PAR. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations appearing in respondents' newspaper and magazine advertising, and in circulars, pamphlets, and correspondence with subscribers and prospective subscribers to their said courses of instruction are false, misleading, deceptive, and grossly exaggerated in that:

Men and women are not constantly needed for Government positions immediately available. There are many positions which, in addition to high school education, require special training and experience, and there are relatively few positions available at the salaries stated in respondents' literature to persons who have only a common school education. Railway mail clerks are not sent out to travel immediately after being employed, but have to serve a long period of time at terminals or other stations before being allowed to travel. They do not receive expense allowances as represented by respondents, nor do they receive compensation when they are not working. There are no examinations being contemplated within any reasonable time for prison guards, watchmen, and similar positions, and in addition to exacting qualifications, war veterans are given preference for such positions. While there may be thousands of appointments every year the majority of them are made from civil service registers containing the names of eligible persons who have theretofore taken the examinations and many of whom have been on the register for a long time. Other vacancies are filled by transfers or promotions. While it is true that examinations are being held throughout the United States, respondents fail to state that a large number of such examinations are open only to residents of certain cities, districts, or States, and that many others require special physical qualifications and mental training. Respondent Ozment is not now, and has not been for many years, employed in any capacity whatsoever by the United States Government and has no connection whatever with the Civil Service Commission. Said alleged free offer of a course in penmanship is a regular offer made to all applicants and prospective students of respondents, and said course is not free, but the price thereof is in fact included in the cost of the respective course of study for a civil service position for which the applicant or prospective student may subscribe.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, all of said representations are either false, misleading, or grossly exaggerated and not warranted by the facts for the following reasons:

(a) While thousands of persons may be appointed to Government positions yearly, they are in nearly all instances taken from the current register and are not appointed immediately after having taken examinations; the statement that men and women are wanted immediately to qualify for Government positions leads applicants into the erroneous belief that positions are available and that they may be employed immediately after having taken an examination. The actual or probable earnings available to those who may succeed in being employed by the Government after having successfully taken the civil service examination are, in many instances, less than the amounts stated by respondents, or are available only after many years of service with the Government.

(b) While a large number of Government positions may be classified and placed in the regular civil service in the near future and thus bring thousands of additional positions into the classified service, the employees now holding such positions would be blanketed into the civil service, with the result that there will not be thousands of additional positions.

(c) Examinations for guards were held in 1932 and the last examination for junior custodial officers was given in 1928. It has not been determined when another examination for guards or watchmen will be held. Moreover, the physical and mental qualifications for prison guards are very rigid and, as a general rule, war veterans are preferred for such positions. Respondents, in many instances, accept subscribers or students to their said courses of training without investigating whether such subscribers or students are fitted physically, mentally, or otherwise for appointment to certain of the positions for which they are being trained.
(d) Railway mail clerks are required to serve 4 or 5 years in a terminal station before being allowed to travel and no allowances for meals or hotels are granted during that time; at least 50 percent of all railway mail clerks receive no expense allowances for the reason that they are employed on short runs or at terminals. Railway mail clerks are required to average 8 hours work a day for 306 days a year and at east a third of the entire force of said clerks are employed at terminals or in offices for 8 hours a day with no periods of time off.

(e) The representation that "within a very reasonable time there will be almost a million civil service positions" when read in conjunction with other representations is calculated to convey the impression to the minds of ignorant persons and those eager for employment that there are many vacancies to be filled. While there may be improvements from time to time, it is not likely that vacations will be lengthened and salaries increased beyond the fondest dreams of Government employees.

(f) Although many vacancies may have occurred in classified civil service during the depression years because of a general policy of all Government agencies to economize, a substantial number of such vacancies have been filled; and the implication that a large number of vacancies have to be filled now, is not justified by the facts.

(g) The phraseology implies that appointments to positions are always made within a few days or soon thereafter and that the applicant's grade alone determines the time of appointment, when in fact appointments are generally made no earlier than 3 months after the taking of the examinations and often much later; and conditions other than the grade of the applicant determine the time of appointment.

(h) While large numbers of local examinations are held in various sections of the country, many of said examinations are not of a general nature but are confined only to residents of certain cities, districts, or States.

(i) The statement as to respondent Ozment's former employment with the Government together with the representation that he is "giving instructions for U. S. Gov't Examinations for 29 Years" and is a civil service expert, creates the impression and implies that said respondent is at present employed in some capacity by the United States Civil Service Commission.

(j) The many misstatements of fact, half truths, and exaggerations which appear throughout the pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other advertising matter of respondents all combine to create in the minds of the ignorant and unwary the impression that respondents are in a position to give employment to persons answering their advertisements; and that thousands of Government positions requiring only a common school education are immediately available at high salaries.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents, as an inducement to subscribe to said courses of study, furnish to applicants and prospective students so-called gift certificates, which recite in effect that if such applicant or prospective student will subscribe to said courses of study within the date stated on said certificate a course of penmanship valued at five dollars will be furnished free of charge to said applicant or prospective student. In truth and in fact, said offer is false and misleading in that said course of penmanship does not constitute a special offer nor a gift, but is continuously and regularly offered to all applicants and prospective students and the price of said course is in fact included in the price of the respective course or courses of study selected by the applicant or prospective student.

PAR. 9. The statements and representations so made by respondents in the manner and by the means hereinabove alleged, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of said courses of study and training into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to induce them to act on such belief and to purchase and pay for respondents' courses of study and instruction. Thereby trade is diverted unfairly to respondents from respondents' competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. Among the competitors of the respondents described in paragraph 4 hereof are many who do not in any manner use misrepresentations in connection with the sale and distribution of their said correspondence courses of instruction.

PAR. 11. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 8th day of October 1938, issued, and on the 12th day of October 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Instruction Service, Inc., a corporation, and Charles J. the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Instruction Service, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri.

Respondent, Charles J. Ozment, is the president of said corporation and manages, controls, and directs the policies and operations of said corporation with respect to the acts and practices hereinafter set forth. Respondent Ozment also does business under the names and styles of Instruction Service and Perfect Penmanship Institute.

The office and principal place of business of said respondents is in the Arcade Building, city of St. Louis, State of Missouri. Prior to the incorporation in January 1937 of said respondent Instruction Service, Inc., respondent Ozment for many years operated the business hereinafter described, individually, under the firm name and style of Ozment's Instruction Bureau.

Paragraph 2. The respondents are now, and since on or about January 1, 1937, have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of courses of study and instruction to prepare students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions in the United States Government. Respondent Ozment is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a course of instruction in penmanship. All of said courses are pursued by correspondence. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, the respondents cause said courses of instruction and the pamphlets, study and question sheets and other printed matter, writing material, and equipment, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said courses of study and instruction among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, the respondents are now, and during all the times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of study and instruction. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their correspondence courses of study and instruction and who do not make any false representations in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective correspondence courses of study and instruction.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said courses, the respondents have caused statements and representations to be published in newspapers, magazines, and other publications having a circulation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in pamphlets, circulars and other printed matter circulated to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the statements and representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

It is rumored that sometime in the near future a large number of Government Positions, which are not under the classified Civil Service, will be classified and placed in the regular Civil Service and made subject to competitive Civil Service examinations—bringing thousands of additional positions into the classified service.

Government Watchmen and U. S. Prison Guard. Watchmen are employed in practically all Government Buildings throughout the United States and a large number are needed.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERK. • • • It is a very attractive position, regular entrance salary per month $158, maximum is $2450 per year, and hotel expense allowance when away from home more than ten hours. Entrance pay at rate of $1850 yearly for time employed. On duty a few hours per day, then go to your hotel and catch your train the next day—employed four, or perhaps six days, then off duty a few days. The subjects of examination include Mail Tests, i.e., sorting, routing and following instructions, and General Tests. Appointment may be made to Terminal Service to start. Those desiring stationary employment may get this.

* * *

It appears very clear to me that within a very reasonable time there will be almost a MILLION CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS, and the annual turnover or number of vacancies per year should be very large. Not only this, but it is my firm belief that as general business grows better and amount of Federal revenues increase, that working hours will be shortened in Government Positions, working conditions improved, vacations lengthened, and SALARIES INCREASED BEYOND THE FONDEST DREAMS OF THOSE NOW HOLDING GOVERNMENT POSITIONS.

During 1930, '31, '32, and '33, thousands of Government vacancies occurred, and, on account of the depression, a large number of these vacancies have not been filled. Now as general business returns back toward normal, it stands to reason that many of these old vacancies will have to be filled.

Question. How soon after passing examinations will I get my position? Ans. It depends upon your grade. Some are often appointed within a few days, while those who make low grades wait longer. Take our course and make a high grade.

Question. When will examination be held? Ans. Examinations of various kinds are being held at different places almost every week. When new eligibles are needed, examinations are called, and you should be ready for them.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations, used and disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid, are false, misleading, deceptive, and grossly exaggerated.

In truth and in fact, men and women are not constantly needed for Government positions, and such positions are not immediately available. ing employed by the Government after having successfully taken the civil service examination are in many instances less than the amounts stated by respondents or are available only after many years of service with the Government. At least 50 percent of such clerks receive no expense allowances for the reason that they are employed on short runs or at terminals. Such clerks do not receive compensation when they are not working and they are required to average eight hours work a day for 306 days a year.

There are no examinations being contemplated within a reasonable time for prison guards, watchmen, and similar positions and, in addition to exacting qualifications, war veterans are given preference for such positions. There may be thousands of appointments each year in the civil service, but the majority of such appointments are made from civil service registers containing the names of eligible persons who have theretofore taken the examinations, and many of whom have been on the register for a long period of time. Other vacancies are filled by transfers or promotions. Examinations for the civil service are being held throughout the United States, but respondents fail to state that a large number of such examinations are open only to residents of certain cities, districts, or States, and that many other of such examinations require special physical qualifications and mental training.

The respondents represent, in the advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, that appointments to positions in the civil service are always made within a few days after the taking of the examination by the applicant or soon thereafter, and that the applicant’s grade alone determines the time of appointment. In truth and in fact, appointments are generally made no earlier than 3 months after the taking of examinations and often much later, and conditions other than the grade of the applicant determine the time of the appointment.

The statement used and disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid relative to respondent Ozment’s former employment by the Government, together with the representation that he has been “giving instructions for U. S. Gov’t. Examinations for 29 years” and is a civil service expert, has the tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that said respondent is at present employed in some capacity by the United States Civil Service Commission. In truth and in fact, respondent Ozment is not now and has not been for many years employed in any capacity whatsoever by the United States Government and has no connection whatever with the Civil Service Commission.

The statements and representations, disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents are in a position to give employment to persons answering their advertisements and that thousands of Government positions requiring only a common school education are immediately available at high salaries.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents, as an inducement to subscribe to said courses of study, furnish to applicants and prospective students so-called gift certificates, which recite in effect that if such applicant or prospective student will subscribe to said courses of study within the date stated on said certificate a course of penmanship valued at five dollars will be furnished free of charge to said applicant or prospective student. Par. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements used and disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said courses of study and instruction has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' courses of study and instruction. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective courses of study and instruction. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further, hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Instruction Service, Inc., a corporation, and its officers, and Charles J. Ozment, individually and trading as Instruction Service and Perfect Penmanship Institute, or under any other name, their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of correspondence courses of study and instruction for Civil Service positions and in penmanship, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or indirectly that:

1. Men and women are constantly needed for Government positions and that such positions are immediately available.
2. Any person having only a common school education may obtain a well-paying Government position.
3. Railway mail clerks are allowed to travel and receive allowances for expenses immediately upon appointment and are paid while off duty.
4. Large numbers of prison guards, watchmen, and men for similar Government positions are needed and that no special qualifications are necessary for such positions.
5. Various civil service examinations are held frequently or almost every week throughout the United States, without stating that a large number of such examinations are restricted to residents in certain localities.
6. Thousands of civil service positions will be available to applicants, unless the true facts are disclosed with respect to the method under which the majority of such positions are filled.
7. Appointments to civil service positions are made within a few days after the taking of an examination or soon thereafter; and that the applicant's grade alone without any other consideration determines the time of appointment.
8. Respondent Ozment has any connection with the United States Civil Service Commission or is now or within recent years has been employed by the United States Government in any capacity.

9. The course in penmanship is furnished free or without cost with the purchase of any of respondents' courses of instruction in civil service training, when said course in penmanship is a regular offer made by respondents to all applicants and prospective students and the price thereof is in fact included in the cost of the respective course of study for which an applicant may subscribe.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

W. S. LIBBEBY COMPANY

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of blankets, and in sale and distribution thereof under trade name "Golden Fleece," to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution, as aforesaid, of such blankets, and including those who do not, through use of labels, falsely represent that the material from which their blankets are made is composed chiefly, or entirely, of wool, when such is not the fact—

Represented, through use of "fleece" in its trade name and on labels attached to its said blankets, to members of the purchasing public, that such products were made from material composed entirely of wool, or that chief constituent thereof was wool, facts being they were made chiefly, if not entirely, of cotton, and wool content thereof was negligible;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that composition thereof was chiefly, if not entirely, wool, and with result that substantial portion of such public, acting upon such erroneous and mistaken belief and by reason of preference for such blankets made from wool rather than those made from materials containing other products, purchased substantial volume of said goods, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors:

Held, that such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley for the Commission.

Skelton & Mahon, of Lewiston, Maine, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that W. S. Libbey Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, W. S. Libbey Co., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Lewiston, in the State of Maine. Respondent now is, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of blankets under the trade name "Golden Fleece." Respondent causes, and has caused, its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Maine to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Maine and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a constant current of trade and commerce in such merchandise into and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent now is, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and copartnerships likewise engaged in the manufacturing, sale, and distribution of blankets in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. A substantial majority of the blankets sold and distributed by the respondent in said commerce, as aforesaid, are labeled "Golden Fleece." Through the use of the word "fleece" in the trade name used on the labels attached to said blankets, respondent represents and implies that the blankets are made from material composed entirely of wool, or that the chief constituent of the material from which said blankets are made is wool.

In truth and in fact the blankets, labeled "Golden Fleece" and sold and distributed by the respondent in said commerce, as aforesaid, are not made from material composed entirely of wool or from material in which the chief constituent is wool, but are made from material composed chiefly, if not entirely, of cotton and the wool content thereof, if any, is negligible.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent those who manufacture and who sell and distribute blankets in said commerce who do not by their labels falsely represent and imply that the material from which said blankets are manufactured is composed chiefly or entirely of wool when such is not the fact.

Par. 5. A substantial portion of the purchasing public has a preference for blankets made from a material composed of wool rather than for blankets made from materials containing products other than wool. The use of the word "fleece" in the trade name and on the labels attached to said blankets has a tendency and capacity to, and does, lead purchasers and prospective purchasers of said blankets erroneously and mistakenly to believe that the material from which such blankets are made is chiefly, if not entirely, composed of wool.
Findings

As a result of the mistaken and erroneous belief, as aforesaid, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase blankets from the respondent, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the materials from which their products are made.

Paragraph 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 27, 1938, issued, and on October 28, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, W. S. Libbey Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, W. S. Libbey Co., is a corporation existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Lewiston, State of Maine.

Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing blankets under the trade name “Golden Fleece.” Said blankets, when sold, are transported by respondent from its office and principal place of business in the State of Maine to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a current of trade and commerce in said merchandise distributed and sold by it between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent is now and has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and copartner­ships likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing blankets in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. A substantial majority of the blankets sold and distributed by respondent, as aforesaid, are labeled “Golden Fleece.” Respond­ent’s use of the word “fleece” in its trade name and on labels attached to its blankets serves as a representation to members of the purchasing public that respondent’s blankets are made from material composed entirely of wool, or that the chief constituent from which said blankets are made is wool.

In truth and in fact the blankets, labeled “Golden Fleece,” and sold and distributed by respondent in commerce, as herein set out, are not made from material composed entirely of wool or from material in which the chief constituent is wool. In fact, said blankets are made from material composed chiefly, if not entirely, of cotton. The wool content of respondent’s said blankets is negligible.

There are, among the competitors of respondent, corporations, indi­viduals, firms, and copartner­ships likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling blankets in similar commerce, who do not, by use of labels, falsely represent that the material from which their blankets are manufactured is composed chiefly or entirely of wool, when such is not the fact.

Par. 4. The use of the word “fleece” in the trade name and on the labels attached to respondent’s blankets has a tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the material from which respondent’s blankets are made is chiefly, if not entirely, composed of wool.

Further, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has a pre­ference for blankets made from a material composed of wool rather than for blankets made from materials containing products other than wool. Acting upon the erroneous and mistaken belief that the said blankets are made of a material whose chief, if not sole, consti­tuent is wool and because of the said preference last above stated a substantial portion of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's blankets, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and states that it waives hearing on the charges set forth in said complaint and that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the case might proceed to final hearing upon the record, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. S. Libbey Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of blankets and other similar products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "fleece," or any other word or term descriptive of wool, to describe, designate, or in any way refer to, any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of wool, except that in the case of fabrics or products composed in part of wool and in part of other materials, the word "fleece" may be used as descriptive of the wool content if there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and provided that if any particular fiber in said fabrics or products is not present in a substantial amount by weight, the percentage in which such fiber is present shall then be specifically disclosed.
2. Representing in any manner whatsoever that the fabrics or products manufactured or sold by it contain wool in greater quantity, percentage or degree than is actually the case.

This order shall not be construed as approving the use of the term "fleece" to designate, describe, or refer to any wool which is not virgin wool.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of assortments of candy which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to purchasing public, and which were composed of small pieces of candy, together with 4-section punch card for sale and distribution of said candy to the penny purchasers under a plan and in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received only 1, or received number of pieces ranging from 2 to 20 in accordance with success or failure in selecting by chance certain numbers, and last sale in each of said card's 3 sections received 5 pieces and last sale on card entitled purchaser to 20 pieces—

Sold to wholesalers and jobbers for display and resale by retail dealer buyers thereof to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, such assortments and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of its said merchandise in accordance with such sales plan above described involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several States, and in competition with many who sell and distribute like or similar candies and are unwilling to offer for sale and sell their said product by any method or sales plan which involves game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With effect of inducing purchasers of its said merchandise to buy same in preference to like or similar products offered and sold by its competitors who do not use such sales plan or method in sale and distribution of their said product, and with result that many purchasers of its said merchandise were attracted by element of chance involved in its said sales plan or method and were thereby induced to buy its said product in preference to like or similar merchandise of competitors who did not or do not use such or equivalent methods, and wholesalers and jobbers, by reason of such preference on part of members of purchasing public, were induced and persuaded to buy its said merchandise in preference to like or similar articles sold or distributed by its said competitors and it sold, as consequence thereof, substantial quantities of its said merchandise and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel and Mr. Henry C. Lank for the Commission.
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Specialties, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said Act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Specialties, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Maryland with its principal office and place of business located at 601 South Smallwood Street, Baltimore, Md. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail and wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused its said products when so sold to be transported from its principal place of business in Baltimore, Md., to purchasers thereof in the State of Maryland and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for 1 year last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to retail and wholesale dealers and jobbers an assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of small candy bars together with a device commonly called a push card. The candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs arranged in 4 sections, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers receive 2 of the said small bars of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive 3 of the small pieces of candy, that certain other specified numbers receive 5 pieces of candy, that 2 of the numbers receive 10 pieces of candy, that 1 of the numbers receives 20 pieces of candy, that the last sale in each of the first 3 sections receives 5 pieces of candy and that the last sale on the card receives 15 pieces of candy. All other numbers on said card receive 1 of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on the discs or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disc separated from the card. The number of small bars of candy which a customer receives for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The jobbers and wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional small bars of candy. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.
Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the said method or an equivalent method.

Par. 6. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 20, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Specialties, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel and Henry C. Lank, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Samuel A. Spector, vice president of respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Specialties, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Maryland, with its principal office and place of business located at 601 South Smallwood Street, Baltimore, Md. Since April or May of 1934, respondent has been engaged in the manufacture of candies, and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located in various States of the United States at their respective points of location. At all times hereinabove mentioned, respondent has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its said place of business in Baltimore, Md., to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States other than the State of Maryland, at their respective places of business.

In so carrying on said business, respondent has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, has sold and distributed to wholesale dealers and jobbers an assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the purchasing public. This said assortment is known as the Dixie Assorted Coccoanut Fudge Assortment, and is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

Respondent furnishes with assortments of this candy, for use in disposing of same to the consuming public, devices known as push cards, each of which has a number of partially perforated discs arranged in 4 sections, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a number is disclosed. Sales are 1 cent each, and the card bears statements or legends informing customers and prospective customers that for certain specified numbers the customer receives 2 of said small bars of candy; that for other specified numbers the customer receives
3 of the small pieces of candy; that certain other specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to 5 pieces of candy; that 2 of the numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to 10 pieces of candy; and for 1 of the numbers the purchaser thereof is entitled to 20 pieces of candy; and that the last sale in each of the first 3 sections entitles the purchasers thereof to 5 pieces of candy; and that the last sale on the card entitles the purchaser thereof to 15 pieces of candy. All other numbers on said card entitle the purchasers thereof to 1 of the small pieces of candy. The numbers on the discs are effectively concealed from the purchaser or prospective purchaser until the selection has been made and the discs separated from the card. The number of small bars of candy which a customer receives for the price of 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its merchandise, together with said push card, resell the same to retail dealers, who in turn sell and distribute said merchandise by means of said push card to members of the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent has thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of its said merchandise, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove described. Said sales plan has the capacity and tendency to induce, and has induced purchasers of respondent’s merchandise to purchase the same in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent’s competitors who do not use such sales plan or method in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise.

Par. 4. The sale and distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner hereinabove found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The sale and distribution of merchandise in the manner hereinabove described is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several States of the United States. Among the respondent’s competitors there are many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute like or similar candies in competition with respondent as hereinabove found, and said competitors are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said candies by any method or sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many purchasers of respondent’s merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in the respondent’s said sales plan or method, and were thereby induced to purchase respondent’s merchandisse in preference to the like or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not or do not use the same or equivalent methods. Because of said preference on the part of members of the purchasing public, wholesale dealers, and jobbers have been induced and persuaded to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to like or similar articles of merchandise sold or distributed by respondent's said competitors. As a result thereof, respondent has sold substantial quantities of its said merchandise, and trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Specialties, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others packages or assortments of candy which are to be used or may be used to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of candy or other merchandise to the public.
3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy or other merchandise together with a lottery device, which lottery device is to be used or may be used in selling and distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others a lottery device either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which lottery device is to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of candy or other merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Where a corporation engaged in sale of a course of training in physical culture featuring dynamic tension by correspondence, as successor to a business theretofore carried on by an individual who was its treasurer and owner of one-half of its outstanding capital stock, and, as thus engaged, in advertising its said course or system through its booklet entitled “Everlasting Health and Strength” which it sent, along with circular letter and circular, to those applying therefor in response to its invitation so to do in advertisements in magazines and other periodicals of general circulation in the various States, and in which it set forth, among other things, purported facsimile of certificate of award to aforesaid individual as “America’s Most Perfectly Developed Man,” together with what was represented as an actual photograph showing his very remarkable muscular development, and with statements as to his height, weight, and body measurements, and also with representation, among others in his advertisements published as above described, to the effect that before he discovered the system of training in physical culture now offered and sold, he was “a physical wreck, a sickly half-pint runt, a 97 pound weakling, flat chested, spindly legs and with arms like pipe stems,” and with representations in his various advertisements as aforesaid, along with such photographs, to the effect that the remarkable physical development made by him was due to his use of said course—

(a) Represented, in said advertisements and advertising matter, that users of its course of training could thereby acquire a muscular development similar to that of said individual, including broad, powerful shoulders, biceps that bulge with smashing strength, chest which would stand out solid and muscular, and an evenly developed body that would make others look like dwarfs in comparison, and that it could prove in 7 days to anyone that he could have such a muscular development, facts being, while such course of training might be generally beneficial to users thereof, it would not accomplish results claimed therefor as above set out, muscular development of anyone is limited by the bony structure and other characteristics of his body, and it is impossible for persons of only average physical development, or less than average, to acquire muscular development approximating that depicted in its advertisements or advertising matter;

(b) Represented that use of said course would bring about a healthy condition, and that constipation, pimples, skin blotches, and similar ailments would be banished, facts being that use thereof would not, in all cases, bring about a healthy condition or banish constipation, pimples, skin blotches, and similar ailments, and would not affect all users alike, and that, while such use might be beneficial to some, others would receive very little benefit or none at all, and such use on still others might have injurious, rather than beneficial, effect; and

(c) Made so-called “extraordinary offer” to prospective purchasers offering, along with course for sum of $5 as special reduced price, said entire course, together with “free” “Outline Course” on Jiu-Jitsu, wrestling, boxing, feats of strength, and hand-balancing, and so-called 150-page book on sex, and represented that supply of said “Outline Course” and book were limited, facts being said price was not special or extraordinary, but usual and customary price charged by it for said course, including such so-called free items, and such offer of free goods was one of long standing and constituted its permanent method of doing business, and price of such free items was included in that of course of training which had to be purchased in order to obtain such items;

With capacity and tendency to induce members of purchasing public to buy its said course in erroneous belief that such statements and representations were true, and to divert trade unfairly to it from competitors engaged in sale in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia of similar courses of training by correspondence, and who do not misrepresent the conditions or terms upon which their courses are sold, and the results that may be expected to be obtained from use thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Daniel R. Forbes, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Charles Atlas, Ltd., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been, and is, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Charles Atlas, Ltd., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 115 East Twenty-third Street in the city and State of New York. Said respondent is now, and for many years immediately last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling a course of instruction by correspondence in the science and art of physical culture to persons residing in various States of the United States.
and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent causes its said course of instruction to be sent through the United States mails from its said place of business in the city and State of New York to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned, a course of trade and commerce in said courses of instruction so sold and distributed by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction in the science and art of physical culture in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its courses, the respondent offers its said course of instruction to the purchasing public in advertisements in, magazines, newspapers, and elsewhere, and in letters and printed circulars which are sent out by it through the mail and otherwise. Respondent publishes, among others, advertisements in magazines having a national circulation, containing statements and claims of which the following are typical examples:

Atlas makes muscles grow like magic. Five inches of new muscle after one week. My arms increased 1 1/2 inches, chest 2 1/2 inches, forearms 7/8" and I have gained 4 pounds. I have no use for apparatus.

