their Chandler-Groves stock or ceased to deal in Chandler-Groves products. In a few cases the service stations refused to comply with conditions imposed by respondent, but these were mostly Chandler-Groves distributors (wholesalers dealing in respondent's products only on a service station basis). In the 10 months after April 1, 1937, a substantial number of service stations in various parts of the country severed their official service station connection with Chandler-Groves or returned their Chandler-Groves stock, or both. A large majority of these cancelations and returns occurred in April and May 1937.

Par. 31. About 55 service stations in the Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, and Philadelphia areas canceled their Chandler-Groves contracts after April 1, 1937, and in most cases returned their Chandler-Groves stock or ceased to purchase additional stock. After April 1, 1937, the efforts of the distributors in these areas to obtain new Chandler-Groves service-station representation met with little success and many service stations assigned opposition by respondent as the reason for their refusing to sign contracts or purchase stock. The Chicago distributor obtained about 40 service-station contracts for Chandler-Groves prior to April 1, 1937, and only about 10 thereafter; of the 50 contracts obtained, only half were still in force in February 1938, the other half having been canceled by the service stations. None of these cancelations occurred prior to April 1, 1937.

Par. 32. Of 50 service stations in the Philadelphia area which held Chandler-Groves contracts during all or part of 1937, 36 which did not cancel such contracts purchased an average of $104 worth of Chandler-Groves products per station during the period of April to December of that year. Fourteen stations which canceled their contracts purchased a net total of $18 worth of Chandler-Groves merchandise during the same period. While there was very little demand for Chandler-Groves products during the first 3 months of 1937, the 14 stations which later canceled their contracts purchased slightly more per station from January to March than the other 36 stations.

Par. 33. By the terms of the sales contracts between Chandler-Groves Co. and service stations, the service stations agreed "to prominently display the advertising material of the vendor and to maintain mechanical equipment to efficiently service the product of the vendor." The sale of carburetors is promoted by the display of stock and advertising material. Some service stations did not return their Chandler-Groves stock after receiving respondent's Bulletin No. 134, but nevertheless refrained thereafter from displaying or advertising Chandler-Groves products, kept such stock out of sight, and ceased to promote the sale thereof.

PAR. 34. Respondent has entered into or renewed contracts for the sale of its products with more than 900 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

PAR. 35. Respondent has fixed the prices charged for its products and discounts from such prices, to approximately 7,000 service stations, on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

PAR. 36. Respondent has made such contracts, fixed such prices, and imposed such condition and understanding, in the course and conduct of its after-market, interstate business.

PAR. 37. The effect of the contracts and the condition or understanding mentioned in paragraph 34 hereof, and of the condition or understanding mentioned in paragraph 35 hereof, has been and may be to substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of carburetors and carburetor parts in interstate commerce.

PAR. 38. The effect of the respondent's above-described acts and practices has been to induce, coerce, and compel a large number of automobile service stations throughout the United States to cease and refuse to deal in or purchase the products of Chandler-Groves Co. and to cancel or violate existing Chandler-Groves sales agreements. Respondent has thereby closed to a competitor a substantial number of actual and potential service station outlets for its products, has diverted business and trade from such competitor, and has prevented such service stations from selling and dealing in a full line of standard carburetors and parts.

CONCLUSIONS

1. By its acts and practices described in paragraphs 20, 21, 22, 23, 29, 34 and 35 of the foregoing "Findings as to the Facts," the respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, has violated and is violating section 3 of the Clayton Act.

2. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have been and are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint, the answer of the respondent, the testimony taken and evidence introduced at hearings before a trial examiner theretofore duly appointed by the Commission, and upon briefs and oral argument of counsel for the Commission and for the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being of the opinion that the respondent has violated and is violating the provisions of section 3 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), and the Commission further being of the opinion that the respondent has been and is using unfair methods of competition prohibited by an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes" (the Federal Trade Commission Act), and having made its report stating its findings as to the facts;

It is ordered, That the respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution, sale, and offering for sale of carburetors and carburetor parts in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From directly or indirectly making or renewing contracts for the sale of such products to automotive vehicle service stations or other retail dealers on the condition or understanding that such purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods or merchandise of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

2. From directly or indirectly fixing prices for such products, or discounts from such prices, charged or allowed or to be charged or allowed to automotive vehicle service stations or other retailer purchasers thereof on the condition or understanding that such purchasers shall not use or deal in the goods or merchandise of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

3. From directly or indirectly informing or notifying automotive vehicle service stations or other retail dealers in such products, or causing any of them to be informed or notified, that if they use or deal in such products of a competitor or competitors of respondent they will be required to pay a higher price for such products of respondent’s manufacture, or will cease to receive service information from respondent, or their service station contracts will be terminated.

4. From requiring or causing any distributor or zone distributor of its products, or other wholesale dealer therein, to do any of the acts or engage in any of the practices forbidden by paragraphs 1, 2, or 3 hereof; and from requiring or causing any such distributor or wholesaler to charge or threaten to charge a higher price for such products of respondent's manufacture to any purchaser thereof than would be charged if such purchaser did not deal in the goods of a competitor of respondent, or to terminate the service station contract of, or refuse to sell such products to, any automotive vehicle service station or other retailer using or dealing in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

5. From directly or indirectly inducing or attempting to induce any automotive vehicle service station or other dealer in such products to cease or refuse to deal in such products of a competitor of respondent, or to terminate or violate any contract between such service station or dealer and a competitor of respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied and is complying with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

THE ROSS ROY SERVICE, INC., AND KELVINATOR CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in compilation of statistical data for use of manufacturers in advertising their respective products and in sale and distribution, in commerce among the various States, of books and literature containing such statistical data to manufacturers and dealers of products to which same apply, in substantial competition with others engaged in business of compilation, sale, and distribution of such data; in consideration of payment of sum of $11,000 by, and in pursuance of agreement entered into with, second concern engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of electrical refrigerators to purchasers in the various States in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution in commerce of such products—

Published, sold, and distributed to some 5,000 dealers and distributors of said concern's refrigerators and at the request of said concern and with its aid, assistance, encouragement, knowledge, acquiescence, and cooperation (1) "Comparative Handbook" in which, thus titled and put out under the name of said corporation it described itself as "An independent organization in no way affiliated with any manufacturer" and the book as an "accurate unbiased source of information," and in which were set forth data theretofore submitted to and approved by said concern relating in part to weight, cabinet, ice capacity, finish, hardware, insulation, temperature, mechanical action, economy, and dependability of mechanical refrigerators made and sold by various companies in the United States with schedules making comparisons between refrigerators of aforesaid concern and those of its competitors shown in red type in every case where one had an advantage over the other in the opinion of said corporation; and (2) bulletins designated as "Confidential" and devoted to publication of statistics, illustrations, and discussion respecting and concerning the merits and demerits of one make of refrigerator and comparison thereof with that of aforesaid concern;

Facts being said handbook and comparisons therein made were not "accurate, authoritative, and unbiased" but on the contrary were biased, inaccurate, and unauthoritative; it was not published entirely independent of all manufacturers but said corporation was subsidized as above set forth by aforesaid concern, refrigerators of equal size and capacity and selling value were not always used in the various tables and comparisons in said handbook and bulletins, and comparisons of temperature, hardware, finish, conveniences, cabinet, compressor and condenser units, insulation, cost of operation, and number of ice cubes frozen per hour, and number of kilowatts used per hour in rooms of various degrees of temperature were erroneously shown in handbook as in favor of the refrigerator made and sold by aforesaid subsidizing concern;
Complaint

With tendency and capacity through use of said handbook and bulletins by said corporation and said subsidizing concern to mislead and deceive members of purchasing public with respect to quality and value of refrigerators made and sold by latter, and particularly to mislead purchasers of latter's refrigerators into false and erroneous belief that such handbook and bulletins above described were "unbiased, authoritative, and accurate" and in no way affiliated with any company or corporation which made or sold refrigerators, and with result, due to misrepresentation aforesaid in such handbook and bulletins by said corporation, that trade was thereby diverted to said concern from its competitors who do not misrepresent the character, quality, or value of their refrigerators in advertising and statistics distributed by them in commerce among the various States:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Penoke for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that The Ross Roy Service, Inc., and Kelvinator Corporation, corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, the Ross Roy Service, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan with its principal office and place of business at 403 West Baltimore Avenue, in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan. It is now, and has been for some time engaged in the business of compiling statistical data for the use of manufacturers, advertising their respective products and in the sale and distribution of books and literature containing such statistical data to manufacturers and to dealers in the products to which said data apply in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes the said statistical data, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade and commerce in said statistical data so distributed and sold by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, Kelvinator Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan with its principal office and place of business at 14250 Plymouth Road in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan. It is now, and has been for several years last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of electrical refrigerators. It causes said refrigerators when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said refrigerators so distributed and sold by the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. The respondents in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, are now and have been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar information and statistical data and refrigerators in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. The Crosley Radio Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Cincinnati in said State. It has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of electrical refrigerators in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes the same when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio. In the conduct of its business, Crosley Radio Corporation was at all times herein mentioned, and still is in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships, among which is the respondent Kelvinator Corporation, likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of electrical rethe various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In such competition between the sellers of various mechanical refrigerators, one of the controlling influences upon the purchasing public is the popular opinion as to the relative consideration to be given to such features as weight, ice capacity, cabinet, hardware, finish, insulation, temperature, conveniences, mechanical action, economy, and warranty in determining the relative merits and dependability of the various electrical refrigerators.

Par. 5. In the early part of the year 1936, the respondent Ross Roy Service, Inc., collected and compiled certain statistical data relating to the mechanical refrigerators manufactured and sold by the various concerns in the United States, which data in particular related to such features of the various refrigerators as weight, ice capacity, cabinet, hardware, finish, insulation, temperature, convenience, mechanical action, economy, and warranty. Thereupon Kelvinator Corporation entered into an agreement with the respondent Ross Roy Service, Inc., wherein and whereby the Ross Roy Service, Inc., undertook to and did publish the statistical data so collected in the form of a statistical bound book designated as "The Ross Roy Comparative Hand Book," hereinafter referred to as handbook and also published a series of bulletins which make comparisons between certain mechanical refrigerators. Said series of bulletins were and are known as "Confidential Bulletins." Each bulletin in the series referred to is devoted to the presentation of statistics, illustrations, and discussions respecting and concerning the merits or demerits of one make of refrigerator and especially to a comparison thereof with the Kelvinator refrigerator, always to the advantage of the Kelvinator. The publication of said information and data was made at the request of the respondent Kelvinator Corporation and with the aid, assistance, encouragement, knowledge, acquiescence, and cooperation of the said Kelvinator Corporation. The Ross Roy Service, Inc., disseminated and distributed the aforesaid handbooks and bulletins with the full knowledge and acquiescence and at the request of Kelvinator Corporation to approximately 5,000 dealers and distributors of Kelvinator refrigerators located in the various States of the United States. For such compilation of data and such distribution the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation agreed to and did pay the Ross Roy Service, Inc., the sum of $10,000. The dealers and distributors of Kelvinator Corporation electrical refrigerators likewise paid the respondent, Ross Roy Service, Inc., a good and valuable consideration for such handbook, data, and bulletins, and while Kelvinator Corporation lent its financial support to the Ross Roy Service, Inc., in the publication and distribution of such literature and statistics, no mention of the fact was made by either of the respondents at any time.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its business the Ross Roy Service, Inc., in its advertisements and advertising matter which is circulated in the various States of the United States, and in the handbook and other literature sold and distributed to the dealers in Kelvinator Corporation electrical refrigerators, as above set out, stated and represented that it was and is an independent organization "in no way affiliated with any manufacturer," and that its literature, representations, and comparisons were "accurate, authoritative, and unbiased."

In truth and in fact the information contained in the said handbook and the comparisons therein made between such refrigerators were not and are not accurate, authoritative, or unbiased, and the handbook was not and is not published entirely independent of all manufacturers. On the contrary such information and data so published by the respondent the Ross Roy Service, Inc., was biased, inaccurate, and unauthoritative. As a matter of fact, the respondent Ross Roy Service, Inc., was subsidized by the respondent Kelvinator Corporation in the manner herein set out. The derogatory and disparaging comparisons referred to were and are made concerning various refrigerators that are competitive with Kelvinator Corporation's refrigerators. Among such refrigerators which were unfairly disparaged are the refrigerators of Crosley Radio Corporation. In the handbook and bulletins devoted to a description of the refrigerators made by the Crosley Radio Corporation and other competitors of the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, various statements and representations are made which are unfairly derogatory to, or disparaging to, such refrigerators. Comparisons were made between various features of the Kelvinator refrigerators and various features of the Crosley refrigerator and other refrigerators of competitors to the disadvantage of the Crosley Radio Corporation's refrigerators and the refrigerators of other competitors of the respondent Kelvinator Corporation. Illustrative of the unfair comparisons and disparaging statements and representations concerning the various competitive refrigerators are the following statements, representations, and comparisons concerning the refrigerator made by Crosley Radio Corporation.

In the schedules contained in the handbook purporting to give the comparisons between the Kelvinator refrigerators and refrigerators of its competitors, it is stated at the top of the pages of said handbook that the specifications are shown in red in every case where one refrigerator has an advantage over the other in the opinion of the respondent Ross Roy Service, Inc.

Under the heading of "Hardware-Finish" respondents represent that the Kelvinator refrigerator was to be preferred to and had an advantage over the electrical refrigerator of the Crosley Radio Corporation known as "Shelvador" because of the fact that the finish of the Kelvinator was "Chrome Ivory" and the finish of the "Shelvador" was "Chromium." As a matter of fact, the only difference between the two refrigerators in this respect was one of color which is not a feature of any importance. In fact, one color finish is not superior to another and is purely a matter of personal taste.

Under the heading of "Temperature," respondents represent that the Kelvinator was favored and to be preferred because it has a built-in thermometer, whereas the "Shelvador" had none. As a matter of fact, a thermometer is supplied with each "Shelvador" sold and distributed by the Crosley Radio Corporation and is so designed that the thermometer may be placed in or left out of the "Shelvador." The fact as to whether the thermometer is built-in or not is not important and does not represent a feature generally considered in determining the relative merits of refrigerators, and in no event is the thermometer of the Kelvinator refrigerator superior to the thermometer furnished by the Crosley Radio Corporation with the refrigerators sold and distributed by it.

Under the caption of "Conveniences," the respondents represent that both the Kelvinator and Shelvador contained a utility basket. As a matter of fact the utility basket of the "Shelvador" refrigerator was and is an unique and distinctive feature which is highly advertised and much to be preferred to the utility basket of the Kelvinator refrigerator. Notwithstanding that fact it was not favored with a red letter as a superior feature lending advantage to the Crosley unit.

In a purported comparison of the cabinet compressor and condenser units of the Crosley and other refrigerators as against the Kelvinator, pictorial representations of the motors are shown in the bulletins. In such pictorial representations respondents portrayed the complete and assembled unit of the Kelvinator motor, while the pictures of the motors of the other refrigerators were incomplete and unassembled. In and by such pictorial representations the erroneous and mistaken impression is conveyed that the Kelvinator motor is larger and more complete and that the motors of the competing products are small and of inferior mechanism.
Respondents also represent in the said "Confidential Bulletins" that while the Crosley refrigerator had thick side walls, back and top, the door opening in front of said refrigerator was very thin, and as a result thereof such unit was lacking in proper insulation. Respondents represent that the insulation of the Crosley refrigerator compared favorably in thickness with that used in the Kelvinator refrigerator cabinets, except as to the doors of each refrigerator, and that the Crosley unit is lacking in proper insulation. It was further stated in that connection:

Crosley insulation compares favorably in thickness when all but the doors are considered but to make room for the Shelvadors, the door insulation has been reduced to only 2\(\frac{3}{4}\) inches in two models, to 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) inches in two more, and to only 1\% inches in four others.

That is somewhat similar to building a well insulated shanty for a railroad watchman and then putting on a door through which the heat can leak without difficulty.

In truth and in fact the figures as to the thickness of the "Shelvador" doors are and were inaccurate. Moreover such representations convey a false and erroneous impression, inasmuch as thickness does not in any manner mean proper and sufficient insulation. A thin door may be properly insulated and serve a greater degree of efficiency than a thick door. The purpose of such representations were and are to, and they do unfairly disparage the Crosley "Shelvador."

It was stated and represented that only the Kelvinator had an accurate, complete, and perfect temperature control and graduated thermometer, inasmuch as minute calculations appear in the scale of the Kelvinator. In truth and in fact the accuracy of the thermometer does not depend upon the minuteness of the markings on the scale used in the thermometer. In and by such representations, respondents unfairly disparage and discredit competing products of Kelvinator Corporation.

It was stated and represented in such bulletins that the Kelvinator refrigerator could be operated at a lower cost than the refrigerators of competitors; but no mention was made of the fact that with the refrigerators of the Crosley Radio Corporation and other refrigerator companies, more ice cubes per hour could be frozen than with the Kelvinator. Respondents failed to disclose that on the part of some manufacturers of refrigerators it is their policy to give their customers faster ice freezing even though at a slightly increased cost of operation, and, as a matter of fact, there is a preference on the part of some customers for refrigerators that accord fast ice freezing even though at an increased cost as compared to refrigerators that produce ice at a slower pace. In and by such representations respondents unfairly disparage and discredit the competing products of the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation.

In said bulletins respondents make a comparison of operating cost of the Kelvinator and Crosley refrigerators and represented that in a room temperature of 80° the number of kilowatt-hours consumed by the Crosley refrigerator was 1.70 as against 1.65 for the Kelvinator in 24 hours; and for a room temperature of 90° the kilowatt-hours consumed by the Crosley refrigerator was 2.20 as against 0.85 per 24 hours for the Kelvinator. Such representations, made by the respondents, were and are grossly inaccurate and are greatly in excess of the actual consumption of the Crosley unit. As a matter of fact figures vary with respect to the kilowatt-hour consumption on all makes at varying temperatures and there is no established standard of comparison. The effect of such false and misleading statements is to unfairly disparage and discredit the refrigerators of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

In the various tables and comparisons referred to, used for comparison, respondents did not compare Kelvinator and “Shelvador” refrigerators of equal size, capacity, and selling value; but used instead a much larger Kelvinator, having a selling price of $300 per unit, and a smaller “Shelvador” having a selling price of $175 per unit, and such comparisons so made by respondents are and were unfair to the “Shelvador” refrigerator and tend to reflect discredit upon the refrigerator of Crosley Radio Corporation.

Par. 7. The purpose, intent, and effect of the representations and comparisons made by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof and many similar representations not herein set out, all of which are false, misleading, and inaccurate, was and is to disparage the products of competitors of respondent Kelvinator Corporation. The purpose and effect of the representations that the statistical handbook was accurate, authoritative, and unbiased, and published entirely independent of all manufacturers, was and is to mislead the trade and consuming public into believing that the representations and comparisons therein made were those of a disinterested organization having no affiliation or connection with the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation. The concealment of such affiliation was and is calculated to prevent competing manufacturers of the Kelvinator Corporation from fixing responsibility upon it for such representations. Said disparagements of said competing manufacturers’ products handicap said competing manufacturers in defending their products. The methods devised and adopted by respondents as set forth herein were calculated to deceive the trade and consuming public as to the origin and weight of the attacks made upon competitive producers.
The distribution of such data and information as set out herein places in the hands of dealers in Kelvinator refrigerators a means whereby they may represent, offer for sale and sell to the purchasing public Kelvinator refrigerators under erroneous and misleading representations.

Par. 8. The aforesaid false, misleading, and disparaging statements, representations, and comparisons so made by respondents, as above alleged, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous beliefs that such statements, representations, and comparisons are authoritative, accurate, unbiased, independent, and true, and that by reason of such representations and comparisons the refrigerators of the respondent Kelvinator Corporation, were recommended and favored, and in fact superior to the products of its competitors. Further, said false and misleading statements, representations, and comparisons have a tendency and capacity to, and do unfairly divert trade to respondents from their competitors, and induce the public to purchase the refrigerators of the respondent Kelvinator Corporation in preference to the refrigerators of competitors because of such erroneous beliefs brought about as above set out. As a result thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been and are all to the prejudice of the public, and respondents' competitors, as aforesaid, and have been and are unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 8, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., and Kelvinator Corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Said respondents filed answers to said complaint. Thereafter, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint Fred R. Schmalzriedt and Waldo C. Granse appeared for the said The Ross Roy Service, Inc., and Richard Ford represented the said Kelvinator Corporation, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence and briefs in support of and against the complaint, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Detroit in said State. Said respondent is engaged in the business of compiling statistical data for the use of manufacturers advertising their respective products and in the sale and distribution of books and literature containing such statistical data to manufacturers and dealers in the products to which said data applies in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Detroit in said State. On January 4, 1937 steps were taken to dissolve said corporation and to reincorporate the same under the name of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation. Said respondent was for several years past as its successor is now, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of electrical refrigerators. It caused said refrigerators, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business located in the said State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. Other persons, firms, and corporations have been and now are engaged in the business of compilation, sale, and distribution of statistical data, and the manufacture, sale, and distribution of refrigerators in commerce between and among various States of the United States in substantial competition with said respondents.

Par. 3. The Crosley Radio Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the
Findings

State of Ohio. Its principal office and place of business is located in the city of Cincinnati in said State. For more than 5 years last past said corporation has been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of electrical refrigerators in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Said corporation is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, firms, and partnerships, including said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation.

PAR. 4. In competition between manufacturers and sellers of various mechanical refrigerators, purchasers give consideration to such features as weight, cabinet, ice capacity, finish, hardware, insulation, temperature, mechanical action, economy, and dependability of the various electrical refrigerators.

PAR. 5. In the early part of the year 1936, said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., collected and compiled statistical data relating to the mechanical refrigerators manufactured and sold by various concerns or companies in the United States. Said data related partly to the weight, cabinets, ice capacity, finish, hardware, insulation, temperature, mechanical action, economy, and dependability. Said data was submitted to said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, for inspection and was approved by it. Thereupon, said Kelvinator Corporation entered into an agreement with said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., to publish a book designated as "The Ross Roy Comparative Handbook," hereinafter referred to as "handbook," and also to publish a series of bulletins making a comparison between said mechanical refrigerators. Said bulletins were designated as "Confidential Bulletins" and were devoted to the publication of statistics, illustrations, and discussion respecting and concerning the merits and demerits of one make of refrigerator and a comparison of said refrigerator with the Kelvinator refrigerator manufactured by said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation. Publication of said data and information was made at the request of the respondent, said Kelvinator Corporation, and with the aid, assistance, encouragement, knowledge, acquiescence, and cooperation of said Kelvinator Corporation. Said The Ross Roy Service, Inc. sold and distributed said handbooks and bulletins in commerce with the full knowledge and consent of the Kelvinator Corporation to approximately 5,000 dealers and distributors of said Kelvinator refrigerators, whose names and addresses were furnished to respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., by said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, located in various States of the United States. For compensation to said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., for the compilation of said data and bulletins and distribution of same, said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, agreed to, and did, pay said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., the sum of $10,999. Notwithstanding the Kelvinator Corporation did lend financial aid and assistance to The Ross Roy Service, Inc., no mention was made of the fact in said handbooks or bulletins, but there was a statement incorporated in said handbooks by said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., that it was "An independent organization in no way affiliated with any manufacturer," and that it was an "accurate unbiased source of information." The facts plainly show, and the truth indicates, that said handbook and the comparison therein made between various refrigerators were not "accurate, authoritative, or unbiased," and said handbook was not published entirely independent of all manufacturers. The truth and facts clearly indicate said information and data so published by respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., was biased, inaccurate, and unauthoritative. Also, it is a matter of fact that said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., was subsidized by said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, in the manner hereinbefore set out. The derogatory and disparaging comparisons heretofore referred to were made concerning various refrigerators that are in competition with said respondent Kelvinator Corporation's refrigerators. One of such refrigerators which were unfairly disparaged was manufactured and sold by said Crosley Radio Corporation heretofore mentioned. Schedules contained in said handbooks making comparison between Kelvinator refrigerator and refrigerators of its competitors are shown in red type in every case where one refrigerator has an advantage over the other in the opinion of said respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc. In various tables and comparisons heretofore referred to in said handbook and bulletins used for comparison, refrigerators of equal size and capacity and selling value were not always used. The comparison of the temperature, hardware, finish, conveniences, cabinet, compressor, and condenser units, insulation, cost of operation, and number of ice cubes frozen per hour, and various numbers of kilowatts used per hour in rooms of various degrees of temperature were erroneously shown in said handbook to be in favor of the Kelvinator refrigerator manufactured and sold by said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation.

Par. 6. The use of said respondents of the aforesaid handbooks and bulletins had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public with respect to the quality and value of refrigerators manufactured and sold by said respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, and to particularly mislead purchasers of said respondent Kelvinator Corporation's refrigerators into the false and erroneous belief that said handbooks and bulletins heretofore described were "accurate, unbiased, and authoritative" and in no way affiliated with any company or organization who manufactured or sold refrigerators. Due to the aforesaid misrepresentations in said handbook and bulletins by respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., trade was thereby diverted to the respondent, Kelvinator Corporation, from its competitors who do not misrepresent the character, quality or value of their refrigerators in advertising and statistics distributed by them in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., and Kelvinator Corporation, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of said respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission and by Waldo C. Granse and Richard Ford, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., and Kelvinator Corporation, their respective officers, representatives, agents, employees, and successors, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of compilations of statistical data, books, and literature containing statistical data and other advertising material in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or indirectly in connection with the publishing and offering for sale of statistical data and comparisons of various competitive products that such data or comparisons are authoritative and unbiased or that the respondent, The Ross Roy Service, Inc., is an independent organization not affiliated with any manufacturer when the cost of such publication or any part thereof is borne by the manufacturer whose product is used as a base for such statistical data or comparisons.

2. Disparaging through the medium of advertising literature, or under the guise of statistical data, comparisons, or in any other manner, the products of competitors of those manufacturers whose products are used as a base for such comparisons.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

HARLAND L. HERB DOING BUSINESS AS NATIONAL SCIENTIFIC PRODUCTS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of medicinal product known as "Prostories"; in advertising same in papers and magazines circulating among various States—Represented that the same was a new medicinal principle and new medical discovery, and that it constituted a competent and effective remedy and cure for prostatitis, infection, and other disorders of the prostate gland and that it was a stimulant therefor and would restore, stimulate, or increase potency or sex power, and was a remedy or cure, or a competent and effective treatment for impotency;
Facts being it was not a new or scientific principle of stimulation of said gland, loss of power such as due to age and various diseases and conditions, treatment of diseases of said gland requires examination for purpose of determining cause of ailment, and said product was not an effective treatment for prostatitis and would not accomplish results claimed for it as above set forth, but only effect thereof would be by reason of irritant action of ingredients therein contained to act as an excitant and such irritant might be harmful, and it was not analgesic or pain-relieving;
With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that its said "Prostories" was an effective cure for diseases of prostate gland and would relieve pain and suffering caused thereby and increase power of user through stimulation thereof, and to induce number of purchasing public to buy said product because of aforesaid erroneous beliefs engendered by such false and misleading representations, and unfairly to divert trade to him from competitors who do not make use of such misrepresentations:
Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.
Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Harland
L. Herb, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been for more than 1 year last past, and is now, using unfair methods of competition in commodity as “commerce” is defined in said Act of Congress, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Harland L. Herb is an individual operating and doing business under the trade name “National Scientific Products Company,” with his principal offices and place of business located at 644 Diversey Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Par. 2. Respondent Harland L. Herb, trading as National Scientific Products Co., is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, compounding, advertising, selling, and distributing medicaments and medicinal compounds allegedly for the relief and cure of diseases, infections, and disorders of the prostate gland; for relief from impotency, and for the restoration, stimulation, and increase of sex power in man.

Among the commodities so advertised and sold by respondent is a product known and advertised as “Prostories” recommended as a treatment and cure for prostatitis and for the increase of sex desire and sex power in man.

Said respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, his said product, when manufactured and sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to retail stores and other purchasers thereof at their respective points of location, in the several States of the United States other than the State of origin, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other persons, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale of medicaments and medicinal products like or similar to those sold by respondent, or in the sale of other medicaments, medicinal compounds, or other products designed, intended, sold, and used for the treatment of the same diseases, conditions, maladies, and disorders of the human body, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, for the purpose of inducing and encouraging the sale of his said products, respondent now, and for more than 1 year last past, has made use in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, circulars, letters, radio broadcasts, and other forms of advertising media having an interstate circulation—published and circulated under the trade name “National Scientific Products Company”—and in sales talks and on signs posted around retail stores

HOW PROSTORIES HELP

As this gland (The Prostate Gland) is located close to the walls of the lower intestine, just inside the rectum, it is easy to understand how it can be medicated through this opening.

In use, the suppository slips past the muscles of the rectum and lodges in the lower bowel beside the prostate where it is melted by the heat of the body. The medicine contained is thus released to its work of stimulation.”

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with other similar representations not herein set out in full, serve as representations on the part of respondent that said product constitutes a competent and effective remedy and cure for prostatitis and infections, diseases, and disorders of the prostate gland, and that its use will restore, stimulate, and increase potency or sex power in man.

PAR. 4. In truth and fact, the respondent's said product is not a new medical discovery or scientific development of a new medical principle and does not constitute a competent and effective remedy or cure for prostatitis, or any other infections, diseases, and disorders of the prostate gland. Its use will not cure or relieve impotency or sex weakness and does not stimulate the prostate gland or increase sex power in man.

PAR. 5. The said representations of said respondent, as aforesaid, are false and misleading and have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers and the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the product so marked, branded, designated, advertised as Prostories and sold, and transported by respondent, is an effective cure for infections, diseases, and impairments of the prostate gland and will relieve pain and suffering caused thereby, and that it will restore, stimulate, and increase sex appetite and sex functioning in man by stimulating the prostate gland when such is not in fact the truth. The said representations of respondent have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to induce retail dealers and members of the purchasing public to buy respondent's said product because of the aforesaid erroneous beliefs engendered by said false and misleading representations, and to unfairly divert trade from competitors who are engaged in the sale of like products to that sold by respondent, or in the sale of other medicaments, medicinal compounds, or other products designed, intended, sold, and used for the treatment of the same diseases, conditions, maladies, and disorders of the human body, in commerce in and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not use such false and misleading representations. As a result thereof substantial injury is now being done, and has been done, by the respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and of the District of Columbia.
The above alleged acts, practices, and representations of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers, and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 8, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Harland L. Herb, an individual, trading as National Scientific Products Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, acting at that hearing for Carrel F. Rhodes, attorney for the Commission, before Arthur F. Thomas, an examiner of the Commission, duly appointed to take testimony and receive evidence in said proceeding, and in opposition to the allegation of the complaint by Harland L. Herb, appearing on behalf of himself, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint. Respondent waived the filing of brief and oral argument; and the Commission having duly considered the same, being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Harland L. Herb, is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of National Scientific Products Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 644 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Ill. He is engaged in the manufacture and sale and distribution of a medicinal product known as "Prostories" and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in substantial competition with other firms and corporations engaged in the sale of medicaments and medicinal products like or similar to those sold by respondent or other products intended to be sold and used for the treatment of the same diseases and disorders of the human body in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his said merchandise, has advertised in papers and magazines having a circulation between and among various States of the United States, said product “Prostories” and in said advertisements he has represented that this product is a new medicinal principle and a new medical discovery; in his advertisements he has further represented that the said product constitutes a competent and effective remedy and cure for prostatitis, infection, and other disorders of the prostate gland; and as (1) a stimulant of the prostate gland; (2) a relief to prostrate sufferers from pain and sex weakness; (3) a relief from impotency; (4) a prostate stimulator doubling sexual power in from 1 to 2 hours.

Par. 3. All of these representations are false. Loss of sexual power is due to age, diseases of the nervous system, functional and organic; various forms of psychosis, psychoneurosis, degenerate and tonic neurosis; diabetes; local diseases of the genital tracts. Treatment of diseases of the prostate gland requires an examination of the individual affected, for the purpose of determining the cause of the ailment. There is no one effective treatment for all ailments of this gland. The suppository of respondent is not an effectual treatment for prostatitis and would not relieve sex weakness. The ingredients of the suppository known as “Prostories,” as disclosed by respondent’s formula for the compound, would not effect a cure, or relief, such as the advertisements claim for it. It is not a new or scientific principle of stimulation of the prostate gland. These ingredients would not stimulate the prostate gland, and, if it should be conceded that the ingredients contained such value, under respondent’s plan or method of medication the medicament could not reach the prostate gland. The only effect this suppository has is that the ingredients act as irritants to certain parts of the body, as the mouth of the bladder, etc., and any suppository composed of any ingredients might act with the same effect. This irritant merely acts as an excitement of sexual appetite, but has no effect on sexual power, and it may be harmful. The compound is not analgesic or pain-relieving.
Par. 4. The said false and misleading representations of said respondent have had and do have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the product so marked and advertised as "Prostories" and sold and transported, in interstate commerce, by him is an effective cure for diseases of the prostate gland, and will relieve pain and suffering caused thereby, and that it will increase sex power in man by stimulating the prostate gland, when such is not in fact the truth. Said representations of respondent have had the capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public to buy respondent's product because of the aforesaid erroneous beliefs engendered by said false and misleading representations, and unfairly to divert trade from competitors who are engaged in the sale of other medicinal compounds sold and used for the treatment of like diseases or disorders of the human body, in commerce in and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not use such false and misleading representations.

CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondent, as set forth in the aforesaid Findings of Facts, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

of a medicinal preparation now known as "Prostories" or any other preparation containing substantially similar ingredients or possessing similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing directly, or in any manner, that said preparation
1. Is a remedy or cure, or a competent and effective treatment, for prostatitis or any other infections, diseases, or disorders of the prostate gland.
2. Is a stimulant for the prostate gland.
3. Will restore, stimulate, or increase potency or sex power.
4. Is a remedy or cure, or a competent and effective treatment for impotency.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
ISIDORE STEIN DOING BUSINESS AS UNIVERSAL TRADING CO., EASTERN DISTRIBUTING CO., EMPIRE DISTRIBUTING CO., AND THE NATIONAL PRODUCTS

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of comb and brush sets, flashlights, jewelry, razor blades, pocketknives, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

(a) Sold and distributed said articles by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, in accordance with which he distributed or caused to be distributed to representatives, and prospective representatives, advertising literature including a circular listing a number of items and prices thereon and including a pull card, tabs of which various concealed name of one of aforesaid items and price thereof, and under which scheme or plan purchaser received article of merchandise as aforesaid of varying retail value or apparent value in accordance with tab selected by chance, and operator or representative selling such tabs or chances was compensated by receipt of premium after sale of entire number thereof, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with sales plan above set forth, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said method and by element of chance involved in sale of such merchandise and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said goods in preference to those offered and sold by competitors who did not use such or equivalent method, and with effect by reason of said game of chance of unfairly diverting trade and custom to him from his competitors aforesaid;

(b) Represented that his merchandise was distributed free or without cost through such statements in his advertising matter as “Gifts for all. No cost to you,” “How to get your free gifts,” “Special offer. Two extra valuable surprise gifts free,” facts being none of so-called premiums or gifts were given away free or without cost to representatives, but were either purchased with labor by them or prices thereof were included in those of other articles which they had to sell or procure sale of before they could procure so-called premiums or gifts, and in case of a number thereof certain sums of money in addition to labor performed or services rendered were required to be paid;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such statements and representations were true and into purchase of substantial quantities of his products as a result thereof, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to him from manufacturer and distributor competitors of like and similar products who did not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning the same, to the substantial injury of competitors in commerce:

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Isidore Stein, individually and trading as Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., Empire Distributing Co., and the National Products, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Isidore Stein, is an individual trading under the names of Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., Empire Distributing Co., and the National Products. Respondent has operated at various addresses, commencing with the National Products at 846 Broadway, New York City, and 547 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Thereafter, respondent traded as Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., and Empire Distributing Co., all at 18 West Seventeenth Street, New York, N. Y. Since using the last-named address, respondent has conducted business through Box 75, Station B, Brooklyn, N. Y., and from his home address, 1453 East New York Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of comb and brush sets, flashlights, pen and pencil sets, cigarette cases and lighters, jewelry, tooth paste, shaving cream, spoons, razor blades, perfume, pocketknives, bill folders, cosmetics, clocks, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his places of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time past a course of trading by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with part-
Complaint

Complaints and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

One portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there is designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the prices the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchaser of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes, and has furnished, various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said pull cards, use, and have used, the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance, to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.
Complaint

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as hereinabove related, respondent causes, and has caused, various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid of which the following are examples, but are not all inclusive:

Gifts for all. No cost to you.
How to get your free gifts.
Special offer. Two extra valuable surprise gifts free.
Beautiful, useful household gifts at absolutely no cost to you.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements or representations of respondent in selling and offering for sale such articles of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by inducing them to mistakenly believe that respondent gives away certain of his said articles of merchandise without cost to his representatives.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact none of the so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or without cost, but said so-called premiums or gifts, which are represented as being "free" or without cost to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives, or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise, which said representatives must sell, or procure the sale of, before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of so-called premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and to the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent’s products as the result of such erroneous beliefs. There are among the competitors of respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products, who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from such competitors, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 24th day of August 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint, in this proceeding upon respondent, Isidore Stein, individually and trading as Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., Empire Distributing Co., and the National Products, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 13th day of October 1938, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Isidore Stein, is an individual trading under the names of Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., Empire Distributing Co., and the National Products. Respondent has operated at various addresses, commencing with the National Products at 846 Broadway, New York City, and 547 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Thereafter, respondent traded as Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., and Empire Distributing Co., all at 18 West Seventeenth Street, New York, N. Y. Since using the last-named address, respondent has conducted business through Box 75, Station B, Brooklyn, N. Y., and from his home address, 1453 East New York Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of comb and brush sets, flashlights, pen and pencil sets, cigarette cases and lighters, jewelry, tooth paste, shaving cream, spoons, razor blades, perfume, pocketknives, bill folders, cosmetics, clocks, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his places of business afore-said to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1, respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature including a sales circular. Respondent’s merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

One portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there is designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereon. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the prices the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value.
Findings

than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull-card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchaser of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes, and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said pull cards, use, and have used, the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan herein-above set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as hereinabove described, respondent causes, and has caused, various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid of which the following are examples, but are not all inclusive:

Gifts for all. No cost to you.
How to get your free gifts.
Special offer. Two extra valuable surprise gifts free.
Beautiful, useful household gifts at absolutely no cost to you.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements or representations of respondent in selling and offering for sale such articles of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by inducing them to mistakenly believe that respondent gives away certain of his articles of merchandise without cost to his representatives.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact none of the so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or without cost, but said so-called premiums or gifts, which are represented as being "free" or without cost to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives, or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise, which said representatives must sell, or procure the sale of, before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of so-called premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

Par. 7. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and to the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent's products as the result of such erroneous beliefs. There are among the competitors of respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products, who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from such competitors, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Isidore Stein, individually and trading as Universal Trading Co., Eastern Distributing Co., Empire Distributing Co., and the National Products, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of comb and brush sets, flashlights, pen and pencil sets, cigarette cases and lighters, jewelry, toothpaste, shaving cream, spoons, razor blades, perfumes, pocket-knives, billfolds, cosmetics and clocks, or any other articles of merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices, for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell such merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that his merchandise is distributed free or without cost when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent shall, within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon him, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied therewith.
IN THE MATTER OF AMERICAN OPTICAL COMPANY ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, OPINION, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (a) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (a)—CUMULATIVE QUANTITY DISCOUNTS—LARGE CUSTOMER DIFFERENTIALS—WHERE NOT SUCH AS MAKE ONLY DUE ALLOWANCE FOR DIFFERENCES IN COST OF SALE OF DELIVERY OF STOCK RESULTING FROM DIFFERING QUANTITIES IN WHICH SALE AND DELIVERY MADE TO DIFFERENT CUSTOMERS.

A cumulative discount is sound only where savings have been achieved by the seller with respect to individual sales made to a particular buyer over a period of time, which savings were not reflected in the price at which the buyer purchased, and which are reserved for the purpose of refunding at the end of a period of time, and it does not follow that purchasers of large annual amounts also buy in larger individual shipments than do buyers whose purchases do not amount to so large a sum. Large buyers also place numerous small orders, the average size of which is frequently less than the average size of orders placed by buyers whose periodical annual purchases are less in volume. Thus it may cost seller more per dollar of sales to serve a customer who places a large number of small orders sufficient in the aggregate to earn the discount, than to serve a customer who places a few large orders whose total is not sufficient for such purpose. H. C. Brill Co., Inc., Docket 3239, 26 F. T. C. 603.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (b)—QUANTITY DISCOUNTS—QUANTITY ORDER BASIS—DEALER PURCHASE RANGE—WHERE IN REACH OF AVERAGE—SAVING SALE AND DELIVERY CRITERIA.

Discount schedule under which Nation-wide producer-wholesaler seller of ophthalmic products provided for such quantity bases for discounts from list as one-order purchases of 2, 5, 10, 25, or 50 units without further concessions was not found to have effect of substantially lessening or injuring competition, either with said seller or with its customers, in the absence of evidence that quantity differentials in question were beyond the range of the purchases of the average retailer and thereby resulted in discrimination in favor of certain large dealers, and in view of possible justification, in whole or in part, by differences in cost of sale and delivery resulting from difference in size of individual orders, large orders ordinarily being obtained, assembled, packed, billed, and delivered at a lower cost per dollar of sales than small orders.

Where a voluntary association organized, existing, and doing business as a Massachusetts common-law trust; various officers thereof; and a corporation organized by them to do business in certain States in which said association did not do so, and stock of which was owned or controlled by such association; and which, as largest manufacturers and sellers of ophthalmic products in the United States, were engaged in selling as chain wholesaler through their 220 branches throughout the United States their said products to, chiefly, opticians, optometrists, and oculists, and in selling also to wholesalers, and to consumers such as laboratories, hospitals, and educational institutions direct, in competition with other manufacturers, jobbers, and distributors engaged in sale and distribution of optical and ophthalmic products, and including independent wholesalers in sales territories served by such branches;

In selling, as aforesaid, their said products (a) under certain catalogue “column” schedules or discounts from list under which purchasers, irrespective of total amounts otherwise bought, received, without further concession, discount on basis of purchases in one order, and discounts on lenses, frames, and mountings based on such order purchases of 2, 5, 10, 25, or 50 units as case might be, and (b) under so-called “big dealer” discount schedule by which, on basis of all monthly purchases aggregating (or averaging over year) $1,500 or $750, as case might be, retailer received off list, among other discounts, on types of merchandise for which demand is greatest and making up bulk of purchases of its customers, i. e., on lenses, frames, and mountings purchased by it and counted at 5- and 10-unit price of “column” schedules 33 1/3 percent or 25 percent respectively, and under which they included in such aggregate for determining discount eligibility as aforesaid prescription items, surfacing, polishing, and edging machinery, and all purchases regardless of particular item’s own discount status, and regardless also of size or number of separate orders making up total, and aggregated for determining retailer’s “big dealer” discount status, as aforesaid, all purchases of multiunit outlets of retailer having such outlets, and (c) under which approved wholesalers were sold on usual manufacturer-to-wholesaler discount of 33 1/3 percent on lenses, frames, mountings, cases, and machinery, as were, as above set forth, $1,500 dealer purchasers under “big dealer” discount schedule—

Discriminated in price between different retail dealer purchasers of their products by offering to sell and selling same to a substantial number of their larger customers in various cities and towns throughout the United States at the cumulative discounts and substantial price differences and differentials of their said “big dealer” discount schedules, which did not make only due allowance for, or have any consistent relation to, differences, if any, in cost of sale or delivery of stock merchandise resulting from differing quantities in which sale and delivery was made to different customers under said plan, and which, in case of maximum discounts allowed thereunder and secured by such large purchasers as department stores and jewelry chains, approximated their factory-to-jobber discounts and those of other manufacturers, and of which differentials and discounts substantial number of their customers were able to secure the benefit, and of which many other customers engaged in competition with such "big dealers" did not secure the benefit;

With the result that—

There was a distinct competitive advantage to such "big dealer" customers by reason of the very considerable saving per dollar on purchases to such customers as against smaller retailer who could not, in general, purchase their products or other products of like grade and quality from wholesalers or jobbers on such favorable terms;

Many independent wholesalers who necessarily must purchase, as wholesalers, optical goods of first grade and quality from manufacturers at prices generally approximating those available to large retailers under such "big dealer" plan, were prevented from selling stock merchandise to a large and profitable class of customers, except at a loss, and smaller manufacturers of optical goods who market their products largely through independent wholesalers were likewise affected;

There was a tendency to induce retailers whose purchases were little more than enough to qualify for "big dealer" discount to group all purchases with their wholesale branch offering cumulative discounts, so that independent wholesaler or small and limited line manufacturer, not in a position to offer similar "big dealer" plan covering all classes of optical goods, even by direct sales, was required, to obtain part of such business, to offer sufficiently lower prices to compensate retailer for loss of discount on purchase of his requirements which he might desire or be compelled to purchase from them; and

Many retailers were induced, necessarily, through inclusion in totals under said plan of prescription business, not discountable, for determination of discount status on other items subject thereto, to give such retailers' prescription business to their said various branches, equipped therefor, to obtain lower price on purchases of stock merchandise subject to discount, and freedom of competition on basis of price, quality, and efficiency of service was, to such extent, prevented for prescription business, of importance to retailer and public in view of necessary reliance by most of smaller optometrists and opticians on wholesaler for prompt prescription service in view of own lack of machinery, facilities, or stock necessary to meet greatly varying needs of individual customers; and

With result that effect of such discrimination in price (a) had been and might be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition of their retailer customers who, as aforesaid set forth, did not secure benefit of such "big dealer" discount plan, with those of their retailer customers who did secure such benefit, and (b) had been and might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which they were engaged, and to injure, destroy or prevent competition with them in both wholesale and manufacturing fields:

Held, That through use of their "big dealer" cumulative discount plan and pricing policies embraced therein, they violated and were violating Section 2 (a) of Clayton Act.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Cyrus B. Austin for the Commission.

Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, of New York City, for respondents.
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act, as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. Title XV, Section 13), commonly known as the Robinson-Patman Act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the respondents named in the caption hereof have violated and are now violating the provisions of Subsection (a) of Section 2 of said Act as amended, hereby issues its complaint against the said respondents, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, American Optical Co., an association, is a voluntary association, organized in 1912 under the laws of Massachusetts as a common law trust, owning, holding, or controlling all of the capital stock of respondent (American Optical Co., a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts, with its principal office and place of business at Southbridge, Mass.

The American Optical Co., a corporation, was organized by respondents to engage in and carry on manufacturing and sales activities of the respondents in States where the Massachusetts trust type of association is not recognized as a corporate entity, and the said respondent corporation is licensed to do and does carry on such business and sales activities for and on behalf of respondents in the States of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee, Alabama, Michigan, Wisconsin, Texas, California, and Idaho.

Respondents, George B. Wells, Ira Mosher, Charles O. Cozzens, John M. Wells, Edward E. Williams, A. Turner Wells, and Albert B. Wells, all of Southbridge, Mass., are severally here made parties respondent in their respective capacities as indicated in the caption hereof, individually and as representative members of American Optical Co., the association.

PAR. 2. Respondents and each of them are now and have been since June 19, 1936, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling optical goods and ophthalmic products, including lenses, frames, mountings, diagnostic instruments, optical machinery, tools, and grinding and polishing materials to various retailers, independent wholesalers, and chain business enterprises engaged in business as lessee-operators of the optical departments of various large department stores. Respondents effect the sale and distribution of these products through some 320 branch offices, each of which functions as a wholesaler. These branch offices are grouped into 9 districts or sales territories, each with a central sales branch where the respondents maintain a stock of supplies on hand from which they supply the other branch sales offices in each district. Respondents employ over 300 salesmen who call regularly upon the retail trade, and during 1936 did a volume of approximately $18,500,000 in total sales. The individual respondents herein named in their respective capacities as officers and chairman of the board and as representative of the association American Optical Co., control and direct the sales policies, pricing, and selling activities engaged in by all of the said other respondents as hereinafter set forth.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses as aforesaid, respondents, and each of them, transports or causes to be transported the said products, when sold, from the places of their respective locations to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the States in which such shipments originated, and there is and has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in said products, between the States wherein these several respondents are located and the various other States of the United States.

Said respondents and each of them sell and distribute the aforesaid products for use, consumption or resale within the United States and the District of Columbia, in the same territories and places and in competition with various other manufacturers, distributors, and wholesalers engaged in the sale of optical goods and ophthalmic products, including lenses, frames, mountings, diagnostic instruments, optical machinery and tools, and grinding and polishing materials.

Respondents’ aforesaid purchaser customers are competitively engaged with each other and with the purchaser customers of respondents’ competitors, in the resale of said products, both at wholesale and retail, within the several sales areas in which the said wholesale and retail customers respectively offer for sale and sell the said products of American Optical Co.

Par. 4. Said respondents and each of them, in the course and conduct of interstate commerce as hereinbefore set forth have, since June 19, 1936, discriminated in price and are now discriminating in the prices at which they and each of them have sold and do sell American Optical Co. products and commodities of like grade and quality, between the different purchasers of such products and commodities, by giving and allowing certain of said purchasers a lower price than given or allowed other purchasers competitively engaged in said line of commerce, and by giving and allowing certain of said purchasers adjustments, rebates, or discounts in the form of cash or commodities not given and allowed to others of respondents' said purchaser customers. Respondents' purchaser customers in whose favor such price discrimination is made are generally the larger dealers who are thus enabled either to undersell their competitors or furnish superior facilities and services to the prospective consumer purchaser, or both, and thereby trade is diverted from the smaller retailer to the more favored and larger dealer in said products.

Par. 5. The effect of such discrimination in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, may be substantially to lessen competition between the respondents and their aforesaid competitors; between the customers of respondents in whose favor such discrimination is made and respondents' other customers; and between the customers of respondents' competitors who do not grant such customers the benefit of such discriminatory prices and the customers of respondents in favor of whom respondents discriminate, or tend to create a monopoly in the aforesaid line of commerce in respondents and respondents' favored customers, and to injure, destroy and prevent competition with the said respondents and with those of respondents' customers who knowingly receive the benefit of such discrimination, and with the customers of each of them.

Such discrimination in price by said respondents, and each of them, between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality in interstate commerce in the manner and form aforesaid are in violation of the provisions of Subsection (a) of Section 2 of the Act described in the preamble hereof.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes” (the Clayton Act), as amended, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 30, 1937, issued its complaint against the above-named respondents and caused such complaint to be served as required by law, charging that said respondents were and had been discriminating in price between different purchasers from them of commodities of like grade and quality in commerce, in violation of the provisions of Section 2 (a) of said Act.

Respondents duly filed their joint answer to said complaint. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents containing a statement of the facts in this proceeding upon which it was agreed that said proceeding might be submitted to the Commission for final determination, the respondents consenting that upon said stipulation an order be issued requiring them to cease and desist from the price discrimination alleged in the complaint. Said stipulation was duly approved and filed herein by order of the Commission.

This proceeding regularly coming on to be heard upon said complaint, answer and stipulation, filing of briefs, and presentation of oral argument having been waived, the Commission, having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that the respondents have been and are violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of said Clayton Act, now makes these its findings as to the facts and states its conclusions drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent American Optical Co., an association, is a voluntary association organized in 1912, and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts as a common-law trust. Respondents George B. Wells, Ira Mosher, Charles O. Cozzens, John M. Wells, Edward E. Williams, A. Turner Wells, and Albert B. Wells are, respectively, president, vice president, and general manager, vice president in charge of sales, vice president in charge of research laboratory, treasurer, secretary, and chairman of the board of trustees of American Optical Co., an association. Respondent American Optical Co., a corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts, having been organized by the other respondents to engage in business in certain States where the respondent association does not do business. All of the capital stock of said respondent corporation is owned or controlled by the respondent association. "American Optical Company" and "respondents," when used hereinafter, shall be deemed to refer to both American Optical Co., the association, and American Optical Co., the corporation, and to the individual respondents only in their capacities as directors, officers, and/or trustees of the respondent association and corporation.

Paragraph 2. Respondents are now and for many years have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling ophthalmic merchandise and optical goods generally, including lenses, frames, and mountings for eyeglasses, cases, ophthalmological equipment, machinery, and specialties. They are the largest manufacturers and sellers of ophthalmic products in the United States. Their only manufacturing competitor of comparable size is Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., of Rochester, N. Y. The annual volume of business of each of these two concerns is considerably larger than that of any other manufacturer of optical goods in the United States.

Distribution and sales of American Optical Co. are effected through about 220 branch stores located throughout the United States, each of which performs the functions of a wholesaler for the adjacent sales territory. Each branch store is operated by a salaried branch manager. More than 80 percent of the company's sales volume of ophthalmic merchandise is in sales to opticians, optometrists, and oculists through the branch stores. The branches are divided territorially into nine zones, each with a main zone office to which the branch managers account and which maintains a complete stock of the company's products from which the branch stores are chiefly supplied.

Respondents also sell ophthalmic merchandise to wholesalers, such sales accounting for between 10 and 15 percent of total volume. Other sales are made direct to consumers such as laboratories, hospitals, and educational institutions.

Par. 3. Respondents' products are manufactured at Southbridge, Mass., and are constantly shipped from that point to the company's zone and branch agencies in the other States of the United States and the District of Columbia for sale through said agencies and to meet the constant demand which exists for such products on the part of respondents' wholesaler and retailer customers. Shipments are also made, when necessary or convenient, directly from the factory to purchasers in other States. Said products are sold for use and resale in the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. Respondents sell and distribute their said products in the same territories and places as and in active competition with various other manufacturers, jobbers, and wholesalers likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of optical and ophthalmic products. Some of respondents' customers are engaged in competition with each other and with customers of respondents' competitors, in the use and resale of such products, at wholesale or retail, within the several localities and sales areas in which such customers are located and do business.

Par. 5. An important function of the so-called optical wholesaler is the maintenance and operation of a prescription shop with the necessary machinery and tools for grinding, polishing, edging, and inserting or mounting lenses. There are many retailers who cannot or do not wish to make the investment in machinery and provide the space necessary to maintain their own prescription shops, and they rely upon the nearby wholesalers to do this work and to maintain an extensive supply of unfinished lenses, frames, and mountings of various types and styles from which individual prescriptions can be filled promptly as ordered. The greater part of the business of the average small independent optical wholesaler is in the filling and delivery of prescription orders for the retailers in his locality. All of respondents' branch offices have well-equipped prescription shops and actively compete for the prescription business in their respective sales territories. Many of the larger retailers maintain their own prescription shops and do most of their own grinding, edging, etc., in order to enable them to give better service.

Par. 6. The lenses, frames, and mountings manufactured by respondents are listed in respondents' catalog and sold to retailers at varying prices, depending on the number of pairs (lenses) or units (frames and mountings) of one description, type, or brand purchased in a single order. For example, as applied to certain gold filled mountings and lenses, the catalog "column" schedules quote prices under the following headings:

- 2 (pairs) of a kind or 5 assorted
- 5 (pairs) of a kind or 10 assorted
- 25 (pairs) assorted
- 50 (pairs) assorted

For certain other items, such as blank and semifinished lenses, zylonite frames, solid gold mountings, etc., fewer columns are listed, in some cases the price reduction for quantity extending only to purchases of five or more assorted units, or one package of lenses. Generally no price concession is made on the basis of single purchases in excess of five units or pairs. These "column prices" are available to all purchasers on the basis above stated, irrespective of the total amount of merchandise of various kinds ordered at one time or the total volume purchased over any given period.

Prices listed for a single pair of lenses or a single frame or mounting (RX prices) are the prices charged for filling prescription orders. The column price lists above described do not apply to sales on prescription, but only to sales of stock merchandise.

Par. 7. Respondents also sell their lenses, frames, mountings, machinery, ophthalmological equipment and other stock merchandise to retailer customers at different prices, under respondents' "big dealer discount" plan. The "Big Dealer Discount Schedule", as printed in respondents' price list, follows:
DISCOUNT SCHEDULE

Applying to All Listed Merchandise

The discounts on stock as shown in the following schedule apply to the large retail accounts and are classified under the Big Dealer Discount Schedule

All Items Are Included in Determining Above Dealer Classifications

Rx and Net items are included in determining above dealer classifications but are not subject to any trade discount.

Machinery and Ophthalmological Equipment items are to be included in determining above dealer classifications; and are subject to the discounts listed above.

Dealers whose purchases total $18,000 per year will receive the same discounts as apply to the $1,500 per month classification, the discount being extended each month when the dealer qualifies, and credit given at the end of the year for the difference in the discount received during the month or months when dealer did not purchase $1,500.

Dealers who purchase $750 per month will be granted similar proportionate credit for total purchases of $9,000 per year.

The lenses, frames, and mountings on which the big-dealer discounts 33½ percent and 25 percent are offered in the above schedule include the types of such merchandise for which the demand is greatest and which make up the bulk of the purchases of respondents’ customers. In computing the big-dealer discounts on lenses, frames, and mountings, purchases falling under the second, third, or fourth catalog column headings shown in paragraph 6 hereof are billed at the second column price (5 of a kind or 10 assorted). Under this schedule the discounts allowed are determined solely by the customer’s total purchases during the discount period, regardless of the size or number of Separate orders filled in making up the total. No discount (except cash discount) is allowed on prescription (Rx) sales and "net" items, but such sales are included in determining total volume for qualification for big-dealer discounts on stock merchandise. Purchases of surfacing, polishing, and edging machinery are likewise so included. Such purchases frequently run into hundreds of dollars, and in some cases are in larger amounts, and a single such purchase may, under the above schedule, affect the discount received by the buyer on lenses and frames purchased during the month or year. A substantial number of respondent's customers have been able to secure the discounts provided for in the big dealer discount schedule, while many other customers engaged in competition with such "big dealers" in the use and sale of respondents' said products have not received the benefit of such discounts.

Par. 8. Respondents maintain a list of approved wholesalers and sell to the wholesalers so listed at discounts which on lenses, frames, mountings, cases, and machinery are in general the same as those extended to $1,500 per month dealers under the big-dealer schedule. The smaller manufacturers of ophthalmic merchandise market their products largely through these and other wholesalers, and also by direct factory-to-retailer selling. The majority of such manufacturers produce only limited lines, some making only lenses, others frames, etc. In general, list prices of the various manufacturers are substantially the same for merchandise of comparable quality, price competition generally being carried on through the granting of discounts rather than by lowering base prices. The usual manufacturer-to-wholesaler discount on lenses, frames, and mounting is 33 1/3 percent, but greater discounts are given by some manufacturers.

Par. 9. Respondents sell some of their products to large retailer purchasers who are proprietors or operators of multiple shops or outlets. In some cases these outlets are in a single city, in some cases in more than one city, and in some cases in more than one State. These outlets are in some cases separate stores and in some cases optical departments in department stores or jewelry stores. In many cases each of the shops or departments operated by these concerns orders merchandise which it requires and has the same delivered from respondents' nearest branch. The business of each of said shops or departments may be in competition with the businesses of other optometrists and opticians in the same locality who purchase from the same branch of respondents, and in some cases in as large or larger quantity. Total purchases by the various outlets or shops of these large retailer purchasers are billed to the central office of the proprietor, subject to big-dealer discounts on the total purchases for all the outlets rather than on the basis of the total purchases of the several units.

OPINION

The products manufactured by the respondent are constantly shipped by them in interstate commerce from their factories at Southbridge, Mass. to their zone and branch agencies, and from zone agencies to local branches, for sale through said agencies to meet the constant demand for said products existing on the part of optical wholesalers and retailers throughout the country. The prices fixed and charged by respondents for their products so shipped and sold are fixed and charged by them in the course of commerce, and such sales are sales in commerce, within the meaning of Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

Pursuant to the "Big-Dealer Discount Schedule" set forth in paragraph 7 of the above findings, respondents have, at all times since June 19, 1936, discriminated in price between different retailer purchasers of their products by offering to sell and selling said products to a substantial number of their larger customers, located in various cities and towns throughout the United States, at the cumulative discounts shown in said schedule while many other customers, engaged in competition with said larger customers, do not receive and cannot purchase in sufficient volume to obtain these discounts. On lenses, frames, and mountings making up the bulk of sales of ophthalmic stock merchandise, large purchasers, including department store and jewelry store chains, are allowed a discount of 33 1/3 percent plus 2 percent for cash, other purchasers receive 25 percent plus 2 percent for cash, while smaller purchasers are allowed only 2 percent cash discount (plus such additional savings as result when purchases are made in lots of 25 or 50 units or pairs). The resulting price differences are substantial, and amount to a very considerable saving per dollar of purchases to the "big dealer" as against the smaller retailer. The maximum discounts allowed under the "big dealer" plan approximate the factory-to-jobber discounts of respondents and other manufacturers, and the smaller retailer cannot, in general, purchase respondent's products or other products of like grade and quality from wholesalers or jobbers on these favorable terms. The lower price paid for respondents' products by their "big dealer" customers has been and is a distinct competitive advantage to such customers.

The effect of such discrimination in price has been to injure, and may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondents' retailer customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination.
Respondents operate as a chain wholesaler, maintaining some 220 branch stores throughout the United States, each of which performs the functions of a wholesaler and engages in active competition with independent wholesalers in the same sales territory. Independent wholesalers must purchase optical goods of first grade and quality from manufacturers at prices generally approximating those available to large retailers under the respondents' "big-dealer" plan. As a result of the discriminatory prices charged by respondents, many independent wholesalers are prevented from selling stock merchandise to a large and profitable class of customers, except at a loss. The smaller manufacturers of optical merchandise market their products largely through the independent wholesalers, and to that extent are likewise affected. Furthermore, the smaller limited line manufacturer is not in a position to offer a similar "big-dealer" plan covering all classes of optical goods, even by direct sales. The tendency of the cumulative "big-dealer" discounts is to induce the retailer whose purchases are little more than enough to qualify therefor to group all his purchases with the respondents' wholesale branch offering the cumulative discount. The independent wholesaler or small manufacturer cannot obtain a part of this business even by offering an equal price, but must offer a sufficiently lower price to compensate the retailer for the loss of discount on the portion of his requirements which he may desire or be compelled to purchase from the respondents.

What has just been stated applies particularly to competition between respondents' branches and independent wholesalers for prescription business. An important function of the optical wholesaler is the maintenance and operation of a prescription shop with machinery and tools for grinding, polishing, edging, and inserting or mounting lenses, and the filling of prescriptions for nearby optometrists and opticians. Most of the smaller optometrists and opticians do not have the machinery or facilities for doing this work nor maintaining the large stock of merchandise necessary to meet the greatly varying needs of individual customers, and they must rely upon the wholesaler for prompt prescription service. Free and open competition in this branch of the wholesale optical business is important to the retailer and to the public. Under respondents' "big-dealer" plan, prescription sales are included in volume of purchases in determining the retailer's qualification for the cumulative discounts, resulting in a discrimination in price between retailers who do, and who do not, give their prescription business to respondents' branches. No discount is allowed on prescription sales, and it does not appear that such sales affect the cost of sale or delivery of stock merchandise to the same customer. Such a plan necessarily induces many retailers to give their prescription business to respondents in order to obtain a lower price on purchases of stock merchandise, and to that extent prevents freedom of competition for such prescription business on the basis of price, quality and efficiency of service.

The effect of the price discrimination practiced by respondents under their "big-dealer discount" plan is and may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondents are engaged and to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondents in both the wholesale and manufacturing fields.

It does not appear from the facts before us that the differentials of the "big-dealer" plan make only due allowance for, or bear any consistent relation to differences, if any, in cost of sale or delivery of stock merchandise resulting from the differing quantities in which sale and delivery is made to different customers under said plan. There is no indication of differing methods of sale or delivery. Since the "big dealer" has no price incentive for ordering lenses, frames and mountings in lots of more than five of a kind or ten assorted, it cannot be inferred that the average individual order for stock merchandise placed by a retailer making purchases of $1,000 or $1,500 in a month is larger than the average order of a $500 per month or smaller purchaser. The $500 purchaser may receive no discount other than for cash, while a competitor purchasing $400 worth of stock merchandise during the same month in similar quantities may be allowed a discount of 25 percent, or even 33 1/3 percent, as a result of throwing in his prescription business or giving an order for machinery or equipment.

As we stated in our opinion in Matter of H. C. Brill Co., Inc. (F. T. C. Docket 3299, opinion dated February 10, 1938, 26 F. T. C. 666):

Purchasers of large annual amounts sometimes buy in larger individual shipments than do buyers whose purchases do not amount to as large a sum. Large buyers, however, also place numerous small orders and the average size of such orders is frequently less than the average size of orders placed by buyers whose aggregate annual purchases are less in volume. Indeed under a discount plan based on aggregate volume purchases for a given period, such as that contained in the aforesaid contract, it may cost the seller more per dollar of sales to serve a customer who places a large number of small orders which are sufficient in the aggregate to earn the discounts than to serve the customer who places a few large orders whose total is not sufficient to obtain the discounts.

A cumulative discount is sound only where savings have been achieved by the seller with respect to individual sales made to a particular buyer over a period of time, which savings were not reflected in the price at which the buyer purchased and which are reserved for the purpose of refunding at the end of a period of time.

Stock merchandise manufactured by respondents is listed in respondents' catalogs and price lists at prices which, for most merchandise, vary according to the number of articles of a particular type and description (or pairs of a single type of lens) which are purchased in one order. For the majority of lenses and the more popular types of frames and mountings, the price range extends to purchases in the following “column” quantities (lenses in pairs): 2 of a kind or 5 assorted; 5 of a kind or 10 assorted; 25 assorted; 50 assorted. While the price for 50 pairs or units is substantially lower than the price for 2 or 5, these prices are available to all customers who purchase in the stated amounts. In general no price concession is made for single orders of more than 50 units or pairs.

We do not find, upon these facts, that the “column” differentials have the effect of substantially lessening or injuring competition, either with respondents or with their customers. A different conclusion might be reached if it should appear that these differentials were extended to large quantities beyond the range of the purchases of the average retailer, thereby resulting in discrimination in favor of certain large dealers—but such is not shown to be the case here. Furthermore, said column differentials may be justified, in part at least, by differences in cost of sale and delivery resulting from the difference in the size of individual orders. Ordinarily large orders are obtained, assembled, packed, billed, and delivered at a lower cost per dollar of sales than small orders.

We conclude that through the use of their “big-dealer” cumulative discount plan and the pricing policies embraced therein respondents have violated and are violating Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the joint answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts signed by counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents in which it is provided that the statement of facts contained therein may be accepted as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the taking of testimony and all intervening procedure having been waived, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondents have violated the provisions of Section 2 (a) of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended, and having made its report stating its findings as to the facts, which report is made a part hereof,

It is ordered, That the respondents, American Optical Co., an association, and American Optical Co., a corporation, and their respective officers, members, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of optical and ophthalmic products in commerce between the States and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist

1. From discriminating in price between different purchasers of such products of like grade and quality, either directly or indirectly, by granting or allowing the cumulative or volume discounts described in paragraph 7 of said findings as to the facts, or by continuing in effect the "big-dealer" discount plan in said paragraph described.

2. From discriminating in price between purchasers of ophthalmic stock merchandise and equipment who also purchase merchandise from respondents on prescriptions for single pairs of glasses, or employ respondents to fill such prescriptions, and other purchasers of such merchandise and equipment who do not purchase from respondents on prescriptions or employ respondents to fill prescriptions, unless such price differences make only due allowance for differences in cost of selling or delivering such stock merchandise and equipment to such purchasers resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such stock merchandise and equipment is sold and delivered.

3. From discriminating in price between different purchasers of such products of like grade and quality by granting or allowing any other cumulative or volume discounts, rebates, or price reductions, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce in which respondents or their customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondents or with any of their customers, except where such discounts, rebates, or price reductions make only due allowance for differences in cost resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such purchasers sold and delivered during the period of time for which such discounts, rebates, or price reductions are granted or allowed.

Nothing contained in paragraphs 2 or 3 hereof shall be construed to prevent said respondents from showing that any such discount, rebate or other price reduction made or offered to be made by them was given in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor or the services or facilities furnished by a competitor, or from granting any discounts, rebates or price reductions permitted by law.

It is further ordered, That said respondents, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied and are complying with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL COMPANY ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, OPINION, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (a) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED

Where (1) a corporation engaged in manufacture, distribution, and sale of a complete line of ophthalmic merchandise and optical goods, including lenses, frames, and mountings for eye glasses, scientific instruments for eye testing, cases, equipment, machinery, and specialties, and which (a) effected distribution and sale of its products through six corporate wholesalers, outstanding voting stock of which is controlled, with power to coordinate and control their sales and pricing policies, and which engaged in their respective territories in selling, through a system of wholesale outlets or branches extending throughout the United States, its said products under pricing policies coordinated and controlled by it and at uniform prices fixed or approved by it, and to which and other wholesalers it sold its products at same prices as those listed as below set forth for $1,500 retailer accounts, and (b) constituted, considered together with its aforesaid selling affiliates, the second largest organization manufacturing and distributing ophthalmic products in the United States; and (2) said six corporate wholesalers, in their respective territories, dealing, principally, in its products, directing their sales efforts primarily to sale of its merchandise, and charging prices and using discount plans which were substantially the same, and quoting and using, in the case of its merchandise, prices published in its catalogs, and making use thereof as basis for computation of various discount allowances; and, by and large, with well-equipped prescription shops and doing substantial amount of prescription business in their respective sales territories, and competing for such business for which many retailers, not themselves equipped, rely upon nearby wholesalers;

In selling, as thus engaged, such manufacturer's said products in competition with numerous other manufacturers of such goods, and in substantial competition with other wholesalers and with wholesale branches of largest manufacturer of such products in the United States, (a) under certain "column" schedules or discounts from list prices which were, in general, common to and made use of by manufacturing trade in question, and under which purchasers, irrespective of total amounts otherwise bought, received, without further concession, discount on basis of purchases in one order and discounts on lenses, frames, and mountings based on such order purchases of 2, 5, 10, 25, or 50 units, as case might be, (b) under so-called "big dealer" discount plan or "volume purchase schedule" by which, on basis of all monthly purchases aggregating $1,500 or $750, as case might be, retailer received off list, among other discounts on types of merchandise for which demand is greatest and which make up bulk of purchases of its customers, i. e., on lenses, frames and mountings purchased by it, 331/3 percent or 25 percent, respectively, and under which they included, in such aggregate for determining discount eligibility as aforesaid, prescription items, surfacing, polishing and edging machinery and all purchases, regardless of particular item's own discount status, and regardless also of size or number of separate orders making up total, and under which, moreover, large part of stock merchandise as thus sold to $1,500 per month "big dealers," and including most lenses, frames, and mountings, was sold at cost without markup for selling, handling and overhead—

Discriminated in price, through use of their "big dealer" cumulative discount plan and cumulative discounts and differentials allowed thereunder, which bore no consistent relation to size of single orders or differences in cost of sale and delivery per dollar of merchandise as between different purchasers, and did not make only due allowances for differences, if any, in cost of sale or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which sale or delivery is made to different purchasers under said plan, in favor of a substantial number of their larger customers who were able to receive volume discounts thus provided, and as against many other customers engaged in competition with such "big dealers" and including small optometrists and opticians who did not receive such discounts and could not purchase in sufficient volume to qualify therefor;

With the result that the effect of such discrimination in price had been and might be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with customers of industry receiving benefit of discrimination aforesaid, and had been and might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which they were respectively engaged, and to injure, destroy or prevent competition with them by other wholesalers and

Held. That through use of their "big dealer" cumulative discount plan and pricing policies embraced therein they violated and were violating Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

Mr. Cyrus B. Austin for the Commission.

Hubbell, Taylor, Goodwin, Nixon & Hargrave, of Rochester, N. Y., for respondents, and Mr. James M. O'Reilly, of Rochester, N. Y., also for Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act, as amended by an Act of Congress, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), commonly known as the Robinson-Patman Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the respondents named in the caption hereof have violated, and are now violating the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of said act as amended, hereby issues its complaint against the said respondents, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and its principal office and place of business is located in the city of Rochester in said State. It is now, and has been since June 19, 1936, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling optical goods and ophthalmic products, including lenses, frames, mountings, diagnostic instruments, optical machinery, tools, and grinding and polishing materials, to various retailers, independent wholesalers, and chain business enterprises engaged in business as lessee-operators of the optical departments of various large department stores. Such sales are by said respondent made both directly and through the other respondents hereinabove named in the caption and hereinafter more particularly designated and described. Respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. owns a controlling share of the stock in each of the said other respondent companies and exercises such control in directing the sales policies, pricing and selling activities engaged in by said other respondents in their respective businesses.

Par. 2. (a) Respondent Colonial Optical Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 62 West Forty-seventh Street, in the city of New York in said State. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. owns and holds approximately 91 percent of the outstanding shares of voting stock issued by Colonial Optical Co., Inc.

(b) Respondent McIntire, Magee & Brown is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at 1700 Walnut Street in the city of Philadelphia, in said State. Approximately 58 percent of the outstanding shares of the voting stock by it issued are owned and held by the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

(c) Respondent Riggs Optical Co. Consolidated is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at 222 West NoBank Drive, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois. Approximately 82 percent of the outstanding shares of voting stock by it issued are owned and held by the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

(d) Respondent Riggs Optical Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at Flood Building, in the city of San Francisco, in the State of California. Approximately 74 percent of the outstanding shares of voting stock by it issued are owned and held by the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

(e) Respondent Southeastern Optical Co. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business at 212 East
Complaint

Franklin Street, in the city of Richmond in said State. Approximately 60 percent of the outstanding shares of voting stock by it issued are owned and held by the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

(f) Respondent The White, Haines Optical Co. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business at 82 North High Street, in the city of Columbus, in said State. Approximately 72 percent of the outstanding shares of voting stock by it issued are owned and held by the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

(g) Each of the respondents in said subsections (a) to (f) inclusive in this paragraph named is now, and since June 19, 1936, has been engaged in the business of selling at wholesale the aforesaid optical goods and ophthalmic products of the respondent Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses as aforesaid, respondents, and each of them, transports or causes to be transported the said products, when sold, from the places of their respective locations to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the States in which such shipments originated, and there is and has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in said products, between the States wherein these several respondents are located and the various other States of the United States.

Said respondents and each of them sell and distribute the aforesaid products for use, consumption, or resale within the United States and the District of Columbia, in the same territories and places and in competition with various other manufacturers, distributors, and wholesalers engaged in the sale of optical goods and ophthalmic products including lenses, frames, mountings, diagnostic instruments, optical machinery and tools, and grinding and polishing materials.

Respondents' aforesaid purchaser customers are competitively engaged in the resale of said products, both at wholesale and retail, to the consumers or users thereof, within the several sales areas in which said purchaser customers respectively offer for sale and sell the said products of Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

Par. 4. Said respondents, and each of them, in the course and conduct of interstate commerce as hereinbefore set forth, have, since June 19, 1936, discriminated in price, and are now discriminating in the price at which they and each of them have sold and do sell Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. products and commodities of like grade and quality, between the different purchasers of such products and commodities, by giving and allowing certain of said purchasers a lower price than given or allowed other purchasers competitively engaged in said line of commerce and by giving and allowing certain of said purchasers adjustments, rebates, or discounts in the form of cash or commodities not given and allowed to other of respondents' said purchaser customers. Respondents' purchaser customers in whose favor such discrimination is made, are generally the larger dealers who are thus enabled either to undersell their competitors or furnish better facilities and services to the prospective consumer purchaser, or both.

PAR. 5. The effect of such discrimination in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, may be substantially to lessen competition between the respondents and their aforesaid competitors; between the customers of respondents in whose favor such discrimination is made and respondents' other customers; and between the customers of respondents' competitors who do not grant such customers the benefit of such discriminatory prices and the customers of respondents in favor of whom respondents discriminate; and said discrimination tends to create a monopoly in the aforesaid line of commerce in respondents and respondents' favored customers and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with the said respondents and with those of respondents' customers who knowingly receive the benefit of such discrimination, and with the customers of each of them.

Such discrimination in price by said respondents, and each of them, between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality in interstate commerce in the manner and form aforesaid are in violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the act described in the preamble hereof.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS; AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 30, 1937, issues its complaint against the above-named respondents and causes such complaint to be served as required by law, charging that said respondents were and had been discriminating in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality in commerce in violation of the provisions of section 2 (a) of said act.

Respondents duly filed their separate answers to said complaint. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents containing a statement of the facts in this proceeding upon which it was agreed that said proceeding might be submitted to the Commission for final determination, the respondents consenting that upon said stipulation an order be issued requiring them to cease and desist from the price discrimination alleged in the complaint. Said stipulation was duly approved and filed herein by order of the Commission.

This proceeding regularly coming on to be heard upon said complaint, answers and stipulations, filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument having been waived by counsel for all parties, the Commission, having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that the respondents have been and are violating the provisions of Section 2 (a) of said Clayton Act, now makes these its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. (hereinafter referred to as "Bausch & Lomb") is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with main offices and factories located at Rochester, N. Y. Said respondent is now and for many years has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling, among other things, a complete line of ophthalmic merchandise and optical goods, including lenses, frames, and mountings for eye glasses, scientific instruments for eye testing, cases, equipment, machinery, and specialties.

Paragraph 2. Respondent Colonial Optical Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office located in New York, N. Y. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, sale, through some 21 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: New York, the northern half of New Jersey, and all of New England. Of 6,777 shares of capital stock of said respondent outstanding, 6,350 shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb.

Paragraph 3. Respondent McIntire, Magee & Brown Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located in Philadelphia, Pa. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, through some 9 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: the southern half of New Jersey, the eastern half of Pennsylvania, Maryland (except two western counties), Delaware, the District of Columbia, and the northern quarter of Virginia.
Findings

Of 3,695 shares outstanding capital stock of said respondent, 2,139 shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb.

Par. 4. Respondent Southeastern Optical Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office located in Richmond, Va. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, through some 21 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: Virginia (except the northern quarter), North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, and northeastern Arkansas. Said respondent has voting stock outstanding consisting of 2,014 shares of class A stock, all of which is owned by Bausch & Lomb, and 2,663 shares of common stock, of which 1,559 shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb.

Par. 5. Respondent The White-Haines Optical Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office located in Columbus, Ohio. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, through some 24 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: The Western half of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland (two western counties), Ohio, Kentucky (except southwestern corner), Indiana (except three northwestern counties), central Illinois, and the southern peninsula of Michigan. Said respondent has voting stock outstanding as follows: 5,725 shares, second preferred, of which 4,280 shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb, and 14,376 shares of common stock of which 7,650 are owned by Bausch & Lomb.

Par. 6. Respondent Riggs Optical Co., Consolidated is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office located in Chicago, Ill. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, through some 56 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: Illinois (except the central portion), Indiana (three northwestern counties), the southwest corner of Kentucky, the northern peninsula of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, the eastern quarter of Montana, the eastern two-thirds of Wyoming, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, the southeastern corner of Arizona, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas (except the northeastern portion), and Louisiana. The outstanding voting stock of said respondent consists of 8,070 common shares, of which 6,555½ shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb.
Findings

PAR. 7. Respondent Riggs Optical Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office located in San Francisco, Calif. Said respondent is engaged in the business of distributing and selling optical and ophthalmic products at wholesale, through some 33 branches located in the principal cities of and serving the following territory: Montana (except eastern quarter), the western third of Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Utah, and Arizona (except southeastern corner). Of 9,798½ shares outstanding capital stock of said respondent, 7,996½ shares are owned by Bausch & Lomb.

PAR. 8. Distribution and sale of the Bausch & Lomb products herein referred to is effected chiefly through the said six wholesaler respondents. Bausch & Lomb sells most of its ophthalmic merchandise, equipment, and machinery to said wholesaler respondents, and also sells such products to other wholesalers. No sales are made direct to retailers. The lenses, frames, mountings, and other ophthalmic products manufactured by Bausch & Lomb, are listed, described, and priced in its catalogs, which are distributed to and used by the wholesaler respondents as a basis for selling to the trade. Bausch & Lomb sells to the six wholesaler respondents and to other wholesalers at the same prices for goods of the same grade and description, regardless of quantity purchased, the wholesaler or jobbers’ prices being in general the same as those listed for “$1,500 Accounts” in the schedule set forth in paragraph 14 hereof. Bausch & Lomb, through its ownership of a majority of the outstanding voting stock of each of said wholesaler respondents, has power to coordinate and control the sales and pricing policies of said wholesaler respondents.

PAR. 9. Each of said six wholesaler respondents restricts its selling activities to its own territory, as above described, and said respondents do not engage in competition with each other. Said respondents deal principally in the products of Bausch & Lomb, although they also deal in the products of other manufacturers; but their sales efforts are directed primarily to the sale of Bausch & Lomb merchandise. The prices charged by them, respectively, and their respective discount plans are substantially the same, and as to Bausch & Lomb merchandise all of them quote the prices published in the Bausch & Lomb catalogs and use such prices as a basis for computing the various discount allowances hereinafter described.

PAR. 10. Respondent Bausch & Lomb’s said products are manufactured at Rochester, N. Y., and are constantly shipped from that point to its wholesaler customers in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia for use and resale by and through said customers to meet the constant demand which exists for said products on the part of opticians, optometrists, and oculists using and selling such products at retail. Each of said wholesaler respondents is constantly engaged in shipping and distributing such products from its main office or warehouse to its branches in the same and other States in which it does business for resale through said branches to supply the demand of its retail customers. Shipments are also made, when necessary or convenient, directly from the main office to purchasers in the same and other States. Frequently orders for machinery, equipment, or special merchandise are filled by direct shipment from Bausch & Lomb to the retailer purchaser, at the request of the wholesaler. There is a constant stream of commerce in such products running from Bausch & Lomb to said wholesaler respondents and their branches and through them to the retailer purchasers of such products.

Par. 11. Respondent Bausch & Lomb sells and distributes its said products throughout the United States in competition with numerous other manufacturers of optical and ophthalmic products. Said wholesaler respondents, respectively, are engaged in substantial competition with other wholesalers and with American Optical Co. branches in the sale and distribution of such products in most of the localities and sales areas in which said respondents do business. Many of the customers of said wholesaler respondents are engaged in competition with each other and with customers of competitors of said respondents, in the use and resale of such products in the several localities where such customers are located.

Par. 12. An important function of the optical wholesaler is the maintenance and operation of a prescription shop with the necessary machinery and tools for grinding, polishing, edging, and inserting or mounting lenses. There are many retailers who cannot or do not wish to make the investment in machinery and provide the space necessary to maintain their own prescription shops, and they rely upon the nearby wholesalers to do this work and to maintain an extensive supply of unfinished lenses, frames and mountings of various types and styles from which individual prescriptions can be filled promptly as ordered. The greater part of the business of the average small optical wholesaler is in the filling and delivery of prescription orders for the retailers in his locality. Substantially all of the branches of the six wholesaler respondents have well equipped prescription shops and, in addition to selling stock merchandise, compete for and do a substantial amount of the prescription business
In their respective sales territories. Many of the larger retailers maintain their own prescription shops and do most of their own grinding, edging, etc. in order to enable them to give better service.