Dynamic Tension—ALONE—right in your own home. Will start new inches of massive power pushing out your chest. Build up your shoulders to champion huskiness. Put regular mountains of muscle under your biceps. Free you of constipation, pimples, makes those stomach muscles of yours hard ridges!

I'll prove in the first 7 days YOU can have a body like mine. No other physical instructor in the world has ever dared to make such an offer. Don't get the idea that it takes a lot of time and hard work for you to get amazing strength and powerful muscles. And don't think you need a room full of contraptions.

All I want to know is where do you want big, powerful muscles. How many pounds of firm flesh do you want distributed over your body to fill you out. Where do you lack vitality, pep and robust health. Where do you want to take off flabby surplus fat. Just tell me. Give me a week and I'll show you that I can make a new man of you, give you bodily power and drive and put you in that magnificent physical condition which wins you the envy and respect of any man and the admiration of any woman.

Give me your measure and I'll prove in the first 7 days you can have a body like mine. I'll give you proof or—in 7 days that I can turn you into a man of might and muscle. And I'll also give you a rugged health that banishes constipation, pimples, skin blotches and similar conditions that rob you of the good things of life.

Par. 4. The said advertisements and others of like and similar import are false, misleading, and deceptive in that respondent represents that the use of the instructions and the practice of the physical exercises comprising respondent's course will in all cases—

(a) Build big powerful muscles on the body wherever they look best.

(b) Give vitality, pep, and strength to the system.

(c) Banish constipation, poor digestion, pimples, skin blotches, and other diseases and imperfections.

(d) Build a new body and make a new man.

(e) Transform the pupil, regardless of age or condition, into a person of superb strength and physical appearance.

In truth and in fact, said instructions and the practice of said physical exercises constituting respondent's course will not build big, powerful muscles on the body wherever they look best, nor will they give vitality, pep, and strength to the system, nor will they banish constipation, poor digestion, pimples, and other diseases and imperfections. Such instructions and the practice of respondent's physical exercises will not build a new body and make a new man, and will not transform the pupil, regardless of age or condition, into a person of superb strength or physical appearance in the manner set forth in said advertisements.

Par. 5. Respondent, upon the receipt of letters from persons answering the said advertisements, mails to such persons the book or pamphlet entitled "Everlasting Health and Strength" and form letters, together with enrollment blanks. The book or pamphlet and the form letters above mentioned contain, in varying phraseology, the statements and representations set forth in the advertisements recited in paragraph 3 of this complaint and are misleading and deceptive in the particulars and for the reasons mentioned in paragraph 4 as to the false, misleading, and deceptive character of said advertisements.

Par. 6. The final letter in the series of form letters above referred to and mailed to prospective purchasers of respondent is entitled: "Extraordinary Offer!!" and in substance offers to such prospective purchaser the entire course of physical instruction, together with an assortment of books containing sex information and various outline courses on sports for the sum of $5, with a statement that the former price of the Dynamic Tension course was $35. Said letter also contains the statement that the supply of said courses is limited and suggests an enrollment by return mail in order to be sure of receiving said course.

The representations in said letter are false, misleading, and deceptive in that the so-called "Extraordinary Offer" does not bring about any saving to the pupil or any reduction from the price at which the course is regularly sold by the respondent so that the pupil, while offered the course at a purported saving or reduction of $30, pays, in fact, the usual and ordinary price received by the respondent for its course.

The free offers of the said book on Sexual Education and Outline Courses, made in said letter, are false, misleading, and deceptive in that the said book and courses referred to are not furnished the pupil free but the price thereof is included in the price charged for the course of instruction.

The representation that the supply of said courses is limited and that the prospective purchaser should enroll by return mail to be sure of getting said course is false and misleading in that the supply is not limited and in that the said offer is not in any sense extraordinary, but is the offer made by respondent in the regular course of its business.

Par. 7. The statements and representations so made by respondent in the ways and manners above alleged have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive pupils and prospective pupils into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and to induce them to act on such belief and to enroll as pupils of respondent and thus cause patronage to be diverted unfairly to respondent from respondent's competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove described, respondent is, and has been, in competition with corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of courses of physical instruction in commerce between the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, which said competitors do not misrepresent, and have not misrepresented, their said courses in advertisements and otherwise.

Par. 9. The above-alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of the competitors of respondent, Charles Atlas, Ltd., and constitute unfair methods in competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 22, 1938, issued its complaint in the above-entitled proceeding and caused same to be served on the respondent, Charles Atlas, Ltd., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent entered its appearance herein and filed an answer to said complaint on March 5, 1938; and thereafter, at the instance of William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, testimony was introduced and evidence received in support of the charges stated in the complaint and in opposition thereto by Daniel R. Forbes, counsel for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs of the respective counsel, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent Charles Atlas, Ltd., is a corporation organized in February 1929, under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business in New York City in said State. It is engaged in the business of selling a course of training in physical culture featuring dynamic tension by correspondence. The course so sold consists of 13 multigraphed lessons. The respondent upon its organization succeeded to the business theretofore carried on by Charles Atlas who is now treasurer of the respondent corporation and the owner of one-half of its outstanding capital stock. Respondent causes copies of the lessons which constitute the course of training sold by it, to be sent by the United States mails from its office in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the course and conduct of its said business, respondent has been and is now in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the sale of courses in physical culture, by correspondence, in commerce among several of the States of the United States.
Par. 2. The respondent in the course of its business, as set out in paragraph 1 hereof, has caused advertisements to be published in magazines and other periodicals having general circulation in various States of the United States. Each of these advertisements contained an invitation to members of the public to send to respondent for a copy of a free 48-page book entitled "Everlasting Health and Strength," and when responses to such advertisements were received by respondent, it then sent to each of the persons so responding a copy of the book together with a circular letter and circular. This book had on its front inside cover page what purported to be a facsimile of a certificate of award to Charles Atlas of the title "America's Most Perfectly Developed Man," with the statement that such award was made in October 1922, at Madison Square Garden in a physical-culture exhibition and on pages 24 and 25 of the book was what was represented to be an actual photograph of Charles Atlas together with a statement of his height, weight, and bodily measurements which were as follows: Height, 5 feet, 10 inches; weight, 180 pounds; chest, normal, 47 inches; waist, 32 inches; neck, 17 inches; biceps, 17 inches; forearm, 14 1/2 inches; thigh, 23 3/4 inches; calf, 16 1/4 inches. Among the representations in the advertisements which respondent caused to be published as stated, were representations to the effect that before Charles Atlas discovered the system of training in physical culture now offered for sale and sold by respondent, that he was "a physical wreck, a sickly half-pint runt, a 97-pound weakling, flat chested, spindly legs and with arms like pipe stems." Each of the advertisements which respondent has caused to be published, as stated, was illustrated by what was represented as a reproduction of a recent photograph of Charles Atlas showing his very remarkable muscular development and throughout such advertisements there were representations to the effect that the remarkable physical development made by Charles Atlas was due to the use by him of the course of training now offered for sale and sold by respondent.

Par. 3. In the advertisements and advertising matter referred to in paragraph 2 hereof the respondent made many false, misleading, and exaggerated representations concerning the course of training in physical culture offered for sale and sold by it and the benefits that might be derived from such course by the users thereof. Among and typical of such false, misleading, and exaggerated claims were those to the effect that by the use of respondent's course of training anyone could acquire a muscular development similar to that of Charles Atlas; that by the use of such course anyone could acquire broad, powerful shoulders, biceps that bulge with smashing strength, a chest which would stand out solid and muscular and an evenly developed body that would make others look like dwarfs in comparison; that respondent in 7 days could prove to anyone that he could have a muscular development like that of Charles Atlas; that the use of such course would bring about such a healthy condition that constipation, pimples, skin blotches, and similar ailments would be banished. Other claims and representations of similar import concerning the benefits which would be offered for sale by respondent were contained in such advertisements and advertising matter.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact while the course of training by correspondence sold by the respondent may be generally beneficial to the users thereof such course of training will not accomplish the results claimed for it by respondents as set out above. The muscular development of anyone is limited by the bony structure and other characteristics of his body and it is impossible for persons of only average physical development, or less than average, to acquire a muscular development approximating that depicted in the advertisement or advertising matter of the respondent. Furthermore, the use of such course of training would not, in all cases, bring about a healthy condition or banish constipation, pimples, skin blotches, and similar ailments. The use of such course will not affect all users alike, and while its use may be beneficial to some users, other users will receive very little benefit or none at all, and the use of such course might have an injurious effect rather than a beneficial effect on others.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact the representations made by the respondent in connection with its so-called “extraordinary offer” are false, misleading, and deceptive in that the supply of the so-called “Outline Course” on Jiu-Jitsu, wrestling, boxing, feats of strength, and hand-balancing, and the so-called 150-page book on sex were not limited and were not given free to the purchasers of said course of training, but instead the price of $5 is the usual and customary price charged by the respondent for such course of training including the so-called free items. Furthermore, this offer of free goods is one of long standing and constitutes respondent’s permanent method of doing business, and the price of “free” items is included in the price of the course of training which must be purchased in order to obtain the so-called “free” items.

Par. 6. The statements and representations made by the respondent in its advertisements and advertising matter, as hereinbefore set out, have had and do have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public to buy respondent’s course of training in the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true and to divert trade unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia of similar courses of training by correspondence who do not misrepresent the conditions or terms upon which their courses of training are sold and who do not misrepresent the results that may be expected to be obtained upon use of such courses. As a result injury is being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as hereinbefore found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and to competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Wm. C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs filed herein by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Daniel R. Forbes, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Charles Atlas, Ltd., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its course of training in physical culture by correspondence in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that users of its course of training could thereby acquire a muscular development similar to that of Charles Atlas, or any other person of similar physique and appearance.

2. Representing that respondent in 7 days, or any other specified period of time could prove to anyone that he could have a muscular development like that of Charles Atlas, or any other person of similar physique and appearance.
3. Representing that the use of respondent's course of training will cure, relieve, or benefit constipation, pimples, skin blotches, and similar ailments.

4. Representing that any price is a special or extraordinary price for respondent's course of training or publications when said price is the usual and customary price charged by the respondent under similar circumstances.

5. Using the term "free" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate or describe articles of merchandise regularly included in a combination offer with identical, similar, or other articles of merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. D. DRUSHELL TRADING AS J. D. DRUSHELL COMPANY, AND LAURENCE A. SMITH

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of (1) coin-vending machines especially designed to market 1- and 5-cent candy bars made by Hershey Chocolate Corporation, and referred to in conduct of said business as "Hershey Automatic Merchandisers," "Hershey Vending Machines," "Hershey Machines," and "Advance Hershey Vending Machines," and of (2) "Automatic Stores" vending machines which usually contained four separate slots and compartments for distribution of candy, etc., and of (3) candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said machines, and of (4) assortments of toys and charms designed to be mixed with commodities placed in said "Automatic Stores," so that members of public, on placing coin therein, would occasionally receive one of said toys or charms, presence of which was concealed, in addition to other commodities purchased, and thus secure same wholly by lot or chance, and in selling and distributing his said products through numerous representatives whom he employed and who traveled throughout the various States calling upon retail trade and soliciting orders for said machines, and whose practice it was, on arrival in city in which they expected to canvass, to insert "Man Wanted" advertising in local newspaper or periodical setting forth glowing opportunities to make large profits with own business in sale of Hershey bars through new patented machines, etc.; and, as thus engaged, in active and substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of coin-operated vending machines of various types, and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use therein, in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia; and a traveling and sales representative of said individual; as a part of a fraudulent sales plan and scheme entered into by said individual and his representatives, and which included use of contact advertising as above set forth, and acting directly and through said sales representatives, with his knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation—

(a) Represented to prospects contacted and secured as aforesaid that said individual was the representative or agent of the Hershey Chocolate Corporation or the Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and that he, or the said business, was directly connected with said concerns, and a division or subsidiary thereof, and that said individual, or the business, was the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars, and that such bars were vended exclusively in his vending machines, facts being said individual, trading under company trade name employed by him, was not a part of said Hershey concerns, had no direct connection therewith, was not a division or subsidiary thereof, nor sole distributor of their penny candy bars, which were not vended exclusively in said individual's machines, and he had no authority to arrange for distributors for such concerns;
(b) Represented, as aforesaid, or in such contact advertising, that said machines would pay the prospect an average net profit of $1 per week each, and produced false and fraudulent testimonial letters purportedly signed by various individuals and containing exaggerated, untrue, and misleading statements as to profits obtained from machines in question in support of such claim, and represented, in contact advertising aforesaid, that the operator would receive an income from machines in question of $125 a month and up, depending on expansion, and that said “Automatic Stores” vending machines would earn six times as much as other types of machines sold by said individual, and that when toys and charms were used, through their appeal to children and adults, said machines could be set to vend candy and other merchandise at about $1 a pound, and that its said vending machines were strictly slug-proof and insured against fire, theft, or mysterious disappearance, facts being such machines, distributed as aforesaid, would not produce such exaggerated earnings as represented, nor would said “Automatic Stores” equal in earnings six times those of a single machine nor average net profit of $5 per week, nor could they be set to vend at about $1 per pound, and still distribute toys and charms;

(c) Represented that said individual or business assigned exclusive territorial rights within a certain city or cities, county or counties, and that it or its representatives would obtain desirable locations for the purchasers of its said machines, and that, if locations failed to bring net profit of $1 per week someone from such concern would relocate the purchaser’s machines where such net profit would be obtainable, and that if, after location of machines, purchaser was dissatisfied therewith, said individual would permit machines to be returned and would refund investment in full, less 12½-per cent sales cost, or resell same for purchaser, and, in support of such representations or in connection therewith, produced alleged contract for operators and distributors for signature of prospective purchaser to be sent to said individual or concern for execution, but which in fact never was executed or returned, facts being such individual never expected, planned, or intended to assign any such exclusive territory or rights, location for purchasers’ machines was not obtained nor were they relocated as above set forth, and said individual did not either resell or permit return of merchandise of purchasers and refund of investment in event of purchasers’ dissatisfaction as above represented and set out; and

(d) Supplied, as above set forth, and placed in the hands of operators of its said vending machines toys and charms for distribution under plan or arrangement involving game of chance or sale of chance to procure such toy or charm, contrary to public policy and to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are under a moral and legal compulsion not to adopt such practices, and refrain from so doing; with effect of securing said individual an undue preference and operating unjustly against competitors aforesaid who refrain from use of such methods;

With effect of deceiving, through such false and misleading statements and representations made by said individual himself, or through his aforesaid and other sales representatives in describing said products and in promotion of his said fraudulent sales plan and scheme, ultimate purchasers into contracting for and buying his said vending machines, and with capacity and tendency so to do, and to divert unfairly to said individual and representative trade of competitors engaged in sale in commerce among the States and in said District of same kind and nature as those dealt in by said individual and sales representative, and truthfully advertised and described by such competitors; to the injury of competition in commerce:

 Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Mr. Franklin R. Overmyer and Mr. Henry Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that J. D. Drushell, an individual trading as J. D. Drushell Co. and Laurence A. Smith, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. J. D. Drushell is an individual trading as J. D. Drushell Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 4753 Broadway, Chicago, Ill.

Laurence A. Smith of 4753 Broadway, Chicago, Ill., is an individual and sales representative of J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co. This respondent, acting individually and in cooperation with the respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has actively participated in the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

Par. 2. The respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing coin-operated vending machines of various type and character and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from the city of Chicago in the State of Illinois to operators and purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

These vending machines sold by respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are placed in public business places where members of the public may secure therefrom candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities by inserting a coin in the machine. These vending machines, sold and distributed by respondent, comprise two general types: A coin-vending machine specially designed to market 1- and 5-cent candy bars manufactured by the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa., which said vending machines are referred to by respondents in orders, correspondence, and advertising material as "Hershey Automatic Merchandisers," "Hershey Vending Machines," "Hershey Machines" and "Advance Hershey Vending Machines"; the second type sold and distributed by respondent is a vending machine known as "Automatic Stores" and usually contains four separate slots and compartments for the distribution of candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities. In addition to the commodities mentioned above for use in said "Automatic Stores," respondent sells and distributes an assortment of toys and charms which are designed to be mixed with the commodities placed in said vending machines known as "Automatic Stores" so that members of the public, when placing a coin in said machine will occasionally receive one of said toys or charms in addition to or as a part of the commodities purchased, the said toys and charms being so concealed from the purchaser or prospective purchaser that their distribution to the purchasing public is wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of coin-operated vending machines of various types and character, and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said coin-vending machines designed to market candy bars manufactured by the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa., respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has made use of a sales plan consisting of false representations, fraudulent schemes, devices, and practices, among which are the following:

The respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., employs numerous traveling sales representatives, including said respondent, Laurence A. Smith, who travel throughout the various States of the United States, calling upon the retail trade and soliciting orders for respondent's machines. These sales representatives, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., as a part of a fraudulent sales plan and scheme, entered into by this respondent and this respondent's representatives, for the purpose and with the result of selling this respondent's machines, make false and misleading representations as follows:

(a) Representatives of respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., on arrival in a city which they expect to canvass cause to be inserted in a newspaper or periodical of said city one of the following, or some similar advertisement:

Wanted man to own and operate route of new patented machines that vend NEW HERSEY BARS. World's largest selling chocolate. Full or part time. Nearly 100% profit. To qualify you must have good reference and $305 cash for equipment. Give security. Income $125 per month and up depending on expansion. We furnish all locations. Give phone. Box _______.

IMMEDIATE opening, here and adjacent territory, for trustworthy man to manage distribution of nationally advertised products enjoying 100 million profit. No selling required as accounts are established and will be turned over to party who finances self to extent $675, fully secured. Starting Income about $40 weekly. Right man will receive additional financial aid, assuring expansion after indication of worthiness. Address Box _______. Give phone. Personal interview will be arranged with company executive.

National company has opportunity here for reliable party. Supervise own business. A new merchandising system for special Hershey products to industry. Income starts at about $200 per month, will assist to build income to $400 monthly. Requires $600 cash. No selling or experience. Give phone for interview. Address Box _______.

(b) When said representative of respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., receives response to the advertisement inserted, an appointment is arranged with the prospective purchaser and the said representative outlines that he represents a large concern which is the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars, that respondent's company is directly connected with the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and the Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and that Hershey bars are vended exclusively in respondent's vending machines, and large sales from the coin vending machines which he is attempting to sell are described. An effort is made to corroborate the exaggerated average income referred to in the advertisement to which the prospective purchaser has replied, and prospective purchaser is informed by said representative that these vending machines will pay him an average net profit of $1.00 per week each. To support this the representative produces false and fraudulent testimonial letters purported to be signed by various individuals which contain exaggerated, untrue and misleading statements as to profits obtained from operation of the vending machines distributed by respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co.

(c) Said representative of respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., further represents as a part of this fraudulent sales plan and scheme that the purchaser will be assigned exclusive territorial rights within a certain city or cities, county, or counties. The prospective purchaser is further informed that respondent’s representative or someone from respondent’s concern will obtain desirable locations for the purchaser’s vending machines and that, if the locations fail to bring a net profit of $1 per week for each machine, someone from respondent’s concern will relocate purchaser’s machines in locations where such net profit will be obtainable. Said representative also states that if, after location of the machines, the purchaser is dissatisfied with them, respondent will permit the machines to be returned and will refund this investment in full less 12 1/2-cent sales cost or resell them for the purchaser. In addition to this, respondent’s representative further represents that the machines are strictly slug proof and are insured against theft, fire, and mysterious disappearance. In connection with the above representations, the representative produces an alleged contract for operators and distributors for signature by the prospective purchaser and which is to be sent to said respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., for execution, but which is never executed or returned to the purchaser. Also in connection with the allegations of the relationship with the Hershey Chocolate Corporation, the representative produces a printed form, alleging it to be a distributor’s application, which features in very large letters the following legend:

Industrial Department
HERSHEY CHOCOLATE
Machine Division
J. D. Drushell Co.
4641-47 Ravenswood
Chicago, Illinois
Largest Organization in the World for Distribution of Hershey Products through Advance Automatic Equipment

Par. 5. All the representations made by respondent as a part of said fraudulent sales plan and scheme are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, the respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., is not a part of the Hershey Chocolate Corporation or the Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and does not have any direct connection with said companies, is not a division or subsidiary of said companies, and is not the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars. Hershey candy bars are not vended exclusively in vending machines of said respondent J. D. Drushell trading as J. D. Drushell Co., and said respondent has no authority to arrange for distributors for said Com-companies. The coin-vending machines distributed by the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., will not produce such exaggerated earnings as represented. The respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., never expected, planned, or intended to assign "exclusive territorial rights" within any city or county to the purchaser. The location for purchaser's machines is not obtained by said respondent or anyone acting for him, and purchaser's machines are not relocated by either said respondent or anyone acting for him, should first location prove unsatisfactory. The respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., does not resell or permit the return of machines of the purchaser for refund of investment in event purchaser is dissatisfied. The machines distributed by said respondent are not strictly slug proof, and are not insured against theft, fire, and mysterious disappearance.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing retailers to purchase said coin-operated vending machines known as "Automatic Stores," respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has made use of and now uses various types of advertising matter purporting to be descriptive of said vending machines known as "Automatic Stores." Such advertising used by this respondent contains among others, the following statements and representations:

Six times the earnings of a single machine.

The use of charms and toys creates amazing sales. Grown-ups, as well as kiddies, are intrigued at the sight of these clever toys and charms mixed with candy and nuts. We have seen youngsters drop in 10 to 15 pennies seeking to receive the toy they see through the glass. Read these figures: Peanuts cost 8¢ and 10¢ per lb. depending on locality. Hard candies can be purchased at approximately 12¢ per lb. This merchandise sells from 60¢ to 70¢ per lb.

When charms and toys are used operators are setting them to vend at about $1 per lb.

By using "Automatic Stores" and this merchandise, operators have found that they can easily and quickly develop their business.

In addition to said advertising, representatives of respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., including Laurence A. Smith, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., for the purpose and with the result of selling respondent's vending machines, make representations that said "Automatic Stores" will return earnings of "Six times the earnings of a single machine;" that the earnings can be greatly stimulated and increased by the use of toys and charms; that when toys and charms are used, the vending machines can be set to vend at about $1 per pound; that said machines will average a net profit of $5 weekly per machine.
Par. 7. Said statements and representations contained in said advertising and in representations of salesmen of this respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, one "Automatic Stores" will not equal the earnings of six times the earnings of a single machine and will not average a net profit of $5 per week for each machine; and also, said machine cannot be set to vend at about $1 per pound and still distribute toys and charms. Furthermore, the use of toys and charms as above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a toy or charm, which is a practice deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations located in the several States of the United States and engaged in competition with respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are under a moral and legal compulsion not to adopt such practices and do refrain from adopting them. The use of said method by this respondent gives him an undue preference and operates unjustly against those competitors of said respondent who are required to refrain from the use of such methods.

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., himself, or through the respondent Laurence A. Smith and other sales representatives in describing his products or in the promotion of said fraudulent sales plan and scheme hereinafore set forth, were and are calculated to, have had, and now have a capacity and tendency to deceive and do deceive the ultimate purchasers into contracting for and buying that which they did not intend to buy. The aforesaid practices have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to the respondents the trade of competitors engaged in selling in commerce between and among the States of the United States and the District of Columbia products of the same kind and nature as those of the respondents, which said products are truthfully advertised and described by said competitors.

As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of the respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 31, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, J. D. Drushell, an individual, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., and Laurence A. Smith, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of separate answers by the respondents, the Commission by order herein designated and appointed Arthur F. Thomas, an examiner of the Commission, to take testimony and receive evidence in this proceeding, and ordered the taking of testimony to begin on January 3, 1939, in Chicago, Ill. At the time and place designated by the Commission the respondent J. D. Drushell appeared by Franklin R. Overmyer and Henry Junge, his attorneys, and the respondent Laurence A. Smith appeared pro se, and moved that they be granted leave to file amended answers admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. The hearing was thereupon closed by the trial examiner. Subsequently, on, to wit, January 21, 1939, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted the separate motions of the respondents for leave to withdraw their original answers and to substitute therefor amended answers admitting all the material allegations of the complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts, which amended answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the said complaint and the amended answers of the respondents, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent J. D. Drushell is an individual trading as J. D. Drushell Co., with his office and principal place of business at 4753 Broadway, Chicago, Ill. The respondent Laurence A. Smith is an individual and sales representative of J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co. This respondent, acting individually and in cooperation with the respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has actively participated in the acts and practices alleged in the complaint.

Drushell Co., is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing coin-operated vending machines of various types and character and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from the city of Chicago in the State of Illinois to operators and purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

These vending machines sold by respondent J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are placed in public business places where members of the public may secure therefrom candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities by inserting a coin in the machine. These vending machines, sold and distributed by respondent, comprise two general types: A coin-vending machine specially designed to market 1- and 5-cent candy bars manufactured by the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa., which said vending machines are referred to by respondents in orders, correspondence, and advertising material as “Hershey Automatic Merchandisers,” “Hershey Vending Machines,” “Hershey Machines,” and “Advance Hershey Vending Machines”; the second type sold and distributed by respondent is a vending machine known as “Automatic Stores” and usually contains four separate slots and compartments for the distribution of candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities. In addition to the commodities mentioned above for use in said “Automatic Stores,” respondent sells and distributes an assortment of toys and charms which are designed to be mixed with the commodities placed in said vending machines known as “Automatic Stores” so that members of the public, when placing a coin in said machine, will occasionally receive one of said toys or charms in addition to or as a part of the commodities purchased, the said toys and charms being so concealed from the purchaser or prospective purchaser that their distribution to the purchasing public is wholly by lot or chance.