Par. 13. The lenses, frames, and mountings manufactured by Bausch & Lomb are listed and sold by said wholesaler respondents to retailers at varying prices, depending on the number of pairs (lenses) or units (frames and mountings) of one description, type or brand purchased in a single order. For example, as applied to certain gold filled mountings and lenses, the catalog "column" schedules quote prices under the following headings:

- 2 (pairs) of a kind or 5 assorted
- 5 (pairs) of a kind or 10 assorted
- 25 (pairs) assorted
- 50 (pairs) assorted

For certain other items, such as blank and semifinished lenses, zylonite frames, solid gold mountings, etc., fewer columns are listed, in some cases the price reduction for quantity extending only to purchases on 5 or more assorted units, or 1 package of lenses. No price concession is made on the basis of single purchases in excess of 50 units or pairs. These "column prices" are available to all purchasers on the basis above stated, irrespective of the total amount of merchandise of various kinds ordered at one time or the total volume purchased during any given period. Prices listed for a single pair of lenses or a single frame or mounting are also the prices charged in filling prescription orders. The column price lists above described do not apply to sales on prescription, but only to sales of stock merchandise.

Par. 14. The wholesaler respondents also sell their lenses, frames mountings, machinery, equipment, and other stock merchandise to retailer customers at different prices, under a "big dealer" discount plan. This plan is illustrated by the following "Volume Purchase Schedule" set forth in a price bulletin issued October 1, 1936, by respondent the White-Haines Optical Co., which is still in effect. The same or substantially the same "big dealer" discount plan is used by the other wholesaler respondents.

VOLUME PURCHASE SCHEDULE

When a customer's total monthly purchases reach $750, or more, or $1,500, or more, in any given month, the following discounts are extended, when the account is paid on the 10th of the month following purchases.

The 2-percent discount shown above is a cash discount. This same 2-percent cash discount is also allowed in addition to the trade discounts shown. Cash discounts are not allowed according to custom on the west coast.

The lenses, mountings, and frames subject to the big dealer discounts of 25 and 33\(\frac{1}{2}\) percent under the above schedule include the types of such merchandise for which the demand is greatest and which make up the bulk of the purchases of the optical retailer. Under this schedule, the discounts allowed are determined solely by the customer’s total purchases during the discount period, regardless of the size or number of separate orders filled in making up the total. No discount (other than 2 percent for cash) is allowed on prescription (Rx) sales and "net" items, but such sales are included in determining total volume for qualification for big dealer discounts on stock merchandise. Purchases of surfacing, polishing, and edging machinery are likewise so included. Such purchases frequently run into hundreds of dollars and in some cases are in larger amounts and a single such purchase may under the above schedule affect the discount received by the buyer on lenses and frames purchased during the month or year. A substantial number of respondents' customers have been able to secure the volume discounts provided for in the above discount schedule, while many other customers engaged in competition with such "big dealers" in the use and sale of respondents' said products have not received the benefit of such discounts.

Par. 15. Respondent Bausch & Lomb considered together with its selling affiliates (the wholesaler respondents herein) is the second largest organization manufacturing and distributing ophthalmic products in the United States, the largest being American Optical Co. of Southbridge, Mass. Many other manufacturers of such products (some of whom also do substantial volumes of business) market their products largely through wholesalers, other than the wholesaler respondents herein. Some engaged to a large extent in direct factory-to-retailer selling. Some of these manufacturers produce only limited lines, some making only lenses, others frames, etc. List prices of the various manufacturers are substantially the same for competitive merchandise, price competition generally being carried on through the granting of discounts rather than by lowering of base prices. The usual manufacturer-to-wholesaler discount on lenses, frames, and mountings is 33 1/3 percent, but greater discounts are given by some manufacturers.

Respondent Bausch & Lomb is engaged in the sale and shipment of ophthalmic products and other optical merchandise in interstate commerce from its factories in Rochester, N. Y., to its customers in other States. The six wholesaler respondents are likewise engaged in interstate commerce as to a substantial portion of their business. Said wholesalers deal principally in Bausch & Lomb merchandise, their pricing policies are coordinated and controlled by Bausch & Lomb, and such merchandise is sold by each of them at uniform prices fixed or approved by Bausch & Lomb. The prices so fixed and charged for Bausch & Lomb products are fixed and charged by respondents in the course of commerce, and such sales are sales in commerce within the meaning of Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

The wholesaler respondents provide a system of wholesale outlets for Bausch & Lomb products extending throughout the United States. All of said wholesalers sell Bausch & Lomb merchandise to different purchasers at varying prices pursuant to the "big dealer" discount plan described in paragraph 14 of the above findings. The discounts allowed under said plan are determined on the basis of a customer's volume of purchases over a month or year and bear no consistent relation to the size of single orders or differences in cost of sale and delivery per dollar of merchandise as between different purchasers. By allowing such cumulative discounts respondents have discriminated in price in favor of a substantial number of their larger customers. Small optometrists and opticians do not receive these discounts and cannot purchase in sufficient volume to qualify for them.

The "big dealer" discount plan employed by these respondents is substantially the same as the "big dealer" plan considered by us in Matter of American Optical Company, et al. (F. T. C. Docket No. 3232), decided this day. The two plans appear to be coextensive in operation and effect. For the reasons stated in our opinion in that case (insofar as applicable to the facts here), we find that the effect of the discrimination in price above described has been to injure, and may be to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondents' customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination.

We find, further, that the effect of such price discrimination by respondents is and may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which respondents, respectively, are engaged, and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondents by other wholesalers and, with respondent Bausch & Lomb, by limited line manufacturers of optical goods. As to this branch of the case, the same considerations apply which we outlined in our opinion in Matter of American Optical Company, supra. It is also to be noted here that a large part of the stock merchandise sold by the respondent wholesalers to $1,500-per-month "big dealers," including most lenses, frames, and mountings, is sold at cost without any mark-up for selling, handling, and overhead.

It does not appear from the facts before us that the differentials of the "big dealer" plan make only due allowances for differences, if any, in cost of sale or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which sale and delivery is made to different purchasers under said plan.

We conclude that through the use of their "big dealer" cumulative discount plan and the pricing policies embraced therein respondents have violated and are violating Section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the separate answers of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts signed by counsel for the Commission and counsel for all of the respondents in which it is provided that the statement of facts contained therein may be accepted as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the taking of testimony and all intervening procedure having been waived, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondents have violated the provisions of Section 2 (a) of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended, and having made its report stating its findings as to the facts, which report is made a part hereof.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., Colonial Optical Co., Inc., McIntire, Magee & Brown Co., Riggs Optical Co., Consolidated, Riggs Optical Co., Inc., Southeastern Optical Co., and The White-Haines Optical Co., and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of optical and ophthalmic products in commerce between the States and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From discriminating in price between different purchasers of such products of like grade and quality, either directly or indirectly, by granting or allowing the cumulative or volume discounts described in paragraph 14 of said Findings as to the Facts, or by continuing in effect the "big dealer" discount plan in said paragraph described.

2. From discriminating in price between purchasers of ophthalmic stock merchandise and equipment who also purchase merchandise from respondents on prescriptions for single pairs of glasses, or employ respondents to fill such prescriptions, and other purchasers of such merchandise and equipment who do not purchase from respondents on prescriptions or employ respondents to fill prescriptions, unless such price difference make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacturing, selling, or delivering such stock merchandise and equipment to such purchasers resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such stock merchandise and equipment is sold and delivered.

3. From discriminating in price between different purchasers of such products of like grade and quality by granting or allowing any other cumulative or volume discounts, rebates or price reductions, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce in which respondents or their customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondents or with any of their customers except where such discounts, rebates or price reductions make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such purchasers sold and delivered during the period of time for which such discounts, rebates, or price reductions are granted or allowed.

Nothing contained in paragraphs 2 or 3 hereof shall be construed to prevent said respondents from showing that any such discount, rebate or other price reduction made or offered to be made by them was given in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor or the services or facilities furnished by a competitor, or from granting any discounts, rebates, or price reductions permitted by law.

It is further ordered, That each of said respondents, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied and is complying with this order.
IDEAL GIFT CO.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

S. C. ROSS DOING BUSINESS AS IDEAL GIFT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in offer, sale, and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including rotary clocks, fountain pen sets, and fountain pen and pencil combinations, to purchasers in the various States, in soliciting sale of and selling and distributing said products—

Furnished various types of merchandising plans which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for distribution thereof to consumers wholly by lot or chance, and consisted of certain literature and circular letters together with paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements depicting his aforesaid merchandise, for use in offer and sale thereof by operators of said cards under scheme in accordance with which persons paid for chance secured varying amount in accordance with number revealed by particular disk selected and punched, and person purchasing chance received article of merchandise being thus disposed of in accordance with his selection of, or failure to select, feminine name corresponding with that concealed under card's master seal, and other article in accordance with success or failure in securing from cards certain number, and others secured nothing other than privilege of making selection for money paid, and thereby conducted lotteries in sale and distribution of his said products, and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale thereof, contrary to the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many engaged in sale and distribution in similar commerce of like and similar articles of merchandise who do not sell the same through use of lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers of his said products were attracted by games of chance involved in his said sales method and thereby induced to purchase his merchandise in preference to same or similar goods of competitors who did not and do not use same or equivalent method, and thereby substantial volume thereof was bought by public and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that S. C. Ross, individually and trading as the Ideal Gift Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of the Ideal Gift Co., with his principal office and place of business located in Room 825, Garrick Building, 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including among others, rotary clocks, fountain pen sets, and fountain pen and pencil combinations, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise as he is selling or distributing between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and a distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards bear a number of girl's names, concealed under each name is a number. Also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 pay 29 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push cards bear various legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated.
and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed, and the person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise described without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting purchases of chances, as above described, also receives an article of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names until the selection has been made and the name removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customers pay for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnished said devices use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make or sell merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid method, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 16, 1937, issued, and on August 18, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, S. C. Ross, individually and trading as Ideal Gift Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent S. C. Ross is an individual trading under the name and style of Ideal Gift Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 64 West Randolph Street, city of Chicago, State of Illinois.
IDEAL GIFT CO.

Findings

Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing various articles of merchandise, including, among others, rotary clocks, fountain pen sets, and fountain pen and pencil combinations to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made.

Respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and with corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In soliciting the sale of and selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent furnishes various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the consumers wholly by lot or chance.

The methods used by respondent to sell his merchandise are as follows:

Respondent distributes to the public certain literature and circular letters together with paper push cards. Along with the foregoing, respondent also encloses order blanks and advertisements which contain illustrations or pictures of his merchandise. The circulars enclosed by respondent set forth respondent's plan of selling the merchandise and of allocating it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards.

In said circulars, respondent refers to the enclosed push card as a "sales card."

One of respondent's circulars contains the following:

THE PLAN

The Salescard, you will notice, has an illustration of this recently invented clock. The person selecting the name corresponding with the name under the large seal will receive one of these new Venus Rotary Clocks. The person selecting number 33 receives a beautiful Fountain Pen Desk Set, useful for home and office.

You Also Will Receive One of These Clocks Absolutely Free for Disposing of This Salescard.

The numbers on the Salescard are extremely low priced. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 pay what they draw and those selecting numbers over 29 pay only 29¢—No More.

Upon completion of this card, fill in and mail us the enclosed order blank and we will send you Two of these new Venus Rotary Clocks in your choice of colors, and also the beautiful Fountain Pen Desk Set.
Findings 28 F. T. C.

Each of the aforesaid push cards or "sales cards" bears a number of feminine names and on the reverse side of each card is a number of blank spaces opposite an alphabetical list of feminine names for writing in the names of customers who purchase chances on the card.

Each card has a corresponding number of partially perforated disks, marked "Push." Above each disk is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is punched or separated from the card. Each push card has a master disk, concealed within which is one of the feminine names.

When all the disks have been selected and the master disk removed, the person selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master disk receives the article of merchandise specified without further charge. In this manner, respondent's merchandise is distributed to the public. Among the items which respondent distributes by means of push cards are the following: Venus rotary clocks, fountain pen desk sets, and fountain pen and pencil combinations.

Customers purchasing chances on the push cards pay in cents the amount of money indicated by the number revealed when the disk is punched or pushed by them, and customers selecting numbers higher than 29 pay only 29 cents. On some of the cards which respondent distributes, additional merchandise is offered by respondent to customers selecting certain numbers. On one of such cards, the customer pushing the number 33 receives a fountain pen desk set. This prize is offered in addition to the principal prize which is the Venus rotary clock. The person winning the Venus rotary clock on said card must select the feminine name which is concealed under the master disk.

Customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master disk receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay, except the customer selecting the number which entitles him to the fountain pen desk set.

In this manner, the public is induced and persuaded to purchase chances from said push card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for the price of 29 cents or less.

Respondent's merchandise is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which a customer pays for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Sales by respondent of said merchandise have averaged approximately $3,200 annually.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the respondent, in selling and distributing his merchandise in connection with the above-described push cards, conducted lotteries and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise.

The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove described, involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise, and that the use of said lottery method in the distribution of his merchandise is a practice of the sort which long has been deemed contrary to the common law and criminal statutes, and is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. There are, among the competitors of respondent, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the business of selling and distributing in similar commerce, like and similar articles of merchandise, who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of respondent's merchandise are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method and are thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Because of the said preference, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief of counsel for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested) and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent, S. C. Ross, individually and trading as Ideal Gift Co., or trading under any other name, his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of rotary clocks, fountain pen sets and fountain pen and pencil combinations, or any other merchandise, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell such or any other merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents and to distributors or to members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such or any other merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of such or any other merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, he shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.

Irving Schwartz Doing Business as Lloyd's Distributing Company

Complaint, Findings, and Order in Regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including electric shavers, radios, and fountain pens, to purchasers in other States; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said products to customers and prospective customers and salesmen solicited through advertisements in periodicals—

Furnished such customers, prospective customers, and salesmen with a pull card for use in distribution of his said products to purchasing public by means of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise and under sales plan in accordance with which purchasers of chances paid therefor varying amounts or nothing in accordance with particular numbers secured from card, and obtained article of merchandise in accordance with success or failure in selecting girl's name corresponding with that under master seal, and operators of cards were compensated by receipt of articles being thus disposed of, and thereby conducted lotteries and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise, contrary to long-established public policy of the United States Government and the common law and criminal statutes, and in competition with those engaged in sale and distribution in interstate commerce of like or similar articles of merchandise who do not sell the same through lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers of said products were attracted by game of chance involved in his said sales method and were thereby induced to purchase his products in preference to similar goods of competitors who did not and do not use equivalent methods, and substantial volume of his merchandise was bought by public, and trade was thereby unfairly diverted to him from his competitors aforesaid:

Held, that such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Irving
Schwartz, individually, and trading as Lloyd’s Distributing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent is an individual, doing business in his own name and under the name and style of Lloyd’s Distributing Co., and formerly trading under the name and style of Packard Distributing Co. Respondent has his principal office and place of business located at 521 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise including, among others, electric shavers, radios, and fountain pens, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof in New York and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing said merchandise, has furnished his customers and prospective customers with a device commonly called a “pull card,” the use of which in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent involves the distribution of said merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. The method or sales plan suggested by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

The said pull card has a number of indicated squares, and in each square is a partially perforated tab marked “pull.” Concealed under each tab is a number; within each of the said squares appears a girl’s name. The said pull card also has a master tab or seal, and concealed within such master tab or seal is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Purchasers select one of the squares and remove the tab, disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers 1 and 12 to 35 pay in cents the amount of such number. Persons selecting numbers over 35 pay 35 cents. Persons selecting numbers 2 to 11, inclusive receive the same free of charge. The pull card bears a legend or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said pull card is operated, and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. When all of the squares have been selected and the master seal removed, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise specified without further charge. Persons selecting numbers 20, 30, and 40 each receive a specified article of merchandise without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting sales by means of said card receives his choice of certain specified articles of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the tabs are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting a particular name or whether the selection will be free of charge until the selection has been made and the tab removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the squares have been selected and the tabs removed. Thus, customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay, except customers selecting numbers 20, 30, and 40, who each receive a specified article of merchandise. The person selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal and the persons selecting numbers 20, 30, and 40 receive an article of merchandise free of charge or for a price not exceeding 35 cents. The value of the various articles varies, but the retail value of each article is greater than 35 cents. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pulls from said card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for a price of 35 cents or less, or free of charge. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance or whether the same is free of charge is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 3, 1937, issued, and on December 6, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Irving Schwartz, individually, and trading as Lloyd's Distributing Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. After the issuance of the said complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel and H. C. Lank, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, respondent not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Irving Schwartz, is an individual doing business in his own name and under the name and style of Lloyd's Distributing Co. Prior to the time respondent began using the trade name "Lloyd's Distributing Company" respondent conducted his business under the name and style of Packard Distributing Co.

Respondent's principal office and place of business is located at 521 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, N. Y.

Respondent is now and has been since about the month of April 1937 engaged in the business of selling and distributing various articles of merchandise, including, among others, electric shavers, radios, and fountain pens, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made.

Respondent maintains a course of trade and commerce in said merchandise sold and distributed by him between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent has furnished his customers and prospective customers with a device commonly called a pull card, the use of which involves the distribution of said merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. In order to procure orders for his merchandise, respondent distributed to customers and prospective customers approximately 70,000 pull cards during the years 1937 and 1938.

Respondent also solicited the services of salesmen to sell his products by inserting advertisements in magazines, which advertisements read in part as follows:

The Best and Fastest Moving Deal in the Nation.

Greatest Sales Board Item—Sales Board Operators, Agents, Distributors—Clean Up With $15 Nationally Advertised Packard Lektro-Shaver.

Respondent enclosed with each pull card a circular letter in which prospective customers were urged to distribute respondent’s merchandise by means of the pull card. One of said letters contained the following paragraphs:

Either of these gifts can be obtained with very little effort on your part. You merely show the Packard Lektro-Shaver and DeWald Radio illustrations to your friends, neighbors, co-workers in your office, shop, etc.—explain to them how they may obtain one of these marvelous and useful articles for the small sum of 1¢ up to 35¢.

Upon completion of the sales card you then fill out the inclosed order blank.

Upon receipt of your order we will make shipment of the two (2) Packard Lektro-Shavers or the two (2) 5-tube DeWald radios or one (1) of each article, together with the three (3) beautiful fountain pen desk sets, all charges prepaid.

The method or sales plan used, and now used, by respondent and which respondent set forth for the guidance of his customers in the circular letters distributed by him, and in other circulars which respondent distributed with the said pull cards, is, and was, as follows:

The pull card distributed by respondent has printed thereon a number of girls’ names and immediately under each name is a partially perforated disk which conceals a number. Near the upper right-hand corner of the card is a larger disk in the form of a seal which conceals a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Purchasers select one of the squares and remove the tab disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers 1 and 12 to 35 pay in cents the amount of each number. Persons selecting numbers over 35, pay 35 cents. Persons selecting numbers 2 to 11, inclusive, receive the same free of charge. Each pull card bears a legend informing the purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said pull card is operated, and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed.

When all the squares have been selected and the master seal removed, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise specified without further charge.
Persons selecting numbers 20, 30, and 40, each receive a specified article of merchandise without further charge.

The numbers under the tabs are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and said purchasers do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting a particular name or whether the selection will be free of charge until the selection has been made and the tab removed.

The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the squares have been selected and the tabs removed. Customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay, except customers selecting Numbers 20, 30, and 40, who each receive a specified article of merchandise.

The persons selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal and the persons selecting Numbers 20, 30, and 40 receive an article of merchandise free of charge or for a price not exceeding 35 cents.

In this manner the public is induced and persuaded into purchasing pulls from said card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for a price of 35 cents or less, or free of charge.

Respondent’s merchandise is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance or whether the same is free of charge is determined wholly by lot or chance. By use of the method above described, the respondent sold about 4,000 of the shavers and about 300 radios in the year 1937. During the first 2 months of the year 1938 respondent sold 200 shavers and approximately 25 radios.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the above-described pull card, conducted lotteries and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise.

The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent’s merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove described, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent’s merchandise, and that the use of said method in the distribution of merchandise is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in interstate commerce, like and similar articles of merchandise who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of said merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Because of the said preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinabove found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (respondent having filed no answer), testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed by counsel for the Commission (counsel for respondent having filed no brief and not having requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Irving Schwartz, individually, and trading as Lloyd's Distributing Co., his agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric shavers, radios, and fountain pens, or any other merchandise, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent he shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
IN THE MATTER OF

BOYD HOUSER, TRADING AS BOYD HOUSER CANDY COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which were composed of (a) number of small bars of candy, number of quarter-pound bars, and number of half-pound bars, together with push card, for sale under a plan, and in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received, for 5 cents paid, 5-cent candy bar and right to make push and, dependent on success or failure in securing thereby one of certain numbers, privilege of exchanging said bar for one of the quarter- or half-pound bars, as case might be, and also, in case of person pushing last number in each of four sections into which card was divided, half-pound bar; and of (b) other assortments and cards varying only in size and detail—

Sold, to wholesale and retail jobbers, for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plans, such assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said candy, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who sell and ship such product into States other than their respective points of location and are unwilling to sell their products by methods used by said individual and above described, or any other method involving game of chance or lottery, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said sales plan or method of distribution of his candy and by element of chance involved, and were thereby induced to buy and sell such products in preference to those offered and sold by competitors who do not use same or similar method of distribution, and trade was unfairly diverted from such competitors to him;

Held, That such practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Boyd Houser, individually and trading as Boyd Houser Candy Co. has violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest
BOYD HOUSER CANDY CO.

hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Boyd Houser is an individual doing business under the trade name of Boyd Houser Candy Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 307 Washington Avenue North, Minneapolis, Minn. He is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused said candy when sold to be transported from his principal place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now and for some time last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. Respondent in the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of small bars of candy, a number of one-fourth-pound bars of candy and a number of one-half-pound bars of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. Said bars of candy are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said push card in the following manner. The said push card has 100 partially perforated disks marked "Push" divided into four sections. Sales are 5 cents each and each purchaser is entitled to push one disk from said card. Concealed within each disk is a number. The board bears statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that each purchaser receives a 5-cent bar of candy; that persons pushing certain specified numbers can exchange said 5-cent bar of candy without additional cost for a one-fourth-pound bar of candy; and that persons pushing certain other specified numbers or the last number in each section can exchange said 5-cent bar of candy without additional cost for a one-half-pound bar of candy. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk selected pushed or separated from said card. The one-fourth and one-half-pound bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public.
wholly by lot or chance. Respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Said push cards involve the same lot or chance feature as the one hereinabove described but vary in size and detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said assortments of candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of his candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger bars of candy. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their product by the method above described or by any other method involving a game of chance or lottery and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said sales plan or method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above alleged and are thereby induced to purchase said assortment of candy from respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method. The use of said method by respondent has a capacity and tendency because of said game of chance to divert to respondent trade and custom from his competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method, to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method because the same is against public policy and unlawful, to lessen competition in the candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent or similar method, and to deprive the purchasing public of free competition. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or an equivalent or similar method.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 22d day of July, A. D., 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Boyd Houser, trading as Boyd Houser Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, respondent filed his answer thereto, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving hearing and all intervening procedure.

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Boyd Houser, is an individual doing business under the trade name Boyd Houser Candy Co., and having his principal place of business at 307 Washington Avenue, North, Minneapolis, Minn. Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers. Respondent causes and has caused said candy when sold to be transported from his principal place of business to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. Respondent in the course and conduct of his said business sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy accompanied by "push cards," the said candy being so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. The different assortments of candy and "push cards" vary only in size and detail. One of respondent's assortments of candy consists of a number of small bars of candy, a number of one-fourth pound bars of candy, and a number of one-half pound bars of candy. This assortment is distributed to the purchasing public by means of a "push card," which has 100 partially perforated disks marked "Push" divided into 4 sections. Within each disk is a number effectively concealed until the disk is punched or separated from the card. In accordance with the statements appearing upon the "push card" the purchaser upon the payment of 5 cents receives a 5-cent bar of candy and is entitled to push one of the disks from said card; and if a certain specified number is contained within the disk the purchaser can, without additional cost, exchange the 5-cent bar for a one-fourth pound bar of candy. If one of certain other specified numbers is contained within the disk the purchaser can, without additional cost, exchange the 5-cent bar for a one-half pound bar of candy; and the person pushing the last number in each section can, without additional charge, exchange the 5-cent bar for a one-half pound bar of candy.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said assortment of candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan.

Par. 4. Respondent, by means of his hereinbefore described sales plan, places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said candy, and the said method of sale and distribution of his candy is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 5. Many persons are attracted by respondent's sales plan or method of distribution of his candy by the element of chance involved herein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to that offered for sale and sold by respondent's competitors who do not use the same or similar method of distribution.

Par. 6. Many of respondent's competitors who sell and ship candy into States other than their respective points of location are unwilling to sell their products by the methods used by the respondent and here-before described or by any other method involving a game of chance or lottery, and such competitors refrain from using said method, and as a result trade is unfairly diverted from such competitors to the respondent.

CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondent as set forth in the aforesaid findings of facts are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce in

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all the intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Boyd Houser, individually and trading as Boyd Houser Candy Co. or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution to the public of such candy contained in said assortments.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy, or other merchandise, together with a push or pull card, punch-board or other lottery device for use or which may be used in the sale or distribution of such candy or other merchandise to the public at retail.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers a push or pull card, punchboard, or other lottery device, either with assortments of candy or separately, which push or pull card, punchboard or other lottery device is to be used or may be used in distributing or selling such candy or other merchandise to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

HARRY J. SNYDERMAN TRADING AS ACE PREMIUM COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of electric razors, toys, cigarettes, and cigarette cases and lighters, leather goods, blankets, and a variety of other articles of merchandise, in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and in selling, as thus engaged, certain assortments of his said merchandise, so packed and assembled as to involve use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and which were composed of (a) electric razor and number of packages of cigarettes, together with 20-section punchboard, for sale under a plan, and in accordance with board's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser of punch received, for 5 cents paid, said razor, in accordance with success or failure in punching number concealed under board's master seal, and purchaser of last punch in each section received 20 cigarettes, and purchaser who did not qualify as aforesaid received nothing for his money, and of (b) other assortments of his said products, together with punchboards and push cards for use in sale and distribution thereof through means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme similar to one hereinabove described, and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold to dealers, for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, such assortments and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with such sales plan, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much lower than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who sell and distribute merchandise and are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of his goods, and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and of unfairly diverting trade to him from his competitors who do not, as aforesaid, use such or equivalent methods; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Harry J. Snyderman, individually and trading as Ace Premium Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Harry J. Snyderman is an individual doing business under the name of Ace Premium Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 423 S. Fifth St., Minneapolis, Minn. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, toys, cigarettes, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, pipes, leather goods, fitted cases, blankets, lamps, cocktail shakers, telescopes, opera glasses, knives, pen and pencil sets, tie sets, watches, clocks, cameras, flashlights, compacts, footballs, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Minnesota to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location.

There is now and for some time last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of respondent’s assortments was and is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

This assortment consists of an electric razor and a number of packages of cigarettes together with a device commonly called a punch-
board. The punchboard is divided into 20 sections. Sales are 5 cents and each purchaser is entitled to one punch from said board. When a punch is made from said board a number is disclosed. The board also contains a master seal under which is concealed a number corresponding to one of the numbers on said board. The board bears statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the number under the master seal entitles the purchaser thereof to said electric razor and that the purchaser of the last punch in each section receives 20 cigarettes. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The number under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the said numbers have been punched from the board. Purchasers who do not qualify by securing the number corresponding to the number under the master seal or by securing the last punch in one of said sections receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from said board. The said razor is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of his products and furnishes various punchboards and push cards for use in the sale and distribution of such products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but such punchboards and push cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said products directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 12th day of September 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Harry J. Snyderman, individually and trading as Ace Premium Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 18th day of October 1938, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent Harry J. Snyderman is an individual doing business under the name of Ace Premium Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 423 S. Fifth Street, Minneapolis, Minn. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, toys, cigarettes, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, pipes, leather goods, fitted cases, blankets, lamps, cocktail shakers, telescopes, opera glasses, knives, pen and pencil sets, tie sets, watches, clocks, cameras, flashlights, compacts, footballs, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Minnesota to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of Minnesota, and in the District of Columbia.

There is now and for some time last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of respondent's assortments was and is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

This assortment consists of an electric razor and a number of packages of cigarettes together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The punchboard is divided into 20 sections. Sales are 5 cents and each purchaser is entitled to one punch from said board. When a punch is made from said board a number is disclosed. The board also contains a master seal under which is concealed a number corresponding to one of the numbers on said board. The board bears statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the number under the master seal entitles the purchaser thereof to said electric razor and that the purchaser of the last punch in each section receives 20 cigarettes. The numbers on said board are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The number under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the said numbers have been punched from the board. Purchasers who do not qualify by securing the number corresponding to the number under the master seal or by securing the last punch in one of said sections receive nothing for their money. The said razor is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of his products and furnishes various punchboards and push cards for use in the sale and distribution of such products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but such punchboards and push cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said products directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in said commerce to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Harry J. Snyderman, individually and trading as Ace Premium Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric razors, toys, cigarettes, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, pipes, leather goods, fitted cases, blankets, lamps, cocktail shakers, telescopes, opera glasses, knives, pen and pencil sets, tie sets, watches, clocks, cameras, flashlights, compacts and footballs, or any other merchandise, in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent he shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
IN THE MATTER OF

CHARLES M. BREGSTONE DOING BUSINESS AS THE VELTROLA COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of electric razors, wrist watches, silverware sets, and other articles of merchandise; in soliciting and selling his said products—

Distributed to 15,000 persons in the various States along with descriptive and explanatory circular letters and order blanks, push cards for sale, and distribution of his said goods to public under a plan and in accordance with said cards' explanatory legend by which purchasers paid for chances in accordance with particular number punched or secured varying amount or nothing, three of numbers and last sale entitled those securing or making same to Eversharp pencils, and person selecting that 1 of 75 names of girls corresponding to that under card's master seal was entitled to choice of merchandise being thus disposed of, as was operator of card, and thereby conducted lottery and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his products through game of chance or sale of chance to procure by chance said products; contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and to the criminal statutes of many of the States, and in competition with those similarly engaged who do not sell their merchandise through use of lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers of his said products were attracted by element of chance involved in his sales method and thereby induced to purchase his said goods in preference to same or similar merchandise of competitors who did not and do not use such or equivalent methods, and public purchased substantial volume of his said products and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Charles M. Bregstone, individually, and trading as The Veltrola Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Charles M. Bregstone is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of The Veltrola Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 180 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, wrist watches, silverware sets, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his products in interstate commerce, has adopted and pursued and still continues the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public, through the United States mail in interstate commerce, certain literature and instructions, including paper push cards and order blanks, and containing illustrations of his said products, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards.

Respondent's push card bears 75 feminine names, with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 75 small, partially perforated discs marked "push," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disc is a number, which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the card.
The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed under this seal is one of the feminine means appearing on the reverse side of the said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:
PERSON SELECTING NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above described legends or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The fact as to whether the customer pays nothing or a sum of money from 1 cent to 35 cents for an article of merchandise, and the fact as to whether a customer receives nothing or an article of merchandise, and the fact as to which article of merchandise the purchaser is to receive are determined wholly by lot or chance. Respondent furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of said printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:

HOW SALES CARD CAN BE USED

There is a number under each girl's name. This number represents the amount the person selecting that name is to pay as shown on the face of the card. Be sure to write the customer's name on the line opposite the name he has selected.

Persons selecting numbers that are designated as Free Numbers on the face of the card Pay Nothing, yet they have an equal opportunity with the others for selecting the winning name shown under the seal. The persons selecting the numbers shown as extra winners are to be given those awards.

When all names have been taken and collections made the Large Seal is opened.
The person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the large seal has his choice of any one of the premium articles illustrated. The person selling the card also receives his choice.

Fill out the order blank and mention the articles desired. Return to us with a money order or bank draft. The articles selected, plus the four Eversharp Pencils will be shipped, all shipping charges prepaid. In this way the person running off the card gets an article without actually being out a penny of his own money.

Respondent furnishes or sells various push cards or punchboards for use in the sale and distribution of his said merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push cards or punchboards are similar to the push card hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push card, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The sale of respondent's said merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise, contrary to the established public policy of the United States, and contrary to criminal statutes of many of the states of the United States. By reason of said facts, many competitors of respondent are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and said competitors refrain therefrom. Many purchasers of said merchandise are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method, as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 4. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to respondent, because of said game of chance, trade and custom from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent methods, to lessen competition in said trade, to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondent and such other competitors as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win merchandise by chance, because such method is contrary to public policy or to the criminal statutes of certain of the States of the United States, or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the purchasers of said merchandise, or because of any other or all of such reasons.
Findings

PAR. 5. The aforesaid method, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 9, 1938, issued, and on February 10, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Charles M. Bregstone, individually and trading as The Veltrola Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel and Henry C. Lank, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief), and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles M. Bregstone, is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of The Veltrola Co., with his principal place of business located at 180 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent for several months prior to October 1937, was engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce as herein set out, electric razors, wrist watches, silverware sets, and other articles of merchandise.

Said products, when sold, were shipped by respondent from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent was at the time hereinabove mentioned in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent solicited the sale of and sold his products in the following manner:

Respondent distributed to 15,000 persons located in the various States of the United States a card described as a “push card.” Each “push card” was accompanied by a circular letter descriptive of the merchandise which the respondent was offering for sale. The letter also suggested to purchasers and prospective purchasers a plan to be followed by them for the disposition of the merchandise. An order blank was also enclosed with each “push card” for use by the person who received a set of respondent’s literature.

On the reverse side of each order blank respondent set forth the plan for use of the “push cards” as follows:

HOW SALES CARD CAN BE USED

There is a number under each girl's name. This number represents the amount the person selecting that name is to pay as shown on the face of the card. Be sure to write the customer's name on the line opposite the name he has selected.

Persons selecting numbers that are designated as Free Numbers on the face of the card Pay Nothing, yet they have an equal opportunity with the others for selecting the winning name shown under the seal. The persons selecting the numbers shown as extra winners are to be given those awards.

When all names have been taken and collections made the Large Seal is opened. The person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the large seal has his choice of any one of the premium articles illustrated. The person selling the card also receives his choice.

Fill out the order blank and mention the articles desired. Return to us with a money order or bank draft. The articles selected, plus the four Eversharp Pencils will be shipped, all shipping charges prepaid. In this way the person running off the card gets an article without actually being out a penny of his own money.

Each “push card” had printed thereon 75 feminine names and below each name was a partially perforated circular disc, which concealed a number. On the reverse side of each card were ruled columns for the purpose of writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected by the customer.

Each disc had printed thereon the word “Push.” The concealed number under each disc was disclosed when the disc was pushed or separated from the card.
The push card also contained a large master seal and concealed under this seal was one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of the card. The cards contained the following legends or instructions:

PERSON SELECTING NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES CHOICE OF ARTICLES

6—FREE NUMBERS—6
Nos. 2-3-5-10-14 and 16 are Free
4—EXTRA WINNERS—4
Nos. 20-40-60 and Last Sale Each Receive a $1.00 Guaranteed Wahl Eversharp Pencil.

Nos. 1 to 35 Pay What you Draw
Numbers Over 35 Pay only 35¢
Write Purchaser's Name Opposite the Name Selected in Space Provided On the Back of this Card.

Do not remove seal until entire card is sold.

PUSH OUT DISCS BELOW WITH PENCIL OR ANY POINTED OBJECT

Members of the public were solicited to buy one of the names on the card and to pay the number of cents represented by the number concealed by the disc below the name selected by him. Six of said numbers were designated as free and selectors of these numbers paid nothing. Four of the numbers were designated as “Extra Winner” and the selectors of these numbers were given a Wahl Eversharp Pencil. Selectors of numbers higher than the number 35 paid only 35 cents.

When all numbers were selected and collections made, the large seal was then opened and the person who had selected the name above one of the discs which corresponded to the name concealed by the master seal was given his choice of the articles of merchandise offered, which articles are described in paragraph 1 hereof. The person who sold chances on the card also had his choice of such merchandise. Customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master disc receive nothing but the privilege of making the selection for the money which they pay except the customers selecting numbers which entitle them to Wahl Eversharp pencils.

In this manner the public is induced and persuaded to purchase chances from said push card in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for the price of 35 cents or less.
The testimony shows and the Commission finds that in the operation of said cards, the selection of a name which might entitle the selector to an article of merchandise was wholly a matter of chance.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the respondent in selling his said merchandise in connection with the above described "push card," conducted lotteries and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise.

The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove found, involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise, which is contrary to the established public policy of the United States and contrary to the criminal statutes of many of the States of the United States.

There are among the competitors of respondent individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the business of selling and distributing, in interstate commerce, like and similar articles of merchandise who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of said merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors, who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Because of said preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act,

It is ordered, That the respondent Charles M. Bregstone, individually and trading as The Veltrola Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric razors, wrist watches and silverware, or any other merchandise in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell such or any other merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents and to distributors or to members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute such or any other merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of such or any other merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, he shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE NEWTON PRODUCTS COMPANY

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of candy including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof and which included assortments composed of (1) number of small penny pieces of uniform size and shape together with (a) number of candy bars for distribution without charge to those purchasers of said penny pieces securing by chance one of a relatively few thereof, enclosed colored centers of which differed from those of others, and (b) large piece to be given without charge to purchaser of last of said penny pieces, and (2) composed of number of penny pieces of uniform size and shape in small box enclosed, along with large candy piece, in larger box in which wholesaler, jobber, and retail purchasers included, along with other, number of candy bars for gifts as prizes to chance purchasers of said penny pieces, concealed colored centers of which differed from those of majority thereof and from which said large piece was given without charge to purchaser of last of penny pieces in assortment:

Sold to dealers for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid plans such assortments and thereby supplied to and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of its products in accordance with said plan, involving game of chance or sale of chance to procure additional pieces or bars of candy without additional cost; contrary to an established policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer or sell their products so packed and assembled as aforesaid described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy were attracted by its said method of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set out and thereby induced to purchase such candy thus packed and sold by it in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent sales plans or methods, and with tendency and capacity because of said game of chance to divert unfairly trade and custom to it from its competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods, exclude from candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful, lessen competition in said trade, create a monopoly thereof in it and in such other distributors of candy as do use such methods, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude from all potential, competitors who do not adopt or use such methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Newton Products Co., a corporation, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, The Newton Products Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal offices and place of business located at Third and Lock Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, a number of bars of candy, and one large piece of candy. The said bars of candy and the large piece of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of certain of said small pieces of candy as follows: The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color but a minority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at 1 cent each but the purchasers procuring pieces of the minority pieces of candy are entitled to and are given, without charge, said bars of candy. The purchaser of the last piece of said small pieces of candy is entitled to receive and is given, without charge, the said large piece of candy. The colors of the centers of said small pieces of candy are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase is made and the said small pieces of candy broken open. The said bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Another of respondent's assortments consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape contained in a small box, together with a large piece of candy, which box of candy and the large piece of candy are packed in a larger box. The wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers who purchase this assortment pack and assemble in said larger box, along with the large piece of candy and the box containing the said small pieces of candy, a number of bars of candy. The said bars of candy and the large piece of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchasers of certain of said small pieces of candy as follows: The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of a same color but a minority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of a different color. The said small pieces of candy retail at 1 cent each but the purchasers procuring pieces of the minority pieces of candy are entitled to receive, and are given without charge, said bars of candy. The purchaser of the last piece of said small pieces of candy is entitled to receive, and is given without charge, the said large piece of candy. The colors of the centers of said small pieces of candy are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until purchases are made and the said small pieces of candy broken open. The said bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's assortments of candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces or bars of candy without additional cost. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same methods or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above alleged, and thereby are induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 21, 1938, issued, and on September 22, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Newton Products Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 25, 1938, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, The Newton Products Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at Third and Lock Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business.

There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.
One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner. This assortment consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, a number of bars of candy and one large piece of candy. The said bars of candy and the large piece of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of certain of said small pieces of candy as follows: The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color but a minority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at 1 cent each but the purchasers procuring pieces of the minority pieces of candy are entitled to and are given, without charge, said bars of candy. The purchaser of the last piece of said small pieces of candy is entitled to receive and is given, without charge, the said large piece of candy. The colors of the centers of said small pieces of candy are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase is made and the said small pieces of candy broken open. The said bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Another of respondent’s assortments consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape contained in a small box, together with a large piece of candy, which box of candy and the large piece of candy are packed in a larger box. The wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers who purchase this assortment pack and assemble in said larger box, along with the large piece of candy and the box containing the said small pieces of candy, a number of bars of candy. The said bars of candy and the large piece of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchasers of certain of said small pieces of candy as follows: The majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of a same color but a minority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of a different color. The said small pieces of candy retail at 1 cent each but the purchasers procuring pieces of the minority pieces of candy are entitled to receive, and are given without charge, said bars of candy. The purchaser of the last piece of said small pieces of candy is entitled to receive, and is given without charge, the said large piece of candy. The colors of the centers of said small pieces of candy are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until purchases are made and the said small pieces of candy broken open. The said bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The retail dealers who purchase respondent’s assortments of candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces or bars of candy without additional cost. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same methods or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled in the manner in which respondent assembles, packs, and sells its products, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above found, and thereby are induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as hereinabove found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Newton Products Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers packages or assortments of candy which are to be used, or may be used, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of candy or any other articles of merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy, or any other merchandise, together with a lottery device, which lottery device is to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers a lottery device either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which lottery device is to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.
5. Packing or assembling in the same package or packages of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy, or other articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers procuring a piece of candy having a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JOSEPH C. BRADLEY ET AL.

Where an individual engaged as owner of an electromagnetic health appliance or belt, in sale and distribution thereof from his place of residence in Toronto, Canada, through agents and subagents in the United States, and said agents, engaged as aforesaid, along with others likewise engaged in manufacture and sale or sale of various appliances made and sold for operation with ordinary house current and used in therapeutic treatment for prevention of or relief from various ailments and pathological conditions, and in competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of magnetic appliances or devices for treatment of various diseases; in soliciting and causing their said agents to solicit sale of said so-called Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance or Harmony Belt to members of the public through advertising jointly prepared and used by them in radio broadcasts, in newspapers and letters, and by means of circulars, booklets, and other printed matter in furtherance of their common understanding, combination, and agreement and joint efforts directed to promoting the sale of said device or belt throughout the United States—

(a) Represented that said appliance was an effective, safe, tested, and tried and proven therapeutic agent and that electromagnetism had a thoroughly relaxing effect and strengthened vitality, assisting oxidation, increasing circulation, aiding metabolism, stimulating the nerves, and building up the body, etc., and through stimulating circulation dissolved the poisons so that they could be removed, and through removing the cause of disease permitted the body to rebuild itself;

(b) Represented that said appliance or belt created an intensified magnetic field and that use thereof would remove acidosis and toxicosis from the system and bring quick relief from and overcome such troubles as rheumatism, stiff joints, arthritis, lumbago, neuritis, high blood pressure, strokes, eczema, old-age troubles, phlebitis, and various others, and that it equalized and built up the circulation and had shown wonderful results in various ailments above set out and indicated;

(c) Represented that said device or belt proved effective in cases of heart trouble and other ailments and resulted in the carrying away of poisons involved through their natural channels and that it assisted kidneys and bowels in performing their normal functions and aided in removing poisons from the body;

Facts being that said device would have no effect upon health by virtue of magnetic field created nor have any effect on diseases for which it was claimed as being remedial and curative as above set forth other than such temporary alleviation as it might afford in certain cases through heat produced, such as accomplished through hot-water bottle, and it would not be of any effect with respect to the functioning of the kidneys, bowels, lungs, and skin in the elimination of poisons from the body, or functioning of the liver or elimination of poisons from the blood and would not be effective in such removal;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the public into the belief that such statements and representations were true, and into purchasing or using said device or belt in reliance thereon and with intent of deceiving, misleading, or injuring members of public and inducing purchase thereby of said device for substantial sums thereof for use in self-treatment, and with result of deceiving, misleading, and inveigling members of public into purchasing same, with great loss in money, and with resulting neglect or delay in obtaining competent medical advice and consequent likelihood of having ailments and diseases to which purchasers were subject, including such conditions as anaemia, heart trouble, and rundown condition due to many causes and for which there are many remedies by medical profession, progress from point where timely application and competent medical science or skill or proper appliances might avail to relieve or cure, to condition where those afflicted were beyond human aid, and with further effect, through such acts and practices, of causing trade to be diverted from competitors to themselves:

held, That such acts and things done and caused to be done by them were each and all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.
Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.
Mr. H. F. Fulling, of Tulsa, Okla., for William M. Ireland.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph C. Bradley, John M. Schulz, William M. Ireland, Frieda E. Breslin, and A. R. Erbe, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Joseph C. Bradley is an individual residing at No. 4, St. Clair Street West, in the city of Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Respondent John M. Schulz is an individual residing at No. 425 West Ferry Street, in the city of Buffalo, N. Y. Respondent William M. Ireland is an individual residing at No. 1423 South Boston Street, in the city of Tulsa, Okla. Respondent Frieda E. Breslin is an individual residing at No. 37 South Washington Street in the city of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and respondent A. R. Erbe is an individual residing at No. 509 Luzerne Avenue in the city of West Pittston, Pa.

Par. 2. The respondents, since on or about August 1931 to the date hereof, are and have been engaged in a common understanding, combination, and agreement, knowingly and unlawfully, to sell and to cause certain electromagnetic appliances, more particularly hereinafter described as Harmony Belts, to be sold to members of the public in the United States for use by such purchasers in self-therapeutic treatment for the purpose of the prevention, the cure, or the relief of the user of the appliance from one or more physical ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of the human body, including those mentioned and referred to hereinafter, to which the user was subject, or to which the user thought or believed he was subject or suffering therefrom.

In accordance with and in pursuance of the said common understanding, combination, and agreement, as hereinafter set forth, the respondents have sold the Harmony Belts, among others, to members of the public in the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, and Kansas, purchasers of the appliances to whom the respondents have caused Harmony Belts, when so sold by them, to be transported in interstate commerce from Buffalo, N. Y., and in foreign commerce from Toronto, Canada, to the purchasers located in the United States including New York and said other States.

Par. 3. During all the times herein mentioned the electromagnetic appliance, called Harmony Belt, consisted substantially of a coil containing several hundred turns of wire in layers, the separate layers of wire being insulated from each other by paper. The inside of the coil was stiffened with a piece of impregnated burlap or other material, and, thus prepared, the whole was wrapped in padding and sewed in a cover of artificial leather. Permanently attached to the cover was a metal housing provided with toggle switches marked "Off—On" and "High—Low." When assembled and ready for use the appliance somewhat resembled a horse collar in size and general appearance.

The Harmony Belt, when in use by a member of the public for the treatment of ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of the human body, is and has been operated by connecting it with the electric current supplied to residences by public service corporations for ordinary house service. When the appliance is so connected to electric current a magnetic field is created in the space within its circumference. The strength of the magnetic field so created by the appliance measures and has measured, approximately 17 gauss at or about its center.
Complaint

Par. 4. There is iron in the blood plasms, in the red corpuscles, and in the muscles of the human system. There are traces of iron in nearly all human or animal tissues. The iron in the human or animal system, however, is nonmagnetic. It is not permanently or spontaneously magnetic.

Magnetism or electromagnetism has no effect upon bacteria, the cause of many ailments or diseases, either upon their growth, their reproduction, or their virulence, and electromagnetic fields measuring many thousands of gausses can produce no demonstrable physical or physiological effect in the human body.

The application or use of the Harmony Belt in physiotherapy (that is, treatment by mechanical appliance or apparatus, as distinguished from medical therapy) does not produce or cause, it has not produced or caused, and it cannot produce or cause any demonstrable physical or physiological change or effect in the body of any person subjected to its application or use in treatment for the prevention, the cure, or the relief of any physical ailment, disease, or pathological condition.

Par. 5. During all the times mentioned and referred to above, other individuals, firms, and corporations, located in various States of the United States and hereinafter referred to as sellers, are and have been engaged, respectively, some of them in the business of the manufacture and sale, and others in the business of the sale of various appliances that are and have been made and sold to be operated with electric current, such as is supplied to residences for ordinary house service by public service corporations, and used in therapeutic treatment for the prevention of, or the relief from physical ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of the human body.

Some of such appliances are and have been sold by the sellers to the public and to dealers for resale to members of the public for their use in self-therapeutic treatment, and others of such appliances are and have been sold by the sellers to physicians and others skilled in their use, for use in the therapeutic treatment by such skilled persons of physical ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of the human body, including some of the ailments, diseases, or conditions mentioned and referred to in paragraph 7 hereof.

The sellers during said times, have sold the respective appliances above referred to and described, to dealers for resale and to members of the public, purchasers thereof, located in States other than the State of the seller or the State of origin of the shipment and the sellers, respectively, have caused the appliances, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in said other States.
The respondents, during all the times mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 2 and 5 hereof, are and have been in substantial competition in interstate commerce in the sale of the appliances, called Harmony Belts, with the sellers referred to above.

Par. 6. Pursuant to the common understanding, combination, and agreement above mentioned, with knowledge thereof on the part of all the respondents and in furtherance thereof, the respondents Bradley and Schulz, doing business under the name Harmony Electro Manufacturers with places of business in Buffalo and Toronto, engaged in the manufacture and sale of the Harmony Belts, sold by them and the other respondents, as follows:

The respondent Bradley appointed the other respondents, respectively, as agents, each to sell the belts within certain territory with permission on the part of the other respondents, respectively, to appoint subagents, with the knowledge and consent of respondent Bradley. When sales of the belt were made to members of the public by the respondent-agents or their subagents, the Harmony Belts to complete such sales were bought by the respondent-agents from respondents Bradley and Schulz who made the belts and caused them when made to be transported from Buffalo, N.Y., and Toronto, Canada, to the agents ordering them at their respective locations, to be delivered by them or their subagents to the purchasers and users of the belts. The respondent-agents paid to the respondent Bradley $6 to $9 for each of the belts manufactured and shipped to them by the respondents Bradley and Schulz. The respondent-agents charged their respective subagents approximately $22 for each belt sold by the subagents to a member of the public, and the agents and subagents sold the belts to the members of the public, users thereof at the price of approximately $65 to $75 each.

Par. 7. Pursuant to the above common understanding, combination, and agreement, and in furtherance thereof, the respondents solicited and caused their subagents to solicit the sale of the Harmony Belts to members of the public in the several States in their respective territories by means of radio broadcasts, advertisements in magazines having general circulation in the various States, in newspapers, letters, and by means of circulars, booklets, and other printed matter in which the respondents caused statements and representations to be made to the public concerning the use and effect of the use of the Harmony Belts, among others, statements and representations to the effect that science had made wonderful progress in the treatment of disease by electromagnetism; that electromagnetism had brought health and happiness to thousands and that thousands were already helped by it; that the Harmony Belts created a remarkable curative agent which had helped thousands of persons; that among the persons who obtained the Harmony Belts and were helped by its use were those who, with rare exceptions, were extremely discouraged with the results obtained by other means of treating their ailments or diseases; that the Harmony Belt, because of electromagnetism produced by it, tended thoroughly to eliminate toxic products from the entire system and that diseases which arose directly and indirectly from toxic poisoning had successfully responded to treatment with the Harmony Belts; and, that among such diseases were the following, and many others:

- Asthma
- Arthritis
- Bronchitis
- Constipation
- Dropsy
- Eczema
- Gall bladder
- Gout
- Hemorrhoids
- High blood pressure
- Heart trouble
- Insomnia
- Lumbago
- Nervous disorder
- Neuritis
- Paralysis
- Poor circulation
- Prostatic gland
- Rheumatism
- Sciatica
- Sinus trouble
- Stomach trouble
- Tumors
- Ulcers
- Varicose veins

PAR. 8. The statements and representations mentioned and referred to in paragraph 7 hereof were each and all false statements and representations, and the respondents knew, or with the use of ordinary and reasonable care should have known that the said statements and representations made and caused to be made by them to the public were each and all false statements and representations.

The said statements and representations above mentioned and referred to, made and caused to be made by the respondents, each and all had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead members of the public into the belief that they were true, and in reliance upon that belief, into purchasing and using the Harmony Belts, and the said statements and representations were made and caused to be made by the respondents with the intent and purpose of deceiving, misleading, and inveigling members of the public (unfortunate victims, suffering from ailments and diseases, the causes and defects of which, in general, they knew little or nothing, and which were, in many instances, incurable or beyond assistance from medical science or skill) into purchasing Harmony Belts for the substantial sums of from $65 to $75 for use in self-treatment, and members of the public were deceived, misled and inveigled thereby into purchasing the same to their great loss in money, and in further consequence into neglecting or delaying obtaining competent medical advice or assistance with the still further consequence that the physical ailments or diseases to which they were subject were likely, in many instances, to progress from a condition, where competent medical science or skill, or proper appliances used in physiotherapy, if timely applied, might avail to relieve or cure, to a condition where the afflicted persons were beyond human aid.

The respondents by means of the conspiracy above mentioned and the said statements and representations made and caused by them to be made in the sale of Harmony Belts caused trade in appliances used in physiotherapy to be diverted to them from competitors.

PAR. 9. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondent were, and are, each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 10, 1937, issued and served a complaint upon the respondents named in the caption, charging that on or about August 1931, respondents were, and have since been engaged in a common understanding, combination, and agreement, knowingly and unlawfully, to sell, and to cause certain electromagnetic appliances to be sold, to members of the public, in the United States, for use by such purchasers in self-therapeutic treatment for the purpose of the prevention, the cure, or the relief of the user of the appliance from one or more physical ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of body, in violation of the provisions of section 5 of said act. Answer was filed by respondent Joseph C. Bradley of No. 4 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto, Canada, on March 22, 1937, said answer being in the form of an open letter addressed to the Secretary of the Commission; Attorney H. F. Fulling of Tulsa, Okla., submitted an answer dated March 22, 1937, for respondent William M. Ireland of Tulsa, Okla., and said attorney became the attorney of record for said respondent; respondent John M. Schulz filed his answer to the complaint, March 22, 1937; respondents Freida E. Breslin and A. R. Erbe filed no answer to the complaint herein. No appearances, either by attorney or in person were made at any of the hearings, subsequently set before a trial examiner of the Commission heretofore duly appointed, except the appearance at Buffalo, N. Y., on April 1, 1938, of respondent John M. Schulz, and the appearance of respondent Freida E. Breslin and respondent A. R. Erbe, who appeared at the hearing held at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and who were under subpoena of the Commission.

Respondents having entered their appearance and filed their answers to said complaints, hearings were had and evidence was introduced in support of the allegations of said complaint. At the conclusion of the said hearings, on behalf of the Commission, respondents were given an opportunity to submit evidence on their behalf, but no evidence or testimony was submitted or received on behalf of any of said respondents.

Thereupon this proceeding coming on for final hearing upon the record, and brief of the attorney for the Commission, respondents having failed to file briefs herein, although an opportunity was given them therefor, and the Commission having duly considered the record, and being fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Joseph C. Bradley is an individual residing at No. 4 St. Clair Avenue West, in the city of Toronto, Ontario, Canada; respondent John M. Schulz is an individual residing at No. 345 West Ferry Street, in the city of Buffalo, State of New York; respondent William M. Ireland is an individual residing at the Albany Hotel, in the city of Tulsa, State of Oklahoma; respondent Frieda E. Breslin is an individual residing at No. 75 South Wells Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and respondent A. R. Erbe is an individual residing at No. 509 Luzerne Avenue, in the city of West Pittston, Pa.

Respondent Joseph C. Bradley is an American citizen residing at No. 4 St. Clair Avenue West, in the city of Toronto, Ontario, Canada. He is the owner and distributor of the Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance, and does business as the Harmony-Electro Manufacturers, Toronto, Canada. His method of doing business, in the sale and distribution of the “Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance” is to appoint agents, said agents in the United States being respondent-agent John M. Schulz, located and residing at 245 West Ferry Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; respondent-agent William M. Ireland, residing at the Albany Hotel, Tulsa, Okla.; respondent-agent Frieda E. Breslin, residing at 75 South Wells Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and respondent-agent A. R. Erbe, residing at 509 Luzerne Avenue, West Pittston, Pa. The Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance (hereinafter called "Harmony Belt"), respondent Joseph C. Bradley has manufactured for him, under contract, by respondent-agent John M. Schulz, in Buffalo, N. Y. These respondent-agents, appointed by respondent Joseph C. Bradley, are authorized to sell respondent's "Harmony Belt" within certain territory, and appoint subagents, with the knowledge and consent of respondent Bradley. When sales of said "Harmony Belt" are made to the purchasing public by respondent-agents or their subagents, the orders obtained by said respondent-agents or subagents are forwarded to respondent Bradley at Toronto, Canada, who in turn forwards said orders to respondent John M. Schulz, at Buffalo, N. Y., who manufactures the said "Harmony Belt," and after the same is completed forwards said "Harmony Belts" to the respondent-agent, who has forwarded the original order. The "Belts," after being manufactured by said respondent-agent Schulz, upon order from respondent Joseph C. Bradley, are transported from Buffalo, N. Y., or in some instances, from Toronto, Canada, to the agents ordering them, at their respective localities, in various States of the United States, to be by them delivered to their subagents, to be delivered in turn to the purchasers thereof and users of the "Belts."

Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, in the sale and distribution of said "Harmony Belts," are in competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of electromagnetic appliances or devices sold for the treatment of various diseases affecting the physical body by electric current methods.

Par. 2. There are numerous other individuals, firms, and corporations, located in various States of the United States who are and have been engaged, respectively, some of them in the business of manufacture and sale, and others in the business of the sale of various appliances and devices that are, and have been manufactured and sold to be operated with electric current, such as is supplied to residences for ordinary house service by public service corporations, and used in therapeutic treatment for the prevention of, or the relief from physical ailments, diseases, or pathological conditions of the human body.

Par. 3. The "Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance" as manufactured and distributed by respondent Joseph C. Bradley, and the respondents named in paragraph 1 above, consists of about 350 turns of what appears to be No. 20 aluminum wire, wound continuously on a fiber form. This is covered with some sort of padding, all enclosed in an imitation leather covering. On the ends of the wire there is a control switch and upon the control switch there is a lamp cord and plug which is used to plug into an ordinary house outlet. Before the apparatus begins to operate, it is necessary to plug into an ordinary alternating current, an ordinary house current as supplied by the public utilities. The control switch has marked on it, "Off-On," and "High-Low." The device is approximately 50 centimeters in diameter (approximately 4 inches) and has an approximate width of 10 centimeters. When the current is turned on and the current flowing through the wires there is a magnetic field generated which is stronger inside the belt, and there is also a magnetic field in the general vicinity of the wind; the magnetic field is strongest at the edge, gradually getting to the smaller value at the center and terminating as the distance increases away from the center. Another part of the said "Harmony Electro-Magnetic Health Appliance," and to be used in connection with said "Appliance," is what is known as a "test coil." This part of respondent's appliance is also circular in form and has a bulb attached to it which is used by the person using the device to tell if the magnetism is coming from the said "Harmony Belt." This "test coil" is an indicator, to the user, as to whether or not the apparatus is in operation.

PAR. 4. Instructions for using accompany the "Harmony Belt" when sales thereof are made by respondent Bradley, and his respondent-agents and subagents. The ordinary current required to operate the "Harmony Belt" is 110 volts, 25 to 60 cycles. The instructions indicate that a person using the "Belt" should be relaxed as much as possible, in a comfortable position. The "Belt" is placed around the waist of the user for most ailments, although the "Harmony Belt" may be used on any part of the body where there is pain or discomfort. The "Harmony Belt" is generally used three times a day, upon awaking in the morning, before dinner, and before supper. Respondent-agents and subagents paid to respondent Bradley, $6 to $9 for each of the said "Harmony Belts" manufactured and shipped to them by the respondents, Bradley and Schulz. Respondent-agents charged their respective subagents approximately $22 for each "Belt" sold by the said subagents to a member of the public, and the agents and subagents sold the "Belts" to the members of the public and users thereof at the price of approximately $65 to $75 each.

PAR. 5. On or about August 1931 Mr. A. R. Erbe joined with Mr. Joseph C. Bradley in selling the Harmony Belt in the United States. They worked together in preparing advertising matter and continuities for radio broadcasts telling the therapeutic value of the Harmony Belt. In the summer of 1933 Mr. A. R. Erbe knowing that respondent William M. Ireland had been connected with the sale of a Theronoid Belt, a similar device against which the Commission had issued an order to cease and desist on April 8, 1933, brought Mr. Joseph C. Bradley and Mr. William M. Ireland together, by correspondence with them, and as a result Mr. William M. Ireland joined Mr. Joseph C. Bradley and Mr. A. R. Erbe in selling the Harmony Belt in the United States, all working together, using advertising prepared by their joint efforts in promoting the sale of the Harmony Belt. Joseph C. Bradley contracted with respondent John M. Schultz to manufacture the Harmony Belt in Buffalo, N. Y. John M. Schultz, who was also familiar with the Theronoid Belt, joined Joseph C. Bradley, A. R. Erbe, and William M. Ireland in promoting the sale of the Harmony Belt in the United States, making and shipping the belts from Buffalo, N. Y., to A. R. Erbe in Pennsylvania and William M. Ireland in Oklahoma. A. R. Erbe interested respondent Frieda E. Breslin in the venture and she operated under a separate contract with A. R. Erbe for a period, but she later became directly associated with Joseph C. Bradley and John M. Schultz in promoting the sale of and selling the Harmony Belt in the United States. Frieda E. Breslin cooperated with the other respondents herein in preparing advertising and continuities for broadcasting used jointly by all of the respondents in the promotion of the sale and sale of the Harmony Belt in the different States of the United States. The association of these respondents as above set forth continued until about the time the complaint in this case was served on them, at which time A. R. Erbe and William M. Ireland ceased their operations, but Joseph C. Bradley, Frieda E. Breslin, and John M. Schultz continued their business relations as above set forth until about the time the hearings were conducted in this case. By reason of these facts the Commission finds that the respondents, Joseph C. Bradley, John M. Schultz, William M. Ireland, Frieda E. Breslin, and A. R. Erbe, are and have been engaged in a common understanding, combination, and agreement, and in furtherance thereof, the respondents solicited and caused their subagents to solicit the sale of the said Harmony Belts to members of the public in several States of the United States by means of radio broadcasts, advertisements in magazines having a general circulation in the various States, in newspapers and letters, and by means of circulars, booklets, and other printed matter, in which the respondents caused statements and representations to be made to the public concerning the use, and the effect of the use, of the Harmony Belts, and among such statements and representations are the following:

"Electro Magnetism—FREE OFFER!"—"Prove Our Statements."

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

The Harmony Electro Magnetic Health Appliance is the easiest, most effective, safest, tested, tried and proven therapeutic agent, that has ever been introduced to the public.

Electro Magnetism thoroughly relaxes, strengthens vitality, assists oxidation, increases circulation, aids metabolism, stimulates the nerves, builds up the body, repelling the blood, thus stimulating circulation, dissolving the poisons, placing them in a position to be removed. Thus removing the cause of disease, the body is permitted to rebuild itself.

The action of Electro Magnetism on the blood, is that the blood resists magnetism. It is diamagnetic. This resistance produces friction. Friction produces electricity in the tissues by electrolysis. Oxygen and hydrogen are set free. Oxygen set free increases oxidation, hydrogen set free unites with chlorin, fluorin and sulphur. This is used by the body chemistry to dissolve calcium, oxylate poisonous crystals in the blood, preparing them for elimination.

The Harmony Electro Magnetic Health Appliance is operated by electricity, creating an intensified magnetic field and is placed around the patient, over the regular clothing. Thus the patient is in a magnetic field.

An over amount of waste matter in the system, causes acidosis and toxicosis, in the healthy part of the body, causing diseases which are given many Latin names, congestion, inflammation, lowered resistance, low vitality, pathological tissues, germ action, atrophy, pus, neuritis, rheumatism, high blood pressure, kidney and bladder trouble and all disorders resulting from poor metabolism and lowered function.

These troubles respond quickly and are overcome when Electro Magnetism is used, putting new life into the body. Electro Magnetism equalizes and builds up the circulation.

The use of Electro Magnetism has shown wonderful results in ailments such as rheumatism, stiff joints, arthritis, lumbago, neuritis, headaches, sore eyes, high blood pressure, paralysis, strokes, eczema, phlebitis, catarrh, anaemic condition, hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, indigestion, constipation, ulcers, acidosis, old age troubles, kidney and bladder trouble, and many other ailments too numerous to mention here.

In a folder entitled "Instructions," and which folder is furnished to all purchasers of respondent's "Harmony Belt" by respondent Joseph C. Bradley, and his associate respondent-agents and subagents, appears the following:

Important regarding results.

Some cases respond with the first treatment, and others do not respond for months. This depends on the condition of the ailments. We have had different cases of heart troubles, arthritis, neuritis, varicose veins, pains in the body, which have responded promptly to the use of Harmony. The poisons begin to be carried away through their natural channels. If immediate results are not obtained the person using Harmony should not be discouraged. Others have been built up, and the use of Electro Magnetism cannot help but give strength and new energy, and be beneficial. Regularity, intelligence, and persistence must always be used.

Par. 6. The United States Bureau of Standards, in October 1937, made an examination of respondent's "Harmony Belt," to determine its structural features and its electrical and magnetic characteristics. It appears from said report that when the appliance was connected through suitable measuring instruments to a 110-volt, 60-cycle source of alternating current, the following values of current and power were observed:

The Bureau of Standards report shows that the heat produced by the coil under normal conditions of operation is approximately equal to that produced by an ordinary 50-watt lamp. The report further shows that the apparatus is essentially a low-frequency coreless solenoid constructed of nonmagnetic materials and producing a magnetic field of the same frequency as that of the circuit to which it is attached. The report further shows that the values of the field strengths in oersteds are given in the following table:

An oersted is defined as a unit of magnetic force, and may be conceived as the same thing as a gauss. One oersted is the same as one gauss, the term "gauss," in electrical parlance is described as being a unit which is one line of force per square centimeter. It appears that the word "gauss," and the word "oersted" (used in the tabulation above) are now considered by scientists to be used interchangeably.
Par. 7. The Commission finds that the use of respondent’s “Harmony Belt” would heat the surface of the body of a user if kept on long enough; that heating can, and does have no effect on the diseases mentioned in respondent’s advertising except possibly a slight alleviation, temporary alleviation of pain in the case of sciatica or lumber; that it will have no effect on skin diseases, ulcers, tumors, stomach trouble, or rheumatism; that the effect on a user of respondent’s “Harmony Belt” would be similar to the use of a hot-water bottle, simply heating the surface of a tender area and furnishing only temporary relief; that it is well known to the medical profession that alternating currents passing through a conductor set up a magnetic field surrounding these conductors, and such magnetic fields have been tested for the action on living human beings, and upon the tissues of living humans, and have been found to have no effect whatsoever; that it still is an open question, among the medical profession whether magnetic fields of tremendous intensity have any effect, either curative or noncurative; that a device that generates 12.2 oersteds would have no effect upon a person’s health; that these lower magnetic fields have been tested so abundantly through the years, and have been found to be without effect in the treatment of diseases.

The Commission finds further, in reference to respondent’s claim that the “Harmony Belt” is helpful in cases of anemia, heart trouble, and a run-down condition, that it is a serious thing to mislead the sick and thus delay real diagnosis and possible aid; that the medical profession now has many reliefs for anemia and heart troubles, and run-down condition, and that said troubles may be due to a great many causes, many of them dietary; that in reference to respondent’s claim that poisons can be carried away through natural channels by and because of the use of the “Harmony Belt”; that respondent’s “Harmony Belt” would not be effective in the removal of poisons from the body of human beings; that poisons in the body are carried away by the kidneys, by the bowels, and to much minor degree by the lungs and by the skin, and that respondent’s device could have no effect upon these organs that do eliminate poisons from the human being; that one of the important organs for removing poisons in the body, poisons that are in the blood, is the liver, which changes them, destroys them, and that respondent’s device could have no effect on this removal whatsoever; that the only truth in respondent’s claims for its “Harmony Belt” is that some relief to a sufferer would be caused by heating the surface of the body, or a sore joint or a sore muscle, and that by the use of respondent’s device, temporary alleviation of pain in such cases may be obtained, very much in the same manner as by the use of a hot-water bottle.
Par. 8. The Commission further finds that the statements and representations made and caused to be made by the respondents, each and all had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead members of the public into the belief that said statements and representations were true, and in reliance upon that belief, into purchasing and using respondent's "Harmony Belt," and the said statements and representations were made, and caused to be made by respondents with the intent and purpose of deceiving, misleading, and injuring members of the public, and to induce the purchase by the public of respondent's "Harmony Belt" for the substantial sums of $65 to $75 for use in self-treatment, and members of the public were deceived, misled, and inveigled thereby into purchasing the same, to their great loss in money, and in further consequence, into neglecting or delaying obtaining competent medical advice, with the consequence that the physical ailments or diseases to which said purchasers were subject were likely, in many instances to progress from a condition, where, if competent medical science or skill, or proper appliances in psychotherapy were used, and timely applied, might avail to relieve or cure, to a condition where the afflicted persons were beyond human aid. The respondents, by means of the conspiracies above mentioned, and the said statements and representations set forth above, made and caused by them to be made, in the sale of "Harmony Belts," caused trade in appliances used in psychotherapy to be diverted to them from competitors.

CONCLUSION

The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondents, were, and are, each and all to the prejudice of the public, and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before William W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by Clark Nichols, counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Joseph C. Bradley, John M. Schulz, William M. Ireland, Frieda E. Breslin, and A. R. Erbe, acting jointly under a common understanding, combination, and agreement, or acting separately as individuals, and their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the manufacture, offering for sale, sale, and distribution of an electromagnetic belt, known as the "Harmony Electro Magnetic Health Appliance," whether sold under that name or any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That the Harmony Electro Magnetic Health Appliance is an effective, safe, tested, tried, and proven therapeutic agent.

2. That electromagnetism thoroughly relaxes, strengthens vitality, assists oxidation, increases or builds up circulation, aids metabolism, stimulates the nerves, builds up the body, repels the blood, stimulates circulation, dissolves poisons in the system, sets oxygen and hydrogen free.

3. That the use of said electromagnetic belt will remove acidosis or toxicosis from the system, or in any manner aid metabolism in the body, or will put new life in the body.

4. That the use of said electromagnetic belt, identical with or similar to the Harmony Electro Magnetic Health Appliance, has any therapeutic value in treating rheumatism, stiff joints, arthritis, lumbago, neuritis, headaches, sore eyes, high blood pressure, paralysis, strokes, eczema, phlebitis, catarrh, anemic condition, high fever, asthma, bronchitis, indigestion, constipation, ulcers, acidosis, old-age troubles, kidney and bladder trouble, or any other ailment of the human body.

5. That the magnetic field created by the operation of an electromagnetic belt has any effect whatever on the iron in the blood of the human body.

6. That the use of an electromagnetic belt identical with or similar to the "Harmony Belt" is any aid whatever in removing poisons from the body, by assisting the kidneys and bowels in performing their normal functions.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of cigarettes, and in sale and distribution thereof to dealers in the various States and in the District of Columbia, and in selling certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which (1) were composed of number of packages of cigarettes and number of tins thereof, together with 12-section punchboard, for sale under a plan, and in accordance with said board's explanatory legend, pursuant to which (a) purchaser received for penny paid two tins, or one tin, or package of cigarettes, or nothing other than privilege of punch, in accordance with success or failure in securing one of numbers thus announced, and (b) purchaser of last punch in each of board's sections received package, or which (2) involved plans or methods varying in detail from that described aforesaid, but of principle of which plan or method above described was illustrative, and under which it furnished various punchboards and push cards with its various assortments for use in sale and distribution of its said product—

Sold to dealers, for distribution and resale to purchasing public by retailer-dealer purchasers thereof in accordance with such plan, said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said product in accordance with sales plan above set forth, contrary to public policy as long recognized in the common law and criminal statutes, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer or sell cigarettes so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve game of chance or any other method of sale contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of cigarettes to buy its said product in preference to those and tobaccos offered and sold by its competitors, and with result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of cigarettes were attracted by its said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described, and were thereby induced to purchase substantial quantities of such cigarettes thus packed and sold by it, in preference to those offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, unfairly to divert to it trade and custom from its competitors aforesaid, to exclude from said cigarette trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful, to lessen competition in said trade and create a monopoly thereof in it and in such other distributors of cigarettes as do use same or equivalent methods, to deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in such trade, and to eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use said or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. George P. Brauburger, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 119 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y., and a manufacturing plant at Richmond, Va. Respondent has branch offices and warehouses located in various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of cigarettes and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from its places of business aforesaid, into and through the various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipment and into the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of cigarettes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of cigarettes so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of respondent's assortments substantially illustrates the sales plan or method used in the sale and distribution of its products to the purchasing public, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of packages of cigarettes and a number of tins of cigarettes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The punchboard is divided into 12 sections. Sales are 1 cent each and each purchaser is entitled to one punch from said board. When a punch is made from said board, a number is disclosed. The board bears statements informing prospective purchasers that a certain number entitles the purchaser thereof to two tins of cigarettes; that certain other numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to one tin of cigarettes; that certain other numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to one package of cigarettes; and that the purchaser of the last number in each section is entitled to one package of cigarettes. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for a tin or tins or a package of cigarettes, or the last number in one of the sections, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The retail value of said tins and packages of cigarettes is greater than the designated price of said punches. The said packages and tins of cigarettes are thus distributed to the purchasers of said punches from said board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of its cigarettes and furnishes various punchboards and push cards for use in the sale and distribution of such cigarettes by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said cigarettes, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. Said sales plan has the tendency and capacity to induce purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to cigarettes and tobaccos offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said products to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a package or a tin or tins of cigarettes. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of cigarettes and the sale of said cigarettes by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the cigarette trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell cigarettes in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cigarettes so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of cigarettes are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said cigarettes and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said cigarettes so packed and sold by respondent in preference to cigarettes offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said cigarette trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in said cigarette trade, to create a monopoly of said cigarette trade in respondent and such other distributors of cigarettes as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said cigarette trade. The use of said method by respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 4, 1938, issued, and on May 5, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 119 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y., and a manufacturing plant at Richmond, Va. Respondent has branch offices and warehouses located in various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of cigarettes and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from its places of business aforesaid, into and through the various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipment and into the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of cigarettes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of cigarettes so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of respondent’s assortments substantially illustrates the sales plan or method used in the sale and distribution of its products to the purchasing public, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of packages of cigarettes and a number of tins of cigarettes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. The punchboard is divided into 12 sections. Sales are 1 cent each and each purchaser is entitled to one punch from said board. When a punch is made from said board, a number is disclosed. The board bears statements informing prospective purchasers that a certain number entitles the purchaser thereof to two tins of cigarettes; that certain other numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to one tin of cigarettes; that certain other numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to one package of cigarettes; and that the purchasers of the last number in each section is entitled to one package of cigarettes. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for a tin or tins or a package of cigarettes, or the last number in one of the sections, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The retail value of said tins and packages of cigarettes is greater than the designated price of said punches. The said packages and tins of cigarettes are thus distributed to the purchasers of said punches from said board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of its cigarettes and furnishes various punchboards and push cards for use in the sale and distribution of such cigarettes by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent’s said cigarettes, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has the tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of cigarettes to purchase respondent’s said products in preference to cigarettes and tobaccos offered for sale and sold by its competitors.
PAR. 4. The sale of said products to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a package or a tin or tins of cigarettes. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of cigarettes and the sale of said cigarettes by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the cigarette trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell cigarettes in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cigarettes so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of cigarettes are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said cigarettes and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase substantial amounts of said cigarettes so packed and sold by respondent in preference to cigarettes offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said cigarette trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in said cigarette trade, to create a monopoly of said cigarette trade in respondent and such other distributors of cigarettes as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said cigarette trade. The use of said method by respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cigarettes or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing cigarettes or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such cigarettes or any other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers, assortments of said cigarettes or other merchandise together with punchboards or other lottery devices which said punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing cigarettes or other merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of said products or separately, which punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing cigarettes or other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling, or otherwise disposing of, cigarettes or other merchandise by the use of punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, it shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
In the Matter of

THE ENDURA CORPORATION

Docket 3419. Complaint, May 12, 1938—Decision, Jan. 31, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale of its "Endura" or "Endura Permanent Wave" beauty preparation to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia; in issuing, publishing, and circulating advertisements thereof among the various States through printed matter, radio broadcasts, and other ways—

(a) Represented that said cosmetic preparation had been tested in the world's foremost laboratories, and that it was used in Hollywood's major movie studios and by the screen's smartest stars; and

(b) Represented that it was actually good for the hair and would benefit bleached, dyed, gray, or naturally colored hair;

Facts being it contained nothing which was actually good for the hair or which would accomplish results aforesaid, and had not been tested and was not used as above claimed, and said representations were grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into belief that all said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of mistaken and erroneous belief induced by said advertising and misrepresentation, that consuming public was caused by it to purchase substantial volume of said preparation, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from others engaged in sale of like or similar preparations intended for like and similar purposes, and who truthfully advertise their products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such false and misleading representations, claims, and statements made as aforesaid were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini, trial examiner.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Mr. Don F. Tyler, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Endura Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Endura Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 4951 Sunset Boulevard, in the city of Hollywood, in the State of California. Respondent for more than 1 year last past has been and still is engaged in the sale of a certain beauty preparation known as "Endura" and sometimes designated "Endura Permanent Wave" which is sold for use by women as a self aid for the purpose of giving their hair permanent waves. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent offers said product for sale and sells the same in commerce between the State of California and the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

When said product is sold, respondent transports same from its place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of California, and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 1 year last past, and still is, a constant course of trade in said product so distributed and sold by respondent, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the manufacture of like and similar products or other products designed for similar usage and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In soliciting the sale of and in selling its "Endura" of "Endura Permanent Wave" and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the purchasing public for said product, the respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, advertisements to be issued, published and circulated to and among the people of the United States in various forms of printed matter, by radio broadcasts, and in other ways. In said ways and by said means, respondent makes, and has made, to the general public false and misleading statements with reference to the alleged value and merit of said product and its alleged use in Hollywood major movie studios and by prominent screen stars. Among the statements so made and circulated by the respondent are the following:

Endura is actually good for the hair.
Tested in the World's foremost laboratories.
Used in Hollywood major movie studios.
Endura will actually benefit bleached, dyed, grey or naturally colored hair.
The screen's Smartest Stars use Endura.
Par. 3. The statements and representations made by respondent, as above set forth, and others similar thereto, had and now have a tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead, and do deceive and mislead, purchasers and prospective purchasers of its product into the belief that "Endura" or "Endura Permanent Wave" is good for the hair and that it will benefit the hair; that it has been tested in the world's foremost laboratories; that it has been and is used in the major movie studios of Hollywood, and that it has been and is used by prominent movie stars.

Par. 4. The representations made by respondent as aforesaid and others similar thereto, with respect to the nature and effect of its product when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, respondent's product does not contain anything which is actually good for the hair or which will actually benefit bleached, dyed, gray, or naturally colored hair. Said product has not been tested in the world's foremost laboratories. It has not been, nor is it now, used in the major movie studios of Hollywood. Nor is it true that the screen's smartest stars use it or have used it.

Par. 5. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made by the respondent herein by means of advertisements, radio broadcasts, and in other ways, and in offering for sale and selling the aforesaid preparation known as "Endura" and as "Endura Permanent Wave," were and are calculated to, and had and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and do mislead and deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the advertising and misrepresentations of the respondent, as aforesaid, a number of the consuming public purchases a substantial volume of said preparation known as "Endura" and as "Endura Permanent Wave," with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of like and similar preparations intended to be used for like and similar purposes, who truthfully advertise their preparations. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by the respondent herein to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Findings

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 12, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, The Endura Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On November 7, 1938, the respondent filed its answer to the complaint in this proceeding admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving therein all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer (respondent having waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Endura Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business located at 4951 Sunset Boulevard in the city of Hollywood in said State.

Par. 2. Respondent, for more than 1 year last past, has been and still is, engaged in the sale of a certain beauty preparation known as “Endura” and sometimes designated “Endura Permanent Wave.” When such sales are made, respondent transports this product from its place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in the States of the United States other than the State of California and into the District of Columbia, causing a constant course of trade in said products so distributed and sold by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. There are in the United States other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of like and similar products or other products designed for similar uses and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, the respondent being in substantial competition with such other corporations, firms, and individuals.

Par. 4. To advertise and create a consumer demand for its product, respondent now causes and for more than 1 year last past, has caused advertisements to be issued, published, and circulated to and among the States of the United States in various forms of printed matter, radio broadcasts, and in other ways, making statements, among others, as follows:

- Endura is actually good for the hair.
- Tested in the world’s foremost laboratories.
- Used in Hollywood’s major movie studios.
- Endura will actually benefit bleached, dyed, gray or naturally colored hair.
- The screen’s smartest stars use Endura.

Par. 5. Respondent’s product does not contain anything which is actually good for the hair, or which will actually benefit bleached, dyed, gray, or naturally colored hair; it has not been tested in the world’s foremost laboratories; it has not been, nor is it now, used in the major movie studios in Hollywood; the screen’s foremost stars do not use it nor have they used it; and such representations made by the respondent are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent as aforesaid by means of advertisements, radio broadcasts, and in other ways in offering for sale and selling the aforesaid preparation were and are calculated and have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and do mislead and deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that all of said representations are true.

Par. 7. Respondent, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by said advertising and misrepresentations, caused the consuming public to purchase a substantial volume of said preparation known as “Endura” and as “Endura Permanent Wave,” with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of like and similar preparations intended to be used for like and similar purposes, who truthfully advertise their products. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent herein to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
THE ENDURA CORP.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid false and misleading representations, claims, and statements made by the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waives the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Endura Corporation, its representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a cosmetic preparation now known as "Endura" or as "Endura Permanent Wave," whether sold under those names or under any other names, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly representing:

1. That respondent's cosmetic preparation has been tested in the world's foremost laboratories or that it is used in Hollywood's movie studios or by the screen's smartest stars.

2. That respondent's cosmetic preparation is actually good for the hair or will benefit bleached, dyed, gray, or naturally colored hair.

And it is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall within 60 days from the date of service upon it of this order, file with this Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of "Nixoderm" proprietary preparation to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in sale and distribution of preparations designed and intended for and used in treatment of same ailments and conditions for which it recommended its said product, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their respective preparations or therapeutic properties thereof, and do not make any other false statements in connection with their sale and distribution; in advertising its said product, and results that might be expected from use thereof, in newspapers, magazines, and periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, and through continuities broadcast from radio stations of extrastate audience—

Represented, through claims there made, that its said product was an effective remedy or cure for psoriasis, eczema, athlete's foot, itch, ringworm, pimples, acne, dandruff, corns, hives, scabies, and other disorders, ailments, and diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the cause or type of said disorders and ailments, or the condition thereof;

Facts being its said preparation was neither a specific remedy nor effective cure or treatment for acne and the various other diseased conditions of the skin enumerated in its advertising matter, irrespective of cause of disorder or condition thereof, it was not a remedy or effective treatment for any skin disorder that arises from or is associated with systemic disturbances, in which class of disorders and ailments of the skin expert and thorough diagnosis is necessary to ascertain cause or causes and proper treatment therefor; and also was not remedy or effective treatment for all skin ailments and disorders of surface character only, irrespective of type or condition, causes of which are so varied that no single formula containing any drug or a combination of drugs is capable of providing adequate treatment for all of such diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the etiological agent, the stage of the diseased condition, the nature of the skin affected, the age of the patient, and other pertinent conditions, circumstances, and causes, ascertainment of which, as responsible, is essential to ascertainment of proper treatment;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that its said preparation possessed properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish results indicated, and of causing substantial portion of such public, by reason of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, to purchase substantial quantities thereof, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to it from its competitors who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations; to the injury of competition in commerce:
Complaint

It is alleged, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. DeWitt T. Peckett for the Commission.

Mr. William P. Jacobs, of Clinton, S. Car., and Esch, Kerr, Taylor & Shipe, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Knox Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, The Knox Co., is a corporation doing business under the laws of the State of California. Its principal office and place of business are at 811 West Seventh Street, Los Angeles, Calif. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of a proprietary preparation for disorders of the skin called "Nixoderm."

Respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, its said proprietary preparation, when sold by it, to be shipped from its said place of business in Los Angeles, Calif., to the purchasers thereof, located in the various States of the United States, other than the State of California, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said proprietary product so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar proprietary products or other products designed and intended for similar usage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has advertised and now advertises in newspapers and magazines, by radio broadcasts and in various other ways that its said proprietary product is an effective remedy or cure for psoriasis, eczema, athlete's foot, and various other ailments, disorders, and diseased conditions of the skin. Representative of respondent's advertising claims for its said product are the following:
Kill Itch Germs Quick.

* * * To stop the itch in 30 minutes and quickly heal your skin, just try the guaranteed prescription, Dr. Nixon’s Nixoderm. Guaranteed to quickly clear and heal your skin or money back on return of empty package.

Itch Cause Killed in 7 Minutes.

Your skin has nearly 50 million tiny seams or pores where tiny germs or parasites can hide and cause your skin to Itch, Crack, Peel, Burn, also Eczema, Ringworm, Pimples, Acne, Crotch-Itch and Foot Itch. Don't waste time with ordinary methods. You must have a penetrating treatment like the new discovery for stubborn skin troubles called Dr. Nixon’s Nixoderm. It goes right in, kills the cause, and stops itch in 7 minutes. In 24 hours, you can see your face getting clear, soft, and smooth. Nixoderm is guaranteed to heal your skin in 10 days or money back on return of empty package. Ask your druggist for guaranteed Nixoderm today.

The aforesaid advertising claims for Nixoderm serve as representations on the part of respondent that said product is an effective remedy or cure for all type of psoriasis, eczema, athlete’s foot, and other disorders, ailments, and diseased conditions of the skin.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact, Nixoderm is not an effective remedy or cure for the various diseased conditions of the skin enumerated in respondent’s advertising matter irrespective of the cause of the disorder or the condition thereof. Ailments and disorders of the skin arise from many causes and there is no specific remedy or treatment that is effective in all cases and under all conditions. Such ailments and disorders are, in many instances, caused by or associated with a systemic derangement and in order to effectively treat such cases it is necessary to ascertain the cause or causes of the diseased condition and treat such cause or causes together with the external manifestations thereof. A thorough diagnosis by a competent physician is necessary in order to determine the cause or causes of diseased conditions of the skin caused by or associated with a systemic derangement and the proper treatment therefor.

All diseased conditions of the skin that are of a surface character only and which have no systemic origin or connection cannot be effectively treated in the same way and by the same medicine. The proper method of treatment and the kind of medicine to be used in the treatment of diseased conditions of the skin that are of a surface character only are determined by many factors such as the age of the patient, type of skin of the patient, type of disorder from which the patient is suffering and the stage of the diseased condition. A proprietary medicine that might be effective in the treatment of a surface skin disorder while in its incipient stage might be wholly ineffective as a treatment for a disorder in a malignant stage. Furthermore, a proprietary medicine that might be effective in the treatment of skin disorders and ailments of infants is usually not strong enough to be effective in the treatment of skin disorders and ailments of adults and a proprietary medicine that might be an effective remedy for skin disorders of white people is usually not strong enough to be effective in the treatment of disorders suffered by persons of color.

Par. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said product on account of such erroneous belief.

There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of remedies and treatments for the same ailments and diseased conditions of the skin listed in respondent's advertising matter who do not misrepresent the therapeutic values and other attributes of their said products. By use of the aforesaid representations, trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from its aforesaid competitors. As a result thereof, injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 20th day of May 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, The Knox Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 30th day of June 1938, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, the Knox Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri and having its principal office in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. Respondent is engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a proprietary preparation designated as “Nixoderm.” The respondent’s warehouse and manufacturing plant are located in the city of Buffalo, State of New York, from which location the respondent causes said preparation to be distributed by its sales agent, a partnership having the same name as respondent.

Par. 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing said preparation. Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and causes the said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States in the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing preparations designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their respective preparations or the therapeutic properties thereof and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective preparations.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its proprietary product, “Nixoderm,” respondent has caused misleading advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said proprietary product “Nixoderm,” and the results that may be expected to be obtained upon the use thereof to be disseminated in commerce as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act through the use of advertisements in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States, through continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to, and do, convey the programs emanated therefrom to the listeners thereto located in the various States of the United States, and through other means. Said product was advertised, as aforesaid, until about the beginning of the year 1938, as an effective remedy or cure for eczema, psoriasis, itch, ringworm, pimples, acne, dandruff, corns, hives, scabies, athlete’s foot, and various other ailments, disorders, and diseased conditions of the human skin.

Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Kill Itch Germs Quick.
* * * To stop the itch in 30 minutes and quickly heal your skin, just try the guaranteed prescription, Dr. Nixon's Nixoderm.

Guaranteed to quickly clear and heal your skin or money back on return of empty package.

Itch Cause Killed in 7 Minutes.

Your skin has nearly 50 million tiny seams or pores where tiny germs or parasites can hide and cause your skin to itch, crack, peel, burn, also Eczema, Ringworm, Pimples, Acne, Crotch-Itch and Foot Itch. Don't waste time with ordinary methods. You must have a penetrating treatment like the new discovery for stubborn skin troubles called Dr. Nixon's Nixoderm. It goes right in, kills the cause, and stops itch in 7 minutes. In 24 hours, you can see your face getting clear, soft, and smooth. Nixoderm is guaranteed to heal your skin in 10 days or money back on return of empty package. Ask your druggist for guaranteed Nixoderm today.

The aforesaid advertising claims for Nixoderm serve as representations on the part of respondent that said product is an effective remedy or cure for psoriasis, eczema, athlete's foot, itch, ringworm, pimples, acne, dandruff, corn, hives, scabies, and other disorders, ailments, and diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the cause or type of said disorders and ailments, or the condition thereof.
Findings

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, Nixoderm is neither a specific remedy nor an effective cure or treatment for acne, psoriasis, eczema, pimples, dandruff, corns, and the various other diseased conditions of the skin enumerated in the respondent's advertising matter, irrespective of the cause of the disorder or the condition thereof. Ailments and disorders of the human skin, commonly referred to as "skin diseases" arise from many causes and are of two general classes; viz, those of a surface character only and those which are associated with, or arise from, a systemic disturbance. Among the disorders which are sometimes caused by systemic disturbances are eczema, acne, and psoriasis. Nixoderm is not a remedy or an effective treatment for any skin disorder that arises from or is associated with systemic disturbances. In all disorders and ailments of the human skin arising from or associated with systemic or organic disturbance, a thorough diagnosis by an expert is necessary in order to ascertain the cause or causes of the disorder or ailment and the proper treatment therefor.

Nixoderm is not a remedy or an effective treatment for all skin ailments and disorders which are of a surface character only, irrespective of the type or condition of such ailments and disorders. Not all diseased conditions of the skin that are of a surface character only, and which have no systemic origin or connection, can be treated effectively by the same method or by the same medicine. The proper method and the kind of medicine to be used in the treatment of diseased conditions of the skin that are of a surface character only are determined by many factors, the most important of which is the specific cause responsible for the disorder. These causes are so varied that no single formula containing any drug or a combination of drugs is capable of providing adequate treatment for all of such diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the etiological agent, the stage of the diseased condition, the nature of the skin affected, the age of the patient, and other pertinent conditions and circumstances.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Knox Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a medicinal product now designated "Nixoderm" or of any other medicinal product containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparation constitutes an adequate remedy or cure for acne, psoriasis, eczema, pimples, dandruff, corns, or any other ailment or disorder manifested by a diseased condition of the human skin, or constitutes a competent or effective treatment therefor, unless such representations are limited to those cases of such disorders and ailments which are of a surface character only and not caused by, or associated with, a systemic or metabolic disorder.
2. Representing that said preparation constitutes an adequate remedy or cure for all cases of acne, psoriasis, eczema, pimples, or other skin ailments and disorders which are of a surface character only, or constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
In the Matter of

JACK BECKER, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS TRU-VALU HOME SUPPLY

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jack Becker, Complaint 28 F. T. C.

individually and trading as Tru-Valu Home Supply, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Jack Becker, is an individual trading under the name of Tru-Valu Home Supply, with his principal office and place of business located at 611 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of aluminum ware, tableware, dresser sets, dinner sets, doll sets, lamps, ash trays, cigarette lighters and cases, beauty kits, dresser sets, salt and pepper sets with trays, watches, clocks, cameras, carving sets, bedding, clothing, jewelry, cosmetics, bill folds, suit cases, carpet sweepers, toasters, waffle irons, electric grills, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 12, 1938, issued, and on September 13, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Jack Becker, individually and trading as Tru-Valu Home Supply, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 13, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. There­after, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its con­clusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Jack Becker, is an individual trading under the name of Tru-Valu Home Supply, with his principal office and place of business located at 611 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of aluminum ware, tableware, dresser sets, dinner sets, doll sets, lamps, ash trays, cigarette lighters and cases, beauty kits, salt and pepper sets with trays, watches, clocks, cameras, carving sets, bedding, clothing, jewelry, cosmetics, bill folds, suit cases, carpet sweepers, toasters, waffle irons, electric grills, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchan­dise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and cor­porations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar prod­ucts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective rep­resentatives certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof.
Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes, and has furnished, various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said pull cards use the same, and have used the same, in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above found are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above found and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

gations of facts set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jack Becker, individually and trading as Tru-Valu Home Supply, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of aluminum ware, tableware, dresser sets, dinner sets, doll sets, lamps, ash trays, cigarette lighters and cases, beauty kits, salt and pepper sets with trays, watches, clocks, cameras, carving sets, bedding, clothing, jewelry, cosmetics, bill folds, suit cases, carpet sweepers, toasters, waffle irons, electric grills, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof;

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

MORETRENCH CORPORATION

Docket 3262. Complaint, Nov. 9, 1937—Decision, Feb. 6, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of well points, pumps, and equipment used in dewatering wet soil during excavation work, and in sale and distribution thereof in commerce among the various States, and in substantial competition with others engaged in such sale and distribution of similar products—

(a) Represented, by means of catalogs and other literature distributed by it to potential customers throughout the United States, that its well points had an unobstructed water-passing screen area of 350 square inches, and that its competitors' well points had only from 20 to 25 square inches, facts being such representations were misleading and deceptive in that method used for arriving at area of its said product was not used with respect to those of its competitors, quantity of discharge of water in operations involved is limited to diameter of riser pipe through which water must pass, regardless of speed with which same is pumped into well point, diameter of riser pipes of two of its competitors at time in question was larger than its own, and unobstructed water-passing screen areas of products of said two competitors was much greater than stated by it in its said catalog;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that one of its well points was equal to five of those of its competitors, and that its own well points were much easier to get down than competitors', and never clogged up, facts being its well point was less efficient than that of one of its competitors, ease of sinking or jetting a well point is dependent upon many factors, including nature of soil, depth of excavation and other conditions, one well point may be more easily jetted than another under certain conditions, and more difficult under certain other conditions, both its well points and those of others, under certain conditions, will become clogged, and its various representations aforesaid were misleading and deceptive;

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that its well points had two valves, and that such fact added to their efficiency, and that those of its competitors had but one, facts being said circumstances do not affect relative efficiency of several well points, due to their construction upon different mechanical principles, and its statement aforesaid concerning increased efficiency thereof for reason set forth, was false and misleading; and

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that contractors all over the world testified that the operation costs of its well points were always 50 percent lower than those of its competitors, facts being contractors all over the world had not thus testified, though some had furnished it with testimonials containing statements attributed to them prior to the placing upon the market of such competitors' well points illustrated in its catalog;
With effect of misleading purchasers and users of evacuation and pumping equipment into buying its said products in erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of diverting trade unfairly to it from its competitors:

Held, That such practices, under circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

McCole & Reid, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Moretrench Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been, and is, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Moretrench Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located in the town of Rockaway in the State of New Jersey. Said respondent is now, and for many years immediately last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of well points, pumps, and equipment used in dewatering wet soil during excavation work, and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey. There is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade and commerce in said well points, pumps, and equipment so sold and distributed by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and shipment of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Well-point equipment consists of a steel tubular header which is laid around the perimeter of a proposed excavation and attached to said header and inserted into the ground below the depth to which such excavation is to be made is a piece of pipe to which is attached a well point. One or more well-point pumps are attached to said header with which a vacuum is created in the header and in the well points below the ground. The water is then pumped out of the soil and away from the excavation job. Well points are made up of a piece of fluted tubing around which is wrapped a copper screen which acts as a filter and at the bottom is attached the well-point tip or jet head. Said well-point equipment manufactured by the respondent and its competitors is sometimes leased and sometimes sold to contractors. Said manufacturers demonstrate their respective equipment to contractors whenever excavation jobs are let. There are comparatively few manufacturers of such equipment and contractors have become familiar with the equipment of the several manufacturers and can identify them without being advised of the name of the manufacturer.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, said respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products, causes catalogs to be distributed among its prospective customers and customers throughout the United States, in which said catalogs various false and misleading statements and representations are made with respect to the merits of the well-point equipment manufactured by respondent and respondent's competitors. One of said representations is in the form of an illustration of five well points designated by the numbers 1 to 5, respectively, the first one in addition being identified as a Moretrench well point and the other four, although bearing only said numbers, being easily identified by the contracting trade as the respective well points manufactured by specific competitors of respondent. Said pictorial representation is accompanied by a tabulation with respect to said five well points, showing a comparison as to the unobstructed water-passing screen area, the length of screen, the kind of material in screen mesh, number of valves in jetting tip, and percentage of jetting water passing the jetting tip. In said tabulation, respondent's product is designated as "Number 1" and shaded in orange color for emphasis, and represented as excelling the four competitive well points in each of the comparisons listed in said tabulation.
In truth and in fact, said tabulation is misleading and deceptive in that the method employed in arriving at the screen area of respondent's well point was not the same as that used in arriving at the screen area of the competitors' products, as a result of which said competitive products are unfairly and misleadingly shown at great disadvantage as compared with respondent's product and are falsely shown to possess substantially smaller screen areas. The water-passing screen area in a well point constitutes one of the important factors in the efficiency of equipment for pumping subsoil water to the surface for the reason that while all well points will clog up eventually in the course of the pumping operation, a larger screen area will enable a larger quantity of water to be filtered and pumped into the header.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent publishes advertisements in trade publications which have a circulation throughout the United States. In said advertisements, among others, is made the following representation:

"One Moretrench well point is equal to five of any other points, much easier to get down, and never clogs up," say experienced contractors.

In truth and in fact, said representation is false and misleading in that respondent's well point is not equal to five well points of any other manufacturer; and in that all well points do, in fact, clog up in the course of the pumping operation.

Respondent further represents in said advertisements that "operating costs are always 50% lower. Contractors all over the world testify to this." In truth and in fact said statement is false and misleading in that the operating costs of respondent's equipment as compared with the operating costs of the equipment of competing manufacturers is not 50 percent lower nor substantially lower, and contractors all over the world are not in a position to make such comparisons and have not in fact testified as represented by respondent.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinbefore described, respondent is, and has been, in competition with corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and shipment in commerce between the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia of excavation pump and well-point equipment, which said competitors do not misrepresent and have not misrepresented their said products in advertisements and otherwise.

Par. 7. The statements and representations hereinabove set forth have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead the purchasers and users of excavation and pumping equipment into buying respondent's product in the erroneous belief that said representations are true and that said equipment manufactured by respondent will accomplish the results represented in its said catalogs and advertisements. As a result of such false and misleading representations by respondent with respect to its said products, trade has been unfairly diverted to it from its said competitors whose ability to compete successfully with respondent has been and is lessened and injured by the methods of the respondent hereinabove set forth.

Par. 8. The above acts and things done, or caused to be done, by the respondent, were, and are, each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on November 9, A. D. 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Moretrench Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Samuel J. Reid, attorney for the respondent, before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Moretrench Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey. Its principal place of business is at Rockaway, N. J. The respondent is now, and since 1930 has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing well points, pumps, and equipment used in dewatering wet soil during excavation work, and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and since A. D. 1930, has been, in substantial competition with others engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 3. A well-point system consists of a header pipe which is laid around the perimeter of the ground that is to be excavated; riser pipes attached to the header pipe, whose length is determined by the depth of the excavation, and the well point proper. Two pumps are required for the operation of the system. One pump is used to force the water into the well point for the purpose of disintegrating the ground and sinking the point to the desired depth; the other pump is used to create a vacuum in the pipes and thus withdraw from the ground all the ground water possible into the riser and header pipes. The water is finally discharged at some distant point. The well point itself consists of a fine wire screen surrounded by a coarse protective screen, or perforated metal; a valve, or valves, designed to permit the water to be forced through the point, or to close the opening when the ground water is withdrawn, and, finally, the point itself, which in some instances is blunt and in others, sharp. The efficiency of well points depends upon the ease with which water may be pumped out of the ground without clogging up the point, and the speed with which the water may be discharged into the header pipe. The diameter of the riser pipe is, therefore, the limiting factor, other things being equal, as to the speed with which the water may be discharged.

Par. 4. The respondent, by means of catalogs and other literature distributed by it to potential customers throughout the United States, makes the following representations:

(a) That its well points have an unobstructed water-passing screen area of 350 square inches, and that its competitors' well points have only from 20 to 25 square inches.

(b) That one of its well points is equal to five of those of its competitors.

(c) That its well points are much easier to get down than those of its competitors.

(d) That its well points never clog up.
(e) That contractors all over the world testify that the operation costs of its well points are always 50 percent lower than those of its competitors.

Par. 5. The efficient operation of well points, and the costs incident thereto, are largely dependent upon the matters and things concerning which the aforesaid representations are made. The representations appearing in respondent's catalog as to the water-passing screen areas are misleading and deceptive, in that the method used for arriving at the area for respondent's product is not used with respect to the products of its competitors. The respondent uses a coarse wire mesh as the outer covering for its fine-mesh inner screen, while two of its competitors use a smooth, perforated metal tube. The respondent, in determining the unobstructed water-passing screen area of its well point, deducted from the total area of the inner screen, the area of the solder points and the very fine points of immediate contact of the inner screen with the outer mesh only; but in arriving at the areas of two of its competitors' products, it deducted from the total area of the inner screen the entire area of the outer metal tube except for the perforations. The outer metal tube used by the respondent's said competitors does not constitute an obstruction, because the force of the water entering the points draws the flexible inner mesh away from the rigid metal covering. This was not given consideration by the respondent in arriving at the areas stated in its catalog. In the last analysis, the quantity of discharge of water is limited to the diameter of the riser pipe through which the water must pass, and this is true, regardless of the speed with which the water is pumped into the well point.

At the time the hearings were held in this proceeding the diameter of the riser pipes used by respondent and two of its competitors was the same, but at the time respondent distributed its catalog referred to in paragraph 4 hereof, respondent's riser pipe was smaller than those of its said two competitors. The unobstructed water-passing screen areas of the products of two of respondent's competitors are much greater than as stated by respondent in its said catalog.

Par. 6. The statement contained in respondent's catalog that one of its well points is equal to five of those of its competitors is false and misleading. A comparative test showed that respondent's well point was less efficient than that of one of its competitors.

Par. 7. The statement contained in respondent's catalog that its well points are much easier to get down than those of its competitors is misleading and deceptive. The operation of sinking a well point is known as "jetting," and the ease with which this operation may be performed is dependent upon many factors—the nature of the soil, depth of excavations, and various other conditions. One well point may be more easily jetted than another under certain conditions, and more difficult to jet than the other under certain other conditions.

PAR. 8. The statement contained in respondent’s catalog that its well points never clog up is false and misleading. The respondent’s well points, as well as all others, under certain conditions of use, will become clogged.

PAR. 9. The statement contained in respondent’s catalog that contractors all over the world testify that the operating costs of its well points are always 50 percent less than those of its competitors is false and misleading. Contractors all over the world have not testified that the operating costs of respondent’s well points are always 50 percent lower than those of its competitors. Before respondent’s competitors put upon the market their well points illustrated in respondent’s catalog, some contractors furnished the respondent with testimonials containing the statements attributed to them by the respondent.

PAR. 10. In addition to the statements referred to in paragraph 4 hereof, respondent also states in its catalog that its well points have two valves, while those of its competitors have but one, and that this adds to the efficiency of its well points. While it is true that respondent uses two valves and its competitors but one, this does not affect the relative efficiency of the several well points, since they are constructed upon different mechanical principles. The respondent’s statement concerning the increased efficiency of its well points because of the use of two valves is false and misleading.

PAR. 11. All of the aforementioned representations made by respondent are false and misleading and have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead the purchasers and users of evacuation and pumping equipment into buying respondent’s products, in the erroneous belief that said representations are true.

PAR. 12. As a result of the above-mentioned false and misleading representations by respondent, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The practices of respondent as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Samuel J. Reid, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Moretrench Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of well points and well-point systems in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disparaging competitive products through representations that the unobstructed water-passing screen area of competitive well points is smaller than that of its own well points, which representations are based on the use of different methods of calculation, or through representations that its well points equipped with two valves are superior to competitive well points equipped with one valve when the respective well points are constructed on different mechanical principles.

2. Representing that one of its well points is equal to any given number of any competitive well points, goes down much easier and never clogs up.

3. Representing that contractors all over the world testify that operation costs of respondent's well points are always 50 percent or any other set percentage lower than those of competitive products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
SIROIL LABORATORIES, INC.

Docket 3378. Complaint, Apr. 12, 1938—Decision, Feb. 6, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture or compounding of its "Siroil" preparation, consisting of an emulsion of water and mineral oil and other ingredients, for application to the skin and scalp, and in sale and distribution thereof to members of the purchasing public and dealers in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in similar sale and distribution of preparations and products designed and intended for and used in the treatment of the same ailments and conditions for which it recommended its said product, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their respective preparations and therapeutic properties thereof and do not make any other false statements in connection with their sale and distribution; in advertising its said product in newspapers and other publications circulating among the various States and in said District, and in pamphlets, bulletins, and other literature disseminated by mail and otherwise to members of the purchasing public in various States and in said District—

Represented, directly or by implication, that use thereof constituted a competent and effective remedy or cure for psoriasis and dandruff, and competent and effective treatment for said ailments and conditions, facts being it was neither a competent or effective cure, remedy or treatment thereof, would not do more, in any case, than temporarily remove the scales and crusts which are symptomatic of said ailments and conditions, and would not cause skin sores and blotches to disappear permanently, and would not restore the skin to normal texture;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public, as aforesaid, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that such preparation possessed properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish results indicated, and of causing substantial number of such members, by reason of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities thereof, and of placing in hands of retail dealers to whom it sold said preparation for resale to members of the purchasing public, means and instrumentality whereby they mislead and deceive such members into such erroneous and mistaken belief, and into purchasing substantial quantities of said product by reason thereof, and of diverting unfairly thereby trade to it from its competitors who truthfully advertise the effectiveness of their respective preparations; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Siroil Laboratories, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows.

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Siroil Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its offices and principal place of business located at 1214 Griswold Street, Detroit, Mich.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, Siroil Laboratories, Inc., has been for more than 1 year last past, and is now, engaged in the business of manufacturing or compounding, advertising, selling, and distributing a preparation, known and designated as "Siroil," an emulsion of water and mineral oil and other ingredients designed and intended for application to the human skin and scalp, and particularly recommended by respondent for the treatment of dandruff and psoriasis. Said respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, its said products to be sold to dealers and the purchasing public through various advertising mediums. Respondent has caused the same, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Detroit, Mich., to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the aforesaid State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in said product, "Siroil," so sold and distributed by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and has been in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing various other kinds of oils, ointments, salves, tonics, and other preparations designed and intended for application to the human skin or scalp, products intended and used for the same purposes as respondent's product "Siroil," and in selling and distributing the same in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of the business set out and described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its product "Siroil," offered for sale and sold by it, has published and circulated to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States, by mail, newspapers, and advertisements, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters and other literature, false, and misleading statements concerning the nature, value, use and effectiveness of the various products sold by it. Among such statements and representations the following are typical examples:

Siron relieves psoriasis embarrassment.
Siron actually clears up psoriasis lesions.

Happiness Long Denied Her, because of Psoriasis. Few women can be gloriously attractive and win their hearts' desire if they are disfigured by psoriasis lesions. Siron removes these crusts and scales of psoriasis and relieves other of its discomforts.

Siron is a genuine boon. Siron * * * relieves discomforts. You will be surprised at the efficient manner in which it clears up psoriasis lesions.

Psoriasis blemishes. So frequently the ugly lesions of psoriasis prevent charming women from dressing comfortably and becomingly. Naturally they resort to every dress expedient to conceal their psoriasis blemishes. Then these sufferers learn of Siron—try it—and soon the whole situation is changed.

S-I-R-O-I-L has proved a blessing to thousands of women who have Psoriasis. Siron relieves Psoriasis discomforts. It has brought untold joy to women in every walk of life. It has allowed them to enjoy again the opportunity of looking their best at all times.

* * * Do you know what Siron is doing for men and women who have psoriasis? Thousands of them are happy and carefree again because of this remarkable product. * * * Siron actually clears up psoriasis lesions.

* * * I had been taking treatments for over 15 years for it * * * He insisted I try Siron * * * the results were amazing and today all scalp lesions have entirely disappeared.

By means of the foregoing statements and other similar claims, respondent has represented and does now represent that "Siron," when used as directed by respondent, (a) is a competent and effective treatment, remedy or cure for certain ailments, diseases or conditions of the human body, to wit: psoriasis and dandruff; (b) will do more than temporarily remove in some cases, the scales, or crusts symptomatic of said ailments, diseases or conditions; and (c) causes skin sores and blotches to disappear permanently and restores the skin to normal texture.

Such representations are false, in that "Siron," when used as directed by respondent, (a) is not a competent and effective treatment, remedy or cure for either psoriasis or dandruff; (b) will not do more than temporarily remove in some cases, the scales, or crusts symptomatic of said ailments, diseases and conditions; and (c) does not cause skin sores to disappear permanently or restore the skin to normal texture.
Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false representations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that said representations are true; that said product "Siroil" possesses such properties as to constitute it a competent and effective remedy or cure for dandruff and psoriasis lesions, scales, sores, and blotches, and that said product will cure and permanently relieve persons suffering from said complaints and will cause the skin to clear and resume its normal texture. Further, said respondent has placed in the hands of retail dealers in its products and others a means and an instrumentality whereby unscrupulous dealers may further mislead and deceive purchasers into the aforesaid mistaken and erroneous beliefs. Acting in such beliefs, induced by respondent's acts, practices and misrepresentations as herein set out, many purchasers have purchased a substantial quantity of respondent's preparation with the result that trade has been, and is, diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in selling products intended and used for the same purpose in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misrepresent the nature, character, quality, and effectiveness of their respective products. As a consequence thereof injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 12th day of April 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Siroil Laboratories, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 12th day of August 1938, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Siroil Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan and having its office and principal place of business at 1214 Griswold Street in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year past engaged in the business of manufacturing or compounding, selling, and distributing a preparation known and designated as "Siroil," which preparation consists of an emulsion of water and mineral oil and other ingredients. Such preparation is designed and intended for application to the human skin and scalp and is particularly recommended by respondent for the treatment of dandruff and psoriasis. Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public and dealers in said preparation situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Michigan to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with firms, partnerships and individuals selling and distributing preparations and products designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body for which the respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their respective preparations or products and the therapeutic properties thereof and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective preparations or products.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation the respondent has caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having a circulation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in pamphlets, bulletins, and other literature disseminated by respondent by mail and other means to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Siroil relieves psoriasis embarrassment.
Siroil actually clears up psoriasis lesions.

Happiness Long Denied Her, because of Psoriasis. Few women can be glamorously attractive and win their hearts' desire if they are disfigured by psoriasis lesions. Siroil removes these crusts and scales of psoriasis and relieves other of its discomforts.

Siroil is a genuine boon. Siroil • • • relieves discomforts. You will be surprised at the efficient manner in which it clears up psoriasis lesions.

Psoriasis blemishes. So frequently the ugly lesions of psoriasis prevent charming women from dressing comfortably and becomingly. Naturally they resort to every dress expedient to conceal their psoriasis blemishes. Then these sufferers learn of Siroil—try it—and soon the whole situation is changed.

S-I-R-O-I-L has proved a blessing to thousands of women who have Psoriasis. Siroil relieves Psoriasis discomforts. It has brought untold joy to women in every walk of life. It has allowed them to enjoy again the opportunity of looking their best at all times.

* * * Do you know what Siroil is doing for men and women who have psoriasis? Thousands of them are happy and carefree again because of this remarkable product. * * * Siroil actually clears up psoriasis lesions.

* * * I had been taking treatments for over 15 years for it • • • He insisted I try Siroil • • • the results were amazing and today all scalp lesions have entirely disappeared.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent’s preparation and its effectiveness in the treatment of the aforesaid ailments and conditions of the human body and the cause of such ailments and conditions, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that the use of such preparation is a competent and effective remedy or cure for certain ailments, diseases and conditions of the human body, to wit, psoriasis and dandruff; that the use of such preparation is a competent and effective treatment for the aforesaid ailments and conditions of the human body; that the use of such preparation will do more, in some cases, than temporarily remove the scales or crusts symptomatic of said ailments, diseases, and conditions; and that the use of such preparation will cause skin sores and blotches to disappear permanently and restore the skin to normal texture.
Conclusion

Par. 5. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the use of such preparation is not a competent or effective cure or remedy for psoriasis or dandruff. The use of such preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for psoriasis or dandruff. The use of such preparation will not do more, in any case, than temporarily remove the scales or crusts which are symptomatic of said ailments and conditions of the human body. The use of such preparation will not cause skin sores and blotches to disappear permanently and will not restore the skin to normal texture.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, used and disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent’s said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated and causes a substantial number of said members of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s said preparation.

The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, places in the hands of retail dealers, to whom respondent sells said preparation for resale to members of the purchasing public, a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the aforesaid erroneous and mistaken belief and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondent’s preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations or products. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
SIROIL LABORATORIES, INC.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer filed herein on the 12th day of August 1938 by respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Siroil Laboratories, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with their offering for sale, sale and distribution of its medicinal product now designated "Siroil" or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparation removes dandruff, or is a cure or remedy for dandruff or psoriasis, or will clear up psoriasis lesions, or cause skin sores or blotches to disappear permanently.

2. Representing that said preparation removes the crust, scales, lesions, and blemishes caused by psoriasis and relieves other of its discomforts unless such representations are specifically restricted to removing such crusts, scales, lesions, and blemishes in those cases where such conditions are external in character and are located solely in the outer layer of the skin.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of a line of hair preparations which were made for her and designated by numbers, and known as "Koskott" line; in advertising her said various preparations in magazines and newspapers of general circulation throughout the United States—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that said products were effective cures for thin and falling hair, and that they constituted competent cures for ringworm, barbers' itch, pimples, eczema, and scalp disorders; and

(b) Represented that they constituted competent cures for baldness, and that they would grow hair, and that growth could be expected to begin within a few days after use thereof, and that they were scientific remedies which stimulated the blood circulation and afforded nutrition to the hair roots, and that latter were rejuvenated and so affected as to cause hair to grow therefrom, and that preparation would impart a natural shade and color to the hair and succeed where other products failed;

Facts being said products were not effective cures for thin or falling hair, use thereof would not prevent same from falling out or being brushed or combed from the head, they were not competent cures for cause of dandruff or various other ailments and conditions set out, and would not accomplish above results claimed therefor, and did not stimulate blood circulation, etc., and would not succeed where others failed;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such false and misleading representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such advertising and representations, that number of the purchasing public bought substantial quantity of her said products and trade was unfairly diverted to her from others likewise engaged in sale of preparations for the head and hair, and who truthfully represent their products;

Held, That such acts, representations and practices, under circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Mr. J. Bond Smith, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Rose R. Scott, trad-

as Koskott Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Rose R. Scott, is an individual trading and doing business as Koskott Co., with her office and principal place of business at 223 West Thirty-third Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 10 years last past has been engaged in the business of distributing and selling a line of hair preparations known as "Koskott." Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from her place of business in the State of New York to customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said hair preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of hair preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said hair preparations, respondent, by means of advertising circulars and folders, and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers, circulated generally throughout the United States, has made many representations concerning the character and nature of said hair preparations and concerning the results obtainable from their use. Among said representations made by respondent are the following: 1

All of said statements, together with similar statements and advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and of their effectiveness in use. In all of her advertising literature and through other means, respondent directly or by inference, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, represents that said preparations are effective cures for thin or falling hair, and that the use thereof will prevent hair from falling out or being brushed or combed from the head; that

1 The quoted matter set forth at length in the complaint at this point, in which respondent purports to describe the qualities and effectiveness of her said preparations, is also set forth in the findings, infra, at page 318, and for that reason is here omitted in the interest of brevity.

said preparations are competent cures for the cause of dandruff; that said preparations are competent cures for ringworm, barbers' itch, pimples, eczema, and scalp disorders; that said preparations are competent cures for baldness; that said preparations will grow hair; and that the growth of the hair can be expected to begin a few days after using said preparations; that said preparations are scientific remedies and will stimulate the blood circulation, and afford nutrition to the hair roots; that by using said preparations the hair roots are rejuvenated and so affected as to cause hair to grow therefrom; that the use of said preparations will impart a natural shade and color to hair; and that respondent's preparations succeed where others fail.

Par. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the nature and effect of her products when used are grossly exaggerated, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparations are not effective cures for thin or falling hair and the use of the same will not prevent hair from falling out or being brushed or combed from the head. Said preparations are not competent cures for the cause of dandruff. Said preparations are not competent cures for ringworm, barbers' itch, pimples, eczema, and scalp disorders. Said preparations are not competent cures for baldness, will not grow hair and the use of the same will not increase the length of the hair. Users of said preparations cannot procure a growth of hair within a few days or any other period of time from the use of said preparations. By using said preparations the blood circulation is not so stimulated as to afford nutrition to the hair roots. By using said preparations the hair roots are not rejuvenated and so affected as to cause hair to grow therefrom. Said preparations will not impart a natural shade and color to the hair. Respondent's preparations do not succeed where others fail.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who distribute and sell hair preparations who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent in describing her hair products and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors who are engaged in the business of distributing and selling hair preparations, and who truthfully advertise and represent their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 3, 1938, issued and served its complaint, in this proceeding upon the respondent, Rose R. Scott, trading as Koskott Co., charging her with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of said act.

After issuance of said complaint, the respondent filed her answer thereto, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving hearing and all intervening procedure. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Rose R. Scott, is an individual trading and doing business as Koskott Co., with her office and principal place of business at 223 West Thirty-third Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for more than 10 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a line of hair preparations known as "Koskott" preparations, designated by numbers, all of which are manufactured for respondent, are sold and shipped by her to purchasers in States other than the State in which respondent's place of business is located and from which said shipments are made. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent has been and is presently in competition with other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of her said business, respondent, in the sale of her various preparations and in inducing the public to purchase said preparations, has, by means of various advertising circulars and folders, and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers circulated generally throughout the United States, made statements and representations concerning the character and nature of said preparations and concerning the results obtained from their use. Among the said representations made by the respondent are the following:

SOME OF THE HIRSUTAL CONDITIONS WHEREIN KOSKOTT METHOD HAS PROVED HIGHLY EFFECTIVE.

Falling Out, or Combing Out of Hair.

Dandruff, otherwise known as seborrhea or scurf. A diseased condition of the scalp which must be remedied or all hair will be lost.

Hair Brushing Out. It sticks to the brush instead of remaining fast to the scalp, thereby proving the absolute need of prompt attention to save it.

Hair Falling in Patches. (Alopecia Areata.)

Hair Turning Gray—or already gray, or white. Should be darkened gradually to natural shade of youth.

Thin Hair on Upper Lip, or no hair at all where a good mustache is desired.

Ringworm, Barbers’ Itch, Little Pimples and other scalp disorders.

Baldness. In one large spot or in several places.

Hair Disappearing Mysteriously.

The above troubles are some of the most common conditions in which the Koskott Method is asserting its real merit.

Lovely Hair Growth. This famous preparation has often started hair growth in a few days.

KOSKOTT IS A SCIENTIFIC SUCCESSFUL REMEDY

We recommend Koskott for the hair, because it contains the right ingredients to stimulate the direct blood nutrition of the hair, roots in their follicles. It is exactly suited according to the best authorities and latest scientific trials, to eradicate dandruff, overcome the germs of baldness and promote all possible growth of new hair where such a result is therapeutically possible. Research has revealed the cause of dandruff, etc., and the same light of knowledge has made possible the preparation, of the proper remedy. Koskott is guaranteed to remove the spores just described.

The pharmacopeia has been literally ransacked in Koskott Laboratory’s successful search for a group of ingredients with the power to react through the scalp upon the blood circulation which feeds the hair follicles. Such is the formula for Koskott. That is why it “makes good” in so large a percentange of cases. Koskott tends to make the hair grow longer and more plentiful, or to promote hair growth where there has been baldness. Koskott is aimed to remedy the subnormal state inside by waking up the cells and tissues to renewed life. The arousing takes place because the therapeutical properties of Koskott consist of stirring up the circulation of the blood as the application is rubbed in. The circulation being thus restored, the hair roots in the scalp should be so revivified as to push forth new hair growth. The follicles also gain strength to throw off any parasites that may nestle into the glands around the hair roots.

Dandruff, Thin or Splitting Hairs, Falling Hairs, Ordinary Baldness, need Koskott Nos. 1, 2, and 3.

Baldness in Patches, Ringworm, Barbers' Itch, Eczema on Scalp, require Koskott Nos. 2, 3, and 5.

Why Others Fail and Koskott Succeeds.

Koskott No. 1 is the hair stimulator or feeder which gives timely aid to the hair shaft when it is visible above the scalp. Koskott Method is efficacious in many cases where all else has failed.

Koskott to Encourage Hair Growth.

This famous preparation is for dandruff, thinning hair, and hair loss preceding several forms of baldness.

Par. 3. The said statements, together with similar statements and representations, serve as representations to members of the purchasing public as properly descriptive of respondent's products and of their effectiveness in use. The use of such statements misleads members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's products are effective cures for thin and falling hair; that the use thereof will prevent hair from falling out or being brushed or combed from the head; that said preparations are competent cures for the cause of dandruff; that said preparations are competent cures for ringworm, barbers' itch, pimples, eczema, and scalp disorders; are competent cures for baldness; will grow hair; that the growth of hair can be expected to begin a few days after using said preparations; that said preparations are scientific remedies and will stimulate the blood circulation, and afford nutrition to the hair roots; that the hair roots are rejuvenated and so affected as to cause hair to grow therefrom; said preparation will impart a natural shade and color to the hair; and will succeed where other preparations fail.

Par. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of the products when used are false and misleading in that respondent's preparations are not effective cures for thin or falling hair and the use of same will not prevent hair from falling out or being brushed or combed from the head. Said preparations are not competent cures for the cause of dandruff. Said preparations are not competent cures for ringworm, barbers' itch, pimples, eczema, and scalp disorders. Said preparations are not competent cures for baldness, will not grow hair on bald heads, and the use of same will not increase the length of the hair. Users of said preparations cannot procure a growth of hair within a few days of its use or any other period of time from the use of said preparations. By using said preparations the blood circulation is not so stimulated as to afford nutrition to the hair roots. By using the said preparations the hair roots are not rejuvenated and so affected as to cause hair to grow therefrom. Said preparations will not impart a natural shade and color to the hair. Said preparations will not succeed where others fail.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the false, misleading, and untrue representations made by respondent in offering for sale and selling her products were and are calculated to, and had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief, induced by the advertising and representations of the respondent, as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said products, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale of preparations for the head and hair who truthfully advertise their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, representations, and practices of the respondent, Rose R. Scott, trading as Koskott Co., as herein found, have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that she waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act,

It is ordered, That the respondent, Rose R. Scott, individually and trading as Koskott Co., or trading under any other name, her agents, servants, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of any of her cosmetic preparations now designated by the name Koskott, or any other cosmetic preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under that name or under any other name, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisements, represent, directly or by implication, that said preparations will stop falling hair or prevent baldness, or will grow hair or have any effect on the growth of hair; that said preparations constitute a remedy or cure for dandruff, pimples, eczema, barbers' itch or ringworm, or other scalp disorders, or a competent or effective treatment for any of said conditions; that said preparations are of the highest medical, pharmaceutical or scientific efficiency; that said preparations will rejuvenate the hair roots or will stimulate the circulation, or will have any substantial beneficial effect on either hair roots or circulation; or that said preparations will impart a natural shade or color to the hair or will act in any manner other than as a hair dye.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF EXCELSIOR LABORATORY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3648. Complaint, Nov. 8, 1938—Decision, Feb. 6, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in preparation, sale, and distribution of its so-called D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin E Added, and D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin B-G Added, to members of the purchasing public in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of medicinal and other preparations designed and intended for and used in treatment of same ailments and conditions for which it recommended use of its said products, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their respective preparations or therapeutic properties thereof and who do not make any other false statements in connection with their sale and distribution—

(a) Represented in false advertisements which is disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and in commerce and otherwise, directly and by implication, that vitamin E is the "Vitality Vitamin," and that, of all the elements discovered by science, none is so vital as said vitamin E, and that such vitamin had been added to its said "Garlic Tablets," and that use of its preparations could be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle function, abdominal strength, and vital resistance;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that use thereof stimulated the appetite and growth and strengthened intestines and toned up nerve system and fortified the system against the onslaught of old-age ailments and normalized glandular action;

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that use thereof purified the blood stream and supplied body building elements for mothers and growing children and minerals needed by the body, and gave results impossible to be had from garlic in any other form; and

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that use of said preparations constituted effective remedies for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory, and general debility, and that they were antiseptics and guaranteed;

Facts being vitamin E cannot be properly designated as the "Vitality Vitamin" and is not the most vital of all the elements discovered by science, the many ailments and symptoms for which it recommended its said preparations are caused by various physical disorders unrelated to deficiencies in the various ingredients of which it claims its preparations to be composed, and use thereof cannot be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle functions, abdominal strength, and vital resistance, or to accomplish various other results above set forth, preparations in question are not antiseptics, many others give equally great beneficial results, it does not guarantee its preparations as to effectiveness in use, but its guarantee is limited to refund of purchase price, and its said representations were grossly exaggerated and misleading and constituted false advertisements, use of which induces or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, purchase of its said preparations; and
(c) Represented to prospective purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, that it would give to such purchasers a specified amount of said preparations free of charge, facts being it does not thus give any of its said products to purchasers but price of such purported free goods is included in price of those purchased.

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that its preparations possessed properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish results indicated, and of causing substantial portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, to purchase substantial quantities of its said products, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to it from its competitors in commerce as aforesaid, who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Excelsior Laboratory, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Excelsior Laboratory, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its home office and principal place of business located at 205 East 42nd Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and has been for some years last past engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling in commerce as herein set out certain preparations designated D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin E Added, and D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin B-G Added.

Par. 2. Said respondent while engaged in business as aforesaid causes said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. At all times since the organization of respondent's corporation it has maintained a course of trade in said products sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is now and has been at all times herein mentioned in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia products prepared, distributed, and sold for the same purpose and use for which respondent's products are prepared, distributed, and sold.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has disseminated and caused to be disseminated false advertisements—

1. By the United States mails and in commerce by other means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the aforesaid preparations; and

2. By other means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce of said preparations.

Among and typical of representations thus made by the respondent are the following:

Is your blood pressure like a jumping jack?—thousands report 50 to 75 points drop in blood pressure, nerves steadier, new strength and energy taking D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets—the only pleasant, effective way to take garlic for High Blood Pressure, Dizziness, Nerves, Sleeplessness.

D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets combat deficiency ailments by supplying vital minerals and ridding system of toxins.

Garlic builds and fortifies the system against the onslaught of old age ailments by supplying the body with rich, vital minerals and purifying the blood stream of toxins.

When exhaustion of essential minerals * * * gastric disorders * * * intestinal putrefaction * * * and other distressing symptoms bring about premature aging, garlic will have a definite happy effect.

Vitality Vitamin—

Of all the elements discovered by science none is so vital as Vitamin E now added to D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets—helps to maintain and improve muscle function, abdominal strength and vital resistance. Also important where Vitamin E deficiency results in abnormal functional weakness and debility.

Vitamin B-G now contained in D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets is another garlic vitamin combination: stimulates appetite and growth, tones up the system, sup Plies body building elements for expectant mothers, convalescents and growing children.

Strengthens the intestines.

Standard plus "nerve Vitamin B".

All of said statements together with many other similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising purport to be descriptive of respondent's products, D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, Vitamin E Added, and D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, Vitamin B-G Added. In all of respondent's advertising matter herein set out and through other statements of like import and effect the respondent represents that vitamin E is the "Vitality Vitamin" and that of all the elements discovered by science none is so vital as vitamin E. Respondent further represents that its products can be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle function; to help maintain and improve abdominal strength; to help maintain and improve vital resistance; to stimulate the appetite and growth; to strengthen the intestines; to tone up the nerve system; to fortify the system against the onslaught of old-age ailments; to normalize glandular action; to purify the blood stream; to supply body-building elements for expectant mothers and growing children; to supply minerals needed by the body; to give results impossible to obtain from garlic in any other form; that its products are effective remedies for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory and general debility, and that its products are antiseptics, and are guaranteed.

Par. 5. The representations made by the respondent with reference to the therapeutic value of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact vitamin E cannot be properly designated as the "Vitality Vitamin" and is not the most vital of all the elements discovered by science. Respondent's products cannot be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle functions, abdominal strength, and vital resistance. Neither will they stimulate growth or strengthen the intestines. Said products are not effective as nerve remedies and cannot be relied upon to tone up the nerve system. Said products will in no way ward off the onslaught of old age nor fortify the system against the loss of vitality. Said products will not remove impurities from the blood stream, neither will they correct abnormal glandular action. Said products are not effective treatments nor adequate remedies for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory, or general debility. Said products are not antiseptics. Many other preparations which are sold give beneficial results as great as the results... obtained from the use of respondent's products. Respondent does not guarantee its products as to their effectiveness, but the guarantee is limited to the refund of the purchase price.

The many ailments and symptoms hereinabove set out for the treatment of which the respondent recommends its products are caused by various physical disorders unrelated to deficiencies of the various ingredients of which respondent claims its products are composed.

Par. 6. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in the manner above described induces or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of drugs, to wit: Respondent's preparations.

Par. 7. The respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products represents that it will give to purchasers of its products a specified amount of its products free of charge. Such representation is false and misleading, for in truth and in fact the respondent does not give any of its products to purchasers but the price of the purported free goods is included in the price of the goods purchased.

Par. 8. There are among respondent's competitors many who prepare, distribute, and sell preparations which are prepared, distributed, and sold for the same purpose and use for which respondent's products are prepared, distributed, and sold and who do not misrepresent the quality or therapeutic value of their respective products, or represent that any of their products are given free.

Par. 9. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating and describing its products and the therapeutic value thereof as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of the said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts, advertisements, and misrepresentations of respondent as hereinabove detailed, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling products prepared, intended, and sold for the same and similar purposes for which respondent prepares and sells its products. As a result thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce.
among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Excelsior Laboratory, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and formerly having had its office and principal place of business at 205 East Forty-second Street, in the city of New York, State of New York, and being now located at 70 Spring Hill Avenue, St. George, Staten Island, N. Y.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and has been for some years last past, engaged in the business of preparing, selling, and distributing certain preparations designated as D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets, D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin E Added, and D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets with Vitamin B-G Added. Respondent sells said preparations to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes the said preparations, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States. of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparations among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals selling and distributing medicinal and other preparations designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparations. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not, in any manner, misrepresent their respective preparations or the therapeutic properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective preparations.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent has disseminated and caused to be disseminated false advertisements—

1. By the United States mails and in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by other means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the aforesaid preparations; and

2. By other means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of said preparations.

Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Is your blood pressure like a jumping jack?—thousands report 50 to 75 points drop in blood pressure, nerves steadier, new strength and energy taking D. Gosewisch's Garlic Tablets—the only pleasant, effective way to take garlic for High Blood Pressure, Dizziness, Nerves, Sleeplessness.

Tones up the nerve system.
Strengthens the intestines.
Standard plus "nerve Vitamin B".

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparations and their effectiveness in the treatment of ailments and conditions of the human body and the cause of such ailments and conditions, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that vitamin E is the "Vitality Vitamin" and that of all the elements discovered by science, none is so vital as vitamin E; that the use of such preparations can be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle function, abdominal strength, and vital resistance; that the use of such preparations stimulates the appetite and growth, strengthens the intestines, tones up the nerve system, fortifies the system against the onslaught of old-age ailments, and normalizes glandular action; that the use of such preparations purifies the blood stream, supplies body building elements for expectant mothers and growing children, and supplies minerals needed by the body; that the use of such preparations gives results impossible to obtain from garlic in any other form; that the use of such preparations constitutes effective remedies for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory, and general debility; and that such preparations are antiseptics and are guaranteed.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations by the respondent relative to the therapeutic value of said preparations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact vitamin E cannot be properly designated as the "Vitality Vitamin" and is not the most vital of all the elements discovered by science. The use of respondent's said preparations cannot be relied upon to help maintain and improve muscle functions, abdominal strength, and vital resistance. The use of such preparations will not stimulate growth or strengthen the intestines. The use of such preparations is not effective as nerve remedies and cannot be relied upon to tone up the nerve system. The use of such preparations will in no way ward off the onslaught of old age or fortify the system against the loss of vitality. The use of such preparations will not remove impurities from the blood stream, nor will it correct abnormal glandular function. Said preparations are not effective treatments or adequate remedies for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory, or general debility. Said preparations are not antiseptics. Many other preparations which are sold give beneficial results as great as the results obtained from the use of respondent's said preparations. Respondent does not guarantee its preparations as to their effectiveness in use, but the guarantee is limited to the refund of the purchase price.

The many ailments and symptoms hereinabove set out, for the treatment of which the respondent recommends its said preparations, are caused by various physical disorders unrelated to deficiencies in the various ingredients of which respondent claims its preparations are composed.

Par. 7. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements, disseminated in the manner above described, induces, or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of drugs, to wit: Respondent's preparations.

Par. 8. The respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparations, represents to prospective purchasers of such preparations, situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, that it will give to such purchasers a specified amount of such preparations free of charge. Such representation is false and misleading, for, in truth and in fact, the respondent does not give any of its preparations to purchasers free of charge, but the price of the purported free goods is included in the price of the goods purchased.

Par. 9. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparations, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparations possess the properties claimed and represented, and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparations.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and states that it waives hearing on the charges set forth in said complaint and that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the case might proceed to final hearing upon the record, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Excelsior Laboratory, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a medicinal preparation in tablet form designated by the names of D. Gosewisch's garlic tablets, D. Gosewisch's garlic tablets with vitamin E added, and D. Gosewisch's garlic tablets with vitamin D-G added, or any other medicine composed of substantially similar ingredients, whether sold under those names or under any other name, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said tablets, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication, that such garlic tablets constitute a remedy or cure for high blood pressure, loss of vitality, impurities of the bloodstream, abnormal glandular functions, or will help maintain and improve muscle functions or give abdominal strength or vital resistance, or will stimulate growth or strengthen the intestines, or be an effective nerve remedy or tone up the nerve system or ward off the onslaught of old age, or that it is a remedy for insomnia, dizzy spells, rising blood pressure, bad memory, or general debility, or that such garlic tablets constitute a competent, effective treatment for any such diseases or ailments other than as an aid in soothing the nervous system, or that they are antiseptic, or that they are guaranteed unless such guarantee is limited to the refund of the purchase price; that "Vitamin E is the Vitality Vitamin" or is the most vital of all elements discovered by science.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

MORRIS WHITE MFG. CO., INC., AND STYLECRAFT LEATHER GOODS COMPANY, INC.

Where a corporation and its subsidiary engaged in manufacture of leather handbags, and in sale thereof to purchasers in various States, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, and in sale and distribution in interstate commerce of leather goods, including leather handbags—

(a) Represented certain group of leather handbags or purses manufactured and marketed by them as being made from "imported French glove leather," facts being that, while kind of leather used was occasionally employed in manufacture of such articles, it was not that leather known to trade and accredited by industry as "glove leather," but lacked proper pliability usually credited to such last-named leather; and

(b) Placed within leather handbags folder bearing words "THE FIFTH AVENUE VANITY, a Ladies' Vanity and Bag. Pat. No. 297634," facts being no patent had been applied for or issued on said product and figure given was that of a registration number owned by them;

With effect of misleading and deceiving portion of purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that said products, as case might be, were made from same leather as gloves and were "glove leather," and that they were patented, and with result that, acting in such erroneous beliefs, said public was induced to purchase, and purchased, their said products and thereby diverted trade to them from competitors, among whom there are dealers and distributors of similar products used for similar purposes who do not in any way misrepresent the same to purchasers thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., have been and are now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint and states its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., is a corporation organized in 1932, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 362 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and its factory located at Bridgeport, Conn.

Par. 2. Respondent, Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., is a corporation organized in 1933, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its factory located at Scranton, Pa., and its principal place of business at 362 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

Par. 3. Both of said corporations are under one ownership and management, and both are engaged in the manufacture of ladies' handbags at the factories hereinabove designated. They occupy the same offices.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of said businesses, respondents ship, or cause to be shipped or transported their said products, when sold, from the said State of New York or the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, or in the State of origin of such shipment. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade in commerce in the said products so sold by the respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now and have been during all the time herein mentioned, engaged in substantial competition with various other corporations, firms, and individuals selling or offering for sale ladies' handbags to members of the general public in the manner set out in the preceding paragraph hereof in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its business respondent, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc. manufactured in its said factory at Bridgeport, Conn., ladies' leather handbags and placed therein a folder bearing the following words:

The Fifth Ave. Vanity

A Handy Vanity Handbag

Pat. No. 297634

and delivered said products to said respondent, Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., which last-named company sold, shipped, and delivered the same containing such folder to customers residing in States outside of the State of New York or in the State of the origin of such shipment. In truth and in fact, no patent has been applied for or issued on said product.

Par. 7. The respondent, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc. manufactures ladies' leather handbags in several designs, to which product it causes to be attached a tag reading: "Imported French Glove Leather," and so tagged, labeled, designated, and represented, sold, and distributed said products among its said customers in various States of the United States. In truth and in fact, the products so tagged, labeled, designated, and represented are not and were not made of glove leather as the term is generally understood by the purchasing public.

Par. 8. The above and foregoing representations of respondents, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., as described in paragraph 6 above have and have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such products are patented, when such is not the fact; and, acting in such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public have been induced to purchase and have purchased respondents' products, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from their said competitors.

Par. 9. The use of the words "Glove Leather" as a brand, stamp, or label for the products of the respondent, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., as described in paragraph 7 above, has and has had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the leather of which such products are manufactured is the same as that from which gloves are generally made and is glove leather, when such is not the fact; and, acting in such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public have been induced to purchase and have purchased respondent's products, thereby diverting trade to the respondent from its said competitors.

Par. 10. There are among the competitors of respondent, mentioned in paragraph 5 hereof, dealers, and distributors of products similar in kind and used for the same purpose, who do not in any way misrepresent their said products to purchasers thereof.

Par. 11. The above acts and things done or caused to be done by the said respondents were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's said competitors, and each and all constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 8, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondents, through counsel, filed their answer to said complaint, which answer was received by the Commission February 27, 1937. Thereafter, on June 27, 1938, a hearing in New York City was set before a trial examiner theretofore duly appointed, and at said hearing respondents, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., being present by their respective presidents and vice presidents, and by their attorney of record, tendered a statement for the record in lieu of, and in substitution for all sworn evidence, and the attorney for the Commission having agreed to the entrance upon the record of said statement in lieu of, and in substitution for the taking of testimony, a stipulation, as shown in the record, was made and entered into.

Thereafter this proceeding came on for final hearing upon the record, and brief of the attorney for the Commission, respondents having filed no brief herein, although opportunity was given them therefore, and the Commission having duly considered the record, and being fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., is a corporation organized in 1932, under the laws of the State of New York. Respondent, Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., is a corporation organized in 1933 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. Both of said corporations are under one ownership and management, and both are engaged in the manufacture of leather handbags at factories owned and operated by respondents located at Scranton, Pa., and Bridgeport, Conn. Respondents occupy the same offices, located at 362 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y. Morris White is president of each respondent corporation, while Abe White is vice president of each. When sales of respondents' leather handbags are made, respondents cause said handbags to be transported from the place of manufacture thereof to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.
In the course and conduct of their business, respondents Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., are in substantial competition with other persons, copartnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing leather goods, including leather handbags, in interstate commerce.

Par. 3. Respondents, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc. and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., in 1935 manufactured and marketed certain leather handbags or purses designated by respondents as "Catalogue No. 606." These handbags or purses were manufactured at respondents' place of business in Bridgeport, Conn., and shipped from that point by respondents through use of common public carrier to respondents' customers, some of which were located in States other than the State of Connecticut. This particular group of leather handbags or purses were further represented as being made from "imported French glove leather." The leather used in the manufacture of this particular group of handbags or purses, although occasionally used in the manufacture of such articles, is not that leather known to the trade and accredited by the industry as "glove leather." The distinction between the leather used in the manufacture of said articles and "glove leather" is that such leather lacks the proper pliability usually accredited to "glove leather."

Par. 4. Respondent Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., in the course and conduct of its business, manufactured in its factory located at Bridgeport, Conn., ladies' leather handbags and placed within said ladies' leather handbags a folder bearing the following words: "THE FIFTH AVENUE VANITY a Ladies' Vanity and Bag. Pat. No. 297634." In truth and in fact no patent had been applied for or issued on said product. The number "297634" is that of a registration number owned by the respondent corporations.

Par. 5. The Commission finds that the representations of respondents Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., had, and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived a portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such products are patented, when such is not the fact; and, acting in such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public have been induced to purchase, and have purchased respondents' products, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from their competitors.

Par. 6. The Commission further finds that the use by respondent Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., of the words "Glove Leather" as a brand, stamp, or label, to describe its products, had, and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived a portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the leather of which such products are manufactured is the same as that from which gloves are generally made, and is "Glove Leather," when such is not the fact; and, acting in such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public have been induced to purchase, and have purchased respondent's products, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its said competitors.

Par. 7. There are, among the competitors of respondents, dealers and distributors of similar products used for similar purposes who do not in any way misrepresent their said products to purchasers thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondents as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Morris White Mfg. Co., Inc., and Stylecraft Leather Goods Co., Inc., their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of leather goods in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

(a) From representing, through the use of the words “Imported French Glove Leather,” as descriptive of the leather of which their leather goods are made, that such leather is “glove leather” or has the pliability of “glove leather” unless and until “glove leather” is actually used in making such leather goods.

(b) From representing, through the use of the word “Pat.”, in connection or conjunction with a number or numbers attached to or affixed upon leather goods, that the particular leather goods to which the same are attached or affixed, are patented, unless and until the same are actually patented.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where a corporation and an individual engaged at same address in assembling fountain pens and pencils, and in selling assembled products to jobbers and dealers in other States, in competition with fountain pens and pencils of other dealers, assemblers, and manufacturers also engaged in interstate commerce—

Caused to be stamped or imprinted upon certain of the pen points used by them in the fountain pens which they assembled, figure and letters “14K” or “14KT,” in prominent and conspicuous type, together with words “Durlum” or “Duripoint,” as case might be, and words “Gold plate” in type of approximately half the size of numbers and letters “14KT,” and at a distance therefrom so as to be completely, or almost completely, obscured through insertion of pen points to sufficient degree within barrel of pens, and thus imitated and simulated the stamping or marking on gold pen points of 14 karat fineness and carried false impression that their said products were composed of some kind of gold or of gold alloy of such fineness, facts being they were made from stainless steel thinly gold plated; with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such belief thus induced, that a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from those engaged in preparation, distribution and sale of fountain pens in commerce, and who truthfully brand or label the same; to the injury of competition in commerce among the States and in the District of Columbia:

Held, That such practices, under the conditions and circumstances above described, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.
Mr. Morton Nesmith for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., a corporation, and Harry Sachnoff, an individual, herein-after referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said
ARGO PEN-PENCIL CO., INC., ET AL. 341

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 220 Broadway, in the city of New York, State of New York. The respondent, Harry Sachnoff, is an individual, doing business at the same address. The respondents, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., and Harry Sachnoff, are engaged in the business of assembling, selling, and distributing fountain pens and pencils at wholesale, between and among the different States of the United States. The respondent, Harry Sachnoff, is the president of, and owner of virtually all of the capital stock of, the Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc. In the course and conduct of their said business the respondents have caused and still cause the fountain pens and pencils in which they deal to be transported from their said place of business in New York into and through other States of the United States to various retailers located at points in such other States. Said respondents are in competition with other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the business of assembling, selling, and transporting fountain pens and pencils in commerce between and among the several States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. The respondents, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., and Harry Sachnoff, in the course and conduct of their said business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and selling their fountain pens and pencils in interstate commerce, have caused and still cause to be stamped or imprinted upon certain of the pen points which they use in the fountain pens so assembled by them, the following:

Duripoint
KT.
Gold plate

Said fountain pens so assembled with the above-described and imprinted pen point, have been and are sold by the respondents in commerce as herein described. The words "Gold plate" appearing on the above-described pen points are imprinted or stamped below and at such a distance from the figures and letters "14 KT." that when the pen points are inserted to a sufficient degree within the barrel of the pens, the said words "Gold plate" are completely or almost completely obscured or concealed. As a result, when the pen point is inserted to a sufficient degree in the barrel of the pen with only the remaining letters, words, and figures, "Duripoint, 14 KT." appearing, said words, letters, and figures imitate and simulate the stamping and marking on solid gold pen points of 14 carat fineness and carry the impression that respondents' products are composed of some kind of gold or gold alloy of 14 carats in fineness.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact the pen points which respondents cause to be imprinted or stamped "Duripoint 14 KT. Gold plate" are manufactured from steel or chrome rustless steel, thinly electroplated by a gold wash process. Said points are not composed of gold or a gold alloy and are not 14 carats in fineness.

Par. 4. The respondents, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., and Harry Sachnoff, ship and deliver to their retail customers their fountain pens with the pen points so branded and stamped and said retailers resell said products to the consuming public so branded and stamped.

Par. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondents many persons, firms, and corporations who manufacture, assemble, sell, and distribute fountain pens and pencils in interstate commerce and who truthfully brand or label their products.

Par. 6. The acts, practices, and representations of the respondents herein detailed, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its fountain pens, were calculated to, had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said pen points are made of gold or some gold alloy of the equivalent of 14 carats in fineness and into the purchase of respondents' fountain pens in and on account of such beliefs so induced. Further, the branding or stamping of said pen points by the respondents in the manner herein described places in the hands of retail dealers of their products an instrument and a means whereby such dealers may commit a fraud upon purchasers by inserting the pen points into the barrels of the pens to such an extent that the words "Gold plate" become wholly or partially concealed and not clearly readable if such had not theretofore been done and thus mislead and deceive said purchaser into the erroneous belief above described and into the purchase of said products on account thereof. As a result trade has been unfairly diverted from respondents' competitors and said competitors have been otherwise injured as a result of respondents' practices in interstate commerce.

Par. 7. The above alleged acts and things done by the respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of the competitors of respondents in interstate commerce and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 7th day of July 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., and Harry Sachnoff, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, and the failure of respondent to file answer thereto, testimony and evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Morton Nesmith, attorney for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it; and said testimony and evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and evidence and brief in support of complaint (respondent having waived filing of brief); and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent Harry Sachnoff is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc. The respondent Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. The principal place of business of both respondents is located at 220 Broadway, city of New York, State of New York. Said respondent Harry Sachnoff is an individual doing business at the same address. Said respondents Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc. and Harry Sachnoff are engaged in the business of assembling and selling fountain pens and pencils at wholesale; said fountain pen parts are and were purchased from various manufacturers and dealers of said pens and assembled by respondents and sold and shipped from said respondents' place of business located in the State of New York to jobbers and dealers in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and are sold in competition with fountain pens and pencils of other dealers, assemblers, and manufacturers who are also engaged in interstate commerce.

Par. 2. Said respondents, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., and Harry Sachnoff, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and selling their fountain pens and pencils in interstate commerce, have caused and still cause to be stamped or imprinted upon certain of the pen points which they use in the fountain pens so assembled by them, the following:

Durium 14
K
Gold Plate

and Duripoint

14Kt.
Gold Plate

Said fountain pens so assembled, with the above described and imprinted pen points, have been and are sold by respondents in commerce as herein described. The words "Gold plate" appearing on the above-described pen points are imprinted or stamped below and at such distance from the figures and letters "14Kt." that when the pen points are inserted to a sufficient degree within the barrel of the pens, the said words "Gold plate" are completely or almost completely obscured and concealed. As a result, when the pen point is inserted to a sufficient degree in the barrel of the pen with only the remaining letters, wording and figures "Durium 14K" and "Duripoint 14Kt." appearing, said words, letters, and figures imitate and simulate the stamping or marking on gold pen points of 14 karat fineness and carry the impression that said respondents' products are composed of some kind of gold or gold alloy of 14 carat in fineness.

In truth and in fact, the pen points which said respondents cause to be imprinted or stamped "Duripoint 14" and "Durium 14K" are not composed of gold or gold alloy and are not 14 carat fineness, but are manufactured from stainless steel and are thinly gold plated. Also, on said pen points the number and letters "14Kt." are in prominent and conspicuous type, and the words "Gold plate" are in type approximately half the size of said numbers and letters "14Kt."

Par. 3. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondents as heretofore set forth in offering for sale and selling their products had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of these mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and misrepresentations of said respondents as here-tofore enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling fountain pens in commerce among and between the various States of the United States who truthfully brand or label such fountain pens. In consequence thereof injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The practices of said respondents under the conditions and circumstances described in the foregoing findings as to the facts are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Argo Pen-Pencil Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, and respondent, Harry Sachnoff, and their respective agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the assembling, offering for sale, sale, and distribution of fountain pens and fountain pen points or nibs in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of brands, marks or stamping containing the letters "K" or "KT" either alone or in conjunction with any other letters, figures, words, or designs indicative of gold carat fineness, or through any other means or device, or in any manner that their plated fountain pen points or nibs are gold of any specific carat fineness or are gold.
2. Using brands, marks, or stamping containing the letters "K" or "KT" in conjunction with other letters or words indicative of gold plating on their plated fountain pen points or nibs unless such letters or words indicative of gold plating appear in immediate conjunction with the letters "K" or "KT" in equally prominent and conspicuous type and are so located on said fountain pen points or nibs as to be incapable of being concealed.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

THEODORE H. KOOLISH, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS UNIVERSAL SPECIALTIES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of various articles of merchandise, including, among others, rotary and pendulum clocks, radios, electric shavers, and cameras; in soliciting and distributing his said products through various devices and plans of merchandising which he furnished and which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes through which such merchandise was distributed to consumers wholly by lot or chance—

Distributed to public certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements depicting his merchandise, and certain circulars explaining his plan of selling same, under which merchandise premiums or prizes were allotted to operators of the cards, and in accordance with which, as case might be, customers paid for chances amounts determined by numbers pushed, or nothing, and as extra winners, in case of some, received for certain numbers Ever Sharp Pencils, and received clock or other item being thus distributed, in accordance with success or failure in selecting feminine name corresponding to that concealed under card's master disk, and thereby conducted lotteries, and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, in sale of his said merchandise, contrary to public policy as long established by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established policy of the United States Government, and in competition with those engaged in sale and distribution in similar commerce of like and similar articles and who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers were attracted by element of chance involved in his said sales method, and were thereby induced to buy his said products in preference to same or similar goods of competitors who did not and do not use such or equivalent methods, and public, by reason of such preference, purchased substantial volume of his said goods and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors aforesaid:

Heard, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Theodore H. Koolish, individually and trading as Universal Specialties Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual trading under the name and style, Universal Specialties Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 538 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling various articles of merchandise, including, among others, clocks, radios, food mixers, toasters, roasters, washing machines, cameras, and automatic razors, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. He causes said merchandise when sold to be shipped and transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois into and through other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in interstate commerce, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The methods and practices adopted and used by respondent are substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the public through the United States mails in interstate commerce certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of his merchandise and circulars explaining respondent’s plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards. Said push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked “Push” below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the cards. The push cards have a master disk, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

The other push cards bear similar legends, but vary in detail. Such variations cover the merchandise to be distributed, the quantity thereof and the price to be paid therefor. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. Sales of merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. The fact as to whether a customer receives a specified article of merchandise or nothing for the amount paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which a customer pays for a particular push is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push cards, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 22, 1937, issued, and on July 23, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Theodore H. Koolish, individually and trading as Universal Specialties Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief), and oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Theodore H. Koolish, is an individual trading under the name and style of Universal Specialties Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 538 South Dearborn Street, city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent is now and has been since September 1936, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing various articles of merchandise, including, among others, clocks, radios, food mixers, toasters, roasters, washing machines, cameras; and automatic razors, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now and has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and with corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In soliciting the sale of and selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent furnishes various devices and plans of merchandising which involves the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the consumers wholly by lot or chance.

The methods used by respondent to sell his merchandise are as follows:

Respondent distributes to the public certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards. Along with the foregoing the respondent also encloses order blanks and advertisements which contain illustrations and pictures of his merchandise. Respondent also encloses certain circulars which explain his plan of selling the merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards.

Each of the aforesaid push cards bears a number of feminine names and on the reverse side of each card is a number of blank spaces opposite an alphabetical list of girls names for writing in the names of customers who purchase chances on the card.

Each push card has a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "Push." Below each disk is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. Each push card has a master disk, concealed within which is one of the feminine names.

When all the disks have been selected and the master seal removed, the person who selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise specified without further charge. In this manner respondent's merchandise was distributed to the public. Among the items so distributed by means of the push card are the following: The New Roxboro Pendulum Clock, the Venus Rotary Clock, the Automatic Vibro Shaver, V-16 Candid Camera, and the Marvel Electric Dry Shaver.

Customers pay in cents the amount of money indicated by the number revealed when the disk is punched or "pushed" by them.

On some of the cards customers selecting numbers higher than 29 paid only 29 cents and on other cards customers selecting numbers higher than 35 paid only 35 cents.

Many of the cards also designated four numbers as "Extra Winners" and customers selecting any one of the four numbers so designated on the face of said cards received Wahl Ever Sharp Pencils and other items of merchandise.

Customers selecting names which do not correspond with the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay, except customers selecting those numbers which are "Extra Winners," or the numbers designated on the card as free numbers.

In this manner the public is induced and persuaded into purchasing chances from said push cards in the hope of selecting a prize winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for the price of 29 cents or 35 cents or less, or free of charge.

Respondent's merchandise is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which a customer pays for a chance, or whether the same is free of charge is determined wholly by lot or chance.
By use of the method above described, the respondent has sold between 2,000 and 3,000 Rotary Clocks; between 1,000 and 1,200 Pendulum Clocks; between 300 and 400 Radios; between 2,000 and 3,000 Electric Shavers; and between 500 and 600 Cameras.

Sales by respondent of said merchandise have averaged between $5,000 and $6,000 monthly.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the respondent in selling his said merchandise in connection with the above-described push cards, conducted lotteries and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise.

The Commission further finds that the sale of the respondent’s merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove described, involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure respondent’s merchandise, and that the use of said lottery method in the distribution of merchandise is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the business of selling and distributing in similar commerce, like and similar articles of merchandise, who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of respondent’s merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent’s sales method and were thereby induced to purchase respondent’s merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent’s competitors who did not and who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Because of the said preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent’s merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinabove found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Theodore H. Koolish, individually and trading as Universal Specialties Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, radios, food mixers, toasters, roasters, washing machines, cameras, and automatic razors, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable such persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling, or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, he shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
IN THE MATTER OF MASTER DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

Where a corporation engaged in offer and sale of compacts, flashlights, clocks, cameras, and various other articles of merchandise, to purchasers in the various States and in the District of Columbia; in soliciting sale of and selling its said products through various devices and plans of merchandising which it furnished and which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes through which such merchandise was distributed to ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance—

Distributed to purchasing public certain advertising literature including cards, order blanks, advertisements depicting its said products, and circulars and instructions and suggestions relative to and explaining its said plans of selling such products, under which merchandise was allotted as premiums or prizes to operators of the cards, and in accordance with which, and card's explanatory legend, customer paid for chance varying amounts in accordance with number pushed, and certain numbers and last punch or push entitled customer to "$2.00 value" pen set, and customer secured camera or other item being thus disposed of, in accordance with success or failure in selecting feminine name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with such or similar plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise without cost or at a price much less than normal retail price thereof and of a value, in any event, exceeding cost of single push, and plan under which the various articles were distributed to purchasing public wholly by lot or chance and amount paid by customer was thus determined, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use such or any method involving game of chance, or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said method and by element of chance involved in sale of such merchandise as above set forth, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its said products in preference to those offered and sold by such competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods, and with effect, by reason of such game of chance, of unfairly diverting substantial trade and custom in such commerce to it from its competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Saul S. Goldman, of New York City, for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Master Distributing Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 18 East Forty-eighth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling compacts, flashlights, clocks, cameras, cigarette cases, razors, watches, and other articles of merchandise, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of New York into and through the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise through interstate commerce, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondent was, and is, substantially as follows:

Respondent causes and has caused to be distributed to the purchasing public in interstate commerce certain advertising literature, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, advertisemects containing illustrations of merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of the push cards. Such push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated discs, on each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disc is a number, which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the card. The push cards have a master seal, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded to purchase pushes from said cards in the hope that they may select a prize winning name or number and thus obtain an article of merchandise of greater value than the amount paid therefor. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using such push cards. One of the printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:
INSTRUCTIONS

There are 76 numbers in this card printed from 11 upward. Numbers 11 to 35 pay what numbers call for. All numbers over 35 pay only 35 cents. When card is completely sold, open large seal and party who selected the corresponding name receives one $17.50 3-in-1 Moviematic Camera.

Respondent furnishes or sells various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Said push cards are similar, varying only in detail, and the above-described sales plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise without cost or at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade and custom in said commerce to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 5, 1938, issued, and on May 7, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Master Distributing Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 18 East Forty-eighth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling compacts, flashlights, clocks, cameras, cigarette cases, razors, watches, and other articles of merchandise, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of New York into and through the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

and distributing its merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondent was, and is, substantially as follows:

Respondent causes and has caused to be distributed to the purchasing public certain advertising literature, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, advertisements containing illustrations of merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of the push cards. Such push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated discs, on each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disc is a number, which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the card. The push cards have a master seal, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

Respondent furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using such pushcards. One of the printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:

INSTRUCTIONS

There are 76 numbers in this card printed from 11 upward. Numbers 11 to 35 pay what numbers call for. All numbers over 35 pay only 35 cents. When card is completely sold, open large seal and party who selected the corresponding name receives one $17.50 3-in-1 Moviematic Camera.
Sales of respondent's products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded to purchase pushes from said cards in the hope that they may select a prize-winning name or number and thus obtain an article of merchandise of greater value than the amount paid therefor. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance is determined wholly by lot of chance.

Respondent furnishes or sells various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. Said push cards are similar, varying only in detail, and the above-described sales plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise without cost or at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade and custom in said commerce to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Master Distributing Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of, compacts, flashlights, clocks, cameras, cigarette cases, razors, watches, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to its agents or to distributors, or to members of the public, push cards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable such persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push cards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, it shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
NATION-WIDE DISTRIBUTORS

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

AARON N. SAUER TRADING AS NATION-WIDE DISTRIBUTORS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of electric razors, pen and pencil sets, leather wallets, chinaware, and various other articles of merchandise, to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce and in said District—

(a) Advertised in magazines of interstate circulation, and distributed or caused to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, in selling and distributing his said articles by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, among other advertising literature, sales circulars including list of number of items of merchandise and pull cards for distribution of said products under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid therefor and value or apparent value to be secured were dependent upon legend revealed by removal of tab of card selected by chance by purchaser and under which operator of card was compensated by premium for sale of merchandise, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said products in accordance with aforesaid or similar plans as above set forth, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much lower than apparent normal retail price thereof, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said method and by element of chance involved in sale of said products as above described, and thereby induced to buy and sell such merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade and custom to him from his said competitors, and with tendency and capacity to exclude from novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce; and

(b) Made such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations in his aforesaid advertising matter as “Gifts or cash yours absolutely without cost,” “Extra Surprise Gift,” “Special Offer—2 Extra Gifts Free,” and thereby misled and deceived substantial part of purchasing public in the several States and in said District, through inducing them mistakenly to believe that he was giving away certain articles of merchandise without cost to such representatives, facts being none of said premiums or so-called gifts were given away free or without cost, but they were either purchased by said representatives with labor or price thereof was included in that of other articles which representatives were required to sell or procure sale of before said premiums or so-called gifts could be secured by them; With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of said products as a result of such erroneous belief, and of unfairly diverting trade to him from competitor manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations concerning the method of sale and distribution of their goods; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. Bernard Austin, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Aaron N. Sauer, individually and trading as Nation-Wide Distributors, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Aaron N. Sauer is an individual doing business under the trade name of Nation-Wide Distributors, with his principal office and place of business located at 401 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric toasters, watches, pen and pencil sets, jewelry ensembles, leather wallets, silverware sets, chinaware, dresser sets, cameras, cosmetics, razor blades, cigarette lighters, and other articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondent inserts advertisements in magazines of interstate circulation and distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, certain advertising literature, including, among other things a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to purchasers thereof in the following manner: A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the respective prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and higher prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article of greater value than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance. When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondent, the said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium which the representative receives as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull cards in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in commerce in competition with respondent as alleged above are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said products in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors and to exclude from the novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done to competitors of said respondent.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as hereinabove related, respondent has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Gifts or cash yours absolutely without cost.
Extra Surprise Gift.
Special Offer—2 Extra Gifts Free.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, and representations of the respondent in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, by inducing them to mistakenly believe that respondent is giving away certain of its said articles of merchandise without cost to the said representatives.

In truth and in fact, none of the respondent's premiums or so-called "gifts" are given away "free" or without cost, but said premiums or so-called "gifts" which are represented as being "free" to said representatives are either purchased with labor by them or the price of said premiums or so-called "gifts" is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said premiums or so-called "gifts" can be procured by them.

Par. 6. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent's products as the result of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning the method of sale and distribution of their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 6, 1938, issued, and on May 13, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon Aaron N. Sauer, individually and trading as Nation-Wide Distributors, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 7, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Aaron N. Sauer is an individual doing business under the trade name of Nation-Wide Distributors, with his principal office and place of business located at 401 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric toasters, watches, pen and pencil sets, jewelry ensembles, leather wallets, silverware sets, chinaware, dresser sets, cameras, cosmetics, razor blades, cigarette lighters, and other articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondent inserts advertisements in magazines of interstate circulation and distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, certain advertising literature, including, among other things a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to purchasers thereof in the following manner: A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the respective prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and higher prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article of greater value than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance. When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondent, the said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium which the representative receives as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull cards in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in said commerce in competition with respondent as found above are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said products in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors and to exclude from the novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as hereinabove described, respondent has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Gifts or cash yours absolutely without cost.
Extra Surprise Gift.
Special Offer—2 Extra Gifts Free.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations of the respondent in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, by inducing them to mistakenly believe that respondent is giving away certain of its said articles of merchandise without cost to the said representatives.

In truth and in fact, none of the respondent’s premiums or so-called “gifts” are given away “free” or without cost, but said premiums or so-called “gifts” which are represented as being “free” to said representatives are either purchased with labor by them or the price of said premiums or so-called “gifts” is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said premiums or so-called “gifts” can be procured by them.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent’s products as the result of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations concerning the method of sale and distribution of their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Aaron N. Sauer, individually and trading as Nation-Wide Distributors, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric toasters, watches, pen and pencil sets, jewelry ensembles, leather wallets, silverware sets, chinaware, dresser sets, cameras, cosmetics, razor blades, cigarette lighters, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or any other lottery device.