Drushell Co., is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of coin-operated vending machines of various types and character, and candy, confectionery, peanuts, and other commodities for use in said vending machines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has made use of a sales plan consisting of false representations, fraudulent schemes, devices, and practices, among which are the following:

The respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., employs numerous traveling sales representatives, including said respondent, Laurence A. Smith, who travel throughout the various States of the United States, calling upon the retail trade and soliciting orders for respondent's machines. These sales representatives, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., as a part of a fraudulent sales plan and scheme, entered into by this respondent and this respondent's representatives, for the purpose and with the result of selling this respondent's machines, make false and misleading representations as follows:

(a) Representatives of respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., on their arrival in a city which they expect to canvass, cause to be inserted in a newspaper or periodical of said city one of the following, or some similar advertisement:

Wanted—man to own and operate route of new patented machines that vend NEW HERSHEY BARS. World's largest selling chocolate. Full or part time. Nearly 100% profit. To qualify you must have good reference and $35 cash for equipment. Give security. Income $125 per month and up depending on expansion. We furnish all locations. Give phone. Box ______.

IMMEDIATE opening, here and adjacent territory, for trustworthy man to manage distribution of nationally advertised products enjoying 100 million profit. No selling required as accounts are established and will be turned over to party who finances self to extent $675, fully secured. Starting income about $40 weekly. Right man will receive additional financial aid, assuring expansion after indication of worthiness. Address Box ______. Give phone. Personal interview will be arranged with company executive.

Income starts at about $200 per month, will assist to build income to $400 monthly. Requires $600 cash. No selling or experience. Give phone for interview. Address Box ______.

(b) When said representative of respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., receives response to the advertisement inserted, an appointment is arranged with the prospective purchaser and the said representative outlines that he represents a large concern which is the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars, that respondent's company is directly connected with the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and the Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and that Hershey bars are vended exclusively in respondent's vending machines, and large sales from the coin vending machines which he is attempting to sell are described. An effort is made to corroborate the exaggerated average income referred to in the advertisement to which the prospective purchaser has replied, and prospective purchaser is informed by said representative that these vending machines will pay him an average net profit of $1 per week each. To support this the representative produces false and fraudulent testimonial letters, purported to be signed by various individuals, which contain exaggerated, untrue, and misleading statements as to profits obtained from operation of the vending machines distributed by respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co.

(c) Said representative of respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., further represents as a part of this fraudulent sales plan and scheme that the purchaser will be assigned exclusive territorial rights within a certain city or cities, county, or counties. The prospective purchaser is further informed that respondent's representative or someone from respondent's concern will obtain desirable locations for the purchaser's vending machines and that, if the locations fail to bring a net profit of $1 per week for each machine, someone from respondent's concern will relocate purchaser's machines in locations where such net profit will be obtainable. Said representative also states that if, after location of the machines, the purchaser is dissatisfied with them, respondent will permit the machines to be returned and will refund this investment in full less 12½ percent sales cost or resell them for the purchaser. In addition to this, respondent's representative further represents that the machines are strictly slug proof and are insured against theft, fire, and mysterious disappearance. In connection with the above representations, the representative produces an alleged contract for operators and distributors for signature by the prospective purchaser and which is to be sent to said respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., for execution, but which is never executed or returned to the purchaser. Also in connection with the allegations of the relationship with the Hershey Chocolate Corporation, the representative produces a printed form, alleging it to be a distributor's application, which features in very large letters the following legend:

Par. 5. All the representations made by respondent as a part of said fraudulent sales plan and scheme are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., is not a part of the Hershey Chocolate Corporation or the Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, Pa., and does not have any direct connection with said companies, is not a division or subsidiary of said companies, and is not the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars. Hershey candy bars are not vended exclusively in vending machines of said respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., and said respondent has no authority to arrange for distributors for said companies. The coin-vending machines distributed by the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., will not produce such exaggerated earnings as represented. The respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., never expected, planned, or intended to assign "exclusive territorial rights" within any city or county to the purchaser. The location for purchaser's machines is not obtained by said respondent or anyone acting for him, and purchaser's machines are not relocated by either said respondent or anyone acting for him, should first location prove unsatisfactory. The respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., does not resell or permit the return of machines of the purchaser for refund of investment in event purchaser is dissatisfied. The machines distributed by said respondent are not strictly slug proof, and are not insured against theft, fire, and mysterious disappearance.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing retailers to purchase said coin-operated vending machines known as "Automatic Stores," respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., has made use of and now uses various types of advertising matter purporting to be descriptive of said vending machines known as "Automatic Stores." Such advertising used by this respondent contains among others the following statements and representations:

Six times the earnings of a single machine.

The use of charms and toys creates amazing sales. Grown-ups as well as kiddies are intrigued at the sight of these clever toys and charms mixed with the candy and nuts. We have seen youngsters drop in 10 to 15 pennies seeking to receive the toy they see through the glass. Read these figures: Peanuts cost 8¢ to 10¢ per lb. depending on locality. Hard candies can be purchased at approximately 12¢ per lb. This merchandise sells from 60¢ to 70¢ per lb.

By using “Automatic Stores” and this merchandise, operators have found that they can easily and quickly develop their business.

In addition to said advertising, representatives of respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., including Laurence A. Smith, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., for the purpose and with the result of selling respondent’s vending machines, make representations that said “Automatic Stores” will return earnings of “Six times the earnings of a single machine;” that the earnings can be greatly stimulated and increased by the use of toys and charms; that when toys and charms are used, the vending machines can be set to vend at about $1 per pound; that said machines will average a net profit of $5 weekly per machine.

Par. 7. Said statements and representations contained in said advertising and in representations of salesmen of this respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, one “Automatic Stores” will not equal in earnings six times the earnings of a single machine and will not average a net profit of $5 per week for each machine; and also, said machine cannot be set to vend at about $1 per pound and still distribute toys and charms. Furthermore, the use of toys and charms as above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a toy or charm, which is a practice deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations located in the several States of the United States and engaged in competition with respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., are under a moral and legal compulsion not to adopt such practices and do refrain from adopting them. The use of said methods by this respondent gives him an undue preference and operates unjustly against those competitors of said respondent who are required to refrain from the use of such methods.
Order

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent, J. D. Drushell, trading as J. D. Drushell Co., himself, or through the respondent, Laurence A. Smith, and other sales representatives in describing his products or in the promotion of said fraudulent sales plan and scheme hereinabove set forth, were and are calculated to, have had, and now have a capacity and tendency to deceive and do deceive the ultimate purchasers into contracting for and buying the vending machines of the respondent, J. D. Drushell. The aforesaid practices have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to the respondents the trade of competitors engaged in selling in commerce between and among the States of the United States and the District of Columbia, products of the same kind and nature as those of the respondents, which said products are truthfully advertised and described by said competitors. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of the respondents, in which answers respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

1. Representing that the respondent, J. D. Drushell, is the representative or agent of, or in any manner connected with, the Hershey Chocolate Corporation or the Chocolate Sales Corporation, of Hershey, Pa., or that the "company" operated by said respondent is a division or subsidiary of or affiliated with either of said firms, when such is not the fact.

2. Representing that the respondent, J. D. Drushell, is the sole distributor of Hershey penny candy bars or that such bars are distributed exclusively through the vending machines sold by said respondent, or that said respondent has authority to arrange for distribution of candy for the Hershey Chocolate Corporation or the Chocolate Sales Corporation.

3. Representing that respondents' vending machines will pay the operator thereof an average net profit of $1 per week for each machine, or that the operator thereof will receive an income of $125 per month or any other amount, unless such is the fact.

4. Representing that the respondent, J. D. Drushell, assigns exclusive territorial rights within any certain trade area to any purchaser or prospective purchaser of his vending machines, unless and until such exclusive territory is in fact assigned.

5. Representing that the respondent, J. D. Drushell, obtains locations for said vending machines, or that he relocates said vending machines should first location prove unsatisfactory, unless and until such locations are in fact obtained.

6. Representing that the respondent, J. D. Drushell, resells or permits the return of said vending machines for refund of investment in case the purchaser thereof is dissatisfied, unless and until such machines are so disposed of and the investment in fact returned to dissatisfied purchasers.

7. Representing that said vending machines are strictly slug proof or are insured against fire, theft, or mysterious disappearance, unless such is the fact.

8. Representing that said "automatic stores" vending machines will earn six times as much as other types of machines sold by the respondent, J. D. Drushell, or that they will average a net profit of $5 per week for each such machine, or any other amount, unless such is the fact.

9. Representing that said “automatic stores” vending machines can be set to vend candy and other merchandise at the rate of $1 per pound, or any other amount, unless such is the fact.

10. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, operators of any of said vending machines, toys, charms, or other articles of merchandise which may be distributed through said vending machines in such a manner as to constitute a lottery device or the distribution of such merchandise by lot or chance.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission separate and individual reports in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of hosiery which had appearance and feel of silk but which was composed largely of rayon and cotton, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with those engaged in sale and distribution of hosiery of same type, kind, and grade and of various other types, kinds, Art Silk," and words, on the other, "Reinforced with Fine Rayon," and placed on both types label setting forth, in part, "New Style Split Foot Silk Hose are made of the finest materials," etc., and represented thereby, directly and by implication, to members of the purchasing public, that such hosiery contained silk, product of the cocoon of the silk worm, as the principal or major constituent therein, and contained said product in a proportion or quantity larger than that present in said hosiery, top, heel, toe, and sole of which were made of cotton, and body of which, designated by term "Pure Thread Silk" as aforesaid, was composed of 87 percent rayon and 13 percent silk, with percentage of silk in whole hose amounting members of the purchasing public in various States as aforesaid, that such hosiery contained silk as aforesaid as principal or major constituent therein, and also in proportion or quantity larger than that of rayon present in said product, top, heel, toe, and sole of which were made of cotton, with body thereof, stamped with words "Rayon Reinforcing Two Threads Pure Silk, containing approximately 60 percent rayon and 40 percent silk;

With result of thereby placing in the hands of dealers means or instrumentality

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in the various States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and that said hosiery contained silk as above set forth, and of causing members of such public to purchase substantial quantities of said hosiery because of such erroneous and mistaken belief and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to him from competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective hosiery and materials contained therein; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Charles W. Cromer, doing business under the name and style of Shalwin Hosiery Mills, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. That said respondent, Charles W. Cromer, doing business under the name and style of Shalwin Hosiery Mills, is now and has been engaged for more than 3 years last past, under said trade name, in the manufacture of hosiery and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce, as herein set out, with his factory or mill, office, and principal place of business in the city of Hagerstown, in the State of Maryland. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, causes the hosiery, manufactured and sold by him, to be transported from his said place of business in Maryland to, into, and through States of the United States other than Maryland to various and numerous customers in such other States to whom such hosiery is or has been sold. Respondent's usual course of dealing is to sell his hosiery to jobbers, wholesalers, and retail dealers through whom or which it is in turn sold to members of the consuming public.

Par. 2. That, during the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of hosiery of the general type, kind, and grade as that made and sold by respondent as hereinafter described, as well as other types, kinds, and grades of hosiery, and such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused and do now cause their said hosiery, when sold by them, to be transported from the various States of the United States where they are located to, into, and through States other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof to the purchasers thereof at their respective places of location. Said respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in competition in interstate commerce in the sale of his said hosiery with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

Par. 3. That one of the types of men's hosiery made and sold by respondent is made of cotton so far as the top, heel, toe, and sole are concerned while the remaining part thereof is made of a mixture of rayon and silk, each thread consisting of approximately 60 percent rayon and 40 percent silk. The percentage of silk in said hosiery is only a small fraction of the whole. Respondent, in the sale of said hosiery as aforesaid, causes to be stamped thereon the following statement:

Rayon
Reinforcing
TWO THREADS PURE SILK

The words "Two Threads Pure Silk" are stamped in large conspicuous type while the word "Rayon" is in smaller and less conspicuous type. The effect and implication of said statement, as so printed, is to create the false impression on the purchasing public that said hosiery is composed in substantial part of silk.

Par. 4. That, during said period as aforesaid, but prior to the use of the transfer stamp as stated in the preceding paragraph, respondent stamped such hose as therein described as follows:

PURE THREAD SILK
Reinforced
With Fine Rayon
Made in U. S. A.

On a label or tag attached to the top of some such hose, the following statement appeared:

SHALWIN
New Style Split-Foot —SILK HOSE—
Are made of the finest Materials and will give the wearer
complete satisfaction
Another type of transfer stamp formerly used by respondent on socks made as aforesaid was the following:

DURENE TOP AND FOOT
- First Quality Rayon
- Reinforced with
- Two Threads Pure Silk
- Made in U. S. A.

Such hose so stamped also had attached thereto labels or tags with the wording thereon as last above described.

That, at one time within the period as aforesaid, respondent manufactured and sold as aforesaid a type of hose of the same general type as above described, but with a silk content of only about 13 percent exclusive of the top, heel, toe, and sole. Said type of hose, and also that previously described, were stamped with a transfer stamp as follows:

- Pure Thread Silk
- Reinforced
- With Art Silk
- Made in U. S. A.

and also

- Pure Thread Silk
- Reinforced
- With Fine Rayon
- Made in U. S. A.

That the said representations imply and import that the major portion of said hosiery is made from silk, the same being the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, or that the major portion of the parts of such hosiery so stamped and described is made from silk, and that the rayon content so designated constitutes a relatively small part of each piece of such hosiery or of the part thereof so designated, when, in fact the major portion of each piece of such hosiery as well as of such portions thereof as contain silk are made of material or materials other than silk.

Par. 5. That, in many instances in the sale of his said hosiery above described, respondent has caused to be stamped upon such hose the following price mark as the retail price at which such hose is and should be sold, to wit:

50¢ per pair

when, in truth and in fact such price was fictitious and much higher than hose of the quality and price at the factory would warrant and higher than the retail prices at which such hose has customarily been offered for sale and sold.
Par. 6. That the representations of respondent as aforesaid have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the belief that respondent's said hosiery is composed in large part or wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, and that it is of a quality and price higher than it is in fact and to cause and induce such members of the public to buy said hosiery because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth. Said stampings and statements placed upon and attached to said hosiery further place in the hands of retail dealers, who handle and sell the same, an instrument of fraud and deceit by means of which they may mislead and defraud the purchasing public. Said practices of respondent also have the tendency and capacity to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of hosiery of the same or similar grade and kind as well as that made wholly of silk. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in no wise make the same or similar misleading representations as made by respondent as herein set out and who truthfully and accurately state the quality of their merchandise, the materials of which it is made and the normal price at which it should be sold at retail. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 7. The above acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 30, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Charles W. Cromer, trading as Shalwin Hosiery Mills, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Harry D. Michael, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by respondent, before W. W.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondent, Charles W. Cromer, is an individual trading and doing business as Shalwin Hosiery Mills and having his office and principal place of business in the town of Hagerstown, State of Maryland. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 6 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing hosiery in commerce among and between various States of the United States. Respondent causes such hosiery, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Maryland to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said hosiery among and between various States of the United States.

Par. 2. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations selling and distributing hosiery of the same type, kind, and grade as that manufactured and sold by respondent and of various other types, kinds, and grades. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not represent, brand, label, advertise, or describe their hosiery falsely or deceptively and who do not represent that their hosiery contains more silk than is in fact present in such hosiery.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his hosiery, the respondent has caused such hosiery to be sold and distributed in commerce among and between various States of the United States bearing certain brands, labels and stamps purporting to relate to and be descriptive of the silk content of the said hosiery.
Findings

Respondent caused to be stamped on one type of hose which he sold and distributed as aforesaid the following statement and representation:

PURE THREAD SILK
Reinforced
With Art Silk

and on another type of hose the following:

PURE THREAD SILK
Reinforced
With Fine Rayon
Made in U. S. A.

Respondent caused to be placed on both of the above types of hose a label which read on one side:

Manufactured by Shalwin Hosiery Mills

and on the other side:

Shalwin New Style
Split Foot Silk Hose are made of the finest materials and will give the wearer
complete satisfaction

In truth and in fact, the top, heel, toe, and sole of such hosiery was made of cotton. The body of said hose designated by the term “Pure Thread Silk” is in fact part rayon and part silk, in the percentage of rayon—87 percent, and silk—13 percent. In truth and in fact, the percentage of silk contained in the whole sock is only 3 percent of the hose by weight.

Respondent caused to be stamped on another type of hose which he sold and distributed as aforesaid the following statement and representation:

reinforcing
TWO THREADS PURE SILK

The words “Two Threads Pure Silk” are stamped in large, conspicuous type on said hose while the word “Rayon” is in small and less conspicuous type. In truth and in fact, the top, heel, toe, and sole of said hosiery are made of cotton. The body of said hosiery, stamped with the words “Rayon reinforcing Two Threads Pure Silk,” contains approximately 60 percent rayon and 40 percent silk.

By means of such stamps, brands, and labels disseminated as aforesaid, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States that such hosiery contains silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, as the principal or major constituent therein, and contains silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, in a proportion or quantity larger than the proportion or quantity of rayon present in such hosiery.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact, said hosiery branded, stamped, labeled, and represented as aforesaid has the appearance and feel of silk but is composed largely of rayon and cotton. Said hosiery is not composed of nor does it contain silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, as the principal or major constituent of said hosiery. The proportion or quantity of rayon is larger than the proportion or quantity of silk present in such hosiery. Such silk as is or may be present in the first type of hose described above is less than 5 percent of the hose by weight, to wit, 3 percent of the hose by weight.

Par. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid labels, brands, and stamps in the sale and distribution of said hosiery in commerce among and between various States of the United States, respondent has thereby placed, and is continuing to place, in the hands of dealers a means or instrumentality of deception and fraud whereby such dealers are enabled, aided, and assisted in misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public as to the contents of said hosiery and the quality, value, grade, and substance thereof.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid respondent has caused to be stamped on a substantial number of said hose the words "50c per pair," which serves as a representation by the respondent that 50 cents per pair is the customary and ordinary retail value of said hose. In truth and in fact, such purported retail value is fictitious and is much higher than the price at which such hose is customarily and ordinarily offered for sale and sold at retail.

Par. 7. The use by respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations are true and that said hosiery contains silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, in a larger proportion than is in fact present in such hosiery, and that such hosiery is composed of or contains silk in a quantity or proportion larger than the proportion of rayon contained in said hosiery, and causes members of the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of said hosiery because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise and represent their respective hosiery and the materials contained in such hosiery. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and W. W. Sheppard, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief in support of the complaint, respondent having waived filing of brief and not having requested oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Charles W. Cromer, individually and trading and doing business as Shalwin Hosiery Mills, or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of hosiery in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner whatsoever that the hosiery manufactured or sold by him contains "silk" or "pure thread silk," the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, in greater quantity, percentage, or degree than is actually the case.

2. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling, hosiery composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such hosiery is composed of rayon, and when such hosiery is composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, provided that if any particular fiber in said hosiery is not present in a substantial amount by weight, the percentage in which such fiber is present shall then be specifically disclosed.

3. Using the words "silk" or "pure thread silk," or words of similar import and meaning, to describe, designate, or refer to hosiery which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided that in the case of hosiery composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such words may be used as descriptive of the silk content if there are used in immediate connection and conjunction with the word "silk," in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and provided that if any particular fiber in said hosiery is not present in a substantial amount by weight, the percentage in which such fiber is present shall then be specifically disclosed.

4. Using the term "pure thread silk reinforced with rayon" to describe, designate, or refer to any hosiery other than that in which the chief constituent is pure thread silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, combined solely with rayon as a reinforcing substance.

5. Marking, stamping, or affixing to such hosiery, or the containers thereof, or otherwise representing as the customary or regular retail prices therefor, prices which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said hosiery is regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold at retail.

This order shall not be construed as permitting the use of the unqualified word "silk" to designate, describe, or refer to weighted silk.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where two individuals engaged in selling their so-called business stimulator or sales-promotion plan or trade-promotion cards which were so designed and arranged that use thereof constituted a lottery or gift enterprise when used by retail merchant in promoting and increasing sales of his merchandise to consuming public, and which consisted of cards arranged for punching out $5 or $10 in trade, as case might be, and had concealed within their so-called "Treasure Chest," for disclosure, when card, as suggested, had been punched out through merchandise sales made to customer to which given, legends entitling chance holder to amounts in trade ranging from 20 cents to $5 for the $5 cards, and from 40 cents to $10 for the $10 cards—

Sold to retail dealer customers such cards, together with variety of display posters and advertising matter for such customers in use and distribution of said cards, and punch for canceling numbers arranged on border to indicate amount of sale, and with suggestion for use thereof by their said retail customer merchants who distributed said cards to their customers and prospective customers and honored awards as shown thereon, and thereby knowingly supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of operating lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, contrary to public policy, and in competition with many who are opposed to use or sale of trade-promotion cards or systems which involve lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises and refrain from sale thereof;

With effect of inducing many of the consuming public to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants using cards sold by them in preference to purchasing from merchants using sales-booster plans or schemes or devices of competitors which have connected with them no element of lot or chance, and with result, by reason of such fact, that many of such merchants, who cannot use more than one type of sales-promotion or price-concession card or coupon at same time, were induced to purchase cards sold by them in preference to devices or plans of competitors, and trade was thus diverted to them from their competitors, and with result that sales of competing plans or promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons of competitors were injuriously affected; to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and to the restraint and detriment of freedom of fair and legitimate competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel, for the Commission
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Edward Harris and Dorothy Harris, individually and as copartners trading as Ace Business Builders, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondents, Edward Harris and Dorothy Harris, are individuals and are doing business as a partnership under the trade name Ace Business Builders, with their principal office and place of business located at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail merchants located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondents cause and have caused their said products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such sales-promotion cards between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and with corporations and individuals engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons, and trading stamps, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. The respondents manufacture and distribute several groups of sales-promotion cards, but they all involve the same lottery scheme or gift enterprise and vary only in detail. The sales-promotion cards in one such group are herein described for the purpose of showing

10 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 15

Under the “Treasure Chest” panel is the following:

The “Treasure Chest” referred to on the said card is a panel partially perforated, to indicate where it may be opened, but until the said panel is opened the legend thereunder is effectively concealed from the holder of the said card. The said legends under the “Treasure Chest” panel vary in amount from 20 cents to $5. The legend under the said panel is effectively concealed until the panel has been opened and the amount which the holder of said card will receive in trade is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. On the reverse or back of the said sales-promotion cards is the following language:

EVERY CARD WINS—Awards Up to $5

These awards are given in appreciation of your patronage. When this card is fully punched, present same to us intact. We will then open the TREASURE CHEST and you will receive the award printed thereon ABSOLUTELY FREE. SHOULD YOU OPEN

THE TREASURE CHEST, THIS CARD BECOMES VOID.

(Merchant’s Ad)

Other cards manufactured and distributed by the respondents provide for recording the sale of $10 worth of merchandise by the numbers arranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of amounts up to $10 by the legends under the panel. In some groups the legends begin with 20 cents and go to $10, and in other groups they begin with 40 cents and go to $10.

Respondents furnish the retail merchants with various display posters and advertisements to be used by said retail merchants in distributing and using said cards.
PAR. 3. The retail merchants to whom respondents sell assortments of said sales-promotion cards distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown under the panel of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondents and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made punches corresponding to the amount of such purchases are made around the margin of said card, and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched the panel is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the said panel free of charge.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondents various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price-concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which when used by retail merchants do not involve a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. By reason of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with the distribution and use of the respondents' said cards, many retail merchants are induced to purchase respondents' said cards in preference to the devices manufactured and distributed by respondents' competitors, and trade is thus diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

PAR. 5. The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants using respondents' cards in preference to retail merchants using the devices of respondents' competitors, because of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with respondents' said cards. By reason thereof, retail merchants are induced to purchase respondents' said cards in preference to devices of respondents' competitors, and trade is thus diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of said method in designing and arranging their said cards is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of retail merchants are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 7. The respondents, in shipping the said cards to their customers, assort and pack them so that such customers know the amount of award stated under the panel; thus the retail merchants to whom respondents sell their cards are enabled to perpetrate a fraud on their customers. This practice has the capacity and tendency to induce, and does induce retail merchants to purchase respondents' said cards in preference to cards or devices of respondents' competitors.

Par. 8. The aforesaid method, acts, and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 12, 1937, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Edward Harris and Dorothy Harris, individually and as copartners trading as Ace Business Builders, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondents (respondents not being represented by counsel), before William C. Reeves, an examiner for the Commission heretofore designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Edward Harris and Dorothy Harris, are partners, and since July 1935 have been carrying on business under the name and style of Ace Business Builders with place of business at Chicago, Ill. They have been engaged in the business of the sale of what they term a business-stimulator plan or sales-promotion plan, which plan has been sold to retail dealers in various States of the United States, and respondents have caused the printed matter intended for use in the operation of said plan to be transported from Chicago in the State of Illinois, through and into or into the various States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof, and in the course and conduct of their said business respondents have been and are now in active competition with various persons and corporations and other partnerships, also engaged in the sale of various types of plans and systems designed for the stimulation and promotion of the business of retail merchants in commerce among several of the States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold cards so designed and arranged that their use constitutes a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of the merchandise of such merchants to the consuming public. One type of the card so sold by respondents is substantially as follows:

10 KEEP THIS HIDDEN TREASURE CHEST CARD 15

Under the Treasure Chest is the following:

When properly punched, good for 20 cents in trade

The Treasure Chest referred to on the said card was partially perforated to indicate where it might be opened, but until said chest was opened, the legend thereunder was effectively concealed from the holder of said card. The said legends under the Treasure Chest varied in amount from 20 cents to $5. Thus the amount which the holder of said card would receive in trade was determined wholly by lot or chance.

On the reverse or back of said sales promotion cards was the following:

EVERY CARD WINS—AWARDS UP TO $5.00

These awards are given in appreciation of your patronage. When this card is fully punched, present same to us intact. We will then open the Treasure Chest and you will receive the award printed thereon ABSOLUTELY FREE.

SHOULD YOU OPEN THE TREASURE CHEST, THIS CARD BECOMES VOID.