4. Using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for distributing respondent's merchandise unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocalcally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning and there is no deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
LINWOOD SALES CO., INC., AND BERNARD ABRAMS AND ABE S. WILLNER

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation and two individuals, officers thereof and in direction and control of its sales policies and business activities, acting together and in cooperation, and engaged in sale and distribution of razor blades, watches, china and silverware, umbrellas, and other articles of novelty merchandise to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar and like articles in commerce and in said District—

(a) Distributed or caused to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, in selling and distributing said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, among other advertising literature, sales circulars including list of number of items of merchandise and respective prices thereof, and pull cards for distribution of said merchandise to purchasers under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid therefor and apparent value to be secured, and additional article to be possibly received therewith as prize without additional cost, were dependent upon legend or disclosure revealed by removal of tab of card selected by chance by purchaser, and under which operator of card was compensated by premium for sale of merchandise thereby, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with aforesaid or other similar plans involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than apparent normal retail price thereof, and to procure additional article as prize without additional cost, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by their said method and by element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise as above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell same in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade and custom to them from their said competitors, and with capacity and tendency to exclude from novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful; to their substantial injury;

(b) Made and caused to be made such statements and representations in their advertising matter as "Free—Beautiful and Useful Gifts—Free," "Beautiful, Useful Household Gifts at Absolutely No Cost," and others of similar tenor, and "We Pay All Shipping Charges," and thereby misled and deceived substantial part of purchasing public in several States and in said District, through inducing them mistakenly to believe that they were giving away certain of their said articles without cost to their representatives, and that they prepaid all charges on their said articles;

Facts being none of said premiums or so-called gifts were given away free or without cost, but they were either purchased with labor by said representatives or price thereof was included in that of other articles which representatives had to sell or procure sale of before such premiums or so-called gifts could be obtained by them, and, in event of a number thereof, certain sums of money were also required to be paid by such representatives in addition to their labor or services, and said corporation and individuals did not prepay all of the charges on their said articles, but required payment of certain specified sums or shipping charges on a number thereof;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such statements were true and into purchase of substantial quantities of such products as a result thereof, and of unfairly diverting trade to them from competitor manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning the method of sale and distribution thereof; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Linwood Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, and Bernard Abrams and Abe S. Willner, individually and as officers of Linwood Sales Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Linwood Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 101 Prince Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent Bernard Abrams is the president, and respondent Abe S. Willner is the secretary-treasurer of the corporate respondent, both of whom have their offices at the same place of business as said corporation. The individual respondents direct and control the sales policies and business activities of the corporate respondent and all of said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of razor blades, watches, china and silverware, clocks, cosmetics, dresser sets, umbrellas, bedding, and other articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondents distribute, or cause to be distributed, to their representatives and prospective representatives, certain advertising literature including, among other things, a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is distributed to the purchasers thereof in the following manner: A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the respective prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. The purchaser pulling the tab calling for a certain article of merchandise is entitled to and receives said article of merchandise, together with an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the purchaser for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the prices the customer would be required to pay in the event he secures said articles, together with the chance of securing the prize given without extra charge to the person securing a specified article, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise having greater values and higher regular prices than the designated prices to be paid therefor. The fact as to which article of merchandise a purchaser receives, the amount to be paid, whether the article purchased is one which has greater value and a higher regular price than the amount to be paid, and whether the purchaser receives an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

When a person or representative operating a pull card had succeeded in selling all the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondents, the said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise sold by means of said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card. Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of said merchandise and furnish various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plans or methods vary in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof, and to procure an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in commerce as hereinabove defined in competition with the respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents and to exclude from the novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done to said competitors of respondent.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove related, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations to appear in their advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Free—Beautiful and Useful Gifts—Free.
2 Extra Surprise Gifts Free.
Beautiful, Useful Household Gifts at Absolutely No Cost.
Now Everyone Can Get a Valuable Prize Absolutely Free.
We Pay All Shipping Charges.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations of the respondents in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, by inducing them to mistakenly believe (1) that respondents give away certain of their said articles of merchandise without cost to their said representatives, and (2) that respondents prepay all charges on all of their said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' premiums or so-called gifts are given away "free" or "without cost," but said premiums or so-called gifts which are represented as being "free" to said representatives are either purchased with labor by them, or the price of said premium or so-called gift is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before the said premiums or so-called gifts can be procured by them. For a number of premiums or so-called gifts, certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered by them. Respondents do not prepay all of the charges on their said products, but require the payment of certain specified sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondents' said articles of merchandise.

Par. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as the result of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like or similar products, who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning the method of sale and distribution of their products. By the statements aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 10, 1938, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Linwood Sales Co., Inc., and Bernard Abrams and Abe S. Willner, individually and as officers of Linwood Sales Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, the respondents filed their answer, in which they admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and the answer thereof, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Linwood Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 101 Prince Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent Bernard Abrams is the president and respondent Abe S. Willner is the secretary-treasurer of the corporate respondent, both of whom have their offices at the same place of business as said corporation. The individual respondents direct and control the sales policies and business activities of the corporate respondent and all of said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of razor blades, watches, china and silverware, clocks, cosmetics, dresser sets, umbrellas, bedding, and other articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondents distribute, or cause to be distributed, to their representatives and prospective representatives, certain advertising literature including, among other things, a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is distributed to the purchasers thereof in the fol­ linwood sales co., inc., et al.

Findings

lowing manner: A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the respective prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached the tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. The purchaser pulling the tab calling for a certain article of merchandise is entitled to and receives said article of merchandise, together with an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the purchaser for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the prices the customer would be required to pay in the event he secures said articles, together with the chance of securing the prize given without extra charge to the person securing a specified article, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise having greater values and higher regular prices than the designated prices to be paid therefor. The fact as to which article of merchandise a purchaser receives, the amount to be paid, whether the article purchased is one which has greater value and a higher regular price than the amount to be paid, and whether the purchaser receives an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

When a person or representative operating a pull card has succeeded in selling all the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the said sums to the respondents, the said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise sold by means of said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card. Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of said merchandise and furnish various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plans or methods vary in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof, and to procure an additional article of merchandise as a prize without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in commerce as hereinabove defined in competition with the respondents as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors and to exclude from the novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done to said competitors of respondent.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove described, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations to appear in their ad-

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations of the respondents in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinafore referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, by inducing them to mistakenly believe (1) that respondents give away certain of their said articles of merchandise without cost to their said representatives, and (2) that respondents prepay all charges on all of their said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents’ premiums or so-called gifts are given away “free” or “without cost,” but said premiums or so-called gifts which are represented as being “free” to said representatives are either purchased with labor by them, or the price of said premium or so-called gift is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before the said premiums or so-called gifts can be procured by them. For a number of premiums or so-called gifts, certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered by them. Respondents do not prepay all of the charges on their said products, but require the payment of certain specified sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondents’ said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations found herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents’ products as the result of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like or similar products, who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning the method of sale and distribution of their products. By the statements aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Linwood Sales Co., Inc., its officers, and Bernard Abrams and Abe S. Willner, individually, their respective representatives' agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of razor blades, watches, china and silverware, clocks, cosmetics, dresser sets, umbrellas, bedding, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to their agents or to distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device.

4. Using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for distributing respondents' merchandise unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free" or "without costs," or any other terms of similar import or meaning and there is no deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise, or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
In the Matter of

PREMIO SALES COMPANY, INC., AND ROSE SOMMERS, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS AN OFFICER OF PREMIO SALES COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation and an individual, president and treasurer and principal stockholder thereof, who formulated, controlled, and directed its practices and policies, acting together and in cooperation and engaged in sale and distribution of clocks, watches, cameras, silverware, and various other articles of merchandise to purchasers in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in similar sale and distribution of similar or like articles—

(a) Distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, in selling and distributing their said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, among other advertising literature, sales circulars consisting of lists on which were designated a number of items of merchandise and prices thereof, and pull card for distribution of said products under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid therefor and value or apparent value to be secured were dependent upon matter disclosed by removal of particular tab of card selected by chance by customer, and operator of card was compensated by premium for sale of merchandise, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with aforesaid or other similar sales plan, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than apparent normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, or any method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many were attracted by their said method and element of chance involved in sale of such merchandise as above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell their said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method and substantial trade and custom were unfairly diverted to them from their competitors aforesaid;

(b) Caused to appear in their advertising matter such statements as “EXTRA SPECIAL SURPRISE GIFT WORTH HAVING FREE,” “HOW TO GET YOUR FREE GIFTS,” and “FREE—GIFTS FOR ALL—FREE”; facts being none of their so-called premiums or gifts were given away free or without cost but such so-called premiums or gifts thus represented as free or without cost to the said representatives were either purchased with their labor or prices thereof were included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which they had to sell or procure sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts could be procured by them;
With effect of misleading substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations were true and into purchase of substantial quantities of their products as a result of such erroneous belief, and with result that substantial trade was unfairly diverted to them from competitor manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning the same; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry O. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Premio Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, and Rose Sommers, individually and as an officer of Premio Sales Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said Act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Premio Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 427 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent Rose Sommers is the president and treasurer of, and the principal stockholder in the respondent Premio Sales Co., Inc., and formulates, controls, and directs its practices and policies. Respondent Rose Sommers has her offices at the same address as that of the corporate respondent. Said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, watches, cameras, bedding, clothing, cigarette lighters and cases, silverware, chinaware, jewelry, dolls, kitchenware, pocketknives, pen and pencil sets, cosmetics, razor blades, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from their place of business aforesaid, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature including a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is and has been distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondents, said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sales of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal law.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.
Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove related, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in their advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples, but are not all-inclusive:

Extra Special Surprise Gift Worth Having Free

How to Get Your Free Gifts

Free—Gifts For All—Free

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free," or without cost, but said so-called premiums or gifts which are represented as being "free" or without cost to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which said representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done, and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 12, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Premio Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, and Rose Sommers, individually and as an officer of Premio Sales Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 7, 1939, the respondents filed their answer in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Premio Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 427 Broadway, New York, N.Y. Respondent Rose Sommers is the president and treasurer of, and the principal stockholder in the respondent Premio Sales Co., Inc., and formulates, controls and directs its practices and policies. Respondent Rose Sommers has her offices at the same address as that of the corporate respondent. Said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, watches, cameras, bedding, clothing, cigarette lighters and cases, silverware, chinaware, jewelry, dolls, kitchenware, pocket-knives, pen and pencil sets, cosmetics, razor blades, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from their place of business aforesaid, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature including a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is and has been distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull-card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.
Findings

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondents, said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sales of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove described, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in their advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples, but are not all-inclusive:

EXTRA SPECIAL SURPRISE GIFT WORTH HAVING FREE
HOW TO GET YOUR FREE GIFTS
FREE — GIFTS FOR ALL — FREE

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free," or without cost, but said so-called premiums or gifts which are represented as being "free" or without cost to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which said representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them.

Par. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid substantial trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done, and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents'
Order

competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Premio Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, and Rose Sommers, individually and as an officer of Premio Sales Co., Inc., and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of, clocks, watches, cameras, bedding, clothing, cigarette lighters and cases, silverware, chinaware, jewelry, dolls, kitchenware, pocket-knives, pen and pencil sets, cosmetics, razor blades, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to our placing in the hands of others, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting, to their agents, or to distributors, or to members of the public, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device.

4. Using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for distributing respondents’ merchandise unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free" or "without cost," or any other terms of similar import or meaning and there is no deception.
as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise, or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the said respondents shall within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon them, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied therewith.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

THEODORE G. MILLER, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS AMERICAN SPORTSWEAR

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of clothing, radios, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise—

Furnished his customers with devices and plans involving operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in distribution of said merchandise to ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance, and including explanatory circulars, order blanks, and push cards for use in distribution thereof under a plan or scheme in accordance with which customers paid for chance, amount determined by number pushed by chance, and person pushing certain number received certain pen and pencil set and person who succeeded in selecting from a list of 75 feminine names one corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal secured article of merchandise being thus disposed of, and operators of cards were compensated by premiums or prizes, and thereby placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said merchandise, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government and in competition with many who refrain from disposing of their merchandise by a method involving lottery or a game of chance as contrary to public policy;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said sales plan or method of distribution of his merchandise by element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to those offered and sold by his competitors who do not use such or similar methods of distribution and trade was thereby unfairly diverted to him from them:

Held, That such practices as above set forth were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Theodore G. Miller, individually, and trading as American Sportswear, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent, Theodore G. Miller, is an individual doing business under the name of American Sportswear, with his principal office and place of business located at 216 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. He is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of clothing, radios, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business aforesaid and from the city of Milwaukee, Wis., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for some time last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the merchandise in commerce, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes, and has distributed, to the purchasing public in commerce certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 75 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for recording the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 75 partially perforated disks marked "Push," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal concealed in which is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:

Respondent furnishes, and has furnished, his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push card which are as follows:

HOW TO USE SALES CARD

There is a number under each girl's name. These numbers range from one upwards but the person selecting the number pays only 1¢ to 25¢ according to the numbers selected. If 1 is punched 1¢ is paid. If 10 is punched 10¢ is paid, or if 50 is punched only 25¢ is paid. Nothing Higher than 25¢. Total $0.85.

When all names have been taken and collections made, the large seal at the top of the card is opened. The person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under that seal is entitled to one Ladies' or Men's Jacket.

The person selling the card also receives one Ladies' or Men's Jacket.

The person who has selected No. 33 receives the Fountain Pen and Pencil Set illustrated below.

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards accompanied by a set of order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, said push cards use, and have used, the same in purchasing, sells, and distributes respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to the respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as alleged herein, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent of meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 22, A. D., 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Theodore G. Miller, trading as American Sportswear, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, the respondent filed his answer thereto, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving hearing and all intervening procedure.
Findings

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Theodore G. Miller, is an individual doing business under the trade name of American Sportswear, and having his principal office and place of business at 216 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clothing, radios, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise, all of which are sold and shipped by him to purchasers in States other than the State in which respondent's place of business is located and from which said shipments are made. In the course and conduct of his business respondent has been and is in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent furnishes and has furnished to his customers various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by the respondent is as follows:

Respondent furnishes his customers with push cards, order blanks, and circulars explaining his plan of selling merchandise and allotting his premiums or prizes, to the operators of said push cards. On said push cards appear 75 partially perforated disks marked "Push," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of the push card. The push card also contains a large master seal which conceals one of the feminine names. Respondent furnishes his representatives or customers with instructions for using said push cards, the method outlined being as follows:

The customer pushes the disk over the feminine name selected by him, thus disclosing a number which determines the amount to be paid by him in cents. These numbers range from 1 to 50, but those punching 25 or above are required to pay no more than 25 cents.
When all the disks have been punched the master seal is broken and the person who has punched the disk over the same feminine name as that disclosed by the removal of the master seal receives choice of a "Man's Genuine Elkskin Sport Jacket," or "Lady's Sport Jacket with Beret to Match." The one who has punched the disk which discloses the number 33 receives a fountain pen and pencil set, and the person operating the push board, or selling the pushes, receives a lady's or man's jacket.

Par. 3. The various other articles of merchandise sold and distributed by the respondent are sold by means of push cards similar to that hereinabove described, varying only in minor detail, and all of respondent's products are sold and distributed solely by lot or chance.

Par. 4. Respondent, by the methods hereinabove described, places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said merchandise, and the said method of sale and distribution of his products is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the criminal law.

Par. 5. Many persons are attracted by respondent's sales plan or method of distribution of his merchandise by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent's competitors who do not use the same or similar methods of distribution. Many of respondent's competitors refrain from disposing of their merchandise by a method involving a lottery or game of chance, because such method is contrary to public policy, and, as a result, trade is unfairly diverted from such competitors to the respondent.

CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondent, as set forth in the aforesaid finding of facts, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Theodore G. Miller, individually and trading as American Sportswear, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clothing, radios, pen and pencil sets, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or to members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent he shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.
Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of a line of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and its “Flash-A-Call” intercommunicating system, to customers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale and distribution of such various goods and products in commerce among the various States and in said District, and including those who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status or the quality or character of the dress materials and other goods and articles dealt in by them, as aforesaid, but make truthful representations in connection with sale and distribution of their merchandise; in advertising his said goods and products through circulars, postcards, folders, and other media circulated throughout the United States, and through newspapers and periodicals of general interstate circulation—

(a) Represented as a “Bargain Sale” and “Special Introductory Offer” to secure new customers, offer of certain designated merchandise, including, among other items, “5 YARDS” of “LOVELY LARGE PRINTS AND FLORAL DESIGN QUILT PIECES,” and handkerchiefs, for $1.23, and that, as “A Special Offer” and “AN EXTRA GIFT FOR PROMPTNESS” in sending order and including 10 names and addresses of friends living at a distance, he would include certain yardage of “DRESS MATERIAL EXTRA AS AN ADDED GIFT” and added further “LIMIT—NOT MORE THAN TWO ORDERS OF ABOVE TO ANY ONE PERSON,” facts being said $1.23 offer was not a special introductory one, but was a continuous and standing one, and such price was charged for designated merchandise at all times, and the dress material referred to was not included for prompt acceptance of the offer, but was sent to any and all customers and there was no limitation whatsoever on number of orders which one purchaser could obtain, and he did not include said print and floral design quilt pieces;

(b) Represented as among the items and material included in aforesaid so-called special offer, “BEAUTIFUL SILK OR VELVET QUILT PIECES” and “EMBROIDERED HANDKERCHIEFS,” facts being said pieces were not made up of silk or velvet materials, but were composed entirely of rayon, and handkerchiefs were not embroidered but were cheap, inexpensive, and unembroidered; and

(c) Included in his said advertisements statement “We are the largest sole manufacturers of intercommunicating units” and “Formerly sold $100.00 up,” facts being he did not manufacture his said “Flash-A-Call” intercommunicating units, but purchased same from others who did, and said system never sold for $100 or more, or for more than its current price of $12.50;
With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations were true, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of his said products and trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors who truthfully represent the dress materials and other goods and articles, as aforesaid, which they offer and sell:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices.

Mr. S. Brogdyne Teu, II for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Milton Meyer, an individual trading as Republic Products Co. and Inter-Communication System of America, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Milton Meyer is an individual trading as Republic Products Co. and Inter-Communication System of America, with his principal office and place of business located at 2440 Lincoln Avenue, city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of distributing and selling a line of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials and an intercommunicating system designated and sold under the trade name "Flash-A-Call." Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to his customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems, respondent has made representations concerning the character, quality, and quantity of the products sold by him, and regarding his business status, by means of circulars, postcards, folders, and other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, and by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general interstate circulation. Among said representations made by respondent the following are representative:

LIMIT—NOT MORE THAN TWO ORDERS OF ABOVE TO ANY ONE PERSON

We are the largest sole manufacturers of inter-communicating units. Formerly sold $100.00 up.

All the said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s advertising literature and newspaper advertisements, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s products, his business status, and the price of respondent's products. In all of his said advertising literature and newspaper advertisements and through other means, respondent, directly or by inference, represents: That he is making a special offer of certain designated merchandise for the price of $1.23; that 5 yards of large print and floral design quilt pieces are included in the special offer; that 5 yards of silk or velvet quilt pieces are included in the special offer; that embroidered handkerchiefs are included in the special offer; that for promptness in accepting the special offer and forwarding the names and addresses of 10 friends there will be included in the special offer 4 yards of beautiful dress material as an extra added gift; that not more than 2 orders will be accepted from any one person; that he is the largest sole manufacturer of intercommunicating units, and that his "Flash-A-Call" intercommunicating system formerly sold for $100 and up.

Par. 5. The aforesaid representations made by respondent with respect to his products are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the respondent is not making a special introductory offer of certain designated merchandise for $1.23. He does not include in his offer 5 yards of prints and floral design quilt pieces, nor does he include 5 yards of silk or velvet quilt pieces in his so-called special offer. Embroidered handkerchiefs are not included in the special offer. Four yards of dress material are not given as an added gift for prompt acceptance of the so-called special offer. More than two orders will be accepted from any one person. Respondent is not the manufacturer of intercommunicating units, and respondent's "Flash-A-Call" intercommunicating system formerly sold for $100 or more.

Par. 6. The true facts are, the so-called special offer of the respondent is not a special offer, but the $1.23 is the price charged for the said products at all times. The 5 yards of so-called silk or velvet quilt pieces are not silk or velvet, but are rayon. The handkerchiefs are not embroidered handkerchiefs, but are cheap, inexpensive, unembroidered handkerchiefs. The respondent sends to any and all customers the so-called 4 yards of dress material whether the offer is promptly accepted or not. Anyone can place as many orders with respondent as they desire to do so, and the respondent does not limit any one purchaser to two orders. The respondent is not the largest manufacturer of intercommunicating units. He is not a manufacturer of intercommunicating units, but has the unit which he sells and distributes made for him by a manufacturer. The "Flash-A-Call" intercommunicating system of respondent never sold for more than the current price of $12.50.
Par. 7. There are among respondent's competitors many who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their business status.

Par. 8. Each and all the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing his products and his business status as hereinabove set out were and are calculated to, and have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. On account of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems, who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or their true business status. As a consequence thereof injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 16, 1938, issued, and on August 18, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Milton Meyer, trading as Republic Products Co. and Inter-Communication System of America, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 7, 1938, the respondent filed his answer, in which he admitted all the material allegations set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to the facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Milton Meyer, is an individual trading as Republic Products Co. and Inter-Communication System of America, with his principal office and place of business located at 2440 Lincoln Avenue, city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce a line of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and an intercommunicating system designated and sold under the trade name "Flash-A-Call." Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to his customers located in the State of Illinois and to his customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent maintains, and for more than 1 year last past has maintained, a course of trade in said products sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In conducting his business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships, firms, and corporations who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course of the operation of his business and in order to induce the purchase of said dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems, respondent has made and now makes representations concerning the character, quality, and quantity of the products sold by him. Respondent also makes certain representations regarding his business status. All of these representations are made by means of circulars, postcards, folders, and other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, and also by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general interstate circulation.

Said representations made by respondent are as follows:

LIMIT—NOT MORE THAN TWO ORDERS OF ABOVE TO ANY ONE PERSON

We are the largest sole manufacturers of intercommunicating units. Formerly sold $100.00 up.

The Commission finds that all the above statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s advertising literature and newspaper advertisements, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s products, his business status, and price of respondent’s products.

The Commission further finds that in all of his said advertising literature, respondent, directly or by inference, has represented and now represents: That the offer to sell certain designated merchandise for the price of $1.23 is a special offer; that 5 yards of large print and floral design quilt pieces are included in the special offer; that 5 yards of silk or velvet quilt pieces are included in the special offer; that embroidered handkerchiefs are included in the special offer; that for promptness in accepting the special offer and forwarding the names and addresses of 10 friends there is included in the special offer 4 yards of beautiful dress material as an extra added gift; that not more than 2 orders are accepted from any 1 person; that he is the largest sole manufacturer of intercommunicating units, and that his "Flash-A-Call" intercommunicating system formerly sold for $100 and up.

Par. 5. The Commission finds that respondent's representations as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, the respondent's offer to sell certain designated merchandise for $1.23 is not a special introductory offer. The offer to sell said designated merchandise for $1.23 is a continuous and standing offer and the $1.23 is the price charged for said certain designated merchandise at all times by respondent. Respondent does not include in said offer 5 yards of print and floral design quilt pieces, nor does he include 5 yards of quilt pieces which are composed of silk or velvet materials. The 5 yards of so-called silk or velvet quilt pieces referred to in respondent's so-called special offer are not made up of silk or velvet materials but are composed entirely of rayon material. The handkerchiefs which respondent offers as embroidered handkerchiefs are not embroidered but are cheap, inexpensive, and unembroidered handkerchiefs. Respondents does not include in said offer 4 yards of dress material for prompt acceptance of the offer, but sends the four yards of dress material to any and all customers. Respondent also accepts more than two orders from any one person and, in truth and in fact, no limitation whatsoever is placed on the number of orders one purchaser can obtain from respondent. Respondent does not manufacture inter-communicating units designated by respondent as "Flash-A-Call" but purchases said units from others who manufacture them. The "Flash-A-Call" intercommunication system of respondent never sold for the price of $100 or more. In truth and in fact, said system never sold for more than the current price of $12.50.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations who do not in any way misrepresent their business status or the quality and character of the dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunicating systems sold by them, but who make truthful representations in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise.

Par. 7. The use by respondent of the acts and practices above found and set forth in offering for sale and selling his products, has had and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous belief induced by the false and misleading statements and representations herein above set forth, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors who truthfully represent the dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilting materials, and intercommunication systems they offer for sale and sell.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Milton Meyer, individually, trading as Republic Products Co. and Inter-Communications System of America, or under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of dress materials, handkerchiefs, tableware, hosiery, quilt material, and intercommunicating systems in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that his usual and customary method of doing business by means of various combination offers of merchandise is a special introductory or other special or unusual sale.

2. Representing that purchasers will receive a larger number of items or quantity of merchandise than the number or quantity actually sold and shipped, or will receive merchandise of a different character or quality than that actually sold and shipped.
3. Representing that items of merchandise which are regularly included in respondent's combination offer are given as an added inducement for prompt purchase or service rendered.

4. Representing that the handkerchiefs sold by him or included in any, combination offer are embroidered.

5. Using the word "silk" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate fabrics or products which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

6. Using the word "velvet" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless such descriptive word or words are used to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such word shall be qualified by using in immediate connection and conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fiber or materials from which said product or fabric is made.

7. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics or any other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

8. Representing that he is a manufacturer of intercommunicating systems or that his intercommunicating systems formerly sold for prices up to $100 or for any price in excess of $12.50.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

ALBERT A. BACH AND JACK WALD, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS NU-DEAL PREMIUM CO.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where two individuals engaged as partners in sale and distribution of bedding, clothing, dolls, chinaware, and numerous other articles of merchandise—

Distributed or caused to be distributed, in selling and distributing their said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to representatives and prospective representatives, among other advertising literature, sales circulars including list of number of items of merchandise and prices thereof and pull cards for use in distribution and sale of said products under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid therefor and apparent value to be secured by purchasers of chance were dependent upon matter disclosed by removal of particular tab of cards selected by chance by purchaser and representative was compensated with premium for operation of card and sale of merchandise, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with aforesaid sales plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than apparent normal retail price thereof, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of chance to win by chance or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by their said method and by element of chance involved in sale of their said merchandise as above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell such merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by their said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade and custom to them from their competitors aforesaid; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Jack Desner, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Albert A. Bach and Jack Wald, individually, and trading as copartners under the name of Nu-Deal Premium Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Albert A. Bach and Jack Wald, are individuals doing business as copartners under the name of Nu-Deal Premium Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 2 West Twentieth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of bedding, clothing, dolls, aluminum ware, tableware, china ware, kitchenware, jewelry, cosmetics, watches, clocks, cameras, scales, suitcases, dresser sets, smoking stands, manicure sets, razor sets, lamps, ashtrays, cigarette cases, leather wallets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location.
There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other partnerships and individuals and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature including a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is and has been distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set-out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has an apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondents, said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of said merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use by respondents of said method, because of said games of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 9, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Albert A. Bach and Jack Wald, individually and trading as copartners under the name of Nu-Deal Premium Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order issued herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Albert A. Bach and Jack Wald, are individuals doing business as copartners under the name of Nu-Deal Premium Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 2 West Twentieth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of bedding, clothing, dolls, aluminum ware, tableware, chinaware, kitchenware, jewelry, cosmetics, watches, clocks, cameras, scales, suitcases, dresser sets, smoking stands, manicure sets, razor sets, lamps, ashtrays, cigarette cases, leather wallets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other partnerships and individuals and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature including a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is and has been distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has an apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondents, said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.
Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of said merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use by respondents of said method, because of said games of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Albert A. Bach and Jack Wald, individually and trading as copartners under the name of Nu-Deal Premium Co. or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bedding, clothing, dolls, aluminum ware, tableware, chinaware, kitchenware, jewelry, cosmetics, watches, clocks, cameras, scales, suitcases, dresser sets, smoking stands, manicure sets, razor sets, lamps, ashtrays, cigarette cases, leather wallets, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to their agents or to distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable such persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon or any other lottery device.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JACOB ROTHMAN TRADING AS NEW YORK SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of watches, clocks, silver sets, smoking sets, and various other articles of merchandise—

Distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, in selling and distributing his said articles by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, among other advertising literature, a sales circular including a list of a number of items of merchandise and prices thereof and pull card for use in sale and distribution of said products under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid and apparent value to be secured by purchaser were dependent upon matter disclosed by removal of particular tab selected by chance by customer and representative was compensated by premium for operation of card and sale of said merchandise, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said merchandise in accordance with aforesaid or similar sales plan, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said method and by element of chance involved in the sale of his said merchandise as above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell such merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held. That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jacob Rothman, individually, and trading as New York Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent, Jacob Rothman, is an individual trading under the name of New York Sales Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 873 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and for some time past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, clocks, men's jackets, sets of china, silver sets, lamps, carving sets, smoking stands, stockings, tooth brushes, tooth paste, men and boys' ties, hair clippers, cigarette lighters, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, the said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes certain advertising literature, including a sales circular, to representatives and prospective representatives. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list in which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a "pull card." The said pull card consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported retail values greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induce members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which he is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amount called for, and remitted the said sums to respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull cards, in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but all of said cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said pull cards use, and have used, the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said merchandise, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above alleged.
Findings

are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 14, 1938, issued and on September 15, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Jacob Rothman, individually and trading as New York Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 7, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of the fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Jacob Rothman, is an individual trading under the name of New York Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 873 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, clocks, men's jackets, sets of china, silver sets, lamps, carving sets, smoking stands, stockings, tooth brushes, tooth paste, men and boys' ties, hair clippers, cigarette lighters, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business, as referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, the said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes certain advertising literature, including a sales circular, to representatives and prospective representatives. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list in which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a "pull card." The said pull card consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported retail values greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induce members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which he is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amount called for, and remitted the said sums to respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull cards, in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but all of said cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said pull cards use, and have used, the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his said merchandise, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jacob Rothman, individually, and trading as New York Sales Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, or employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of watches, clocks, men's jackets, sets of china, silver sets, lamps, carving sets, smoking stands, stockings, tooth brushes, tooth paste, men and boys' ties, hair clippers, cigarette lighters, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or distributors, or to members of the public, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or any other lottery device.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

FASHION ORIGINATORS GUILD OF AMERICA, INC., MICHIGAN AVENUE GUILD OF CHICAGO, MINNEAPOLIS FASHION GUILD, LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR GUILD OF BALTIMORE, INC., NATIONAL FEDERATION OF TEXTILES, INC., AND THEIR RESPECTIVE OFFICERS, DIRECTORS AND MEMBERS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2769. Complaint, Apr. 16, 1936—Decision, Feb. 8, 1939

Where a membership corporation which—

(1) Was composed of manufacturers of women's garments and of textiles used in manufacture thereof, engaged in selling and shipping their products to dealers in other States and, as thus engaged, in competition among themselves and with other manufacturers who likewise sell and ship similar products; and

(2) Garment manufacturing members of which constituted a dominant factor in the women's garment manufacturing industry, with their products in such demand by the trade and the purchasing public that all retail dealers in women's garments, in order to meet competition and demand of consuming public, were compelled to stock and handle some of the lines made by said members; and

(3) Initial purpose or program of which, namely, the preventing of the copying for sale in commerce of alleged original creations in fashions and styles of women's garments, was later expanded and enlarged to cover designs of textiles used in manufacture of such garments and other practices and policies as below set forth; and

(4) Which instituted, as a part of its said program, a Design Registration Bureau for the registration of alleged original designs and styles of its women's garment manufacturer members, who were required to submit, on blank application forms furnished them, description of design and style of garments to be registered, together with sketch thereof and affidavit setting forth that it was applicant's original design, appointed so-called "piracy committee" to pass on issue of garments challenged as copies of styles and designs registered by its members, and employed "shoppers" in the principal cities to visit stores of cooperating retailers, check sale of garments declared by its aforesaid committee as such copies, request removal thereof from sale on the part of the particular retailer, and report failure so to do, and to visit also stores of noncooperating retailers, without disclosing identity, to ascertain whether or not such dealers have on sale copies of alleged original designs and styles of its members, and, if so, to report thereon;

(a) Entered into and carried out agreements with three local guilds, members of which were respectively composed of retail dealers in women's wearing apparel located in the cities of Chicago, Minneapolis, and Baltimore, co-

¹Order published as modified by Commission order dated March 29, 1939, which deleted one of the paragraphs in the original order.
operation of which it had sought and secured in furtherance of its objectives, under which such membership corporation or Fashion Guild agreed that its members would not (1) sell their products in the cities in which said local guilds were located to retailers who were not members in good standing of the latter, or who did not conform to their standards and regulations; (2) sell at retail to individual consumers or to persons conducting their business in residences, residential quarters, or in hotels or apartment buildings; (3) conduct off-price promotion sales or clearance sales prior to dates fixed by local guild; or (4) sell to any member of the local guild who violated any of the provisions of the agreement until such member was restored to good standing; and (5) agreed to suspend from membership any of its members breaching any of the provisions of such agreement; and

Where three local guilds of retail dealers in women's garments in the cities of Chicago, Minneapolis, and Baltimore, as aforesaid and in accordance with objectives above set forth—

(b) Entered into and carried out agreements with said Fashion Guild, as above set forth, under which such respective local guilds agreed that their members would not (1) purchase from manufacturers who did not conform to the standard of ethics and regulation of said Fashion Guild; or (2) knowingly buy or sell copies of legitimately registered styles, and that they would (3) return any such copies as were found in their stock; (4) accept the decision of the "style piracy" division of said Fashion Guild on all questions of alleged design piracy; (5) stamp all their orders for merchandise with latter's warranty clause, which provided that the order was placed upon the seller's warranty that the garments in question were not copies of styles originated by members of such Fashion Guild, and purchaser reserved right to return any merchandise not as warranted; and (6) that they would suspend from membership any member violating any of the provisions of the agreement; and (7) agreed to refrain from purchasing from any member of the Fashion Guild who violated any of the provisions of the agreement, until such time as such member was restored to membership in good standing in said Fashion Guild; and

Where said Fashion Guild, following determination that its objectives would be best accomplished by securing cooperation of individual retailers in women's garments in territories which had no local guild, and distribution to retailers throughout the United States, for their signature, of its so-called "Declaration of Cooperation," under which retailer undertakes not to buy any copies of merchandise created by members of said Fashion Guild, to abide by decisions of its "piracy committee" and return such garments as are adjudged copies of its registered styles, to cooperate with it to the fullest extent in helping it to remove such copies from the market, to furnish it with such information in his possession as it may desire, and to affix to all of his apparel orders the aforesaid warranty clause, and, after attempting to secure voluntary cooperation of the retailers and their signatures through representing advantages thus to be derived, and having secured a number of such voluntary signatures—

(c) Coerced, constrained, and compelled retail dealers to sign such declarations of cooperation under the threat that unless they did so the members of said Guild would refuse to sell to such retailers their products or to allow them to inspect their lines of merchandise, with result that such garment manufacturing members did refuse thus to exhibit or sell their goods to retailers who failed or refused to sign such declarations or, having signed same, failed to comply with the requirements thereof; and

Where some 12,000 retail dealers in women's garments, and including well-known stores in the largest cities throughout the country, as a result, in the case of the majority thereof, of aforesaid coercive activities—

(d) Signed such declarations of cooperation and returned same to the aforesaid Guild and thereafter refused to purchase garments which were determined by it to be copies of original registered styles or designs of its members, and generally complied with the terms of such declaration; and

Where said Fashion Guild, after it had secured the cooperation of a large number of retailers—

(e) Sought to and did induce many retailers not only to refuse to purchase alleged copies of original designs of its members, but also to refuse to purchase any of their requirements from manufacturers who copied original styles or designs of such Fashion Guild members;

(f) Entered, on a white card in a card index system which it inaugurated and maintained in order effectively to prevent purchase by retailers of alleged copies of original styles and designs registered by its members, names of cooperating retailers who had signed declaration of cooperation, and sent to each member duplicates of such cards, and prohibited its members from selling to any retail merchant whose name was not thus carded;

(g) Entered on a red card, duplicate of which was sent to each of its members, names of retailers who failed or refused to sign its said declaration, or who, having signed, failed or refused to take off sale garments adjudged by its "piracy committee" to be copies of registered original designs of a member, with result that members to whom such red-card duplicates were sent, in compliance with its regulations and requirements, refused to sell such red-carded retailers;

(h) Distributed also among its members lists of retailers who had failed or refused to sign its declaration or who, having signed, failed or refused to remove from sale copies of alleged original designs or styles registered by the members, or who failed to comply with its rules and regulations, along with instructions that members receiving such lists were not to sell their merchandise to those whose names appeared thereon, with result that the members did thereafter refuse thus to sell such persons;

(i) Included also on its red-carded list, on which at one time appeared names of over 400 retail dealers located at various places throughout the United States, retailers who refused to disclose names of manufacturer from whom they purchased alleged copies, notwithstanding such retailers' removal of alleged copies from sale; and

Where the garment manufacturing members and the textile members of such Fashion Guild—

(j) Entered into and carried out agreement that the former would not buy textiles which were not registered in the Industrial Design Registration Bureau maintained as a clearing house for registration of textile designs by said textile members' corporation, and textile members agreed to sell only to such garment manufacturers as became parties to said agreement; and

Where said textile corporation—

(k) Notified manufacturers and converters of textiles used in the women's garment manufacturing industry, in trade journal advertisement, that members of said Fashion Guild and other nonmember manufacturers of women's garments had signed pledges to use only textile designs which had been registered in said textile corporation's Industrial Design Registration Bureau; and

Where said Fashion Guild—

(1) Passed a resolution that, as a means of preventing style piracy, its members would not buy from textile manufacturers who sold to retailers who entered into agreements with manufacturers to manufacture styles, and that they would not sell to retailers who resorted to such practice; and

(m) Prohibited its members from participating in any manner whatsoever in any retail advertising, and fixed expulsion from the organization as penalty for violation of such resolution, which was complied with, and fixed definite maximum discount to be allowed by members, and prohibited members from selling at retail, by resolution, which they respected; and

(n) Cooperated, as above indicated, with aforesaid local guilds and in policies and programs above set forth, including attempt to prevent special sales except upon days designated by Guild, and refused to continue its affiliation with any retailer who failed to obey its rule prohibiting participation by retailers with dress manufacturers in promoting fashion shows unless merchandise used therein was actually purchased and delivered, and denied to such offending retailer all the privileges resulting from said affiliation, with result that, in compliance with its policy and program, its members refused to sell their garments at retail as aforesaid, or to persons conducting business in residences, residential quarters, hotels or apartment houses, and refrained from participating in fashion shows sponsored by retailers; and

(o) Employed auditors who audited books of its members to ascertain whether they were selling red-carded retailers or violating any of its regulations, policies or programs, and imposed, and collected fines on members shown by its auditors' reports or otherwise to have sold such retailers or to have violated any of its policies or programs, and notified membership that fine of $1,500, collected in one instance, would be followed by one of $5,000 in case of future violation; and

With result that—

(1) Retail dealers in women's garments who had failed or refused to cooperate with said Fashion Guild or who, having signed its declaration, had failed or refused to remove from sale garments declared by it to be copies of registered original designs or styles of its members, were occasioned loss of good will and great financial loss by refusal of garment manufacturing members to sell such retailers their merchandise;

(2) Nonmember manufacturers of women's garments selling their products in interstate commerce were occasioned such financial loss due to return by retailers, in compliance with requirements of said Fashion Guild, of garments declared by it as copies of registered original styles or designs of members; and

(3) Manufacturers declared by said Fashion Guild as being confirmed copyists suffered great financial loss through the refraining, on the part of retail dealers induced and constrained so to do by said Fashion Guild, from purchasing any of their requirements from such manufacturers; and

With the results and effects, as a result of the cooperation with one another by said Fashion Guild and members, local guilds and retailers, and textile corporation, in the conduct and consummation of aforesaid policies and programs of such Fashion Guild, and in pursuance of the understandings, arrangements, etc., above indicated, as entered into jointly and severally by them, and by reason thereof, that—

(1) Competitors of members of said Guild and said textile corporation were prevented from making sales of their products and shipments in interstate commerce, and competition therein in sale and shipment of women's garments and textiles used in manufacture thereof was substantially lessened, hindered and suppressed;

(2) Retail dealers in such products throughout the United States were prevented from buying their requirements from manufacturers boycotted by said Fashion Guild, and competition in such commerce in purchase and sale of said products was substantially lessened, hindered, and suppressed;

(3) Control over the business practices of a majority of the manufacturers and distributors of women's garments and textiles used in manufacture thereof, and power to exclude from the industry those manufacturers and distributors who do not conform to their rules and regulations, were obtained and exercised by said Fashion Guild and textile corporation, with tendency thereby to create in themselves a monopoly in such industries;

(4) Retail dealers in women's garments throughout the United States were constrained, coerced, and compelled to declare their intention to cooperate with said Fashion Guild in its policies and programs by signing the declaration of cooperation submitted by it, and those dealers in such products who failed or refused thus to sign, or who, having signed, failed to remove from sale garments found by said Guild to be copies of styles or designs registered as original creations of its members, were caused to suffer great financial loss and loss of good will because of refusal of members of Guild to sell their merchandise to them;

(5) Garment manufacturing members had the amount of discounts to be given by them to retail dealers fixed by it, and were prohibited from participating in retailers' fashion shown, and prevented from subsidizing retail advertising, and were fined by it for violation of its policies and programs; and

(6) Such members refused to sell their merchandise at retail or to persons conducting business in residences, residential quarters, hotels, or apartment houses, to buy from textile manufacturers that sold to retailers who entered into agreements with manufacturers to manufacture styles, or to retail dealers who entered into contracts with manufacturers for such purpose, or to purchase textiles from manufacturers who did not register their designs with the aforesaid registration bureau of said Textile Federation, or to sell to retail dealers in Chicago, Minneapolis, and Baltimore who were not members of the local guilds of said respective cities, or who did not conform to the rules and regulations of such guilds;

(7) Members of said local guilds confined their purchases of women's garments to members of said Fashion Guild and those manufacturers who conformed to its regulations, programs, and policies; and

(8) Textile members of said Fashion Guild refused to sell their products to manufacturers who entered into agreements with retail dealers to manufacture styles or to manufacturers who did not agree to purchase only from textile manufacturers who registered their designs with the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of said textile corporation:
Complaint

Held, That such acts, policies, and practices as above set forth and indicated, and under the circumstances set forth therein, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and tended to create monopoly within intent and meaning of Federal Trade Commission Act.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that each and all of the parties named in paragraphs 1 to 8, both inclusive hereof, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent F. O. G. A., is a membership corporation organized March 7, 1932, under the laws of the State of New York, and is now existing under the laws of said State with its principal office and place of business located at 512 Seventh Avenue, in the city of New York, in said State. The membership of said corporation is divided into three groups as follows: (1) Ladies' Garment Manufacturers, (2) Textile Merchants, and (3) Affiliated Members, consisting of retail dealers in ladies' garments and accessories. The following named individuals of the said city of New York are executive officers of respondent F. O. G. A. and as such are designated as respondents herein: Maurice Rentner, president and treasurer, 498 Seventh Avenue; Herbert Sondheim, first vice president, 530 Seventh Avenue; Charles Gumprecht, second vice president, 36 West Forty-seventh Street; J. A. Livingston, secretary, 498 Seventh Avenue; Albert M. Post, executive director, 512 Seventh Avenue; and James M. Golby, executive secretary, 512 Seventh Avenue.

The said respondent F. O. G. A. was organized for the ostensible purpose of establishing fair trade practices among its members and to carry out a style protective program to protect the originators of fashions and styles of ladies' garments against copying and piracy. As the organization of said respondent F. O. G. A. expanded to include textile merchants and retail dealers, it also sought to protect the originators of designs of fabrics and in addition to its regular membership established a division known as "Protective Affiliates" for those nonmember ladies' garment manufacturers who cooperated in the style protective program of the said respondent F. O. G. A.; and also designated the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., as its agency to register the designs of fabrics submitted by members of its said Textile Merchants Group.

Par. 2. The membership of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. is divided into the following divisions: Dress Division, composed exclusively of manufacturers of ladies' and misses' dresses; Coat Division, composed exclusively of manufacturers of ladies' and misses' coats; Junior Miss Division, composed exclusively of manufacturers of junior misses' dresses; and the Sportswear Division, composed exclusively of manufacturers of ladies' sportswear.

From time to time the membership of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. and the aforesaid divisions thereof, is increased by the addition of new members, so that all the members of said group at any given point of time cannot be specifically named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay, and also said respondent members constitute a class so numerous as to make it impractical to name them all as individual respondents herein. Wherefore, the officers hereinbefore named as respondents as such officers, and the other members of the board of governors of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group, hereinafter named, are also made respondents as representing all members of said group engaged in their respective lines of business, including those members not herein specifically named. The following named individuals of New York City, compose the board of governors of the Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of respondent F. O. G. A., and as such are named as respondents herein:

Coat Division: Louis M. Wersba, representing Deitsch, Wersba & Coppola, 512 Seventh Avenue; Kallman Carmel, representing Carmel Bros., Inc., 530 Seventh Avenue; and Leo A. Del Monte (alternate), representing Del Monte Hickey Co., 530 Seventh Avenue.

Junior Miss Division: Louis J. Mallas, representing Jane Junior Dresses, 498 Seventh Avenue.

Sportswear Division: David M. Goodstein, representing David M. Goodstein, Inc., 530 Seventh Avenue; and Matthew Kane (alternate), representing Kane-Weill, Inc., 498 Seventh Avenue.

The aforesaid members of the said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., consisting of approximately 180 individuals, copartners, and corporations, are located in various States of the United States, but principally in the city of New York, State of New York, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and in the city of Boston, State of Massachusetts. Most of the said members are engaged in the business of designing and manufacturing ladies', misses', and junior misses' dresses, suits, and other similar garments of high quality, and in the sale of said garments at wholesale in the higher priced lines to retail dealers located in States other than the States of manufacture, causing said garments when so sold to be transported from their respective places of manufacture to the purchasers thereof, and there has been and now is a constant current of interstate trade and commerce in said products between the members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of respondent F. O. G. A. and retail dealers in said garments, including said "Affiliated Members" of respondent F. O. G. A., located throughout the several States of the United States.
In the course and conduct of their said respective businesses, respondent members of the said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., but for the matters and things hereinafter set forth, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, and are in competition with other individuals, copartners, and corporations also engaged in the manufacture of ladies', misses', and junior misses' dresses, suits, and other similar garments and in the interstate sale of said garments to retail dealers. Said members of the Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of respondent F. O. G. A., during the year 1935, manufactured and sold approximately 50 percent of all ladies' dresses sold in the United States at the wholesale price of $10.75 and above, and 30 percent of all ladies' dresses sold in the United States at the wholesale price of $6.75 and above. The said garments designed, manufactured, and sold by said members are in such demand by the trade and public that all retail dealers of ladies' garments attempting to offer a full line of ladies' garments to the public are required to stock and handle some lines of the same.

Par. 3. Respondent Austin M. DeLisser, 512 Seventh Avenue, New York City; is executive secretary of the Textile Merchants Group of the said respondent F. O. G. A. Respondents G. H. Conze, representing Susquehanna Silk Mills, 149 Madison Avenue; E. W. Freudenberg, representing Amrein, Freudenberg Co., 14 East Thirty-eighth Street; Samuel Levine, representing Hess, Goldsmith & Co., 1400 Broadway; and E. E. Meyer, representing J. A. Wagenbauer, Inc., 469 Fifth Avenue, all of New York City, constitute the board of governors of said Textile Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., and as such are named as respondents herein. Said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. consists of approximately 50 individuals, copartners, and corporations engaged in the business of importing, converting, and manufacturing textile fabrics.

From time to time the membership of said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. is increased by the addition of new members, so that all the members of said group at any given time cannot be named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay, wherefore, the officers hereinbefore named as respondents, as such officers, and the foregoing named individuals constituting the board of governors of the said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., are also made respondents as representing all members of said Textile Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., including those not herein specifically named.

The various members of said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., in the course and conduct of their said businesses, sell textile fabrics to manufacturers of ladies' garments located in States other than the State of New York, causing said products when so sold to be transported from their respective places of business to the aforesaid purchasers thereof, and there has been and now is a constant current of interstate trade and commerce in said products between members of the Textile Merchants Group and members of the said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., and their said competitors located throughout the several States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of their said respective businesses, respondent members of the said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., but for the matters and things hereinafter set forth, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, and otherwise are in such competition with other individuals, copartners, and corporations also engaged in the business of importing, converting, and manufacturing textile fabrics and in the sale of said fabrics to retail dealers in interstate commerce.

Par. 4. Respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent Textiles, Inc., is a membership corporation organized under the laws of the State of Connecticut with its principal office and place of business at 10 East Fortieth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. Peter Van Horn is president and Irene L. Blunt is secretary of said respondent Textiles, Inc. The membership of said respondent Textiles, Inc., is made up of approximately 100 converters, dyers, printers, and manufacturers of silk and rayon fabrics located in the principal cities of the eastern portion of the United States. The said respondent, Textiles, Inc., operates and maintains a clearing house for the registration of designs of silks, rayons, laces, and embroideries under the name of Industrial Design Registration Bureau, which has been designated by the Textile Merchants Group of the said respondent F. O. G. A., as the official registration agency of designs of fabrics manufactured and sold by the members of said group.

Par. 5. Respondent Marshall Field & Co. is an Illinois corporation with its office located at 222 North Bank Drive in the city of Chicago and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise including ladies' garments. John McKinlay is president and T. H. Eddy is secretary and treasurer of said respondent Marshall Field & Co.

Respondent Allied Stores Corporation is a Delaware corporation with its office located at 1440 Broadway, New York City, State of New York, owning and operating the retail stores of Jordan Marsh Co. located in Boston, Mass., and the Golden Rule Store located in St. Paul, Minn., and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. B. Earl Puckett is president and A. C. Hallan is secretary and treasurer of said respondent Allied Stores Corporation.

Respondent Lindner Co. is an Ohio corporation with its office located at Euclid Avenue and East Fourteenth Street in the city of Cleveland, State of Ohio, owning and operating stores in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, in the city of Binghamton, State of New York, and in the city of Elmira, State of New York, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. Mack Gordon is president and Edward Schwarz is secretary of said respondent Lindner Co.

Respondent Horne Company is a Pennsylvania corporation with its office located on Penn Avenue at Stanwix Street, in the city of Pittsburgh, owning and operating a department store in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. A. H. Burchfield is President and W. H. Friesell is secretary and treasurer of said respondent Horne Co.

Respondent Mandel Brothers, Inc., is a Delaware corporation with its office located at 1 North State Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, owning and operating a department store located in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. Edwin F. Mandel is president and Ben J. Altheimer is secretary of said respondent Mandel Brothers, Inc.

Respondent John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, is a Pennsylvania corporation with its office located in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, owning and operating a department store located in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. Said respondent also owns the entire corporate stock of John Wanamaker, a New York corporation, engaged in a similar business in the city of New York in said State. Wm. L. Nevin is president and Henry H. Funk is secretary of said respondent John Wanamaker, Philadelphia.

Respondent Lit Brothers is a Pennsylvania corporation with its office located at Market and Eighth Streets, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, owning and operating a department store located in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. G. H. Johnson is president and A. T. Hild is assistant secretary of said respondent Lit Brothers.

Respondent Bullock's, Inc., is a Delaware corporation with its office located at Broadway, Hill, and Seventh Streets, in the city of Los Angeles, State of California, owning and operating a department store located in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. P. G. Winnett is president and M. E. Arnett is secretary of said respondent Bullock's, Inc.

Respondent Emporium Capwell Corporation is a California corporation with its office located at 835 Market Street, in the city of San Francisco, owning and operating the Capwell Department Store in Oakland, Calif., and the Emporium Department Store in San Francisco, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. A. B. C. Dohrmann is president and E. C. Lipman is vice president and manager of said respondent Emporium Capwell Corporation.

Respondent J. L. Hudson Co. is a Michigan corporation with its office located in the city of Detroit, owning and operating a department store located in said city, and is an affiliated member of respondent F. O. G. A., engaged in the retail sale and distribution of merchandise, including ladies' garments. R. H. Webber is president and W. A. Petzold is secretary of said respondent J. L. Hudson Co.

The membership of the said Affiliated Members Group of the said respondent F. O. G. A. consists of approximately 12,000 retail dealers in ladies' garments and accessories, located in the principal trading centers of the several States of the United States, and include a substantial number of leading department stores and exclusive ladies' wear shops. From time to time the membership of the said Affiliated Member Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., is increased by the addition of new members so that all the affiliated retail dealer members of said respondent F. O. G. A. at any given point of time cannot be specifically named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay, and also said respondent members constitute a class so numerous as to make it impractical to name them all as individual respondents herein. Wherefore, the foregoing respondent affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A. described in this paragraph are also made respondents herein as representing all affiliated retail members of said respondent F. O. G. A., including those not herein specifically named.

Par. 6. Respondent Michigan Avenue Guild of Chicago, hereinafter referred to as respondent M. A. G., is a membership corporation organized December 27, 1932, under the laws of the State of Illinois, and is now existing under the laws of said State as a nonprofit organization with its principal office and place of business located at 840 North Michigan Avenue, city of Chicago, in said State. The membership of said corporation consists of approximately 200 retail dealers of ladies' wearing apparel, located in and near the said city of Chicago, approved by the executive committee of said M. A. G., and who are, or have agreed to become, affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A., or who have agreed to comply with the trade practice rules and regulations of said respondent F. O. G. A. The following named individuals of said city of Chicago are officers and directors of said respondent M. A. G., and as such are designated as respondents herein: George M. Gleason, president and director, representing Saks-Fifth Avenue, 840 North Michigan Avenue; Guy L. Ederheimer, vice president and director, representing Leschin, Inc., 318 South Michigan Avenue; L. R. Pearson, treasurer, representing Martha Weathered Shop, 950 North Michigan Avenue; Edw. A. Fletcher, secretary, 840 North Michigan Avenue; Harry Blum, director, representing Blum's-Vogue, Inc., 630 South Michigan Avenue; Frank L. Cole, director, representing Martha Weathered Shop, 950 North Michigan Avenue; Herman Friedman, director, representing Kermans, 160 North Michigan Avenue; Mrs. Sally K. Greenebaum, director, representing Sally K. Greenebaum, 540 North Michigan Avenue; Clarance A. Powell, director, representing Powell-700 North, Inc., 700 North Michigan Avenue; Bernard Rose, director, representing South Shore Vogue, 2372 East Seventy-first Street; and Mrs. Elise A. Runyan, director, representing Elise A. Runyan, Inc., 1365 East Fifty-third Street.

From time to time the membership of said respondent M. A. G. is increased by the addition of new members so that all the affiliated members of said respondent M. A. G. at any given point of time cannot be specifically named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay. Wherefore, the officers and directors of respondent M. A. G. hereinbefore named as respondents, as such officers and directors, are also made respondents as representing all members of said respondent M. A. G., including those not herein specifically named.

Par. 7. Respondent Minneapolis Fashion Guild, hereinafter referred to as respondent Minneapolis Guild, is a membership corporation organized on or about June 1, 1932, under the laws of the State of Minnesota. Respondent Roy H. Bjorkman, representing respondent Roy H. Bjorkman, Inc., a member of said respondent Minneapolis Guild, located at Tenth and Nicollet, Minneapolis, Minn., is executive secretary of said respondent Minneapolis Guild. The membership of said Minneapolis Guild consists of approximately 15 persons, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale at retail of ladies' dresses, suits, coats, and sportswear, and whose stores are located in the city of Minneapolis, in said State, and who are, or who have agreed to become, affiliated members of the said respondent F. O. G. A.

From time to time the membership of said respondent Minneapolis Guild is increased by the addition of new members so that all the affiliated members of said respondent Minneapolis Guild at any given point of time cannot be specifically named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay. Wherefore, the officer and member hereinafter named as respondent, as such officer and member of Minneapolis Guild, is also made respondent as representing all members of said respondent Minneapolis Guild, including those not herein specifically named.

Par. 8. Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent Baltimore Guild, is a membership corporation organized under the laws of the State of Maryland on or about January 1, 1935, and now existing under the laws of said State. The membership of said Baltimore Guild consists of approximately 40 persons, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale at retail of ladies' dresses, suits, coats, and sportswear, and whose stores are located in the city of Baltimore, State of Maryland, and who are, or have agreed to become, affiliated members of the respondent F. O. G. A. The following named individuals of the said city of Baltimore, are officers and directors of respondent Baltimore Guild, and as such are designated as respondents herein: C. F. Roycroft, secretary, 1200 Lexington Building; Charles G. Hutzler, president and director, representing Hutzler Brothers Co., 212 North Howard Street; Allen S. Metzger, vice president and director, representing the Maison Annette Co., 328 North Charles Street; Fred H. Alperstein, director, representing The Gaxton Co., 214 North Charles Street; William Pollock, director, representing The Hub, Charles & Baltimore Streets; Lester Bonwit, director, representing Bonwit Lennon, Inc., 220 North Charles Street; Martin Kohn, director, representing Hochschild Kohn & Co., Howard and Lexington Streets; Albert D. Slesinger, director, representing Slesingers, Inc., 342 North Charles Street; J. E. Ellington, director, representing the May Co., Howard and Lexington Streets; Sam J. Schleisner, director, representing the Schleisner Co., Howard and Saratoga Streets; and Hal W. Kenaston, director, representing O'Neill & Co., Charles and Lexington Streets.
From time to time the membership of said respondent Baltimore Guild is increased by the addition of new members so that all the members of said respondent Baltimore Guild at any given point of time cannot be specifically named as respondents herein without inconvenience and delay. Wherefore, the officers and directors hereinbefore named as respondents, as such officers and directors of said respondent Baltimore Guild, are also made respondents as representing all members of said respondent Baltimore Guild, including those not herein specifically named.

Par. 9. The said respondents hereinbefore named and described, and each of them, during the period of time, to wit, from January 1, 1932, to the date of this complaint, have entered into an agreement, combination, and conspiracy with each other and with other persons, to hinder and suppress competition in the interstate sale and distribution of textile fabrics to manufacturers of ladies' and misses' garments, including dresses, suits, and coats; and also to hinder and suppress competition between and among said manufacturers of said garments in the interstate sale and distribution of their said products to retail dealers; and also to restrain interstate trade in said textile fabrics and said garments; and also to create a monopoly in the manufacture and interstate sale of said fabrics and said garments in the said members and affiliated members of said respondent F.O.G.A. Pursuant to said agreement, combination, and conspiracy said respondents have respectively and cooperatively performed, and are now so performing, the following acts and practices, to wit:

(a) Said respondent F.O.G.A. has coerced and compelled, and now compels, manufacturers of ladies' garments to confine the purchases of their requirements of textiles and fabrics to members of said Textile Merchants Group of respondent F.O.G.A., or to importers, converters, and manufacturers who have cooperated and are now cooperating with said respondent F.O.G.A. by registering their designs of said fabrics and textiles with the said respondent F.O.G.A. or with the said Industrial Design Registration Bureau of said respondent Textiles, Inc.; under the penalty of being required to pay fines of substantial amounts of money to said respondent F.O.G.A., and of being boycotted by members of said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F.O.G.A.

(b) Said respondent F.O.G.A. has coerced and compelled, and now compels, said ladies' garment manufacturers to confine the sales of their merchandise to retail dealers who are affiliated members of said respondent F.O.G.A., or who have cooperated and are now cooperating with said respondent by purchasing their requirements of ladies' garments exclusively from the said members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group or said protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A., or otherwise have cooperated or are cooperating with the respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program as set forth herein; under penalty of being required to pay fines of substantial amounts of money to said respondent F. O. G. A., and of being boycotted by said affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A. or other retail dealers who have cooperated and are now cooperating with said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program as set forth herein.

(c) Said respondent F. O. G. A. has coerced and compelled, and now coerces and compels, retail dealers of ladies' garments to become affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A., and to enter into agreements with said respondent F. O. G. A. by which and pursuant to which said retail dealers purchase their requirements of the respective lines of ladies' garments from the members of the said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of the said respondent F. O. G. A. or the said protective affiliates, insofar as those respective lines are sold by said members or protective affiliates; and to refuse to purchase said ladies' garments from manufacturers who have copied garments adjudged and reported by said respondent F. O. G. A. to have been designed by said members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A.; and upon notice from said respondent F. O. G. A. to return all garments to said manufacturers which are adjudged by said respondent F. O. G. A. to be copies of garments designed, manufactured, and sold by members of said Ladies Garment Manufacturers Group, or said protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A., and registered with said respondent F. O. G. A.; and to otherwise cooperate with said respondent F. O. G. A. in removing from the market garments of manufacturers who are not cooperating with said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program set forth herein; under penalty of being blacklisted and boycotted by the members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. as more particularly described in subparagraph (d) hereof.

(d) Said respondent F. O. G. A. has employed and now employs shoppers to spy upon retail dealers, including said affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A., to ascertain whether or not any of the ladies' garments being offered for sale by said retail dealers appears to be a copy of garments designed, manufactured, or sold by members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group or said protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A. and registered with said respondent F. O. G. A.; and where said retail dealers are offering for sale garments which appear to be such copies and said retail dealers refuse or decline to cooperate with said respondent F. O. G. A. in removing from the market the garments of manufacturers who are not cooperating with said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program as set forth herein, said respondent F. O. G. A. places the names of such noncooperating retail dealers on a blacklist and circulates said blacklist among the members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group and said Textile Merchants Group of said respondent F. O. G. A., who thereupon and thereafter refuse to sell fabrics or ladies' garments designed and manufactured by them to such noncooperating retail dealers; and since the date of its organization said respondent F. O. G. A. has blacklisted, and said members of said respondent F. O. G. A. have refused to sell their products to more than 400 retail dealers located throughout the several States of the United States.

(e) Said respondent F. O. G. A. has coerced and compelled, and now coerces and compels, the members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. to refuse to exhibit, sell or ship merchandise to persons conducting retail establishments from residential premises, or who do not cooperate with said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program as set forth herein; and also refuse to participate in fashion shows sponsored by retail dealers or to display samples to group buyers; and also to agree upon uniform terms of sale and discounts, and to otherwise refrain from competing for the business of said retail dealers; under penalty of being required to pay to the said respondent F. O. G. A. fines in substantial amounts of money, and of being expelled from membership in said respondent F. O. G. A.

(f) Said respondent F. O. G. A., upon ascertaining through reports of its said shoppers that a member of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group, or any other manufacturer of ladies' garments, has been selling ladies' garments to retail dealers which are copies of garments adjudged by said respondent F. O. G. A. to have been designed by members of said Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group of said respondent F. O. G. A. and registered with the said respondent F. O. G. A., demands that said manufacturers discontinue said practice and cooperate with said respondent F. O. G. A. in removing from the market the garments adjudged to be copies, and if said manufacturers refuse to so comply with said demands, said respondent F. O. G. A. places the names of said noncooperating manufacturers upon a blacklist which is circulated among the retail dealers, affiliated members of said respondent F. O. G. A. Said retail dealers thereupon and thereafter, pursuant to coercion on the part of said respondent F. O. G. A., refuse to further purchase their requirements of ladies' garments from said noncooperating manufacturers; and since the date of its organization said respondent F. O. G. A. has caused its affiliated members to refuse to purchase ladies' garments from more than 100 ladies' garment manufacturers located throughout the several States of the United States.

(g) Said respondent F. O. G. A. has coerced and compelled, and now coerces and compels, said respondent Textile Merchants Group to register all designs of fabrics and textiles imported, converted, or manufactured by them with the said respondent F. O. G. A. or said Industrial Design Registration Bureau of respondent Textiles, Inc., and to confine the sale of their fabrics, so registered, to members or affiliated members or said protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A., and to refrain from selling said products to garment manufacturers or retail dealers who are not members or affiliated members or protective affiliates of said respondent F. O. G. A.

(h) Said respondent Textiles, Inc., operating through and by means of its said division known as Industrial Design Registration Bureau, has, within the past year, in the solicitation of the registration of designs of fabrics from importers, converters, and manufacturers of textile fabrics, notified said importers, converters, and manufacturers of textile fabrics that the members of the Ladies' Garment Manufacturers Group and protective affiliates of the respondent F. O. G. A. had pledged themselves in writing to use only the registered designs of fabrics registered with said Industrial Design Registration Bureau, and that said Bureau had been designated by the said respondent F. O. G. A. as its agency to handle the registration of designs for said textile fabrics.

(i) Said respondents' local guilds, M. A. G., Minneapolis Guild, Baltimore Guild, and their officers and members, since their organization, have cooperated with the said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program by entering into agreements with said respondent F. O. G. A. whereby it is agreed on the part of the respondent F. O. G. A. that its members will not sell merchandise within the respective areas of said local guilds to retailers who are not members in good standing of said guilds, or to those retailers whose practices do not conform to the standards of fair-trade practice of the respective guilds; and it is agreed on the part of the said local guilds that their members will not purchase ready-to-wear merchandise from any manufacturer not cooperating with said respondent F. O. G. A. in its style protective program, and the officers and officials of said local guilds have cooperated with the said respondent F. O. G. A. in using their official positions in the enforcement and maintenance of said agreements.

Par. 10. The result of the said agreement, combination, and conspiracy, and the acts and practices performed thereunder by said respondents, as hereinbefore set forth, has been and now is (a) to prevent and hinder importers, converters, and manufacturers of textile fabrics from selling their merchandise in interstate commerce to garment manufacturers who but for the existence of said agreement, combination, or conspiracy would purchase said products; (b) to prevent retail dealers in ladies' and misses' garments from purchasing their requirements of said products in interstate commerce from the manufacturers thereof; (c) to force many retail dealers to discontinue the sale of said products because of their inability to maintain a supply thereof at reasonable prices; (d) to substantially increase the price of ladies' and misses' garments to the manufacturers, retail dealers, and to the consuming public; and (e) to place in the hands of the respondent F. O. G. A. control over the business practices of the manufacturers and distributors of ladies' and misses' garments, and the power to exclude from this industry those manufacturers and distributors who do not conform to the rules and regulations established by said respondent F. O. G. A., and thus to tend to create a monopoly in the said respondent F. O. G. A. and its members.

Par. 11. The foregoing alleged acts and practices of the said respondents have been and still are to the prejudice of the buying public generally and the customers and competitors of the members of said respondents in particular, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 16, A. D., 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents specifically named in the caption hereof and upon the various corporations and individuals named as respondent in the body of the complaint, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Reuben J. Martin and Everett F. Haycraft, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Milton C. Weisman and M. A. Albert, attorneys for the respondent, before John W. Bennett, Edward M. Averill and Charles F. Diggs, respectively, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

The following named persons were members of its Board of Directors in 1935:

George M. Gleason.
Clarence A. Powell.

Herman Friedman.
Ellise A. Runyan.

Par. 3. Respondent Minneapolis Fashion Guild is an unincorporated membership association, having its headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn. Roy H. Bjorkman is the executive secretary of this association and dominates and controls its activities. The association has no other officers or directors. Approximately nineteen dealers in women's wearing apparel whose places of business are located in Minneapolis, Minn., comprise the membership of this association.

Par. 4. Respondent Ladies’ Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore, Inc., is a membership corporation organized under the laws of the State of Maryland. The following-named persons comprise the officers and directors of this corporation:

Charles G. Hutzler, president and director.
Allen S. Metzger, vice president and director.
C. F. Roycroft, secretary.
Fred H. Alperstein, director.
William Pollock, director.
Lester Bonwit, director.
Martin B. Kohn, director.
Albert D. Slesinger, director.
J. E. Ellington, director.
Sam J. Schleisner, director.
Hal W. Kenaston, director.

The membership of this respondent corporation is composed of approximately 40 retail dealers in women's garments whose places of business are located in Baltimore, Md.

Par. 5. Respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., is a membership corporation organized under the laws of the State of Connecticut. Its principal office is located at 10 East Fortieth Street, in the City and State of New York. Peter Van Horn is the president of this corporation and Irene L. Blunt is its secretary.

The membership of this corporation consists of approximately 100 manufacturers, converters, dyers, and printers of silk and rayon fabrics.

Par. 6. Approximately 12,000 retail dealers in women's garments, located at various places throughout the United States cooperate with the respondent F. O. G. A. in carrying out its hereinafter described programs, policies, and practices, and have signed declarations of cooperation which will be hereinafter described. It is impracticable to name all of said cooperating retailers as respondents, but the following named respondents are representative of the whole:

Marshall Field & Co.—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 222 North Bank Drive, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. John McKinley is president of this corporation; Ernest L. Olrich is its secretary; and Horace A. Wetmore is its treasurer.

Allied Stores Corporation—a corporation organized under the laws of Delaware, and having its principal place of business at 85 Ellison Street, Paterson, N. J. D. Earl Pluckett is its president and A. C. Hallam is its secretary and treasurer.
The Lindner Co'y (designated in the complaint as Linder Co.)— a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and having its principal place of business at Euclid Avenue and East Fourteenth Street, in the city of Cleveland and State of Ohio. Max Gordon is its president and Edward Schwarz is its secretary.

Joseph Horne Co. (designated in the complaint as Horne Co.)— a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and having its principal place of business on Pennsylvania Avenue and Stanwix Street, in the city of Pittsburgh, Pa. A. M. Burchfield is its president and W. M.
Friesell is its secretary and treasurer.

Mandel Bros., Inc.—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 1 North State Street, in the City of Chicago, State of Illinois. Edwin F. Mandel is its president and Sam
J. Altheimer is its secretary.

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and having its principle place of business in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. William L. Nevin is its president and Henry H. Funk is its secretary.

Lit Bros., Inc. (designated in the complaint as Lit Bros.)—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and having its principal place of business in the son is its president and A. T. Hild is its assistant secretary.

Bullocks', Inc.—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal place of business located at Hill and Seventh Streets in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. F. G. Winnett is its president and M. E. Arnett is its secretary.

The Emporium Capwell Corporation (named in the complaint as Emporium Capwell Corporation)—a corporation organi­zed under the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its principal place of business at 835 Market Street in the city of San Francisco, State of California. Joel W. Kaufman is its vice president, secretary, and treasurer. This corporation owns all the common stock of the Emporium, a Caliifornia corporation which owns and operates the Capwell Department Store, located in Oakland, Calif., and the Emporium Department Store, located in San Francisco, Calif.
J. L. Hudson Co.—a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan and having its principal place of business located in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan. Oscar Weber is its vice president and general manager.

In a number of instances these cooperating retail dealers, at the request of the F. O. G. A., have contributed to its fund to be used in defraying the expenses incident to the effectuation of its programs and policies, and such contributing retail dealers are designated by the F. O. G. A. as retail contributing members.

Par. 7. The members of the F. O. G. A. and the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., sell and ship their products to dealers located in States other than those in which said members are located, and in so doing, are in competition among themselves and with other manufacturers who likewise sell and ship similar products.

Par. 8. The garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. are a dominant factor in the women's garment manufacturing industry, and their products are in such demand by the trade and the purchasing public that all retail dealers in women's garments, in order to meet competition and the demand of the consuming public, are compelled to stock and handle some of the lines manufactured by said F. O. G. A. members. The combined sales of the members of the F. O. G. A. in 1936 constituted 38.8 percent of the total sales of women's garments in the United States in the wholesale price range of $6.75 and up, and 83.99 percent in the wholesale price range of $10.75 and up.

Par. 9. Respondent F. O. G. A. was organized in March 1932 by approximately 15 manufacturers of women's garments which sold at wholesale for from $29.50 up. Manufacturers of lower-priced garments were admitted from time to time, and by the fall of 1935 the membership included manufacturers in the price range of from $6.75 up. After the F. O. G. A. was organized, it was decided to include in its membership manufacturers of textiles used in the women's garment manufacturing industry. By April 16, 1936, the membership of this respondent consisted of 176 manufacturers of women's garments and 49 manufacturers, converters, dyers, and printers of textiles.

Respondent F. O. G. A. was organized primarily for the purpose of preventing the copying for sale in commerce of alleged original creations in fashions and styles of women's garments. The program was later expanded to cover designs of textiles used in the manufacture of women's garments. This respondent from time to time enlarged its original program to cover other practices and policies which will be hereinafter set forth.
FASHION ORIGINATORS GUILD OF AMERICA, INC., ET AL.

PAR. 10. Respondent F. O. G. A., in furtherance of its objectives, sought and secured the cooperation of the three respondent local guilds, Michigan Avenue Guild of Chicago, Minneapolis Fashion Guild, and Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore, Inc. Each of these guilds entered into an agreement with the F. O. G. A., by the terms of which the F. O. G. A. agrees that its members will not sell their products in the cities in which said local guilds are located to retailers who are not members in good standing of said local guilds, or who do not conform to their standards and regulations; that they will not sell at retail to individual consumers or to persons conducting their business in residences, residential quarters, or in hotels or apartment buildings; that they will not conduct off-price promotion sales or clearance sales prior to the dates fixed by the local guild; that they will not sell to any member of the local guild who shall violate any of the provisions of the agreement until such member is restored to good standing in the local guild; that if any of its members shall breach any of the provisions of this agreement they will be suspended from membership.

The respective local guilds agree that their members will not purchase from manufacturers who do not conform to the standard of ethics and the regulation of the F. O. G. A.; that they will not knowingly buy or sell copies of legitimately registered styles and will return any such copies as are found in their stock; that they will accept the decision of the "style piracy" division of the F. O. G. A. on all questions of alleged design piracy; that they will stamp all their orders for merchandise with the warranty clause formulated by the F. O. G. A., which clause is as follows:

This order is placed upon the seller's warranty that the above garments are not copies of styles originated by members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc. The purchaser reserves the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.

Each of the respondent local guilds agrees that it will suspend from membership any member who shall violate any of the provisions of the agreement; that its members will refrain from purchasing from any member of the F. O. G. A. who shall violate any of the provisions of this agreement until such time as such member shall be restored to membership in good standing of the F. O. G. A.

The terms of these agreements were fulfilled by the F. O. G. A. and its members, and by the respective local guilds and their members.

PAR. 11. Respondent F. O. G. A., in 1933, determined that its objectives would be best accomplished by securing the cooperation of individual retail dealers in women's garments in territories which had no local guilds, and to this end, it distributed to retail dealers throughout the United States copies of what it termed a "Declaration of Cooperation," for the signature of the retailer. It is stated in this Declaration of Cooperation that the retailer will not buy any copies of merchandise created by members of the F. O. G. A.; that he will abide by the decision of the "piracy committee" of the F. O. G. A., and return such garments as are adjudged to be copies of the Guild's registered styles, and will cooperate with the F. O. G. A. to the fullest extent in helping it to remove such copies from the market; that he will furnish the F. O. G. A. with such information in his possession as it may desire; that he will affix to all of his apparel orders the warranty clause formulated by the F. O. G. A., which is set forth in paragraph 10 hereof.
Findings

At first the F. O. G. A. attempted to secure the voluntary cooperation of the retailers and their signatures to the declaration of cooperation by representing the advantages to be derived from such cooperation; later, after having secured a number of voluntary signatures to this "declaration," the F. O. G. A., coerced, constrained, and compelled retail dealers to sign such declarations of cooperation under the threat that unless they did so, its members would refuse to sell them their products or to allow them to inspect their lines of merchandise. The garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. have refused and do refuse to exhibit or sell their merchandise to retailers who fail or refuse to sign said declarations of cooperation, or who, having signed same, fail to comply with the requirements thereof.

As a result of the coercive activities of the F. O. G. A., approximately 12,000 retail dealers, including those specifically mentioned in paragraph 6 hereof, had signed such declarations of cooperation and returned same to the F. O. G. A. by the end of 1935. The retailers who signed these declarations thereafter refused to purchase garments which were determined by the F. O. G. A. to be copies of original registered styles or designs of its members, and the terms of the declaration were generally complied with by the signers thereof. In some instances, however, signers of these declarations of cooperation failed or refused to comply with the terms of such declaration of cooperation, in which instances the members of the F. O. G. A., in accordance with the requirement of the F. O. G. A., refused to sell or exhibit their merchandise to such noncomplying retailers. The majority of the 12,000 retail dealers in women's garments referred to in paragraph 6 hereof signed such declarations of cooperation as a result of the threat of the F. O. G. A. that its members would sell their products only to those merchants who signed the declaration of cooperation.
The respondent, F. O. G. A., after it had secured the cooperation of a large number of retail dealers, sought to, and did, induce many retailers not only to refuse to purchase alleged copies of original designs of its members, but also to refuse to purchase any of their requirements from manufacturers who copied original styles or designs of members of the F. O. G. A.

Par. 12. The F. O. G. A., as a part of its program, in 1933 instituted its Design Registration Bureau for the registration of alleged original designs and styles of its women's garment-manufacturing members. Blank application forms were furnished the members, on which description was entered of the design and style of the garment to be registered, and members were required to submit a sketch of the garment with such form, together with an affidavit setting forth that the garment sought to be registered was an original design created by the applicant. Each registration was stamped and numbered, but such registration raised no presumption that the registered garment was, in fact, the original design of the registrant, but merely fixed the date when such claim was made.

Par. 13. The F. O. G. A. from time to time appoints what it designates as a "piracy committee," to determine whether the garments alleged to be copies of styles and designs registered by its members as original creations are such in fact. The piracy committee notifies both parties to the controversy as to the time and place of hearing, and both the garment claimed as original and its alleged copy are before the committee. After the hearing, the committee makes its determination, and if adverse to the alleged copyist, he has the right of appeal to certain other successive committees, as provided. When the challenged party has exhausted the appeals in such case provided, the status of the garment is fixed.

Par. 14. The F. O. G. A. employs in the principal cities throughout the country persons designated as "shoppers," who visit the stores of cooperating retail dealers for the purpose of examining their stocks, to determine and report as to whether they contain garments declared by the piracy committee of the F. O. G. A. to be copies of registered designs or styles of its members. When such copies are discovered by the shoppers, they request the retailer to remove the same from sale, and failure to do so is reported by the shopper to the F. O. G. A. These shoppers also visit the stores of noncooperating retail dealers, without disclosing their identity, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such merchants have on sale copies of alleged original designs and styles of F. O. G. A. members, and if such are found, it is reported to the F. O. G. A.
PAR. 15. The F. O. G. A., in order to provide an effective means of preventing the purchase by retail dealers of alleged copies of original styles and designs registered by its members, inaugurated and maintains a card-index system by which the names of cooperating retailers who have signed the declaration of cooperation are each entered on a white card, duplicates of which are sent to each member of the F. O. G. A., and such members are prohibited from selling to any retail merchant whose name is not so carded. The names of retailers who fail or refuse to sign the declaration of cooperation, or who, having signed, fail or refuse to take off sales garments adjudged by the piracy committee of the F. O. G. A. to be copies of registered original designs of an F. O. G. A. member, are entered on a red card, a duplicate of which is sent to each member of the F. O. G. A., and upon receipt of same, the member, in compliance with the regulations and requirements of the F. O. G. A., refuses to sell such red-carded retailer. The F. O. G. A. also distributes among its members lists of retailers who have failed or refused to sign the declaration of cooperation, or who, having signed same, fail or refuse to remove from sale copies of alleged original styles or designs registered by its members, or who fail to comply with the rules and regulations of the F. O. G. A., with instructions that members receiving such lists are not to sell their merchandise to persons whose names appear thereon, and its members thereafter refuse to sell such persons. The red-carded list, on March 20, 1936, contained the names of over 400 retail dealers located at various places throughout the United States. The F. O. G. A. has also red-carded retailers who refuse to disclose the names of the manufacturer from whom they purchased alleged copies, even though such retailers removed the alleged copies from sale.

PAR. 16. The respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., maintains a clearing-house for the registration of textile designs, under the name Industrial Design Registration Bureau. This bureau is available to members and nonmembers of said respondent corporation. The F. O. G. A. designated this bureau as the official registration bureau of its textile members, and the garment-manufacturing members and the textile members of the F. O. G. A. entered into an agreement that the former would not buy textiles which were not registered in said bureau, and the latter agreed to sell only to those garment manufacturers who became parties to said agreement. The agreements were and are kept by said members.

PAR. 17. Respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., on December 23, 1935, placed an advertisement in a trade journal, notifying manufacturers and converters of textiles used in the women's garment manufacturing industry that members of the F. O. G. A. and other manufacturers of women's garments who were not members of the F. O. G. A., had signed pledges to use only textile designs which had been registered in the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

PAR. 18. On December 28, 1933, the F. O. G. A. passed a resolution that, as a means of preventing style piracy, its members would not buy from textile manufacturers who sold to retailers who entered into agreements with manufacturers to manufacture styles, and that they would not sell to retailers who resort to this practice.

PAR. 19. On September 13, 1933, the board of governors of the F. O. G. A., by resolution, prohibited its members from participating in any manner whatsoever in any retail advertising, and fixed expulsion from the organization as the penalty for violation thereof; and the members of the F. O. G. A. have complied and do comply with the terms of this resolution.

PAR. 20. On June 10, 1935, the F. O. G. A. adopted a resolution that none of its members should allow or give any discount in excess of "8-10 e. o. m."

PAR. 21. The F. O. G. A., on June 10, 1935, adopted a resolution prohibiting its members from selling at retail, and thereafter its members refused to make retail sales.

PAR. 22. The F. O. G. A. cooperated with the Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore Inc., in its attempt to prevent special sales except upon days designated by said Baltimore Guild.

PAR. 23. In compliance with the policy and program of the F. O. G. A., its members refuse to sell their women's garments to persons who conduct business in residences, residential quarters, hotels, or apartment houses.

PAR. 24. In the event a retailer fails to obey the rule of the F. O. G. A. which prohibits retailers participating with dress manufacturers in promoting fashion shows unless the merchandise used therein be actually purchased and delivered, the F. O. G. A. refuses to continue its affiliation with such retailer and denies to him all the privileges resulting from such affiliation.

PAR. 25. In compliance with the policy and program of the F. O. G. A., its members refrain from participating in fashion shows sponsored by retailers.

PAR. 26. The F. O. G. A. employs auditors who audit the books of its members to ascertain whether they are selling red-carded retailers or violating any of the regulations, policies, or programs of the F. O. G. A.

PAR. 27. The F. O. G. A. collects fines which it imposes on its members who are shown by its auditor's reports, or otherwise, to have sold red-carded retailers, or to have violated any of its policies or programs. A fine of $1,500 was collected from one member, and the F. O. G. A. notified its membership that a fine of $5,000 would be assessed by it in case of future violation.

PAR. 28. Retail dealers in women's garments who have failed or refused to cooperate with the F. O. G. A., or who, having signed its declaration of cooperation, have failed or refused to remove from sale garments declared by the F. O. G. A. to be copies of registered original designs or styles of its members, have been occasioned loss of good will and great financial loss by the refusal of garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. to sell them their merchandise.

PAR. 29. Manufacturers of women's garments who sell their products in interstate commerce and who are not members of the F. O. G. A. have been occasioned great financial loss, due to the return by retail dealers, in compliance with the requirements of respondent F. O. G. A., of garments declared by said respondent to be copies of registered original styles or designs of its members.

PAR. 30. Respondent F. O. G. A. has induced and constrained retail dealers to refrain from purchasing any of their requirements from manufacturers declared by it to be confirmed copyists, and as a result, such manufacturers have suffered great financial loss.

PAR. 31. All of the respondents, during the period of time, to wit, from March 7, 1932, to April 16, 1936, by cooperating with each other in the conduct and consummation of the policies and programs of the respondent F. O. G. A., and pursuant to understandings, arrangements, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies entered into jointly and severally by them, and by reason of the policies and programs in pursuance thereof, have produced and caused the following conditions and effects:

(a) Prevented competitors of members of the F. O. G. A. and the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., from making sales of their products and shipments thereof in interstate commerce, and, as a result, competition in interstate commerce in the sale and shipment of women's garments and textiles used in the manufacture thereof has been substantially lessened, hindered, and suppressed.

(b) Prevented retail dealers in women's garments, located throughout the United States, from buying their requirements from manufacturers boycotted by the respondent F. O. G. A., and as a result, competition in interstate commerce in the purchase and sale of women's garments has been substantially lessened, hindered and suppressed.
(c) Respondents F. O. G. A. and the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., have obtained and have exercised control over the business practices of a majority of the manufacturers and distributors of women's garments and the textiles used in the manufacture thereof, and have the power to exclude from the industry those manufacturers and distributors who do not conform to the rules and regulations of said respondents, and thus tend to create in themselves a monopoly in the said industries.

(d) Constrained, coerced, and compelled retail dealers in women's garments throughout the United States to declare their intention to cooperate with the F. O. G. A. in its policies and programs by signing the declaration of cooperation submitted by the F. O. G. A.

(e) Caused retail dealers in women's garments who failed or refused to sign the declaration of cooperation of the F. O. G. A., or who, having signed same, failed to remove from sale garments found by the F. O. G. A. to be copies of styles or designs registered as original creations of its members, to suffer great financial loss and loss of good will because of the refusal of members of the F. O. G. A. to sell their merchandise to such retailers.

(f) The F. O. G. A. fixes the amount of discounts to be given by its garment-manufacturing members to retail dealers.

(g) Garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to sell their merchandise at retail, or to persons conducting business in residences, residential quarters, hotels, or apartment houses.

(h) The F. O. G. A. prohibits its garment-manufacturing members from participating in fashion shows conducted by retailers.

(i) The F. O. G. A. prevents its garment-manufacturing members from subsidizing retail advertising.

(j) The F. O. G. A. exacts fines from its garment-manufacturing members for violation of its policies and programs.

(k) Garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to buy from textile manufacturers that sell to retailers who enter into agreements with manufacturers to manufacture styles.

(l) Garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to sell to retail dealers who enter into contracts with manufacturers to manufacture styles.

(m) Textile members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to sell their products to manufacturers who enter into agreements with retail dealers to manufacture styles.

(n) Garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to purchase textiles from manufacturers thereof who do not register their designs with the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.
(o) Textile members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to sell their products to manufacturers who do not agree to purchase only from textile manufacturers who register their designs with the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

(p) Garment-manufacturing members of the F. O. G. A. refuse to sell to retail dealers in Chicago, Ill., Minneapolis, Minn., and Baltimore, Md., who are not members of the local guild of said respective cities, or who do not conform to the rules and regulations of said respective guilds; and members of said respondent local guilds confine their purchases of women's garments to members of the F. O. G. A. and those manufacturers who conform to the regulations, programs and policies of the F. O. G. A.

CONCLUSION

The acts, policies, and practices of the respondents, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, under the circumstances therein set forth, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and tend to create a monopoly, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, the testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Bennett, Edward M. Averill and Charles F. Diggs, respectively, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and briefs filed herein and oral arguments by counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., its officers, Maurice Rentner, president, treasurer and member of its board of governors.
Herbert Sondheim, first vice president and member of its board of governors.

*Order published as modified by Commission order dated March 29, 1939, which eliminated from the original cease and desist order the following paragraph, to wit: "(a) To refuse to sell their textile products to manufacturers of women's garments who fail or refuse to agree that they will not purchase any of their requirements from textile manufacturers who do not register their designs in the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc." (See p. 473.)

and all present and future members, their agents, servants, and employees, each and all,

Cease and desist from directly or indirectly, jointly or severally, entering into or carrying out any understanding, arrangement, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, with each other or with any other person or persons, association, or corporation, to hinder or suppress competition in the interstate sale and distribution of women's garments or textiles used in the manufacture thereof; or to hinder or suppress competition among manufacturers of said garments or textiles in the interstate sale and distribution of said products to retail dealers, and particularly from directly or indirectly, in pursuance of any such understanding, arrangement, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, from:

1. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling manufacturers of women's garments to confine their purchases of textiles to those textile manufacturers who register their designs in the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

2. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to buy from textile manufacturers who sell to retail dealers in women's garments who enter into agreements with manufacturers to manufacture styles, or to refuse to sell to such retail dealers as resort to such practices.

3. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling textile members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to sell textiles to women's garment manufacturers who do not agree to purchase only from textile manufacturers who register their designs with the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

4. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to sell their merchandise to retail dealers who do not agree to cooperate with, or who do not cooperate with, the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., by refusing to buy women's garments declared by it to be copies of original registered designs of its members and registered by them in the registration bureau of said respondent, Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., and by returning to the manufacturers thereof any such copies which may be found in their stock, and by stamping all their orders for merchandise with the warranty clause stamp of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., which recites that the seller warrants that the garments ordered and sold are not copies of styles originated by members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., and that the purchaser reserves the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.

5. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to confine their sales in Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn., and Baltimore, Md.; to retail dealers in women's garments who are members of the respective respondent local guilds of those cities, to wit: Michigan Avenue Guild of Chicago, Minneapolis Fashion Guild and Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore, Inc., or those who conform to the standards and regulations of such respondent local guilds.

6. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women's garment-manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to conduct off-price promotion sales, or clearance sales in Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn., and Baltimore, Md.; prior to the dates fixed for such sales by the respective respondent local guilds, to wit: Michigan Avenue Guild of Chicago, Minneapolis Fashion Guild, and Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Guild of Baltimore, Inc.

7. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the Women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to sell at retail, or to persons conducting their business in residences, residential quarters, hotels, or apartment buildings.

8. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to exhibit or sell their merchandise to retail dealers who fail or refuse to sign the Declaration of Cooperation of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., or who, having signed same, fail or refuse to comply with the conditions thereof.

9. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women’s garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to contribute to the cost of advertisements of retail dealers in women’s garments.

10. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women’s garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to participate in fashion shows sponsored by retailers.

11. Fixing or attempting to fix, or dictate, the amount of discounts to be allowed by the women's garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to retail dealers in women's garments.

12. Inducing, coercing, constraining, or compelling the women’s garment manufacturing members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., to refuse to permit retailers to participate with them in promoting fashion shows unless the merchandise used therein has been actually purchased and delivered to such retailers.

13. Employing auditors, accountants, or others to audit the books of the members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., Order 28 F. T. C.

for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are violating or have violated any of the policies, regulations or programs of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., and from imposing or collecting fines or penalties, or suspending or expelling from membership in the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., those members who violate the policies, regulations or programs of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc.

It is further ordered, That the respondent Michigan Avenue Guild of Chicago—its officers and members of its board of directors, and their successors, its members and all future members:

Cease and desist, From directly or indirectly, jointly or severally, entering into or carrying out any understanding, arrangement, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, with each other or with any other person, or persons, association, or corporation:

(a) To refuse to purchase any of their requirements from manufacturers of women's garments who are not members, or who do not conform to the standards, ethics or regulations of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc.

(b) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., prohibiting the purchase or sale of women's garments declared by it to be copies of styles or designs registered as original by its members in its design registration bureau.
(c) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., that any such declared copies as are mentioned in subparagraph (b), that are found in their stock shall be removed from sale and returned to the manufacturer thereof.

(d) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., that all orders for women's garments shall be stamped with its warranty clause which recites that the seller warrants that the garments are not copies of styles or designs registered with the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., as original by its members, and reserving the right in the purchaser to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.

(e) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., that purchases of women's garments be made only from its members in good standing or from manufacturers who observe its standards, ethics, policies, and regulations.

It is further ordered, That the respondent National Federation of Textiles, Inc., Peter Van Horn, its president, Irene L. Blunt, its secretary, and their successors, all other of its officers and their successors, members of its board of directors and their successors, and its members and all future members, their agents, servants, and employees:

Cease and desist, From directly or indirectly, jointly or severally, entering into, or carrying out, any understanding, arrangement, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, with each other or with any other person, persons, association or corporation—

(b) To publish in trade journals, newspapers, or in any other manner, that manufacturers of women's garments have entered into an agreement not to purchase textiles from manufacturers thereof who do not register their designs in the Industrial Design Registration Bureau of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

It is further ordered, That respondents Marshall Field & Co., Allied Stores Corporation, the Lindner Co., Joseph Horne Co., Mandel Brothers, Inc., John Wanamaker (Philadelphia), Lit Brothers, Inc., Bullock's, Inc., the Emporium Capwell Corporation, and J. L. Hudson Co., their officers, members of their boards of directors, and their successors, their agents, servants, and employees, and approximately 12,000 retail dealers in women's garments throughout the United States who have signed declarations of cooperation with respondent Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., whom it is impracticable to name herein, and of whom the respondents specifically named in this paragraph are representative:

Cease and desist, From, directly or indirectly, jointly or severally entering into, or carrying out any understanding, arrangement, agreement, combination, or conspiracy with each other, or with any other person or persons, association or corporation:

(a) To refuse to purchase any women's garments from manufacturers thereof who are not members of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., or who do not conform to its standards, ethics, and regulations.

(b) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., not to purchase or sell women's garments declared by it to be copies of styles or designs registered in its design registration bureau by its members.

(c) To comply with the request of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., that no women's garments be purchased from manufacturers declared by it to be confirmed copyists.

(d) To comply with the requirement of the Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., that any women's garments found in their stocks which have been declared by it to be copies of registered styles and designs of its members be removed from sale and returned to the manufacturer thereof.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed, insofar as it applies to respondent G. H. Conze, for the reason that said respondent resigned as a member of the steering committee of the textile group of Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, and refused to be a party to the policies and programs which formed the basis of the charges set out in the complaint.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of a copy of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JACOB GOLDBERG, TRADING AS CROWN NOVELTY HOUSE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3484. Complaint, July 12, 1938—Decision, Feb. 8, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of watches, cameras, razor blades, clocks, and various other articles of merchandise—

(a) Distributed or caused to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, in selling and distributing his said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, among other advertising literature, a sales circular consisting of a list on which were designated a number of items of merchandise and prices thereof and pull card for use in sale and distribution of said products under a plan or scheme in accordance with which particular article of merchandise and price to be paid and apparent value to be secured by purchaser were dependent upon matter disclosed by particular tab selected by chance by purchaser, and representative was compensated by premium for operation of card and sale of merchandise, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with aforesaid or similar sales plan, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than apparent normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said method and by element of chance involved in sale of such merchandise as above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and of unfairly diverting by reason of said game of chance trade and custom to him from his competitors aforesaid;

(b) Caused such statements to appear in his advertising matter as “Free Gifts—Valuable Premiums Free,” “How to Get Your Gifts Without Any Cost to You,” and “2 Extra Surprise Gifts Free,” facts being none of his so-called premiums or gifts were given away “free” or “without cost” but said so-called premiums or gifts which were represented as being “free” or “without cost” to said representatives were either purchased with their labor or the prices thereof were included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which they had to sell or procure sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts could be procured by them, and in the case of a number thereof, certain sums of money were required to be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of his said products as a result thereof, and of unfairly diverting trade to him from competitor manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning the same; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner,
Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Jacob Goldberg an individual trading as Crown Novelty House, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Jacob Goldberg is an individual trading under the name of Crown Novelty House, with his principal office and place of business located at 65 Suffolk Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, lamps, razor blades, clocks, cigaret lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set-out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.
Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent’s merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sales of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent’s said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, as hereinabove related, respondent causes and has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Free Gifts—Valuable Premiums Free.
How to get your gifts without any cost to you.
2 extra surprise gifts free.
Findings

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondent’s so-called premiums or gifts are given away “free” or “without cost,” but said so-called premiums or gifts which are represented as being “free” or “without cost” to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which said representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of said so-called premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

Par. 7. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent’s products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 12, 1938, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Jacob Goldberg, an individual trading as Crown Novelty House, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 7, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Jacob Goldberg is an individual trading under the name of Crown Novelty House, with his principal office and place of business located at 65 Suffolk Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, lamps, razor blades, clocks, cigarette lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives, certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set-out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sales of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods, or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, as hereinabove described, respondent causes and has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Free Gifts—Valuable Premiums Free.
How to get your gifts without any cost to you.
2 extra surprise gifts free.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondent's so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or "without cost," but said so-called premiums or gifts which are represented as being "free" or "without cost" to said representatives are either purchased with labor by said representatives or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which said representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of said so-called premiums or gifts
Order

Certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jacob Goldberg, individually, and trading as Crown Novelty House, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, lamps, razor blades, clocks, cigarette lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce,
Order

28 F. T. C.

as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or to members of the public pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable such persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of pull cards or circulars having pull tabs thereon, or any other lottery device.

4. Using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for distributing respondent's merchandise unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning and there is no deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in wholesale drug business and in purchasing, as thus engaged, goods, wares, and merchandise from manufacturers and sellers in the various States, in competition with others similarly engaged and in similar purchase, and in publishing, along with certain individuals, its officers, and in pursuance of a purchasing policy and practice designed and intended to induce favorable discriminatory prices for it on its purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise of like grade and quality to those bought by competitor purchasers, and not as an independent business operated in good faith, a magazine—

Induced and persuaded manufacturers and sellers to enter into contracts with it for insertion of advertisements therein under agreements or understandings that charges therefor, for which no substantial benefits and considerations accrued to manufacturers and sellers, would be credited on the purchase price of the goods, wares, and merchandise bought by it from such manufacturers and sellers, and thus obtained substantial discriminations in price, amounting to differentials in favor of it of from 33½ per cent to 50 percent over other wholesalers competing with it and with customers of it, through credits, discounts, and allowances made on purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise bought by it, by virtue of such contracts and agreements for advertising space in periodical aforesaid, value of which as advertising medium was not substantial;

With result that it was thereby enabled to and did offer and sell to other wholesalers at prices lower than competitors of its wholesaler-customers could purchase the same commodities or those of like grade and quality from the manufacturers, and as said wholesaler-customers were enabled to and did offer and sell such commodities to retailers at prices lower than other wholesalers competing with it and its said customers could profitably sell such commodities to such dealers, effect of such discriminations in price induced and received by them was substantially to lessen competition and to tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of drug products, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between and among it and its customers on the one hand, and their competitors on the other, and between and among customers of each:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, constituted violation of Section 2 (f) of act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by act of Congress approved June 19, 1936.

Mr. John Darsey for the Commission.

Mr. Aaron M. Kanner, of Miami, Fla., for respondents.
The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of section 2 (f) of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936, (the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondents and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Miami Wholesale Drug Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, having an office and principal place of business in Miami, Fla. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the wholesale drug business.

The individual respondents, Arthur S. Lavine, Vivian L. King, and Sam S. Lavine, are president, vice president, and treasurer, respectively, of the respondent corporation.

Respondent Rodney S. Pullen, Jr., is in active charge of the management of the business of the respondent corporation as well as the business conducted under the trade name "Miami Magazine."

In the course and conduct of the wholesale drug business of the respondent corporation as aforesaid, goods, wares, and merchandise are purchased from manufacturers and sellers located in the various States of the United States, pursuant to which purchases the said goods, wares, and merchandise are shipped and transported to the respondent corporation from the States in which the various manufacturers and sellers are located, and the respondent corporation causes said goods, wares, and merchandise so purchased to be sold, shipped, and distributed, to other wholesalers and to retailers residing in the various States of the United States.

There are other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals, engaged in the wholesale drug business, who purchase goods, wares, and merchandise from manufacturers and sellers thereof, pursuant to which said purchases, goods, wares, and merchandise are shipped and distributed into and through the various States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof, and with such corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals, the respondent corpora-

All WHOLESALE DRUG CORP. ET AL.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of the business as hereinabove described, the respondent corporation, with the active cooperation, aid, and assistance of the individual respondents, adopted, follows, and pursues a purchasing policy and practice designed and intended to induce favorable discriminatory prices for the respondent corporation in its purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise of like grade and quality to those purchased by competing purchasers. Pursuant to, and in furtherance of, the said purchasing plan and policy, the parties respondent cause a magazine to be published under the trade name "Miami Magazine." Manufacturers and sellers are persuaded and induced to enter into contracts or agreements authorizing advertisements to be inserted in the said magazine, which contracts or agreements either provide, or it is understood, and so carried out, that the charges made for said advertisements shall be credited on the purchase price of the goods, wares, and merchandise purchased by the respondent corporation from such manufacturers and sellers. Many of such contracts or agreements have been so induced, entered into, and executed since June 19, 1936.

The publication of the aforesaid magazine by the parties respondent is not an independent business operated in good faith on a profit basis, but is a subterfuge operated solely as an incident to the wholesale drug business engaged in by the respondent corporation, for the purpose of obtaining the discriminations in price as aforesaid. The said magazine has no substantial value as an advertising medium, and there are no substantial benefits and considerations accruing to manufacturers and sellers for the credits, discounts, and allowances made on purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise by the respondent corporation by virtue of the contracts and agreements for advertising space therein.

The discriminations in price thus obtained are substantial, amounting to differentials in favor of respondent of from 33½ percent to 50 percent over other wholesalers competing with respondent and with customers of respondent; enable respondent to offer and sell, and respondent does offer and sell, to other wholesalers at prices lower than competitors of respondent's said wholesaler customers can purchase the same commodities, or commodities of like grade and quality, from the manufacturers thereof; and enable respondent and its said wholesaler customers to offer and sell, and they do offer and sell, said commodities to retailers at prices lower than other wholesalers competing with respondent and its said customers can profitably sell such commodities to retailers.
Findings

PAR. 3. The effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price, induced and received by the respondents, has been, and may be, substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of drug products, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between and among the respondent and its customers, on the one hand, and their competitors, on the other hand, and between and among customers of each.

PAR. 4. The foregoing alleged acts of the respondents are in violation of section 2 (f) of said Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (The Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on April 11, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the violation of section 2 (f) of the Clayton Act, as amended.

On November 10, 1938, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this, its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Miami Wholesale Drug Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, having an office and principal place of business in Miami, Fla. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the wholesale drug business.

The individual respondents, Arthur S. Lavine, Vivian L. King, and Sam S. Lavine, are president, vice president and treasurer, respectively, of the respondent corporation.

Respondent Rodney S. Pullen, Jr., is in active charge of the management of the business of the respondent corporation, as well as of the business conducted under the trade name "Miami Magazine."

In the course and conduct of the wholesale drug business of the respondent corporation as aforesaid, goods, wares, and merchandise are purchased from manufacturers and sellers located in the various States of the United States. The said goods, wares, and merchandise are shipped and transported to the respondent corporation from the States in which the various manufacturers and sellers are located, and the respondent corporation thereupon causes said goods, wares, and merchandise so purchased to be sold, shipped and distributed to other wholesalers and to retailers residing in the various States of the United States.

There are other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals, engaged in the wholesale drug business, who purchase goods, wares, and merchandise from manufacturers and sellers thereof, pursuant to which said purchases, goods, wares, and merchandise are shipped and distributed into and through the various States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof. The respondent corporation and its customers are, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in competition with such corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the business as hereinabove described, the respondent corporation, with the active cooperation, aid and assistance of the individual respondents, adopted, follows, and pursues a purchasing policy and practice designed and intended to induce favorable discriminatory prices for the respondent corporation in its purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise of like grade and quality to those purchased by competing purchasers.

Pursuant to, and in furtherance of, the said purchasing plan and policy, the parties respondent cause a magazine to be published under the trade name "Miami Magazine." Manufacturers and sellers are persuaded and induced to enter into contracts or agreements authorizing advertisements to be inserted in the said magazine, which contracts or agreements either provide, or it is understood and so carried out, that the charges made for said advertisements shall be credited on the purchase price of the goods, wares, and merchandise purchased by the respondent corporation from such manufacturers and sellers. Many of such contracts or agreements have been so induced, entered into, and executed since June 19, 1936.

The Commission finds that the publication of the aforesaid magazine by the parties respondent is not an independent business operated in good faith on a profit basis, but is a subterfuge operated solely as an incident to the wholesale drug business engaged in by the respondent corporation, for the purpose of obtaining the discriminations in price as aforesaid.

The Commission further finds that the said magazine has no substantial value as an advertising medium, and there are not substantial benefits and considerations accruing to manufacturers and sellers for the credits, discounts, and allowances made on purchases of goods, wares, and merchandise by the respondent corporation by virtue of the contracts and agreements for advertising space therein.

The discriminations in price thus obtained are substantial, amounting to differentials in favor of respondent of from 33½ percent to 50 percent over other wholesalers competing with respondent corporation and with customers of respondent corporation. The discriminations in price enable respondent corporation to offer and sell, and respondent corporation does offer and sell, to other wholesalers at prices lower than competitors of respondent’s said wholesaler customers can purchase the same commodities, or commodities of like grade and quality, from the manufacturers thereof.

The discriminations in price enable respondent corporation and its said wholesaler customers to offer and sell, and they do offer and sell, said commodities to retailers at prices lower than other wholesalers competing with respondent corporation and its said customers can profitably sell such commodities to retailers.

Par. 3. The effect of the aforesaid discriminations in price, induced and received by the respondents, has been substantially to lessen competition and to tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of drug products, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between and among the respondent corporation and its customers, on the one hand, and their competitors on the other hand, and between and among customers of each.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are in violation of section 2 (f) of said Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).
Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Miami Wholesale Drug Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondents, Rodney S. Pullen, Jr., Arthur S. Lavine, Sam S. Lavine, Vivian L. King, Esther S. King, and Elizabeth R. King, in connection with the purchase of drug commodities in interstate commerce by either of said parties respondent, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Inducing sellers to contract with either of the parties respondent herein, in connection with the purchases of commodities by either of said parties respondent, for the payment for advertising space in any magazine or publication, published by either of said parties respondent, at prices greater than the recognized value of such space as an advertising medium to the sellers paying therefor.

2. Inducing sellers to discriminate in price between either of the said parties respondent and other purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, by granting, allowing, and paying to either of the said parties respondent herein, in connection with the purchases of either of said parties respondent, any advertising allowances, or anything of value in lieu thereof, which are not granted by such sellers to all of their customers on proportionately equal terms.

3. Receiving and accepting any discriminatory price or the benefit of any discrimination in price obtained in the manner set forth in, and prohibited by, subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this order.

It is further ordered, That the parties respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BLOOMINGDALE BROS., INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in operating a department store, and in selling therefrom, among other things, men's and women's wearing apparel to members of the purchasing public in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition in commerce with others engaged in sale and distribution of such apparel made from silk, wool, rayon, cotton, and other fibers, and including those who do not misrepresent the nature, character or content of the articles of wearing apparel offered by them; in advertising its said apparel in newspapers of general circulation in various States—

(a) Represented and described certain coats there offered as "all wool," notwithstanding fact such coats were not composed wholly of wool, or fleece, or hair of the sheep, as long definitely understood from word in minds of consuming public and associated, in coats thus described, with fabric entirely made from the hair or fleece of the sheep, and held in high esteem in products thereof for their preeminent qualities and qualities of warmth, durability, and beauty, but were composed of a mixture of wool and rayon;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, as "celanese, cotton, and 'Terry' polo shirts," certain garments thus offered, facts being said shirts were not composed of a mixture of celanese or rayon, of cotton, and cotton of the terry weave, but were composed, in case of some, wholly of rayon, in case of others wholly of cotton, and in case of still others wholly of cotton of so-called terry type of weave; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, certain dresses thus offered as "Acetate Chiffon," notwithstanding fact said garments were not composed wholly of silk, as long associated in the public mind with word "chiffon" as designating dress goods and other similar products as made of said long, well and favorably known and highly esteemed product of the cocoon of the silk worm, but were made wholly of rayon;

With capacity and tendency to cause members of public, through association and meaning of words "wool" and "chiffon" as aforesaid, and inadequate understanding of words "celanese" and "acetate" as trade names of rayon manufacturer or rayon process used only in connection with rayon fabrics, to purchase such articles in erroneous belief that they were composed, as case might be, wholly of wool, of mixture of celanese, cotton, and cotton of terry type of weave, and of silk wholly, and to divert thereby trade to it from its competitors; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.
Proskauer, Rose & Paskus, of New York City, for respondent.
Complaint Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, in the city of New York, in said State.

Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells, among other things, men's and women's wearing apparel. Respondent causes, and at all times herein mentioned has caused, its said goods, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise sold in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of men's and women's wearing apparel made from silk, wool, rayon, cotton, and other fibers, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Para. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling said wearing apparel, and for the purpose of inducement, caused certain advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers having an interstate circulation. In said advertisements and in other advertising matter certain coats were represented, designated, and referred to as "all wool"; certain polo shirts were represented, designated, and referred to as containing cotton in substantial amount; and certain dresses were represented, designated, and referred to as "chiffon."

Through use of such statements, designations, and representations, respondent represents to members of the public that such items of wearing apparel so advertised and offered for sale were "all wool" in the case of the coats, that the polo shirts were composed in substantial part of cotton, and that the dresses were made of silk. The representations hereinabove set forth were false and misleading in that said items of wearing apparel so represented, designated, and referred to were not composed of "all wool" in the case of the coats, in substantial part of cotton in the case of the polo shirts, and of silk in the case of the dresses. The coats were in fact composed of a mixture of wool and spun rayon. The polo shirts were in fact composed entirely of viscose rayon, and the dresses were in fact composed of materials other than silk, to wit, rayon.

Par. 3. The word "wool" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cotton plant. Wool products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities and have been woven into a variety of fabrics noted for their qualities of warmth, durability, and beauty. Coats and other items of wearing apparel designated, described and referred to as "all wool" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with a fabric entirely made from the hair or fleece of sheep.

The word "cotton" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cotton plant. Cotton products hold, and for many years have held, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Cotton has long been used for the manufacture of shirts, and the quality of garments made therefrom is well known to the purchasing public for durability and generally fine wearing character.

The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the consuming public a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk fabrics for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving. Dress goods and other similar products designated, described, or referred to as "chiffon" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as silk.

The word "rayon" is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk, and is by the purchasing and consuming public practically indistinguishable from silk.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent herein, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, those who do not misrepresent the nature, character, or content of the goods manufactured and offered for sale by them.

The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that such statements and representations are true, and that the coats herein referred to were composed wholly of wool, that the polo shirts herein referred to were composed in substantial part of cotton and that the dresses herein referred to were composed of silk, and into the purchase of said respondent's products as the result of such erroneous beliefs. By the statements and representations aforesaid trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from such competitors referred to in paragraph 4 hereof. As the result thereof, injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 30, 1938, issued its complaint in the above-entitled proceeding and caused same to be served on the respondent, Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, a stipulation as to the facts was made and entered into by and between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission and Proskauer, Rose & Paskus, attorneys for said respondent, which stipulation was accepted and approved by the Commission on November 18, 1938. Said stipulation provided that the statement of facts contained therein may be made a part of the record herein and be taken as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto; that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts (including inferences that may be drawn therefrom), to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint herein and the said stipulation as to the facts, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, in the city of New York in said State. It is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells, among other things, men’s and women’s wearing apparel. Respondent causes and at all times herein mentioned has caused its said merchandise to be sold and distributed to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and during the time herein mentioned has caused its merchandise when sold to be transported from its place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of men’s and women’s wearing apparel made from silk, wool, rayon, cotton, and other fibers.

Paragraph 2. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business, as set out in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling articles of wearing apparel, has caused advertisements to be published in newspapers of general circulation in various States of the United States, in which advertisements certain coats offered for sale by it were represented and described as “all wool,” and certain polo shirts offered for sale by it were represented and described as “celanese, cotton, and ‘Terry’ polo shirts”; and certain dresses offered for sale by it were represented and described as “Acetate Chiffon.”
PAR. 3. The word “wool” for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the consuming public, generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: Fleece or hair obtained from sheep. Wool products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities and have been woven into a variety of fabrics noted for their quality of warmth, durability, and beauty. Coats and other items of wearing apparel designated, described, and referred to as “all wool” have been for a long time and at the present time still are associated in the public mind with a fabric entirely made from the hair or fleece of sheep.

The word “cotton” for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the consuming public, generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cotton plant. Cotton products hold and for many years have held great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Cotton has long been used for the manufacture of shirts and the quality of garments made therefrom is well known to the purchasing public for durability and generally fine wearing character.

The word “silk” for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the consuming public a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk fabrics for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving silk. Dress goods and other similar products designated, described, or referred to as “chiffon” have been for a long time and at the present time still are associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm commonly known and understood by the public as silk.

The word “rayon” is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing and consuming public practically indistinguishable from silk.

The word “celanese” is not sufficiently understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to be identified as being a trade name of a rayon manufacturer used only in connection with certain rayon fabrics, to place said purchasers on notice that the fabrics and articles manufactured therefrom, so designated, are in fact rayon and not silk.

The word “acetate” is the name of a process in the manufacture of rayon but is not sufficiently understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to be identified as a trade name or as a process for the making of rayon, and used only in connection with certain rayon fabrics, to place said purchaser on notice that the fabrics and articles manufactured therefrom, so designated, are in fact rayon and not silk.

The word "chiffon" has been for a long time and at the present time still is associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as silk.

Para. 4. The coats represented and designated by respondent as "all wool," as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, were not composed wholly of wool but were composed of a mixture of wool and rayon; the polo shirts represented and designated by respondent as "celanese, cotton, and 'Terry' polo shirts," as set out in said paragraph 2, were not composed of a mixture of celanese (rayon), cotton and cotton of the terry weave, but some were composed wholly of rayon some wholly of cotton, and others were composed wholly of cotton of the so-called terry type of weave; and the dresses represented and designated by respondent as "acetate chiffon," as set out in said paragraph 2, were not composed of silk but were composed wholly of rayon and the use by respondent of such representations and descriptions of the articles of wearing apparel offered for sale by it, has the capacity and tendency to cause members of the public to purchase such articles in the erroneous belief that such coats were composed wholly of wool; that such polo shirts were composed of a mixture of celanese (rayon), cotton, and cotton of the terry type of weave; and that said dresses were composed wholly of silk.

Para. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent herein as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof those who do not misrepresent the nature, character, or content of the articles of wearing apparel offered for sale by them. The statements, designations, and representations made by respondent, as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to divert trade to respondent from its competitors and thereby injury is being done and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, attorneys for respondent herein, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of men's coats and shirts, women's dresses, and other articles of wearing apparel, and like products, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "wool" or any other word or words of like import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of wool, provided that in case of fabrics or products composed in part of wool and in part of rayon or materials other than wool, there is used in immediate connection or conjunction with the word "wool," in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing or designating each constituent fiber or material thereof, in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

2. Using the word "chiffon," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, such as "crepe," "satin," or "taffeta," to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless said descriptive word or words are used truthfully to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such words shall be qualified by using in connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said fabric or product is made.

3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics or any other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MILLER GROWERS ASSOCIATION ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation and three individuals, associated with it as officers or otherwise, engaged, jointly and severally, in retail sale and distribution of citrus fruits to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia—

(a) Represented and implied, through inclusion of words "Growers" and "Association" in corporate name of aforesaid concern, that they were the producers of citrus fruits offered and sold by them, and that said concern was an association of fruit growers;

Facts being they did not own or operate, either individually or jointly, any citrus grove in Florida or in any other State where such fruits were produced, and neither said concern nor said individuals, engaged under same name as trade name, were association of citrus fruit growers, but fruits offered and sold by them were purchased from local markets in the territories in which they operated; and

(b) Represented to prospective purchasers that they were the owners of citrus fruit groves in Florida and prepared to deliver high-grade and fancy fruits to such purchasers through their own organization;

(c) Represented, through one of their number, to stewards, dietitians or other purchasing agents of hospitals, or other institutions that such person was a grower in Florida and that the president or chairman of the board of trustees of the particular institution with which said person was negotiating had expressed the wish that such person receive an order for fruit; and

(d) Represented, through one of their number, as aforesaid, to selected and prominent prospective customers whose credit was good and whose business relations were well known, that he was a friend of a friend of such particular prospective customer, mentioning some business associate or personal friend of latter in a distant city, and that such friend told person thus representing that friend felt sure prospective customer thus contacted and addressed would be interested in obtaining some of said person's de luxe fruits straight from the Florida grove.

Facts being, while on orders received from hospitals or other institutions they usually supplied fair-grade fruit priced near current market price, though ordinarily in several times amount ordered, in case of sales to individuals, medium- to poor-grade fruit, and, frequently, partly rotted, was, as a rule, delivered, and purchaser was billed for amount greatly exceeding market price for highest-grade fruit, and representations as aforesaid as to expressions by president or chairman of board desiring the giving of such an order, or as to wishes of supposed friend of prospective purchaser, were false and misleading, and officials or persons whose names were thus used had no knowledge whatever of such proposed transactions and had made no suggestions in regard thereto;
MILLER GROWERS ASSOCIATION ET AL.

Complaint

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations, as variously set-out, were true, and into purchase, as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, induced as aforesaid, of their said merchandise:

Held, That such acts and practices on the part of said concern and individuals acting as above set forth and in concert with one another, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.
Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.
Mr. Emil Leepson, of New York City, for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Miller Growers Association, a corporation, Benjamin Miller, and Leah Miller, individuals trading as Miller Growers Association, and Minerva Miller, an individual, all hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Miller Growers Association is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Room 1014, 53 Park Place, in the city of New York, State of New York. Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller are individuals trading under the name “Miller Growers Association,” a partnership with exactly the same name as the corporation. Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller also act as officers of the corporate respondent. Minerva Miller is an individual. All respondents were and are trading at the address herein given as that of the corporate respondent, Miller Growers Association. Respondents now are, and have been, engaged both jointly and severally in the retail sale and distribution of citrus fruits. Respondents cause, and at all times herein mentioned have caused, their said goods when sold to be shipped from their place of business in New York to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their merchandise, the respondents have represented to prospective purchasers that they are the owners of citrus fruit groves in Florida and are prepared to deliver high-grade and fancy citrus fruit to said purchasers through their own organization. Respondents, usually acting through Benjamin Miller, will telephone the steward, dietitian, or other purchasing agent of a hospital or other institution and explain that the said Miller, or another of the respondents, is a grower in Florida and that the president or chairman of the board of trustees of the particular institution with whose agent he is negotiating has expressed the wish that respondent receive an order for fruit, such tactics frequently resulting in sales.

Another method employed by respondents, again usually acting through Benjamin Miller, is to select a prospective customer who is quite prominent, whose credit is good, and whose business relations are well known. Miller then phones such prospective customer, introducing himself as a friend of a friend of the proposed customer, mentioning some business associate or personal friend of the proposed customer located in a distant city. Miller states the friend told Miller that he felt sure the prospective customer would be interested in obtaining some of Miller's de luxe fruits straight from the Florida grove.

On the orders received from hospitals or other institutions respondents usually supply fair-grade fruit priced near the current market price, but respondents usually deliver several times the amount ordered. In case of the sales to individuals, usually medium to poor-grade fruit, frequently partly rotted, is delivered, and the purchaser is billed for an amount greatly exceeding the market prices for the highest-grade fruit.

A substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to purchase citrus fruits from the growers thereof or from associations of such growers, because it believes that certain economies are involved in buying direct from the producer, and that citrus fruits purchased direct from the producer are fresher than those which have passed through intervening hands. Through the use of the words "Growers Association" in the name of the corporate respondent and in the trade name used by the individual respondents, respondents represent and imply that said respondents are the producers of the citrus fruits offered for sale and sold and that the Miller Growers Association is an association of fruit growers.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading in that said fruits, so designated and described, were not and are not high-grade or fancy fruits, but were medium or low grade, and in some instances decayed to the point where they were not usable. The aforesaid representations and implications are false and misleading in that respondents do not own or operate, either individually or jointly, any citrus grove in Florida or in any other State where said citrus fruits offered for sale and sold by them are produced, and neither said Miller Growers Association, the corporate respondents, nor Miller Growers Association, the trade name used by the individual respondents, is an association of citrus fruit growers. In truth and in fact, the citrus fruits offered for sale and sold by the respondents are purchased from local markets in the territories where they operate. The aforesaid representations that the contacts with purchasers were made upon the suggestion or recommendation of an institution official or of some person well known to said prospective purchaser are false and misleading in that the officials or persons whose names were used had no knowledge whatever of such proposed transactions and made no suggestion in regard thereto.

The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the quality of the citrus fruit; the representations as to the ownership by respondents of citrus groves, which are made both by specific statements and the use of the misleading and deceptive name, "Miller Growers Association"; the statements that respondents have been requested to contact the proposed purchasers, have had and now have a capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondents' said merchandise as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief induced by the aforesaid misrepresentations, acts, and practices of the respondents.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, acting individually, as officers of the corporate respondent, and in concert one with the other, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 31st day of August 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused the complaint to be served upon the respondents, Miller Growers Association, Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller, individuals trading as Miller Growers Association, and Minerva Miller, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by an order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw their answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. The substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission November 7, 1938.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Miller Growers Association, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Room 1014, 53 Park Place, in the city of New York, State of New York. Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller are individuals trading under the name "Miller Growers Association," a partnership with exactly the same name as the corporation. Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller also act as officers of the corporate respondent. Minerva Miller is an individual. All respondents were and are trading at the address herein given as that of the corporate respondent, Miller Growers Association. Respondents now are, and have been, engaged both jointly and severally in the retail sale and distribution of citrus fruits. Respondents cause, and at all times herein mentioned have caused, their said goods when sold to be shipped from their place of business in New York to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their merchandise, the respondents have represented to prospective purchasers that they are the owners of citrus fruit groves in Florida and are prepared to deliver high-grade and fancy citrus fruit to said purchasers through their own organization. Respondents, usually acting through Benjamin Miller, will telephone the steward, dietitian, or other purchasing agent of a hospital or other institution and explain that the said Miller, or another of the respondents, is a grower in Florida and that the president or chairman of the board of trustees of the particular institution with whose agent he is negotiating has expressed the wish that respondent receive an order for fruit, such tactics frequently resulting in sales.

Another method employed by respondents, again usually acting through Benjamin Miller, is to select a prospective customer who is quite prominent, whose credit is good, and whose business relations are well known. Miller then phones such prospective customer, introducing himself as a friend of a friend of the proposed customer, mentioning some business associate or personal friend of the proposed customer located in a distant city. Miller states the friend told Miller that he felt sure that prospective customer would be interested in obtaining some of Miller's de luxe fruits straight from the Florida grove.

On the orders received from hospitals or other institutions respondents usually supply fair-grade fruit priced near the current market price, but respondents usually deliver several times the amount ordered. In case of the sales to individuals, usually medium- to poor-grade fruit, frequently partly rotted, is delivered; and the purchaser is billed for an amount greatly exceeding the market prices for the highest-grade fruit.

A substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to purchase citrus fruits from the growers thereof or from associations of such growers because it believes that certain economies are involved in buying direct from the producer, and that citrus fruits purchased direct from the producer are fresher than those which have passed through intervening hands. Through the use of the words "Growers Association" in the name of the corporate respondent and in the trade name used by the individual respondents, respondents represent and imply that said respondents are the producers of the citrus fruits offered for sale and sold and that the Miller Growers Association is an association of fruit growers.

Through the use of the foregoing practices respondents represent to members of the purchasing public that such products, so designated and described, were and are high-grade or fancy citrus fruits, coming directly from the groves of respondents.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading in that said fruits, so designated and described, were not and are not high-grade or fancy fruits, but were medium or low grade, and in some instances decayed to the point where they were not usable. The aforesaid representations and implications are false and misleading in that respondents do not own or operate, either individually or jointly, any citrus grove in Florida or in any other State where said citrus fruits offered for sale and sold by them are produced, and neither said Miller Growers Association, the corporate respondent, nor Miller Growers Association, the trade name used by the individual respondents, is an association of citrus fruit growers. In truth and in fact, the citrus fruits offered for sale and sold by the respondents are purchased from local markets in the territories where they operate. The aforesaid representations that the contacts with purchasers were made upon the suggestion or recommendation of an institution official or of some person well known to said prospective purchaser are false and misleading in that the officials or persons whose names were used had no knowledge whatever of such proposed transactions and made no suggestion in regard thereto.

The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the quality of the citrus fruit; the representations as to the ownership by respondents of citrus groves, which are made both by specific statements and the use of the misleading and deceptive name, "Miller Growers Association"; the statements that respondents have been requested to contact the proposed purchasers have had and now have a capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondents' said merchandise as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief induced by the aforesaid misrepresentations, acts, and practices of the respondents.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the corporate respondent, and of the individual respondents, acting individually, and as officers of the corporate respondent, and in concert with each other as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of the several respondents, in which answers the respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that all of said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Benjamin Miller and Leah Miller, individually, and trading as Miller Growers Association, or under any other trade name, and Minerva Miller, an individual, and Miller Growers Association, a corporation, and its officers and their respective representatives, salesmen, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Represent, through the use of the words "Growers" or "Association" or any other words of similar import or meaning, in any corporate or trade name or in any other manner, that respondents or any of them are growers of citrus fruit or are owners of citrus fruit groves in Florida or elsewhere, or are an association of fruit growers;

2. Represent to prospective purchasers that friends of said prospective purchasers have suggested to respondents, or any of them, that said friends were interested in respondents' making sales to said prospective purchasers;

3. Represent to buyers or other officials of hospitals or other institutions that the president or chairman of the board of trustees or other official of the particular institution with whose agent respondents are negotiating, has expressed the wish or desire that respondents receive an order for fruit from such institution; or

4. Represent that the citrus fruit offered for sale by them is of a grade, character, or quality superior to, or different from, its true grade, character, or quality.

It is further ordered, That each of the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
In the Matter of

R. P. Reid, Individually, and Trading as Reid Packing Company

Complaint, Findings, and Order in Regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in the processing and sale and distribution of salted peanuts which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof and which were composed of a number of individual, small, sealed 5-cent packages of such product enclosed in larger pasteboard cartons and containing concealed therein, in the case of a few, 5 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents, or $1 as the case might be, for distribution to prospective purchasers by lot or chance—

Sold to wholesalers, retailers, and jobbers, together with explanatory display cards for retailers' use, said assortments for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with sales plan aforesaid, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with sales plan hereinabove set forth, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure sum of money, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer or sell their said product so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve game of chance or any other method of sale contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of such product were attracted by his said method and manner of packing said salted peanuts and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described and were thereby induced to purchase such salted peanuts, thus packed and sold by him, in preference to those offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and of unfairly diverting trade to him from his competitors aforesaid; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts or practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, R. P. Reid, is an individual, doing business under the trade name of Reid Packing Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 320 South College Street, Charlotte, N. C. The respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the processing of salted peanuts and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, his product, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in North Carolina to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than North Carolina and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in salted peanuts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is, and has been for some time last past, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of salted peanuts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers, salted peanuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said salted peanuts are packed in individual, small, sealed cartons for retail to the ultimate consumer at 5 cents per carton. A number of these small cartons of peanuts are placed in a larger pasteboard carton. Sealed within a small number of the said individual cartons are 5 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents, or $1, but the ultimate purchaser cannot ascertain which cartons contain one of the above-named sums until a selection has been made and the individual carton broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said individual cartons of salted peanuts who procure one of the said sums of money, thus procure the same wholly by lot or chance.

With said assortments respondent furnishes display cards for use by the retail dealers in offering such assortments to the public, which display cards bear legends or statements containing, among other things, the following:
Sales of salted peanuts by the method herein described are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. The said prizes are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The said prizes are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells the said salted peanuts resell same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said salted peanuts for sale and sell same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his product in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his product, and the sale of said product by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of said salted peanuts to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a sum of money. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell salted peanuts in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said product so packed and assembled as above alleged or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, salted peanuts are attracted by respondent’s said method and manner of packing said salted peanuts and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said salted peanuts so packed and sold by respondent in preference to salted peanuts offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 23, 1938, issued, and on December 24, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent R. P. Reid, individually and trading as Reid Packing Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted the respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commissioner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, R. P. Reid, is an individual, doing business under the trade name of Reid Packing Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 320 South College Street, Charlotte, N. C. The respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the processing of salted peanuts and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, his product, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in North Carolina to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than North Carolina and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in salted peanuts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is, and has been for some time last past, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of salted peanuts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers, salted peanuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said salted peanuts are packed in individual, small, sealed cartons for retail to the ultimate consumer at five cents per carton. A number of these small cartons of peanuts are placed in a larger pasteboard carton. Sealed within a small number of the said individual cartons are five cents, ten cents, twenty-five cents, or one dollar, but the ultimate purchaser cannot ascertain which cartons contain one of the above named sums until a selection has been made and the individual carton broken open. The aforesaid purchasers of said individual cartons of salted peanuts who procure one of the said sums of money, thus procure the same wholly by lot or chance.

With said assortments respondent furnishes display cards for use by the retail dealers in offering such assortments to the public, which display cards bear legends or statements containing, among other things, the following:

REID PACKING CO. CHARLOTTE, N. C.
Sales of salted peanuts by the method herein described are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. The said prizes are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. The said prizes are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells the said salted peanuts resell same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said salted peanuts for sale and sell same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his product in accordance with the sales plan hereinafore set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his product, and the sale of said product by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of said salted peanuts to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a sum of money. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell salted peanuts in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, salted peanuts are attracted by respondent’s said method and manner of packing said salted peanuts and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said salted peanuts so packed and sold by respondent in preference to salted peanuts offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, R. P. Reid, individually, and trading as Reid Packing Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of salted peanuts or other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing said salted peanuts or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of said salted peanuts or any other merchandise which is used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise, in the sale or distribution of the said merchandise contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Selling or distributing individual packages of said salted peanuts or any other merchandise containing coins or other United States money, which said individual packages of said merchandise is packed and assembled in assortments with other individual packages of said merchandise of similar size, shape, and appearance not containing coins or other United States money, for resale to the public by retail dealers.

4. Furnishing to dealers a display card, either with packages or assortments of said salted peanuts or any other merchandise or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchasers thereof that said merchandise is being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.
5. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to dealers or others, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, so prepared or printed as to enable such persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

BANFI PRODUCTS CORPORATION AND HARRY MARIANI, JOHN MARIANI, PAUL MARIANI, AND JOSEPH B. MARIANI

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation and four individuals, officers thereof and in control of its advertising policies and business activities and acting in concert with one another, engaged in selling and distributing Montecatini Salts or laxative medicine in crystal and powder form, plain and iodated, and allegedly extracted from the Italian springs thus named, to purchasers in the District of Columbia and in other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among the various States and in said District, and including many who do not make any misrepresentations concerning the qualities and properties of their respective products and their effectiveness—

Represented in their advertising in pamphlets, circulars, advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, radio broadcasts, and other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, either directly in English or in Italian, that due to qualities and properties of said Montecatini Salts they constituted an effective and competent remedy or treatment for diseases of the stomach, liver and heart, and for constipation, headaches, rheumatism, high blood pressure, uric acid, and various other conditions, and were always good for any minor ailment, and effective in the treatment of virtually all ailments, and that they constituted a mild, efficacious laxative and were harmless and could be used freely and without irritation;

Facts being they were not a competent treatment or remedy for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart, or for headaches, bad breath, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, and rash, blotches, or pimples, or for uric acid or other ailments, and were not effective as a treatment for all minor ailments, nor harmless, and could not be used freely without irritation, and had no beneficial value except as a laxative or purgative in cases of temporary or occasional constipation, and, whether plain or iodated or in crystal or powder form, had no value in treating any ailment or the symptoms thereof except when such conditions or symptoms could be relieved by a laxative or purgative, and use thereof freely constituted a drastic purge which would irritate intestines;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that all said representations and implications were true, and with result, as a direct consequence of such belief, that number of the consuming public purchased substantial volume of their products and trade was diverted unfairly to them from competitors likewise engaged in distribution and sale of laxatives and other medicinal preparations in commerce and who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:
Held. That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Banfi Products Corporation, a corporation, and Harry Mariani, John Mariani, Paul Mariani, and Joseph B. Mariani, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Banfi Products Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and respondents Harry Mariani, John Mariani, and Paul Mariani, individuals, are president, treasurer, and secretary, respectively, thereof. The individual respondents have dominant control of the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondent, and all of said respondents have cooperated each with the other and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents' office and principal place of business is located at 206 Spring Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 2. Respondents now are and for over 2 years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of a laxative medicine known as Montecatini Salts, in crystal and powder form, plain and iodated, claimed by them to have been extracted from the waters of the Montecatini Springs in Italy. Respondents cause said product, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said Montecatini Salts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in active and substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors there are many who do not make any misrepresentations or false statements concerning the qualities and properties of their respective products and of their effectiveness when taken.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said Montecatini Salts by members of the purchasing public, respondents have made, by means of pamphlets, circulars, advertisements inserted in newspapers and periodicals, by radio broadcasts, and other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, many representations, either directly as hereinafter stated in the English language, or their equivalent in the Italian language, concerning the qualities and properties of Montecatini Salts and their effectiveness when taken, among and typical of which are the following:

The Office of the Census in Washington published * * * its bulletin showing an increase of mortality in * * * diseases of the stomach, the liver, and the heart * * * We warn those suffering from similar diseases * * * to stop their ailments promptly. The causes sometimes might prove fatal * * * use Montecatini Salts.

Use * * * simple Montecatini Salts if you suffer from constipation, headaches, bad breath, acidity of the stomach, and liver trouble * * * and Iodized Salts if you are troubled with rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, and rash.

Montecatini Iodized Salts are good for the skin when you have blotches or pimples * * * uric acid * * *.

If there is someone who might think that Montecatini Salts are not good for almost all illnesses, we wish to reassure them by saying that this is not so.

Montecatini Salts is always good for any minor ailment.

Montecatini Salts are a mild efficacious laxative.

These Salts can be used freely with no fear of harming you.

Montecatini Salts are an ideal remedy because they clean the intestines without irritating them.

All of said statements together with similar statements occurring in the respondents' advertising literature and radio broadcasts purport to be descriptive of the respondents' product and of its effectiveness when taken. In all of their advertising literature, radio broadcasts, and through other means, respondents, directly or by inference through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, represent that due to the qualities and properties of said Montecatini Salts, such salts are an effective and competent remedy or treatment for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart, and for constipation, headaches, bad breath, acidity of the stomach, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, rash, blotches, pimples, and uric acid; that said salts are always good for any minor ailment and effective in the treatment of virtually all ailments; that said salts constitute a mild efficacious laxative; and that they are harmless and can be used freely and will clean the intestines without irritation.

Par. 5. The representations and implications so made and used by the respondents with respect to the nature of their products and their effectiveness in use are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact Montecatini Salts, plain and iodated, whether in crystal or powder form, are not a competent treatment or remedy for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart; for headaches, bad breath, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, and rash; for blotches or pimples; or for uric acid or other ailments. Said salts are not effective as a treatment for all minor ailments and they are not harmless and cannot be used freely without irritating the intestines.

In truth and in fact, said Montecatini Salts have no beneficial value except as a laxative or purgative in cases of temporary or occasional constipation and said salts, plain or iodated, whether in crystal or powder form, have no value in treating any ailment or the symptoms thereof except when such condition or symptom can be relieved by a laxative or a purgative. The use of said salts freely constitutes a drastic purge and will irritate the intestines.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading representations and implications made by the respondents in describing their product and its effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, have had and have a tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations and implications are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products with the result that trade in said commerce has been diverted unfairly to respondents from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling laxatives and other medicinal preparations in said commerce who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 21st day of September 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused it to be served upon the respondents Banfi Products Corporation, Harry Mariani, John Mariani, Paul Mariani, and Joseph B. Mariani, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw their answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Banfi Products Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. The respondents, Harry Mariani, John Mariani, and Paul Mariani, are respectively the president, treasurer, and secretary of Banfi Products Corporation. The office and principal place of business of the respondent is located at 206 Spring Street, City of New York, N.Y. The respondents, Harry Mariani, John Mariani, Paul Mariani, and Joseph B. Mariani, have control of the advertising policies and business activities of the corporate respondent, and the respondents have all cooperated each with the other and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter set forth.

Paragraph 2. The respondents are, and for over 2 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a laxative medicine known as Montecatini Salts, in crystal and powder form, plain and iodated, claimed by them to have been extracted from the waters of the Montecatini Springs in Italy, and they cause the said product, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers located in the District of Columbia and in other States of the United States.
Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in the product, Montecatini Salts, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the business in the sale and distribution of Montecatini Salts, the respondents are, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors there are many who do not make any misrepresentations concerning the qualities and properties of their respective products and their effectiveness when used by members of the public.

PAR. 4. By means of pamphlets, circulars, advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, radio broadcasts, and other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, the respondents have made many representations in the course and conduct of their said business, either directly in the English language or in equivalent expressions in the Italian language, as hereinafter stated, concerning the qualities and properties of Montecatini Salts and the effectiveness of their use by members of the public. Among such representations and typical of them are the following:

The Office of the Census in Washington published • • • its bulletin showing an increase of mortality in • • • diseases of the stomach, the liver and the heart • • •. We warn those suffering from similar diseases • • • to stop their ailments promptly. The causes sometimes might prove fatal • • •. Use Montecatini Salts.

Use • • • simple Montecatini Salts if you suffer from constipation, headaches, bad breath, acidity of the stomach and liver trouble • • • and Iodized Salts if you are troubled with rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, and rash.

Montecatini Iodized Salts are good for the skin when you have blotches or pimplles • • • uric acid • • •. If there is someone who might think that Montecatini Salts are not good for almost all illnesses, we wish to reassure them by saying that this is not so.

Montecatini Salts is always good for any minor ailment.

Montecatini Salts are a mild efficacious laxative.

These Salts can be used freely with no fear of harming you.

Montecatini Salts are an ideal remedy because they clean the intestines without irritating them.

All of said statements together with similar statements occurring in the respondents' advertising literature and radio broadcasts purport to be descriptive of the respondents' product and of its effectiveness when taken. In all of their advertising, literature, radio broadcasts, and through other means, respondents, directly or by inference through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, represent that due to the qualities and properties of said Montecatini Salts such salts are an effective and competent remedy or treatment for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart, and for constipation, headaches, bad breath, acidity of the stomach, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, rash, blotches, pimples, and uric acid; that said salts are always good for any minor ailment and effective in the treatment of virtually all ailments; that said salts constitute a mild efficacious laxative; and that they are harmless and can be used freely and will clean the intestines without irritation.

Par. 5. The representations and implications so made and used by the respondents with respect to the nature of their products and their effectiveness in use are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact Montecatini Salts, plain and iodated, whether in crystal or powder form, are not a competent treatment or remedy for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart; for headaches, bad breath, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure and rash; for blotches or pimples; or for uric acid or other ailments. Said salts are not effective as a treatment for all minor ailments and they are not harmless and cannot be used freely without irritating the intestines.

In truth and in fact, said Montecatini Salts have no beneficial value except as a laxative or purgative in cases of temporary or occasional constipation and said salts, plain or iodated, whether in crystal or powder form, have no value in treating any ailment or the symptoms thereof except when such conditions or symptom can be relieved by a laxative or a purgative. The use of said salts freely constitutes a drastic purge and will irritate the intestines.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading representations and implications made by the respondents in describing their product and its effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, have had and have a tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations and implications are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products with the result that trade in said commerce has been diverted unfairly to respondents from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling laxatives and other medicinal preparations in said commerce who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
The above acts and practices of the respondents, Banfi Products Corporation, Harry Mariani, John Mariani, Paul Mariani, and Joseph B. Mariani, are to the prejudice of the public and of the competitors of respondent Banfi Products Corporation, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Banfi Products Corporation, and its officers, and Harry Mariani, John Mariani, Paul Mariani, Joseph B. Mariani, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a laxative medicine in crystal or powder form, either plain or iodated now designated by the name of Montecatini Salts, or any other laxative medicine composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under that name or under any other name, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said salts, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication, that such salts constitute a remedy or cure for diseases of the stomach, liver, and heart, for constipation, headaches, bad breath, acidity of the stomach, rheumatism, gout, obesity, high blood pressure, rash, blotches, pimples, or uric acid, or that such salts constitute a competent and effective treatment for any of such diseases or ailments; that said salts are always good for any minor ailment and are effective in the treatment of virtually all ailments; that said salts constitute a mild efficacious laxative or will clean the intestines without irritation unless such representations are limited to cases of temporary or occasional constipation; and that said salts are harmless and can be freely used with safety.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MITCHELL BAZELON AND CHARLES HARRIS INDIVIDUALLY AND AS COPARTNERS TRADING UNDER THE FIRM NAMES AND STYLES OF PARK-LANE CANDY COMPANY AND CHARRIS SPECIALTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914.

Docket 3083. Complaint, Mar. 18, 1937—Decision, Feb. 15, 1939

Where two individuals engaged as partners in sale and distribution of items of merchandise including cocktail shakers, watches, pipes, and numerous other items of novelty merchandise, as cataloged and offered and variously packaged and assembled so as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to ultimate consumers, and which were composed of (1) seventeen ½-pound boxes of chocolate candy, four 1-pound boxes thereof, two 1-pound fancy boxes thereof and 1 cocktail shaker set, together with 600-hole punchboard for sale under a plan and in accordance with board's explanatory legend by which purchaser paid for chance, amount ranging from 1 cent to 5 cents, depending upon particular numbers punched, and received in accordance with success in selection of certain numbers, one of said boxes of candy, and under which purchaser of last punch on board received the cocktail shaker set; (2) of groups or combinations of articles, together with punchboards, for sale and distribution to public under a plan or scheme in accordance with which purchaser received for penny (or 5-cent chance, as case might be) article of merchandise, value of which was in excess of cost of purchase or nothing, dependent upon success or failure in selecting certain numbers; and of (3) various other assortments involving different arrangements, but, in all, punchboards or push cards for sale and distribution thereof to ultimate consumer by lot or chance—

Sold to jobbers and wholesalers, for display and resale to purchasing public by retail dealer purchasers thereof, in accordance with aforesaid sales plans, such assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their products in accordance with such sales plans, in violation of a long-established public policy of the common law and criminal statutes and contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer or sell merchandise packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance, and refrain therefrom;

With effect of inducing customers to buy their said products in preference to similar or like merchandise offered and sold by their competitors and with result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy and other articles of merchandise were attracted by their said method and manner of packing such candy and other merchandise, and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described, and were induced by reason of said plan or method to purchase substantial volume of such candy and other articles thus packed and sold by them, in preference to those offered and sold by their competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent methods, and of diverting trade and custom to them from their competitors aforesaid, and with tendency and capacity to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent methods as unlawful, lessen competition therein, and create monopoly thereof in themselves and such other distributors of candy and other articles as do use same or equivalent methods, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition therein, and eliminate therefrom all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors, who do not adopt and use such or equivalent methods:

 Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mitchell Bazelon and Charles Harris, individually and as copartners trading under the firm names and styles of Park-Lane Candy Co. and Charris Specialty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents are individuals conducting a copartnership under the trade names and styles of Park-Lane Candy Co. and Charris Specialty Co. Their office and principal place of business is located at 946 Diversey Parkway, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now, and for several months last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and various other articles of merchandise, including, among others, such items as cocktail shakers, watches, pipes, fountain pens, cigarette lighters, cigarette cases, opera glasses, cameras, and numerous other items of novelty merchandise, to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the State of Illinois and in various other States of the United States. Respondents cause said products when sold to be transported from their place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for several months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy and other merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and in the sale and distribution of various other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof; respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers various packages or assortments of candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consuming public. The respondents assemble, sell, and distribute various assortments, some of the assortments containing packages of candy together with other articles of merchandise, and other assortments containing no candy but various articles of merchandise. All such assortments include a punchboard, and each assortment involves the use of the same method of chance for the distribution of the candy or other articles of merchandise to the consuming public by means of said punchboard. For illustration, the method used in the sale of assortments of candy, together with other articles of merchandise, is as follows:

One of said assortments is composed of seventeen 1/2-pound boxes of chocolate candy, four 1-pound boxes of chocolate candy, two 1-pound fancy boxes of chocolate candy, and 1 cocktail shaker set, together with a device commonly called a "punchboard." The punchboard contains 600 holes, and in each hole a slip of paper bearing a printed number is secreted. The numbers printed on said slips are effectively concealed until after a selection has been made and the printed slip separated from the board. Customers procuring a number ending in zero receive the same free of charge. Numbers ending in one pay 1 cent; numbers ending in two pay 2 cents; numbers ending in three pay 3 cents; numbers ending in four pay 4 cents; and numbers ending in 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 pay 5 cents. The board bears legends or statements advising which numbers receive the 1/2-pound boxes of candy, which numbers receive the 1-pound boxes of candy, and which numbers receive the 1-pound fancy boxes of candy. The purchaser of the last punch on said board receives the cocktail shaker set. Customers or purchasers not qualifying by obtaining one of the numbers calling for a box of candy, or the last punch on said board, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from said board. The fact as to whether a customer receives a punch free of charge or pays 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents, and the fact as to whether he receives nothing for his purchase or 1 of the \( \frac{1}{2} \)-pound boxes of candy, one of the 1-pound boxes of candy, one of the 1-pound fancy boxes of candy, or the cocktail shaker set, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The several boxes of candy and the cocktail shaker set are each worth more than 5 cents.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers, to whom respondents sell their assortments, resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortments for sale and sell said merchandise to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth; and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said products in preference to similar or like merchandise offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise by chance free of charge or at a price of 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents.

The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

The use by respondents of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the said trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell merchandise so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.
Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy and other articles of merchandise are attracted by respondents’ said method and manner of packing said candy and other merchandise and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade and to tend to create a monopoly in said trade in respondents and such other distributors of candy and other articles of merchandise as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said method by the respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

Par. 6. Many of said competitors of respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

Par. 7. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents’ competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 18, 1937, issued, and on March 22, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Mitchell Bazelon and Charles Harris, individually and as copartners trading under the firm names and styles of Park-Lane Candy Co. and Charris Specialty Co., charging them with the use of
PARK-LANE CANDY CO., ETC. 533

Findings

unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash and Horace J. Donnelly, attorneys for respondents, before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief in opposition to the complaint and not having requested oral argument), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents Mitchell Bazelon and Charles Harris are individuals conducting a copartnership under the trade names of Park-Lane Candy Co. and Charris Specialty Co.

Respondents' principal place of business is located at 946 Diversey Boulevard in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondents, since April 1936, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy, and also in the sale and distribution of other articles of merchandise, which include such items as cocktail shakers, watches, pipes, fountain pens, cigarette lighters, cigarette cases, opera glasses, cameras, and numerous other items of novelty merchandise.

This merchandise is sold by respondents to jobbers and wholesale dealers located throughout the United States.

Respondents cause said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their office and place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made.

Respondents maintain a course of trade and commerce in said merchandise sold and distributed by them between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. Respondents in the conduct of their business sell assortments of candy and assortments of other articles of merchandise, which are identified in paragraph 1 hereof, packaged and assembled in such a manner as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer.

Some of the assortments which respondents assemble, sell, and distribute contain packages of candy, together with other articles of merchandise. Other of respondents' assortments contain no candy, but articles of merchandise. All of such assortments include either a punchboard or a punch card.

The testimony shows, and the Commission finds, that the same method of chance is involved in the use of each assortment, and each assortment of candy or merchandise is distributed to the consuming public by means of the punchboard or punch card.

The testimony further shows, and the Commission finds, that respondents in the conduct of their business sell their various assortments by mailing to prospective customers located throughout the United States circulars which are descriptive of respondents' candy and merchandise assortments.

These assortments are referred to in said circulars as "Deals."

Respondents, trading under the name of Park-Lane Candy Co., secured a mailing list and sent to the persons or firms whose names appeared on said mailing list one of such circulars, upon which the name of Park-Lane Candy Co. appears as the vendor.

One type of assortment or "deal" sold by respondents trading as Park-Lane Candy Co. pursuant to orders obtained by them from persons or firms who received said circulars and from other persons or firms was assembled by respondents in the following manner.

The assortment was composed of seventeen ½-pound boxes of chocolate candy, four 1-pound boxes of chocolate candy, two 1-pound fancy boxes of chocolate candy, and one cocktail shaker set, together with a device commonly called a punchboard.

The said punchboard contained 600 holes, and in each hole a slip of paper bearing a printed number was secreted. The numbers printed on said slips were effectively concealed until after a selection had been made and the printed slip separated from the board.

If a customer procured a number ending in zero, he received the same free of charge. If a customer punched or procured a number ending in one said customer paid 1 cent; for a number ending in two the customer paid 2 cents; for a number ending in three the customer paid 3 cents; for a number ending in four the customer paid 4 cents; and for numbers ending in five, six, seven, eight, and nine the customer paid 5 cents.
Findings

The board bears statements advising which numbers receive the ½-pound boxes of candy, which numbers receive the 1-pound boxes of candy, and which numbers receive the 1-pound fancy boxes of candy. The purchaser of the last punch on the said board receives the cocktail shaker set.

Customers or purchasers not qualifying by obtaining one of the numbers calling for a box of candy, or the last punch on said board, receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from said board.

The fact as to whether a customer received a punch free of charge or pays 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents, and the fact as to whether he received nothing for his purchase or one of the ½-pound boxes of candy, one of the 1-pound boxes of candy, one of the 1-pound fancy boxes of candy, or the cocktail shaker set, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The several boxes of candy and the cocktail shaker set are each worth more than 5 cents.

Other assortments or “deals” of candy and novelty items or merchandise were also sold by respondents. These assortments differed from the one above described only in the manner in which the merchandise was packaged or arranged, and the types of punchboards or punch cards to be used in selling the merchandise. In all of the assortments sold by respondents a lottery by use of the punchboard or punch card was used for the purpose of sale to the ultimate consumer.

Respondents, trading under the name of Charris Specialty Co., also mailed to prospective customers in various States of the United States a catalog or circular, which was designated as Catalog No. 17, upon which the name of Charris Specialty Co. appears as the vendor.

The assortments or “deals” sold by respondents under the name of Charris Specialty Co. consisted for the most part of the articles of merchandise described in paragraph 1 hereof with punchboard and punch cards and not candy.

The assortments sold by respondents trading as Charris Specialty Co. pursuant to orders obtained by them from persons or firms who received said circular or catalog, and from others were assembled by respondents in the following manner.

The articles of merchandise listed in the catalog, and which were sold by respondents, were in groups or combinations, and each group or combination was accompanied by a punchboard, each of which had a large number of holes. Into each hole of the punchboard there had been inserted a rolled slip of paper upon which was printed a number. Members of the public are solicited to punch from one or more holes of the board the said rolled slip of paper, and for each punch customers were charged 1 cent. Some of the numbers on the slip of paper so punched from the board entitled the customer to an article of merchandise worth much more than 1 cent, but for other numbers the customer received nothing.

In the operation of the board accompanying some of the groups of articles of merchandise, members of the public were required to pay 5 cents for the privilege of punching one of the numbers from the board.

In the operation of all of the boards, the selection of a number which might entitle the selector to an article of merchandise was wholly a matter of chance.

Respondents discontinued the use of the catalog and the sale of the items listed therein in the month of February 1937.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sold their assortments resold said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers exposed said assortments for sale, and sold said merchandise to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan.

Respondents thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their products, in accordance with the sales plan set forth in paragraph 2 hereof.

This sales plan has the capacity and tendency to, and does induce customers to purchase respondent's products in preference to similar or like merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondents' competitors.

Par. 4. The Commission finds that the sale of respondents' merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise by chance, free of charge, or at a price 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents.

The Commission further finds that the use by respondents of the said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of the said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

The use by respondents of said method has the tendency to hinder competition and create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the said trades involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell merchandise packed and assembled in the manner that respondents pack and assemble their merchandise, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy and other articles of merchandise are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and other merchandise and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described. Because of sales plan or method such dealers and ultimate purchasers are and have been thereby induced to purchase a substantial volume of said candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

The use of the said method by respondents also has the tendency and capacity to exclude from said trades all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; lessen competition in said trades and to create a monopoly in said trades in respondents and such other distributors of candy and other articles of merchandise as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade.

The use of said method by the respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trades all actual competitors and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

Many of said competitors of respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief by counsel for the Commission (counsel for respondent having filed no brief and not having requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Mitchell Bazelon and Charles Harris, individually and as copartners trading under the firm names and styles of Park-Lane Candy Co. and Charris Specialty Co., or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy, cocktail shakers, watches, pipes, fountain pens, cigarette lighters, cigarette cases, opera glasses, cameras, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Selling and distributing candy or other articles of merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said products or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise,

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of said products or other merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said products or other merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices either with assortments of said products or other merchandise or separately, which lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said products or other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of said products or other merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery device or devices.
It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Mr. Freer dissented to the inclusion of certain words in the Commission's order to cease and desist in this case, involving respondents located within the Seventh Circuit, because the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the case of A. McLean & Son—Docket 2264—had stricken from the order in said previous case these words and substituted others for them. [See, for decision referred to, 84 F. (2d) 910.]
IN THE MATTER OF

BONWIT TELLER, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in operation of department store from which it sold and distributed women's wearing apparel and other allied products to members of the purchasing and consuming public in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in such sale and distribution of such apparel and other products—

(a) Designated and referred to certain slips, which it advertised in newspapers and periodicals of interstate circulation, and in advertising which it approved and agreed to, for insertion in newspapers by others for the benefit, profit and advantage of itself and others, as "satin," through statement "A gown of cotton lace over satin," without disclosure, in immediate connection and conjunction with said word, of said slips' rayon content, so as to apprise and inform purchasing public of such composition, and thereby represented to members of purchasing public that garments thus advertised and offered were made of silk, product of cocoon of silkworm, as long associated in public mind with word "satin," used to designate, describe or refer to dress goods and other similar products, and long held in high esteem for the preeminent qualities of products made therefrom; and

(b) Advertised certain women's suits as being lined with "Silk Rayon Crepe," without disclosing, in connection therewith, that silk was weighted and not unweighted, and represented thereby to members of purchasing public that such linings consisted of a mixed fabric made up of predominant part of unweighted silk and rayon;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing and consuming public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, and of inducing purchase of such items of wearing apparel on account of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs thus brought about through such deceptive and false representations, and of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from competitors engaged in sale of similar apparel and other allied products and who do not misrepresent material of which apparel offered for sale or sold by them is composed; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.
Paskus, Gordon & Hyman, of New York City, for respondent.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bonwit Teller, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Bonwit Teller, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Fifth Avenue, and Fifty-sixth Street, New York City, State of New York.

It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells and distributes women's wearing apparel and other allied products. It sells, and has sold and distributed, such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing and consuming public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in New York City, State aforesaid, to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the said State of New York and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondent in said merchandise, sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned, has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of women's wearing apparel and other allied products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling such merchandise, caused, and now causes, advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and magazines having an interstate circulation, and has approved and agreed to advertising matter being so inserted and circulated by others for the benefit, profit, and advantage of respondent and such others. In said advertising matter, certain "slips" worn by women were, and are, represented, designated, and referred to as "satin," said advertisement reading, in its material part as follows:

A gown of cotton lace over satin.

said word "satin" being used without being in any way qualified.
Such statements and representations on the part of respondent serve as representations to members of the purchasing and consuming public that such garments so advertised and offered for sale were, and are, composed of silk.

In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling such merchandise, caused advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having interstate circulation, and in so doing has advertised certain women's suits as being lined with "Silk Rayon Crepe," when there was, and is, no such material as silk rayon, and when, in fact, the lining was composed of weighted silk, without any indication in said advertisement that said lining was composed of weighted silk, and in the absence of such indication such statements and representations on the part of respondent serve as representations to members of the purchasing and consuming public that such garments so advertised and offered for sale were composed of unweighted silk.

The representations herein set forth were, and are, false and misleading, in that said garments so represented, designated, and referred to as "satin" were, and are, not composed of silk, but were, and are, composed of rayon, and such representations had, and have, the tendency and effect of concealing the fact that such "slips" were, and are, made of rayon, when it was, and is, the duty of respondent to make disclosure of the fact that such "slips" were, and are, composed of rayon, by using the word rayon in immediate connection and conjunction with such word "satin," in such a way and manner as to apprise and inform the purchasing and consuming public that such "slips" were, and are, composed of rayon; and in that said linings were not composed of an unweighted silk, but were, in fact, composed of weighted silk, without indicating that such lining was weighted by the use of the word "weighted" in connection with said advertisement, in such a way as to inform the members of the purchasing and consuming public that the same was weighted.

Par. 3. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the mind of the purchasing and consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics. A variety of distinctive terms has been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of treatment and weaves of silk fiber. Dress goods and other similar products designated, described, or referred to as "satin," and other like words, when used alone, and until qualified, designate or describe the materials from which the garment is made, and have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with material made from the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, commonly known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public as silk.

Rayon is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk, in that it has the appearance and feel of silk, and is, by the purchasing and consuming public, practically indistinguishable from silk. The use of the word “weighted” in connection with silk is meant silk that has been subjected to a metallic bath, resulting in a metallic substance or substances being permanently absorbed by the silk fiber.

Par. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were, and are, true; and has induced, and does induce, the purchase of such items of wearing apparel, on account of such erroneous and mistaken belief brought about by the use of said deceptive and false representations. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale of women's wearing apparel and other allied products who do not misrepresent the material of which wearing apparel offered for sale by them is made or composed. By use of the representations aforesaid, trade in said commerce has been, and is being, unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors. Thereby substantial injury is being, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 17, 1938, issued and on September 21, 1938, served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Bonwit Teller, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On November 30, 1938, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in this said complaint excepting that part of paragraph 2 of the complaint which charges that the words "Silk Rayon Crepe" serve as representations to members of the public that the garments they described were composed wholly of unweighted silk. Respondent waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Bonwit Teller, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street, New York City, State of New York.

Respondent Bonwit Teller, Inc., is now and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating a department store from which it sells and distributes women's wearing apparel and other allied products. Said merchandise is sold and distributed, by respondent, to members of the purchasing and consuming public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its said articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and has maintained a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise, sold by it between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing women's wearing apparel and other allied products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in offering for sale and selling its merchandise caused advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and magazines having an interstate circulation. Respondent also approved and agreed to the insertion of certain advertising matter in newspapers by others for the benefit, profit, and advantage of respondent and such others.

In said advertising matter, certain "slips" worn by women were represented, designated, and referred to as "satin," said advertisement reading in its material part as follows:

A gown of cotton lace over satin.

The word "satin" was used in said advertisements without being qualified in any manner.

The Commission finds that the use of the word "satin" in the manner aforesaid serves as a representation to members of the purchasing public that the garments so advertised and offered for sale were composed of silk.

Respondent also advertised certain women's suits as being lined with "Silk Rayon Crepe."

The Commission finds the use of the words "Silk Rayon Crepe" in the manner aforesaid serves as a representation to members of the purchasing public that the lining of the suits consisted of a mixed fabric made up of a predominant part of unweighted silk combined solely with rayon.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the above representations made by respondent in advertising these women's slips and suits were and are false, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact said women's "slips" were and are not satin. The Commission finds that said slips were and are composed of rayon.

In truth and in fact the linings of said suits were and are not composed of unweighted silk and rayon. The Commission finds that the linings of the suits were composed wholly of weighted silk.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that it was and is the duty of respondent to make disclosure of the fact that the "slips" respondent offered for sale and sold were and are composed of rayon by using the word "rayon" in immediate connection and conjunction with the word "satin," in such a way and manner as to apprise and inform the purchasing public that such slips were and are composed of rayon.

The Commission finds that it was and is the duty of respondent to make disclosures of the fact that said linings were not composed of an unweighted silk, but were, in fact, composed of weighted silk by the use of the word "weighted" in connection with said advertisement in such a way as to inform the members of the purchasing public that the same was weighted.

Par. 5. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the mind of the purchasing and consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics. A variety of distinctive terms has been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of treatment and weaves of fiber. Dress goods and other similar products designated, described, or referred to as "satin," and other like words, when used alone, and until qualified, designate or describe the materials from which the garment is made, and have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with material made from the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public as silk.

Rayon is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk, in that it has the appearance and feel of silk, and is, by the purchasing and consuming public, practically indistinguishable from silk. The use of the word "weighted" in connection with silk is meant silk that has been subjected to a metallic bath, resulting in a metallic substance or substances being permanently absorbed by the silk fiber.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were, and are, true; and has induced, and does induce, the purchase of such items of wearing apparel, on account of such erroneous and mistaken belief brought about by the use of said deceptive and false representations.

There are among the competitors of respondent, corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms, engaged in the sale of women's wearing apparel and other allied products who do not misrepresent the material of which wearing apparel offered for sale by them is made or composed.

By use of the representations aforesaid, trade in said commerce has been, and is being, unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

As a result thereof, injury is being, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except that part of paragraph 2 of the complaint which charges that the words “Silk Rayon Crepe” serve as representations to members of the public that the garments they describe were composed wholly of unweighted silk, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bonwit Teller, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of fabrics, ladies' wearing apparel and garments, and other like articles of merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word “satin” or “crepe” or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless such descriptive word or words are used truthfully to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such words shall be qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said product or fabric is made.

2. Using the words “silk rayon” to designate or describe any fabrics, wearing apparel, garments, or other like merchandise, provided, however, that in the case of mixed fabrics which contain silk and rayon, the fibers or materials of said mixed fabrics, wearing apparel, garments, or other like merchandise, shall be designated or described in the order of their predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent.
3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics or any other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

FERRARA PANNED CANDY COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 20, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of candy, including assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof and which (1) were composed of a number of pieces of candy, together with push cards for sale and distribution of said pieces under a plan and in accordance with card's explanatory legend by which purchaser received, in accordance with particular basket ball legend disclosed by disk selected to be pushed by chance, pieces of candy ranging from 1 to 20, and (2) involved various push cards similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only, for sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme—

Sold and distributed to dealers such assortments for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with such sales plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure additional pieces of candy without additional cost, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer and sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of its said candy to buy same in preference to that offered and sold by its competitors and with result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy were attracted by its said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described and were thereby induced to purchase substantial amounts of such candy thus packed and sold by it in preference to that offered and sold by its said competitors, who do not use such or equivalent sales plan or method, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, unfairly to divert trade and custom to it from its competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or equivalent method as unlawful, lessen competition in said trade, create a monopoly thereof in it and in such other distributors of candy as do use same or equivalent sales plan or method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition, and eliminate from said trade all actual and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use such plan or method;

Held, that such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Complaint

PURSUANT to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ferrara Panned Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ferrara Panned Candy Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2200-10 West Taylor Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for some time last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is, and has been, sold and distributed to the consuming public in the following manner:

This assortment consists of a number of pieces of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains a number of partially perforated discs which are divided into four sections. On the face of each disk is printed the word "Push." Within each of said discs is printed one of a number of basketball terms, which lend themselves to legend use for the awarding of prizes. Sales are 1 cent each, and each purchaser is entitled to one push from said card. The said card bears statements or legends as follows:
Sales of respondent's candy are made in accordance with the above legends. The said terms or words printed within the said disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase has been made and a disk separated or removed from said card. The said pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces of candy without additional cost. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of the said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition, or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method, or an equivalent method involving the same or an equivalent element of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale, or to sell, their products so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above described, and thereby are induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method. The use of said method by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent, trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said sales plan or method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 17, 1938, issued, and on August 18, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Ferrara Panned Candy Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Ferrara Panned Candy Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2200-10 West Taylor Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for some time last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is, and has been, sold and distributed to the consuming public in the following manner:

This assortment consists of a number of pieces of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains a number of partially perforated disks which are divided into four sections. On the face of each disk is printed the word "Push." Within each of said disks is printed one of a number of basketball terms, which lend themselves to legend use for the awarding of prizes. Sales are 1 cent each, and each purchaser is entitled to one push from said card. The said card bears statements or legends as follows:

Sales of respondent's candy are made in accordance with the above legends. The said terms or words printed within the said disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase has been made and a disk separated or removed from said card. The said pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces of candy without additional cost. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of the said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition, or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method, or an equivalent method involving the same or an equivalent element of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale, or to sell, their products so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above described, and thereby are induced to purchase substantial amounts of said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method. The use of said method by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent, trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said sales plan or method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the fact and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent Ferrara Panned Candy Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers or others, packages or assortments of candy which are to be or may be used to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of candy or any other article of merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers or others, assortments of candy or any other merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, which lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers or others a lottery device either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which lottery device is to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

D. A. SCHULTE, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of certain assortments of candy and other articles of merchandise which were (1) so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and for use with which (2) it shipped to its wholesaler, jobber, and retailer customers punchboards, and one of which (3) consisted of a number of boxes of assorted candy and additional articles of merchandise, together with punchboards for disposition of said candy and merchandise to consuming public under a plan in accordance with which, and board's explanatory legend, certain specified numbers entitled purchaser to a box of candy or other articles, and purchaser of last punch in each of three sections into which board was arranged received a pound box of candy, and purchaser of last punch on board received article of merchandise, and purchaser who failed thus to qualify and thereby secure one of said boxes of candy or articles, value of which was in excess of the 5 cents or 10 cents charged for punch, received nothing for such 5 cents or 10 cents other than privilege of making punch;

Sold to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers such assortments and furnished punchboards as aforesaid to such assortments' purchasers, by whom such boards were made use of in sale and distribution of its candy and merchandise in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy and other merchandise in accordance with such sales plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure candy or article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use such or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by it in sale and distribution of its candy and other articles and element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell such candy and other articles in preference to such merchandise offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and of unfairly diverting trade because of said game of chance to it from its competitors who do not use such method, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Jerome Eisner, of New York City, for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that D. A. Schulte, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, D. A. Schulte, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 384 Broadway, New York City. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and for some time last past has been, in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Respondent causes and has caused punchboards, which are designed to be, and are, used with the said assortments to be shipped to the aforesaid wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The wholesalers and jobbers, aforesaid, in turn, assemble the punchboards, candy and other articles of merchandise into one assortment and sell same to the retail trade. Respondent furnishes and has furnished various punchboards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy and other articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy or other articles of merchandise by means of said punchboard is the same as the one hereinafter described, varying only in detail.

One of said assortments consists of a number of boxes of assorted candy and additional articles of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said boxes of candy and other articles of merchandise are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: The sales are 5 or 10 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a box of candy or other articles of merchandise. The punches on the board are arranged in four sections and the purchaser of the last punch in each section, except the last, receives a pound box of candy and the purchaser of the last punch on the board receives an article of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy or by punching the last number in one of the sections, or the last number on the board, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The boxes of candy are worth more than 5 or 10 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for a box of candy, or an article of merchandise, receives the same for the price of 5 or 10 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The boxes of candy and other articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said punchboards use the same in selling and distributing respondent's candy and merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy and merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinafter set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and merchandise and the sale of said candy and merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy or an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute candy and other articles of merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and other articles of merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy and other articles of merchandise in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 23, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent D. A. Schulte, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 13, 1939, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, D. A. Schulte, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 384 Broadway, New York City. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and for some time last past has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Respondent causes and has caused punchboards, which are designed to be and are, used with the said assortments to be shipped to the aforesaid wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The wholesalers and jobbers, aforesaid, in turn, assemble the punchboards, candy, and other articles of merchandise into one assortment and sell same to the retail trade. Respondent furnishes and has furnished various punchboards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy and other articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy or other articles of merchandise by means of said punchboard is the same as the one hereinafter described, varying only in detail.