PATRONIZE US ALWAYS—IT WILL PAY YOU

(MERCHANT’S ADVERTISEMENT)

Par. 3. Each of the cards included in one of the groups sold by respondents is intended for use in sales of merchandise aggregating $5 and the cards in such group provide for awards ranging from 20 cents in trade to $5 in trade; the cards in other groups sold by respondents are intended for use in sales of merchandise aggregating $10 and provide for awards ranging from 40 cents in trade to $10 in trade. Respondents furnish their customers with a variety of display posters and advertising matter to be used by such customers in the use and distribution of said cards; respondents also furnish their customers with a punch for canceling the numbers arranged along the border of such cards to indicate the amount of the sale made in each instance.

The retail merchants to whom respondents sell and have sold assortments of said sales-promotion cards or trade cards distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers, and honor the awards as shown under the Treasure Chest of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondents and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers of respondents is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made numbers corresponding to the amount of such purchase are punched from the margin of said card and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched the Treasure Chest is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the Treasure Chest without additional charge.

Par. 4. Employees or officers of concerns manufacturing and distributing trade stamps and other trade-booster cards not involving a lottery or chance feature were called as witnesses and testified in this matter. The Commission finds that manufacturers and distributors of trading stamps, 99-cent and other price-concession cards, and premium coupons are in competition with the respondents and the business of the respondents. Retail merchants desiring to install some plan by which to boost sales of their merchandise cannot use more than one type of sales-promotion or price-concession card or coupon at the same time and retail merchants purchasing the cards sold by the respondents are not then in the market for other trade-booster schemes or plans which do not involve a lot or chance feature.

The lot or chance feature connected with the cards sold by respondents has the capacity to and does induce many of the consuming public to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants using the cards sold by respondents in preference to retail merchants using the sales-booster schemes or plans or devices of competitors of respondents which have connected with them no element of lot or chance, and by reason of this last-mentioned fact many retail merchants are induced to purchase the cards sold by respondents in preference to devices or plans of competitors of respondents, and trade is thus diverted to respondents from their competitors.

Par. 5. The use by retail merchants of the cards sold by respondents in the manner and by the methods described herein, constitutes a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise and the sale of such cards by respondents and the use of the cards by the customers of respondents is contrary to public policy. The Commission finds that many competitors of respondents are opposed to the use or sale of trade-promotion cards or systems which involve lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises and refrain from selling same. Such competitors are thereby put to a competitive disadvantage.

Par. 6. The respondents, in selling and distributing said cards, have knowledge that they are, and will be, used by their customers in the operation of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. The respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of operating lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises. The sale and distribution of such cards by the respondents injuriously affects the sales of competing sales plans or sales-promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons by competitors of respondents, and the use of such methods by the respondents, in the sale and distribution of said cards, is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to competitors of respondents and is a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition. Respondents have made sales of the cards to customers in a majority of the States of the United States.
CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as set forth in the foregoing findings, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and to competitors of respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed by attorney for the Commission (respondents not having filed brief or requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Edward Harris and Dorothy Harris, individually, and as copartners trading as Ace Business Builders, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of sales-promotion cards, or any other sales-promotion plans or schemes in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing sales-promotion cards or any other articles of merchandise so designed that their use by retail merchants constitutes or may constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, sales-promotion cards or sales-promotion plans or schemes, or any other articles of merchandise which are used, or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof, to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise, when distributed to the consuming public.

3. Furnishing or supplying to dealers display posters or circulars or other advertising literature bearing legends or statements informing the public as to the manner in which said sales-promotion cards or other lottery devices are to be or may be distributed and used.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Docket 3175. Complaint, July 16, 1937—Decision, Feb. 27, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of penknives, hunting knives, automatic razors, watches, clocks, and various other articles to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers—

Supplied or furnished his customers with various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise was distributed to purchasing public wholly by lot or chance and which involved sale and distribution of punchboards and push cards, separately and with merchandise, for sale and distribution of his said products under a plan in accordance with which purchasers for 5 cents of chance on 1,500-hole punchboard, divided into 60 sections, received certain articles of merchandise as prizes or nothing, in accordance with success or failure in securing certain numbers, and last punch in each section entitled purchaser to 25 cents as a prize, and purchaser thus secured or failed to secure article of merchandise, value of which, in any event, exceeded that of cost of punch, and combined value of all of which articles was much less than the sum produced by sale of all punches, and under which plan, in some instances, customer received postcard for the 5 cents paid, with right to punch number from board; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others, means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of his said merchandise in accordance with aforesaid and similar sales plans involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof; contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the laws of several states, and in competition with many who are engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar articles and who are unwilling to offer or sell their said merchandise by any method or sales plan which involves game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, or any method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With effect of inducing purchaser of his said merchandise to buy same in preference to like or similar merchandise offered and sold by competitors who do not use such plans or methods in sale and distribution of their products, and with result that many members of the purchasing public were attracted by element of chance involved in his said sales plan or method and thereby induced to purchase his said products in preference to like and similar merchandise of competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with result that wholesalers and jobbers, by reason of such preference, were induced and persuaded to buy his said products in preference to like or similar articles sold or distributed by his competitors and substantial quantities of his said merchandise were

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that H. G.
Payne, individually and trading as H. G. Payne Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of H. G. Payne Co. and has his principal office and place of business at 312-314 Broadway, in the city of Nashville, State of Tennessee. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of penknives, hunting knives, automatic razors, safety razors, watches, clocks, cigarette lighters, smoking pipes, cigar holders, flashlights, fountain pens, automatic pencils, cameras, opera glasses, and various other articles of merchandise, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers.
Respondent's customers are located at points in the various States of the United States, and respondent causes his said merchandise when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in Nashville, Tenn., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.
PAR. 2. In the sale and distribution of his said merchandise, respondent has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of punchboards and push cards or similar devices, the use of which by retail dealers or individuals in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public of respondent's said merchandise or products was and is substantially as follows:

Said punchboards consist of boards of various shapes and sizes with from 100 to 3,000 holes. Into each of the holes has been inserted a small slip of paper bearing a printed number, the printed slips bearing consecutive numbers according to the number of holes contained in the board but not arranged in numerical sequence, and said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboards that they cannot be seen by the customer except when they are punched from the board. The punchboards bear legends indicating the numbers which entitle the purchasing public to an article of merchandise or prize, and in some cases the last punch in each board receives a prize. Customers pay 1 cent, 5 cents, or 10 cents for each punch from the board, and the purchasers of punches who receive numbers calling for an article of merchandise receive such article, and purchasers who receive numbers other than those enumerated on the board, or who do not qualify by purchasing the last punch on the board, receive nothing for their money. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board, and the combined value of the articles of merchandise is much less than the cost of the total punches on the board. On some of the boards furnished by respondent certain punches are free.

The push cards furnished by the respondent involve the same principle, but vary in detail.

The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded into purchasing punches from said boards or pushes from said cards in the hope of making a prize-winning selection and thus obtain an article of merchandise for a sum less than the normal retail value thereof. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells his merchandise resell the same to retail dealers, together with the punchboards or push cards furnished by respondent, and such retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct offer for sale and sell said merchandise to the purchasing public by means of said punchboards of push cards in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth, and said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale and distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public, as above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure such articles of merchandise in the manner alleged. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell merchandise by any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise as distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said methods or sales plans and by the element of chance involved in the sale or purchase thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise of respondent in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods or sales plans by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondent and such other distributors as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods or sales plans by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.
PAR. 6. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 16, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, H. G. Payne, individually, and trading as H. G. Payne Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, Henry C. Lank, and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Horace J. Donnelly, Jr., and John A. Nash, attorneys for the respondent, before Robert S. Hall and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent having filed no brief and not having requested oral argument), and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, H. G. Payne, is an individual doing business under the trade name of H. G. Payne Co., with his principal place of business located at 312-314 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. For several years last past respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of penknives, hunting knives, automatic razors, safety razors, watches, clocks, cigarette lighters, pipes, cigarette holders, flashlights, fountain pens, automatic pencils, cameras, opera glasses, lottery devices, and various other articles to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. Respondent has caused his said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States at their respective points of location from his aforesaid place of business in Nashville, Tenn.

Respondent has been at all times mentioned herein in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In so carrying on his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has supplied or furnished his customers with various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise has been distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. The devices sold and distributed by respondent are what are commonly known as punchboards and push cards. One of said punchboards is operated substantially as follows: This board contains 1,500 small holes, into each of which has been inserted a small slip of paper with a number printed thereon, and the said slips are so placed and secreted in said punchboard that they cannot be seen by the customer until after they have been punched from the board. There are a number of cut-outs on the board, in which are placed articles of merchandise. The punchboard bears legends or statements explaining the operation thereof. Sales are 5 cent each, and each purchaser is entitled to punch one of said numbers from the board, which board is divided into 60 sections, and certain designated numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to designated articles of merchandise as prizes, and the last punch in each section entitles the purchaser thereof to 25 cents as a prize. Purchasers who do not qualify by punching one of the numbers designated as prize-winning numbers, or the last number in one of the sections, receive nothing for their money. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single punch from the said board, and the combined value of the articles of merchandise is much less than the sum produced by the sale of all the punches on the board. In the above-described manner respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. In some instances, customers of respondent buy post cards for sale and distribution in connection with the above-described punchboard, and when such post cards are used, each purchaser, for the sum of 5 cents receives one of said post cards, and is entitled to punch one number from said board.
Respondent has furnished various punchboards, together with merchandise to be sold thereby, to his customers located in various States of the United States, but said punchboards involve the same principle of operation as the one hereinabove described, and vary only in detail. In so carrying on said business, respondent also has sold and distributed to his said customers, separately and apart from said merchandise, a device commonly known as a push card, which push card is operated on the same principle as the punchboard hereinabove described, and varies only in detail. Respondent has also furnished and supplied his customers with said punchboards separately and apart from said merchandise. Many dealers have used said devices purchased from respondent in making up lottery deals from their own assortments of merchandise, and said merchandise has been sold to the general public by means of said devices.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells his merchandise, together with said punchboards, resell the same to retail dealers, who in turn sell and distribute said merchandise by means of said punchboards to members of the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent has thus supplied to, and placed in the hands of, others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of his said merchandise, in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove described. Said sales plans have the capacity and tendency to induce, and have induced purchasers of respondent's merchandise to purchase the same in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent's competitors who do not use such sales plans or methods in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise.

Par. 4. The sale and distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner hereinabove found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The sale and distribution of merchandise in the manner hereinabove described is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several States of the United States. Among the respondent's competitors there are many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute like or similar articles of merchandise in competition with respondent as hereinabove found, and said competitors are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said merchandise by any method or sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom, and as a result are placed at a disadvantage in competition.
PAR. 5. Many members of the purchasing public were attracted by the element of chance involved in the respondent's said sales plan or method, and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the like or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not or do not use the same or equivalent methods. Because of said preference on the part of members of the purchasing public, wholesale dealers and jobbers have been induced and persuaded to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to like or similar articles of merchandise sold or distributed by respondent's said competitors, and as a result respondent has sold substantial quantities of his said merchandise, and trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from his said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed by attorney for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief nor requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

SWAMP AND DIXIE LABORATORIES, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in sale of "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" and "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" to retail druggists and others in various States and in the District of Columbia; in false advertisements which it disseminated through the mails and through insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and through circulars and other printed matter distributed in commerce and in said District—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that said "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" medicinal preparation was a doctor's prescription which constituted a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria and every kind of fever and ague, and that it would break up malaria in 3 days and was a general tonic, and a remedy or competent and effective treatment for colds, chills, poor appetite, and run-down condition, and that it regulated the bowels and purified the system, facts being said representations were grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, said preparation was not a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria, etc., as above set forth, or general tonic, nor remedy for colds, etc., and would not accomplish other results above claimed, and while each of certain ingredients therein contained might be beneficial at some stage in treatment of malaria, it might be unnecessary and perhaps definitely counter-indicated in other stages, and in other cases, and preparation was not a wholly safe drug for use by lay public in self-medication; and

(b) Represented that its "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" was a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, grippe, or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and all kinds of fever, facts being such representations were grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, said preparation was not such a remedy or treatment for sleeplessness and for other ailments and conditions above set out, and was not a wholly safe drug for use by lay public in self-medication;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and into purchase of its said medicinal preparations as a result of such statements, representations, and advertisements:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Swamp and Dixie Laboratories, Inc., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Swamp and Dixie Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Arkansas, with its office and principal place of business located at 301-311 Rogers Avenue, Fort Smith, Ark. The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing two medicinal preparations known as "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" and "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder." Respondent sells these medicinal preparations to retail druggists and others located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and causes said preparations when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Arkansas to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Arkansas and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said drugs in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and does now cause to be disseminated, false advertisements for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's said medicinal preparations. Said false advertisements were and are disseminated by use of the United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Various means have been and are used by respondent to disseminate, or cause the dissemination of, said false advertisements for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of respondent's said medicinal preparations. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said false advertisement so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic.
For malarial fever and ague.
A safe, certain and permanent cure for every form of fever. The remedy that cures.
A doctor's prescription which will break up malaria in 3 days if taken according to directions.

* * * If you have trouble with malaria chills and fever, poor appetite, lost energy or a run-down condition, then * * * Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic will prove your best friend * * * It is a good general tonic, an ideal treatment for colds * * * Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic regulates the bowels, enriches the blood, improves the appetite, purifies the system, quickly and completely freeing you from the dreaded malaria germs which make you inefficient and life miserable.

Dixie Fever and Pain Powder.

For the relief of simple headache and neuralgia, muscular aches and pains. Indicated also for head colds. Useful in reducing fever.

Dependable for 40 years.

A sovereign remedy for all aches and pains. For the relief of headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, la grippe, cold in the head, sleeplessness and all nervous conditions.

For the relief of fevers, such as intermittent, remittent, hay fever, chill fever, etc.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not set forth herein, respondent has represented directly and by implication that the medicinal preparation “Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic” is a doctor's prescription, that it is a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria and every kind of fever and ague, that it will “break up” malaria in 3 days, that it is a general tonic, that it is a remedy or competent or effective treatment for colds, chills, poor appetite, and run-down condition, and that it regulates the bowels and purifies the system; that the medicinal preparation “Dixie Fever and Pain Powder” is a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, la grippe or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and all other kinds of fever.

Par. 3. The said representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. The medicinal preparation “Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic” is not a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria and for all kinds of fever and ague, nor will it “break up” malaria in 3 days. It is not a general tonic. It is not a remedy for colds, chill, poor appetite and run-down condition. It neither regulates the bowels nor purifies the system. The preparation “Dixie Fever and Pain Powder” is not a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, la grippe or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and for all kinds of fever.

The true facts are the preparation “Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic” contains quinoidine, acetanilid, iron, nux vomica, formaldehyde, and syrup senna. Each of these ingredients may be beneficial at some stage in the treatment of malaria though unnecessary and perhaps definitely counter-indicated at other stages and in other cases. The preparation “Dixie Fever and Pain Powder” contains acetanilid, sodium bicarb, caffeine concentrated, and Po. charcoal. Neither of these two preparations is a wholly safe drug to be used by the lay public in self-medication.

Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and into the purchase of respondent's medicinal preparations as a result of such statements, representations, and advertisements.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 29, 1938, issued and served its complaint upon respondent, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 3, 1939, respondent filed its answer in which it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Swamp and Dixie Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Arkansas, with its office and principal place of business located at 301–311 Rogers Avenue, Fort Smith, Ark. The respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing two medicinal preparations known as

"Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" and "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder." Respondent sells these medicinal preparations to retail druggists and others located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and it causes said preparations when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Arkansas to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Arkansas and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and does now cause to be disseminated, false advertisements for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's said medicinal preparations. Said false advertisements were and are disseminated by use of the United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Various means have been and are used by respondent to disseminate, or cause the dissemination of, said false advertisements for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of respondent's said medicinal preparations. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic.
For malarial fever and ague.
A safe, certain and permanent cure for every form of fever. The remedy that cures.
A doctor's prescription which will break up malaria in 3 days, if taken according to directions.
  • • • If you have trouble with malaria chills and fever, poor appetite, lost energy or a run-down condition, then • • • Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic will prove your best friend • • • It is a good general tonic, an ideal treatment for colds. • • • Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic regulates the bowels, enriches the blood, improves the appetite, purifies the system, quickly and completely freeing you from the dreaded malaria germs which make you inefficient and life miserable.

Dixie Fever and Pain Powder.
For the relief of simple headache and neuralgia, muscular aches and pains. Indicated also for head colds. Useful in reducing fever.
Dependable for 40 years.

A sovereign remedy for all aches and pains. For the relief of headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, hay fever, cold in the head, sleeplessness, and all nervous conditions.

For the relief of fevers, such as intermittent, remittent, hay fever, chill fever, etc.

The Commission finds that through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set forth, respondent has represented directly and by implication that the medicinal preparation "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" is a doctor's prescription, that it is a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria and every kind of fever and ague, that it will "break up" malaria in 3 days, that it is a general tonic, that it is a remedy or competent or effective treatment for colds, chills, poor appetite, and run-down condition, and that it regulates the bowels and purifies the system; that the medicinal preparation "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" is a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, hay fever, or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and all kinds of fever.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the said representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. The medicinal preparation "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" is not a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria and for all kinds of fever and ague, nor will it "break up" malaria in 3 days. It is not a general tonic. It is not a remedy for colds, chill, poor appetite, and run-down condition. It neither regulates the bowels nor purifies the system. The preparation "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" is not a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, hay fever or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and for all kinds of fever.

The true facts are that the preparation "Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic" contains quinoidine, acetanilid, iron, nux vomica, formaldehyde, and syrup senna. Each of these ingredients may be beneficial at some stage in the treatment of malaria though unnecessary and perhaps definitely counter-indicated at other stages and in other cases. The preparation "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" contains acetanilid, sodium bicarb, caffeine concentrated, and Po. charcoal. Neither of these two preparations is a wholly safe drug to be used by the lay public in self-medication.

Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and into the purchase of respondent’s medicinal preparations as a result of such statements, representations, and advertisements.

CONCLUSION

The above acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Swamp and Dixie Laboratories, Inc., its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of medicinal preparations containing drugs now designated by the name of “Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic” and “Dixie Fever and Pain Powder,” or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparations, which advertisements represent directly or through implication that said medicinal preparation “Swamp Chill and Fever Tonic” is a safe, certain, and permanent cure for malaria or for every kind of fever and ague, that it will break up or cure malaria, that it is a general tonic, that it is a remedy or competent or effective treatment for colds, chills, poor appetite, and run-down condition, that it regulates the bowels and purifies the system, or that said preparation "Dixie Fever and Pain Powder" is a safe remedy or treatment for sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, la grippe or influenza, cold in the head, catarrh, and all kinds of fever, and which advertisements fail to reveal that these preparations are not wholly safe drugs to be used by the lay public in self-medication.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether it intends to comply with this order, and if so, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

JOHN MILTON BREGSTONE, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS J. M. BREGSTONE & COMPANY

Before Mr. William C. Reevcs, trial examiner.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John Milton Bregston, individually, and trading as J. M. Bregstone & Co., herein-after referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent is an individual trading under the name and style of J. M. Bregstone & Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 538 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and, for some time last past, has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling radios and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois into and through other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise through interstate commerce, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondent was, and is, substantially as follows:

Respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in magazines of interstate circulation and has distributed to the purchasing public, through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature, instructions and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements, containing illustrations of his merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards.

Said push cards bear a number of feminine names, with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "push," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disk is a number, which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the cards. The push cards have a master seal, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

Licensed
R C A ZEPHYR RADIO

Fully Guaranteed
FREE

NAME UNDER SEAL

Do Not Remove (SEAL)

FREE NUMBERS ARE:
10—20—30—40—50—60—

WRITE YOUR NAME OPPOSITE THE NAME YOU SELECT IN SPACE PROVIDED ON INSERT SHEET

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent are of greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded to purchase pushes from said cards in the hope of selecting a prize-winning name or number and thus obtaining an article of merchandise for a price of 35 cents, or less, or without charge. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance, or whether the chance is without charge, are determined wholly by lot or chance. Respondent furnishes his representatives with additional printed instructions or suggestions for using said push cards. One of said printed instructions bears the following legend, to wit:
This catalog contains 150 girls' names. The amount to be paid for the sale of each name ranges from 1¢ to 35¢. No sale pays over 35¢. There are also 10 Free Numbers. Persons selecting names showing numbers 10--20--30--40--50--60--70--80--90--100 pay Nothing.

As each person "pushes" a name, the amount to be paid is the number which appears on the inside of the slip. For example: If the name "pushed" shows the inside number to be 3, then 3¢ is the amount to be paid; if a name is "pushed" showing the inside number 19, then 19¢ is to be paid.

DO NOT OPEN SEAL UNTIL ALL NAMES HAVE BEEN SOLD.

When the entire card has been sold, turn the receipts over to your distributor, and you will receive the radio illustrated.

One radio is given to the person who handles the sale of names on the card and another is given to the person who selected the name which corresponds to the name under the seal.

Respondent furnishes or sells various devices, including push cards and punchboards, for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Said sales plan or method varies in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards and punchboards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 8, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent John Milton Bregstone, individually and trading as J. M. Bregstone & Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (respondent having filed no answer thereto), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash, attorney for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an Examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John Milton Bregstone, is an individual doing business under the name of J. M. Bregstone & Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 538 South
Findings

Clark Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, clocks, cocktail sets, toys, and other articles of merchandise to dealers and to members of the public located at points in the various States of the United States. During the time above mentioned, respondent has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments were made.

Respondent has been at all times hereinabove mentioned in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In so carrying on said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent, in soliciting the sale of his merchandise, has distributed through the United States mails, to members of the general public, circular letters, and advertising literature explaining the sales plan or method employed by the respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise. The advertising literature contained picturizations of respondent's merchandise and of respondent's devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards, by means of which devices respondent's merchandise was to be sold and distributed to the purchasing public. As a result of the distribution of such advertising literature and circular letters, members of the public have purchased respondent's said devices and used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's said merchandise. The sales plan or method used in connection with respondent's said push cards is substantially as follows: On the face of said push cards are printed legends showing the manner in which said card is operated. The advertising literature and circular letters contained additional detailed instructions concerning the operation of said cards and the sale and distribution of said merchandise by the use thereof. Each of the push cards had printed thereon a number of feminine names, with blank spaces opposite an alphabetical list of the names, for writing in the names of customers who purchased chances on the push cards. Each push card had a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "push." Below each disk was printed one of the feminine names printed elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk was a number which was disclosed when the disk was pushed or separated from the card. Each card had a master seal, concealed within which was one of the feminine names. Said cards also contained the legends or statements to the effect that purchasers punching certain designated numbers would receive those numbers without cost.

When all the disks had been selected or pushed by customers and the master seal removed, the person who had selected the name corresponding to the name concealed within the master seal received the article of merchandise specified without further charge. Customers pushing numbers 1 to 35 paid in cents the amount indicated by the number pushed by them, with the exception of those numbers which were indicated as free numbers. Customers who pushed or removed disks from said card which revealed numbers higher than 35, paid only 35 cents. Customers selecting names which did not correspond with the name revealed by the removal of the master seal received nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a selection and pushing a disk from said board. In this manner the respondent sold and distributed substantial quantities of the said articles of merchandise to members of the general public.

The Commission finds that respondent's merchandise was distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and that the amount which a customer paid for a chance, or whether the same was without cost, was determined wholly by lot or chance.

The sales plan or method employed in connection with said punchboards was the same in principle, varying only in detail, as that used in connection with the said push cards and constituted the sale and distribution of merchandise by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished his said push cards and punchboards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove described. The Commission further finds that the sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public as hereinabove found involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof or without cost, and that the use of said method in the sale and distribution of merchandise was and is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the United States.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the business of selling and distributing like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, who do not sell and distribute their merchandise by use of lotteries or games of chance.

Many purchasers of respondent's merchandise were attracted by the element of chance involved in respondent's sales plan or method and were thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise of respondent's competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods. Because of said preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's merchandise with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (respondent having filed no answer), testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed by attorney for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief nor requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, John Milton Bregstone, individually, and trading as J. M. Bregstone & Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of radios, cocktail sets, toys, or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery device, for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to his agents or to distributors or members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL PUBLICITY BUREAU, INC., TRADING IN ITS OWN NAME AND AS NATIONAL PUBLICITY BUREAU AND ROGERS SILVERWARE DISTRIBUTORS, AND HUGH J. WANKE, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS PRESIDENT OF NATIONAL PUBLICITY BUREAU, INC., TRADING AS ROGERS SILVERWARE DISTRIBUTORS

Docket 2908. Complaint, Aug. 21, 1936—Decision, Mar. 1, 1939

Where an individual engaged, under trade name "National Publicity Bureau," in purchase of silverplated ware from Wm. A. Rogers at Oneida, N. Y., and under trade name "Rogers Silverware Distributors," in sale of trading cards redeemable in such silverplated ware, to retail merchants for distribution to their customers, and in selling said cards at $4.50 a 1,000, with dealer customers under contracts entered into with him by them in which they agreed to cooperate with Rogers Silverware Distributors in distribution of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware for advertising purposes—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that said Rogers Silverware Distributors trading cards were a method of advertising used by Wm. A. Rogers, maker of silverware, facts being he had no connection, either directly or through such Rogers Silverware Distributors, with Wm. A. Rogers, silverware maker, except as a customer for its wares;

(b) Represented that said Rogers Silverware Distributors, for cooperation given by the merchant in distributing Wm. A. Rogers Silverware, would furnish him gratis display set of 26 pieces of said ware with the distribution of 25,000 cards, facts being he did not furnish such a set on such condition, but claimed that, under contract, dealer was not entitled to set until he had distributed cards for 6 months and had completely distributed that number of cards, which interpretation was not made clear and necessary by contract, dealer signatories to which expected to receive display set along with delivery of cards bought;

(c) Represented that said Rogers Silverware Distributors in consideration of publicity and cooperation extended during life of agreement, would pay merchant buying cards cash refund at rate of $4.50 for each and every 1,000 cards redeemed, facts being he did not pay such refund but claimed that dealer was not entitled to any refund until he had distributed cards for period of 6 months under contract, which did not make clear such interpretation, and dealer signatories of which expected refund to be made whenever thousand of such cards had been redeemed;

(d) Represented that said Silverware Distributors would redeem said trading cards in Wm. A. Rogers Silverware for customers of dealers without cost to such customers, facts being he did not thus redeem said trading cards, but required customers to send in an amount of money therewith which approximated cost of the silverware to such Rogers Silverware Distributors; and
(e) Represented, through use of said name Rogers Silverware Distributors in and as a part of his trade name, that he was directly connected with, or a part of, the company which made Wm. A. Rogers Silverware, and failed to remove implication of such direct connection through use on his contract of words "We have no connections with any other companies," which did not suffice for such purpose;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and false belief that said representations were true, and to induce number of retail merchants to buy substantial quantity of said trading cards which, lacking such erroneous and false belief, they would not purchase, and, as direct consequence of such erroneous and false belief induced by such representations, to cause number of purchasing public to buy substantial quantities of said cards, with result of thereby diverting trade unfairly to him from his competitors who truthfully advertise and represent their said cards; to the substantial injury of competitors in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. John Darsey and Mr. Earl J. Kolb for the Commission.
Mr. Leon H. A. Pierson, of Baltimore, Md., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the National Publicity Bureau, Inc., a corporation trading under its own name and as National Publicity Bureau and Rogers Silverware Distributors, and Hugh J. Vanke, individually and as president of National Publicity Bureau, Inc., trading as Rogers Silverware Distributors, hereinafter designated as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in this respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, National Publicity Bureau, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maryland, under articles of organization in the year 1927, with its principal office and place of business in the Rollins Building in the city of Baltimore in the said State.

Respondent National Publicity Bureau, Inc., in its own name and under the trade names National Publicity Bureau and Rogers Silverware Distributors, is now and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing advertising cards or coupons redeemable in silverware, in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent Hugh J. Wanke is an individual with his principal office and place of business in the Rollins Building, in the city of Baltimore in the State of Maryland, and is the president of and owns a majority of the stock in the respondent National Publicity Bureau, Inc., and controls and directs its practices and policies, and is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, through the said respondent National Publicity Bureau, Inc., and under the trade name Rogers Silverware Distributors, engaged in the business of selling and distributing advertising cards or coupons redeemable in silverware in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondents in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, cooperated with each other and have acted together during all the times herein mentioned and in doing the acts and things herein alleged. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents cause said advertising cards or coupons redeemable in silverware, when sold, and the silverware used from the redemption of such advertising cards and coupons, when said cards or coupons are redeemed, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Baltimore, State of Maryland, to the purchasers of said cards or coupons and to the persons sending in said cards or coupons for redemption located in the several States of the United States other than the State of Maryland and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now maintain a constant current of trade in said products sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondents are in substantial competition in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with individuals, partnerships, and corporations, who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondents as hereinafter alleged, engaged in the business of selling and distributing sales-promotion plans, advertising cards or coupons redeemable in silverware or other merchandise, and silverware in said commerce.

Par. 2. In the course of the operation of their business, it has been and is the practice of respondents to offer for sale and sell advertising cards or coupons as described in paragraph 1 hereof, through the personal solicitation of local retail and wholesale dealers in and through the various States of the United States. The said adver-
Advertising cards or coupons are offered for sale and sold by respondents to such local retail and wholesale dealers to be distributed as a stimulation of their business, among their customers, according to the amount of merchandise sold them by such retail and wholesale dealers. Forms of contracts, specimen advertising cards and coupons, and other advertising matter are used in the solicitation of such retail and wholesale dealers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents represent and imply that they are representatives of, or connected with, a specified concern manufacturing silverware, to wit: William A. Rogers, or William A. Rogers, Ltd.; that a plan, including the sale to the dealer of the advertising cards or coupons, offered by the respondents, has been adopted by the specified silverware manufacturer as an advertising campaign for the purpose of introducing and advertising its said products, in lieu of the advertising theretofore conducted through magazines, newspapers, and other periodicals, and in the expectation that by introducing a high-grade silverware directly into the homes, the public appreciation and the market therefor would be greatly increased, and that the business of a dealer participating in the plan would likewise be greatly increased; and that the silverware used in the redemption of the cards or coupons is of a high and guaranteed quality and the well known and genuine William A. Rogers silverware. In truth and in fact the said respondents were not and are not representatives of or connected in any capacity with any concern manufacturing silverware and the plan offered by the respondents is not an advertising campaign adopted in lieu of advertising theretofore conducted through magazines, newspapers, and other periodicals and the silverware with which the said respondents redeem said cards or coupons was not and is not of a high quality, and is not the well known and genuine William A. Rogers silverware, but is a low quality plated ware greatly inferior to and of much less value than the genuine William A. Rogers silverware.

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, the respondents represent and imply that the prices at which the so-called advertising cards or coupons are sold to the dealers are merely sufficient to cover the cost of printing the cards with the name of the individual dealer thereon, and that the charge to persons sending in cards or coupons for redemption is merely to cover the cost of the package in which the silverware is shipped and the delivery thereof, and that the silverware used in redemption of said cards or coupons is donated by the manufacturer. In truth and in fact the cost of printing said cards or coupons is much less than the price charged therefor and the silverware is not donated by the manufacturers thereof, but is purchased by the respondents, and the sum received by the respondents from persons redeeming said cards or coupons, under their plan, is more than the regular retail price for the grade of silverware used in making redemption.

Respondents, in many instances, represent to dealers that they redeem the advertising cards or coupons without any charge at all to the persons presenting said cards or coupons for redemption. In truth and in fact the persons seeking to redeem said cards or coupons are compelled to and do pay to the respondents certain specified sums dependent upon the kind and character of silverware selected. Respondents, in many instances, represent to a prospective purchaser of said advertising cards or coupons that such dealer is the only one to whom the "plan" will be sold in the particular community when in truth and in fact the respondents do not restrict the sale of the plan to the specified dealer to whom the representation is made, but sell the plan to other dealers in that particular community. Respondents represent to prospective purchasers of said cards or coupons used in connection with said "plan," that if a specified number of advertising cards or coupons is purchased, the respondents will furnish to such dealers a 26-piece set of silverware to be used by the dealer to whom furnished for exhibition purposes during the "advertising campaign," and which is to become the property of the dealer to whom furnished at the conclusion of the "campaign" without cost to such dealer. In truth and in fact, in many instances, where a dealer has purchased the specified number of advertising cards or coupons and the respondents have promised to deliver a 26-piece set of silverware, they have failed and refused to do so.

PAR. 4. The word "Rogers" and the terms "Rogers Silverware" and "Genuine Rogers Silverware" and the names "Wm. A. Rogers" and "William A. Rogers, Ltd." have long been used by the manufacturers thereof to designate, and are understood by wholesale and retail dealers and the public generally to mean, a high quality, expensive silverware as distinguished from a low quality, inexpensive plated silverware; and the use of the word "Rogers" in the trade name and the terms "Rogers Silverware" and "Genuine Rogers Silverware" by the respondents in describing the silverware to be used in redeeming said cards or coupons, and of the representations that the respondents are representatives of William A. Rogers, Ltd., misleads and deceives many wholesale and retail dealers and causes them to become a party to said "plan" and to purchase said cards or coupons in the mistaken belief that the silverware used for redemption and the 26-piece set furnished the dealers is the high quality, expensive silverware long known to the public generally as "Rogers," "Rogers Silverware," or "Genuine Rogers Silverware." In truth and in fact the silverware used for redemption of said cards or coupons is manufactured by the company which manufactures the high quality, expensive silverware known as "Rogers," "Rogers Silverware," or "Genuine Rogers Silverware," but is a low quality, inexpensive plated silverware and not comparable with, or of a similar quality to the silverware long known and sold as "Rogers," "Rogers Silverware," or "Genuine Rogers Silverware." The grade of silverware used for redemption of said cards or coupons has never been known or sold as "Rogers," "Rogers Silverware," or "Genuine Rogers Silverware."

PAR. 5. In the contract executed by the said respondents and a dealer who has agreed to participate in the "plan" is a provision whereby the respondents agree to refund to such a dealer a sum certain in money for each and every 1,000 cards issued by the dealer and redeemed by the respondents. This payment to such a dealer, if made, would permit the dealer to participate in the "plan" without cost. The contract provides that the dealer is to participate for a period of 6 months and the contract further provides, in effect, that the dealer's initial order must not exceed a 90-day supply. The respondents engage in the general practice of not making refunds to participating dealers in accordance with the terms of their agreements with said dealers. Respondents' policy is to fail and refuse to make such refunds and when a demand is made for such a refund, on some pretext or another, to contend that the dealer has breached the contract and that the respondents are, therefore, relieved from their obligation to make the refund as provided in the contract. The principal contention of the respondents, in this connection, is that the dealer has breached the contract by placing an initial order for cards or coupons in excess of a 90-days supply. In many instances dealers do, because of the aforesaid false and misleading representations, and more especially because of the offer of the free 26-piece set of silverware, place an initial order for cards or coupons in excess of a 90-day supply. In such instances the "breach" of the contract is induced by the aforesaid false and misleading representations of the respondents and any of the rights claimed by the respondents as a result thereof have been acquired by the respondents through an overreaching of such dealers and are unlawful and are not binding on the dealers. In many instances the failure of the dealer to dispose of the initial supply of cards or coupons within the 90-day period is the result of the failure of the respondents to redeem the cards or coupons placed in the hands of customers by the dealers in silverware of the quality promised by the respondents, which causes less demand among the customers of the dealer for said cards or coupons than there would have been but for said failure of the respondents to redeem said cards or coupons in silverware of the quality promised. This causes the initial order of cards or coupons to exceed a 90-day supply, when they would have been disposed of within 90 days had the respondents not misrepresented the silverware.

The purported manufacturers' plan of advertising as submitted by the respondents to said dealers is simply a scheme, by the means and in the manner hereinabove alleged, on the part of the respondents, unlawfully and fraudulently to convert to their own use the difference, which is approximately $3 per thousand, between the cost of printing said cards or coupons, the purpose for which respondents purportedly collect the money from dealers, and the amount of money paid to the respondents per thousand cards or coupons by the participating dealers.

PAR. 6. The acts, practices, and methods of the respondents, as hereinabove alleged, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of wholesale and retail dealers who are prospective purchasers of said cards or coupons, and have caused and do cause many such prospective purchasers erroneously to believe that the false and fraudulent representations and implications, as hereinabove alleged, are true and cause a substantial portion of such prospective purchasers, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase respondents' said cards or coupons and to become participants in said plan, thereby diverting trade to respondents from their competitors in said commerce who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondents, to the substantial injury of said competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The acts, practices and methods of the respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' said competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act (U. S. Code, title 15, sec. 45), the Federal Trade Commission, on August 21, 1936, issued, and on August 24, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon Hugh J. Vanke, trading as National Publicity Bureau and as Rogers Silverware Distributors, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act; and respondent entered his appearance and filed his answer herein. Thereafter, hearings were held and testimony and other evidence were introduced by John Darsey, attorney for the Commission, in support of the allegations of the complaint, and by Leon H. A. Pierson, attorney for the respondent, in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly appointed by it. Thereupon, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission, having duly considered said complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, and brief, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Hugh J. Wanke, 601 Phoenix Building, 4 East Redwood Street, Baltimore, Md., is an individual trading at this address as Rogers Silverware Distributors and as National Publicity Bureau. As National Publicity Bureau he buys silverplated ware from Wm. A. Rogers, at Oneida, N. Y. As Rogers Silverware Distributors he is engaged in the business of selling trading cards redeemable in Wm. A. Rogers silverplated ware, to retail dealers for distribution to their customers. He sells the cards at $4.50 per thousand, and his annual sales of them amount to from $8,000 to $10,000. He enters into contracts with his dealer customers, in the form reproduced on page 3 hereof, for the purchase of the cards, in which contracts they agree to cooperate with Rogers Silverware Distributors in the distribution of Wm. A. Rogers silverware for advertising purposes.

The contract form used is so framed as to emphasize the name "Rogers Silverware Distributors" and contains the following:

DISPLAY SET OF 26—pieces of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware furnished gratis with distribution of 25,000 cards.

To Be Displayed Attractively for Our Mutual Benefit for a Period of at Least 30 Days—

GUARANTEED CASH REFUND

In consideration of publicity and co-operation extended during the life of this agreement the Rogers Silverware Distributors agrees to pay us a cash refund at the rate of $4.50 for each and every thousand cards redeemed.
PAR. 2. National Publicity Bureau, Inc., was a Maryland corporation controlled by Wanke, which from 1927 to 1933 was used to carry on the sale of said cards. It was dissolved about 1933, but Wanke still uses the trade name “National Publicity Bureau” in the purchase of said silverware.

PAR. 3. Wanke sells said cards to dealers in States other than the State of Maryland, including Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, and Michigan, and ships them in interstate commerce from Maryland through and into these other States and causes them to be there delivered to the buyers.

PAR. 4. Wanke, in the course and conduct of his business of selling trading cards, is in competition in interstate commerce with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in selling in commerce among the several States cards or coupons redeemable in silverplated ware.

PAR. 5. Wanke, to promote the sale of said cards, represents:
(a) Directly and by implication that Rogers Silverware Distributors’ trading cards are a method of advertising used by Wm. A. Rogers, maker of silverware.

(b) That Rogers Silverware Distributors, for cooperation given by the merchant in distributing Wm. A. Rogers silverware, will furnish him gratis a display set of 26 pieces of Wm. A. Rogers silverware with the distribution of 25,000 cards.

(c) That Rogers Silverware Distributors, in consideration of publicity and cooperation extended during the life of the agreement, will pay the merchant buying the cards a cash refund at the rate of $4.50 (the cost of the cards to the merchant) for each and every thousand cards redeemed.

(d) That Rogers Silverware Distributors will redeem said trading cards in Wm. A. Rogers silverware for the customers of the dealers without cost to such customers.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact:
(a) Rogers Silverware Distributors’ trading cards are not a method of advertising used by Wm. A. Rogers, maker of silverware. Wanke has no connection, either directly or through Rogers Silverware Distributors, with Wm. A. Rogers, silverware maker, except as a customer of Wm. A. Rogers for its silverware.

(b) Wanke does not furnish gratis to the dealer a display set of 26 pieces of Wm. A. Rogers silverware for use with the distribution of 25,000 cards, but claims that, under the contract, the dealer is not entitled to the display set until the dealer has distributed the cards for 6 months and has completely distributed 25,000 cards.
The contracts fail to make such interpretation clear and necessary, and the dealers signing them expect to receive the display set along with the delivery of the cards bought.

(c) Wanke does not pay the merchant buying cards a cash refund at the rate of $4.50 per thousand for each and every thousand cards redeemed, but claims that under the contract the dealer is not entitled to any refund until he has distributed the cards for a period of 6 months. The contracts do not make it clear that no refunds are to be made for 6 months, and dealers signing them expect refund to be made whenever a thousand of these cards have been redeemed.

(d) Rogers Silverware Distributors does not redeem its trading cards in Wm. A. Rogers Silverware without cost to the customers of the dealers who send them in for redemption, but requires these customers to send in an amount of money with the cards which approximates the cost of the silverware to Rogers Silverware Distributors.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds from examination of the contract used by this respondent and the testimony of witnesses that the use by respondent of the words "Rogers Silverware" in and as part of his trade name is a representation that he is directly connected with or is a part of the company which manufactures Wm. A. Rogers Silverware. The use of the words "We have no connections with any other companies" on respondent's contract is not sufficient to remove the implication of respondent's direct connection with such manufacturer.

PAR. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements made by respondent, as set forth above, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and false belief that said representations are true, and to induce a number of retail merchants to buy a substantial quantity of said trading cards, which they would not buy except for such erroneous and false belief. Further, said representations have the capacity and tendency, as a direct consequence of such erroneous and false belief, induced by the representations as set forth above, to cause a number of the purchasing public to buy substantial quantities of said trading cards, with the result that trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors who truthfully advertise and represent their trading cards, and substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent, Hugh J. Wanke, trading as Rogers Silverware Distributors, to his competitors in commerce among the several States of the United States and to the public.
Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent Hugh J. Wanke, individually and trading as National Publicity Bureau and Rogers Silverware Distributors, has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hugh J. Wanke, individually and trading as National Publicity Bureau and Rogers Silverware Distributors, or under any other name or names, and his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, of silverware or sales-promotional plans including premium certificates, gift cards, or coupons redeemable in silverware or other articles of merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, by use of the words "Rogers Silverware" in a corporate or trade name, or by statements or representations in advertising or in any other way, that the respondent has an interest in, forms a part of, or has any connection with the manufacturer of William A. Rogers Silverware; provided, however, that this order shall not be construed to in any way prohibit the respondent from dealing in William A. Rogers Silverware or other products.

2. Representing that premium certificates, gift cards, or other similar devices can be redeemed in silverware or other merchandise unless and until all the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer and there is no deception as to the services or other actions to be performed or the price to be paid in connection with obtaining such silverware or other articles of merchandise.
3. Representing that the respondent will give a set of silverware or other merchandise free or will refund the sum of $4.50 or any other sum to the purchaser of said premium certificates, gift cards, coupons, or other and similar devices on the redemption of a specified number of cards, certificates, or coupons unless such refund is actually made or such merchandise is given free, and if there are any conditions connected with such refund or gift of silverware, such conditions must be clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer of free merchandise or refund in such a manner that there is no deception as to the terms of such conditions.

4. Representing that the respondent is conducting any special campaign or advertising campaign to introduce or advertise any article or articles of merchandise on behalf of the manufacturer of William A. Rogers Silverware or any other manufacturer or concern unless such a campaign is in fact being conducted at the instance of and on behalf of such manufacturer.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 3071. Complaint, Mar. 8, 1937—Decision, Mar. 1, 1939

Where two individuals engaged in making, under and pursuant to patents, tops to replace open grates on gas ranges and providing smooth cooking surface similar to that of coal ranges, and in selling and distributing said tops to consumers through crews of canvassers making house-to-house solicitation and using advertising literature supplied or approved by them, and selling such tops at prices ranging from $7.90 to $9.90, as case might be—

Represented that every top was properly ventilated to insure proper combustion and that use thereof materially reduced gas bills and increased cooking capacity, cooking two to four articles with one burner, facts being, while one of two types made by them was properly ventilated to insure proper combustion, other type was not thus ventilated with more than one burner in use and, used with more than one burner lighted, emitted carbon monoxide in dangerous quantities, use of such tops materially decreased efficiency of gas used and tended to increase, rather than reduce, gas bills, and use of such tops with one burner lighted would not bring to a boil, or cook, any article placed on top except directly over lighted burner, though articles brought to boil over lighted burner might be kept warm on other parts of top while another article was being heated or boiled directly over such lighted burner;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and false belief that such representations were true, and to induce number of such public to buy substantial quantity of said tops which they would not otherwise buy and, as direct consequence of such belief thus induced, to cause number of such public to buy substantial quantities of their said merchandise, with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from others likewise engaged in sale of stove tops for gas ranges, and who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise; to the substantial injury of competitors in commerce;

Held. That such acts and representations were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes;" the Federal Trade Commission, having reasons to believe that William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, trading and doing business as William H. Pearce & Co., and E. E. Brazelton, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondent, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. William H. Pearce & Co. is a copartnership composed of William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian and the principal place of business of said partnership is 52 South Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa. They are now, and have been for a number of years last past, engaged in the manufacture, transportation, sale, and distribution, between and among various States of the United States, of an appliance to be used on an open top gas stove or range and designated as the "Pearce Stove Top." The respondent, E. E. Brazelton, of 200 S. Kennelworth Avenue, Elmhurst, Ill., is a sales agent of said William H. Pearce & Co., and has charge of the field agents of said company and directs the methods of their work and selects the territory in which they work. The respondents cause said appliances, when sold, to be shipped and transported in commerce from the respondents' place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania and they maintain a constant current of trade and commerce among and between the various States of the United States in the sale and distribution of said product.

Paragraph 2. The respondents, in the course and conduct of said business are now, and at all times herein referred to have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of closed top gas stoves and detachable tops for gas stoves and other appliances to be used for the same and similar purpose as the appliances which the respondents sell, and these competitors do not in any way misrepresent the quality or efficacy of their products or resort to unfair practices in offering for sale and selling their products.

Paragraph 3. The respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, in the course and conduct of their business, have employed the respondent E. E. Brazelton, on a commission basis, to sell said product, and the territory assigned to the said E. E. Brazelton is the whole of the United States, with the exception of the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and the city of New York, N. Y. The respondent, E. E. Brazelton, in the course of his employment and in the scope of his employment, in selling and offering for sale said product to the purchasing public, has employed a large number of men to make a house-to-house canvass and solicit orders, collect for, and install gas stove tops. The respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, have prepared and have caused to be prepared, printed pamphlets, circulars, etc., on which the name, William H. Pearce & Co., and the name of the product is prominently and conspicuously displayed. The said pamphlets, circulars, etc., are furnished by the respondents William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, to said salesmen to be used by the salesmen in soliciting orders for said product, and to be distributed by the salesmen to prospective purchasers of said product. In describing the quality and efficacy of the product, the respondents represent:

Reduces your gas bill.
Increases cooking capacity of the range.
Eliminates unsanitary grates.
Will cook two to four articles with one burner.
Prevents burners from clogging.
Will keep a whole meal hot until ready to serve with one burner turned low.
Manufactured by the oldest and largest stove top company in the world.
Every Pearce Top is properly ventilated to insure proper combustion.

In addition to the representations in the pamphlets, circulars, etc., the salesmen, in the course of their employment, and in the scope of their employment, represent to the prospective purchasers that said stove tops will save from one-third to one-half on gas bills, and that said stove tops will save 2,000 feet of gas per month.

Par. 4. All of said representations as above set out, and many other similar representations not specifically mentioned herein, are highly exaggerated, false, and misleading and had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public and did, and do now, lead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that when said appliance is used on an open top gas range or stove; (1) it will reduce the amount of gas consumed; (2) it will reduce the amount of gas consumed from one-third to one-half; (3) it will increase the cooking capacity of the stove or range; (4) it will prevent the burners from clogging; (5) it will by the use of one burner turned low keep an entire meal hot; (6) it will add to the sanitary condition of the stove; (7) every Pearce stove top is properly installed to insure proper combustion; and (8) that the respondents are the oldest and largest stove top company in the world.

Par. 5. In truth, and in fact, the said appliance, when used, will not lessen the consumption of gas in any respect, it will not increase the cooking capacity of an open top stove or range to any appreciable degree. It will not prevent the burners from clogging. It will not add to the sanitary conditions of a stove. The respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, do not operate the oldest and largest stove top company in the world as there are other companies as old and as large, if not older and larger. Not only is the appliance lacking in the advantages it is falsely represented to have, but the appliance is so constructed that there is a considerable likelihood of escape of carbon monoxide gas which renders the use of said appliance highly hazardous.

Par. 6. In addition to the false and misleading representations and unfair practices as above set out, the salesmen in soliciting orders for said stove tops, and for the purpose of securing the initial payment, make representations that said stove tops will be delivered to the purchaser, and be delivered on a specified date. The truth is the stove tops are not delivered on the date promised and in many cases are never delivered and in such cases the respondents refuse to refund the amount deposited.

Par. 7. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations hereinabove set out, a substantial number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial amount of respondents' product with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in selling and distributing closed top gas stoves and appliances for the same purpose and use for which the respondents' product is manufactured, distributed, and sold, and who in no way misrepresent the quality and efficacy of their product. As a result of the unfair acts and false and misleading representations of the respondents, injury has been, and is now being done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act (U. S. Code, title 15, sec. 45), the Federal Trade Commission, on March 8, 1937, issued, and on March 9, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon William H. Pearce & Co., a partnership, William H. Pearce, Philip S. Shassian, and E. E. Brazelton, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act and respondents entered their appearances and filed their answers herein. Thereafter, hearings were held and evidence was introduced by Floyd O. Collins, attorney for the Commission, in support of the allegations of the complaint, and by Joseph G. Denny, Jr., attorney for respondents, in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly appointed by it. Thereupon this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto filed by respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, and oral arguments by said counsel for Commission and respondents, Pearce and Shassian; and the Commission having duly considered said complaint, answers, testimony, and evidence, briefs and oral arguments, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 2. Respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, are individuals trading as partners under the firm name and style of William H. Pearce & Co. This partnership, in 1921, succeeded to the business established by William H. Pearce in 1910 and conducted by him until the partnership was formed. It is engaged at Philadelphia in the business of making and selling tops to replace open grates on gas ranges. The tops are made under and pursuant to patents issued by the United States Patent Office claiming to provide gas ranges with means whereby the heat from a single burner can be economized, controlled, and distributed in such manner as to provide for the effective heating of two or more cooking utensils and utilized to much better advantage than in the ordinary gas range. They provide a smooth cooking surface similar to that of coal ranges.

Paragraph 3. Respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., sells these tops to consumers. The sales are made by men with crews of canvassers making house-to-house solicitations using advertising literature supplied or approved by respondent, William H. Pearce & Co. The price of the tops for four-burner gas ranges to the consumer in Philadelphia and New York and territory surrounding these cities is $7.90 each, and in other territory the price to the consumer is $9.90.
PAR. 4. Respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., sells the tops in commerce among the several States to buyers in States other than Pennsylvania and ships them through and into such other States and causes them to be there delivered to the buyers.

PAR. 5. There are other individuals, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the business of selling tops to replace open grates on gas ranges in commerce among the several States who sell in competition with respondent, William H. Pearce & Co.