One of said assortments consists of a number of boxes of assorted candy and additional articles of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said boxes of candy and other articles of merchandise are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: The sales are 5 or 10 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a box of candy or other articles of merchandise. The punches on the board are arranged in four sections and the purchaser of the last punch in each section, except the last, receives a pound box of candy and the purchaser of the last punch on the board receives an article of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the boxes of candy or by punching the last number in one of the sections, or the last number on the board, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The boxes of candy are worth more than 5 or 10 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for a box of candy, or an article of merchandise, receives the same for the price of 5 or 10 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The boxes of candy and other articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said punchboards use the same in selling and distributing respondent's candy and merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy and other merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and other merchandise and the sale of said candy and other merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.
Par. 4. The sale of candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy or an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute candy and other articles of merchandise in competition with the respondent as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and other articles of merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s candy and other articles of merchandise in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent, D. A. Schulte, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said products to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers packages or assortments of candy or other merchandise which are to be used or which may be used to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of said products to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy or other merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards or any other lottery devices, which lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such products to the public.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers a lottery device either with assortments of candy or other merchandise, or separately, which lottery device is to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such products to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondent, it shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MORTIMER ALFRED GERSTEN AND LEE GERSTEN, DOING BUSINESS AS GERSTEN BROTHERS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEP'T. 26, 1914

Docket 2810. Complaint, May 18, 1936—Decision, Feb. 16, 1939

Where two individuals engaged as partners in the manufacture of storage receptacles, chests, and closets for storing clothing and other materials against ravages of moths and deterioration caused by exposure to light and dust, and which were made of corrugated paper between thin sheets of fiber, about one-eighth of an inch thick, were supplied, in case of closets, with metal clothes hangers to support weight of 100 pounds of stored articles, and were provided, in case of both closets and chests, with built-in receptacle to hold chemicals or moth bullets or antmoth pellets placed therein prior to sale, and in selling said storage receptacles, closets, and chests to retail and wholesale dealers in such articles in the District of Columbia and in the various States, and in selling also, separately, for use in their storage receptacles, said so-called moth bullets or "Anti-Moth Pellets" and "Closet Moth Proofer," which contained, among other things, not more than about 2 ounces of a compound of cedar leaf and pine oils in about equal proportions, and, as thus engaged in selling as aforesaid their various articles, in substantial competition with those engaged in sale for similar purposes of various storage receptacles such as garment bags, closets, and chests—

(a) Branded or marked their said storage receptacles "Cedarol Closets" and "Cedarol Chests," in large letters, and receptacles used therein "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer" and "Mothador," and caused said storage receptacles, thus branded or marked, and said receptacles, to be offered and sold by wholesale and retail dealers to public, and thereby falsely represented, through use of said first-named word, to wholesale and retail dealers and public, that such "Cedarol" closets and chests were effective storage receptacles against ravages of moths because of presence of cedar oil in their construction, and that such "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer" were provided with sufficient cedar oil so as to give storage receptacles or other storage places in which used same qualities for storage purposes as possessed by efficient cedar wood storage receptacles, as long made in accordance with accepted and recognized practice, and as associated by public with such qualities and efficiency for storage purposes of such practically air-tight cedar wood receptacles as thus made, and falsely represented, through use of word "Mothador," to wholesale and retail dealers and public, that such contrivances, attached to or contained in its said storage receptacles, made the same, or others when supplied with its so-called moth bullets or other chemicals or oil compounds, efficient protection to contents thereof against ravages of moths;

Facts being loose construction of said receptacles, when in use for storage purposes, tended to and did cause seams thereof to spread and permit ingress and egress of air and moths, and the fiber or cardboard material of which same were made was permeable to air and to vapor of gas from oils of chemicals used in moth bullets or other chemicals or oil materials supplied by them for protection of materials against such ravages, so that they not only permitted ingress of moths and air, but were useless for purpose of causing concentration of vapor or gas from chemicals or oils used therein to become sufficient as a fumigant to protect materials therein stored from said ravages and, in consequence, they did not afford protection to stored clothing and other materials in aforesaid respect, and from deterioration from exposure to dust and light;

(b) Caused false and misleading statements to appear in advertisements concerning their storage receptacles, and "Mothadors" and "Closet Moth Proofers" used in connection therewith, in newspapers, trade papers, magazines, and other publications, to the effect that their closets and chests were "Cedarol" closets and chests, and that their "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers," with moth bullets, protected clothes of user, when employed in respondents' storage receptacles or in cabinets and closets of members of the public, from the ravages of moths or moth larvae, and that they destroyed moths and kept the same out of the storage receptacles, and that use of one such moth proofer loaded with moth bullets for each 40 cubic feet of confined closed space, when placed in wardrobes in which clothing was stored, was insurance against moth damage, and that it destroyed moths, and that their said receptacles were efficient and sufficient protection to articles stored therein against aforesaid ravages; and

(c) Caused wholesalers and retailers and others to make, in turn, statements similar to those above referred to, both in advertisements in newspapers, trade papers, and other publications, and verbally to members of the public, concerning their aforesaid products;

With effect of deceiving and misleading dealers in storage receptacles through such marking or branding, and such other false and fraudulent statements and representations, into the belief that they were true, and of causing them, in turn, to pass on such false and misleading representations to members of public, and of deceiving and misleading wholesalers and retailers and members of the public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such false and fraudulent statements and representations were true, and, in reliance thereon, into purchasing their said receptacles for sums of 80 cents, more or less, and their said moth proofer for use in such receptacles, in place of storage receptacles of competitors which were efficient and sufficient protection against ravages of moth larvae to materials stored therein, and were customarily sold to public, according to size and other qualities, at prices ranging from approximately $1 to $10, and upwards, and trade in storage receptacles was thereby diverted to them from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.
Mr. John N. Wheelock for the Commission.
Mock & Blum and Mr. Abraham H. Brown, of New York City, for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mortimer Alfred Gersten and Lee Gersten, copartners, doing business under the trade name Gersten Brothers, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondents, Mortimer Alfred Gersten and Lee Gersten, are and have been copartners doing business under the trade name, Gersten Brothers, at all times since more than 5 years immediately prior to the date hereof, having a place of business during said times and now at 516 West Thirty-fourth Street, Borough of Manhattan, city of New York, N. Y.

Para. 2. During all the times above mentioned the respondents are and have been engaged in the business of the manufacture and in the business of the sale, among other things, of storage receptacles, chests, and closets made of corrugated fiber for use for the protection in storage, among other things, of clothing and other materials against the ravages of clothing's moths and the deterioration caused by exposure to light and dust.

Para. 3. The respondents, during all the times above mentioned and referred to, have sold their storage receptacles, closets, and chests, to retail and wholesale dealers in such articles, purchasers thereof, located in the District of Columbia and in the various States of the United States other than New York, or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale to members of the public, users thereof, and the respondents have caused their storage receptacles, when so sold by them, to be transported from New York or from the State of origin of the shipment to, into, and through the District of Columbia and States other than New York or the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers there located.

Para. 4. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, other individuals, firms, and corporations, located in the various States of the United States, hereinafter called sellers, are and have been engaged in the business of the sale of various storage receptacles, such as garment bags, boxes, closets, cabinets, and chests, for use in the storage of clothing and other materials subject to the ravages of clothes' moths and to deterioration from exposure to light and dust, to retail and wholesale dealers therein, purchasers thereof, located in States other than the State of the seller or State of origin of the shipment, for resale to members of the public, users of such storage receptacles. The sellers, respectively, caused the storage receptacles, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller or from the State of origin of the shipment to, into, and through the District of Columbia and the other States, to the purchasers there located.

Par. 5. The respondents during all the times above mentioned or referred to are, and have been, in substantial competition in interstate commerce with the other individuals, firms, and corporations referred to as sellers in paragraph 4 hereof in the sale of their storage receptacles, chests, and closets.

Par. 6. The aroma or odor of cedar oil is not a repellent and does not act as a repellent so as to prevent clothes' moths from entering closed storage receptacles, the interiors of which contain or are impregnated with cedar oil. The aroma or odor of cedar oil has no effect on any stage of moth life. As a fumigant, however, the vapor or gas from cedar oil, if of sufficient concentration, will kill young moth larvae and some of the older larvae, and it will also cause the activity of the older larvae to be suspended.

Par. 7. Storage receptacles, garment bags, boxes, closets, cabinets, and chests are used for the storage of clothing and other materials ordinarily during a continuous period of seven months in a year. In order to be effective upon moth larvae as a fumigant during the above storage period or any part thereof, cedar oil or other volatile oils or chemicals, must be held in practically airtight container in order that the evaporating gas or vapor therefrom may be confined and thereby become of sufficient concentration for that purpose.

Par. 8. Storage receptacles, closets, cabinets, and chests made of wood and practically airtight and containing in the body proper (top, sides, and bottom) as much as 70 percent of ¾-inch red cedar wood, furnish an atmosphere within them when in use and closed that does not permit the eggs of clothes moths in such receptacles to develop into larvae which can cause damage to stored material and later develop into clothes moths. Such storage receptacles by tests and by experience in their use as storage receptacles, are, and have been, definitely established as efficient preventives of moth damage to clothing and other materials stored in them.

Par. 9. For more than 25 years last past manufacturers in the cedar wood chest industry in the United States have produced and sold, in interstate commerce, storage receptacles made in part or entirely of red cedar wood, and marked, branded, or otherwise described and advertised as cedar chests, cedar closets and cedar cabinets when offered for sale and when sold.

Par. 10. On December 2, 1932, the industry, engaged in the United States in the manufacture of cedar wood chests, held a Trade Practice Conference under the auspices of the Federal Trade Commission, to consider, among other things, the prevention of the practice in the sale of wood chests in interstate commerce, of representing such chests as cedar chests, when they contained in their body proper only cedar veneer, or cedar wood of only one-twentieth inch in thickness, and the said industry made and passed the resolutions or rules mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 11 and 12 hereof.

Par. 11. On May 12, 1933, the Federal Trade Commission issued an official statement to the effect, among other things, that the rules as adopted by the Industry at the Trade Practice Conference mentioned in paragraph 10 hereof, and as set forth in Group I of the Commission’s official statement were approved and accepted by the Commission.

Par. 12. Among the Rules of the Trade Practice Conference of the Cedar Chest Industry, referred to in paragraph 10 hereof, and contained in Group I of the Federal Trade Commission’s official statement, are Rules 1, 2, 3, and 14 as approved by the Federal Trade Commission, as follows:

Rule 1.—The use in advertising, selling, or offering for sale of such expressions as “moth proof,” “moth killing,” “moth repelling,” “cedarized,” or similar misleading representations, in describing any cedar chest, cedar container, or cedar receptacle which is not tightly constructed and which does not contain in the body proper (top, sides, ends, and bottom) at least seventy (70) percent of three-quarter inch red cedar (Juniperus virginiana), is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 2.—The making or causing or permitting to be made or published any false, untrue, or deceptive statement by way of advertisement or otherwise concerning the grade, quality, quantity, substance, character, nature, origin, size, or preparation of any product of the industry, having the tendency and capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers, is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 3.—The false marking or branding of products of the industry with the effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers or prospective purchasers with respect to the quantity, quality, grade, substance or moth-killing, or moth-repelling properties of the goods purchased, is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 14.—Advertising, selling, or offering for sale as cedar chests, cedar containers, or cedar receptacles, chest containers, or receptacles which contain in the body proper (top, sides, ends, and bottom) more than thirty (30) percent by weight of wood or woods other than cedar (Juniperus virginiana) is an unfair trade practice.
At all times since on or about the year 1932 the said manufacturers in the cedar wood chest industry have made such storage receptacles from red cedar wood with a minimum of 70 percent (top, sides, and bottom) of three-quarter inch red cedar wood.

Par. 13. During all the times above mentioned, the respondents' said storage receptacles were made of corrugated paper between thin sheets of fiber or cardboard of a total thickness of approximately one-eighth of an inch. The closets were supplied with metal clothes hangers intended to support a weight of 100 pounds of stored articles. Both closets and chests were provided with a built-in receptacle called a "Mothador" or "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer" for the purpose of holding chemicals or moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets, one or more of which was placed in such receptacles when the closets and chests were sold by respondents to the wholesale and retail dealers above referred to for resale to the public.

Par. 14. During the times above mentioned, the respondents also sold separately the so-called moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets and their "Closet Moth Proofer" for use in their storage receptacles. During said times the moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets or other such chemical material contained, among other things, not more than approximately two ounces of a compound of cedar leaf and pine oils in the proportions of about 50 percent of each.

Par. 15. The respondents' storage receptacles, above referred to, when in use for storage purposes were of loose construction. The pressure from the bulk and weight of garments or other materials, which they were expected to accommodate for storage, when stored in them, tended to and did cause the seams of the receptacles to spread and permit the ingress and egress of air and moths. The fiber or cardboard material of which they were made was permeable to air and the vapor or gas from the oils or chemicals used in the moth bullets or other chemical or oil materials supplied by the respondents for protection of materials against the ravages of moths. Because of their loose construction, the permeability of the material of which they were made, and the tendency of their seams to spread when in use and the respondents' storage receptacles not only permitted the ingress of moths and air, but were useless for the purpose of causing concentration of the vapor or gas from the chemicals or oils used in them to become sufficient, as a fumigant, to protect stored materials therein from the ravages of clothes' moths. In consequence of the foregoing the respondents' storage receptacles were not a protection to stored clothing and other materials against the ravages of moth larvae and from deterioration from exposure to dust and light.
Par. 16. During all the times above mentioned the respondents branded or marked their storage receptacles “Cedarol Closets” and “Cedarol Chests” in large letters before they were sold by them as above set forth, and branded or marked the receptacles used therein for chemicals or oils or moth bullets with the words “Mothador” and “Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer,” and the so-marked or branded storage receptacles and so-called “Mothadors” and “Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers” were caused by respondents to be, in turn, offered for sale and sold by wholesale and retail dealers to the public.

Par. 17. During all the times above mentioned the respondents, in advertisements, concerning their storage receptacles, “Mothadors” and “Closet Moth Proofers” used in connection therewith which were published in newspapers, trade papers, magazines and in other publications, caused statements to appear, among many others similar and of the same effect thereto, that their closets and chests were Cedarol closets and chests; that their Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers with the moth bullets protected the clothes of the user when used in respondents’ storage receptacles or in cabinets or closets of members of the public from the ravages of moths or moth larvae; that they destroyed moths; that they kept moths out of the storage receptacles; that the use of one Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer loaded with moth bullets for each 40 cubic feet of confined closed space, when placed in a wardrobe in which clothing was stored was an insurance against moth damage; that it destroyed moths; and that their storage receptacles were efficient and sufficient protection to stored articles against the ravages of moths, or moth larvae.

The respondents caused wholesale and retail dealers and others to make, in turn, statements the same as those above mentioned and referred to and many others similar thereto, both in advertisements published in newspapers, trade papers, and other publications, as well as verbally to members of the public concerning its storage receptacles and its moth bullets, Anti-Moth Pellets, and Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers.

Par. 18. During all the times above mentioned and long prior thereto the public, users of storage receptacles, knew of the use of storage receptacles made of cedar wood and of their efficiency for storage purposes, and that, not only because they were practically airtight and thereby prevented the ingress of moths, but more particularly because members of the public knew or believed that the vapor from the oil in the cedar wood of which they were composed furnished within such closed receptacles an atmosphere such as referred to in paragraph 8 hereof that was of further and complete protection to the articles stored therein against the ravages of moths in case the articles stored were infested with moths or moth larvae at the time they were placed in such receptacles.

Par. 19. The marking or branding by the respondents of their storage receptacles, closets, and chests, using the word “Cedarol” and the use of the word “Cedarol” in branding its so-called “Closet Moth Proofers” was false and falsely represented to wholesale and retail dealers and to the public that the closets and chests were effective storage receptacles against the ravages of moths, because of the presence of cedar oil in their construction; that the “Cedarol Moth Proofers” were provided with sufficient cedar oil and in such a manner as to give the storage receptacles, or other storage places where they were used, the same qualities for storage purposes that efficient cedar wood storage receptacles had by reason of the presence of cedar oil which they contained. The marking or branding of respondents so-called “Closet Moth Proofer” with the word “Cedarol” likewise caused wholesale and retail dealers and members of the public to believe that the use of such contrivances was an efficient protection against the ravages of clothes’ moths by reason of the presence in them of a sufficient quantity of cedar oil for that purpose. The marking or branding by the respondents of the contrivances called by them “Mothadors” was a representation by the respondents to wholesale and retail dealers and to the public that such contrivances attached to or contained in the respondents’ storage receptacles when supplied with the so-called moth bullets or other chemical or oil compounds made the respondents’, or others, storage receptacles efficient protection to stored materials against the ravages of clothes’ moths.

Par. 20. The marking or branding of their storage receptacles and of their closet moth proofer and the statements and representations made by the respondents and caused to be made verbally by their agents and in advertisements, as set forth above, were false and fraudulent statements and representations, and they had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and they did deceive and mislead, dealers in storage receptacles to whom they were made into believing that they were true; and, to cause wholesale and retail dealers, in turn, to pass on such false and misleading representations to members of the public. The said false statements and representations, as above set forth, had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and they did deceive and mislead, wholesale and retail dealers and members of the public into the mistaken and erroneous believe that they were true, and, into relying upon such belief and purchasing the respondents said storage receptacles, which were sold for sums of approximately 89 cents, more or less, and into purchasing respondents' so-called "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer" for use in storage receptacles in place of purchasing the storage receptacles of competitors of the respondents which were efficient and sufficient protection against the ravages of moth larvae to stored materials, and which were customarily sold to the public according to their size and other qualities at prices ranging from approximately $1 to $10 and upwards, and trade in storage receptacles was thereby diverted to the respondents from competitors.

Par. 21. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondents were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 18th day of May 1936, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused it to be served upon the respondents, Mortimer Alfred Gersten and Lee Gersten, copartners, doing business under the trade name Gersten Brothers, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of the respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw their answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the substitute answer was duly filed November 29, 1938, in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, advises that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondents, Mortimer Alfred Gersten and Lee Gersten, are and have been copartners doing business under the trade name, Gersten Brothers, at all times since more than 5 years immediately prior to the date hereof, having a place of business during said times and now at 516 West Thirty-fourth Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, N. Y.

Paragraph 2. During all the times above mentioned the respondents are and have been engaged in the business of the manufacture and in the business of the sale, among other things, of storage receptacles, chests, and closets made of corrugated fiber for use for the protection in storage, among other things, of clothing and other materials against the ravages of clothes moths and the deterioration caused by exposure to light and dust.

Paragraph 3. The respondents, during all the times above mentioned and referred to, have sold their storage receptacles, closets, and chests, to retail and wholesale dealers in such articles, purchasers thereof, located in the District of Columbia and in the various States of the United States other than New York, or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale to members of the public, users thereof, and the respondents have caused their storage receptacles, when so sold by them, to be transported from New York or from the State of origin of the shipment to, into, and through the District of Columbia and States other than New York or the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers there located.

Paragraph 4. The respondents during all the times above mentioned or referred to are, and have been, in substantial competition in interstate commerce with the other individuals, firms, and corporations referred to as sellers in paragraph 4 in the complaint filed in this cause, in the sale of their storage receptacles, chests, and closets.

Paragraph 5. The aroma or odor of cedar oil is not a repellent and does not act as a repellant so as to prevent clothes moths from entering closed storage receptacles, the interiors of which contain or are impregnated with cedar oil. The aroma or odor of cedar oil has no effect on any stage of moth life. As a fumigant, however, the vapor or gas from cedar oil, if of sufficient concentration, will kill young moth larvae and some of the older larvae, and it will also cause the activity of the older larvae to be suspended.

Paragraph 6. Storage receptacles, garment bags, boxes, closets, cabinets, and chests are used for the storage of clothing and other materials ordinarily during a continuous period of 7 months in a year. In order to be effective upon moth larvae as a fumigant during the above storage period or any part thereof, cedar oil or other volatile oils or chemicals, must be held in practically airtight container in order that the evaporating gas or vapor therefrom may be confined and thereby become of sufficient concentration for that purpose.

Par. 7. Storage receptacles, closets, cabinets, and chests made of wood and practically airtight and containing in the body proper (top, sides, and bottom) as much as 70 percent of three-quarter-inch red cedar wood, furnish an atmosphere within them when in use and closed that does not permit the eggs of clothes moths in such receptacles to develop into larvae which can cause damage to stored material and later develop into clothes moths. Such storage receptacles by tests and by experience in their use as storage receptacles, are, and have been, definitely established as efficient preventatives of moth damage to clothing and other materials stored in them.

Par. 8. For more than 25 years last past manufacturers in the cedar wood chest industry in the United States have produced and sold, in interstate commerce, storage receptacles made in part or entirely of red cedar wood, and marked, branded, or otherwise described and advertised as cedar chests, cedar closets, and cedar cabinets when offered for sale and when sold.

Par. 9. On December 2, 1932, the industry, engaged in the United States in the manufacture of cedar wood chests, held a Trade Practice Conference under the auspices of the Federal Trade Commission, to consider, among other things, the prevention of the practice in the sale of wood chests in interstate commerce, of representing such chests as cedar chests, when they contained in their body proper only cedar veneer, or cedar wood of only one-twentieth inch in thickness, and the said industry made and passed the resolutions or rules mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 10 and 11 hereof.

Par. 10. On May 12, 1933, the Federal Trade Commission issued an official statement to the effect, among other things, that the rules as adopted by the Industry at the Trade Practice Conference mentioned in paragraph 9 hereof, and as set forth in Group I of the Commission's official statement were approved and accepted by the Commission.

Par. 11. Among the rules of the Trade Practice Conference of the Cedar Chest Industry, referred to in paragraph 9 hereof, and contained in Group I of the Federal Trade Commission's official statement, are Rules 1, 2, 3, and 14 as approved by the Federal Trade Commission, as follows:

Rule 1.—The use in advertising, selling or offering for sale of such expressions as "moth proof," "moth killing," "moth repelling," "cedarized," or similar misleading representations, in describing any cedar chest, cedar container, or cedar receptacle which is not tightly constructed and which does not contain in the body proper (top, sides, ends, and bottom) at least seventy (70) percent of three-quarter inch red cedar (Juniperus virginiana) is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 2.—The making or causing or permitting to be made or published any false, untrue, or deceptive statement by way of advertisement or otherwise concerning the grade, quality, quantity, substance, character, nature, origin, size, or preparation of any product of the industry, having the tendency and capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers, is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 3.—The false marking or branding of products of the industry with the effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers or prospective purchasers with respect to the quantity, quality, grade, substance or moth-killing or moth-repelling properties of the goods purchased, is an unfair trade practice.

Rule 14.—Advertising, selling, or offering for sale as cedar chests, cedar containers, or cedar receptacles, chest containers, or receptacles which contain in the body proper (top, sides, ends, and bottom) more than thirty (30) percent by weight of wood or woods other than cedar (Juniperus virginiana) is an unfair trade practice.

Par. 12. At all times since on or about the year 1932 the said manufacturers in the cedar wood chest industry have made such storage receptacles from red cedar wood with a minimum of 70 percent (top, sides, and bottom) of three-fourths inch red cedar wood.

Par. 13. During all the times above-mentioned, the respondents' said storage receptacles were made of corrugated paper between thin sheets of fiber or cardboard of a total thickness of approximately one-eighth of an inch. The closets were supplied with metal clothes hangers intended to support a weight of 100 pounds of stored articles. Both closets and chests were provided with a built-in receptacle called a "Mothador" or "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer" for the purpose of holding chemicals or moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets, one or more of which was placed in such receptacles when the closets and chests were sold by respondents to the wholesale and retail dealers above referred to for resale to the public.

Par. 14. During the times above-mentioned, the respondents also sold separately the so-called moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets and their "Closet Moth Proofer" for use in their storage receptacles. During said times the moth bullets or Anti-Moth Pellets or other such chemical material contained, among other things, not more than approximately 2 ounces of a compound of cedar leaf and pine oils in the proportions of about 50 percent of each.

Par. 15. The respondents' storage receptacles, above referred to, when in use for storage purposes were of loose construction. The pressure from the bulk and weight of garments or other materials, which they were expected to accommodate for storage, when stored in them, tended to and did cause the seams of the receptacles to spread and permit the ingress and egress of air and moths. The fiber or cardboard material of which they were made was permeable to air and to the vapor or gas from the oils or chemicals used in the moth bullets or other chemical or oil materials supplied by the respondents for protection of materials against the ravages of moths. Because of their loose construction, the permeability of the material of which they were made, and the tendency of their seams to spread when in use, the respondents' storage receptacles not only permitted the ingress of moths and air, but were useless for the purpose of causing concentration of the vapor or gas from the chemicals or oils used in them to become sufficient, as a fumigant, to protect stored materials therein from the ravages of clothes moths. In consequence of the foregoing the respondents' storage receptacles were not a protection to stored clothing and other materials against the ravages of moth larvae and from deterioration from exposure to dust and light.

Par. 16. During all the times above mentioned the respondents branded or marked their storage receptacles "Cedarol Closets" and "Cedarol Chests" in large letters before they were sold by them as above set forth, and branded or marked the receptacles used therein for chemicals or oils or moth bullets with the words "Mothador" and "Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer," and the so-called branded or marked storage receptacles and so-called "Mothadors" and "Cedarol Closet Moth Proovers" were caused by respondents to be, in turn, offered for sale and sold by wholesale and retail dealers to the public.

Par. 17. During all the times above mentioned the respondents, in advertisements, concerning their storage receptacles, "Mothadors" and "Closet Moth Proofers" used in connection therewith which were published in newspapers, trade papers, magazines, and in other publications, caused statements to appear, among many others similar and of the same effect thereto that their closets and chests were Cedarol closets and chests; that their Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers with the moth bullets protected the clothes of the user when used in respondents' storage receptacles or in cabinets or closets of members of the public from the ravages of moths or moth larvae; that they destroyed moths; that they kept moths out of the storage receptacles; that the use of one Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer loaded with moth bullets for each 40 cubic feet of confined closed space, when placed in a wardrobe in which clothing was stored was an insurance against moth damage; that it destroyed moths; and that their storage receptacles were efficient and sufficient protection to stored articles against the ravages of moths, or moth larvae.

The respondents caused wholesale and retail dealers and others to make, in turn, statements the same as those above mentioned and referred to and many other statements similar thereto, both in adver-

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

28 F. T. C.

Advertisements published in newspapers, trade papers, and other publications, as well as verbally to members of the public concerning their storage receptacles and their moth bullets, Anti-Moth Pellets, and Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers.

Par. 18. During all the times above mentioned and long prior thereto the public, users of storage receptacles, knew of the use of storage receptacles made of cedar wood and of their efficiency for storage purposes, and that they were efficient, not only because they were practically airtight, and thereby prevented the ingress of moths, but, more particularly, because members of the public knew or believed that the vapor from the oil in the cedar wood of which they were composed furnished within such closed receptacles an atmosphere such as referred to in paragraph 7 hereof that was of further and complete protection to the articles stored therein against the ravages of moths in case the articles stored were infested with moths or moth larvae at the time they were placed in such receptacles.

Par. 19. The marking or branding by the respondents of their storage receptacles, closets and chests, using the word “Cedarol” and the use of the word “Cedarol” in branding their so-called “Cedarol Closet Moth Proofers” was false and falsely represented to wholesale and retail dealers and the public that the closets and chests were effective storage receptacles against the ravages of moths, because of the presence of cedar oil in their construction; that the “Cedarol Moth Proofers” were provided with sufficient cedar oil and in such a manner as to give the storage receptacles, or other storage places where they were used, the same qualities for storage purposes that efficient cedar wood storage receptacles had by reason of the presence of cedar oil which they contained. The marking or branding of respondents’ so-called “Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer” with the word “Cedarol” likewise caused wholesale and retail dealers and members of the public to believe that the use of such contrivances was an efficient protection against the ravages of clothes moths by reason of the presence in them of a sufficient quantity of cedar oil for that purpose. The marking or branding by the respondents of the contrivances called by them “Mothadors” was a representation by the respondents to wholesale and retail dealers and to the public that such contrivances attached to or contained in the respondents’ storage receptacles when supplied with the so-called moth bullets or other chemical or oil compounds made the respondents’ or others, storage receptacles efficient protection to stored materials against the ravages of clothes moths.

Par. 20. The marking or branding of their storage receptacles and of their closet moth proofer and the statements and representations made by the respondents and caused to be made verbally by their agents and in advertisements, as set forth above, were false and fraudulent statements and representations, and they had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and they did deceive and mislead, dealers in storage receptacles to whom they were made into believing that they were true; and, to cause wholesale and retail dealers, in turn, to pass on such false and misleading representations to members of the public. The said false statements and representations, as above set forth, had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead, and they did deceive and mislead, wholesale and retail dealers and members of the public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that they were true, and, into relying upon such belief and purchasing the respondents' said storage receptacles, which were sold for sums of approximately 89 cents, more or less, and into purchasing respondents' so-called “Cedarol Closet Moth Proofer” for use in storage receptacles in place of purchasing the storage receptacles of competitors of the respondents which were efficient and sufficient protection against the ravages of moth larvae to stored materials, and which were customarily sold to the public according to their size and other qualities at prices ranging from approximately one dollar to ten dollars and upwards, and trade in storage receptacles was thereby diverted to the respondents from competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Mortimer Alfred Gersten and Lee Gersten, individually and as copartners doing business under the trade name Gersten Brothers, or under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of storage receptacles, and devices and preparations intended for use in storage receptacles and closets to protect articles stored therein from moths, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Marking, branding, or in any other manner designating or describing, through advertisements or otherwise, such storage receptacles, or any part or accessory to the use thereof, with the word "cedar" or with any derivation of the word "cedar" such as the word "cedarol," either alone or in association with any other word or words, unless and until such storage receptacles shall be so constructed and be so provided with cedar oil that when used for storage, such receptacles

(a) will not afford access to clothes moths to articles stored therein; and

(b) will, when closed, cause and maintain within them concentration of the vapor or gas from the cedar oil sufficient as a fumigant to kill young moth larvae within a reasonable time after articles infested with such larvae are deposited in such receptacles.

2. Marking, branding, or in any other manner designating or describing, through advertisements or otherwise, such devices and preparations, or any part or accessory to the use thereof, with the word "cedar" or with any derivation of the word "cedar," such as the word "cedarol," either alone or in association with any other word or words, unless and until such devices and preparations shall be so provided with cedar oil that, when they are placed within the storage receptacles and closets of the size in which respondents represent that such devices and preparations will be effective in use, such devices and preparations will cause and maintain within such receptacles and closets concentration of the vapor or gas from the cedar oil sufficient as a fumigant to kill young moth larvae within a reasonable time after articles infested with such larvae are deposited within such storage receptacles and closets.

3. Representing, directly or by implication, through advertisements or in any other manner, that clothes moths or their eggs or moth larvae which may infest articles stored in respondents' said storage receptacles will be killed, or that their activities with respect to moth damage to such articles will be allayed or suspended by reason of any oil or oils or chemicals with which such receptacles may be provided, unless and until such is the fact.

4. Representing, directly or by implication, through advertisements or otherwise, by the use of the words "moth proofer," "mothador," or any other word or words, or in any other manner, that clothes moths or their eggs or moth larvae, which may infest articles stored in the receptacles or closets in which respondents represent such devices or preparations to be effective in use, will be killed, or that their activities with respect to moth damage to such articles will be delayed or suspended, by reason of any oil or oils or chemicals with which such devices and preparations may be provided, unless and until such is the fact.

5. Representing directly or by implication, through advertisements or in any other manner, that such storage receptacles are of a construction that is proof against the access of clothes moths to materials stored therein, unless and until such storage receptacles shall be in fact so constructed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

HAY & PEABODY CEMENT VAULT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3157. Complaint, June 18, 1917—Decision, Feb. 16, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of cement burial vaults, and in sale thereof to purchasers at various points in other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of steel, stone, concrete, and other vaults, and including those who, engaged in such manufacture and sale, truthfully advertise their products—

Represented in its advertising of its cement vaults that they afforded positive protection for all time, endured for all time, and were everlasting, and were absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, watertight, airtight, and vermin-proof, and would not disintegrate but would become stronger and better the longer they remained in the ground;

Facts being concrete, in presence of water, sulphides or alkalies, will corrode and eventually disintegrate, certain amount of moisture is always present in soil at depth at which such vaults are placed, varying from time to time, sulphides and alkalies are also present in soils in varying amounts, and soil conditions vary both as to particular locality and from locality to locality, and while said vaults are carefully and scientifically constructed so as to increase durability in use, and will exclude air, moisture, vermin, and water until natural process of corrosion, which they will resist but cannot prevent, has advanced to stage of producing disintegration permitting penetration, they are not everlasting, absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, or airtight when sold and placed in the ground in accordance with practice used, and richer composition of cover than balance of vault may result in causing severance of cover from base;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all such representations were true and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of its vaults, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors who truthfully advertise their products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Mr. M. E. Sturtevant and Mr. David T. Montague, of Somerville, Mass., and Mr. Hazen K. Sturtevant, of Plymouth, N. H., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Hay & Peabody Cement Vault Co., a corporation, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint and states its charges in that respect.

Paragraph 1. Respondent, the Hay & Peabody Cement Vault Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its office and principal place of business located at 201-05 Arlington Street, Watertown, Mass. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged at said location in the manufacture and sale of cement burial vaults used to encase or enclose coffins in the burial of the dead. The respondent sells and has sold these said vaults to undertakers, who in turn sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof. These said vaults are so sold in different States of the United States, and when orders are received therefor, they are shipped by respondent from its said place of business into and through other States of the United States to the respective places of business of such undertakers, many of whom are located in States other than the State of Massachusetts. There is now and has been during all of the times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade in said products so sold by said respondent in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in substantial competition with individuals, copartnerships, and corporations, likewise engaged in the manufacture and sale and transportation between and among various States of the United States of steel, stone, concrete and other vaults used in the burial of the dead.

Paragraph 2. In aid of the sale of said vaults respondent advertises the same by and through the use of circulars, letters, booklets, pamphlets, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated materials, which are furnished by respondent to its said undertaking customers for use in aid of the sale of said vaults to the consuming public, and which are so used. In and through such media respondent makes among others the false and misleading representations that:

(a) Hay & Peabody Cement Burial Vault insures positive protection for all time.

(b) Its cement vault is everlasting, absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, and airtight.

(c) Its cement vault will endure and provide positive protection for all time.

(d) Wood decays; metal rusts and disintegrates, but concrete improves with age and that the older a cement vault and the longer it remains in the ground, the better and stronger it becomes, because moisture and other underground conditions further solidify cement.

(e) Its vault is the one vault that will meet all the requirements necessary to insure absolute, permanent protection.

(f) Its vault is an absolutely airtight and watertight vault, a vault that will not disintegrate from burial.

Par. 3. The statements and representations set forth in the preceding paragraph are false and misleading in that respondent Hay & Peabody’s Cement Burial Vault does not insure positive protection for all time. Said vault is not ever-lasting, absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, or airtight. It will not endure and provide positive protection for all time and it will not meet all the requirements necessary to insure absolute, or permanent protection. Concrete does not always improve with age, nor does it always get better and stronger the longer it remains in the ground. Moisture and other underground conditions do not always further solidify the cement of which said vault is made. Respondent’s said vault will, and often does, disintegrate and permit both air and water to enter the same under burial conditions.

Par. 4. Said statements and representations so made by respondent as set forth in paragraph 2 above, have, and have had, the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public and prospective purchasers to form the mistaken and erroneous belief that said statements and representations are true, and to purchase respondent’s vaults, in and on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief induced as aforesaid. Thereby trade has been, and is, unfairly diverted to respondent from its said competitors who do not make use of similar misrepresentations with respect to their respective products. As a result, injury is done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and to the public.

Par. 5. The above alleged acts and practices are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 18, 1937, issued and on June 21, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Hay & Peabody Cement Vault Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by W. F. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by M. E. Sturtevant, attorney for respondent, before Edward E. Reardon, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, and in opposition thereto, and oral argument, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Hay & Peabody Cement Vault Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its office and principal place of business located at 201-05 Arlington Street, Watertown, Mass.

The respondent is now and has been since the year 1915 engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling to undertakers cement burial vaults used to encase or enclose coffins in the burial of the dead.

Some of said undertakers do business and reside in the State of Massachusetts and others reside and do business in States other than the State of Massachusetts.

When orders are received for respondent's vaults, they are transported by respondent from its place of business in the State of Massachusetts into and through other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made.

There is now and has been during all of the times herein mentioned a course of trade and commerce in said vaults so sold by respondent between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondent is now and has been in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, and partnerships also engaged in the manufacture, sale, and transportation of steel, stone, concrete, and other vaults used in the burial of the dead, between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondent does a gross business of approximately $35,000 a year. Respondent has sold as many as 1,200 vaults in 1 year, and in the year 1937 respondent sold approximately 1,100 vaults.

Par. 2. Respondent, in order to sell its vaults, advertises the same by and through the use of illustrated catalogs, leaflets, blotters, and pamphlets. This advertising matter was furnished by respondent to its undertaker customers for use by them in advertising and selling respondent's vaults to the consuming public.

The following statements are illustrative of the representations respondent makes concerning its concrete vaults, but are not all inclusive:

The Hay & Peabody Cement Burial Vault, most substantial in construction, insures positive protection for all time.

The Hay & Peabody Cement Burial Vault is without question the finest, the strongest, and most substantial vault obtainable today. It is everlasting, absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, and airtight. It will endure and provide positive protection for all time. Wood decays; metal rusts and disintegrates, but concrete improves with age. The older a cement vault and the longer it remains in the ground, the better and stronger it becomes, because moisture and other underground conditions further solidify the cement.

The Hay & Peabody vault is absolutely watertight.

The complete Hay & Peabody vault consists of a heavy, waterproof concrete box and cover. It is constructed upon sound scientific principles from properly proportioned "Super-Cement," clean sand, crushed stone, and water. * * * Both laboratory tests and actual practice have proved that this special "Super-Cement" mixture forms an absolutely airtight and watertight vault, and a vault that will not disintegrate from burial.

The Hay & Peabody Burial Vault is exceptionally strong and positively waterproof.

In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents, through statements and representations herein set out, and through statements of similar import and effect, that,

1. Its cement vaults are everlasting, waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, and airtight;
2. Its cement vaults will not disintegrate from burial but will get stronger the longer they remain in the ground; and
3. Its cement vaults insure absolute positive and permanent protection for all times.

Par. 3. Respondent manufactures vaults in 12 different sizes.

Respondent's vaults are made in two separate parts, the base, which is box-like in shape and appearance, and a cover. The cover is concave on its inner surface and convex on its outer surface, excepting that part of the top or outer surface of the cover which is a rectangular flat surface less than the full length and width of the cover as it rests on the base. The base is made with a built-in shoulder into which the cover fits when in position. The segment of cover outlined by the flat surface is slightly thicker than the rest of the cover and is reinforced by three metal rods running lengthwise and imbedded in its center, the flat surface being less than the full length and width of the cover and the convex ends and sides of the cover when in position, sloped from the base, leaving a small V-shaped space between the cover and the shoulder on the base of the vault.

Respondent's vaults vary in weight from 1,600 pounds to a ton. When a coffin is placed inside the base of respondent's vault, a space of from 2 to 3 or 4 inches is left between the sides of the vault and the coffin. When a coffin is enclosed for burial in respondent's vault, the cover of the vault is sealed to the base by filling in the V-shaped space with a cement or concrete of a richer mix than is used in the manufacture of the vault. The covers of the vaults sold by respondent are sealed in all cases by an employee of respondent who accompanies the vault to the cemetery when interment takes place.

Concrete is made of a mixture of cement, sand, and ground stone. The concrete used by respondent in the manufacture of its vaults is a 1-2-\(\frac{1}{2}\) mix, which means one part cement, two parts sand, and \(\frac{1}{2}\) parts ground stone. This is a rich mixture. The cement which respondent uses and designates as "Super-Cement" is a standard portland cement with gypsum and tannin added. It has the same properties as other cements. The average mixture used in building and construction work is in a 1-3-6 proportion, that is, one part cement, three parts sand, and six parts ground stone.

Respondent's vaults, when used in burials, are sunk into the ground anywhere from 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) to 7 feet. Thus, the tops of the vaults are in all cases placed from 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) to 2 feet below the surface of the ground. The earth on top of the vaults when buried weighs approximately 1 ton.

The testimony shows and the Commission finds that the vaults manufactured and sold by respondent are not everlasting, absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, verminproof, or airtight, when sealed by respondent and placed in the ground in the manner above stated.

Soil conditions with reference to the type of soil and the amount of moisture present in soil vary from locality to locality. Similarly, the type of soil and the amount of moisture will vary in the same cemetery. Certain parts of a cemetery are lower than other parts of the same cemetery and the soil, because of this difference in location and ground elevation, may be saturated with water. Soils also contain sulphides and alkalies in varying amounts.
Findings

There is always a certain amount of moisture in the soil at the depth at which respondent’s vaults are placed because of the seepage of water caused by normal rainfall. The amount of moisture varies from time to time with the result that the soil at the depth at which respondent’s vaults are placed is alternately wet and dry, dependent upon rainfall, snowfall, frost, thawing, and freezing.

The Commission finds that concrete in the presence of water, sulphides, or alkalies will corrode and eventually disintegrate.

The rate of deterioration or disintegration is slow in some soils and more rapid in others, depending upon the climatic conditions of the locality and the chemical and mineral composition and content of the soil in a particular place.

The Commission further finds that respondent’s concrete vaults when placed in soil in such a manner as to subject them to contact with water, sulphides, or alkalies will corrode and eventually disintegrate.

Respondent’s vaults are carefully and scientifically constructed in such a manner as to increase their durability in underground service. There vaults will exclude air, moisture, vermin, and water until the natural process of corrosion, which these vaults will resist, but cannot prevent, has advanced to the stage of producing disintegration of the vaults which will permit penetration.

Concrete placed in soil that is alternately wet and dry will corrode and disintegrate. Concrete, however, continuously exposed to the same moisture conditions will last a longer period of time than concrete placed in soil subject to alternate wetting and drying, but will also corrode and eventually disintegrate.

The Commission finds that respondent’s vaults are not waterproof or watertight.

The concrete used by respondent in sealing its vaults is of a richer mixture than the concrete of which the cover and the base of respondent’s vaults are made. This difference in grade between the concrete used in sealing the cover to the base of the vault and the concrete used in the construction of the base and cover may result in causing a severance of the cover from the base. This severance would be caused by alternations of wetting and drying, freezing, and thawing. Such a severance might be a complete severance of the cover from the base of the vault or a partial and imperceptible severance of the cover from the base. Even in the case of a partial or an imperceptible severance, there would be an increased corrosion at the point of severance, with the result that moisture and air and, upon further corrosion and disintegration, vermin, would enter the vault.
Order

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling in commerce similar steel, stone, concrete, and other vaults used in the burial of the dead who truthfully advertise their vaults.

Par. 5. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent in its advertising in illustrated catalogs, pamphlets, leaflets, in offering for sale and selling its vaults, had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations herein referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's vaults, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who truthfully advertise their vaults.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Hazen K. Sturtevant, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hay and Peabody Cement Vault Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of concrete burial vaults in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing that:

1. Said vaults afford positive protection for all time, endure for all time, or are everlasting.
2. Said vaults are absolutely waterproof, sweatproof, watertight, airtight, and verminproof.

3. Said vaults will not disintegrate but will become stronger and better the longer they remain in the ground.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in manufacture of mattresses, and sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in other States, in competition with others also engaged in sale and distribution of new and renovated mattresses in commerce among the various States, and including those who do not in any manner represent their said products as of a retail value or price in excess of the actual one, and place in the hands of customers mattresses bearing fictitious and grossly marked up prices, and misrepresent kind or quality of contents thereof—

(a) Represented, designated, described, and referred to certain of his said mattresses as being composed entirely of new material, and attached and caused to be attached thereto labels reading "Official Statement. Manufactured of New Material. Materials Used In Filling Manufactured and Guaranteed by Chicago Mattress Co. 1500 W. Roosevelt Rd., Chicago, Ill.," and "This mattress must not be exposed for sale or sold without this label being attached under severe penalties", notwithstanding fact certain of the mattresses thus advertised, labeled, sold, and distributed by him as being composed of all new materials were actually composed in whole or in part of second-hand and used materials and not of new and unused materials; and

(b) Attached and affixed to mattresses thus made, sold, and distributed by him in commerce as above set forth, and which were grossly inferior in quality and workmanship to such products generally available on the market at the various retail prices set forth on labels thereof, woven and printed labels and tags which represented the retail prices of such products as being substantially in excess of the actual retail value or price thereof, and substantially in excess of the retail prices at which such mattresses were customarily and regularly sold, and in substantial excess of those at which they were offered and intended to be offered to purchasing public by dealers in and retailers thereof;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasing and consuming public as to actual value of said products or as to regular, usual, and customary retail selling prices thereof, and with intent so to do, and result of placing in hands of unscrupulous dealers and merchants instrumentalities for deception of purchasing public, and effect of misleading and deceiving such public in aforesaid respects, and as to the grade, quality, and prices of such mattresses, and of aiding and enabling dealers to sell same to consuming public as and for new products at prices purporting to constitute substantial, but in fact false and fictitious, reductions, and with result, as consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, that number of purchasing public bought substantial volume of mattresses sold by him, and trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors likewise engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of such products, and who truthfully advertise and represent the contents and values thereof:
Held, That such acts, practices, and representations were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Rappaport & Rappaport, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jacob Sherman, an individual, trading under the name and style of Chicago Mattress Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Jacob Sherman, is an individual, trading under the name and style of Chicago Mattress Co., with his principal place of business located at 1500 West Roosevelt Road, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of mattresses, and in the sale and distribution of said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. He causes said mattresses, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent, Jacob Sherman is now, and was at all times herein referred to, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of new and renovated mattresses in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing mattresses in commerce among and between various States of the United States for more than 3 years last past, has represented, designated, described, and referred to certain of the said mattresses as containing and being composed entirely of new material, and has attached or caused to be attached to said mattresses, so sold and distributed by him, labels containing the following statements and representations:

Official Statement
MANUFACTURED OF NEW MATERIAL
Materials Used in Filling
Manufactured and Guaranteed by
Chicago Mattress Co.
1500 W. Roosevelt Rd., Chicago, Ill.
KIND SIZE

This Mattress must not be exposed for sale or sold without this Label being attached under severe penalties.

IMPORTANT!
When first unpacked this Mattress may appear smaller than ordered owing to the compact method of baling. If so, stretch to its full length and after a few nights use you will find the size correct.

In truth and in fact, respondent's mattresses so advertised, labeled, sold, and distributed by him in commerce as herein set out as being composed of all new materials, such as cotton, cotton felt, cotton rags, jute, wool, wool rags, and wool mattress ticking, are composed wholly or in part of second-hand or used materials and not of new or unused materials as represented.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, said respondent has attached and affixed to the said mattresses so manufactured, sold, and distributed in commerce as aforesaid, woven and printed labels and tags, representing the prices of such mattresses as being substantially in excess of the actual retail value or price thereof, and substantially in excess of the prices at which such mattresses are customarily and regularly sold. It is the custom and practice of said respondent to sell and distribute in commerce as herein set out bed mattresses manufactured by him to which are attached labels as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Price</th>
<th>Price</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>$19.50</td>
<td>$19.75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$19.75</td>
<td>$24.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$24.50</td>
<td>$27.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$27.50</td>
<td>$39.50</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
The products of the respondent, the retail prices of which are stated to be, variously, $19.50, $19.75, $24.50, $27.50, and $39.50, are in truth and in fact, offered and intended to be offered to the purchasing public by the dealers and retailers thereof at prices substantially less than those marked or labeled as aforesaid.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact, the mattresses so advertised are greatly inferior in quality and workmanship to those mattresses generally available on the market at the retail prices of $19.50, $19.75, $24.50, $27.50, and $39.50, respectively.

Par. 5. The labels, as above set forth, remain displayed upon the mattresses, as affixed thereto by the respondent, throughout the channels of trade and distribution to the consuming public, and are used pursuant to the intention and purpose on the part of the respondent, to mislead and deceive the purchasing and consuming public as to the actual value of said mattresses, or as to the regular, usual, and customary retail selling price of such mattresses, and place in the hands of unscrupulous dealers and merchants instrumentalities for the deception of the purchasing public.

Par. 6. There are among the competitors of respondent in commerce as herein set out various individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bed mattresses, who do not, in any manner, represent their said products to be of a retail value or price in excess of the actual value or price thereof, and who do not place in the hands of their customers mattresses bearing fictitious and grossly marked-up prices, and who do not misrepresent the kind or quality of the contents thereof.

Par. 7. Respondent's practices of affixing such false and fictitious price marks to his said mattresses, and of misrepresenting the kind and quality of contents thereof have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, the purchasing and consuming public as to the value, grade, quality, and prices of such mattresses, and to aid and enable dealers to sell such mattresses to the consuming public as and for new mattresses at prices purporting to constitute substantial reductions, which purported reductions are, in fact, false, and fictitious.

Par. 8. The use by respondent of such false and fictitious labels as to contents and as to prices of his said mattresses, and of the above and foregoing misrepresentations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations and statements are true. As a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs indicated as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of mattresses sold by the respondent, with the result that trade has been unfairly divertied to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing mattresses who truthfully advertise and represent the contents and values of their products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Para. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and have been and are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 3rd day of February 1938 issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Jacob Sherman, an individual, trading under the name and style of Chicago Mattress Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, William C. Reeves, Esq., an examiner of the Commission was designated and appointed to take testimony and receive evidence in this proceeding. Pursuant thereto a hearing was held at Chicago, Ill., on November 4, 1938, at which hearing a stipulation of facts was entered into between counsel for the Commission and for the respondent, subject to the approval of the Federal Trade Commission, which stipulation of facts was read into the record, reduced to writing, and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, the answer thereto, and said stipulation of facts, and brief in support of the allegations of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent and no oral argument having been requested or made) and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Jacob Sherman, is an individual trading under the name and style of Chicago Mattress Co., with his principal place of business located at 1500 West Roosevelt Road in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of mattresses and in the sale and distribution of said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. He causes said mattresses when sold to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and maintains courses of trade in such mattresses. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Jacob Sherman, is now and was at all times herein referred to in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of new and renovated mattresses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing mattresses in commerce among and between various States of the United States, respondent has represented, designated, described, and referred to certain of the said mattresses as being composed entirely of new material and has attached and caused to be attached to said mattresses so sold and distributed by him labels containing the following statements and representations:

Official Statement
Manufactured of New Material
Materials Used in Filling
Manufactured and Guaranteed by
Chicago Mattress Co.
1500 W. Roosevelt Rd., Chicago, Ill.

This mattress must not be exposed for sale or sold without this label being attached under severe penalties.

The Commission finds that, in truth and in fact, certain of the mattresses so advertised, labeled, sold, and distributed by respondent in commerce, as herein set-out as being composed of all new materials, were actually composed wholly or in part of second-hand and used materials and not of new and unused materials. A sample of the filling in one of respondent's mattresses was removed from a mattress which had been shipped by respondent from his place of business in Chicago, Ill., to a retailer customer of respondent in Minneapolis, Minn., and which had on it a label stating that said mattress was made of new material. Said sample was tested by the Bedding and Upholstery Section of the Department of Labor and Industry of the State of Pennsylvania, and was found to consist of new excelsior and second-hand cotton linters.

A sample of the filling in one of respondent’s mattresses was removed from a mattress manufactured by respondent and found in his place of business in Chicago, Ill., and which had on it a label stating that it was made of new material. Said sample was tested by the National Bureau of Standards and found to contain second-hand cotton.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1, said respondent has attached and affixed to the said mattresses so manufactured, sold, and distributed in commerce, as aforesaid, woven and printed labels and tags representing the retail prices of such mattresses as being substantially in excess of the actual retail value or price thereof and substantially in excess of the retail prices at which such mattresses are customarily and regularly sold. It is the custom and practice of said respondent to sell and distribute in commerce as herein set-out bed mattresses manufactured by him to which are attached labels as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Price</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>$19.50</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$19.75</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$24.50</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$27.50</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>$39.50</td>
<td></td>
</tr>

The products of the respondent, the retail prices of which are stated to be, variously, $19.50, $19.75, $24.50, $27.50, and $39.50, are in truth and in fact offered and intended to be offered to the purchasing public by the dealers and retailers thereof at prices substantially less than those marked or labeled as aforesaid.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the mattresses so advertised are greatly inferior in quality and workmanship to those mattresses generally available on the market at the retail prices of $19.50, $19.75, $24.50, $27.50, and $39.50 respectively.

PAR. 5. The labels as above set forth remain displayed upon the mattresses, as affixed thereto by the respondent, throughout the channels of trade and distribution to the consuming public, and are used pursuant to the intention and purpose on the part of the respondent to mislead and deceive the purchasing and consuming public as to the actual value of said mattresses or as to the regular, usual, and customary retail selling price of such mattresses, and place in the hands of unscrupulous dealers and merchants instrumentalities for the deception of the purchasing public.
PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of respondent in commerce as herein set-out, various individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale and distribution of bed mattresses who do not in any manner represent their said products to be of a retail value or price in excess of the actual value or price thereof; and who do not place in the hands of their customers mattresses bearing fictitious and grossly marked-up prices and who do not misrepresent the kind or quality of the contents thereof.

PAR. 7. Respondent's practices of affixing such false and fictitious price marks to his said mattresses and of representing the kind and quality of contents thereof have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived the purchasing and consuming public as to the value, grade, quality, and prices of such mattresses, and to aid and enable dealers to sell such mattresses to the consuming public as and for new mattresses at prices purporting to constitute substantial reductions, which purported reductions are in fact false and fictitious.

PAR. 8. The use by respondent of such false and fictitious labels as to contents and as to prices of his said mattresses and of the above and foregoing misrepresentations has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations and statements are true. As a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs indicated as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of mattresses sold by the respondent, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing mattresses who truthfully advertise and represent the contents and values of their products.

CONCLUSION

The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation of facts and other evidence taken before
Order

William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and brief of counsel for the Commission filed herein, no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent, and no oral arguments having been requested or made, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Jacob Sherman, individually, trading under the name and style of Chicago Mattress Co., his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of mattresses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or through failure to affix or attach tags or labels thereto clearly and conspicuously showing that such mattresses are composed, in whole or in part, as the case may be, of second-hand and used materials, or through any other means or device, that mattresses made from second-hand and used materials in whole or in part, are new or are composed of new materials.

2. Representing, as the customary or regular retail prices for such mattresses, prices which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said mattresses are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold at retail.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with the order.
Where a corporation engaged in assembling, selling, and distributing rug and carpet cleaning machines which operated through rotating action of a motor-driven brush, applying on rug or carpet shampoo solution fed to it from tank on machine, and in selling its said machines and devices to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those likewise engaged in sale and distribution of carpet and rug cleaning machines and other similar devices in commerce and in said District; in soliciting sale of its said machines and devices in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other forms of advertising having interstate circulation, and in its booklet entitled "How to Make Money Cleaning Rugs and Carpets the Hild Way," distributed in large numbers to the public generally throughout the various States and in the District through its distributors, sales branches, and sales persons—

(a) Represented that its said carpet and rug cleaning equipment, costing less than $400, cleaned carpets and rugs without removal from floor as well as or better than the more expensive installations of cleaning equipment, costing as much as $30,000, and usually installed and used in plants especially equipped for the cleaning of carpets and rugs after removal from floor;

(b) Represented that only with its system could the dirtiest tacked-down rugs and carpets be flawlessly shampooed and cleaned, and that nothing remained in rug or carpet that needed rinsing out; and

(c) Represented that its rug shampoo employed in operation and functioning of said equipment was highly volatile and evaporated completely, and that grease and grime evaporated with it;

Facts being its said machine and device did not, as claimed, do work of cleaning rugs and carpets as well as or better than the more expensive installations as above set forth, its said machine and device did not clean dirtiest tacked-down carpets and rugs flawlessly, nor remove all grime and grease from rugs and carpets without rinsing, and said shampoo did not evaporate completely from such rugs or carpets and leave them free from grease and grime, with nothing needing rinsing out;

With effect of confusing, misleading, and deceiving purchasing public into mistaken and erroneous belief that its said machine and device and shampoo fluid possessed properties claimed and would accomplish results thus represented, and without removal of rugs and carpets, and that they would accomplish such results as well as or better than more expensive installations used in plants especially equipped for such cleaning after removal from floor; and with capacity and tendency to induce members of purchasing public to buy and use its said products because of aforesaid erroneous beliefs thus engendered, and with result of placing in hands of others means and instrumentality whereby they might misrepresent to

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress dated September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Hild Floor Machine Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Hild Floor Machine Co., is a corporation organized in 1928 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. Respondent's office and principal place of business is located at 1313 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. Said respondent is now, and at all times since its organization in 1928 has been, engaged in the business of assembling, selling, and distributing rug and carpet cleaning machines, essentially consisting of a round electric motor-driven brush to which a supply of shampoo solution is fed from a tank on the machine. When placed on a rug or carpet the rotating action of the brush works the shampoo solution into a foamy lather, thus washing or scrubbing the rug and carpet without removing it from the floor. Respondent now causes, and at all times since the date of its organization has caused, its said carpet cleaning machines and devices, when sold, to be shipped from its principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois, others located in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times since the date of its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of carpet and rug cleaning machines, and other devices similar to that sold by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Para. 2. In soliciting the sale of and selling its carpet and rug cleaning machines and devices, as herein detailed respondent now states, and has stated in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, circulars, letters, radio broadcasts, and other forms of advertising media having an interstate circulation and in a booklet entitled "How to Make Money Cleaning Rugs and Carpets the Hild Way," which it distributes in large numbers to the public generally throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through its distributors, sales branches, and sales people as follows:

Hild rug and carpet cleaning equipment, costing less than $400.00, now does the work of installations, costing as much as $30,000.00, and does it better, too.
Only with the Hild system can you render satisfactory on-the-floor service.
Tacked down carpets flawlessly shampooed.
Clean dirtiest carpets flawlessly.
Hild Rug Shampoo is highly volatile—Evaporates completely, leaving rugs and carpeting dry, bright and clean—Grease and grime evaporates with the shampoo.

With Hild Rug Shampoo nothing remains in the rug or carpet which needs rinsing out.

which representations are accompanied by a pictorial illustration of a man operating a machine in the act of running it over a rug on the floor, and other pictorial representations of like machines.

The aforesaid statements and representations on the part of the respondent serve as representations that respondent's aforesaid machine and liquid shampoo will flawlessly clean and remove all grease and grime from the dirtiest rugs and carpets while tacked down on the floor; that said machine and device of respondent costing less than $400 will clean rugs and carpets as well as or better than installations costing up to $30,000; that rugs and carpets can be satisfactorily cleaned on the floor only with respondent's machine; that respondent's shampoo solution has properties which enable it to evaporate completely carrying with it all grease and grime and leaving rugs and carpets dry, bright, and clean; and that when respondent's shampoo solution is used all grease and grime are evaporated so that nothing remains in the rugs or carpets which needs rinsing.

Para. 3. In truth and in fact, the Hild carpet and rug cleansing machine and device does not clean the dirtiest tacked-down rugs and carpets flawlessly. The use of the Hild shampoo preparation down on the floor does not remove all grime and grease therefrom without rinsing. The Hild rug shampoo does not evaporate completely from rugs or carpets tacked down on the floor leaving them free from grease and grime with nothing in them that needs rinsing. The Hild rug and carpet cleansing equipment costing less than $400 does not do the work of cleansing rugs and carpets as well as or better than installations costing up to $50,000.

Par. 4. The representations of respondent as aforesaid are false and grossly exaggerated and have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to and do confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondent's said machine or device and fluid possess the properties claimed and will accomplish the results represented as aforesaid and to induce members of the purchasing public to buy and use respondent's said products because of the aforesaid erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth.

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein detailed place in the hands of others a means and instrumentality whereby the public may be deceived and misled into the erroneous beliefs that respondent's said machine and fluid will accomplish the results claimed. As a result of the use of the aforementioned false, exaggerated, and misleading representations trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors who do not misrepresent the properties, functions, or merits of their respective products. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Reports, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 12th day of March 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Hild Floor Machine Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent filed a statement with exhibits attached as an answer to the complaint. Thereafter, to wit, on June 4, 1938, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, before Arthur F. Thomas, an examiner of this Commission, duly appointed for that purpose and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by Samuel E. Davidson, attorney for the respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, to expedite the proceedings and to dispense with taking of further oral testimony, respondent's attorney and the Chief Counsel for the Commission agreed upon a statement of facts to be made a part of the record in addition to the testimony already of record, and said stipulated statement of facts was approved January 3, 1939, by the Commission, and made part of the record. The Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Hild Floor Machine Co., is a corporation organized in 1928 and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. Respondent's office and principal place of business is located in Chicago, Ill. Said respondent is now, and at all times since its organization in 1928 has been, engaged in the business of assembling, selling, and distributing rug and carpet cleaning machines essentially consisting of a round electric motor-driven brush to which a supply of shampoo solution is fed from a tank on the machine. When placed on a rug or carpet, the rotating action of the brush works the shampoo solution into a foamy lather, thus washing or scrubbing the rug or carpet without removing it from the floor. Respondent now causes, and at all times since the date of its organization has caused, its said carpet cleaning machines and devices, when sold, to be shipped from its principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in the various States of the United States other than Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times since the date of its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of carpet and rug-cleaning machines and other devices similar to that sold by respondent, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

PAR. 2. In soliciting the sale of and selling its carpet and rug cleaning machines and devices, respondent now states and has stated in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other forms of advertising media having interstate circulation, and in its booklet entitled "How to Make Money Cleaning Rugs and Carpets the Hild Way," which it distributes in large numbers to the public generally, throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through its distributors, sales branches, and sales persons, as follows:

Hild rug and carpet cleaning equipment costing less than $400 now does the work of installations costing as much as $30,000—and does it better, too.

Only with the Hild system can you render satisfactory on-the-floor service.

Tacked-down carpets flawlessly shampooed.

Clean dirtiest carpets flawlessly.

Hild rug shampoo is highly volatile—evaporates completely, leaving rugs and carpets dry, bright and clean—grease and grime evaporate with the shampoo.

With the Hild rug shampoo nothing remains in the rug or carpet which needs rinsing out.

These representations are accompanied by a pictorial illustration of a man operating a machine, in the act of running it over a rug on the floor, and other pictorial representations of like machines.

The said representations of respondent, as set out above, serve as representations that respondent's aforesaid machines and liquid shampoo will flawlessly clean and remove all grease and grime from the dirtiest rugs and carpets while tacked down on the floor; that said machine and device, costing less than $400, will clean rugs and carpets better than installations costing up to $30,000; that rugs and carpets can be satisfactorily cleaned on the floor only with respondent's machine; that respondent's shampoo solution has properties which enable it to evaporate completely, carrying with it all grease and grime and leaving the rugs and carpets dry, bright, and clean; that when respondent's shampoo solution is used, all grease and grime are evaporated, so that nothing remains in the rugs or carpets which needs rinsing out.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, the Hild carpet and rug cleaning machine and device does not clean the dirtiest tacked-down carpets and rugs flawlessly; the use of the Hild shampoo preparation, applied by the Hild machine and device to rugs and carpets tacked down on the floor, does not remove all grime and grease therefrom without rinsing; the Hild rug shampoo does not evaporate completely from rugs or carpets tacked down on the floor, leaving them free from grease and grime, with nothing in them that needs rinsing out; the Hild rug and carpet cleaning equipment costing less than $400, does not do the work of cleansing rugs and carpets as well as, or better than, installations costing up to $30,000.

PAR. 4. The representations of respondent as aforesaid, are false and grossly exaggerated and have had and do have the capacity and tendency to, and do, confuse, mislead, and deceive the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondent's said machine or device and shampoo fluid possess the properties claimed and will accomplish the results represented as aforesaid, and more particularly into the mistaken belief that respondent's equipment cleans carpets and rugs, without removal of such carpets and rugs from the floor where used, as well as, or better than, the more expensive installations of cleaning equipment usually installed and used in plants especially equipped for the cleaning of carpets and rugs after removal from the floor where used, and to induce members of the purchasing public to buy and use respondent's said products because of the aforesaid erroneous beliefs, engendered as above set forth.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein set out, by distribution of circulars and pamphlets through the United States mail and otherwise, have placed in the hands of others a means and instrumentality whereby they may misrepresent to the public the efficacy and use of respondent's machine and its rug-cleaning solution. Said acts and practices on the part of respondent have the tendency and capacity to, and do, divert trade unfairly to the respondent and its licensees from competitors engaged in the manufacture and sale in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of machines and solutions for cleaning rugs and carpets and for similar purposes for which respondent represents its machines and solutions are to be used.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Hild Floor Machine Co., are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Arthur F.
Order

Thomas, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the agreed stipulation of facts entered into between respondent herein, Hild Floor Machine Co., and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hild Floor Machine Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees in connection with its offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its rug and carpet cleaning system, now known as "Hild Rug and Carpet Cleaning Machine" and "Hild Rug Shampoo," in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that its carpet and rug cleaning equipment cleans carpets and rugs, without removal from the floor where used, as well as, or better than, the more expensive installations of cleaning equipment usually installed and used in plants especially equipped for the cleaning of carpets and rugs after removal from the floor where used.

2. Representing that only with its system can the dirtiest tacked-down rugs and carpets be flawlessly shampooed and cleaned and that nothing remains in the rug or carpet which needs rinsing out.

3. Representing that Hild Rug Shampoo is highly volatile, evaporates completely, and that grease and grime evaporate with the shampoo.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women, and in offer and sale, as thus engaged, under group trade name, of dresses and garments made wholly of silk, and also of those made in whole or in part of rayon, but with appearance and feel of silk, and in offering and selling, as thus engaged, its said products to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale and distribution of such dresses and apparel among the various States and in said District, and including many who sell and distribute such dresses and apparel without in any way misrepresenting the material of which their garments are made or the point of origin thereof, and who properly disclose the materials of which their said products are composed—

(a) Described certain dresses, in their advertisements thereof under its said group trade name in newspapers and other publications of general circulation throughout the United States, as "crepe, storycord, and satin," and also thus described and referred to said garments under said trade name and in such advertisements and otherwise, as "crepes," "organdies," and "satins," without qualification of any character, and thereby represented, through use of words "satin" and "crepe" as aforesaid, long associated in minds of public with material of cocoon of silk worm, and highly esteemed as such and in the fabrics in which used for preeminent qualities thereof, that such dresses or garments were silk; and

(b) Described in such advertisements, under said group trade name, and also on labels affixed to such garments, certain of its products thus offered as "imported" and as "celanese storycord" and "celanese fabric," and thereby represented, through use of terms aforesaid, directly and by inference, that all of its said products thus described, designated, and referred to were made of silk, product of cocoon of silk worm, and were imported;

Facts being, while some of garments described and designated as hereinafore set forth were made wholly of silk, product of cocoon of silk worm, long held, in products thereof, in great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities, and associated with such products by words "satin" and "crepe," as used in connection with designation and description of women's dresses and other garments of wearing apparel, many of garments designated and described as aforesaid were not made of silk, but were made in whole or in part of rayon or other nonsilk materials, and none of garments aforesaid were imported, but were all domestically made in Puerto Rico, insular possession of United States;

With effect of misleading and deceiving, through such representations and intermingling of rayon and part-rayon garments, as above set forth, with garments made wholly of silk, substantial portion of purchasing public into belief that all of products aforesaid were composed of silk wholly, and of deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public, through such false and misleading statements and representations and failure to disclose rayon presence in garments in question, into erroneous belief that all of said representations were true, and that all of such garments, designated, described, and labeled as aforesaid, were made wholly and entirely of silk and were imported, and of placing in hands of retailers means and instrumentality with which to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into such erroneous belief, and with result, by reason of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, that number of consuming public bought substantial volume of its garments and trade was diverted unfairly to it from competitors who truthfully advertise their merchandise; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce among the various States and in said District:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.
Leon & Weill, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Storyk Bros., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Storyk Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 135 Madison Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in selling and distributing women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women.

Respondent causes said merchandise when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals.
firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling such merchandise in commerce as herein described, caused, and now causes, advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having an inter-state circulation. In certain of said advertisements respondent, under the group trade name "Everglade," has made various statements purporting to be descriptive of the nature, quality and character of its merchandise, among which are the following:

3 feature promotions, in crepe, storycord, and satin; Crepe, storycord, and satin dresses.

Respondent has also caused said garments sold under the group trade name "Everglade" to be variously described and referred to in the aforesaid advertisements and otherwise as "crepes," "organdies," and "satins" without qualification of any character. Respondent also causes certain of the garments so sold under the group trade name "Everglade" to be described in said advertisements, on labels affixed to said garments and otherwise as "imported" and as "celanese storycord" and "celanese fabric."

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature and on the labels affixed to its garments, purport to be descriptive of the nature of the material out of which said garments are made and of the place of origin of said garments. By use of said advertising literature and said labels describing said garments by use of the terms "celanese fabric," "celanese storycord," and "imported" and by other means, respondent has represented, directly and by inference, that all of its said garments so described, designated, and referred to are made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and that said garments are imported.

Par. 3. The aforesaid representations made by respondent with respect to the materials out of which many of its garments are made and with respect to the place of origin of all of its garments are false, misleading, and untrue. The true facts are that some of said garments so described and designated are made wholly of silk, while many of such garments are not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but are made in whole or in part of rayon or other materials which are not silk. None of said garments are imported but all are domestically manufactured in Puerto Rico, an insular possession of the United States.
STORYK BROS., INC.

Par. 4. The word "silk" for many years has had, and still has, in the mind of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products have for many years held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from this type of treatment and weaving of silk fiber. The words "satin," "crepe," and "organdy" and other words of similar import and meaning have been for a long time, and still are, associated in the minds of the public with the materials made of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. When such words are used in connection with the designation and description of women's dresses and other garments of wearing apparel, and are used alone and unaccompanied by the name of a specific fabric or fiber, they are considered by members of the purchasing public as being descriptive designations of silk fabrics.

The word "rayon" is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk.

Women's dresses and other wearing apparel imported into the United States are considered by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as having superior quality and greater value than similar dresses and other wearing apparel of domestic manufacture. For this reason there exists in the minds of a considerable portion of the purchasing public a preference for women's dresses and other wearing apparel which have been imported into this country over similar products of domestic manufacture. The use of the term "imported" in connection with the sale and distribution of women's dresses and other wearing apparel places the users thereof at a competitive advantage over competitors who do not so represent their respective products.

Par. 5. Respondent offers for sale and sells certain dress and other garments which are made wholly of silk. Respondent also offers for sale and sells certain other dresses and garments which are made in whole or in part of rayon but which have the appearance and feel of silk and which are described and referred to as "storycord," "celanese storycord," and "celanese fabric." Both of these groups of garments are offered for sale under the general trade name "Everglade" and without any disclosure that one group of said garments is in fact made in whole or in part of rayon. The representations set out hereinabove and the intermingling of rayon and part-rayon garments in the manner hereinabove set out with the garments which are made wholly of silk, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that all of said garments are made wholly of silk.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who sell and distribute dresses and other wearing apparel for women who do not in any way misrepresent the material out of which their garments are made or the point or origin of said garments, and who properly disclose the materials out of which their garments are made.

Par. 7. The use of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations by the respondent in describing its dresses and like garments as hereinabove set out, and the failure of respondent to indicate the presence of rayon in said garments as aforesaid, had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true, and that all said garments designated, described, and labeled as aforesaid are made wholly and entirely of silk, and are imported garments. The use of said representations and statements by respondent also places in the hands of retail dealers a means and instrumentality with which to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said garments are all made of "silk" and are imported garments. On account of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's garments with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors who truthfully advertise their merchandise. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 21st day of September 1938, issued and, on September 22, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Storyk Bros., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On November 1, 1938, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Storyk Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 135 Madison Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York.

The respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in selling and distributing women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women.

Respondent causes said merchandise when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling said merchandise, has caused, and now causes, advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having general circulation throughout the United States.

In certain of said advertisements respondent, under the group trade name "Everglade," has made various statements purporting to be descriptive of the nature, quality, and character of its merchandise, among which are the following:

3 feature promotions, in crepe, storycord, and satin;
Crepe, storycord, and satin dresses.
Respondent has also caused said garments sold under the group trade name “Everglade” to be variously described and referred to in the aforesaid advertisements and otherwise as “crepes,” “organdies,” and “satin’s” without qualification of any character.

Respondent also causes certain of the garments so sold under the group trade name “Everglade” to be described in said advertisements, on labels affixed to said garments and otherwise as “imported” and as “celanese storycord” and “celanese fabric.”

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s advertising literature and on the labels affixed to its garments, purport to be descriptive of the nature of the material out of which said garments are made and of the place of origin of said garments.

By use of said advertising literature and said labels describing said garments, by use of the terms “celanese fabric,” “celanese storycord,” and “imported” and by other means, respondent has represented, directly and by inference, that all of its said garments so described, designated and referred to are made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and that said garments are imported.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the representations made by respondent with respect to the materials out of which many of its garments are made and with respect to the place of origin of all of its garments are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, while some of said garments so described and designated are made wholly of silk, many of such garments are not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but are made in whole or in part of rayon or other materials which are not silk. The Commission further finds none of said garments are imported but all are domestically manufactured in Puerto Rico, an insular possession of the United States.

PAR. 4. The word “silk” for many years has had, and still has, in the mind of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

Silk products have for many years held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from this type of treatment and weaving of silk fiber.

The words “satin” and “crepe,” and other words of similar import and meaning have been for a long time, and still are, associated in the minds of the public with the materials made of the product of the cocoons of the silkworm. When such words are used in connection with the designation and description of women's dresses and other garments of wearing apparel, and are used alone and unaccompanied by the name of a specific fabric of fiber, they are considered by members of the purchasing public as being descriptive designations of silk fabrics.

The word "rayon" is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is indistinguishable by members of the purchasing public from silk.

Women's dresses and other wearing apparel imported into the United States are considered by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as having superior quality and greater value than similar dresses and other wearing apparel of domestic manufacture. For this reason there exists in the minds of a considerable portion of the purchasing public a preference for women's dresses and other wearing apparel which have been imported into this country over similar products of domestic manufacture. The Commission finds that the use of the term "imported," in connection with the sale and distribution of women's dresses and other wearing apparel which have been imported into this country over similar products of domestic manufacture, places the users thereof at a competitive advantage over competitors who do not so represent their respective products.

PAR. 5. The respondent offers for sale and sells certain dresses and other garments which are made wholly of silk. Respondent also offers for sale and sells certain other dresses and garments which are made in whole or in part of rayon but which have the appearance and feel of silk and which are described and referred to as "storycord," "celanese storycord," and "celanese fabric." Both of these groups of garments are offered for sale under the general trade name "Everglade" and without any disclosure that one group of said garments is in fact made in whole or in part of rayon.

The Commission finds that representations set out hereinabove and the intermingling of rayon and part-rayon garments in the manner hereinabove set out with the garments which are made wholly of silk, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that all of said garments are made wholly of silk.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who sell and distribute dresses and other wearing apparel for women who do not in any way misrepresent the material out of which their garments are made or the point of origin of said garments, and who properly disclose the materials out of which their garments are made.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations herein found in describing its dresses and like garments, and the failure of respondent to indicate the presence of rayon in said garments, had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and does deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that all of said garments designated, described, and labeled as above found are made wholly and entirely of silk, and are imported garments.

The use by respondent of said representations and statements also places in the hands of retail dealers a means and instrumentality with which to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said garments are all made of "silk" and are imported garments.

On account of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's garments with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors who truthfully advertise their merchandise.

As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The above found acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and stated that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Storyk Bros. Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution, of women's dresses and other wearing apparel for women, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:
1. Using the words “crepe,” or “satin,” or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless said descriptive word or words are used to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such word or words shall be qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said fabric or product is made.

2. Using the word “imported” or any other word or term of similar import or meaning, to describe, designate, or refer to any cloth, fabric, or garment which has not been actually imported from a foreign country.

3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics or any other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

4. Using the word “celanese,” or any other trade-mark or trade name of an manufacturer of rayon, or any name indicative of any process of manufacturing rayon, to describe or designate any fabrics, garments, or other products made from materials other than rayon, and when such words may be properly used to describe, designate, or refer to fabrics, garments, or other products made from rayon, they shall appear in immediate conjunction with the word “rayon” in type of equal size and conspicuousness.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MARCUS A. WEINBERG AND BELLE WEINBERG TRADING AS PACIFIC CHINA COMPANY, AND RAY Y. CLIFFE TRADING AS PACIFIC CHINA COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3385. Complaint, Apr. 21, 1938—Decision, Feb. 17, 1939

Where two individuals engaged, under trade name including words “Pacific China Company,” and as officers of the business, in sale and distribution of earthenware products or “chinaware,” together with so-called sales plans which included redeemable trade cards with numbers thereon ranging from 5 cents to 50 cents and totaling $5, coupons, certificates, and bonds and other printed matter relating to said products, and a third individual similarly engaged under said trade name in sale of such “chinaware,” sales plans, cards, etc., which were offered and sold to various retail selling enterprises under plan including so-called “Agreements of Co-Operation” under which they undertook, for a valuable consideration paid by the retail dealer signers thereof—

(1) To sell and distribute, and did sell and distribute, number of so-called punch cards, certificates, or bonds and display set of earthenware or so-called “chinaware,” to be used by retailer as such in his place of business, and certain other advertising displays, catalogs, store signs, window cards, etc.; and

(2) To redeem said coupon cards for customer of retailer, following purchase of the $5 worth of merchandise called for, and when punched out, upon the remitting of the card to them or through the dealer, together with payment of specified sum amounting to 81 cents, 91 cents, or 99 cents, as case might be, for their 10-piece dinner service or “Foundation Set” of “Pacific Chinaware,” as described on their said cards and other literature, or for their 6-piece dinner service or “Starter Set,” or so-called “Coronado Colored Pottery,” with right in remitting customer to supplement and complete said sets by direct purchase from them at quoted list prices set-out in the catalogs which they distributed, either directly or through the dealer;

In soliciting of various retail selling enterprises in various States and in the District of Columbia, through salesmen employed and sent out by them, purchase of said chinaware and sales plans, in substantial competition in commerce as aforesaid with others engaged in sale and distribution of earthenware and chinaware products, and with sellers and distributors of so-called sales plans including redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, bonds, and literature relating thereto, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their products, plans, and aforesaid offers in connection therewith, and do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their products and sales plans—

(a) Represented in certain literature, advertising matter, banners, and displays which they caused to be placed in the hands of the aforesaid dealers in the various States and in said District, and to be thereby distributed and displayed through them to said dealers’ customers, that the so-called chinaware sets being offered were free, and might be obtained without expense or cost to persons participating in their said sales plan, facts being such sets of chinaware were not obtained free or without expense or cost by persons thus participating, but they were required to pay therefor in the manner and at the prices above described;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that the offer being made by so-called Pacific China Co. to dealers handling such offer, and to customers of such dealers, was "An Introductory Offer" to introduce the products of said china company, and that the same was a "Special Offer" open for a limited time and for the purpose only of advertising such chinaware; facts being such offer was not made for such advertising or introductory purpose, and no special offer or opportunity was given or provided by them in connection therewith, but such offer constituted a part of their sales-promotion plan continuously employed by them in the course of their business aforesaid, and trading as "Pacific China Company"; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, and as immediately above described, that such supposed china company was the manufacturer of the products which they were offering for sale and selling as aforesaid, facts being they were not the manufacturers thereof and did not own, operate, or maintain a plant in which said products were made;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, misrepresentations, and advertisements were true, and of causing, by reason of said erroneous and mistaken belief, substantial portion of such public, among whom there are a substantial number who prefer to buy direct from the manufacturer as affording them better prices, superior quality, more satisfactory service, and other advantages not obtainable through purchase through middleman, to undertake a program of purchasing merchandise from retail dealers aforesaid as a means of procuring their said products, and, further, to buy substantial quantities of their said products from them, and of misleading and deceiving also substantial number of retail dealers into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and of causing substantial number of such dealers, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase and participate in their said sales-promotional plan, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully represent their respective merchandise, sales plans and offers in connection therewith; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini, trial examiner.
Mr. Jay L. Jackson for the Commission.
Hickey, Hall & Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Marcus A. Weinberg and Belle Weinberg, individuals, and trading as Pacific China
Co., and as managing officers thereof, and Ray Y. Cliffe, an individual, and trading as Pacific China Co., and as an officer thereof, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Marcus A. Weinberg and Belle Weinberg, are individuals, trading as Pacific China Co., and officers in charge of the management and direction of the business of said company. Respondent Ray Y. Cliffe is an individual trading as the Pacific China Co. The office and principal place of business of said respondents is located at 812 South La Brae Avenue, in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. For more than 1 year last past the said respondents have been, and now are, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States earthenware products, described by respondents as "chinaware," together with a so-called sales plan, inclusive of redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, and bonds, and literature relating to said products. They have caused, and now cause, said merchandise and products, when sold or ordered, to be shipped and transported from their aforesaid place of business in California to buyers and purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents have been, and now are, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of earthenware and chinaware products, and also with sellers and distributors of so-called sales plans, inclusive of redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, and bonds, and literature relating thereto, who sell and distribute said merchandise and products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business aforesaid, it has been, and is, the practice of respondents to employ and send out salesmen to solicit individuals, firms, companies, corporations, and partnerships engaged in various retail selling enterprises who have direct contact with the purchasing public at large. The so-called "Agreements of Co-Operation" entailing the payment of a valuable consideration by signers thereto, are obtained from said members of the retail trades. For the consideration so paid and under said contracts, in the name of Pacific China Co., respondents agree to and do sell and distribute to the said retailers, called dealers, a certain number of so-called punch cards and certificates or bonds at a stated consideration for each of said instruments, or at a stated consideration for a stated quantity of such instruments, together with a display set of earthenware, or so-called chinaware, to be retained as the property of the said dealer and to be used as a display in his place of business, together with certain other advertising displays and literature in the form of catalogs, store signs, window cards, etc.

The aforesaid cards on one side bear the printed name and address of the dealer and on the other side printed matter descriptive of the earthenware products offered in connection with said cards, and certain numbers ranging from 5 cents to 50 cents, totalling $5, which are so arranged that they may be, and are, punched out in an amount corresponding with the amount of purchase made by the said dealer's customer from the said dealer. In accordance with respondents' selling plan, the said dealers distribute the said cards among their customers and otherwise invite the attention and interest of the said customers through and by means of the cards and literature supplied by respondents. When a customer of the dealer has purchased and paid for $5 worth of the merchandise sold by the said dealer, and the said card has been punched out in that amount, the customer becomes entitled to redeem the said card for one of the so-called chinaware sets represented thereon, upon remitting the said card to respondents, or through the said dealer, together with the payment of a specified sum of money, in some cases being specified as 99 cents, and in others 81 cents and 91 cents.

The aforesaid earthenware is described on respondents' cards and other literature as "Pacific Chinaware." The choice of the dealers' customers upon the redemption of the said cards is described thereon (1) as "A Foundation Set" consisting of a 10-piece dinner service for 2 persons, or (2) as "A Starter Set" consisting of a 6-piece dinner service for 1 person, also described as "Coronado Colored Pottery." Dealers' customers remitting the specified amount and receiving such sets may and do supplement and complete the said sets by direct purchase from respondents at the quoted list prices set-out in the catalogs distributed to them by respondents either directly or through the dealer.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of business aforesaid, respondents have caused, and cause, certain literature, advertising matter, banners, and displays to be placed in the hands of the aforesaid dealers and through said dealers to be distributed and displayed to customers of said dealers, which, among other things, state and represent the following:
1. That the so-called chinaware sets being offered by the Pacific China Co. are “Free”.

2. That the so-called chinaware offered and distributed by Pacific China Co. is “High Class,” “High Quality,” and “A Compliment to the Finest Home.”