PAR. 6. Respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., to promote the sale of these stove tops, represents:

(a) Every Pearce top is properly ventilated to insure proper combustion.
(b) The use of Pearce tops materially reduces gas bills, and
(c) Their use increases cooking capacity—cooking two to four articles with one burner.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact:

(a) Respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., make two types of said tops. One type is properly ventilated to insure proper combustion. The other type is not properly ventilated to insure proper combustion with more than one burner in use and when used with more than one burner lighted emits carbon monoxide in dangerous quantities.
(b) The use of the tops materially decreases the efficiency of gas used and tends to increase rather than reduce gas bills.
(c) The use of the tops with one burner lighted will not bring to a boil or cook any article placed on the top except directly over the lighted burner. Articles brought to a boil over a lighted burner may be kept warm on other parts of the top while another article is being heated or boiled directly over the lighted burner.

PAR. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading representations so made by respondent as set forth in paragraph 6 above, have had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and false belief that said representations are true; and to induce a number of the purchasing public to buy a substantial quantity of said tops which they would not buy except for such erroneous and false belief. Further, said representations have the capacity and tendency as a direct consequence of such erroneous and false belief induced by the representations of respondent as aforesaid, to cause a number of the purchasing public to buy substantial quantities of said merchandise with the result that trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from other partnerships, individuals, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale of stove tops for gas ranges who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise. Substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., to its competitors in commerce among the several States of the United States and to the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and representations of respondent, William H. Pearce & Co., have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, William H. Pearce and Philip S. Shassian, individually and as copartners trading as William H. Pearce & Co., or under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of tops to replace open grates on gas ranges in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That their tops for gas ranges or any other article of similar construction or design are properly ventilated unless and until said tops are so ventilated as to insure proper combustion when used with one or more burners and so constructed and designed that they will not emit carbon monoxide gas.

2. That the use of the tops for gas ranges which are sold and distributed by the respondents will materially reduce gas bills or gas consumption unless and until such tops are so constructed and designed as to materially reduce the consumption of the gas.
3. That the use of the tops for gas ranges which are sold and distributed by the respondents will increase cooking capacity unless and until such tops are so constructed and designed as to materially increase cooking capacity.

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of silverware in commerce among the various States by means of sales-promotional plans which included premium certificates redeemable in said ware as sent in by customers of the retail merchants and others to whom it sold said plans, through salesmen employed to solicit such merchants and furnished by him with forms of contract for execution by particular merchant in purchase of plan, and with folders and catalogs illustrating such ware and samples of premium certificates or gift cards, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in sale and distribution of sales promotional plans and silverware in commerce among the various States, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status or terms and conditions of their said plans or make any other false representations in regard to the sale and distribution of their respective products—

(a) Made use of words "Rogers Redemption Bureau" in trade name employed by him in his said business, and printed on the face of his said contract forms, in conspicuous large red letters, words "Wm. A. Rogers Silverware" and "Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd.," with capacity and tendency, through use of term "Rogers" in his trade name as aforesaid, and statements on contract form, to cause members of purchasing public to have erroneous and mistaken belief that he was connected with or a part of the manufacture of Wm. A. Rogers silverware, and represented to retail merchants and others, through his said salesmen, that he, trading as aforesaid, was connected with or a part of "Oneida, Ltd.," manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware, facts being he had no connection, direct or indirect, with said Oneida, Ltd., manufacturer of said long and favorably known, high-grade silverware, except as purchaser through jobber of its products;

(b) Made statements on reverse side of said contract relative to number of premium certificates or gift cards required to redeem the various items of silverware, there referred to as "free," through reference to "NUMBER OF CARDS REQUIRED FOR VARIOUS FREE ITEMS LISTED BELOW," and represented, through salesmen, to prospective purchasers of such sales plans that the retail dealer's customers would receive silverware without additional cost upon sending to him designated number of certificates or cards, facts being such items were not given away free, but there was a charge of 1 cent for each card redeemed in silverware, and his said agents, in many instances, did not show form of certificate or card to retail merchants, who discovered, after shipment to them of such certificates, that on reverse side thereof there was statement making the card redeemable in silverware aforesaid as per schedule below, provided holder had received card in regular course of trade and "encloses one cent for each card";
(c) Provided, in said contract, and represented through his said salesmen, that 26-piece set of silverware with buffet case would be furnished free of charge to every dealer purchasing minimum quantity of 10,000 certificates or cards, and that such set would become property of dealer, and also, through such representatives, that he would refund to dealer purchase price for certificates or cards when 25 percent of those purchased from him by the dealer had been sent in for redemption by customers thereof. facts being refused, in many instances, to furnish to retailers such sets after their purchase of aforesaid minimum quantity of certificates or cards, and did not refund to them purchase price of the certificates or cards after 25 percent thereof, purchased by dealer, had been redeemed by customers of latter; and

(d) Made statement on reverse side of his said contracts, "BUILD UP A COMPLETE SILVER SERVICE FREE," and provided in his said sales plan and through his said salesmen that other articles of silverware would be redeemed by him for various numbers of the premium certificates, and set forth on gift catalogs, consisting of one sheet of paper, which his salesmen furnished to purchaser of the cards for distribution among his customers, and which illustrated knives, forks, and spoons purported to be free of charge, and showed number of cards required to redeem such "free" items, statement "Build up a complete silver service free. Teaspoons packed in units of six items—75 cards each," facts being only teaspoons, tablespoons, dinner forks, and dinner knives were redeemable by said certificates or cards, all other articles had to be purchased outright from him, and last above statement as to teaspoons packed in units of six, etc., was likewise misleading and deceptive in that 75 cards were accepted in redemption of one only, and not the six teaspoons, redemption of which required 450 cards;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public and retail dealers in the various States into erroneous and mistaken belief that he was connected with "Oneida, Ltd.," manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers silverware, and that aforesaid false and misleading statements relative to his said sales promotional plan and premium certificates were true, and into purchasing quantities of his said product because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to him from his competitors in commerce among the various States who truthfully advertise and represent their respective products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That aforesaid acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Mr. Marvin A. Farrington, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Matthew
A. Willis, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Matthew A. Willis, is an individual, trading and doing business under the respective firm names and styles of Rogers Redemption Bureau and The Thompson Pottery Co., Advertising Department, with his principal office and place of business as to both of said firms at 419-427 Lumber Exchange Building, in the city of Minneapolis and State of Minnesota.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling silverware and earthenware or chinaware in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. Respondent has not been and is not a manufacturer of either silverware or earthen or chinaware but has purchased and is now purchasing said products from wholesalers or manufacturers thereof.

In the course and conduct of his business, it has been and is the practice of respondent, as is hereinafter more fully shown, to offer for sale and sell said products by means of the sale of premium certificates, redeemable in silverware or earthen or chinaware, to merchants and dealers of various kinds or others engaged in the class or type of business in which such premium certificates could or can be used. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Minnesota to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of selling premium certificates, silverware, and earthen or chinaware to purchasers thereof in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

"Wm. A. Rogers" silverware has been well and favorably known for many years by the consuming public. It is manufactured by Oneida, Ltd., New York. On the back of each piece of silverware are imprinted the words "Wm. A. Rogers, Oneida, Ltd." Respondent has not had and does not have any connection with or relationship to said Oneida, Ltd., except as a purchaser of its products through a jobber in Minneapolis.
In the course and conduct of his business, respondent, trading as Rogers Redemption Bureau, uses the premium certificate or “sales stimulator” plan of selling silverware through the agency of salesmen. Said salesmen are supplied with forms of a contract for the purchase of gift cards or premium certificates. Conspicuous on the face of said contract, printed in large red letters, appear the words “Wm. A. Rogers Silverware” and “Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd.” As an inducement for the purchase of such premium certificates, respondent falsely represents to said local merchants and others that said Rogers Redemption Bureau is connected with, or is a part of, Oneida, Ltd., manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware; that a 26-piece set of silverware with buffet case will be furnished free to every dealer purchasing the minimum quantity of 10,000 gift cards; that each merchant or dealer will be refunded the purchase price of said premium certificates after a certain number of them have been redeemed by customers of said merchant; that such customers can build up a complete silver service free; that such customers will receive silverware and earthenware or chinaware without any additional cost upon sending in a designated number of certificates; that such dealer or merchant would be given an exclusive territory for the distribution of said premium certificates.

There is also furnished to said merchants for distribution among the customers of the latter, a so-called gift catalog, consisting of one sheet of paper on which are illustrated the patterns of the knives, forks, and spoons purported to be given away free and showing the number of cards or premium certificates required for the “Free Items” in the following manner: and listing the other items in the same manner.

Respondent represents to said merchants or dealers, and said sales agreement specifically recites, that said gift cards will be redeemed absolutely free for articles listed in the gift catalog, postage prepaid. No samples of said gift cards or premiums certificates are shown to the merchant and such dealer has no opportunity to examine the cards and know the full terms of redemption actually stated thereon. Said cards are shipped to said merchant from respondent’s place of business in Minneapolis after the execution of said sales agreement. Said cards contain the advertisement of the merchant; and many of them contain the following instruction:

Wm. A. Rogers Silverware to our Customers

This card is redeemable in Rogers Silverware as per schedule below, providing the holder has received this card in the regular course of trade and encloses one cent for each card. Shipping and packing charges fully prepaid.
In truth and in fact the said sales contract is ambiguous and misleading because of the appearance of the words "Wm. A. Rogers Silverware" and "Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd.," in that the prospective purchaser is led into the erroneous belief that respondent is connected with the manufacturer, namely, Oneida, Ltd., of New York. Likewise the name under which respondent does business, to wit, Rogers Redemption Bureau, is misleading in the use of the word "Rogers" because it implies that respondent in some manner is connected with the manufacture of Rogers silverware, which silverware has for many years been known throughout the United States by the consuming public as a high grade reliable product.

In truth and in fact the respondent has no connection whatever with Oneida, Ltd., except as an indirect purchaser of its merchandise. In many instances, the respondent has not furnished, or has refused to furnish, the 26-piece set of silverware after the purchase by a merchant of the minimum quantity of 10,000 gift cards. Contrary to the representations made by respondent's salesmen or agents, the respondent has not refunded to said merchants the purchase price paid for the gift cards after the number of cards required to be redeemed have in fact been redeemed by customers of such merchant. Customers of said merchants cannot build up a complete silverware service free, as represented in the advertising matter, in that only spoons, forks, and knives are redeemable with gift cards and all other articles necessary to constitute the complete set of silverware have to be purchased from respondent at prices substantially the same as those charged by regular retailers of silverware. A dealer or merchant is not given an exclusive territory for the distribution of gift cards, but on the contrary respondent has made it a practice to sell said gift cards to a number of merchants doing business in the same territory.

The language "Teaspoons packed in units of six 75 cards each" is ambiguous and misleading in that the consumer mailing in to the respondent 75 cards does so in the belief that a unit of 6 spoons will be sent in return for said 75 cards, whereas in truth and in fact the respondent furnishes only 1 spoon for each 75 cards sent in; therefore requiring 450 cards for each unit of 6 spoons.

Although the advertisements state that silverware will be redeemed absolutely free to customers of merchants to whom respondent sells said gift cards, said customers find in many instances that they are required to send 1 cent with each card given to them before they are entitled to any silverware.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent, trading as Thompson Pottery Advertising Department, uses the premium certificate of "sales stimulator" plan of selling earthen or chinaware through the agency of salesmen. Said salesmen are supplied with forms of a contract for the purchase of gift cards or premium certificates. Conspicuous on the face of said contract, printed in large red letters, appear the words "The Thompson Pottery Company," in smaller letters "Advertising Department," and directions are given that checks be made payable to "The Thompson Pottery Company, Advertising Department." The contract further contains the following statements:

Reference any mercantile agency and Potteries E. Liverpool, Ohio, established 1868.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Inasmuch as this is purely a campaign to be used as a furtherance of our business, kindly do not enter into this agreement unless convinced of its efficiency as a sales stimulant and intending to cooperate with us. The name Thompson on chinaware is world known. Only genuine Thompson China USA will be used. The C. C. Thompson Pottery Company, together with the facsimile signature "Geo. C. Thompson, President." Respondent agrees "to make refund to dealer at the rate of $1.00 per thousand on all of these cards redeemed upon redemption of 25%." In addition to furnishing circulars and other advertising matter, respondent agrees to furnish to any dealer purchasing said cards, without any charge whatever, a set of chinaware consisting of various numbers of pieces depending upon the number of cards purchased.

In connection with the solicitation by respondent's salesmen or orders for said gift cards from merchants or dealers, said salesmen exhibit to such merchants a photostatic copy of a page of Dun & Bradstreet's financial rating book. A large and conspicuous arrow points to the name "Thompson C. C. Pottery Company, the mfrs. B 1," indicating that The C. C. Thompson Pottery Co. has a very high credit rating. Under the terms of said contract, respondent agrees to redeem said advertising cards according to the terms printed on the back of each card. Is was and is the practice of respondent's salesmen in soliciting orders for such advertising cards, and as an inducement to the merchant to purchase said cards, to represent to such merchant that there would be no expense whatever connected with the redemption of said cards by the customers of said merchant, but that the chinaware would be sent free and without any additional cost upon receipt of a requisite number of cards; and at the time of soliciting such sales as aforesaid, the salesman would not exhibit any sample card to the prospective purchaser.

In truth and in fact the use of the name "Thompson Pottery Company, Advertising Department," and the phrase "Potteries East Liverpool, Ohio, established 1868," together with the use of the name The C. C. Thompson Pottery Co. and the facsimile signature of the president is false and misleading in that it implies to the merchant or dealer purchasing said advertising cards that respondent's business is, in fact, a part or branch of The C. C. Thompson Pottery Co., and induces such merchant or dealer to purchase said cards because The C. C. Thompson Pottery Co. is, and for many years has been, well and favorably known throughout the country. The use of the reference contained in the financial rating book "Dun & Bradstreet" and the giving as a reference of any mercantile agency is false and misleading, because the respondent's firm, to wit, "The Thompson Pottery Company Advertising Department," has no rating of any nature whatever in any mercantile agency nor is it rated by Dun & Bradstreet.
Complaint

The chinaware sent to merchants in accordance with said agreement is not of the same grade and quality as the chinaware exhibited to them at the time of the solicitation of orders, but in truth and in fact is of a much inferior quality. The respondent does not refund to the dealer the purchase price of said advertising cards after 25 percent thereof has been redeemed by said merchant's customers, but on the contrary refuses to make such refunds until all the said cards have been redeemed.

In truth and in fact, said chinaware is not sent free, but on the back of each card appears a condition to the effect that the holder of said card is required to enclose 1 cent for each card before he can receive said chinaware.

Par. 5. There are, among respondent's competitors, many individuals, partnerships, and corporations offering for sale and selling in interstate commerce in competition with respondent's silverware and earthen or chinaware and similar products under similar advertising or business-stimulating plans, who do not mislead prospective purchasers and purchasers by falsely using names of firms whose products they sell, who do not use ambiguous and misleading contracts, and who do not in any manner misrepresent the products and merchandise which they offer for sale and sell.

Par. 6. The acts and practices of respondent hereinabove described have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the respondent is directly or indirectly connected with the manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware, to wit, Oneida, Ltd., or with The C. C. Thompson Pottery Co., and that in entering into agreements or contracts with the respondent they are entering into contracts or agreements with Oneida, Ltd., or The C. C. Thompson
Pottery Co., and that the representations of respondent relative to the redemption of the premium or advertising certificate have been and are true; and they are led into the purchase of such certificates redeemable in silverware or chinaware in reliance upon such erroneous belief.

As a result of the aforesaid false and misleading statements, advertisements, and representations by the respondent with respect to said products, trade has been unfairly diverted to him from his said competitors, whose ability to compete successfully with respondent has been, and is, lessened and injured by the methods of the respondent hereinbefore set forth.

Par. 7. The above acts and things done, or caused to be done, by the respondent, were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 9th day of August 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Matthew A. Willis, trading as Rogers Redemption Bureau and The Thompson Pottery Co., Advertising Department, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Marvin L. Farrington, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, respondent not having filed brief, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Matthew A. Willis, is an individual trading and doing business under the firm name and style of "Rogers Redemption Bureau," and having his principal office and place of business at 419-427 Lumber Building in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing silverware in commerce among and between the various States of the United States by means of the sale and distribution of sales promotional plans, including premium certificates redeemable in silverware, to retail merchants and others situated in various States of the United States. Respondent has caused said products, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Minnesota to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said products among and between various States of the United States.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been during all of the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of selling and distributing sales-promotional plans and silverware in commerce among and between various States of the United States. Among said competitors of respondent are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status, the terms and conditions of their sales promotional plans, or make any other false representations in regard to the sale and distribution of their respective products.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent sells and distributes to retail merchants and others a sales promotional plan in which the merchant agrees to purchase from the respondent a minimum number of premium certificates or gift cards redeemable in respondent's silverware, on which certificates is printed the name of the retail merchant, together with such other advertising matter as the merchant may desire. The said premium certificates or gift cards are distributed by the merchant to his customers, the number of cards so distributed to each customer being dependent upon the amount of the customer's purchases from the merchant. Respondent furnishes to such merchants catalogs describing respondent's silverware for which such premium certificates will be redeemed by respondent. After the customer of the retail merchant has accumulated a specified number of premium certificates or gift cards, the customer sends such certificates to the respondent for redemption in the articles of silverware selected by the customer from respondent’s catalog. Respondent thereafter distributes the silverware selected to the customer of the retail merchant.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent sells said sales promotional plan to retail merchants through the medium of salesmen. Approximately 16 salesmen are employed by respondent, and such salesmen sell such sales-promotional plan to the purchasers thereof in approximately three-fourths of the States of the United States. Respondent furnishes his salesmen with forms of a contract to be executed by the retail merchants in the purchase of such plan, folders, and catalogs illustrating said silverware and samples of the premium certificates or gift cards. There is printed on the face of said contract in conspicuous, large red letters the words, “Wm. A. Rogers Silverware” and “Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd.” As an inducement for the purchase of said sales-promotional plan, respondent’s salesmen represent to retail merchants and others that the respondent, Matthew A. Willis, trading as Rogers Redemption Bureau, is connected with or is a part of “Oneida, Ltd.,” the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware. Said contract further provides and respondent’s salesmen represent to prospective purchasers that a 26-piece set of silverware with a buffet case will be furnished free of charge to every dealer purchasing the minimum quantity (10,000) of premium certificates or gift cards, and that said display set of silverware will become the property of the dealer. On the reverse side of said contract there appear statements relative to the number of premium certificates or gift cards required to redeem the various items of silverware, which are referred to by respondent as “free” items. Such statements read, in part, as follows:

Number of Cards Required for Various Free Items Listed Below.
Build Up a Complete Silver Service Free.
Teaspoons Packed in Units of Six—75 Cards Each.

The sales plan further provides and respondent’s salesmen represent that other articles of silverware will be redeemed by respondent for various numbers of the premium certificates. The salesmen of respondent represent to prospective purchasers of said sales plan that the customers of the retail dealer will receive silverware without any additional cost upon sending to the respondent a designated number of premium certificates or gift cards; that the dealer or merchant will be given exclusive territory for the distribution of such premium...
Findings

certificates or gift cards, and that the respondent will refund to the dealer the purchase price for the premium certificates or gift cards when 25 percent of the premium certificates purchased from the respondent by such dealer had been sent in for redemption by customers of the dealer. The salesmen of respondent also furnish to purchasers of said plan, for distribution among their customers, gift catalogs consisting of one sheet of paper illustrating the knives, forks, and spoons purported to be given away free of charge, and showing the number of gift cards required to redeem such "free" items. There is printed on such sheet the following statement:

Build up a complete silver service free.
Teaspoons packed in units of six items—75 cards each.

In truth and in fact such items are not given away free of charge. There is a charge of 1 cent for each gift card redeemed in silverware. In many instances the agents of respondent do not show the form of premium certificate or gift card to the retail merchants, who discover after the said premium certificates have been shipped to them by respondent that on the reverse side thereof there is the following statement:

This card is redeemable in Rogers Silverware as per schedule below, provided the holder has received this card in the regular course of trade and encloses one cent for each card. Shipping and packing charges fully prepaid.

Par. 6. Wm. A. Rogers Silverware is now, and has been for many years, known by members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States as manufacturers of high-grade silverware. All silverware manufactured by said Wm. A. Rogers Silverware is branded "Oneida, Ltd., Oneida, N. Y." The Commission finds that salesmen of the respondent have falsely represented to prospective purchasers of respondent's sales plan that respondent is connected with or is a part of the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of the term "Rogers" in his trade name "Rogers Redemption Bureau" and the aforesaid statement relative to the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware contained on the form of contract used by respondent in selling his sales plan have the tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public, to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent is connected with or is a part of the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware. In truth and in fact, respondent is not directly or indirectly connected with Oneida, Ltd., manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware, except as a purchaser of its products through a jobber located in Minneapolis, Minn.
FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

Findings

28 F. T. C.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, respondent has in many instances refused to furnish to retail dealers the 26-piece set of silverware after the purchase by the dealers from the respondent of the minimum quantity of 10,000 premium certificates or gift cards. Respondent has not refunded to the retail dealers the purchase price for said premium certificates or gift cards after 25 percent of the cards purchased by the dealer had been redeemed by customers of the merchants. The aforesaid statement and representation by respondent that customers of the retail merchants could build up a complete silver service free of charge is false and misleading for the reason that only teaspoons, tablespoons, dinner forks, and dinner knives are redeemable by said premium certificates or gift cards, all other articles having to be purchased outright from respondent. The aforesaid statement by respondent that “Teaspoons packed in units of six—75 cards each” is misleading and deceptive in that holders of said premium certificates or gift cards are and were thereby led to erroneously believe that 75 gift cards would be required to redeem 6 teaspoons, when in truth and in fact 75 gift cards were required to redeem 1 teaspoon, thus requiring 450 cards to redeem each unit of 6 teaspoons.

It appears from the record that many complaints were received by various Better Business Bureaus and that when such complaints were called to the attention of the respondent he found that in most cases the misrepresentations complained of were made by his salesmen. After repeated complaints had been made respondent, subsequent to the issuance of the complaint, rewrote and reformed his said sales contract on several different occasions within the space of 10 months eliminating certain objectionable features and clarifying the language of said contract.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent, used and disseminated as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public and retail dealers situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent is connected with Oneida, Ltd., manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers silverware, and that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations relative to respondent’s sales promotional plan and premium certificates are true, and into purchasing quantities of respondent’s products because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors, in commerce among and between various States of the United States, who truthfully advertise and represent their respective products. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Marvin Farrington, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered; That respondent, Matthew A. Willis, trading as Rogers Redemption Bureau, or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of silverware or sales-promotional plans, including premium certificates, gift cards, or coupons, redeemable in silverware or other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through use of the word "Rogers," either alone or in connection with any other word or words, in a corporate or trade name, or through statements in advertising, or in any other manner, that respondent has an interest in, forms a part of, or has any connection with Onedia, Ltd., manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware; provided, however, that this order shall not be construed to prohibit the respondent from dealing in Wm. A. Rogers silverware.

2. Representing that certificates, gift cards, or other similar device can be redeemed in silverware or other merchandise unless and until all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer and there is no deception as to the services or other actions to be performed or the price to be paid in connection with obtaining such silverware or other articles of merchandise.

3. Representing that the purchase price for said certificates or gift cards will be refunded to the dealer purchasers thereof or that the respondent will supply to such dealer purchasers without charge display sets of silverware, to become the property of such dealers, unless and until such are the facts and unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer or offers are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and immediate connection or conjunction with such offer or offers and there is no deception as to the services or other actions to be performed by the dealer purchasers in connection with obtaining such refund and display set of silverware.

4. Representing that a complete set of silverware or any specific item of silverware can be acquired through the redemption of such certificates, gift cards, or similar devices unless and until such is the fact.

5. Using any representations with respect to the number of certificates or gift cards required to be redeemed in order to obtain any specific merchandise, which representations do not clearly and accurately disclose the number of such certificates or gift cards actually required to obtain such merchandise.

IN THE MATTER OF AMBROSIA CANDY COMPANY, AND SAMUEL R. BLOCK, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS AN OFFICER OF AMBROSIA
CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation and an individual engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including bar and 5-cent candy but principally packaged or boxed chocolates in ½-pound, 2-pound, and 5-pound sizes, and in furnishing with about one-half their output on request and without additional charge, punchboards for distribution and sale of their product to consumer under plan by which selection of number which might entitle selector to a box of candy and whether charge for selection would cost customer 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, 5 cents, or nothing at all, was wholly matter of chance, and in selling also number of assortments of packaged chocolates suitable for use in operation of such boards and some of which assortments had added thereto as a premium a lamp; and including—

(1) Boards having 300 holes, in sections of 100 each, for sale and distribution of candy under a plan and in accordance with board's invitation, 5 cent purchaser of chance received or failed to receive 1-pound box of chocolates in accordance with success or failure in selecting number ending with numeral 5, those securing number 50 and multiples of 50 received fancy 1-pound box of chocolates, and last sale in each of board's three sections entitled purchaser to one fancy 2-pound box of chocolates, and holders of other numbers received nothing; and

(2) Other boards of the same general nature having as many as 30 or 10 free numbers, and for which selectors paid nothing, and on some of which charge to members of public ranged from 1 cent to 5 cents for each number selected—

Sold to wholesalers and jobbers, along with punchboards thus furnished, their said candy for distribution by retail dealer buyers thereof to purchasing public through use of said boards as above set forth and wholly by lot or chance and under plan by which amount which members of public paid for chance to obtain one of prizes thus distributed by use of such boards or whether or not chance was free was determined wholly by lot or chance; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of such purchasers means by which lotteries and games of chance might be conducted in sale and distribution of candy as above set forth involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure such candy without cost or for much less than price at which such candy is sold in usual course of retail trade, contrary to an established policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several of the States, and in competition with many who sell candy of like or similar grade and quality and are unwilling to sell their said product by any method or sales plan which involves game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and refrain from use thereof;
With result that many wholesale and retail dealers were attracted by element of chance involved in sales plan or method by which candy sold by them was distributed to public by use of punchboards and were thereby induced to purchase their said candy in preference to that of like or similar grade and quality sold by competitors who do not furnish with their product any punchboards or other devices by the use of which such product can be distributed to the consuming public by lot or chance, and their competitors aforesaid were placed at a disadvantage, and they sold substantial quantities of their said product, and trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. Walter C. Hughes, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ambrosia Candy Co., a corporation, and Samuel R. Block, individually, and as an officer of Ambrosia Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ambrosia Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its offices and principal place of business at 1719 Federal Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Samuel R. Block, secretary and treasurer, majority stockholder, and moving spirit of Ambrosia Candy Co., has his office at the same address and directs the activities and controls the business policy and affairs of the corporate respondent. Said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers. Respondents cause and have caused their products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and similar products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of 1-pound boxes of candy, a number of fancy 1-pound boxes of candy, and a number of 2-pound boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said boxes of candy are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence, and said numbers are arranged in three sections. The board bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a 1-pound box of candy, certain other specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a fancy 1-pound box of candy, and the last punch in each section entitles the purchaser of same to a 2-pound box of candy. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers or the last punch in a section receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The boxes of candy are worth more than 5 cents each and a purchaser who obtains a number calling for a box of candy receives the same for 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The 1-pound boxes of candy are thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents manufacture, sell, and distribute various assortments of candy involving the lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.
Complaint

Par. 3 Retail dealers who purchase respondents' candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' candy in preference to candy and similar products offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy or similar products in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above alleged or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in the candy trade, to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and in such other distributors of said candy as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said method by respondents has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 26, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Ambrosia Candy Co., and Samuel R. Block, individually and as an officer of the Ambrosia Candy Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint, and the filing of an answer by the respondent, Samuel R. Block, individually and as an officer of the respondent Ambrosia Candy Co. (no answer was filed by the respondent, Ambrosia Candy Co.), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Walter C. Hughes, attorney for the respondents, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Ambrosia Candy Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its offices and principal place of business at 1719 Federal Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Samuel R. Block, secretary and treasurer, majority stockholder, and moving spirit of Ambrosia Candy Co., has his office at the same address and directs the activities and controls the business policy and affairs of the corporate respondent. Said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter found.

Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution of same to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers. Respondents cause and have caused their products when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois, and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are in active competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and similar products, in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondents manufacture a small amount of bar candy, and 5-cent candy, but their principal product is packaged or boxed chocolates, the sizes of the packages being ½ pound, 1 pound, 2 pounds, and 5 pounds; practically their entire output is sold to jobbers or wholesale dealers; their annual volume of sales is approximately $250,000, and with about one-half of their output, when so requested by their customers, they furnish devices sometimes described as punchboards for which no additional charge is made; these boards are shipped with the candy. Some of the boards so furnished by respondents have 300 holes which are arranged in sections of 100 each, and each hole has inserted therein a rolled slip of paper upon which is printed a number. In the operation of the boards members of the public are solicited to punch from one or more of the holes the rolled slip of paper contained therein and to pay 5 cents for each number so obtained; the holders of 12 numbers so obtained which end with the numeral 5 each receive a 1-pound box of chocolates, and the holders of number 50 and multiples of 50, 6 in all, each receive a fancy 1-pound box of chocolates, and the last sale in each of the 3 sections entitles the purchaser to receive 1 fancy 2-pound box of chocolates, but the holders of the other numbers, 278 in all, receive nothing. Other boards of the same general nature furnished by respondents have as many as 30 or 40 numbers designated as free and for which selectors pay nothing, and on some of the boards the charge to members of the public ranges from 1 cent to 5 cents for each number selected. With all the boards so furnished by respondents the selection of a number which might entitle the selector to a box of candy or whether the charge for each selection made will cost 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents, or will cost nothing at all, is wholly a matter of chance. Said respondents also sell a number of assortments of packaged chocolates suitable for use in the operation of said boards, some of which assortments have added thereto as a premium, a lamp.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that candy sold by respondents to wholesale dealers and jobbers with which they furnished punchboards, as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, was resold by said wholesale dealers and jobbers to retail dealers who distributed same to the purchasing public by the use of such punchboards, wholly by lot or chance, and that the amount which members of the public paid for a chance to obtain one of the prizes distributed by the use of one of such boards, or whether such chance was free, was determined wholly by lot or chance. Respondents by furnishing such boards to purchasers of candy sold by them have supplied to such purchasers and placed in their hands, the means by which lotteries and games of chance may be conducted. The sale and distribution of candy in the manner, and by the method hereinbefore described, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several of the States of the United States. Many competitors of respondents sell candy of like or similar grade and quality to that sold by respondents, in competition with respondents, which competitors are unwilling to sell such candy by any method or sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and refrain from the use of same, and as a result are placed at a disadvantage in competition.

Par. 4. The sale and distribution of candy to the purchasing public in the manner, and by the method hereinbefore found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure such candy without cost or for much less than the price at which such candy is sold in the usual course of retail trade. Many wholesale and retail dealers were attracted by the element of chance involved in the sales plan or method by which candy sold by respondents was distributed to the public by the use of punchboards, and said dealers were thereby induced to purchase candy sold by respondents in preference to candy of like or similar grade and quality sold by competitors of respondents who did not and do not furnish with candy sold by them, any punchboards or other devices, by the use of which such candy could be distributed to the consuming public by lot or chance, and as a result respondents have sold substantial quantities of candy, which has caused trade to be diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commis­ ion upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent Samuel R. Block (respondent Ambrosia Candy Co. having filed no answer), testimony, and other evidence taken before William C.
Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief by attorney for the Commission (respondents having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the

It is ordered, That the respondents, Ambrosia Candy Co., its and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy which are to be used or may be used to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of candy or other merchandise to the public.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
WHERE partners engaged in sale of a large number of articles of various sorts and kinds, including books of instruction in various arts and in other subjects, musical instruments, cutlery, watches, clocks, radio receiving sets, seeds for flowers, vegetables and medicinal plants, push cards, and others, to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale and distribution of like and similar books, articles, and devices in commerce among the various States and in said District—

No need to spend $85 when you can own a Jazzy Sax," that said instrument was comparable in material, appearance, or performance to those costing said amount; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that close inspection showed that their "G-Man Pocket Knife" had "Blades of finest quality steel," and that their "Atlas Calendar Watch As an ordinary time-keeper" was "a watch of highest quality • • •," and that their "King Tut Lucky Ring" was "Made of green gold, antique finish," and referred to their "No. 8269—1 kt. Egyptian Diamond • • • Five-Year Guarantee," and represented that their "Genuine Diamond Ring for only $3.25" was "A real genuine Diamond";

Facts being their said "Jazzy Sax" was not, as thus represented, comparable in material, appearance, or performance to saxophones selling at $85, blades of said knives were not of finest steel, nor were said watches of highest quality, nor settings of said rings of gold, nor said rings last referred to set with diamonds, and, while so-called "Genuine Diamond" ring was set with diamond "chip," neither it nor ring preceding were set with genuine diamonds;

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, their "Elephant Ring" as "The lucky elephant that brings you luck," and set forth that their "World-Wide All-Wave Receivers • • • bring in Short Wave Stations in all parts of the world • • • as well as regular broadcast and ship stations on long waves," etc., and that their "Distributor Intensifier" "Gives your car added Power and Pep • • • with less gas," facts being their said ring last referred to would not cause purchaser or wearer to be more favored by fortune than otherwise, their said radio receiving set does not give satisfactory reception for ordinary long wave or commercial programs, and use of their said "Distributor Intensifier" would not accomplish results claimed in operation of an automobile;

(e) Represented in false advertisements disseminated by them in commerce with respect to the properties and therapeutic values of various drugs and devices, that their "Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles" would relieve aching and sweaty feet and rheumatism and pains in the hips, and that use of their "Home Medical Battery" would cure a large number and variety of diseases and ailments, including ulcers, cancers, and other malignant growths, enlarged tonsils, rheumatism, etc., and that their distemper preparation would cure distemper in dogs, and their "Corn Remover" eradicate corns, facts being said insoles are entirely lacking in therapeutic value, use of said battery does not constitute adequate or competent treatment for diseases and ailments for which recommended, there is no orally administered remedy for canine distemper which will in all cases, or even in many, result in cure of such malady, and corn remover would not eradicate corns;

(f) Represented, through such statements as "Big Money Growing Medical Plants. Ginseng. Golden Seal. Two Big Money-Makers. A little space in your back yard will make you independent," etc., and "On one acre of land Elias Kettle succeeded in producing a crop of Ginseng which he has contracted to sell for $50,000.00," that large earnings could be made by the culture of said plants, and that such culture was easy, and that any good well-drained soil was suitable: for culture of latter, facts being profitable culture was dependent upon climatic and soil conditions found principally in northern portion of the United States, certain amount of shade for plants is necessary, and, raised from seed, approximately 7 years growth for Ginseng and 4 for Golden Seal are necessary before plants are of commercial value and profits can be realized therefrom; and

(g) Represented, through such statements as "We Sell You a Regular Income! Big Profits in Peanut Vending Machines" and "These vendors pay for themselves in 30 days • • • In as short a time as one year you can build up a route of a hundred machines and have an independent income," that purchase of such a machine was a purchase of a regular income, and that such machines would in all cases repay their cost in 30 days, and that a chain of 100 machines from a small beginning could be built up by purchaser during a year, facts being such various representations were false, and there was no assurance that chains of 100 profitable machines could be developed as aforesaid;
With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and, by reason thereof, into purchase of substantial quantities of their said wares, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade in commerce to them from competitors who truthfully advertise their goods; to the injury of competition in commerce; and

(h) Furnished various devices and plans for merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lotteries for sale and distribution of their said merchandise to ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance, and involved distribution to purchasing public of push cards and catalogs depicting such cards and merchandise and explanation of plan of selling same and allotting it as premiums or prizes through such sale of said products by means of said cards, and under a plan or scheme in accordance with his success or failure in selecting from list of feminine receive, the rotary clock or other merchandise being thus disposed of, in accordance with his success or failure in selecting from list of feminine names displayed that one corresponding to name concealed under card's master seal, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others to whom they furnished said cards for use in purchase, sale, and distribution of their said merchandise, means of conducting lotteries in the sale thereof in accordance with aforesaid or similar plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win by lot, or other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by their said sales plan or method employed in sale and distribution of their said merchandise and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell such goods in preference to merchandise offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect, by reason of their use of such method and said element of chance, of unfairly diverting trade to them from their competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent method; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unlawful and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, doing business as copartners under the name of Johnson-Smith & Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, as copartners, conduct their business under the name of Johnson-Smith & Co., with a principal place of business at 6615 East Jefferson Avenue, city of Detroit, State of Michigan.

Par. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling books of instruction in various arts and in other subjects, musical instruments, cutlery, watches, clocks, therapeutic devices and preparations, optical goods, radio receiving sets, devices for attachment to automobiles, master keys, rings, seeds for flowers, vegetables and medicinal plants, push cards, and a large number of other articles of various sorts and kinds.

Respondents cause, and have caused, the said books and articles when sold to be transported from the place where their business is conducted in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been for more than 2 years last past, in substantial competition with other partnerships and with individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar books, articles, and devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said books of instruction, respondents have caused their catalogue, containing certain claims with respect thereto and to the proficiency and ability which will be acquired by purchasers who master the contents thereof, to be distributed between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and have caused certain advertisements with respect thereto to be inserted in magazines and periodicals having a circulation through the various States of the United States.

SECRETS OF CLEOPATRA'S BEAUTY REVEALED

It teaches how to so improve the person in loveliness and beauty that you will drive admirers almost to madness • • • If you desire bright, melting eyes, a clear soft, rosy-tinted complexion, beautiful hands and graceful figure, well-developed and perfect, so that the world will seek your acquaintance and try to win you, get this book at once.

By the said statements, and others of like import and effect, in their said catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication, represent that by the purchase and mastery of the contents of the said books the purchaser can: Acquire the ability to play various musical instruments without personal instruction, tedious practice, or any knowledge of music; easily learn the art of hypnotism and thereby become able to sway, influence the thoughts, and control the desires of others, become master of every situation, cause others to love him, strengthen his will power, banish fear and worry, improve his memory, and overcome bad habits; read the minds and govern the actions of others; foretell future events; acquire health, happiness, and wealth; rapidly acquire proficiency in the Polish and other tongues; and acquire a truly amazing beauty.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, with respect to the results that may be obtained by a mastery of the contents of the said books are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, it is impossible to gain from respondents' books the ability to "play," in the generally accepted sense of the word, the organ and piano, saxophone, trumpet, violin, cornet or flute, or the guitar, ukulele, banjo, or mandolin, although as to the latter instruments certain harmonic combinations or chords may be learned and mechanically repeated. The art of ventriloquism cannot be imparted otherwise than by personal instruction. The art and secrets of hypnotism cannot be learned from respondents' book, nor is the master of that art able to more than temporarily sway others, influence their thoughts, control their desires, or induce their love. The hypnotist is not master of every situation, and the practice of the art will not strengthen his will power, banish fear and worry, improve his memory, nor overcome bad habits. Ability to read the minds and govern the actions of others, heal nervous ailments, foretell future events, and acquire health, happiness, and wealth cannot be acquired by a mastery of respondents' books. Proficiency in foreign languages cannot be rapidly acquired by a mastery of respondents' books of self-instruction. Cleopatra's secrets of beauty, if any, are veiled in obscurity and the directions contained in the book in which they purport to be revealed will not, if followed, give to the user the bright and melting eye, the clear and roseate complexion, the beautiful hand and the well-rounded but lissom figure and will not cause her to be besieged by suitors half mad with admiration for her charms.

PAR. 6. In the said course and conduct of their business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of certain of their wares, respondents have, in the manner aforesaid, made claims with respect to the quality of various of the articles which they sell.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

G-MAN POCKET KNIFE

Close inspection shows the G-Man Pocket Knife has blades of finest quality steel *

THE ATLAS CALENDAR WATCH

As an ordinary time-keeper, it is a watch of highest quality *

PLAY THIS JAZZY SAXOPHONE WITHOUT PRACTICE!

No need to spend $85 when you can own a Jazzy Sax.

By the said statements, and others of like import and effect, in their said catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication represent: That the blades of the G-Man Pocket Knife are made of the finest steel; that the Atlas Watch is of the highest quality and that the Jazzy Sax is comparable in quality to saxophones selling for many times its price.

PAR. 7. The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, with respect to the quality of the articles mentioned in paragraph 6 hereof, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the blades of the G-Man Pocket Knife are not of finest quality steel; the Atlas Watch is not of the highest quality; and the Jazzy Sax is not comparable in material, appearance, or performance to saxophones selling at $85.

PAR. 8. In the said course and conduct of their business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of certain of their wares, respondents have, in the manner aforesaid, made claims with respect to the identity of various of the articles which they sell.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

KING TUT LUCKY RING

Made of green gold, antique finish.

No. 8209—1 kt. Egyptian Diamond * * * Five-Year Guarantee

Genuine Diamond Ring for only $3.25 * * * A real genuine Diamond
By said statements, and others of like import, and effect, in their said catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication, represent that the King Tut Ring is made of gold, and that the ring cataloged as "No. 8209" and the "Genuine Diamond Ring" are set with genuine diamonds.

Par. 9. The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, as to the identity of the said articles mentioned in paragraph 8 hereof, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the setting of the King Tut Ring is not made of gold; the ring cataloged as "No. 8209" is set with glass; and the diamond set in the "Genuine Diamond Ring" is not what is generally known as a "diamond," but what is generally known as a "diamond chip."

Par. 10. In the course and conduct of their business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of certain of their wares, respondents have in the manner aforesaid, made claims with respect to the effectiveness of various of the articles sold by them to accomplish the purposes for which they are recommended by respondents.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

NO. 8258—ELEPHANT RING

5 MASTER KEYS
They will open padlocks, night latches, door locks—in fact, practically all ordinary locks.

By said statements, and others of like import, and effect, in their said catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication, represent: That good fortune will attend the purchaser of the Elephant Ring; that the 5 Master Keys will open practically all ordinary locks; that the use of the Distributor Intensifier on an automobile will save gasoline and give additional speed, power, and life; that the 49-cent field glasses have six-power magnification; that the long-distance field glasses will render objects miles distant as clearly visible as though they were but a few feet from the user and that the World-Wide All-Wave Receiver will give satisfactory reception of all radio broadcasts, whether short wave or long wave.

Par. 11. The representations made by the respondents, directly and by implication, as to the results which may be obtained by the use of the articles mentioned in paragraph 10 hereof, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the Elephant Ring will not render the wearer more fortunate than would otherwise be the case; the master keys are effective only upon locks of the simplest and cheapest construction; the attachment of the distributor intensifier will not result in any saving of gas in the operation of an automobile, nor will it impart additional speed, power, and life; the 49-cent field glass is not a six-power glass; the long distance field glass will not render objects miles distant as clearly visible as they are at a few feet and the all-wave receiving set does not give satisfactory reception for ordinary or long-wave commercial programs.

Par. 12. In the course and conduct of their business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of certain of their wares, respondents have, in the manner aforesaid, caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties and therapeutic value of various medicinal preparations and devices designed and intended for, and used, in the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human and canine bodies, and the results which may be expected from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Included among and typical of such representations and claims are the following:

A DOG'S LIFE

Kit contains • • • distemper cures—

CORN REMOVER

Set consists of bottle corn remover—

By said statements, and others of like import and effect, in their said catalog and advertisements, respondents represent, directly and by implication: That Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles will relieve aching and sweaty feet, rheumatism, and pains in the hips; that the use of the Home Medical Battery will cure a large number and variety of diseases and ailments; that the distemper cure will cure distemper in dogs; and that the corn remover will eradicate corns.

PAR. 13. The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, used and disseminated by respondents in the manner described, with respect to the articles mentioned in paragraph 12 hereof, are exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertising. In truth and in fact, Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles are entirely lacking in therapeutic value; the use of the Home Medical Battery does not constitute an adequate or competent treatment for the diseases and ailments for which it is recommended by respondents; there is no orally administered remedy for canine distemper, which will in all, or even in many, cases result in a cure of the malady; the corn remover will not eradicate corns.

PAR. 14. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in the manner described induces, or is likely to induce, the purchase of a drug or device.

PAR. 15. In the course and conduct of their business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of certain of their wares, respondents have, in the manner aforesaid, made claims relative to the purported profits or earnings of those who purchase certain of their articles for resale, for use for profit or for development or culture.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

BIG MONEY GROWING MEDICAL PLANTS

Ginseng Golden Seal

Two Big Money-Makers

A little space in your back yard will make you independent. Golden Seal roots are easy to grow. Any good well-drained soil is suitable for the growth of Golden Seal. At this rate an acre (of Golden Seal) would be worth $12,060.00. Ginseng is another money-maker. On one acre of land Elias Kettle succeeded in producing a crop of Ginseng which he has contracted to sell for $50,000.00.

WE SELL YOU A REGULAR INCOME! BIG PROFITS IN PEANUT VENDING MACHINES

These vendors pay for themselves in 30 days * * * all the money you make after that is profit for you!—In as short a time as one year you can build up a route of a hundred machines and have an independent income.

By said statements, and others of like import and effect, in their catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication, represent: That large earnings can be made by the culture of Ginseng and Golden Seal on small tracts of land; that their culture is easy; and that any good, well-drained soil is suitable for the culture of Golden Seal; that the purchase of a peanut-vending machine is the purchase of a regular income; that such machines will, in all cases, return profits equal to their cost in 30 days and that from a small beginning the purchaser can during a year, build up a chain of 100 machines.

PAR. 16. The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, with respect to the advantages to be gained from the purchase of the articles mentioned in paragraph 15 hereof, are misleading. In truth and in fact, the profitable culture of Ginseng and Golden Seal is dependent upon climatic and soil conditions which are found principally in the northern portion of the United States. A certain amount of shade for the plants is necessary. When raised from seed it requires approximately 7 years' growth for Ginseng and 4 years for Golden Seal before the plants are of commercial value and profits can be realized. The purchase of a peanut-vending machine is not the purchase of a regular income. Machines will not in all cases pay for themselves in 30 days or a few weeks, and there is no assurance that chains of 100 profitable machines can be developed from small beginnings within a year.

PAR. 17. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, with respect to their books of instruction, the proficiency and ability which will be acquired by purchasers who master the contents thereof and the quality, identity, effectiveness in use, curative and therapeutic value, and financial advantage, to be gained from the purchase of certain of its wares, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said wares.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise their wares. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 18. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinbefore described, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing certain of their merchandise in commerce, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans for merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to the purchasing public in commerce, both push cards and their catalog containing illustrations of the said push cards and merchandise and an explanation of respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes. One of respondents' push cards has 100 small, partially perforated disks on the left side, and on the face of each of said disks is printed a feminine name. On the right side of the card the same feminine names are set forth in ruled columns. The customer selects a name, punches out the disk, and inserts his name in the ruled column opposite the name of his selection. The push card also has a large master seal, within which is one of the feminine names appearing upon the perforated disks and in the ruled column. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

WIN THIS ROTARY CLOCK

New Distinctive Beautiful Dependable

ONLY 10¢ PER PUNCH

Pay a Dime—Take Home a Clock—If You Win

WINNING NAME UNDER SEAL (SEAL)

Fill in your name opposite the girl's name you select
Sales of respondents' products by means of said push cards are made, and the said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards and catalogs for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of the said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 19. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 20. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by lot, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents because of said element of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 21. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 7, 1938, issued, and on November 9, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, copartners doing business under the name of Johnson-Smith & Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 19, 1938, respondents filed their answer, in which they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondents Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, as copartners, conduct their business under the name of Johnson-Smith & Co., with a principal place of business at 6615 East Jefferson Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

They are now, and have been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling a large number of articles of various sorts and kinds, including books of instruction in various arts and in other subjects, musical instruments, cutlery, watches, clocks, therapeutic devices and preparations, optical goods, radio receiving sets, devices for attachment to automobiles, master keys, rings, seeds for flowers, vegetables and medicinal plants, and push cards, and in transporting and causing said articles to be transported from its place of business in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia.

28 F. T. C.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business respondents now are, and have been, in substantial competition with other partnerships, and with individuals, firms, and corporations who likewise sell and distribute like or similar books, articles, and devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business as herein described, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their wares, respondents have caused their catalog, descriptive thereof, to be distributed between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and have caused certain advertisements of the said wares to be inserted in magazines and periodicals having a circulation through the various States of the United States. In the said catalog and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, respondents make various statements and claims relative to the proficiencies and abilities which will be acquired by the persons mastering the contents of respondents' books of instruction, and relative to the quality, identity, and effectiveness in use of the merchandise which respondents sell and distribute as aforesaid.

(With respect to the claims of the proficiencies and abilities which will be acquired by persons who master the contents of respondents' books of instruction).

DISTRIBUTOR INTENSIFIER

Saves gas • • • Gives your car added Power and Pep. The "Sparkmaster" is a distributor intensifier that will give you more speed and power with less gas.

Par. 4. By said statements and claims respondents, directly and by implication, represent: That by the purchase and mastery of certain of its said books, the purchaser can acquire the ability to play various musical instruments without personal instruction, tedious practice, or any knowledge of music; foretell future events; rapidly acquire proficiency in the Polish language, acquire a truly amazing beauty; that the "G-Man" pocket knife has blades of finest steel; that the "Atlas" watch is of the highest quality; that the "Jazzy Sax" is comparable to saxophones selling at many times its price; that the "King Tut" ring is made of gold; that the ring cataloged as "No. 8209" and the "Genuine Diamond" ring are set with genuine diamonds; that the "Elephant" ring will bring good fortune to the purchaser; that the "World-Wide All-Wave" radio receiver will give satisfactory reception of all radio broadcasts, whether long wave or short wave, and that the use of the "Distributor Intensifier" on an automobile will save gasoline and give additional speed, power, and life.

In truth and in fact, it is impossible by mastering respondents' books to gain the ability to "play," in the generally accepted sense of the word, the instruments to which the said books relate, although it is possible to learn from them certain harmonic combinations or chords which may be mechanically repeated on the piano, guitar, ukelele, banjo, or mandolin. Neither is it possible, from said books, to rapidly acquire proficiency in the Polish tongue or acquire beauty of eye, complexion, hand, arm, or figure, and in addition an array of importunate suitors. The "G-Man" knife blades are not of finest steel, the "Atlas" watch is not of highest quality, nor is the "Jazzy Sax" comparable in material, appearance, or performance to saxophones selling at $85. The setting of the "King Tut" ring is not made of gold; the rings cataloged as "No. 8209" and "Genuine Diamond" are not set with genuine diamonds, although the latter is set with a diamond "chip." The "Elephant" ring will not cause the purchaser or wearer to be more favored by fortune than would otherwise be the case. The "World-Wide All-Wave" radio receiving set does not give satisfactory reception for ordinary long wave or commercial programs. The use of the "Distributor Intensifier" will not result in any saving of gas in the operation of an automobile, nor will it impart additional speed, power, or life.
Par 5. In the manner and for the purposes previously described, respondents have caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties and therapeutic value of various drugs and devices, as the same are defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the results which may be expected from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as defined in the said act.

Typical of these representations are the following:

PROFESSOR WINGREN'S VOLTAIC ELECTRIC INSOLES

Aching Feet

? Rheumatism ?

Sweaty Feet

Try these electric insoles • • • today! If you suffer from cold, tired or sweaty feet, or if you have rheumatism and kindred ailments, you, too, should give them a trial.

HOME MEDICAL BATTERY

Get relief without drugs—in most diseases—its effect is almost certain to be beneficial—. A mild current may be used in cases of scrofula, ulcers, cancers and other malignant growths, enlarged tonsils, granulated eyelids, swollen glands and similar complaints. A stronger current is necessary for treating nervous and inflammatory diseases such as, neuralgia, rheumatism, apoplexy, asthma, cramp, catarch, deafness, dyspepsia, earache, headache, hysteria, insomnia, kidney and liver troubles, obesity, paralysis, brain fag, and "that tired feeling".

A DOG'S LIFE

Kit contains • • • distemper cures—

Set consists of bottle corn remover ——

Par 6. By such statements and claims respondents represent, directly and by implication: That Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles will relieve aching and sweaty feet, rheumatism, and pains in the hips; that the use of the Home Medical Battery will cure a large number and variety of diseases and ailments; that the distemper cure will cure distemper in dogs; and that the corn remover will eradicate corns.