3. That the offer made by Pacific China Co. to the dealers handling the same and to customers of said dealers is “An Introductory Offer” for the purpose of introducing the products of Pacific China Co. and of “Pacific Chinaware,” that the same is a “Special Offer,” open for a limited time only, and for the purpose only of advertising “Pacific Chinaware.”

The aforesaid statements and representations are false and misleading and have had, and have, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and prospective purchasers of earthenware or chinaware, into the false and erroneous belief that the said statements and representations are true; that “Pacific Chinaware” may be obtained “Free” and without expense or cost, and that the same is “High Class” and of high or superior quality; that an offer of, and opportunity to obtain, “Pacific Chinaware” is being made for the purpose of advertising and introducing “Pacific Chinaware,” and that the said offer and the catalog prices listed in connection therewith partake of the nature of a “Special Offer” or opportunity which is open for a limited time only. In truth and in fact, and contrary to said representations, the earthenware sets, or so-called chinaware, offered and distributed by respondents, cannot be obtained free or without expense or cost; the same is not high class or of high or superior quality, but is of low and inferior quality; the offer made is not for the purpose of advertising or introducing “Pacific Chinaware” and no “Special Offer” or opportunity is given or provided by respondents in connection therewith, but the said offer constitutes a part of the selling promotion plan continuously employed by respondents in the course of the business of Pacific China Co.

The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations have the tendency and capacity to, and did and do, cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public and prospective purchasers of earthenware and chinaware, in reliance upon the aforesaid erroneous beliefs, to enter and undertake a program of purchasing from retail dealers, through whom the aforesaid offers are made, as a means of securing earthenware or so-called chinaware, more particularly the products of Pacific China Co., and further to purchase said products, all to the benefit and profit of respondents and the owners of said Pacific China Co., and to the injury of competitors.
PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of the business aforesaid, respondents further represent to the aforesaid dealers and to the purchasing public that the earthenware, or so-called chinaware, offered and sold in the name of Pacific China Co., is "High Class" and "High Quality"; that the offer made by respondents to said dealers, and the transaction in connection therewith, is for the purpose of "advertising" and "introducing" the products of Pacific China Co. It is the further practice of respondents to state and represent to said dealers and to the purchasing public that Pacific China Co. is the manufacturer of the products it offers and sells. The aforesaid statements and representations are false and misleading in that the earthenware, or so-called chinaware, offered and sold is of very low and inferior quality; the offer made and the transaction in connection therewith are not for the purpose of "advertising" or "introducing" the products of Pacific China Co., but constitute the method of sale and distribution regularly employed by respondents, and Pacific China Co. is not a manufacturer and does not manufacture the products which respondents offer and sell.

There are among the purchasing public a substantial number who prefer to purchase direct from the manufacturers of the products being purchased believing that in so doing they secure better prices, superior quality, more satisfactory service, and other advantages not obtainable in purchasing through middlemen.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false and misleading representations on the part of respondents herein have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive many retail dealers into the false and erroneous belief that said representations are true and into participation in respondents' plan of merchandising in reliance on the truthfulness of such representations. The aforesaid false and misleading representations on the part of the respondents have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive many members of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of respondents' earthenware or so-called chinaware in and on account of such beliefs induced as above set forth. As a result, the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations on the part of respondents have the tendency and capacity to, and do, divert trade unfairly to the respondents and to said Pacific China Co. and owners thereof from competitors who truthfully represent their merchandise, sales plans, and offers in connection therewith. In consequence thereof injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents herein to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 21st day of April 1938, issued, and on the 26th day of April 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Marcus A. Weinberg and Belle Weinberg, individuals, and trading as Pacific China Co., and Ray Y. Cliffe, an individual, and trading as Pacific China Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts which were admitted in said answer, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondents, Marcus A. Weinberg and Belle Weinberg, are individuals and prior to December 15, 1937, traded as the Pacific China Co. and were the officers in charge of the management and direction of the business of said company. The respondent Ray Y. Cliffe is an individual and prior to December 15, 1937, traded as the Pacific China Co. The respondents, during the times mentioned herein, had their office and principal place of business at 812 South LeBrae Avenue in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. The respondents, for a substantial period of time prior to December 15, 1937, and trading as the Pacific China Co., were engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, earthenware products described by respondents as "Chinaware," together with a so-called sales plan, inclusive of redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, and bonds and other literature relating to said products. The respondents caused the said products, sales plan, and other literature, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents, during all the times mentioned herein, were in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other individuals and with corporations, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of earthenware and chinaware products, and also with sellers and distributors of so-called sales plans, inclusive of redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, bonds, and literature relating thereto. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not and did not in any manner misrepresent their products, sales plans, and offers in connection therewith, and who do not and did not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their products and sales plans.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, it has been the practice of the respondents, during the times mentioned herein, to employ and send out salesmen to solicit individuals, firms, companies, corporations, and partnerships, situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, engaged in various retail selling enterprises. The respondents' so-called "Agreements of Co-Operation" entailing the payment of a valuable consideration by signers thereto, are obtained from said members of the retail trades. For the consideration so paid and under said contracts, in the name of Pacific China Co., respondents agree to and do sell and distribute to the said retailers, called dealers, a certain number of so-called punch cards and certificates or bonds at a stated consideration for each of said instruments, or at a stated consideration for a stated quantity of such instruments, together with a display set of earthenware, or so-called chinaware, to be retained as the property of the said dealer and to be used as a display in his place of business, together with certain other advertising displays and literature in the form of catalogs, store signs, window cards, etc.

The aforesaid cards on one side bear the printed name and address of the dealer and on the other side printed matter descriptive of the earthenware products offered in connection with said cards, and certain numbers ranging from 5 cents to 50 cents, totalling $5, which are so arranged that they may be, and are punched out in an amount corresponding with the amount of purchase made by the said dealer's customer from the said dealer. In accordance with respondents' selling plan, the said dealers distribute the said cards among their customers and otherwise invite the attention and interest of the said customers through and by means of the cards and literature supplied by respondents. When a customer of the dealer has purchased and paid for $5 worth of the merchandise sold by the said dealer, and the said card has been punched out in that amount, the customer becomes entitled to redeem the said card for one of the so-called chinaware sets represented thereon, upon remitting the said card to respondents, or through the said dealer, together with the payment of a specified sum of money, in some cases being specified as 99 cents, and in others 81 cents and 91 cents.

The aforesaid earthenware is described on respondents' cards and other literature as "Pacific Chinaware." The choice of the dealers' customers upon the redemption of the said cards is described thereon (1) as "A Foundation Set" consisting of a 10-piece dinner service for 2 persons, or (2) as "A Starter Set" consisting of a 6-piece dinner service for 1 person, also described as "Coronado Colored Pottery." Dealers' customers remitting the specified amount and receiving such sets may and do supplement and complete the said sets by direct purchase from respondents at the quoted list prices set-out in the catalogs distributed to them by respondents either directly or through the dealer.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of business aforesaid, respondents have caused certain literature, advertising matter, banners, and displays to be placed in the hands of the aforesaid dealers, situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and through said dealers to be distributed and displayed to customers of said dealers, which, among other things, state and represent the following:

1. That the so-called chinaware sets being offered by the Pacific China Co. are "Free";

2. That the offer made by Pacific China Co. to the dealers handling the same and to customers of said dealers in "An Introductory Offer" for the purpose of introducing the products of Pacific China Co. and of "Pacific Chinaware," that the same is a "Special Offer," open for a limited time only, and for the purpose only of advertising "Pacific Chinaware."

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto, not herein set-out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondents' products and sales plan, the respondents have represented directly and by implication, among other things; that "Pacific Chinaware" may be obtained "Free" and without expense or cost to the persons participating in respondents' sales plan; that the offer of, and opportunity to obtain, "Pacific Chinaware" is being made for the purpose of advertising and introducing "Pacific Chinaware" and that the said offer and the catalog prices listed in connection therewith partake of the nature of a special offer or opportunity which is open for a limited time; and that the Pacific China Co. is the manufacturer of the said products which respondents offer to sell and sell as aforesaid.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the earthenware sets, or so-called "Pacific Chinaware," sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, are not obtained free or without expense or cost by persons participating in respondents' said sales plan but such persons are required to pay for such products in the manner and at the prices hereinabove described. The offer of such products is not made for the purpose of advertising or introducing "Pacific Chinaware" and no "Special Offer" or opportunity is given or provided by respondents in connection therewith, but the said offer constitutes a part of the sales-promotion plan continuously employed by respondents in the course of their aforesaid business trading as Pacific China Co. The respondents are not the manufacturers of said products and do not own, operate, or maintain the plant at which said products are manufactured.

PAR. 6. During all the times mentioned herein there were, and are now, a substantial number of members of the purchasing public who prefer to purchase merchandise direct from the manufacturer thereof, believing that in so doing they procure better prices, superior quality, more satisfactory service, and other advantages not obtainable in purchasing merchandise through middlemen.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said products and to said plan of merchandising, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does and did mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, misrepresentations, and advertisements were true, and caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to undertake a program of purchasing merchandise from the aforesaid retail dealers as a means of procuring the respondent's said products and further to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products from the respondents.

The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and did mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true and caused a substantial number of such retail dealers, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase and participate in respondents' sales-promotional plan. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully represent their respective merchandise, sales plans, and offers in connection therewith. In consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission, upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said admitted facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Marcus A. Weinberg, Belle Weinberg and Ray Y. Cliffe, their representatives, agents, and employees, individually and directly, or trading as the Pacific China Co., or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of earthenware or so-called chinaware products and so-called sales plans, inclusive of redeemable cards, coupons, certificates, bonds, and literature relating to said products, in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:
1. Using the terms "free," "without cost," or any other terms of similar import or meaning, to describe, designate, or refer to products offered or delivered to holders of so-called "punch cards" or "certificates" in redemption thereof, where any part of the cost of the products is paid by such holders, and where all of the terms and conditions under which such products will be delivered to holders of such cards or certificates are not clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free," "without cost," or any other terms of similar import or meaning, and there is no deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such products.

2. Representing that the offer of any of said products is "introductory," or for the purpose of advertising and introducing the same, when in fact said offer is made for the purpose of selling the particular items or set of products included in said offer, and constitutes an offer regularly and continuously made and used in the course of offering for sale and selling said products.

3. Representing that the offer of any of said products, or any catalog prices listed in connection therewith, constitutes or partakes of the nature of a "special" offer or opportunity provided by respondents for a limited time only, when in fact the same constitutes an offer or prices regularly and continuously made or used in the course of offering for sale and selling said products.

4. Representing that the respondents or any of them are the manufacturers of the products sold by them, unless and until such respondents actually own and operate, or directly and absolutely control, a manufacturing plant wherein such products are manufactured by them.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
LOUIS D. LIVINGSTON ET AL., TRADING AS
L. D. LIVINGSTON & SONS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where five individuals engaged in manufacture of women's wearing apparel, and in sale and distribution thereof to members of the purchasing public in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in similar sale and distribution of such products, and including many who do not in any way misrepresent the material of which their respective merchandise is made and do not make any other false statements in connection with sale and distribution thereof;

Described certain shirts thus offered and sold by them, on labels permanently attached thereto, as "Homespun Crepe—Pure Dye," and thereby represented that such wearing apparel was made of silk, product of cocoon of silk worm, products of which have long been held in great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities and various fabrics of which have come to be designated by variety of distinctive terms, notwithstanding fact that such garments, thus labeled, were not made of silk, but were composed of rayon entirely, which, with appearance and feel of former, is practically indistinguisable therefrom by purchasing public;

With tendency and capacity, through use of word "crepe" as aforesaid, and such statement and representation and failure to disclose such rayon composition, to conceal fact that such merchandise was thus composed, and with effect of so concealing, and of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations were true, and that said merchandise was made of silk as aforesaid, and of causing substantial portion of such public to buy substantial quantities of their said merchandise, and with capacity and tendency so to mislead and deceive, and result of placing in hands of retail dealer purchasers of such apparel means and instrumentality whereby they might mislead and deceive said purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such merchandise was made wholly of silk, and effect of diverting thereby unfairly trade to them from their competitors in commerce who truthfully label and represent their merchandise; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.
Mr. N. F. Presson and Mr. Louis Casper, of New York City, for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Louis D. Livingston, Arnold Livingston, Joseph A. Livingston, Norman Livingston, and Theodore H. Livingston, copartners, trading as L. D. Livingston & Sons, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Louis D. Livingston, Arnold Livingston, Joseph A. Livingston, Norman Livingston, and Theodore H. Livingston, are members of a partnership trading as L. D. Livingston & Sons, and have their office and principal place of business at 132 West Thirty-sixth Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 2. The respondents are now, and have been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing women's wearing apparel. Respondents sell said products to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and cause the said products, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States in the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said products among and between various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms selling and distributing women's wearing apparel. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent the material out of which their products are made and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their said products.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their women's wearing apparel, the respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the material out of which such garments are made to be disseminated in commerce as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act through the use of permanent labels placed by respondents on such garments, on which labels are statements purporting to be descriptive of the nature, quality, and character of such merchandise, among which is the following:

Hollyvogue
Mannish-Tailored Shirt Washable
Homespun Crepe—Pure Dye

PAR. 5. Through the use of statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of such garments and of the material of which they are made, respondents have represented directly and by implication, among other things, that the garments are made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

PAR. 6. The representations made by respondents with respect to the materials out of which the garments are made are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the said garments are not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The true facts are that said garments are made entirely of rayon. The representations above set forth were, and are, false and misleading in that said garments so represented, designated, and referred to were not described as being rayon, and in that the word "rayon" was not used in said labels with said descriptive words and representations. Such representations, together with the failure to so describe the materials of which said garments were made, had and have the tendency, capacity, and effect of concealing the fact that such garments were and are made of rayon when it was, and is, the duty of the respondents in any circumstances to make disclosure of the fact that such garments were, and are, composed of rayon by the use of the word "rayon" in immediate connection with said descriptive words and in such a way and manner as to apprise and inform the purchasing and consuming public that such garments were and are composed wholly of rayon.

PAR. 7. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of treatment and weaving of silk fiber. The words “pure dye” and “crepe” or words of similar import or meaning, when used alone or unaccompanied by the name of a specific fabric or fiber in connection with the designation or description of wearing apparel for women, have been for a long time, and still are, associated in the minds of the public with the materials made of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm and such words, when used as aforesaid, are considered as being descriptive of silk fabrics.

The word “rayon” is the name of a chemical fiber or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk and is, by the purchasing public, practically indistinguishable from silk.

Par. 8. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said garments, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and that said garments are made of silk of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents’ said garments. The use of said representations and statements also placed in the hands of the retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby they mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said garments are made wholly of silk. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce, who truthfully label and represent their garments as described in paragraph 3. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents’ competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 8th day of October 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Louis D. Livingston, Arnold Livingston, Joseph A. Liv-
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 2. The respondents are now and have been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing women's wearing apparel. Respondents sell said merchandise to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and cause said merchandise, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other partnerships, and with corporations, individuals, and firms selling and distributing women's wearing apparel. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent the material out of which their respective merchandise is made, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective merchandise.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said women’s wearing apparel, the respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the material out of which such merchandise is made, to be disseminated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia through the use of permanent labels affixed by respondents to such merchandise, on which labels are statements purporting to be descriptive of the material, quality, and character of such merchandise, among which statements are the following:

Hollyvogue
Mannish-Tailored
Shirt Washable
Homespun Crepe—Pure Dye

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of the said women’s wearing apparel and of the material of which such merchandise is made, respondents have represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that such merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representation by the respondents that said wearing apparel is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, is false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the said merchandise is not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Said merchandise is made entirely of rayon.

PAR. 7. The word “silk” for many years last past has had, and now has, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia a definite and specific meaning, to wit: The product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and now hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of treatment and weaving of silk fabrics.

The words “Pure Dye” and “Crepe” and words of similar import and meaning, when used either alone or unaccompanied by the name of a specific fabric or fiber, to describe wearing apparel for women have caused, and now cause, members of the purchasing public to have the understanding and belief that the merchandise so described is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. The words "Pure Dye" and "Crepe," used and disseminated as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to, and do cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' said merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

Par. 8. The said statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid are false and misleading for the reason that respondents' merchandise, represented and labeled as "Crepe," is not described as being made of rayon, and the word "rayon" is not placed on said labels in connection with the use of the aforesaid statement and representation. The use by respondents of said statement and representation, and the failure by the respondents to disclose the fact that said merchandise is made of rayon has the tendency, capacity, and effect of concealing the fact that such merchandise is made of rayon.

The word "rayon" is the name of a chemical fiber, or fabric that simulates silk in that it has the appearance and feel of silk, and is practically indistinguishable from silk by the purchasing public.

Par. 9. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said women's wearing apparel has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and that such merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said merchandise.

The use of said statements and representations also places in the hands of retail dealers to whom respondents sell and distribute such merchandise, a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said merchandise is made wholly of silk. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors in said commerce, who truthfully label and represent their merchandise. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and future hearings as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Louis D. Livingston, Arnold Livingston, Joseph A. Livingston, Norman Livingston, Theodore H. Livingston, individually and trading as L. D. Livingston & Sons, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of women’s dresses and other wearing apparel for women, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term “pure dye,” or any other term of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fibers, fabrics, or other products which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

2. Using the word “crepe” or any other word or words of similar import or meaning to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, unless said descriptive word or words are used to designate the type of weave or construction, in which case such word or words shall be qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said fabric or product is made.

3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics or any other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after the service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of various brands of cigars, and in sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers in various States for resale to members of the purchasing public, in substantial competition with others engaged in similar sale and distribution of cigars, and including among said competitors thus engaged (1) many who sell such products composed in whole, and also such products composed in part, of Havana tobacco, and truthfully advertise, represent, brand, and label their said products as containing such tobacco; (2) many who sell and distribute such products containing none of such tobacco, but only tobacco grown in the United States or elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba and do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent their said products as containing any tobacco grown on said island; and (3) those who thus sell and distribute cigars which, by reason of imperfections in shape, size, or other respects, are culled or removed from lots of higher grade and more expensive cigars and, by reason of their odd shapes, sizes, and other imperfections, are correctly designated as "Throw Outs" or by other words of similar import, and sold at materially reduced prices, and are truthfully advertised, branded, and labeled by them as aforesaid—

(a) Branded or labeled as "Havana Counts" certain of its said cigars and featured said words on the exterior and on the interior of the containers thereof, and also displayed on exterior of such containers, and on the inside of the lids thereof, words "Original Old Style" and "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock," and later discontinued said last-named phrase and placed on top and sides of exterior of its said containers, in much smaller type than "Havana Counts," words "Domestic Filler Domestic Wrapper," and thereafter discontinue also, on inside of lid of containers, phrase referred to and inserted, in much smaller type than words "Havana Counts," "Notice! These cigars are made in the United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco," facts being none of the cigars made, sold, and distributed by it under aforesaid "Havana Counts" label at any time contained any Havana tobacco or tobacco grown on Island of Cuba, long imported into the United States and there widely used in manufacture of cigars, and long associated by word "Havana" with tobacco grown on said island, on which, and in vicinity of Havana, is grown finest cigar tobacco, and notice aforesaid was contradictory and inconsistent with representation contained in use of word "Havana" and did not place purchasers of product in question on notice or sufficiently inform them that such products were not made from and did not contain Havana tobacco, but were made only and entirely from the domestic product, with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief, through use as aforesaid of word "Havana" and words "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock," that such cigars were made from tobacco grown on the island of Cuba; and

(b) Branded, labeled and designated certain of its said cigars as "Throw Outs" and "Factory Throw Outs," and later displayed and featured words, on exterior and interior of containers of certain of its said cigars, "MORO'S FAMOUS TAKE-OUTS 2 For 5¢," and displayed on inside of lids of containers of said "Throw Outs," words "Factory Throw Outs" and "Throw Outs from 10¢ And Up Sizes," and for a time also displayed on inside of lid of said "Take Outs" words "Odd sizes and Shapes," notwithstanding fact none of the cigars thus designated were of that type commonly known and understood by cigar dealers and purchasing public as "Throw Outs," or culls or discards, which, by reason of certain defects or imperfections, are removed or thrown out or taken out from more expensive lots and brands of cigars during process of manufacture, and sold at reduced price by reason of such defects or imperfections, but said cigars were made by it to be sold at retail for 2 for 5 cents, in simulation of a throw-out or take-out cigar, and from a grade of tobacco which permitted it to make and sell said cigars at such prices for a profit, with effect, through use of words "Take Outs" and "Odd Sizes and Shapes," of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of members of the purchasing public in various States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they were buying a higher-priced cigar, made of high-grade tobacco, and sold at a reduced price as culls, rejects, or "Throw Outs," because of the odd sizes and shapes and because of defects or imperfections in manufacture thereof;

With result that, through use of such false and misleading statements and representations, it deceived members of the purchasing public in various States concerning the quality and character of its cigars thus sold and distributed by it, and thereby induced members of public to purchase said cigars under erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and trade was diverted unfairly to it form its competitors in such commerce who truthfully advertise, represent and label their respective products, to the injury of competition in commerce, and with result of placing in hands of its dealers and distributors an instrument by means of which they mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, members of purchasing public in various States:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and Injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Marshall Morgan and Mr. Astor Hogg for the Commission.

Crawford & May, of Jacksonville, Fla., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that El Moro
Cigar Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, El Moro Cigar Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of North Carolina, with its principal office and place of business at 636 South Elm Street, in the city of Greensboro, N. C. Respondent is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged as hereinafter described in the business of manufacturing various brands of cigars and selling and distributing the same to dealers in various parts of the United States, more particularly in the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Virginia, and Maryland. The said cigars are manufactured by respondent in Greensboro, N. C., where they are packed, branded, and labeled by respondent for sale and distribution by itself and by its dealer-customers to the purchasing and consuming public of the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent causes the cigars so sold to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Greensboro, in the State of North Carolina, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent has been and is now engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cigars, and offering such products for sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. The cigar originated in the Spanish West Indies. The finest quality of tobacco for cigar purposes is grown in Cuba, not far from the city of Havana. The word "Havana," also spelled "Habana," is the name and designation of the tobacco grown on the island of Cuba, which name and designation is and has been since time immemorial used and understood by the cigar-purchasing and consuming public of the United States, and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States, as meaning and designating tobacco which has been grown on the island of Cuba. Said tobacco has long been imported into the United States and widely and extensively used and consumed therein in cigars manufactured in whole and in part only from such tobacco. Such Havana tobacco has the reputation among the cigar consuming and purchasing public of the United States as being cigar tobacco of highest quality and excellence, and cigars made in whole or in part from said tobacco are in large demand throughout the United States. Many of the cigar dealers and many of the consuming public of the United States prefer to purchase cigars containing Havana tobacco and have believed, and still believe, that the use of such Havana tobacco in cigars adds to and increases the quality and desirability of such cigars.

The outer leaf, or wrapper, of a cigar comprises about 5 percent of the entire cigar, while the filler and binder, constituting 95 percent of the cigar, are the controlling factors in its size, strength, and flavor. The filler controls, primarily, the designed length, thickness, and shape of the cigar as rolled into a binder or binder wrapper of desired size. A dark cigar can be mild if it has a mild filler and binder, while a light-colored cigar can be quite strong if the filler and binder are of a strong grade of leaf. The filler of the cheapest grades of cigars, such as "2 for 5's," is composed principally of what is known as "scrap," being clippings from cigars in the process of manufacture.

The expressions "throw-outs" and "take-outs" are similar in import and meaning in connection with the manufacture of cigars, and indicate and are intended to indicate culls, or discards, which, by reason of certain defects or imperfections, are removed or thrown or taken out from more expensive lots and brands of cigars and sold at a reduced price by reason of such defects or imperfections.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of respondent's business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, sales of cigars are made and purchase orders therefor obtained through and as a result of the personal solicitation of salesmen, the use of circulars and by means of written correspondence and other communications with respondent's customers and prospective customers.

The said cigars, manufactured, sold, and distributed competitively by respondent in interstate commerce, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, are and for several years last past have been sold and distributed by respondent in large and substantial quantities under such names and brands, among others, as "Havana Counts," "Rees' Famous Take-Outs," and "R S M Famous Take-Outs," each of said brands comprising cigars sold 2 for 5 cents. The following hereinafter-described brands and labels have been affixed by respondent to the cigars themselves and to the containers thereof. The labels attached to the cigars themselves consist of a paper band placed by respondent around each cigar and bearing conspicuously the words "Havana Counts," or the words "Famous Take-Outs," as descriptive of the cigars. The containers for such cigars are the usual and customary cigar boxes or cigar containers of respective capacities of 50 and 100 cigars each. The labels and brands attached to each box or container have been designed and affixed thereto by respondent and are as follows:

1. Centered on the outside of the lid of the box a label or brand bearing the words “Havana counts” in large, white letters on a ribbon-like background of solid black. To the left and above this brand appear the words “Original Old Style.” In smaller black type, below the brand, are printed the words “Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock.” To the right of the brand appears a facsimile of the stamp or insignia of the “NRA.” Around the edges of the box on both top and sides, spread an inch or more apart, appear the words, alternately used, “Counts—Havana—Counts.”

The above-described brand and labeling are carried also on the under side of the box top, the words “Havana Counts” printed in large, heavy black type on a white ribbon field appearing conspicuously when the box is opened. On the under side of the top also appear the words “Havana Counts.” Beneath this, the words “Process Tax Paid” and in a black-lined border or box, the following:

The Cigars herein contained were manufactured to retail at not more than Five Cents each and are so tax paid.

The “N. R. A.” insignia and the legend “2 for 5¢” complete the descriptive matter appearing on the outside front of the box or container. On the inside of the box on its back wall or surface, near the top, are printed in large type the words “Havana Counts,” and on either side the legend “2 for 5 cts.” The left outside end of the box contains the words “Havana Counts” printed in bold, heavy type, black on a white background. Above this brand appear the words “Original Old Style” and below it, the words “Guaranteed Hand Made.”

2. Centered on the outside of another box, a brand or label reading:

REES' Famous Take-Outs
Title Registered
2 for 5¢

At each end of the outside top, again appears the legend “2 for 5¢,” and at the upper left corner the insignia of the “N. R. A.”
On the inside of the box top, showing conspicuously when the lid thereof is lifted, the following brand or label is printed in bold red letters nearly an inch and a half tall:

REES
FAMOUS TAKE-OUTS

To the left of the brand there are respectively printed the legend “2 for 5¢,” the insignia of the “N. R. A.,” and the words:

ALL GOOD SMOKES  ODD SIZES AND SHAPES

To the right of the brand appears the same legend:

ALL GOOD SMOKES  ODD SIZES & SHAPES and again the further legend, “2 for 5¢.” Beneath the red label or brand appear the words “Title Registered,” and below these, printed in a long box in conspicuous blue type, the following:

| Every Cigar a Splendid Quality, Mild, Free- Burning Smoke—Made from Tobacco Especially Selected for Its Ripeness and Fragrance— Tobacco from all the Choice Growing Sections. Blended to Please 100% of the Smokers. |

On the inside of the box or container, on the back side, at the top, and likewise easily visible when the box top is lifted, again appears the brand, this time printed in large blue letters:

REES FAMOUS TAKE-OUTS

and at the other end again the legend “2 for 5¢.”

On the outside front of the box the brand “Rees Famous Take-Outs” is printed in black type and beneath, the legend “Process Tax Paid.” To the right of this label, carried in a box, is printed the following, in small, inconspicuous type:

| The Cigars Herein Contained Were Manufactured to Retail at Not More Than Five Cents Each and Are So Tax Paid. |

On each outside end of the box, printed in black type, appears the brand:

REES
FAMOUS TAKE-OUTS
Par. 4. In connection with the operation of said business, the brand of cigar heretofore referred to and described as "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" was originated by the president of respondent company and put on the market about January 1, 1933. Prior to this time, that is, from July 30, 1932, until December 23, 1932, respondent company manufactured what were termed and branded "Throw-Outs," at 2 for 5¢.

On March 27, 1931, respondent company purchased from Herman Hyman's Sons, of Sinking Springs, Pa., property rights in and to the trade name "Havana Counts," and subsequent to such time, respondent has been manufacturing and selling in interstate commerce, also at a price of 2 for 5 cents, the cigar hereinbefore described and known as "Havana Counts."

The "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" are manufactured especially for the trade, being put up in boxes of 100 each. Approximately 14,000 of these "Take-Outs" are sold a month. About 3,000 boxes of "Havana Counts" are manufactured and sold each month, or 300,000 cigars of that brand. "Take-Outs" are made in six different sizes. Neither "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" nor the "Havana Counts" are uniform in size and shape, owing to variations in the blocks used in their manufacture.

Both the "Take-Outs" and the "Havana Counts" are and have been made from what is termed "No. 2 Scrap," alleged to contain "some little imported tobacco." Respondent has no warehouse of its own and does not mix its own filler tobacco, but, on the contrary, purchases the same ready-mixed from factories and dealers located in the State of Pennsylvania. Said "Scrap No. 2" consists of clippings gathered from cigars in the process of their manufacture, the same being mixed by the said Pennsylvania concerns which sell the said "scrap" to respondent. Respondent has no personal knowledge that, or as to whether, the "No. 2 Scrap" tobacco used by it as fillers for its "Havana Count" and "Take-Out" brands contains any, or any appreciable amount, of Cuban, or other imported tobacco.

Par. 5. On or about April 1, 1935, respondent changed the labeling of its boxes intended as containers for "Havana Counts" by printing on the outside top thereof, beneath the brand "Havana Counts," the legend:

   Domestic Filler
   Domestic Wrapper

and on the inside of the cover, beneath the brand reading

   Havana Counts
   Guaranteed
   Hand Made—Imported and Domestic Stock
the following:

Notice! These Cigars are made in the United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco.

On one end of the new boxes the label was made to read:

Domestic Filler
HAVANA COUNTS
Domestic Wrapper.

On another of the new boxes the outside top contains the original legend:

Guaranteed
Hand Made
Imported and Domestic Stock.

The brand "Havana Counts" is printed in heavy type in both the outside front and top of the box as well as on the inside of the top and at the bottom of the top appears the above-quoted "Notice," printed again beneath the legend, "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock."

Notwithstanding the addition on April 1, 1935, of the legend, "Notice: These cigars are made in United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco," respondent did not change the label theretofore employed on the "Havana Counts" cigar, and each of the said cigars now carries and has at all times heretofore carried a label in red and white design, on which are printed in black the words "Havana Counts."

About September, 1935, a new label was put out for "Rees' Famous Take-Outs," from which were deleted the words, "Odd Shapes and Sizes."

Pаr. 6. In truth and in fact none of respondent's cigars branded, labeled, advertised, and described as "Havana Counts" and sold by the respondent and by dealers to the purchasing and consuming public as hereinbefore described, contain any Havana tobacco or tobacco grown on the island of Cuba nor have they at any time contained such tobacco, but are and have been manufactured entirely from, and wholly composed of, tobacco grown in the United States. The effect of the use of the word "Havana" in said designation "Havana Counts" in branding, labeling, describing, and advertising said cigars containing no Havana tobacco, all as hereinbefore set forth, is misleading and has, and has had, the capacity and tendency to and did mislead and deceive a large and substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public into purchasing said cigars in the erroneous belief that they are and were composed in whole or in part of Havana tobacco, that is, tobacco grown on the island of Cuba.
Further, in truth and fact none of respondent's cigars manufactured, branded, labeled, advertised, and sold by the respondent to the purchasing and consuming public as "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" or "Take-Outs" as hereinbefore described, consist of that type of cigar commonly known as a "throw-out" or "take-out" but are and have been manufactured to be sold at and for 2 for 5 cents, in simulation of a "throw-out" or "take-out," from a grade of "scrap" tobacco which would and does permit respondent to manufacture and sell them at a larger profit. The effect of the use of the term "Take-Outs" in said designation "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" and in the further use of the legend "Odd Sizes and Shapes" in advertising, branding, labeling, and describing said cigars was and is misleading and has, and has had, the capacity and tendency to and did and does misled and deceive a large and substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that they are and were getting a higher-priced cigar, made of high-grade tobacco, and sold to them at a reduced price because of odd sizes and shapes or for other defect or imperfection.

PAR. 7. Among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof there are many who sell and distribute in competition with respondent cigars composed in whole and also cigars composed in part only of Havana tobacco and who rightfully and truthfully advertise, represent, brand, and label such cigars as containing said Havana tobacco. There are also many of said competitors who sell and distribute, between and among the several States in competition with respondent, cigars containing no Havana tobacco, and being composed wholly of tobacco grown in the United States or elsewhere than on the island of Cuba, and who do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent that said cigars contain any Havana or Cuban tobacco.

There are also various competitors who sell and distribute, between and among the several States in competition with respondent cigars which by reason of imperfections in shape, size, or other respect, are culled or removed from lots of higher grade, more expensive cigars, and which by reason of their odd shapes and sizes and other imperfections are designated as "throw-outs" or "take-outs" or words of like import and meaning, are sold at materially reduced prices, and are rightfully and truthfully advertised, represented, branded, and labeled as "Throw-Outs," "Take-Outs," or in other words and terms of like import and meaning.

Respondent's so-called "Havana Counts" and "Rees' Famous Take-Outs" cigars are displayed, offered for sale, and sold to the consuming public by respondent and in and by cigar stores and other dealer-establishments in competition with the said cigars of competitors. The respondent's use of the word "Havana" and of the words or expression "Take-Outs" as hereinabove described in relation to cigars having no Havana tobacco and cigars which are not "culls," "Take-Outs," or "Throw-Outs," respectively, are false and misleading. As a result of such false and misleading representations on the part of respondent the consuming public is being and has been injured, trade is being and has been diverted to respondent from such competitors in interstate commerce and thereby substantial injury is done and has been done by the respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce and there is and has been placed in the hands of respondent's dealers and distributors an instrument by means of which they mislead and deceive and have mislead and deceived the purchasing public.

Par. 8. Said representations of respondent contained in its respective brands, labels, advertisements, circulars, or other media through which the trade and consuming public are reached have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers, and to the prejudice of the buying public, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 31, 1935, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, El Moro Cigar Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Marshall Morgan and Astor Hogg, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Crawford & May, attorneys for the respondent, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, El Moro Cigar Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of North Carolina, and having its principal office and place of business at 636 South Elm Street, in the city of Greensboro, State of North Carolina.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing various brands of cigars. Respondent sells substantial quantities of said cigars to wholesale and retail dealers situated in various States of the United States for resale to members of the purchasing public, and causes the said cigars, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of North Carolina. The cigars are manufactured by the respondent at its aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina where they are packed, branded, and labeled by respondent, as hereinafter described, for sale and distribution to the aforesaid purchasers of said cigars. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a substantial course of trade in commerce in said cigars among and between various States of the United States.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has been during all the times mentioned herein, and is now, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of cigars in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, the cigars manufactured by it under various names and brands, to wit:
“Havana Counts,” “Throw Outs,” and “Rees’ Famous Take-Outs.”
The containers in which respondent sells and distributes said cigars as aforesaid are the usual and customary cigar boxes of a capacity of either 50 or 100 cigars each. Said cigars sell at retail at 2 for 5 cents.

Respondent brands, labels, and describes its cigars which it sells and distributes as aforesaid in the manner hereinafter described.
The words "Havana Counts" appear in large letters on the tops and sides of the containers or boxes in which respondent sells and distributes as aforesaid its cigar designated as "Havana Counts." There has also appeared on the exterior of said containers the words "Original Old Style," and the words "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock." There also appear repeatedly around the exterior edges of said containers the words, alternately used: "Counts Havana Counts." On the inside of the lid of said containers the words "Havana Counts" appear in large heavy black type on a white background. There has also appeared on the inside of the lid the words "Original Old Style," and the words "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock."

In the year 1935 respondent made certain changes in the wording on the labels on the containers of its said "Havana Counts" cigars. The words "Havana Counts" continued to appear in large letters on the outside of the container, and on the top and sides of the exterior of said containers respondent inserted the words "Domestic Filler Domestic Wrapper," respondent discontinuing the use of the words "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock" on the outside of said container. The words "Domestic Filler Domestic Wrapper" were printed in much smaller type than the words "Havana Counts." In the year 1935 the respondent discontinued the use of the words "Guaranteed Hand Made Imported and Domestic Stock" on the inside of the lid of said container. In the year 1935 respondent inserted on the inside of the lid of said container the words "Notice! These cigars are made in United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco." Respondent continued to use the words "Havana Counts" in large black letters on a white background on the inside of the lid, the language comprising the aforesaid "Notice" being printed in much smaller type than the words "Havana Counts." During all the times mentioned herein, the cigars sold and distributed by respondent in said containers were encircled by a band bearing a label containing two words, "Havana Counts."

In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, the respondent, prior to December 1932, sold and distributed a cigar which it designated as "Throw Outs," and "Factory Throw Outs." On the inside of the lid of the containers in which such cigars were sold and distributed there appeared the words "Factory Throw Outs" and the words "Throw Outs From 10¢ And Up Sizes." Subsequent thereto respondent sold and distributed, and is now selling and distributing in commerce, among and between various States of the United States, a cigar which it designates as "Rees' Famous Take-Outs." Said cigars are sold and distributed by respondent as aforesay.
said in containers or boxes on the exterior of which there appear in large letters on the sides and on the top the words “Rees’ Famous Take-Outs 2 For 5¢.” On the inside of the lid of said containers there appear the words “Rees’ Famous Take-Outs” in large red letters on a white background. During the year 1935 and at various times prior thereto there also appeared on the inside of said lid the words “Odd Sizes and Shapes.”

PAR. 5. The brand or label reading “Havana Counts,” printed in large letters on the exterior and on the inside of the container of said cigars manufactured, sold, and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid, is legible at a distance of from 15 to 25 feet away. The words in small type appearing on the inside of said lid and used by respondent subsequent to 1935 and reading “Notice! These cigars are made in United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco,” are illegible except from a short distance from the eye and cannot be read farther away than a distance of 3 to 5 feet. A very small percentage of the members of the purchasing public read the small type statements appearing on cigar-box labels. The average customer going into a store to buy a cigar does not stop to read the statements in small type on cigar boxes but does read the brands or labels prominently displayed on cigar boxes, such as the label “Havana Counts,” displayed on respondent’s cigar boxes as aforesaid.

PAR. 6. The finest quality of tobacco used in the manufacture of cigars is grown on the island of Cuba near the city of Havana. The word “Havana” is the name and designation of the tobacco grown on the island of Cuba, which name and designation is and has been since the origin of the cigar used and understood by the cigar purchasing and consuming public throughout the United States, and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States, as meaning and designating tobacco grown on the island of Cuba. Such tobacco has been for many years, and is now, imported into the United States and is, and has been, widely used in the manufacture of cigars in the United States. Havana tobacco has had, and now has, the reputation among a substantial number of members of the cigar purchasing public throughout the United States as being tobacco of the highest quality and excellence, and cigars made in whole or in part from said tobacco are in great demand throughout the United States. A substantial number of members of the purchasing public and cigar dealers situated in various States of the United States prefer to purchase cigars containing Havana tobacco, and have believed during all the times mentioned herein, and now believe, that the use of Havana tobacco in the manufacture of cigars adds to and increases the quality and desirability of cigars.
Par. 7. None of the cigars manufactured, sold, and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid under the label "Havana Counts" contain any Havana tobacco or tobacco grown on the island of Cuba, nor have such cigars at any of the times mentioned herein contained such tobacco, but are, and have been during all the times mentioned herein, manufactured entirely from tobacco grown in the United States.

Par. 8. Based upon the testimony of cigar manufacturers, dealers, and smokers situated in various States of the United States, the Commission finds that the statement "Notice! These cigars are made in United States entirely and only of domestic tobacco" placed on the boxes containing the cigars sold and distributed under the designation "Havana Counts," when used in conjunction with the principal brand name and label on said boxes, to wit, "Havana Counts," does not qualify or explain respondent's representation by the use of the word "Havana" that such cigars are made from tobacco grown on the island of Cuba, but is contradictory and inconsistent with such representation. A substantial number of the members of the purchasing public have the understanding and belief that cigars branded, labeled, or described with the word "Havana" are cigars made from tobacco grown on the island of Cuba, and the use of such aforesaid notice to the effect that said cigars are in fact made from domestic tobacco solely does not in fact place the purchasers of such cigars on notice, or sufficiently inform them that said cigars are not made from and do not contain Havana tobacco but are made only and entirely from domestic tobacco.

Par. 9. The expression "Throw Outs," and words of similar import and meaning, such as the words "Take Outs," are understood in the cigar trade and by a substantial number of members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States to indicate culls or discards which by reason of certain defects or imperfections are removed or thrown out or taken out from more expensive lots and brands of cigars during the process of manufacturing and are sold at a reduced price by reason of such defects or imperfections.

Par. 10. None of the cigars manufactured, sold, and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid, under the brand or label "Rees' Famous Take Outs," or "Take Outs," are of that type of cigar commonly known and understood by cigar dealers and the purchasing public as "Throw Outs" or "Take Outs," or culls or discards, as hereinbefore described, but are, and have been, manufactured by the respondent to be sold at retail for 2 for 5 cents in simulation of a "Throw Out" or "Take Out" cigar from a grade of tobacco which permits respondent to manufacture and sell said cigars at such prices for a profit.

Par. 11. Among the competitors of the respondent referred to in paragraph 3 hereof are many who sell and distribute in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in competition with respondent, cigars, composed in whole, and also cigars composed in part, of Havana tobacco and who truthfully advertise, represent, brand, and label such cigars as containing Havana tobacco. There are also among said competitors of respondent many who sell and distribute in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States, in competition with respondent, cigars containing no Havana tobacco, but containing tobacco grown in the United States or elsewhere than on the island of Cuba, and who do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent that said cigars contain any tobacco grown on the island of Cuba.

There are also various of the respondent's said competitors who sell and distribute in commerce among and between the various States of the United States in competition with respondent, cigars which by reason of imperfections in shape, size, or other respect are culled or removed from lots of higher grade—the more expensive cigars—and which by reason of their odd shapes and sizes and other imperfections are correctly designated as "Throw Outs" or words of similar import and meaning, and which are sold at materially reduced prices and are truthfully advertised, branded and labeled by said competitors as "Throw Outs" or other words of similar import and meaning.

Par. 12. The use by the respondent of the word "Havana" in the manner aforesaid and the use by the respondent of the word "Havana" in conjunction with the words "Guaranteed Hand Made and Imported Stock" to describe, brand, and label its cigars made from tobacco grown in the United States have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such cigars are and were made from tobacco grown on the island of Cuba.

The use by the respondent of the words "Take Outs" in the manner aforesaid and the use by the respondent of the words "Take Outs" in conjunction with the words "Odd Sizes and Shapes" to describe, brand, and label its cigars which are not factory "Throw Outs" or "Take Outs," culls or rejects, as such terms are understood in the cigar trade and by the purchasing public as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived, a substantial portion of members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are purchasing a higher priced cigar made of high-grade tobacco and sold at a reduced price as culls, rejects, or "Throw Outs" because of the odd sizes and shapes and because of defects or imperfections in the manufacture of such cigars.

By the use of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, respondent has deceived, and is now deceiving, members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States concerning the quality and character of respondent's cigars, sold and distributed as aforesaid, and has thereby induced, and is now inducing, members of the public to purchase said cigars under the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations are true. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise, represent and label their respective cigars. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and there is, and has been, placed by respondent in the hands of respondent's dealers and distributors an instrument by means of which they mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint and in opposition thereto, taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, El Moro Cigar Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cigars in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word “Havana,” or any other words, terms or picturizations indicative of Cuban origin, or descriptive of Cuba, alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, to describe, designate, or in any way refer to cigars which are not made from tobacco grown on the island of Cuba.

2. Using the words or expression “Take Outs,” “Throw Outs,” or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, to describe, designate or in any way refer to cigars, unless such cigars are culled, removed, thrown out, or taken out from more expensive brands or lots of cigars as a result of defects or imperfections arising from normal manufacturing processes and are sold at reduced prices by reason thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JOSEPH W. GRAFF, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS THE SYLVAN COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3182. Complaint, July 22, 1931—Decision, Feb. 21, 1939

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of clocks, pen and pencil sets, radios, traveling bags, and various other articles of merchandise to purchasers in various States; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which such merchandise was distributed to members of the consuming public wholly by lot or chance, and which involved distribution to members of purchasing public and to dealers of certain literature, order blanks, circular letters, instructions, and push cards for distribution of his said products under a plan or scheme and in accordance with card's explanatory legend by which purchaser paid for chance varying amount, dependent upon number pushed by chance, and received article or articles of merchandise being thus disposed of or nothing other than privilege of punch or push, in accordance with success or failure in selecting feminine name or names corresponding to that or those under card's master seal or two master seals, as case might be, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others, means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan above described, under which such merchandise was sold and distributed to purchasing public and amounts paid for chances were determined wholly by lot or chance and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than normal retail prices thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in competition with those who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance;

With result that many purchasers of his said merchandise were attracted by element of chance involved in his said sales method and were thereby induced to purchase his said products in preference to same or similar merchandise of competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and public purchased substantial volume of his said products and trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph W. Graff, individually and trading as The Sylvan Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual trading under the name and style, The Sylvan Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 4224 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling various articles of merchandise including, among others, clocks, pen and pencil sets, tableware sets, radios, electric razors, traveling bags, waffle irons, coffee-making sets and comb and brush sets, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. He causes said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois into and through other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in interstate commerce, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The methods and practices adopted and used by respondent are substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the public through the United States mails in interstate commerce certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of his merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent’s plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards. Said push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated discs marked “PUSH,” below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disc is a number which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the cards. The push cards have a master disc, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

OWN THIS BEAUTIFUL

ROTARY CLOCK

The Modern Timekeeper
Tells Time Without Hands

Numbers Under 15 Pay What You Draw
Numbers over 15 Pay 15¢ Only

<thead>
<tr>
<th>CLOCK</th>
<th>$5.00 VALUE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Name Under Seal Receives Rotary Clock</td>
<td></td>
</tr>

The other push cards bear similar legends, but vary in detail. Such variations cover the merchandise to be distributed, the quantity thereof and the price to be paid therefor. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is to a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. Sales of merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. The fact as to whether a customer receives a specified article of merchandise or nothing for the amount paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which a customer pays for a particular push is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push cards, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 22, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Joseph W. Graff, individually, and trading as The Sylvan Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent having filed no brief nor requested oral argument), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Joseph W. Graff, is an individual trading under the name The Sylvan Co., with its principal office and place of business located at 4224 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and since November 1935, has been engaged in offering for sale and selling clocks, pen and pencil sets, tableware sets, radios, electric razors, traveling bags, waffle irons, coffee-making sets, comb and brush sets, and other articles of merchandise, to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, at their respective points of location. During the time above mentioned, respondent has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof located at various points in the various States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made. Respondent has been at all times mentioned herein in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In so carrying on said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing his merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was distributed to members of the consuming public wholly by lot or chance.

The methods used by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise were as follows: Respondent distributed to members of the purchasing public, and to dealers, devices commonly known as push cards, together with certain literature, order blanks, and circular letters. On the face of said push cards are printed legends showing the manner in which said card is to be operated. The said order blanks and circular letters contained additional instructions concerning the operation of said card and the sale and distribution of said merchandise by the use thereof.

Each of the push cards had printed thereon a number of feminine names with blank spaces opposite an alphabetical list of the names for writing in the names of the customers who purchased chances on the push cards. Each push card had a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked “Push.” Either below or above each disk was printed one of the feminine names printed elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk was a number which was disclosed when the disk was pushed or separated from the card. One of said cards had one master seal and others of said cards had two master seals, but the master seal in each connection had concealed therein one of said feminine names. The cards contained legends or statements explaining that persons pushing certain designated numbers received articles of merchandise.

When all the disks had been selected or pushed by customers and the master seal or seals removed from the card, the person who had selected the name corresponding to the name concealed within the master seal, or 1 of the designated numbers, received specified articles of merchandise without further charge. The only difference between the card containing the 1 master seal and the card containing 2 master seals is that 1 more prize or article of merchandise was distributed by the card containing 2 master seals than was distributed by the card containing 1 master seal. Customers paid in cents the amount of money indicated by the number revealed when the disk was removed or pushed by them from the said card. On 1 of said cards purchasers securing numbers over 29 paid only 29 cents. On 2 of said cards, purchasers pushing numbers over 35 paid only 35 cents. Customers selecting names which did not correspond with the name revealed by the removal of the master seal, or customers pushing numbers which did not correspond to the numbers designated on said cards received nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing or removing a disk from said card. In this manner the respondent sold and distributed substantial quantities of his said merchandise to members of the general public.

The Commission finds that respondent’s merchandise was sold and distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance and that the amounts paid for chances on said cards were determined wholly by lot or chance.
PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished his push cards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove described. The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public as hereinabove found involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof, and that the use of said method in the sale and distribution of merchandise was and is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the United States.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent persons, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the business of selling and distributing like or similar articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, who do not sell their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance. Many purchasers of respondent's merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method, and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods. Because of said preference, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Wm. C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto brief filed by counsel for Commission (counsel for respondent not having filed brief or requested oral argument) and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

*It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph W. Graff, individually and trading as The Sylvan Co., or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of clocks, pen and pencil sets, tableware sets, radios, electric razors, traveling bags, waffle irons, coffee-making sets, comb and brush sets, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or to members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling, or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of service of this order upon said respondent he shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

NORTH WESTERN PRINTING HOUSE, INC., IN ITS OWN NAME AND RIGHT AND TRADING AS FEDERAL TRADE BUILDERS; AND LOUIS ROVNER AND MORRIS LEAVITT AS OFFICERS THEREOF; AND EDWIN J. PEARSON AS EMPLOYEE THEREOF

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3429. Complaint, May 19, 1938—Decision, Feb. 21, 1939

Where a corporation and three individuals, officers thereof and in direction and control of its sales policies and business activities, acting together and in cooperation, and engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of sales-promotion cards which were so designed and arranged as to involve use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to consuming public, and for the use of which, through their literature and representatives, they suggested various methods involving, in all cases, lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise, and which consisted of several groups of such sales-promotion cards involving, in all cases, lottery scheme or gift enterprise and varying only in detail, and which included, as illustrative—

(1) Group of cards arranged for punching out $5 in trade, enclosed and concealed within so-called “Lucky Seal” of which cards were legends varying in amount from 20 cents to $5, and entitling customer of merchant securing same to such varying amount as thus determined by chance, with other cards similarly arranged in principle, but providing for purchases up to $10 worth of merchandise and the winning of amounts up to $10 by legends under seal, and with still other cards prepared primarily for gasoline filling and service stations and providing for recording purchase of 100 gallons of gasoline and 10 quarts of oil by the numbers arranged around the border, and for the winning of from 1 to 25 quarts of oil by legends under seal; and—

(2) Group of “Bank Day” cards provided with number on detachable tag thereof, and place for insertion of holder’s name and address, and providing for weekly or, in some cases, as arranged, for daily or semiweekly, biweekly, or monthly drawings and awards to the particular customer of the merchant involved securing by chance, along with purchase therefrom, card containing lucky number as thus determined wholly by lot or chance—

Sold, along with various display posters and circulars, and with advertisements for use by dealer customers in distributing and using such cards, such various assortments of sales-promotion cards as above described and suggested, to dealer purchasers for distribution to said dealer’s customers and prospective customers, and the honoring of the awards as shown thereon as above set forth and indicated; contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps which, when used by dealers, do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise, and in competition with many who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of dealers and are unwilling to offer or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged, as above or otherwise, as to involve game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and refrain therefrom;

With result that consuming public was induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using their cards, in preference to dealers using devices of their competitors, because of lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise connected with former, and were thereby induced to purchase their said cards in preference to devices of competitors, and substantial trade was thus unfairly diverted to them from their said competitors, and with tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly through tendency and capacity to exclude from sales-promotion card trade competitors who do not adopt and use same or equivalent or similar methods involving same or equivalent or similar elements of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. William Shapiro, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that North Western Printing House, Inc., a corporation in its own name and right and trading as Federal Trade Builders, and Louis Rovner and Morris Leavitt, individually and as officers of corporate respondent, and Edwin J. Pearson, individually and as an employee of corporate respondent, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent North Western Printing House, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois and is doing business in its own name and also under the trade name, Federal Trade Builders. Respondent Louis Rovner is the president of corporate respondent and Morris Leavitt is the vice president and secretary of said corporation. Edwin J. Pearson is the general manager of the corporate respondent. The individual respondents direct and control the sales policies and business activities of the corporate respondent and all of the respondents act together and in cooperation in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.
Respondents have their principal office and place of business located at 631 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, their said products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such sales-promotion cards in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons and trading stamps and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise, when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. The respondents manufacture and distribute several groups of sales promotion cards but they all involve a lottery scheme or gift enterprise and vary only in detail. Two of such groups are herein described for the purpose of showing arrangements, design and principle involved.

(a) One group has on the front of such cards the following:

Under the "SEAL" is the following:

```
Good for 20¢ in Trade.
```
The seal referred to on said card has a dotted line near the margin thereof with the words "Cut Here" to indicate where it may be opened, but until the said seal is opened the legend thereunder is effectively concealed from the holder of said card. The said legends under the seal vary in amount from 20 cents to $5. The amount which the holder of said card will receive in trade is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

On the reverse side or back of the said sales-promotion card is the following language:

When this card is fully punched, present same to us intact. We will then open the LUCKY SEAL. You will receive the award printed therein ABSOLUTELY FREE. SHOULD YOU OPEN THE LUCKY SEAL, CARD BECOMES VOID.

(Merchant's advertisement)

Other cards in this group manufactured and distributed by the respondent provide for recording the sale of $10.00 worth of merchandise by the numbers arranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of amounts up to $10.00 by the legends under the seal. Other cards in the same group are prepared primarily for automobile gasoline filling and service stations and provide for recording the purchase of 100 gallons of gasoline and 10 quarts of oil by the numbers arranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of from one to 25 quarts of oil by the legends under the seal.

(b) Sales promotion cards in another group have printed on the front thereof the following:

Unclaimed Awards $ BANK DAY $ 2003
Added To Next Award For our customers

We Give a Weekly Award of $5.00 Cash

(Merchant's advertisement)

Awards Drawn Weekly by a Customer at 6 P. M. Thursday

Should your number be drawn, you must present this card in person not later than 12 noon on Friday.

The above-described "Bank Day" card is distributed by respondents through dealer customers to persons making purchases from such dealer customers and the stub, as shown above, is deposited in a con-container provided for that purpose and drawings are held and awards made weekly. The person to whom such award is made is determined by selecting at random one of the stubs from the container above referred to. The person to whom the weekly award is made is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Other "Bank Day" trade cards manufactured and distributed by respondents provide for daily, semiweekly, biweekly, and monthly awards and have awards in varying amounts.

Respondents furnish their dealer customers with various display posters and circulars and with advertisements to be used and which are used by said dealer customers in distributing and using said cards.

Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondents sell assortments of said sales-promotion cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown under the seal or as described on the bank-day cards. The respondents in their literature and by their representatives suggest various methods for the use of said cards by their dealer customers, all of which methods involve a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise.

Par. 4. There are in competition with respondents various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price-concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which, when used by dealers, do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of dealers are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using respondents’ cards in preference to dealers using the devices of respondents’ competitors because of the lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise connected with respondents’ said cards. By reason thereof dealers are induced to purchase respondents’ said cards in preference to devices of respondents’ competitors and trade is thus unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

Par. 6. The use by respondents of said methods in designing and arranging their said cards and distributing the same for redistribution to the public is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the sale-promotion card trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 19, 1938, issued, and on May 20, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the substitute answer; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent North Western Printing House, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois and is doing business in its own name and also under the trade name, Federal Trade Builders. Respondent Louis Rovner is the president of corporate respondent and Morris Leavitt is the vice president and secretary of said corporation. Edwin J. The above-described "Bank Day" card is distributed by respondents through dealer customers to persons making purchases from such dealer customers and the stub, as shown above, is deposited in a container provided for that purpose and drawings are held and awards made weekly. The person to whom such award is made is determined by selecting at random one of the stubs from the container above referred to. The person to whom the weekly award is made is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Other "Bank Day" trade cards manufactured and distributed by respondents provide for daily, semiweekly, biweekly, and monthly awards and have awards in varying amounts.

Respondents furnish their dealer customers with various display posters and circulars and with advertisements to be used and which are used by said dealer customers in distributing and using said cards.

Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondents sell assortments of said sales-promotion cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown under the seal or as described on the bank-day cards. The respondents in their literature and by their representatives suggest various methods for the use of said cards by their dealer customers, all of which methods involve a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise.

Par. 4. There are in competition with respondents various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price-concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which, when used by dealers, do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of dealers are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above found or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using respondents' cards in preference to dealers using the devices of respondents' competitors because of the lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise connected with respondents' said cards. By reason thereof dealers are induced to purchase respondents' said cards in preference to devices of respondents' competitors and substantial trade is thus unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

Par. 6. The use by respondents of said methods in designing and arranging their said cards and distributing the same for redistribution to the public is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the sale-promotion card trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer or respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent North Western Printing House, Inc., a corporation, its officers, and Louis Rovner, Morris Leavitt, and Edwin J. Pearson, individually, and respondents' respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of sales-promotion cards, or any other sales-promotion schemes or any other merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing sales-promotion cards or any other device so designed that their use by the retail dealers constitute, or may constitute, the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of retail dealers or others, sales-promotion cards or sales-booster plans, or schemes or any other devices which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise when distributed to the consuming public.
3. Furnishing or supplying to dealers display posters or circulars or other advertising literature bearing legends or statements informing the public as to the manner in which said sales-promotion cards or other lottery devices are to be or may be distributed and used.

It is further ordered, That within 60 days from the date of the service of this order upon said respondents, they shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which this order has been complied with.

PUBLIX SALES CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged as wholesale mail order house in sale and distribution of merchandise consisting of (1) worn, second-hand, used, and damaged clothing and shoes which it purchased at Government salvage sales and from clothing peddlers, from factories, and from large mail order houses which had had the particular merchandise returned to them for adjustment after use, and (2) unused merchandise consisting of factory rejects and stocks of bankrupt dealers bought by it, and in selling, as thus engaged, such merchandise to members of the purchasing public in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in sale and distribution of worn, second-hand, used, and damaged clothing and shoes, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent quality, condition and state of repair of their merchandise and do not make any other false statements in connection with sale and distribution thereof; in advertising with respect to its said goods and business status and practices in newspapers and other publications circulating among the various States and in said District, and in bulletins and catalogs distributed from its place of business to prospective purchasers in various States and in District aforesaid—

(a) Represented that the merchandise thus offered had been purchased by it at auction sales, and represented that it was the largest wholesale distributor of rummage sale merchandise, and that its reputation as the largest cash buyer gave it a choice of the world's best bargains, and that through its large, competent staff of trained buyers it could supply merchandise whose value could not be beaten or equalled, facts being it bought very little of its merchandise at auction sales, but bought largest portion thereof from auctioneer purchasers at such sales, and was neither largest distributor of rummage sale merchandise nor largest cash buyer thereof, and did not have large, competent staff of trained buyers;

(b) Represented that its merchandise had been factory dry-cleaned and re-blocked, repaired and pressed and was of high grade materials, attractive styles and new patterns, and represented excellent and tremendous values, and that when received by the purchaser it would be of good quality, recent style and cut, serviceable, etc., and saleable for immediate wear, and represented certain merchandise as all wool, and held out certain amounts as representing those for which various items of merchandise originally sold, facts being merchandise variously referred to and represented as aforesaid was not dry-cleaned and reblocked by factory which made same, and was not, as case might be, cleaned, repaired or pressed, or of high grade materials, or excellent values, and new patterns, but, in case of many items, was dirty, ripped, torn, and worn out, of inferior quality and materials, and in such condition as not to be usable for wear, merchandise represented as of latest style was of a style from 10 to 15 years old,
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Publix Sales Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent Publix Sales Corporation is a corporation, incorporated on or about June 14, 1930, under the laws of the State of Illinois, with an authorized capital of $20,000, and having an usual place of business in Chicago, Ill., at all times since on or about the date of its incorporation.

PAR. 2. During all the times above mentioned, B. M. Belon (former name, Belonsky) is and has been the president of the respondent corporation and B. N. Vollen its secretary and treasurer.

PAR. 3. During all the times since on or about the date of its incorporation, the respondent is and has been engaged, as a wholesale dealer, substantially entirely as a mail order house in the business of the sale of merchandise consisting of worn, second-hand, used, and damaged clothing and shoes, that respondent purchased from peddlers and junk dealers, and new clothing such as stocks of bankrupt dealers, job lots, and factory rejects.

The respondent during the times above mentioned has sold and still sells such merchandise to retail dealers, purchasers thereof, located throughout the various States of the United States for resale by them to members of the public for use or wear. The respondent has caused the merchandise when sold by it to be transported from Illinois, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in other States.

PAR. 4. Prior to and during all the times above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations, hereinafter referred to as sellers, located in the various States of the United States, have been engaged in the sale of clothing and shoes at wholesale to retail dealers, purchasers thereof, located throughout the various States of the United States, other than the State of the seller, for resale by them to members of the public for use or wear. The sellers, respectively, have caused the said clothing and shoes, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or the state of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in States other than the State of origin of the shipment.

PAR. 5. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, the respondent is and has been in substantial competition in interstate commerce with the other individuals, firms, and corporations, referred to as sellers in paragraph four hereof, in the sale of the merchandise referred to in paragraph 3 hereof.

PAR. 6. The respondent during all the times above mentioned has caused advertisements of its said merchandise to be published in newspapers and magazines which are and have been circulated throughout the trade and public in the various States and in catalogues, form letters, and descriptive circulars which the respondent has caused to be distributed among the retail dealers and prospective retail dealers throughout the various States of the United States.

In its advertisements the respondent has caused statements and representations to appear regarding the nature, character, and quality and prices of the articles of merchandise sold by it. Among many other such statements, the respondent has stated and represented in its advertisements to the effect that all of its merchandise was carefully selected and of good class, that it was slightly used merchandise; or, that it was slightly used, factory cleaned, repaired, and pressed and nearly new; that its several items of merchandise were made of high-grade materials, or the finest materials, and represented the last word in materials, workmanship, and value.

Par. 7. Among many other similar statements and representations made by the respondent in advertisements, during the times above mentioned, were statements and representations made for the purpose of inducing individuals and firms to engage in the retail sale of its merchandise, including those mentioned and referred to above in paragraph 6, to the effect as follows:

and statements and representations that the respondent was the largest wholesale distributor of rummage sale merchandise; that respondent's reputation as the largest cash buyers gives respondent the choice of the world's best bargains and through respondent's competent staff of trained buyers it could supply merchandise whose values could not be beaten or even equalled.

In its advertisements respondent stated:

Do not hesitate, reserve your territory immediately with your first order • • • Act now before some other wide-awake hustler gets exclusive rights in your district.

By selling bankrupt stock, new and used goods, auction sale mdse. and close-outs you avoid competition and make big profits.

and,

A wonderful assortment of high saleable merchandise with which you take no chance.

All merchandise is carefully selected and of good class.

When a merchant needs cash and is obliged to sacrifice his stock or when manufacturer or wholesale house is going out of business, our buyers are on the spot with the cash and obtain wonderful values at practically our own price.
Par. 8. The statements and representations mentioned and referred to above in paragraphs 6 and 7 hereof and many other statements of like tenor and effect made by the respondent in its advertisements were false in various particulars, among others, in that very little of the merchandise referred to, offered for sale, and sold by the respondent was new clothing or shoes or merchandise purchased at auction sales of bankrupt merchants; and in that respondent was not the largest nor even a large wholesale distributor of rummage sale merchandise and was not the largest nor even a large cash buyer of merchandise; in that the respondent's merchandise was not merchandise carefully selected and of good class; in that very little of respondent's merchandise was new clothing, but on the contrary its merchandise was mostly worn out, used, and sometimes filthy, when offered for sale and sold by respondent as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof.

And further, the merchandise referred to by the respondent as factory cleaned, repaired, and pressed implied to purchasers and prospective purchasers that the merchandise so described consisted of factory rejects that had been cleaned, repaired, and pressed in the factory that manufactured it when such was not the fact, and when on the contrary in many instances the clothing referred to was badly out of repair, was not cleaned and was in an unsalable and unusable condition. The representations by respondent to purchasers and prospective purchasers of its merchandise to reserve their territory and to get exclusive rights in their respective districts were false and misleading in that the respondent did not sell to any dealer or dealers exclusively in any territory or locality.

Par. 9. The statements and representations mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 6, 7, and 8 hereof made by the respondent in its advertisements to dealers and to prospective dealers were false statements of material facts and known to the respondent to be false when made and they had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead and were intended by the respondent to deceive and mislead members of the public, dealers, and prospective dealers in such merchandise, most of whom were of limited means and resided in places far distant from respondent's place of business, and such dealers and prospective dealers were deceived and misled thereby into purchasing respondent's merchandise instead of merchandise sold by respondent's competitors. In consequence thereof when the dealers and prospective dealers bought the respondent's merchandise they paid exorbitant prices for it and were not able thereafter to resell it or offer it for sale because of its worn out and otherwise unsalable and often filthy condition. As a further result, trade in clothing and shoes was diverted from competitors to the respondent by means of its practices and misrepresentations mentioned and referred to above.

Par. 10. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondent were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of September 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Publix Sales Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John N. Wheelock, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Joseph J. Karlin, attorney for the respondent, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and opposition thereto, oral arguments not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Publix Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its office and principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent was incorporated in the year 1930.

Par. 2. The respondent is now and has been from the date of its incorporation engaged in business as a wholesale mail order house.
in the sale and distribution of merchandise consisting of worn, second-hand, used, and damaged clothing and shoes. Respondent purchases such merchandise at Government salvage sales and from clothing peddlers. Respondent also purchases such merchandise from factories and large mail order houses, which merchandise has been returned to such factories and mail order houses for adjustment after having been used. Respondent purchases unused merchandise such as factory rejects and stocks of bankrupt dealers. Respondent sells such merchandise to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and causes the said merchandise, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and has at all times mentioned herein maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing worn, second-hand, used, and damaged clothing and shoes. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not, in any manner, misrepresent the quality, condition, and state of repair of their merchandise and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its merchandise, the respondent has caused advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to said merchandise and the business status and practices of respondent to be disseminated in newspapers and other publications, having a circulation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in bulletins and catalogs distributed from respondent's aforesaid place of business to prospective purchasers of such merchandise, situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The following statements and representations are typical of those made in the aforesaid advertisements:

These hats have been factory dry-cleaned and reblocked.
We are ready and willing to work with you, to help you personally in every way, to lead you step by step to success because upon your success depends ours.
Findings

Do not hesitate, reserve your territory immediately with your first order—Act now before some other wide-awake hustler gets exclusive rights in your district.

By selling bankrupt stock, new and used goods, auction sale merchandise and close-outs, you avoid competition and make big profits.

When a merchant needs cash and is obliged to sacrifice his stock, or when manufacturer or wholesale house is going out of business, our buyers are on the spot with the cash and obtain wonderful values at practically our own price.

The respondent causes other statements to be disseminated as aforesaid, containing representations that respondent is the largest wholesale distributor of rummage sale merchandise, that respondent's reputation as the largest cash buyer gives respondent a choice of the world's best bargains and that through respondent's large competent staff of trained buyers it can supply merchandise whose value can not be beaten or equalled.

Par. 5. In truth and fact respondent buys very little of the merchandise which it advertises as new merchandise at auction sales but buys the largest portion of such merchandise from auctioneer purchasers at auction sales. Respondent is not the largest distributor of rummage sales merchandise and is not the largest cash buyer of merchandise. The merchandise referred to by respondent in the aforesaid advertisement as being factory dry-cleaned and reblocked is not dry cleaned and reblocked by the factory which manufactures such merchandise. Respondent does not sell merchandise to any dealer or dealers exclusively in any territory or locality and the respondent does not grant the privilege to any dealer or dealers to reserve an exclusive territory in the sale of such merchandise. Respondent does not have a large competent staff of trained buyers.

Purchasers of respondent's merchandise do not avoid competition in the resale of such merchandise by reason of the fact that they purchase such merchandise from the respondent. Respondent does not work with its customers and help them personally in every way but the respondent handles the orders received by it in a routine manner.

Par. 6. In the aforesaid catalogs and bulletins purporting to describe the merchandise which respondent distributes to prospective purchasers of such merchandise situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, respondent represents, among other things, that such merchandise: Is cleaned, repaired, and pressed; is of high grade materials, attractive styles, and new patterns; and constitutes excellent and tremendous values. Respondent makes other statements similar thereto in such advertisements, which statements serve as representations that such merchandise, when received by the purchaser thereof from the respondent, will be of good quality, of recent style and cut, serviceable, and that such merchandise will be cleaned, repaired and pressed so as to be saleable for immediate wear. In truth and in fact, various items of such merchandise, which the respondent sells and distributes to the purchasers thereof, situated in various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, are not cleaned, repaired, or pressed. Various items of such merchandise, so sold and delivered, are not of high-grade materials and are not excellent values and of new patterns. In fact, many of such items of such merchandise are dirty, ripped, torn, and worn out, are of inferior quality and material and are in such condition that they are not usable for wear. Merchandise which the respondent represents as being all wool is, in fact, made of cotton. Merchandise which the respondent represents as being of the latest style is, in fact, of a style from 10 to 15 years old.

Par. 7. Respondent represents in the aforesaid advertisements that various items of such merchandise originally sold for the amounts which are stated in such advertisements. In truth and in fact, the amounts stated in such advertisements are greatly in excess of the amounts for which such merchandise was originally sold. Respondent represents in such advertisements that purchasers of its merchandise can make 100 percent profit in the resale of such merchandise. In truth and in fact, it is impossible for such purchasers to make such profits in the resale of such merchandise in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

Par. 8. The use by respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid with respect to such merchandise has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous mistake and belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent’s merchandise and business status and practices is as represented and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s merchandise. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertised the quality, condition and state of repair of their merchandise and their business status and practices.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, oral arguments not having been requested, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Publix Sales Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or indirectly:

1. That merchandise which was not purchased by respondent at auction sales was purchased by respondent at auction sales.

2. That respondent is the largest distributor of rummage sale merchandise, that respondent is the largest cash buyer of merchandise, or that respondent has a large staff of trained buyers of merchandise, when such is not the fact.

3. That merchandise is factory dry cleaned and reblocked, unless such merchandise is dry cleaned and reblocked by the factory which manufactured such merchandise.

4. That respondent sells merchandise exclusively to any purchaser or purchasers in any territory or locality, when such is not the fact.

5. That purchasers of respondent's merchandise avoid competition in the resale of such merchandise.

6. That respondent works with its customers and helps them in every way, when such is not the fact.

7. That merchandise which is not cleaned, repaired, or pressed, of high-grade materials or of good quality, of newest pattern or of latest style, is cleaned, repaired and pressed, of high-grade materials and of good quality and of newest pattern and of latest style.
Order

8. That merchandise which is not composed wholly of wool is all wool, or is wool.

9. That merchandise which was not originally sold for a certain amount or amounts was sold for such amount or amounts.

10. That persons purchasing such merchandise from the respondent for resale will make 100 percent profit or any other profit in the resale of such merchandise, unless such purchasers consistently make such profits in the resale of such merchandise in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

This order shall not be construed as approving the use of the unqualified term “wool” to designate, describe, or refer to any wool which is not virgin wool.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN J. KANE, TRADING AS LA PEP HEALTH BEVERAGE COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of a preparation composed of the juices of a variety of fruits, together with sassafras root, nettle leaves, dog grass, and stick licorice, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in other States, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like and similar products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising his said product through circulars, folders, pamphlets and radio broadcasts circulated generally throughout the United States, and in labels—

(a) Represented that said preparation was a competent remedy in the treatment of skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, gall bladder trouble, heart trouble, rheumatism, or other similar ailments, facts being it was not such a remedy;

(b) Represented that said preparation was not a medicine or a drug, and that it cleansed the body of toxic germs and was a body disinfectant, facts being it was a medicine or drug and would not accomplish results above set forth, and was not such a disinfectant; and

(c) Represented that said preparation would rejuvenate a person or guide him to health, or keep him young and healthy, or cause him to eat and sleep, and that it would cause wrinkles to disappear and cleanse and clarify the skin, facts being such various representations were false;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by aforesaid advertising and representations, that a number of the purchasing public bought substantial quantity of said product and trade was unfairly diverted from others likewise engaged in sale and shipment of preparations of medicinal character, and also of a beverage character, who truthfully advertise their products:

Held, That such acts, representations and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. James I. Rooney for the Commission.

Mr. Samuel E. Kratzok, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John J. Kane, an individual, trading as the La Pep Health Beverage Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Par. 1. Respondent, John J. Kane, is an individual doing business under the trade name of La Pep Health Beverage Company, having his principal office and place of business located in the city of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania. Respondent, for more than 1 year last past has been and still is engaged in the manufacture of a beverage known as "La Pep," made of a mixture of fruit juices, herbs, and lactic acid, and in offering said product for sale, and selling the same, in commerce between the State of Pennsylvania and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said product is sold, respondent transports or causes the same to be transported from his place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 1 year last past and still is a constant current of trade and commerce in said product so manufactured by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the manufacture of beverages and similar products and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling "La Pep" and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the part of the consuming public for said product, now causes and for more than 1 year last past has caused advertisements to be issued, published and circulated to and among the general public of the United States in various periodicals and publications and in other forms of printed matter, and by radio broadcasting, and in other ways. In said ways and by said means respondent makes and has made to the general public many unfair, false, and misleading statements with reference to the alleged therapeutic value of said product and its effect upon the users thereof, a portion of which are as follows:

Nature's gift to mankind, because La Pep is indeed an invigorator • • • no need to suffer with skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, or other inexcusable ailments.
La Pep guides you to radiant, buoyant health. • • • La Pep is not a medicine nor a drug, but a healthful refreshing drink—a combination of fresh fruit juices, herbs, and lactic acid which in itself is a "body disinfectant." Don't merely exist, but really live and keep one hundred per cent physically fit by drinking La Pep. La Pep cleanses the body of • • • toxic germs, tones the system and promotes regularity. A lady said it had not only rejuvenated her, but wrinkles on her face and neck had disappeared, that her skin was clean and clear, and that she eats and sleeps well.

Par. 3. The statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product into the belief:

(a) That La Pep is a competent remedy in the treatment of skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, or other similar ailments, or for gall bladder troubles, heart trouble, or rheumatism.

(b) That La Pep is not a medicine or a drug.

(c) That La Pep cleanses the body of toxic germs.

(d) That La Pep will:
   1. Guide one to a radiant, buoyant health.
   2. "Rejuvenate" a person.
   3. Cause wrinkles on the face and neck to disappear.
   4. Cleanse and clarify the skin.
   5. Cause one to eat and sleep well.
   6. Keep one young and healthy.

(e) That La Pep is a body disinfectant.

Whereas in truth and in fact "La Pep" is not a competent remedy in the treatment of skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, or other similar ailments, or for gall bladder troubles, heart trouble, or rheumatism; is a medicine or drug; does not cleanse the body of toxic germs; will not guide one to a radiant, buoyant health; will not rejuvenate a person; will not cause wrinkles on the face and neck to disappear; will not cleanse and clarify the skin; will not cause one to eat and sleep well or keep one young and healthy; and is not a body disinfectant.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce and have been for more than one year last past, manufacturers of beverages and similar products who truthfully advertise and otherwise represent the ingredients and therapeutic value of their products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, and have been for more than one year last past, manufacturers of beverages and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have ingredients or therapeutic value which they do not have.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the beliefs described in paragraph 3 hereof and to purchase respondent's product in such beliefs. Thereby trade is diverted by respondent from respondent's competitors in interstate commerce and as a consequence thereof substantial injury is done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

Said acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, under date of January 7, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, John J. Kane, trading as the La Pep Health Beverage Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After issuance of said complaint, the respondent, having entered his appearance by his attorney, Samuel E. Kratzok, Esq., 1907 North American Building, Philadelphia, Pa., under date of April 1, 1936, filed his answer to said complaint in which he denies all of the material allegations contained in said complaint. Thereafter hearings were had and evidence was thereupon introduced in support of the allegations of the complaint and on behalf of the respondent before John J. Keenan, a trial examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, theretofore duly appointed. The testimony and other evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. A brief was filed upon behalf of the Commission in support of the allegations of the complaint. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer and evidence adduced at said hearing, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, John J. Kane, is an individual trading and doing business under the trade name and style of the La Pep Health Beverage Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 2765 Kensington Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a preparation known as La Pep. This preparation is composed of the juices of grapes, cherries, pineapples, apples, peaches, apricots, raspberries, huckleberries, wortleberries, and pomegranates, to which are added the following aromatics: sassafras root, nettle leaves, dog grass, and stick licorice, the latter are termed herbs by respondent. La Pep is sold and shipped by respondent to purchasers in States other than the State of Pennsylvania in which the respondent's place of business is located and from which said shipments are made. The respondent has been for more than a year last past and is presently engaged in the sale and shipment of his product in commerce between and among various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent has been, and is presently, in competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar product in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent, in the sale of his preparation and for the purpose of inducing the public to purchase the said preparation, has, by means of various advertising circulars, folders, labels, pamphlets, and radio broadcasts, circulated generally throughout the United States, made statements and representations concerning the character and nature of said preparation and concerning the results obtained from its use. Among the said representations made by the respondent are the following:

Nature's gift to mankind, because La Pep is indeed an invigorator • • • no need to suffer with skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, or other inexcusable ailments.

La Pep guides you to radiant, buoyant health • • • La Pep is not a medicine nor a drug, but a healthful refreshing drink—a combination of fresh fruit juices, herbs, and lactic acid which in itself is a "body disinfectant." Don't merely exist, but really live and keep one hundred per cent physically fit by drinking La Pep.

La Pep cleanses the body of • • • toxic germs, tones the system, and promotes regularity.

A lady said it had not only rejuvenated her, but wrinkles on her face and neck had disappeared, that her skin was clean and clear, and that she eats and sleeps well.
Conclusion

PAR. 3. The said statements, together with similar statements and representations, serve as representation to members of the purchasing public as properly descriptive of respondent's product and of its effectiveness in use. The use of such statements mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's product is a competent remedy for skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, or other similar ailments; also gall bladder trouble, heart trouble, and rheumatism; that La Pep is not a medicine nor a drug; that La Pep cleanses the body of toxic germs; that La Pep will guide one to radiant, buoyant health; rejuvenate a person, cause wrinkles around the face and neck to disappear; cleanse and clarify the skin; cause one to eat and sleep well; keep one young and healthy; that La Pep is a body disinfectant; and that respondent's preparation will succeed where others fail. The aforesaid statements and representations are false, misleading, and untrue. The product "La Pep," is not a competent remedy in the treatment of skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue or other similar ailments, or for gall bladder trouble, heart trouble, or rheumatism; it is a medicine or drug; does not cleanse the body of toxic germs; will not guide one to radiant buoyant health; will not rejuvenate a person; will not cause wrinkles on the face or neck to disappear; will not cleanse and clarify the skin; will not cause one to eat and sleep well or keep one young and healthy; and is not a body disinfectant.

PAR. 4. Each and all of the false, misleading, and untrue representations made by respondent in offering for sale and selling his product were, and are, calculated to and do, and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief, induced by the advertising and representations of respondent, as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said product, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other individuals, corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and shipment of preparations of a medicinal character and also of a beverage character who truthfully advertise their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, representations, and practices of the respondent John J. Kane, trading as La Pep Health Beverage Co., have been and are, to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, John J. Kane, trading as La Pep Health Beverage Co., or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation now known as "La Pep," or any other preparation possessing substantially similar ingredients or substantially similar therapeutic value, whether sold under that name or under any other name in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by inference:

1. That said preparation is a competent remedy in the treatment of skin eruptions, sluggish blood, constipation, fatigue, gall bladder trouble, heart trouble, rheumatism, or other similar ailments.
2. That said preparation is not a medicine nor a drug.
3. That said preparation cleanses the body of toxic germs, or is a body disinfectant.
4. That said preparation will rejuvenate a person, or guide a person to health, or keep a person young and healthy, or cause a person to eat and sleep well.
5. That said preparation will cause wrinkles to disappear or have any effect on wrinkles, or will cleanse or clarify the skin or have any effect thereon.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

LOUIS COHEN, ALSO KNOWN AS LOUIS KAHN, TRADING AS NATIONAL GUARD EQUIPMENT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of general merchandise, which included articles similar in make and design to those which the United States Government requires personnel of its National Guard and other military units to wear, and, as thus engaged, in selling its goods to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in similar sale and distribution of merchandise, and including those engaged in sale and distribution of merchandise similar in character and design to that sold by said individual who do not, in their trade or corporate names or in their advertising or in any manner, import or imply any connection or association with any military organization of the United States Government when they are not in fact so connected or associated;

Operated under trade name "National Guard Equipment Company," and made use of said name in his catalogs, order blanks, and other printed advertising matter circulated among prospective customers, notwithstanding fact none of his stock of merchandise was purchased from the United States War Department and no substantial part thereof was made for said Department for use by the National Guard, but great majority of his merchandise consisted of usual stock found generally in general merchandise establishments and was purchased from usual marts of trade and not from said Department, and small amount of Army goods in said stock, if any, was bought from jobbers, wholesalers, and others who buy at Army departmental refuse and reject goods sales, and he was in no way connected with said Department and had no affiliation, association, agreement, or connection therewith or with National Guard division thereof;

With result that purchasers and prospective purchasers were led to believe that his stock was made for or purchased from the War Department, and of causing members of purchasing public to believe that he was connected therewith for the merchandising of equipment made for or purchased from the National Guard division thereof, and that he operated and maintained an establishment connected with said Department for the merchandising of official National Guard equipment, and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of such public into erroneous and mistaken belief that his merchandise was made for or purchased from the War Department and that he was connected or associated therewith or with the National Guard as aforesaid for the merchandising of equipment made for or purchased from it, and with result, as a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by his said representations, that number of the purchasing public bought substantial quantity of his said merchandise:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley for the Commission.

Mr. David Justin, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, an individual trading as National Guard Equipment Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, is an individual trading as National Guard Equipment Co., and has his principal office and place of business at 155 East Thirty-Fourth Street, in the city of New York and State of New York. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of general merchandise into and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, at all times herein mentioned, has maintained a constant current of trade in said merchandise in said commerce.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. At all times herein named respondent has operated under the trade name National Guard Equipment Co. Said name is used in catalogs, order blanks, and other printed matter circulated among prospective purchasers. By the use of said trade name purchasers and prospective purchasers are led to believe that the stock of merchandise offered for sale to the purchasing public by said respondent was made for or purchased from the United States Department of War. The use by the respondent of the words "National Guard Equipment Company" in the manner herein described has the tendency and capacity to, and does, cause members of the purchasing public to believe that the respondent is, in some manner, connected with the United States Department of War for the merchandising of equipment manufactured for or purchased from the National Guard Division of such Department.

In truth and in fact none of the stock of merchandise of said respondent is or was purchased from the United States Department of War, nor is any substantial part of said stock of merchandise made for the United States Department of War for use by the National Guard. The small amount of Army goods in said stock of merchandise, if any, is bought from jobbers, wholesalers, and others who buy at Army departmental refuse and reject goods sales. The great majority of respondent's stock of merchandise consists of the usual stock found generally in general mercantile establishments and is purchased in the usual marts of the trade and not from the United States Department of War. Respondent is in no way connected with the United States Department of War, and has no affiliation, association, agreement, or any connection with such Department or the National Guard Division of such Department.

PAR. 4. Among the articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, are those articles similar in make and design to those required by the United States Government to be worn by the personnel of its National Guard and other military units.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondent described in paragraph 2 hereof individuals, firms, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution in said commerce of general merchandise similar in character and design to that merchandise vended by respondent, who do not in their trade or corporate names, in their advertising or in any manner, import or imply a connection or association with any military organization of the United States Government, when they are not in fact so connected or associated.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 15, 1938, issued, and on September 17, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, an individual trading as National Guard Equipment Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission under date of December 8, 1938. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of National Guard Equipment Co., with its principal office and place of business at 155 East Thirty-fourth Street in the city of New York, and State of New York. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of general merchandise in and through various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, at all times herein mentioned, has maintained a course of trade in said merchandise in said commerce.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, copartnerships, and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of some of the merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 3. For more than 1 year last past the respondent has operated under the trade name National Guard Equipment Co. Said trade name is used in respondent’s catalogs, order blanks, and other printed advertising matter circulated among prospective customers. By the use of said trade name containing the term “National Guard,” purchasers and prospective purchasers are led to believe the stock of merchandise offered for sale to the purchasing public by said respondent was made for or purchased from the United States War Department. The use by the respondent of the trade name containing the term “National Guard,” in the manner herein described, has the tendency and capacity, and does, cause members of the purchasing public to believe that the respondent is connected with the United States War Department for the merchandising of equipment manufactured for or purchased from the National Guard Division of the War Department, and that the respondent operates and maintains an establishment connected with the United States War Department for the merchandising of official National Guard equipment.

In truth and in fact none of the stock of merchandise of said respondent was purchased from the United States War Department and no substantial part of said stock of merchandise was made for the United States War Department for use by the National Guard. The great majority of respondent’s stock of merchandise consists of the usual stock found generally in general merchantile establishments and is purchased from the usual marts of trade and not from the United States War Department. A small amount of Army goods in said stock of merchandise, if any, is bought from jobbers, wholesalers, and others who buy at Army departmental refuse and reject goods sales. Respondent is in no way connected with the United States War Department and has no affiliation, association, agreement, or any connection with the War Department or the National Guard Division of the War Department.

Par. 4. Among the articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent in commerce among and between the various States of the United States are certain articles similar in make and design to those which the United States Government requires the personnel of its National Guard and other military units to wear.

Par. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondent herein described certain individuals, firms, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of merchandise similar in character and design to that sold by the respondent, who do not in their trade or corporate names, or in their advertising, or in any manner, import or imply any connection or association with any military organization of the United States Government when they are not in fact so connected or associated.

PAR. 6. The representations made by the respondent through use of the term "National Guard" in his trade name are calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the respondent's merchandise was made for or purchased from the United States War Department and that the respondent is connected with or associated with the United States War Department or the National Guard for the merchandising of equipment manufactured for or purchased from the National Guard. As a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the respondent's representations herein described, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said merchandise.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, an individual trading under the style and name of National Guard Equipment Co., have been, and are, to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Louis Cohen, also known as Louis Kahn, an individual, trading as National Guard Equipment Co., his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of general merchandise, wearing apparel, and military equipment, uniforms and supplies in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing through the use of the term "National Guard" in his trade name, or through any other means or device, or in any manner that respondent's business is a branch of, or affiliated with, the United States War Department or National Guard or in any way connected or associated therewith or that respondent's merchandise was made for, or purchased from, the United States War Department or National Guard, provided that any merchandise actually purchased at War Department surplus, refuse or reject sales may be so represented.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
WHEREAS a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of hosiery, and a second company engaged as exclusive selling agent thereof in soliciting and procuring orders for such hosiery and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia with others engaged in sale and distribution of hosiery, including many who do not represent, brand, label, advertise, or describe their said product falsely or deceptively, and do not represent that it contains more silk than is in fact present—

Made use of words “PURE THREAD SILK” in labels, brands, or stamps on their said product, together with such words as “Reinforced with Rayon” or “Reinforced with Artificial Silk” or “Twisted with Rayon,” and thereby and otherwise caused said hosiery to be represented, advertised, described, sold, and distributed in the trade and to the consuming public in various States and in said District as containing genuine and pure silk as the principal or major constituent therein, and in a proportion or quantity larger than that of rayon, facts being the tops, heels, soles, and toes of such hosiery, with appearance and feel of silk, were composed wholly of cotton, and other parts thereof were composed of approximately 93 percent rayon, with which was mixed from 3 to 7 percent silk, amounting to 2 percent of the hose by weight;

With the result that they thereby placed in the hands of dealers means or instrument of deception and fraud whereby such dealers were enabled, aided, and assisted in misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public as to contents of said hosiery and quality, value, grade, and substance thereof, and with effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and that such product contained pure or genuine silk in a larger proportion than was in fact present therein, and in a larger proportion than rayon content thereof, and of causing members of such public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase quantities thereof, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to them from their competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective hosiery and materials contained therein; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

Frantz, McConnell & Seymour, of Knoxville, Tenn., for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Charles H. Bacon Co., a corporation, and Scott-Bartels Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, in violation of said act and in violation of the act of Congress approved June 16, 1933, known as the "National Industrial Recovery Act," and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Count 1

Paragraph 1. Respondent Charles H. Bacon Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at Lenoir City in the State of Tennessee, and operating hosiery mills or manufacturing plants located in the State of Tennessee at Lenoir City, Morristown, Greeneville, and Loudon. Respondent Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, having its office and principal place of business in the city and State of New York. Respondent Charles H. Bacon Co. is, and at all times hereinafter mentioned has been engaged in the business of manufacturing hosiery for men, women, and children and in selling and distributing said products from its mills and places of business in the State of Tennessee to consumers and to wholesale and retail dealers in the several States and Territories of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., is and at all times hereinafter mentioned has been the selling agent of respondent Charles H. Bacon Co., and is and has been engaged in the business of soliciting and procuring purchase orders for said hosiery from, and in promoting and effectuating the sale and distribution of said merchandise in interstate commerce to, wholesale and retail dealers and other purchasers throughout the United States.

Paragraph 2. Throughout the course and conduct of their business respondents have been and still are offering for sale, selling, and distributing the said hosiery, manufactured by respondent Charles H. Bacon Co., to their customers and to purchasers generally in direct active competition with many persons, firms, and other corporations also engaged in the business of selling and distributing hosiery for men, women, and children in commerce in, between, and among the several States and territories of the United States and the District of Columbia; and in such sale and distribution respondents have been and are engaged in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and have caused and continue to cause said hosiery manufactured by respondent Charles H. Bacon Co., as and when sold by them, to be shipped, transported, and delivered in commerce from shipping points in the State of Tennessee and elsewhere into or through States other than the State or States in which such respective shipments originated, and into or through the Territories and the District of Columbia, to the respective purchasers of such hosiery in such other States, the Territories and in said District.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business and during a period of more than 3 years last past, respondents have caused and continued to cause their said hosiery to be stamped, branded, and labeled with, and to be marketed, sold, and distributed under, certain brands, labels, or stamps relating to the silk content of said hosiery. Five representative specimens of said labels, brands, or stamps so used by respondents read as follows:

Complaint

Par. 4. Said labels, stamps, and brands are and have been used by respondents upon and in connection with said hosiery with the purpose and intention of having such merchandise displayed, offered for sale, sold, and marketed and distributed in the hosiery trade and to the consuming public under said brands, stamps, and labels. Pursuant to respondents' said purpose and intention and by reason of said use of such labels, brands, and stamps, the said hosiery is and has been displayed, offered for sale, sold, and distributed under the same by respondents' dealer-purchasers and by dealers generally in the regular course of trade to the consuming public.

Par. 5. By means of such stamps, brands, and labels and by other forms of representations respondents cause and have caused said hosiery to be represented, advertised, and described directly and indirectly and to be marketed in the trade and to the consuming public as hosiery containing genuine and pure silk as one of the principal or major constituents of said hosiery and as being present in an appreciable, substantial, and effective quantity or proportion and as containing pure or genuine silk in a proportion or quantity as large as, or larger than, the proportion or quantity of rayon or so-called artificial silk which is present.

Par. 6. Respondents' said hosiery, branded, stamped, labeled, and represented as aforesaid, is composed largely of cotton and rayon, or so-called artificial silk, which are the principal or major constituents of said hose and are present in the following approximate proportions by weight of the hose, to wit: Cotton 73 percent, rayon or so-called artificial silk 25 percent. The tops, heels, soles, and toes of such hose are composed wholly of cotton, and the other parts of said hose are composed largely and principally of rayon or so-called artificial silk with which is mixed such silk content as may be present in said hosiery.

Par. 7. Such hose is not composed of nor does it contain pure silk, silk, or genuine silk, as a principal or major constituent or part; and such silk, genuine silk, or pure silk as is or may be present in said hose is less than 5 percent of the hose by weight, to wit: 2 percent of the hose by weight, and is of such small quantity or proportion as to be inappreciable, ineffective, or insubstantial. The said hose and the bulk or body thereof give and have the appearance of silk.

Par. 8. The aforesaid labels, brands, stamps, and representations and each of them, as used by respondent as hereinbefore set forth are false, misleading, and deceptive; and they and each of them have and had the capacity, tendency, and effect (a) of misleading and deceiving the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that said hosiery contains pure or genuine silk in larger proportion than is in fact present, and that such hosiery is composed of or contains pure or genuine silk in the quantity or proportion which is as large as the proportion of rayon in said hosiery and is sufficiently large in quantity or proportion so as to be substantial, appreciable, and effective, and that pure or genuine silk constitutes one of the principal or major proportions or contents of said hose; (b) of causing purchasers to purchase said hosiery and to do so in or because of such erroneous beliefs; and (c) of causing dealers to resell, and of aiding and assisting dealers in reselling, said hosiery to other dealers and to the consuming public under such false, misleading and deceptive stamps, brands, labels, and representations.

Par. 9. In using the labels, brands, and stamps referred to in paragraph 3 hereof in the sale and distribution of said hosiery to dealers, respondents thereby have placed and are continuing to place in the hands of dealers, a means and instrument of deception and fraud whereby such dealers are enabled, aided, and assisted (a) to mislead and deceive purchasers as to contents of said hose and the quality, value, grade, and substance thereof, and (b) to induce and cause the consuming and purchasing public to purchase said hosiery in or because of the erroneous belief or inference that the said brands, labels, and stamps thereon are true in fact, and that the said hosiery contains pure silk or genuine silk in a proportion greater than is in fact present in such hosiery or in a proportion which is as large as the proportion of rayon which is in fact present in such hose.

Par. 10. Among the competitors of respondents are manufacturers, dealers, and distributors of hosiery for men, women, and children who sell and distribute such hose to the purchasing and consuming public throughout the United States in competition with respondents' said hose and who do not, in connection therewith or otherwise, represent, brand, label, advertise, or describe their hosiery falsely or deceptively or as containing more silk than is in fact present in their said merchandise.

Par. 11. The use by respondents of the false, misleading, and deceptive acts and representations hereinbefore set forth constitutes practices or methods of competition which are unfair and which tend to and do (a) prejudice and injure the public, (b) unfairly divert trade from and otherwise prejudice and injure respondents' competitors, (c) operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in the hosiery business; and they and each of them constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning and in violation of Section 5 of aforesaid Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Count 2

Paragraph 1. The allegations and averments of paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of count 1 hereinabove set forth are adopted and incorporated herein by reference as allegations and averments of count 2 and are hereby charged and alleged as part of count 2 as fully and as completely as though the several allegations and averments of said paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of count 1 were here repeated verbatim.

Paragraph 2. Pursuant to and to effectuate the provisions of title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act approved June 16, 1933, a Code of Fair Competition for the Hosiery Industry has been formulated and thereafter accepted, adopted, approved, and issued by the President of the United States by Executive order signed and issued August 26, 1933. In and under said code it is provided that upon such acceptance by the President the provisions of said code shall be the standard of fair competition for the said hosiery industry. It is further provided in and by said code, among other things, as follows:

Article VIII—Fair Trade Practice

To assure fair competition in the Industry and proper practices in the merchandising of hosiery, the following fair trade practice provisions are made a part of the Code and binding on all hosiery manufacturers:

11. Misbranding and improper marking.—To sell hosiery marked or branded falsely with the effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers or the ultimate consumer with respect to price, quantity, quality, gauge, grade, substance, or value of the merchandise is unfair trade practice.

12. Misrepresentation of materials.—(a) If any definite section or sections of the hose be made of a material entirely different from that of the bulk or body of the stocking, when such material gives the appearance of silk, the hose must be stamped with the names of both materials.

(b) No material or content shall be stamped on any hose unless it represents at least five per cent (5%) of the hose by weight. When two or more contents exist, if any content is stamped on the hose, all contents constituting five per cent (5%) or more of the weight of the hose shall be stamped and in the order of major content.

The said code and the said provisions thereof have gone into effect on the second Monday following August 26, 1933, the date of said Executive order and of the approval of such code by the President; and at all times since said second Monday the said code, including the aforesaid provisions thereof, have been and they still are in full force and effect. The respondents are and have been members of said hosiery industry and are and have been subject to said code and said provisions thereof at all times since said code has gone into effect as aforesaid.

Par. 3. In the aforesaid sale and distribution of said hosiery under the stamps, brands, and labels hereinabove described and referred to and at all times since the aforesaid effective date of said code, respondents have sold and distributed and continue to sell and distribute, in and affecting interstate commerce throughout the United States, said hosiery while marked or branded falsely with the effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers or the ultimate consumer with respect to quality, grade, substance, or value of said hosiery, which acts and practices of respondent constitute and have constituted unfair trade practices and are and have been in violation of aforesaid standard of fair competition and of the provisions of said code, to wit: Section or paragraph numbered 11 of article VIII of said code (hereinabove quoted).

Par. 4. In marking, labeling, and stamping their said hosiery and in marketing the same in and affecting interstate commerce throughout the United States as, and under the conditions and circumstances, hereinabove alleged, respondents have violated and continue to violate said standard of fair competition and the provisions of said code, to wit: Paragraphs marked (a) and (b) of section or paragraph numbered 12 of article VIII of said code (hereinabove quoted) in that the said hose as and when sold and distributed by respondents as aforesaid contained the name of a material or content stamped upon such hose which material or content represents less than 5 percent of the hose by weight; and further in that two or more contents exist in said hose and said content is and has been stamped upon said hose, but all contents constituting 5 percent or more of the weight of the hose is not and has not been stamped upon such hose in the order of major content, which acts and practices constitute unfair trade practices.

Par. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of the respondents, in the stamping, branding, and labeling of their hose and in the sale and distribution thereof in and affecting interstate commerce throughout the United States as hereinabove alleged, are and have been methods of competition in and affecting interstate commerce which are unfair, injurious, and detrimental to competitors and the public and are and have been unfair methods of competition under, and are and have been in violation of, said National Industrial Recovery Act.
and the Federal Trade Commission Act as amended, to wit: Section 5 of the Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of February 1935, issued and subsequently served its amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, Charles H. Bacon Co. and Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 24th day of August 1935, the respondents, by their counsel, Frantz, McConnell, and Seymour, filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents by their counsel, Frantz, McConnell, and Seymour, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the amended and supplemental complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said amended and supplemental complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Charles H. Bacon Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal office and place of business at Lenoir City in the State of Tennessee and operating hosiery mills or manufacturing plants at Lenoir City and Loudon in the State of Tennessee.
The respondent, Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., was a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its office and principal place of business in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., since the filing of the amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding, has, by amendment to its charter, changed its corporate name to Bacon-Scott Co., Inc. The Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., and the Bacon-Scott Co., Inc., are one and the same corporation except for this change in name.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Charles H. Bacon Co. is, and at all times mentioned herein has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing hosiery. Said respondent sells said hosiery to consumers and to wholesale and retail dealers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and causes the said hosiery, when sold by it, to be transported from its said mills in the State of Tennessee to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Tennessee and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., now the Bacon-Scott Co., Inc., is, and at all times mentioned herein has been, the exclusive selling agent of respondent, Charles H. Bacon Co., and is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, engaged in the business of soliciting and procuring orders for said hosiery and in promoting and effectuating the sale and distribution of said hosiery to consumers and wholesale and retail dealers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said hosiery among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing hosiery. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not represent, brand, label, advertise, or describe their hosiery falsely or deceptively and who do not represent that their hosiery contains more silk than is in fact present in such hosiery.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their hosiery, respondents have caused their hosiery to be stamped, branded, and labeled with, and to be sold and distributed in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia bearing certain brands, labels or stamps purporting to relate to and be descriptive of the silk content of said hosiery. Among and typical of the labels, brands, or stamps, so used and disseminated, by respondents are the following:

- PURE THREAD SILK
  - Reinforced With Rayon
  - Made in U. S. A.

- PURE THREAD SILK
  - Reinforced With Rayon

- PURE THREAD SILK
  - Reinforced With Rayon
  - 240 Needle

- PURE THREAD SILK
  - Reinforced With Artificial Silk

- X68
- PURE THREAD SILK
  - Twisted with Rayon
  - 240 Needle
  - "Split-Foot" Half Hose

Par. 5. Said labels, stamps, and brands are, and have been, used by respondents upon and in connection with said hosiery for the purpose and intention of having such hosiery displayed, offered for sale, sold, marketed, and distributed in the hosiery trade and to the consuming public under said brands, stamps, and labels. Pursuant to respondents said purpose and intention and by reason of said use of such labels, brands, and stamps the said hosiery is, and has been displayed, offered for sale, sold, and distributed among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the consuming public by respondents' dealer purchasers and by dealers generally in the regular course of trade.

Par. 6. By means of such stamps, brands, and labels and by other forms of representations, respondents cause and have caused said hosiery to be represented, advertised, described, sold, and distributed in the trade and to the consuming public situated in various States of the United States and the District of Columbia as containing genuine and pure silk as the principal or major constituent therein and as containing pure or genuine silk in a proportion or quantity larger than the proportion or quantity of rayon present in such hosiery.

Par. 7. Respondents' said hosiery branded, stamped, labeled, and represented as aforesaid has the appearance and feel of silk but is composed largely of cotton and rayon which are the principal or major constituents of said hosiery. The materials present in said hosiery are in the following approximate proportions by weight, to wit: Cotton, 73 percent; rayon, 25 percent; and silk, 2 percent. The tops, heels, soles, and toes of such hosiery are composed wholly of cotton and the other parts of such hosiery are composed of approximately 93 percent rayon with which is mixed from 3 to 7 percent silk.

Par. 8. The hosiery of respondents, sold and distributed as aforesaid, is not composed of nor does it contain pure silk or genuine silk as the principal or major constituent. Such silk as is or may be present in said hosiery is less than 5 percent of the hose by weight, to wit: Two percent of the hose by weight.

Par. 9. Through the use of the aforesaid labels, brands, and stamps, and the sale and distribution of said hosiery to dealers, respondents have thereby placed and are continuing to place in the hands of dealers a means or instrument of deception and fraud whereby such dealers are enabled, aided, and assisted in misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public as to the contents of said hosiery and the quality, value, grade, and substance thereof.

Par. 10. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations on said labels, brands, and stamps, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said hosiery, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations are true and that said hosiery contains pure or genuine silk in a larger proportion than is in fact present in such hosiery and that such hosiery is composed of or contains pure or genuine silk in a quantity or proportion larger than the proportion of rayon contained in said hosiery and causes members of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase quantities of respondents' said hosiery.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective hosiery and the materials contained in such hosiery. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Charles H. Bacon Co. and Bacon-Scott Co., Inc., formerly Scott-Bartels Co., Inc., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of hosiery in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner whatsoever that the hosiery manufactured or sold by them, or any of them, contains "silk" or "pure thread silk," the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, in greater quantity, percentage or degree than is actually the case.

2. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling, hosiery composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such hosiery is composed of rayon, and when such hosiery is composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials as silk or rayon.

1 Count II of complaint, alleging violation of National Industrial Recovery Act, dismissed by following order of Commission, as of June 15, 1935:

This matter having been considered by the Commission upon its own motion in view of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States rendered May 27, 1935, in the case of Schechter Poultry Corporation, et al. v. United States [295 U. S. 495]; and the Commission being advised in the premises.

It is now ordered, That the charges in the complaint in this proceeding of violation of the National Industrial Recovery Act and of the Code of Fair Competition for the Hosiery Industry be, and the same are hereby dismissed.
Order

materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, provided that if any particular fiber in said hosiery is not present in a substantial amount by weight, the percentage in which such fiber is present shall then be specifically disclosed.

3. Using the words "silk" or "pure thread silk," or words of similar import and meaning, to describe, designate, or refer to hosiery which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm; except that in the case of hosiery composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such words may be used as descriptive of the silk content if there are used in immediate connection and conjunction with the word "silk," in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and provided that if any particular fiber in said hosiery is not present in a substantial amount by weight, the percentage in which such fiber is present shall then be specifically disclosed.

4. Using the term "pure thread silk reinforced with rayon" to describe, designate, or refer to any hosiery other than that in which the chief constituent is pure thread silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, combined solely with rayon.

This order shall not be construed as approving the use of the unqualified words "silk" or "pure thread silk" to designate, describe, or refer to weighted silk.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

THE SPONGE INSTITUTE, ITS OFFICERS AND MEMBERS, AND FLORIDA SPONGE PACKERS ASSOCIATION, ITS OFFICERS AND MEMBERS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where two trade organizations and the respective officers and members thereof, variously engaged in sale and distribution of sponges, namely—

I. An "institute" of wholesale sponge distributors; officers of said Institute; and members thereof, who—

1) Were engaged in selling at wholesale and retail, to wholesale and retail dealers, sponges which they purchased in substantial amount from packers located mostly in Florida, and including packer members of the packer association below set forth;

2) Were, but for matters and things below set out, in competition with one another in price and otherwise in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, and were in competition with others likewise engaged in purchase of sponges from packers thereof and in resale of such products in territory served by such Institute members; and

3) With, their Institute, defined as the only legitimate and legal channel of distribution from packer to wholesale distributor, to wholesaler, to retailer, and designated as bona fide sponge houses business concerns who constituted legitimate packers and wholesalers in such channels, and, as irregular and illegitimate, other channels of trade, and as illegitimate any dealer acquiring sponges through such so-called illegitimate channels; and

II. An association of sponge packers, with principal places of business at Tarpon Springs, Fla., and through which, or sponge exchange there located, 72 percent in quantity and 60 percent in value of the total United States catch of sponges was sold in 1 year, with course of trade in such Florida sponges, under normal conditions, from producer or fisherman through said exchange to packer, to wholesale distributor, to wholesalers and retailers; certain officers of said association; and members thereof, who—

1) But for the matters and things below set out, were in competition with each other in price and otherwise in sale and distribution of sponges to wholesale dealers and distributors in territory served by such packer members, and were in such competition with others engaged in such sale and distribution; and

2) Solicited and sold, along with other packers, and prior to certain time, sponges to wholesale distributors, and direct to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States, including such sales by such members of sponges direct to such wholesalers and retailers as also purchased such products from wholesale distributors—
Entered into an agreement, combination, and conspiracy with intent to hinder and suppress competition in interstate sale and distribution of sponges, and designed and intended to create monopoly in themselves in sale thereof to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States; initiated by and originally based on conversations between respective presidents and letter by president of such Institute suggesting the coming to some understanding between the two groups as to commerce in sponges, and advice by president of said Association to packers that, if they would not solicit trade from northern houses, members of such Institute would divide their purchases with member packers and absorb most of packer output and thus enable packers to raise their price to trade to the enhancement of their profits; and on many letters and bulletins written and sent out by president of said Institute, and by such Institute, after said period, in furtherance of design expressed in above conversation and directed to the establishment and carrying out of such a business arrangement or division as above indicated; and

Where packer members aforesaid, in pursuance and furtherance of such intent and design on the part of all—

(a) Entered into written agreement in accordance with which they were not to circularize any trade outside of the bona fide sponge houses regularly established as such, and to confine their sales to such sponge, and sponge and chamois, houses, and not to sell otherwise except to northern buyers personally calling upon such packers in Florida or in event of unsolicited orders being mailed, in which event their prices were to be at least 20 percent higher than those to sponge houses aforesaid, and expressed their willingness to discuss further any propositions, suggestions, or ideas for the furthering of such understanding and cooperation; and

Where said Institute and the wholesale distributor members thereof, as the case might be, in pursuance of such agreement, letters, and bulletins—

(b) Furnished to said packer members aforesaid, list of "Bona fide Sponge Houses" to whom they should confine their sales, and furnished such list to such members as revised from time to time;

(c) Furnished the wholesale distributor members with list of packers who were cooperating in plan to restrict sales as aforesaid, and caused such members to confine their purchases to cooperating packers;

(d) Concertedly confined their purchases to cooperating packers as aforesaid, and removed from their list name of any packer discovered as making sale contrary to such agreement and understanding, and blacklisted same and refused thereafter, concertedly, to make any further purchases therefrom; and

Where packer members aforesaid, in pursuance of said agreement, letters and bulletins—

(e) Did not circularize any trade outside of bona fide sponge houses regularly established as such, as declared by said Institute, and did confine sale of sponges to such so-called bona fide houses, and make price difference, as aforesaid, to other houses not thus designated by Institute, and did not sell to such others, even at 20 per cent increase, excepting only when order was sent to packer members unsolicited or placed by personal call;

With the result that the capacity, tendency and effect of such agreement, combination, conspiracy, and undertaking, and acts and practices performed thereunder, was—
Complaint

(1) To monopolize in said members of such Institute and so-called bona fide sponge houses, distributors, business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida, and to tend to monopolize in such packer members business of dealing in and distributing such sponges;

(2) To unreasonably lessen, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in such sponges and deprive wholesale dealers, distributors, and retailers, and purchasing public generally, of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unrestricted or free and fair competition in trade in sponge industry, and otherwise operate as a restraint upon and detriment to freedom of fair and legitimate competition; and

(3) Prejudice and injure public and producers of sponges, dealers, distributors, and others who do not conform to or cooperate in their aforesaid program:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the conditions and circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall and Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiners, Mr. Astor Hogg, Mr. Karl Stecher, and Mr. Earl J. Kolb for the Commission.

Hill & Treadway, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that The Sponge Institute, its officers, and members as hereinafter set out, and Florida Sponge Packers Association, a corporation and its officers and members, as hereinafter set out, have been, and now are, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent. The Sponge Institute (hereinafter referred to as the Institute), is a voluntary, unincorporated association of individuals, partnerships, and corporations, with its principal place of business located at Washington, D. C. Its members are engaged in selling, at wholesale and retail, sponges to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in various States of the United States, said members being banded together in said Institute for the purpose of promoting and protecting their common interests and business affairs.

The respondents, Theodore Schroeder, of 500 North Commercial Street, St. Louis, Mo.; Dan Malloy, of 253 North Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; David Block, of 36 Walker Street, New York City; and Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, 5600 Thirty-second Street NW., Washington, D. C., are respectively president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary of said Institute, and are in charge of, and conduct, its activities and affairs.

The members of The Sponge Institute, all of whom are named as respondents, are engaged in selling sponges, and are as follows:

Schroeder & Tremayne, Inc., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 500 North Commercial Street, St. Louis, Mo.

S. M. Arnold Co., Inc., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 2000 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.

H. L. Ettman Sponge Co., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 1908 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Addison Sponge Co., Inc., an Ohio corporation, with its principal place of business located at 341 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S. Vollman Co., an Illinois corporation, with its principal place of business located at 424 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hugo Rosenfelt, doing business under the trade name of Nassau Sponge Co., with his principal place of business located at 124 West Kinzie Street, Chicago, Ill.

Greek-American Sponge Co., an Illinois corporation, with its principal place of business located at 158 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

American Sponge & Chamois Co., Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 47 Ann Street, New York City.

Albert Bloch & Sons, Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 36 Walker Street, in the city of New York.

Robert L. Senenberg and Perry Senenberg partners, trading under the firm name and style of Florida Sponge & Chamois Co., with its principal place of business located at 42 Cliff Street, in the city of New York.

Gulf & West Indies Co., Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 23 Murray Street, New York City.

King & Malcolm Co., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 242 Water Street, New York City.

Dan Malloy, an individual trading as Dan Malloy Co., with his principal place of business located at 253 Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Frank M. Miglis, trading under the firm name and style of Frank M. Miglis Co., with his principal place of business located at 320 Pearl Street, New York City.
The respondent, Florida Sponge Packers Association (hereinafter referred to as the Association) is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla. It is a membership corporation, and was organized for the purpose of promoting and protecting the common interest and business affairs of its members. Respondents, John Diamandis, N. G. Arfaras, and D. A. Alissandratos, all of Tarpon Springs, Fla., are respectively, president, treasurer, and secretary of said corporation, and are in charge of, and conduct its activities and affairs.

The membership of the Association (hereinafter referred to as packer members) is as follows:

John Diamandis and Peter J. Cardulis, partners, trading as Diamandis & Cardulis, with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

D. A. Alissandratos and Nick Bessis, partners, trading as Commercial Sponge Co., with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

C. G. Andriotes, trading as C. G. Andriotes & Co., with his principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

George S. Smitzes, James Smitzes, Louis Smitzes, and Nick Drivas, partners, trading as Smitzes & Drivas, with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Sponge Producers Corporation, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Florida, with its office and principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Diamandis Diamandis & Christos Psilakas, partners, trading as Florida Industrial Sponge Co., with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Respondent George Mavros, trading as National Sponge Co., with his principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla., and respondent Sponge Fishing Company, Inc., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla., while not members of the Association, cooperated with the members thereof, and with the members of the Institute, as hereinafter set out.

Par. 2. Said respondent members of the Institute purchase the sponges in which they deal directly and immediately from packers located, for the most part, in the State of Florida. The respondents, Commercial Sponge Co., Diamandis & Cardulis, C. G. Andriotes & Co., Smitzes & Drivas, Sponge Producers Corporation, Florida Industrial Sponge Co., National Sponge Co., and Sponge Fishing Co., are packer members from whom the respondent members of the Institute purchase sponges. Said respondent packer members, after making the sales to the respondent members of the Institute, who are known to the trade as wholesale distributors, cause said products to be transported in commerce from their respective places of business in the State of Florida to the purchasers thereof, located at points in the various States of the United States other than the State of Florida, and in so doing there is a constant current of trade and commerce between the said respondent packer members and the respondent members of the Institute.

Upon reselling said sponges in the course of their aforesaid respective businesses, the respondent members of the Institute cause said products to be transported from their respective places of business to wholesale and retail dealers of sponges at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States, other than the State or States in which such shipments originate. In such business, there is a constant current of trade and commerce between said respondent members of the Institute and the wholesale and retail dealers throughout the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent packer members, as herein set-out, but for the matters and things hereinafter alleged and set-out, would be naturally and normally in com­petition with each other, in price and otherwise, and they are in com­petition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of sponges to wholesale dealers and distributors in the territory served by said respondent packer members.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent members of the Institute, but for the matters and things hereinafter alleged and set-out, would be naturally and normally in com­petition with each other, in price and otherwise, and they are in com­petition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations, also engaged in the purchase of sponges from the packers thereof, and the resale thereof, in the territory served by said respondent
members of the Institute.

Respondent Institute and its respondent members define the only legitimate and regular channel of distribution to be the packer, then the wholesale distributor (among whom are said members of the Institute), then the wholesaler and the retailer; and from time to time designate the business concerns who constitute the legitimate packers and wholesale distributors in this channel as "bona fide sponge houses." Channels of distribution originating with the packer of sponges, and which do not flow through the distributor, but go direct to the consumer or to the wholesaler or retailer, are designated by them as irregular and illegitimate channels of trade, and any dealers acquiring sponges through such so-called illegitimate channels are, by the respondent Institute and its respondent members, designated illegitimate dealers.

Par. 3. The respondent members of the Institute constitute a large and important part of the wholesale distributors of sponges in the United States; and such members constitute a group so influential in the trade as to be able substantially to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in sponges from the packers of sponges in the State of Florida to and throughout the several States of the United States.

Par. 4. Prior to April 1, 1935, the respondent packer members and other packers solicited and sold sponges direct to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States, as well as to distributors. It was a common thing for the respondent packer members to sell sponges direct to wholesalers and retailers, which wholesalers and retailers also purchased sponges from wholesale distributors. All of the said respondents hereinbefore named and described, and each of them, on or about September 1, 1935, entered into an agreement, combination, and conspiracy and intended to hinder and suppress competition in the interstate sale and distribution of sponges, and also to create a monopoly in themselves in the sale of sponges to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States. Pursuant to said agreement, combination, and conspiracy, said respondents have, respectively and cooperatively performed, and are now performing the following acts and practices, to wit:

1. The respondent packer members entered into an agreement and understanding with the Institute and its members, that said respondent packer members would not circularize any trade outside of the bona fide sponge houses regularly established as such, as declared by the Institute, and that said packer members would confine their sales of sponges to such so-called “bona fide sponge houses,” or would make a price difference of 20 percent to other houses not designated by the Institute as “bona fide sponge houses,” and would sell to such others (even at the 20 percent increase) only if the order was sent to said packer members unsolicited, or placed by personal call.

2. Adopted and used other cooperative practices and means in furtherance of said plans.

Pursuant to the aforesaid agreement and understanding, the respondent members of the Institute furnished the respondent packer members who had entered into such agreement, as hereinabove set forth, with a list of “bona fide sponge houses,” with the direction to the respondent packer members that such list contained the “bona fide sponge houses” to whom they should confine their sales. In pursuance of said agreement, combination, and conspiracy, the respondent packer members cooperatively adhered to the plan, and by concert of action, failed and refused to sell sponges to any dealer unless such dealer was on the list furnished by the Institute as a "bona fide sponge house." Said list has been revised from time to time, and respondent packer members are furnished with each revised list of the so-called "bona fide sponge houses." Pursuant to the aforesaid combination, agreement, and understanding, the respondent Institute furnished its members with a list of the packers who were cooperating in the plan to restrict sales, and caused said respondent members of the Institute to, and said members did, by concert of action, confine their purchases to the said packers who were cooperating in said plan; and whenever the Institute discovered that any packer had made a sale contrary to the agreement and understanding, the name of such packer was taken off their list, and such packer violating the agreement was blacklisted, and thereafter the respondent members of the Institute, by concerted action failed and refused to make any further purchases from such packer.

PAR. 5. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, and undertaking, and the acts and practices performed thereunder by said respondents, as hereinbefore set forth, has been, and now is:

(a) To monopolize in said respondent members of the Institute and so-called "bona fide sponge houses," distributors, the business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida, and to tend to monopolize in respondent packer members, the business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said sponges, and to deprive wholesale dealers, distributors, and retail dealers, and the purchasing public generally, of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unrestricted or free and fair competition in trade in the sponge industry; and otherwise to operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

(c) To prejudice and injure the public and producers of sponges, dealers, distributors, and others who do not conform to, or cooperate in, the program of respondents.

PAR. 6. The above-alleged acts and practices done by the respondents are to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."
REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondents, The Sponge Institute, and its officers and members as herein set out, and Florida Sponge Packers Association, a corporation, and its officers and members as herein set out, charging respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined in said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and respondents' answers thereto made, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Astor Hogg and Karl Stecher, attorneys for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall and John L. Hornor, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint of William L. Hill for the respondents, and said testimony and other evidence has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answers of respondents, the testimony, and other evidence and brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Sponge Institute, is a voluntary, unincorporated association of individuals, partnerships, and corporations, with its principal place of business located at Washington, D.C. Its members are engaged in selling, at wholesale and retail, sponges to wholesale and retail dealers located at points in various States of the United States, said members being banded together in said Institute for the purpose of promoting and protecting their common interests and business affairs. The respondents, Theodore Schroeder, of 500 North Commercial Street, St. Louis, Mo.; Dan Malloy, of 253 North Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; David Block, of 36 Walker Street, New York City; and Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, 5600 Thirty-second Street NW., Washington, D.C., are respectively president, vice president, treasurer, and secretary of said Institute, and are in charge of, and conduct, its activities and affairs.

The members of The Sponge Institute are as follows:

Schroeder & Tremayne, Inc., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 500 North Commercial Street, St. Louis, Mo.
Findings

S. M. Arnold Co., Inc., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 2900 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.

H. L. Ettman Sponge Co., a Missouri corporation, with its principal place of business located at 1908 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.

S. Vollman Co., an Illinois corporation, with its principal place of business located at 424 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hugo Rosenfelt, doing business under the trade name of Nassau Sponge Co., with his principal place of business located at 124 West Kinzie Street, Chicago, Ill.

Greek-American Sponge Co., an Illinois corporation, with its principal place of business located at 158 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

American Sponge & Chamois Co., Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 47 Ann Street, New York City.

Albert Bloch & Sons, Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 36 Walker Street, in the city of New York.

Robert L. Senenberg and Perry Senenberg, partners, trading under the firm name and style of Florida Sponge & Chamois Co., with its principal place of business located at 42 Cliff Street, in the city of New York.

Gulf & West Indies Co., Inc., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 23 Murray Street, New York City.

King & Malcolm Co., a New York corporation, with its principal place of business located at 242 Water Street, New York City.

Dan Malloy, an individual trading as Dan Malloy Co., with his principal place of business located at 253 Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Frank M. Miglis, trading under the firm name and style of Frank M. Miglis Co., with his principal place of business located at 320 Pearl Street, New York City.

The respondent, Florida Sponge Packers Association, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla. It is a membership corporation, and was organized for the purpose of promoting and protecting the common interest and business affairs of its members. Respondents, John Diamandis, N. G. Arfaras, and D. A. Alissandratos, all of Tarpon Springs, Fla., are, respectively, president, treasurer, and secretary of said corporation, and are in charge of and conduct its activities and affairs.

The membership of the Association is as follows:

John Diamandis and Peter J. Cardulis, partners, trading as Diamandis & Cardulis, with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

D. A. Aliassandratos and Nick Bessis, partners, trading as Commercial Sponge Co., with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

C. G. Andriotes, trading as C. G. Andriotes & Co., with his principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

George S. Smitzes, James Smitzes, Louis Smitzes, and Nick Drivas, partners, trading as Smitzes & Drivas, with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Sponge Producers Corporation, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Florida, with its office and principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Diamandis Diamandis & Christos Psilakas, partners, trading as Florida Industrial Sponge Co., with their principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Respondent George Mavros, trading as National Sponge Co., with his principal place of business located at Tarpon Springs, Fla., and respondent Sponge Fishing Co., Inc., a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, while not members of the Association, cooperated with the members thereof, and with the members of the Institute, as hereinafter set-out.

Paragraph 2. The respondent members of the Institute purchase a substantial amount of sponges in which they deal directly and immediately from packers located, for the most part, in the State of Florida. The respondents, Commercial Sponge Co., Diamandis & Cardulis, C. G. Andriotes & Co., Smitzes & Drivas, Sponge Producers Corporation, Florida Industrial Sponge Co., and National Sponge Co. are packer members from whom the respondent members of the Institute purchase sponges. Said respondent packer members, after making the sales to the respondent members of the Institute, who are known to the trade as wholesale distributors, cause said products to be transported in commerce from their respective places of business in the State of Florida to the purchasers thereof, located at points in the various States of the United States other than the State of Florida, and in so doing there is a constant current of trade and commerce between the said respondent packer members and the respondent members of the Institute. Upon reselling said sponges in the course of their aforesaid respective businesses, the respondent members of the Institute cause said products to be transported from their respective places of business to wholesale and retail dealers of sponges at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States, other than the State or States in which such shipments originate. In such business, there is a constant current of trade and commerce between said respondent members of the Institute and the wholesale and retail dealers throughout the various States of the United States.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent packer members, as herein set-out, but for the matters and things hereinafter alleged and set-out, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, in price and otherwise, and they are in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of sponges to wholesale dealers and distributors in the territory served by said respondent packer members. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent members of the Institute, but for the matters and things hereinafter alleged and set-out, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, in price and otherwise, and they are in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations, also engaged in the purchase of sponges from the packers thereof, and the resale thereof, in the territory served by said respondent members of the Institute. Respondent Institute and its respondent members define the only legitimate and regular channel of distribution to be the packer, then the wholesale distributor (among whom are said members of the Institute), then the wholesaler and the retailer; and from time to time designate the business concerns who constitute the legitimate packers and wholesale distributors in this channel as "bona fide sponge houses." Channels of distribution originating with the packer of sponges, and which do not flow through the distributor, but go direct to the consumer or to the wholesaler or retailer, are designated by them as irregular and illegitimate channels of trade, and any dealers acquiring sponges through such so-called illegitimate channels are, by the respondent Institute and its respondent members, designated illegitimate dealers.

Par. 4. The respondent members of the Institute constitute a large and important part of the wholesale distributors of sponges in the United States; and such members constitute a group so influential in the trade as to be able substantially to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in sponges from the packers of sponges in the State of Florida to and throughout the several States of the United States.

Par. 5. Tarpon Springs, Fla., is the center of the sponge fishing industry in the United States. Approximately 80 percent of the total catch is landed at Tarpon Springs—of the total United States catch during 6 years ending 1932, 72 percent in quantity and 60 percent in value was sold through the Tarpon Springs Sponge Exchange. The course of trade in Florida sponges under normal conditions is from the producer or fishermen through the Tarpon Springs Sponge Exchange to the packers, and from the packers to the wholesale distributors, who in turn sell them to wholesalers and retailers. In the negotiations between respondents, The Sponge Institute and members, and Florida Sponge Packers Association and members, these terms are used in describing certain members of the industry: "Wholesale Distributor," "Northern House," "Bona fide Sponge House," and "Legitimate Sponge House." All refer to dealers and houses which handle sponges exclusively and have large sponge departments—retailers and janitor supply houses without large sponge departments are not included in such terms.

Par. 6. Prior to April 1, 1935, the respondent packer members and other packers solicited and sold sponges direct to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States, as well as to distributors. It was a common thing for the respondent packer members to sell sponges direct to wholesalers and retailers, which wholesalers and retailers also purchased sponges from wholesale distributors. All of the said respondents hereinbefore named and described, and each of them, on or about September 1, 1935, entered into an agreement, combination, and conspiracy and intended to hinder and suppress competition in the interstate sale and distribution of sponges, and also designed and intended to create a monopoly in themselves in the sale of sponges to wholesalers and retailers throughout the United States. The origin of such conspiracy began by talks between Theodore Schroeder, president of respondent The Sponge Institute, and John Diamandis, president of respondent Florida Sponge Packers Association, and a letter of the president of the Institute dated April 10, 1935, suggesting the two groups of sponge dealers come to some understanding between themselves as to the commerce of sponges. The packers were advised by respondent Diamandis that if they would not solicit trade except from the northern houses, the respondent members of the Institute would divide their purchases with the respondent packers, and this division of purchases would absorb most of the output of the packers and thereby the packers would be able to raise the price of sponges to the trade and therefore greater profits would be realized by the packers. The respondent The Sponge Institute and its members caused the president, Theodore Schroeder, to write many letters and the respondent Institute issued many bulletins after April 10, 1935, in furtherance of the design expressed in the talks set-out herein. Examples of such communications are shown by excerpts from one as follows:

_Co-operation—That's the remedy._ Collective bargaining seems to be the order of the day. Let's try a little of this between ourselves. Supposing our group says to your group, stay away from our trade up here and we'll sell your output, all of it. You sell only to Sponge Institute members or others who may be real bona fide sponge houses and no one else. You in turn say to us, all right, but you must then really take our output and take reasonable care of us. That ought to be a fair enough basis for a deal, shouldn't it? Your group down there has its interests, that is, the production and packing of Florida Sponges, and of course, the selling of them. To enlist our combined efforts and really get behind Florida sponges we ask only that you work with us on a reasonable basis and above all cut out calling on our people, spoiling it all for us and just knocking out profits for everybody, especially yourselves down there. Sounds reasonable, does it not?

Can we begin negotiations? How about it? We have had 3 or 4 years of warfare, recriminations and arguments on these points back and forth. What do you say we try and settle all this? If this appeals to you I am sure that our officers up here will be glad to meet yours either down there, up here or half way between, wherever you say, and we can probably then really do something. This now is merely a plan of my own individually. I have not taken it up with our other officers but am sending them a copy of this letter. We up here have been elected to office presumably to do something for the industry up this way. I am sure you have the same ambitions down there. Can we get together? May I hear from you?

In furtherance of such intent and design on the part of all the respondents herein named, the respondent packers signed a written agreement in a meeting of such respondents assembled in Tarpon Springs, Fla., on August 8, 1935, and also at such time expressed "deep appreciation" of the designs expressed in the foregoing mentioned communication on the part of Institute respondents. The written agreement is as follows:

1. We will not circularize any trade outside of the bona fide sponge houses who are regularly established as such, and that we will confine our sales to such sponge and sponge and chamois houses.

2. The only exception to this is when northern buyers other than sponge houses visiting in Florida personally call on us and buy right here, or where unsolicited orders are mailed us. In such cases, we may sell them but at prices at least 20 percent higher than we will to the sponge houses.
Findings

3. We are ready and willing at any time to discuss further, any right proposition, suggestions, or idea for the furthering of this understanding and cooperation. With the full belief that this, our movement will find the necessary reciprocity and action from the northern sponge houses, we remain Commercial Sponge Co.

National Sponge Co.
Diamandis & Cardullias
C. G. Andriotos & Co.
Smitzes & Drivas Co.
Sponge Producers Corporation.
Industrial Florida Sponge Co.

PAR. 7. Pursuant to said agreement, letters, and bulletins, establishing combination and conspiracy, said respondents have, respectively and cooperatively, performed, and are now performing the following acts and practices, to wit:

The respondent members of the Institute furnished the respondent packer members who had entered into such agreement, as hereinabove set forth, with a list of "bona fide sponge houses" to whom they should confine their sales. In pursuance of said agreement, letters, and bulletins, establishing combination and conspiracy, the respondent packer members cooperatively adhered to the plan, and by concert of action, failed and refused to sell sponges to any dealer unless such dealer was on the list furnished by the Institute as a "bona fide sponge house." Said list has been revised from time to time, and respondent packer members are furnished with each revised list of the so-called "bona fide sponge houses." Pursuant to the aforesaid combination, agreement, and understanding, the respondent Institute furnished its members with a list of the packers who were cooperating in the plan to restrict sales, and caused said respondent members of the Institute to, and said members did, by concert of action, confine their purchases to the said packers who were cooperating in said plan; and whenever the Institute discovered that any packer had made a sale contrary to the agreement and understanding, the name of such packer was taken off their list, and such packer violating the agreement was blacklisted, and thereafter the respondent members of the Institute, by concerted action, failed and refused to make any further purchases from such packer.

The respondent packer members did not circularize any trade outside of the bona fide sponge houses regularly established as such, as declared by the Institute, respondent, and such packer members respondents did confine their sales of sponges to such so-called "bona fide houses" and did make a price difference of 20 percent to other houses not designated by the Institute respondent as "bona fide" houses, and did not sell to such others (even at the 20 percent increase) only when the order was sent to said packer members unsolicited or so placed by personal call.

Par. 8. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, and undertaking, and the acts and practices performed thereunder by said respondents, as hereinbefore set forth, has been, and now is:

(a) To monopolize in said respondent members of the Institute and so-called "bona fide sponge houses," distributors, the business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida, and to tend to monopolize in and distributing sponges produced in Florida, and to tend to monopolize in respondent packer members, the business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said sponges, and to deprive wholesale dealers, distributors, and retail dealers, and the purchasing public generally, of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unrestricted or free and fair competition in trade in the sponge industry; and otherwise to operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

(c) To prejudice and injure the public and producers of sponges, dealers, distributors, and others who do not conform to, or cooperate in, the program of respondents.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, corporations, and individuals named above, under the conditions and circumstances set forth in the foregoing findings of fact are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Order

1. Entering into, continuing or carrying out any understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, either individually or as members of an association, with the Florida Sponge Packers Association or The Sponge Institute, or any of their individual members, or with any other person, firm, or corporation, which is designed to or has a tendency

(a) To fix prices so as to lower the price of sponges in favor of members of The Sponge Institute as against nonmembers, or to lower the price in favor of certain wholesale distributors as against other purchasers of sponges, or to fix the prices at which sponges are bought and sold.
(b) To limit sales of sponges to any select individuals or group of individuals or to members of The Sponge Institute or distributors approved by it or its members.

(c) To limit purchases of sponges to any select individuals or group of individuals or to members of the Florida Sponge Packers Association or sponge packers approved by it or its members.

(d) To monopolize in any select group of wholesale distributors, sponge packers, association members, or dealers the business of dealing in and distributing sponges produced in Florida.

2. From publishing or circulating lists of or exchanging information regarding

(a) Sponge packers who fail to deal exclusively with members of The Sponge Institute or wholesale distributors selected by it or its members.

(b) Wholesale distributors who have agreed to purchase only from members of the Florida Sponge Packers Association, or sponge packers approved by The Sponge Institute, or the Florida Sponge Packers Association or their members.

3. The use of any cooperative or concerted action by respondents acting individually or through and by means of associations, their members, representatives, officers, and agents, to promote, establish, or carry out any understanding, agreement, or combination for the purpose and with the effect of unlawfully restricting, restraining, monopolizing, suppressing, and eliminating competition in the sale and distribution of sponges.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PHILIP H. KOOLISH, JR., INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS PACIFIC COAST SPECIALTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of clocks, cameras, and electric shavers; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said merchandise—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was to be distributed to members of consuming public by lot or chance, and which involved distribution of descriptive literature, order blanks, and circular letters and instructions and push cards for distribution of said products under plan, in accordance with which customer paid for chance varying amount, dependent upon number pushed by chance, and received article being thus disposed of or nothing other than chance, in accordance with success or failure in selecting from list of feminine names, name, or names, as case might be, corresponding to name or names concealed under card's master seal or under card's two master seals, as case might be, and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others, means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise in accordance with such plans under which said merchandise was distributed to the purchasing public, and amount which customer paid for chance was determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure his said merchandise at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several States, and in competition with those engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise who do not sell the same by use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes;

With result that many purchasers of his said merchandise were attracted by element of chance involved in his said sales method and were thereby induced to purchase such products in preference to same or similar merchandise offered and sold by competitors who do not use such or similar methods, and public purchased, by reason of such preference, substantial volume of his said goods, and trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry O. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Philip H. Koolish, Jr., individually and trading as Pacific Coast Specialty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of Pacific Coast Specialty Company with his principal office and place of business located at 1232 Westchester Place in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. He is now, and for several months last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including, among others, clocks, cameras; and razors, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused such merchandise when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles to purchasers thereof in the State of California and in other States of the United States at their respective places of location. There is now, and has been for several months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance. Said devices and plans of merchandising consist of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public, was and is substantially as follows: The push cards have a number of partially perforated disks, and when a push is made and the disk is separated from the card a number is disclosed. There are as many separate numbers as there are disks on the card, but the numbers are varied or assorted and are not arranged in numerical sequence. The numbers on said disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The price of sales varies, depending upon the number obtained. Numbers from 1 to 29 pay the amount of the number in cents. Numbers over 29 pay 29¢. Directly below each disk there is printed a girl's name, and the card has a space prepared for recording the name of each purchaser of a disk opposite the corresponding girl's name. The card also has a master seal which, when removed, exposes a girl's name corresponding to one of those appearing under said disks. The purchaser who pushed the disk corresponding to the name under the master seal is entitled to a specified article of merchandise. The name under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all sales have been made and the master seal removed. Purchasers who select names other than the name appearing under the master seal do not receive anything for their money other than the privilege of pushing a disk from said card. The said articles of merchandise are of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives a specified article of merchandise or nothing for his money is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. Other push cards furnished and distributed by respondent for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise involve the same principle but vary in detail.

Par. 3. Respondent forwards his push cards, together with various descriptive literature and with instructions as to how to operate said push cards or explaining what to do in order to obtain said articles of merchandise, to various members of the public, and a substantial amount of such merchandise is sold or distributed by such persons by means of said pushcards and in accordance with the instructions furnished by respondent. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make or sell merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale or distribution thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell or distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 20, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Philip H. Koolish, Jr., individually, and trading as Pacific Coast Specialty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief or requested oral argument), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Philip H. Koolish, Jr., is an individual, doing business under the trade name of the Pacific Coast Specialty Co., with his principal office and place of business located in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing clocks, cameras, and electric shavers. During the time above-mentioned respondent has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made.

Respondent has been at all times mentioned herein, and now is, in substantial competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In so carrying on his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing his merchandise, furnishes, and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was to be distributed to members of the consuming public wholly by lot or chance. The methods used by respondent to sell his merchandise were as follows: Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public devices commonly known as push cards. Printed and set out on said push cards were detailed instructions for the operation thereof and accompanying said push cards were certain descriptive literature, order blanks and circular letters. The said order blanks and circular letters contained additional instructions explaining in detail the manner in which said push cards were to be used in the sale and distribution of said merchandise. Each of the push cards has printed thereon a number of feminine names, together with blank spaces, opposite an alphabetical list of the names, for writing in the names of the customers who purchased chances on the push cards. Each push card has a corresponding number of perforated disks marked "push," and immediately above each disk was printed one of the feminine names printed elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk was a number which was disclosed when the disk was pushed or separated from the card. Each card had either one or two master seals, concealed within each of which was one of the feminine names. When all the names had been selected by the customers, and the master seal removed, the person who had selected the name corresponding to the name concealed within the master seal received the article of merchandise specified, without further charge. The customer paid in cents the number indicated when the disk was removed or pushed from the card. The customer who pushed or removed the disks on said cards which revealed numbers higher than 29 cents, paid only 29 cents.
Customers who selected names which did not correspond with the name revealed by removal of the master seal received nothing for their money but the privilege of making a selection, or pushing the disk from said card. In this manner the respondent has sold and distributed a substantial number of his said articles of merchandise to members of the general public.

The Commission finds that respondent's merchandise was distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer paid for a chance was determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished his said push cards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent has thus supplied to, and placed in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with his sales plan hereinabove described. The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public as hereinabove described involved a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof, and that the use of said lottery method in the sale and distribution of merchandise is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States who do not sell their merchandise by the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. Many purchasers of respondent's merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales method, and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the same or similar merchandise offered for sale, and sold by respondent's competitors, who did not, and who do not use the same or similar methods. Because of the said preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed by attorneys for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief nor requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Philip H. Koolish, Jr., individually and trading as Pacific Coast Specialty Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, cameras, and electric shavers, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery device, for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

ALBERT E. BERGER TRADING AS RUN-PROOF LABORATORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in advertising, selling, and distributing a preparation for treatment of silk and rayon hosiery and lingerie, under trade name "Run-Proof," to dealers and purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in similar sale and distribution of similar preparations or other products intended and used for same purposes and uses, and including those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective businesses or nature and character of their respective products, and do not make use of such misleading representations as below set forth—

(a) Represented, through use of words "Run-Proof," "Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc.,” "Run-Proof Laboratories, Manufacturers of Run-Proof," that said product, when applied to silk and rayon apparel, would render the same proof against runs, rips, snags, breaks, and ladders, facts being it would not accomplish such results; with tendency and capacity to mislead, deceive, and influence a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that it would render apparel aforesaid proof against runs, etc.; and

(b) Represented, through use of corporate name "Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc.,” "Manufacturers," and "Run-Proof Laboratories, Manufacturers of Run-Proof," that he made said preparation, or owned, operated, or controlled a laboratory in which such product was analyzed and tested, facts being he neither owned nor operated plant, factory or laboratory in which same was made, and did not directly or indirectly control such plant, factory, or laboratory, but filled orders from purchasers with quantities of preparation made in a plant, factory or laboratory which he did not own, operate, or control; with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into the belief that he was the manufacturer thereof and maintained a laboratory and employed the same in connection with such manufacture;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of said product on account of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs thus induced, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to him from competitors who do not, in sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of same or similar misrepresentations; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the conditions and circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes and Mr. John N. Wheelock for the Commission.

Mr. William Jaffe, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Albert E. Berger, individually, and trading as Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., herein-after referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Albert E. Berger, is an individual operating and doing business under the trade name, Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., with his principal office and place of business located at 134 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, Albert E. Berger, operating under the trade name Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., has been for more than 1 year last past, and is now, engaged in the business of advertising, selling, and distributing a preparation for the treatment of silk and rayon hosiery and lingerie which he advertises under the trade name "Run-Proof." Said respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, his said preparation to be sold through advertisements and causes same, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to dealers and purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in said product so sold, distributed, and transported by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is now, and has been during all the time hereinabove stated, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing similar preparations or other products intended and used for the same purposes and uses for which respondent's said preparation is sold in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of the business set out and described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the said product offered for sale and sold by him, has published and circulated misleading and deceptive statements to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States, by mail, newspaper advertisements, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature and on wrappers in which the said product "Run-Proof" is packed when displayed and offered for sale to ultimate users. In all of said advertisements respondent represents that the preparation designated as "Run-Proof" makes hosiery run-proof and makes hosiery "proof against snags and runs." In describing his business status, respondent has caused the names and designations, "manufacturers" and "laboratories," to be prominently and conspicuously displayed together with other representations. Among such statements and representations, the following are typical examples:

Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., manufacturers of run-proof.
Amazing invention makes hosiery "Run-Proof."
Run-Proof—resist runs—rips—snags—breaks in silk or rayon hosiery or lingerie.
Makes Silk and Rayon Hosiery and Lingerie proof against heart-breaking runs and "ladders".

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with other representations not herein set out in full, serve as representations on the part of respondent that he is the manufacturer of said product; that respondent owns and operates a laboratory where said product is tested and analyzed and its value, functions, purposes, and uses are determined; and that the said preparation "Run-Proof" is proof against, and will prevent, runs and snags in silk and rayon hosiery, lingeries, and like products.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact respondent's aforesaid preparation "Run-Proof" is not proof against, and will not prevent runs and snags in silk and rayon hosiery and lingerie. Respondent does not own or operate a laboratory. Respondent is not a manufacturer and does not manufacture said product "Run-Proof."

PAR. 5. The aforesaid false and misleading representations by respondent have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public, relying upon respondent's said representations, to purchase respondent's said product "Run-Proof" under the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that said preparation is proof against, and will prevent, runs and snags in silk and rayon hosiery, lingerie, and like products; that respondent owns and operates a laboratory where said product is analyzed and tested; and that respondent is the manufacturer of said product. Thereby, trade has been unfairly diverted from competitors of respondent engaged in the selling of preparations similar to those sold by respondent, or other products designed for similar usage, who do not misrepresent their status or the qualities, functions and uses of their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondent Albert E. Berger, individually and trading as Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., charging respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of section 5 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, to which respondent made no answer, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John Wheelock, an attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by William Jaffee for the respondent, and said testimony and other evidence has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the testimony and other evidence and brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Albert E. Berger, is an individual operating and doing business under the trade name, Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., with his principal office and place of business located at 134 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, since January 21, 1937, has been operating under such trade name, Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., and is now engaged in the business of advertising, selling and distributing a preparation for the treatment of silk and rayon hosiery and lingerie which he advertises under the trade name "Run-Proof." Said respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, his said preparation to be sold through advertisements, as stated in paragraph 3 hereof, and causes same, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in Chicago,
Findings

I\. to dealers and purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade in said product so sold, distributed, and transported by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is now, and has been during all the time hereinabove stated, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing similar preparations or other products intended and used for the same purposes and uses for which respondent's said preparation is sold in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the said product offered for sale and sold by him has published and circulated, by means of inscriptions on the container or package in which the said preparation "Run-Proof" was and is contained, in commerce as aforesaid, and also on invoices which the respondent sent to purchasers of the preparation situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, the following representations and statements with reference to the manufacture and quality of the product:

Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc.
Manufacturers Run-Proof
Run-Proof Laboratories, Manufacturers of Run-Proof

Par. 4. The respondent does not and never has manufactured the preparation he designates as "Run-Proof," sold and distributed in commerce as aforesaid. The respondent does not own and never has owned or operated directly the plant, factory, or laboratory in which such preparation was and is manufactured; neither has he directly or indirectly controlled such plant, factory or laboratory. Respondent, in the course of his business, fills orders from purchasers thereof with quantities of the preparation which is manufactured in a plant, factory, or laboratory which he did not and does not own, operate, or control.

Par. 5. The product sold and distributed by respondent was originally sold in commerce by Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., which was a corporation located in Chicago, Ill. This corporation became bankrupt, and the assets thereof were disposed of by sale in the course of the bankruptcy proceedings incident to its dissolution on January 21, 1937. As a purchaser at such sale, the respondent, Albert E. Berger, acquired the office equipment and quantities of the preparation and the legal right to use of the trade name "Run-Proof" used by the corporation, and also the legal right to the use of the corporate name "Run-Proof Laboratories." Respondent, after and since January 21, 1937, continued the use of the trade name, as herein set out, in describing and advertising the product as herein stated. The corporation was engaged for many years prior to 1937 in selling such preparation in commerce.

Par. 6. The preparation designated "Run-Proof" when applied to silk, rayon hosiery, and lingerie will not render such apparel to be proof against runs, rips, or snags. The preparation is designed and intended to render such effect, and the use of the words "Run-Proof" in branding and labeling the preparation has the tendency and capacity to mislead, deceive, and influence a substantial portion of the purchasing public to erroneously believe the preparation will render the apparel aforesaid proof against runs, rips and snags by the application thereof to such apparel.

Par. 7. The use of the words "Run-Proof, Laboratories, Inc.," "Manufacturers," and "Run-Proof Laboratories, Manufacturers of Run-Proof" in respondent's branding and labeling of the preparation has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that the respondent is the manufacturer of the preparation and maintains a laboratory, or laboratories, and employs such laboratory or laboratories in connection with the manufacture of the preparation.

Par. 8. There are among the respondent's competitors in commerce as set out in paragraph 2 herein, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective businesses and who do not misrepresent in any way the nature and character of their respective products and do not make use of the misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

Par. 9. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondent, in offering for sale and selling his product as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted from competitors of respondent who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Albert E. Berger, an individual, under the conditions and circumstances set forth in the foregoing findings of fact, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, no answer having been filed by the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before R. S. Hall, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Albert E. Berger, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of the preparation now known as, and sold under the name, "Run-Proof," for the treatment of silk and rayon hosiery and lingerie, or any other product of substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing through the use of the words "Run-Proof," "Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc.,” "Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc., Manufacturers of Run-Proof," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, or in any other manner, that the product "Run-Proof" when applied to silk and rayon apparel will render such apparel proof against runs, rips, snags, breaks, and ladders.

2. Representing through the use of the corporate or trade name "Run-Proof Laboratories, Inc.,” or any other words of similar import or meaning, or in any other manner, that respondent owns, operates, or controls a laboratory where the product "Run-Proof" is analyzed and tested, unless and until the respondent actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls, a laboratory wherein such product is analyzed and tested.

3. Representing through the use of the words "Manufacturer" or "Manufacturers of Run-Proof" that respondent owns, operates or controls a factory, and makes the product "Run-Proof," unless and until the respondent actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls, a manufacturing plant wherein such product is manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

ISRAEL RASKIN TRADING AS L. & M. MERCANTILE COMPANY, AND GEORGE R. CRAGGETT TRADING AS MISSOURI VALLEY PAINT MANUFACTURING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in manufacture and sale of paint, and second individual engaged in sale and distribution of such product of former, and in selling, as thus engaged, their said products to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such products in commerce among the various States and in said District, and acting together in the acts and practices below set forth, and at the instance one of the other—

(a) Designated and labeled as "Certified Double Body Guaranteed Ready Mixed Paint—White," certain white product thus made and dealt in by them, and set forth on label on front of container thereof that it "Contains White Lead, Zinc Oxide, and Linseed Oil";

(b) Set forth, also, on label placed on such container, analysis purporting to show composition of said product, and setting forth as composition thereof, among other ingredients, "White Lead, Zinc, and Calcited Lithopone" as 47.17 percent, "Carbonate of Calcium" as 17.86 percent, "Oxide of Silicon" as 5.78 percent, "Linseed and Weatherproofing Oils" as 21.77 percent, and "Solution Oil of Pine" as 1.17 percent;

Facts being said product, thus described and labeled, contained so little white lead, zinc, and linseed oil that it had little or no value for use as paint, and did not contain ingredients set out in proportions stated in such purported analysis, but had white lead, zinc, and calcited lithopone content of approximately 10 percent less than stated, with white lead and zinc content so small as to have no value, contained about 14 percent more carbonate of calcium than there set forth, and 22 percent more silicon content, and water in large quantities, presence of which was concealed through use of term "Solution Oil of Pine," and no tung oil, contrary to impression implicit in use of words "Weatherproofing Oils";

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasing public, through their said false, misleading, and deceptive acts and practices in labeling and representing and describing their said product, as above set out, as being a certified double body guaranteed ready mixed white paint containing white lead, zinc, and linseed oil in substantial quantities, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations were true, and of causing substantial number of such public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to buy their said product in preference to products of competitors who truthfully label and represent the same and the manufacture thereof; and

(c) Represented name of manufacture of said paint on front label aforesaid as being "The National Paint Co., Chicago, Ill., Tulsa, Okla.,” notwithstandinging fact there was no such company maintaining offices at said addresses, and said products, sold under said name, were not manufactured by such a company, but were made by individual aforesaid and sold and distributed by him and said other individual as above set out; with effect of misleading prospective purchasers into erroneous belief that such paint product was made by company known as "The National Paint Company," and which maintained places of business in Chicago and Tulsa;

With result that their said acts and practices, as above set forth, unfairly diverted to themselves trade in said commerce from many competitors who sell and distribute in said commerce ready-mixed white paint similar in general appearance to their above-described product, but which are in fact ready-mixed white paints of good quality, composed largely of and containing substantial quantities of, white lead, zinc, and linseed oil, and who in no wise misrepresent the character of their said products or their ingredients or the manufacturers thereof; to their injury and to that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.
Watson, Ess, Groner, Barnett & Whittaker, of Kansas City, Mo., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Israel Raskin, individually and trading as L. & M. Mercantile Co., and George R. Craggett, trading as Missouri Valley Paint Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Israel Raskin is an individual trading as L. & M. Mercantile Co. and having his office and principal place of business located at 3313 Brooklyn Avenue, in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri. Respondent George R. Craggett is an individual trading as Missouri Valley Paint Manufacturing Co. and having his office and principal place of business at 22-24 West Third Street, in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri.

Par. 2. Respondent George R. Craggett is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of paints and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent Israel Raskin is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of the paint products.
manufactured by respondent George R. Craggett in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business as aforesaid to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their businesses as aforesaid respondents are, and have been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of paint products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. Among the paint products manufactured by the respondent George R. Craggett and sold and distributed by him and the respondent Israel Raskin in said commerce is a white paint product, which the respondent George R. Craggett, under the direction of, and in cooperation and concert with, the respondent Israel Raskin, manufactures, and designates and labels “Certified Double Body Guaranteed Ready Mixed Paint—White,” with a statement on the label on the front of the container for said product stating that it “Contains White Lead, Zinc Oxide, and Linseed Oil.” The name of the manufacturer of said paint, on said front label, is represented as being the “National Paint Co., Chicago, Ill., Tulsa, Okla.” Respondents also place on the container for said paint a label purporting to show the composition of the paint therein contained, which is as follows:

\begin{array}{lrr}
\text{COMPOSITION} & \text{Percent} \\
\hline
\text{White Lead, Zinc, and Calcited Lithopone} & 47.17 \\
\text{Carbonate of Calcium} & 17.86 \\
\text{Oxide of Silicon} & 5.78 \\
\text{Linseed and Weatherproofing Oils} & 21.77 \\
\text{White Blended Varnish Oil} & 2.49 \\
\text{Volatile Mineral Solvents} & 3.76 \\
\text{Solution Oil of Pine} & 1.17 \\
\hline
\text{100.00}
\end{array}

The respondent George R. Craggett causes said paint, so labeled, upon the order and direction of the respondent Israel Raskin, to be shipped and delivered from his said place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. Certain of said paint, so labeled, is delivered by the respondent George R. Craggett to the respondent Israel Raskin, who then transports said paint from his place of business in the State of Missouri into the several States of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, where he offers said paint for sale to farmers and others, either at private sale or at so-called farmers' auctions.

Par. 5. Said product, when marketed by respondents, is similar in appearance, color, and packing to white paint of good quality, but in truth and in fact said product contains so little white lead, zinc, and linseed oil that it has little or no value for use as paint. The statement as to the composition of the paint, as made by respondents, is false and misleading in that it does not contain the ingredients set out therein in the proportions stated. The white lead, zinc, and calcited lithopone content is approximately 37.2 percent, rather than 47.17 percent as stated, and the white lead and zinc content contained therein is so small in amount that it has no value. The product sold by respondents contains 13.9 percent more carbonate of calcium than is represented on the label. The oxide of silicon content is 22.4 percent greater than stated on the label. The use of the term "Solution of Oil of Pine" avoids disclosing the presence of water, which respondents' product contains in large percentage. The use of the words "Weatherproofing Oils" on the label has a tendency to, and does, convey the impression that tung oil is present, when in truth and in fact no such oil is a part of the product.

Par. 6. The use of the name "National Paint Co." and the addresses "Chicago, Ill." and "Tulsa, Okla." has a tendency to, and does, mislead prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that such paint product is manufactured by a company known as the National Paint Co. which maintains places of business in Chicago, Ill. and Tulsa, Okla., when in truth and in fact there is no "National Paint Co." maintaining offices at said addresses, and said products sold under said name are not manufactured by the "National Paint Co." but are manufactured by the respondent George R. Craggett and are sold and distributed by said respondent and respondent Israel Raskin, as hereinabove alleged.

Par. 7. Respondents' acts and practices in labeling, and representing and describing, their said product, as hereinabove set forth, as being a certified double body guaranteed ready mixed white paint containing white lead, zinc, and linseed oil in substantial quantities are false, misleading, and deceptive, and have a capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and cause a substantial number of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said product in preference to the products of their competitors who truthfully label and represent their said products and the manufacture thereof.
Findings

28 F. T. C.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondents, mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof, many who sell and distribute in competition with respondents in said commerce ready mixed white paints similar in general appearance to respondents' above described product, but which are in fact ready mixed white paints of good quality composed largely of, and containing substantial quantities of, white lead, zinc, and linseed oil, and which competitors in nowise misrepresent the character of said products or their ingredients or the manufacturers thereof.

Respondents' acts and practices, as hereinabove set forth, have a capacity and tendency to, and do, unfairly divert to said respondents from said competitors trade in said commerce, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 30, 1938, issued, and on October 3, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Israel Raskin, and George R. Craggett charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw their said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answers and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Israel Raskin, is an individual trading as L. & M. Mercantile Co. and his office and principal place of business is located at 3313 Brooklyn Avenue in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri.

Respondent George R. Craggett is an individual trading as Missouri Valley Paint Manufacturing Co. and his office and principal place of business is located at 22-24 West Third Street in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri.

PAR. 2. Respondent George R. Craggett is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of paints and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent Israel Raskin is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of the paint products manufactured by respondent George R. Craggett in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business as aforesaid to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their businesses as aforesaid respondents are, and have been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of paint products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent George R. Craggett causes said paint, so labeled, upon the order and direction of the respondent Israel Raskin, to be shipped and delivered from his said place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. Certain of said paint, so labeled, is delivered by the respondent George R. Craggett to the respondent Israel Raskin, who then transports said paint from his place of business in the State of Missouri into the several States of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, where he offers said paint for sale to farmers and others, either at private sale or at so-called farmers' auctions.

PAR. 5. Said product, when marketed by respondents, is similar in appearance, color, and packing to white paint of good quality, but in truth and in fact said product contains so little white lead, zinc and linseed oil that it has little or no value for use as paint. The statement as to the composition of the paint, as made by respondents, is false and misleading in that it does not contain the ingredients set out therein in the proportions stated. The white lead, zinc, and calcited lithopone content is approximately 37.2 percent, rather than 47.17 percent as stated, and the white lead and zinc content therein is so small in amount that it has no value. The product sold by respondents contains 13.9 percent more carbonate of calcium than is represented on the label. The oxide of silicon content is 22.4 percent greater than stated on the label.

The use of the term "Solution of Oil of Pine" avoids disclosing the presence of water, which respondents' product contains in large percentage. The use of the words "Weatherproofing Oils" on the label has a tendency to, and does, convey the impression that tung oil is present, when in truth and in fact no such oil is a part of the product.
Conclusion

PAR. 6. The use of the name "National Paint Co." and the addresses "Chicago, Ill." and "Tulsa, Okla." has a tendency to and does mislead prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that such paint product is manufactured by a company known as the National Paint Co. which maintains places of business in Chicago, Ill., and Tulsa, Okla., when in truth and in fact there is no "National Paint Company" maintaining offices at said addresses, and said products sold under said name are not manufactured by "National Paint Co." but are manufactured by the respondent George R. Craggett and are sold and distributed by said respondent and respondent Israel Raskin, as hereinabove alleged.

PAR. 7. Respondents' acts and practices in labeling and representing and describing their said product, as hereinabove set forth, as being a certified double body guaranteed ready mixed white paint containing white lead, zinc, and linseed oil in substantial quantities are false, misleading, and deceptive, and have a capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and cause a substantial number of the purchasing public because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' said product in preference to the products of their competitors who truthfully label and represent their said products and the manufacture thereof.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondents, mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof, many who sell and distribute in competition with respondents in said commerce ready mixed white paint similar in general appearance to respondents' above-described product but which are in fact ready mixed white paints of good quality composed largely of, and containing substantial quantities of, white lead, zinc, and linseed oil, and which competitors in no wise misrepresent the character of said products or their ingredients or the manufacturers thereof.

Respondents' acts and practices, as hereinabove set forth, have a capacity and tendency to, and do, unfairly divert to said respondents from said competitors trade in said commerce to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of respondents, in which answers respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Israel Raskin and George R. Cragget, individually, and trading as L. & M. Mercantile Co. and Missouri Valley Paint Manufacturing Co., respectively, or under any other name or names, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of paint products, or other like articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Labeling or selling as paint any product which does not contain the necessary ingredients in quantities sufficient to give it the quality, character, or value of paint.

2. Using the words "lead" or "zinc," or any other words of similar import, to designate, describe, or refer to any paint product or any pigment content thereof when such paint products do not contain sufficient quantities of such lead, zinc, or other ingredient to give such paint products the quality, character or value implied by the use of such words.

3. Using any analysis on labels, in advertising or in any other way which does not truthfully and accurately state the ingredients contained in said products and the proportion in which each appears.

4. Representing on labels or in advertising in any other way, expressly or by implication, that their paint products are composed of white lead, zinc oxide, and linseed oil, unless and until the pigment content of such paint products, exclusive of necessary coloring matter, is composed wholly of white lead and zinc oxide, and the nonvolatile liquid content, exclusive of necessary driers, is composed wholly of linseed oil.

5. Representing, by labels on cans containing paint products, or in any other way, expressly or by implication, that their paint products contain white lead, zinc oxide, or linseed oil in certain proportions or percentage unless the paint products so represented contain white lead, zinc oxide, and linseed oil in the proportion or percentage represented.
6. Representing, through the use of the term "Weatherproofing Oils," or any other term of similar import or meaning, or through any other means or device, that their paint products contain tung oil or other weatherproofing oils unless such products do actually contain tung oil or such other oils in sufficient quantities to give such products the quality, character, or value implied by the use of such term.

7. Representing that their paint products are manufactured at a place other than the actual place of manufacture or that they are manufactured by or for any person, corporation or partnership other than that person, corporation, or partnership by whom or for which said paint products are actually manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Israel Raskin, and George R. Craggett, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF INSTRUCTION SERVICE, INC., AND CHARLES J. OZMENT TRADING AS INSTRUCTION SERVICE AND PERFECT PENMANSHIP INSTITUTE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation, and an individual who was president thereof and managed, controlled, and directed its policies and operations, engaged in sale and distribution of courses of study and instruction to prepare students for examinations for various civil service positions with the United States Government, and as thus engaged, in sending their courses of instruction, pamphlets, study, and question sheets, and other printed matter, written material, and equipment to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in similar sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of study and instruction, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their courses of instruction and no not make any false representations in connection with sale or distribution thereof; in advertising their courses in newspapers, magazines, and other publications circulating among the various States and in said District, and in pamphlets, circulars and other printed matter circulated to members of the purchasing public as aforesaid—

(a) Represented that men and women were constantly needed for Government positions, and that such positions were immediately available, and that anyone with only a common school education might obtain well-paying Government position, and that large numbers of prison guards, watchmen, and men for similar Government positions were needed, with no special qualifications necessary and that railway mail clerks were allowed to travel and receive allowances for expenses immediately upon appointment and were paid while off duty, facts being that men and women are not thus constantly needed, nor are such positions immediately available, many positions, in addition to high school education, require special training and experience, and there are relatively few positions available at salaries stated by them to those having only common school education, actual probable earnings available to those who may succeed in being employed after having successfully taken examination, were in many instances less than amount stated by them or available only after many years of service, no examinations were contemplated within reasonable time for prison guards, watchmen, and similar positions, in which, in addition to exacting qualifications, war veterans were given preference, and railway mail clerks were not sent out to travel immediately after being employed, but were required to serve long period of time at terminals or other stations before being allowed to travel, at least 50 percent of them received no expense allowances by reason of such circumstances or employment on short runs, and such clerks did not receive compensation when not working and were required to average 8 hours work a day for 306 days a year;
(b) Represented that civil service examinations were held frequently or almost every week throughout the United States, and that thousands of civil service positions would be available to applicants, and that appointments were made within a few days after taking examination and that applicant's grade alone determined time of appointment, facts being majority of appointments, as thus referred to, were made from civil service registers containing names of eligible persons who had theretofore taken examinations, but many of whom had been on the register for a long period, and other vacancies were filled by transfers or promotions, and, while examinations were held throughout the United States, large number thereof were open only to residents of certain cities, districts, or States, and many others required special physical qualifications and mental training, appointments were generally made no earlier than 3 months after taking of examination, and often much later, and conditions other than grade of applicant determined time of appointment;

(c) Represented that said individual was connected with the Civil Service Commission or was or had been recently employed by the Government, through such statements, on their letterheads used in connection with sale and distribution of their said courses of study and instruction, and in connection with name of said individual, as "Civil Service Expert;" "In Postal Service 5 Years. U. S. Civil Service Office About 3 Years Giving Instructions for U. S. Gov't Examinations for 29 Years," and that said individual, thus referred to and characterized, was in charge of instruction service, facts being said individual had not been for many years employed in any capacity whatsoever by the Government, and had no connection whatever with said Commission;

With capacity and tendency to cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that they were in a position to give employment to persons answering their advertisements, and that thousands of Government positions requiring only a common school education were immediately available at high salaries; and

(d) Furnished to applicants and prospective students so-called gift certificates which recited, in effect, that if such applicant or prospective student would subscribe to said courses of study within date stated on such certificate, course of penmanship would be furnished free of charge, facts being said course, conducted by said individual, did not constitute special offer or gift, but was continually and regularly offered to all applicants and prospective students and price thereof was included in that of the respective course or courses of study selected by such applicant or student;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public, through such false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements used, and disseminated as aforesaid, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, etc., were true, and of causing substantial portion of purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to buy their said courses of study and instruction, and of thereby diverting trade unfairly to them from their competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective courses of study and instruction; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William L. Penoke for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Instruction Service, Inc., a corporation, and Charles J. Ozment, individually, and trading as Instruction Service and Perfect Penmanship Institute, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Instruction Service, Inc. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri.

Respondent Charles J. Ozment is president of said corporation, managing, controlling, and directing its policies and operations. He also does business under the firm names and styles of Instruction Service and Perfect Penmanship Institute. The office and principal place of business of said respondents is in the Arcade Building, city of St. Louis and State of Missouri. Prior to the incorporation of said Instruction Service, Inc., in January 1937, respondent Charles J. Ozment for many years operated the business hereinafter described individually under the firm name and style of Ozment's Instruction Bureau.

Paragraph 2. Said respondents are now, and since on or about January 1, 1937, have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of courses of study and instruction to prepare students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government. Respondent Charles J. Ozment is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a course of instruction in penmanship. All of said courses are pursued by correspondence. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, cause said courses of instruction and the pamphlets, study and question sheets, and other printed matter and writing material and equipment to be transported from their said place of business in St. Louis, Mo., to, into and through States of the United States other than Missouri to the various purchasers thereof located in such other States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. There is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a course of trade in said several courses of study and instruction so sold and distributed by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents are now, and during all of the time mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other corporation and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of study and instruction in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said courses, respondents, by means of newspaper and magazine advertisements, pamphlets, circulars, and other printed matter circulated among the general public throughout the United States, make many representations concerning their said business and their said courses of study and instruction. Among and typical of said representations, so circulated, are the following:

It is rumored that sometime in the near future a large number of Government Positions, which are not under the classified civil service, will be classified and placed in the regular civil service and made subject to competitive civil service examinations, bringing thousands of additional positions into the classified service.

Government Watchmen and U. S. Prison Guard. Watchmen are employed in practically all Government Buildings throughout the United States and a large number are needed.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERK. * * * It is a very attractive position, regular entrance salary per month $158, maximum is $2450 per year, and hotel expense allowance when away from home more than ten hours. Entrance pay at rate of $1850 yearly for time employed. On duty a few hours per day, then go to your hotel and catch your train the next day—employed four, or perhaps six days, then off duty a few days. The subjects of examination include Mail tests, i. e., sorting, routing and following instructions, and General Tests. Appointment may be made to Terminal Service to start. Those desiring stationary employment may get this. * * *

* * * it appears very clear to me that within a very reasonable time there will be almost A MILLION CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS, and the annual turnover or number of vacancies per year should be very large. Not only this, but it is my firm belief that as general business grows better and amount of Federal revenues increase, that working hours will be shortened in Government Positions, working conditions improved, vacations lengthened, and SALARIES INCREASED BEYOND THE FONDEST DREAMS OF THOSE NOW HOLDING GOVERNMENT POSITIONS.

During 1930, '31, '32, and '33, thousands of Government vacancies occurred, and, on account of the depression, a large number of these vacancies have not been filled. Now as general business returns back toward normal, it stands to reason that many of these old vacancies will have to be filled.
Question. How soon after passing examination will I get my position? Ans. It depends upon your grade. Some are often appointed within a few days, while those who make low grades wait longer. Take our course and make a high grade.

Question. When will examination be held? Ans. Examinations of various kinds are being held at different places almost every week. When new eligibles are needed, examinations are called, and you should be ready for them.