The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, used and disseminated by respondents in the manner described, with respect to the articles mentioned in paragraph 5 hereof, are exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertising.
In truth and in fact, Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles are entirely lacking in therapeutic value; the use of the Home Medical Battery does not constitute an adequate or competent treatment for the diseases and ailments for which it is recommended by respondents; there is no orally administered remedy for canine distemper, which will in all, or even in many, cases result in a cure of the malady; the corn remover will not eradicate corns.

Par. 7. In the manner and for the purposes aforesaid respondents have made claims with respect to the purported profits of those who purchase certain of their wares for resale, for use for profit, or for development or culture, and representations as to the factors necessary for the successful culture of certain of its seeds.

Typical of these claims and representations are the following:

BIG MONEY GROWING MEDICAL PLANTS

Ginseng Golden Seal

Two Big Money-Makers

A little space in your back yard will make you independent. Golden Seal roots are easy to grow. Any good well-drained soil is suitable for the growth of Golden Seal. At this rate an acre (of Golden Seal) would be worth $12,000.00. Ginseng is another money-maker. On one acre of land Elias Kettle succeeded in producing a crop of Ginseng which he has contracted to sell for $50,000.00.

These vendors pay for themselves in 30 days * * * all the money you make after that is profit for you!—In as short a time as one year you can build up a route of a hundred machines and have an independent income.

By said statements, and others of like import and effect, in their catalog and advertisements, respondents, directly and by implication, represent: That large earnings can be made by the culture of Ginseng and Golden Seal on small tracts of lands; that their culture is easy; and that any good, well-drained soil is suitable for the culture of Golden Seal; that the purchase of a peanut-vending machine is the purchase of a regular income; that such machines will, in all cases, return profits equal to their cost in 30 days and that from a small beginning the purchaser can during a year, build up a chain of 100 machines.

The representations made by respondents, directly and by implication, with respect to the advantages to be gained from the purchase of the articles mentioned in paragraph 7 hereof, are misleading. In truth and in fact, the profitable culture of Ginseng and Golden Seal is dependent upon climatic and soil conditions which are found prinprincipal in the northern portion of the United States. A certain amount of shade for the plants is necessary. When raised from seed it requires approximately 7 years' growth for Ginseng and 4 years for Golden Seal before the plants are of commercial value and profits can be realized. The purchase of a peanut-vending machine is not the purchase of a regular income. Machines will not in all cases pay for themselves in 30 days or a few weeks, and there is no assurance that chains of 100 profitable machines can be developed from small beginnings within a year.

Par. 8. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, with respect to their books of instruction, the proficiency and ability which will be acquired by purchasers who master the contents thereof and the quality, identity, effectiveness in use, curative and therapeutic value, and financial advantage, to be gained from the purchase of certain of its wares, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said wares.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise their wares. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinbefore described, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing certain of their merchandise in commerce, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans for merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to the purchasing public in commerce, both push cards and their catalog containing illustrations of the said push cards and merchandise and an explanation of respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes. One of respondents' push cards has 100 small, partially perforated discs on the left side, and on the face of each of said discs is printed a feminine name. On the right side of the card the same feminine names are set forth in ruled columns. The customer selects a name, punches out the disc, and inserts his name in the ruled column opposite the name of his selection. The push card also has a large master seal, within which is one of the feminine names appearing upon the perforated discs and in the ruled column. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

WIN THIS ROTARY CLOCK

New Distinctive Beautiful Dependable

ONLY 10¢ PER PUNCH

Pay a Dime—Take Home a Clock—If You Win

WINNING NAME UNDER SEAL (SEAL)

Fill in your name opposite the girl’s name you select

Sales of respondents’ products by means of said push cards are made, and the said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards and catalogs for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of the said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 10. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents’ merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the criminal laws.

The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by lot, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents because of said element of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, individually and as copartners trading as Johnson-Smith & Co. or under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:
1. Representing directly or indirectly that persons can acquire proficiency in, or mastery of, any art, science, or language, or any ability, power, or quality, through or by means of any course of instruction, book, or other literature of respondents, when such is not the fact.

2. Representing directly or indirectly that purchasers of respondents' merchandise will obtain, by reason of such purchase, a financial profit or advantage greater than the financial profit or advantage which is in fact obtained by purchasers of such merchandise under normal conditions and circumstances.

3. Representing directly or indirectly that purchases of such merchandise are certain to obtain financial profit or advantage by reason of the purchase of such merchandise.

4. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

5. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

6. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That said respondents, Alfred Johnson Smith, Paul Smith, and Arthur Smith, individually and as copartners trading as Johnson-Smith & Co., or under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, either the purchase of certain devices now designated by the names of "Professor Wingren's Voltaic Electric Insoles" and "Home Medical Battery" or any other devices of substantially similar composition or construction whether sold under those names, or any other names, or the purchase of certain medicines now designated as distemper cures and corn remover, or any other medicines composed of similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic qualities, whether sold under those designations or any other designations, or disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said devices or medicines which advertisements represent directly or through implication: That the said insoles will relieve aching or sweaty feet, rheumatism, or pains in the hips; that the said electric battery constitutes an adequate or competent treatment for scrofula, ulcers, cancers, or other malignant growths, enlarged tonsils, granulated eyelids, swollen glands, and similar complaints, nervous and inflammatory diseases such as neuralgia, rheumatism, apoplexy, asthma, cramp, catarrh, deafness, dyspepsia, earache, headache, hysteria, insomnia, kidney and liver troubles, obesity, paralysis, and brain fag; that the so-called distemper cures will cure distemper in dogs, or that the so-called corn remover will eradicate corns.

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

MUTUAL PRINTING COMPANY, IN ITS OWN NAME AND RIGHT, AND TRADING AS MUTUAL SALES PROMOTION SERVICE

Where a corporation engaged in selling its sales stimulator or sales-promotion plan or trade-promotion cards, which were so designed and arranged that their use constituted lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of merchandise of such merchants to consuming public, and which included (1) groups of cards arranged for punching out $5 in trade, or $10 in trade, as case might be, and which had enclosed or concealed within their so-called secret panels, for disclosure when total amount provided for on cards had been punched out, legends entitling chance holder of card to amounts ranging, in trade, from 20 cents to $5 for the $5 cards, and from 40 cents to $10 for the $10 cards, and (2) other groups intended for use by proprietors of service stations in sales of oil and gas aggregating $17, and providing for awards ranging from 1 quart of oil to 25 quarts thereof, or for equivalent—

Sold to retail customers assortments of such sales promotion or trade cards, together with a variety of display posters and advertising matter for use of such retailer customers in use and distribution of said cards, and together with punch for canceling numbers arranged around the border thereof to indicate amount of sale made in each instance, and with suggestion for use of such cards by its retail merchant customers, who distributed same to their own customers and prospective customers and honored awards shown under secret panels thereof, and thereby knowingly supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of operating lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, contrary to public policy, and in competition with those who are opposed to such methods and refrain therefrom;

With result that many of the consuming public, by reason of lot or chance feature connected with its said cards, were induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from retailers using said cards in preference to purchasing from merchants using sales-booster schemes or plans or devices of competitors which had connected with them no element of lot or chance, and with further result, by reason of such last-mentioned fact, that many of such merchants, who cannot use more than one type of sales-promotion or price-concession card or coupon at the same time, were induced to purchase its said cards in preference to devices or plans of competitors, and trade was thereby diverted from them to it, competitors aforesaid who refrain from use of such methods were put to competitive disadvantage, and sales of competing sales plans or promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons by competitors were injuriously affected; to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and in restraint upon, and to the detriment of, freedom of fair and legitimate competition;
Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. U. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. Norman Asher and Mr. Lester Asher, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mutual Printing, Inc., a corporation in its own name and right, and trading as Mutual Printing Co., Inc., and Mutual Sales Promotion Service, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 751 East Sixty-fourth Street, Chicago, Ill. The respondent, trading as Mutual Printing Co., Inc., and as Mutual Sales Promotion Service, is now, and for some time last past has been engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards and in the sale and distribution thereof to retail merchants, located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such sales-promotion cards between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and with individuals engaged in the manufacture of sales-promotion cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons and trading stamps, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public.

The respondent manufactures and distributes several groups of sales-promotion cards, but they all involve the same lottery scheme or gift enterprise and vary only in detail. The sales-promotion cards in one such group are herein described for the purpose of showing arrangement, design, and principle involved. On the front, such cards are as follows:

| 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 | 5 |
| KEEP THIS TREASURE CARD |
| YOU MAY WIN up to $5.00 |
| $ | Under this SECRET PANEL |
| IS YOUR AWARD |
| Warning! | Void if opened |
| NO BLANKS—EVERY CARD A WINNER |
| (Read Rules on Other Side) |
```

Under the secret panel is the following:

When Properly Punched, Good for 20 Cents
IN TRADE

The secret panel referred to on the said card is partially perforated to indicate where it may be opened, but until the said panel is opened, the legend thereunder is effectively concealed from the holder of the said card. The said legends under the secret panel vary in amount from 20 cents to $5. The legend under the secret panel is effectively concealed until the panel has been opened and the amount which the holder of said card will receive in trade is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. On the reverse or back of the said sales promotion cards is the following language:

NO BLANKS—AWARDS UP TO $5.00

These awards are given in appreciation of your patronage. When this card is fully punched, present same to us intact. We will then open the Secret Panel. You will receive the award printed thereon ABSOLUTELY FREE. SHOULD YOU OPEN THE SECRET PANEL, THIS CARD BECOMES VOID.

Complaint

Other cards manufactured and distributed by the respondent provide for recording the sale of $10 worth of merchandise by the numbers arranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of amounts up to $10 by the legends under the secret panel. In some groups, the legends begin with 20 cents and go to $10, and in other groups, they begin with 40 cents and go to $10.

Respondent furnishes the retail merchants with various display posters and advertisements to be used by said retail merchants in distributing and using said cards.

PAR. 3. The retail merchants to whom respondent sells assortments of said sales-promotion cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown under the secret panel of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondent and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made, punches corresponding to the amount of such purchases are made around the margin of said card and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched, the secret panel is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the said secret panel, free of charge.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondent, various manufacturers, and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price-concession cards, coupons and trading stamps, which when used by retail merchants do not involve a lottery scheme or gift enterprise. By reason of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with the distribution and use of the respondent's said cards, many retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to the devices manufactured and distributed by respondent's competitors and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 5. The consuming public are induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants, using respondent's cards in preference to retail merchants using the devices of respondent's competitors, because of the lottery scheme or gift enterprise connected with respondent's said cards. By reason thereof, retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to devices of respondent's competitors and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of said method in designing and arranging its said cards is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various cards or devices for promoting or increasing sales of retail merchants are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise and such competitors therefrom.

Par. 7. The respondent, in shipping the said cards to its customers, assorts and packs them so that such customers know the amount of award stated under the secret panel, thus the retail merchants to whom respondent sells its cards are enabled to perpetrate a fraud on their customers. This practice has the capacity and tendency to induce and does induce retail merchants to purchase respondent’s said cards in preference to card or devices of respondent’s competitors.

Par. 8. The aforesaid method, acts, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent’s competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 29, 1937, issued its complaint in the above-entitled proceeding and caused same to be served upon the respondent, Mutual Printing Co., a corporation, trading in its own name and right and trading as Mutual Sales Promotion Service (named in the complaint herein as Mutual Printing, Inc., a corporation in its own name and right, and trading as Mutual Printing Co., Inc., and Mutual Sales Promotion Service), charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent entered its appearance herein on August 20, 1937, and filed an answer to said complaint. Testimony was taken and evidence received at Chicago, Ill., on May 13, 1938, in support of the charges stated in the complaint, at the instance of Henry C. Lank, and D. C. Daniel, counsel for the Commission, and testimony was taken and evidence received on May 18, 1938, on behalf of said respondent at the instance of its counsel, Norman Asher, before William C. Reeves, an examiner for said Commission, all of which testimony has been reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. Briefs were filed by counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent. Counsel for the respondent waived oral argument. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint herein and the answer thereto, the testimony taken and evidence received, and the briefs of counsel for the Commission and the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The corporate name of the respondent is Mutual Printing Co. It has carried on business under its own corporate name and also under the name and style of Mutual Sales Promotion Service. It was organized in 1929 under the laws of the State of Illinois, with principal place of business at Chicago in said State. Since its organization it has been engaged in the business of selling what it terms a sales stimulator or sales-promotion plan which has been sold by it to retail merchants in various States of the United States and respondent has caused the printed matter intended for use in the operation of said plan to be transmitted from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., through and into or into various other States of the United States, to the respective purchasers thereof, and in the course and conduct of its said business has been and is now in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the sale of various types of sales stimulators or sales-promotion plans, in commerce among several of the States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold cards so designed and arranged that their use constitutes a lottery scheme or gift enterprise when used by retail merchants in promoting and increasing sales of the merchandise of such merchants to the consuming public. One type of the cards so sold by respondent is substantially as follows:

The secret panel referred to on the said card was partially perforated to indicate where it might be opened, but until said panel was opened, the legend thereunder was effectively concealed from the holder of said card. The said legends under the secret panel varied in amount from 20 cents to $5. Thus, the amount which the holder of said card would receive in trade was determined wholly by lot or chance.

On the reverse or back of said sales-promotion cards was the following:

Par. 3. Each of the cards included in one of the groups sold by respondent is intended for use in sales of merchandise aggregating $5 and the cards in such group provide for awards ranging from 20 cents in trade to $5 in trade; the cards in other groups sold by respondent are intended for use in sales of merchandise aggregating $10 and provide for awards ranging from 40 cents in trade to $10 in trade. Other groups sold by respondent are intended for use by proprietors of service stations in sales of oil and gas aggregating $17 and provide for awards ranging from 1 quart of oil to 25 quarts of oil, or their equivalent. Respondent furnishes its customers with a variety of display posters and advertising matter to be used by such customers in the use and distribution of such cards, also furnishes such customers with a punch for canceling the numbers arranged around the border of such cards to indicate the amount of the sale made in each instance.

The retail merchants to whom respondent sells, and has sold, assortments of said sales-promotion cards or trade cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers, and honor the awards as shown under the secret panel of said cards. One method advocated or suggested by respondent and used by a substantial number of retail merchant customers of respondent is as follows: The cards are distributed free to customers and prospective customers of said retail merchants and when purchases are made numbers corresponding to the amount of such purchase are punched from the margin of said card and when all the numbers around the margin of said card are punched the secret panel is opened and the customer is entitled to merchandise of the said merchant in the amount shown by the legend under the secret panel, without additional charge.

Par. 4. Employees or officers of concerns manufacturing and distributing trading stamps and other trade booster cards not involving a lot or chance feature were called as witnesses and testified in this matter. The Commission finds that manufacturers and distributors of trading stamps, 99 cents and other price-concession cards, and premium coupons are in competition with the respondent and the business of such concerns is competitive with the business of the respondent. Retail merchants desiring to install some plan by which to boost sales of their merchandise cannot use more than one type of sales-promotion or price-concession card or coupon at the same time and retail merchants purchasing respondent's merchandise are not then in the market for other trade-booster schemes or plans which do not involve a lot or chance feature.

The lot or chance feature connected with respondent's cards has the capacity to and does induce many of the consuming public to deal with or purchase merchandise from retail merchants using respondent's cards in preference to retail merchants using the sales-booster schemes or plans or devices of respondent's competitors which have connected with them no element of lot or chance and by reason of this last-mentioned fact many retail merchants are induced to purchase respondent's said cards in preference to devices or plans of respondent's competitors, and trade is thus diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 5. The use of respondent's cards by retail merchants by the methods described herein constitutes a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise, and the sale of such cards by respondent and their use by customers of respondent, as described, is contrary to public policy. The Commission finds that competitors of respondent are opposed to such methods and refrain therefrom. Such competitors are thereby put to a competitive disadvantage.

PAR. 6. The respondent, in selling and distributing said cards, has knowledge that they are, and will be, used by its customers in the operation of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of operating lotteries, games of chance, and gift enterprises. The sale and distribution of such cards by the respondent injuriously affects the sale of competing sales plans or sales-promotion schemes or premium cards or coupons by competitors of respondent, and the use of such methods by the respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise is prejudicial and injurious to the public and to respondent's competitors, and is a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition.

PAR. 7. In the latter part of 1936 and the early part of 1937 respondent received and filled each month from 400 to 750 orders for groups of the Lucky Clover cards. Respondent has thus sold and distributed substantial quantities of said sales promotion cards in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as set forth in the foregoing findings are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and to competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Mutual Printing Co., a corporation in its own name and right and trading as Mutual Sales Promotion Service (named in the complaint herein as Mutual Printing, Inc., a corporation in its own name and right, and trading as Mutual Printing Co., Inc., and Mutual Sales Promotion Service), its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of sales promotion cards or any other sales promotion plans or schemes in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing sales promotion cards or any other articles of merchandise so designed that their use by retail merchants constitutes or may constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others sales promotion cards or sales promotion plans or schemes or any other articles of merchandise which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof to conduct a lottery, game of chance or gift enterprise, when distributed to the consuming public.

3. Furnishing or supplying to dealers display posters or circulars or other advertising literature bearing legends or statements informing the public as to the manner in which said sales promotion cards or other lottery devices are to be or may be distributed and used.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL, INC.

Docket 2957. Complaint, May 1, 1937—Decision, Mar. 8, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacturing a liquid laxative medicinal preparation which it designated as "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," "Syrup Pepsin," and "Syrup of Pepsin," and which included as ingredients syrup and pepsin as vehicle for senna and cascara sagrada, active ingredients therein and long used singly or in combination as laxatives and long in common use as such, and in selling and distributing its said preparation to wholesale and retail dealers in the various States and in the District of Columbia for resale to purchasing public, and in distributing also to the public in various States and in said District sample bottles in substantial quantity, in response to invitations in its advertising to send for such samples, and, as aforesaid engaged, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of medicinal and other preparations designed, intended, and used in treatment of ailments and conditions for which it recommended use of its said product—

(a) Represented, in advertisements thereof which it caused to be disseminated in commerce through newspapers and other publications circulated throughout the United States, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations of extrastate audience, that its said preparation was a liquid laxative and that physicians and hospitals preferred such laxatives, facts being constipation is not a disease or ailment, but symptom thereof, there are numerous drugs having laxative and cathartic properties prescribed by doctors in treatment of such condition, dependent upon age and condition of patient and reaction thereof to drug or drugs used, and physicians do not prefer such laxatives because of their liquidity, but use or prescribe type of laxative depending solely on diagnosis of patient and do not use a liquid unless thus indicated;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that patients returning from hospitals do so with their systems functioning properly and normally for the reason that liquid laxatives are used in such institutions, facts being patients do not always return from confinement therein with their systems thus functioning and for aforesaid reason, many patients suffering from constipation return from hospital confinement with their systems continuing to function improperly and abnormally, and successful treatment of patients suffering from such condition in hospitals is not dependent upon use of liquid laxative solely because of liquidity thereof;

(c) Represented that liquid laxative generally used was its said product, and that it was not a habit-forming laxative but, on the contrary, would correct laxative habit caused by use of other such products, facts being its said preparation was not the liquid laxative generally used or prescribed by hospitals and physicians and used by members of the public, it was habit-forming in sense that continued use of any laxative is habit-forming, and use thereof in place of other laxatives did not correct habit of taking such products;

1 Amended.
Represented, as aforesaid, that use of said preparation restored and maintained health by regulating the system and causing it to function properly and normally, facts being, while use thereof would produce laxative or cathartic effect, depending on amount of dosage, the system was not, because of such effect, restored to normal working order or to functioning properly, use thereof did not cure cause of constipation, but relieved such condition as symptom of the ailment, and there are many conditions of the body in which constipation, result of many factors including lack of exercise, diet, patients' habits, general condition, and resistance toward disease, and occupation, is not a factor or symptom which disturbs the normal working order of the system and for the treatment of which its said preparation has no therapeutic value;

Designated and described such preparation in its statements and representations as “Dr. W. B. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin” and “Syrup of Pepsin” without qualification, and caused to be placed on containers thereof, sold and distributed by it as above set forth, in large type, words “Syrup Pepsin” and, in smaller type, words “Combined With” and “Laxative Senna Compound,” facts being pepsin is without therapeutic value as laxative or relief from constipation, is administered alone in abnormal cases in which there is deficiency thereof in amount of such substance secreted in the stomach, is very rarely prescribed by physicians, as having, according to consensus of medical profession, very little, if any, therapeutic value, and is not ingredient of preparation upon which such value of said preparation depends, which, by reason of the small amount thereof, has very little, if any, value as method of administering such substance to the system;

With capacity and tendency—

1. To cause members of the purchasing public who are uninformed as to therapeutic value of pepsin to have erroneous and mistaken belief that pepsin contained in said product, which is not a syrup of pepsin, pepsin syrup, essence of pepsin, or any other type of pepsin, due to the fact that physiological effects thereof are due to senna and cascara sagrada ingredients and not other, has therapeutic value in treatment of conditions for which it recommended use of its said preparation or as laxative or cathartic and constipation treatment;

2. To cause such members as are informed as to value and purpose of pepsin to have erroneous and mistaken belief that said substance is principal active ingredient therein and that it is a pepsin preparation designed, intended, and used for purposes for which product in which it is principal active ingredient would be used, and that use of said preparation is competent and effective method of administering pepsin to the system; and

3. To mislead and deceive members of purchasing public as to identity of very powerful and active senna and cascara sagrada ingredients in said preparation which, by reason of presence therein, cannot be taken in volume or at frequent intervals, and to conceal presence thereof; and

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that its said preparation was as represented and possessed properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish results indicated, and of thereby diverting trade unfairly to it
Amended Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter designated as respondent, is now, and has been, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint stating the charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is now, and at all material times hereinafter mentioned has been, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at Monticello, in said State. Up to about the year 1933, respondent was named and did business under the name of Pepsin Syrup Co., but on or about the year 1933, respondent's name was changed to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., and since said time it has done business in that name. It has been and is engaged in the manufacture and sale of a medicinal preparation, a laxative, liquid in form, called "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin."

Paragraph 2. Respondent's method of distribution of its medicinal preparation has been and is through the sale to wholesalers and retailers, pursuant to which sales, and as a part thereof, shipment has been and is made from respondent's place of business into and through the various States of the United States. From time to time it also sells and ships direct to the consuming public throughout the United States a so-called trial-sized bottle of its said product. Also in its advertising it invites the public to send for samples of its medicinal preparation, and in response to requests, ships a substantial quantity of its preparation from its place of business to such members of the public, resident in States other than the State of the origin of such shipments.
Complaint

PAR. 3. In the sale and distribution of its product, and to create consumer demand therefor, and to induce wholesalers and retailers to purchase the same for resale to the public, respondent advertises said preparation in newspapers, magazines, periodicals, and other mediums, and by radio broadcast.

PAR. 4. In the course of said advertising respondent has made and makes statements and representations of and concerning its said preparation in substance as follows:

1. That Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a doctor's prescription. This representation is and has been made in the following words:

   Syrup pepsin is not just another product on the market, it is the personal prescription of a practicing physician.
   It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drug store, anywhere.
   Be sure you take a doctor's prescription. There is a world-famous one for you at your druggists, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
   Why should you ever allow yourself to fall victim to the habit of taking ordinary machine-made laxatives? No doctor would think of prescribing that kind, and there is no reason why you should have to take anything except a doctor's prescription when one is ready for you always at your drug store. It's Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

2. That it is a liquid laxative and that physicians and hospitals prefer a liquid laxative. This representation is made in the following words:

   Syrup pepsin is the kind (of laxative) your own doctor would approve of—a liquid and that's the kind they use in hospitals.
   Doctors use liquid laxatives, hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. * * * The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
   Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch? The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it; many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives. * * * The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
   Do what the doctors do to relieve this condition (constipation). Doctors use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all. * * * The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
   The reason doctors prescribe liquid laxative is that only a liquid can be measured to suit your own particular need.
   It's a liquid so that you can take just what you need—not too much and not too little as might happen if you'd take an automatically decided amount of some other laxative.

3. That it is not a habit-forming laxative, but on the contrary will correct the laxative habit caused by taking other laxatives. This representation is made in the following words:

   To keep well you've got to have a well-regulated system, one that doesn't depend on medicines constantly to keep in good order. Keep away from these habit laxatives. Take syrup Pepsin instead.

   You can reduce the amount as your system gets back to work. Notice that I said "your system gets back to work." That's the best thing about Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it does not get you into the habit of taking medicine regularly, but instead it encourages normal bodily functions.

   Of course everyone needs a good laxative occasionally, but you must be very careful to use the kind that won't trick you into becoming a slave of medicine. Take a doctor's advice, take a liquid laxative, take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

   Syrup Pepsin not only does not get you into the medicine taking habit, but often has rescued people from that very dangerous habit.

   Don't be discouraged if you have the medicine taking habit, let Syrup Pepsin help you become independent again.

   Syrup Pepsin, the mild, natural, liquid laxative has freed many people of the medicine habit.

   Syrup Pepsin has helped many and many a person to get over the medicine taking habit.

   No matter how much of a habit you have gotten into, Syrup Pepsin will help you to become independent of that medicine taking habit.

   Get a bottle at your druggist's and know you are safe from the risk of forming a dangerous habit.

   and other similar statements and representations.

4. That it restores and maintains health by regulating and putting and maintaining the system in normal working condition. This representation is made in the following words:

   Its chief function is to train your system to get back to work for itself.

   One that will get you well, and safely and surely.

   You need Syrup Pepsin to keep your system in good normal working order, so that it will be easier for you to conquer a cold.

   Any mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage, Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right. * * * A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. * * * The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

   If he's got a cold, it's mighty important that he get some Syrup Pepsin right away. If all mothers realized that, there'd be fewer cases of bad colds, it's the clean system that's the healthy one.

   When you feel doopy and sluggish after too much heavy food, it's well to remember that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will restore normal working order in your system very quickly, easily, gently.

   The usually rich food (of the holidays) and the general festivity, is liable to put even the most regular system just a little out of kilter. * * * And all it takes to put you right with the world again is just a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin.
It brings relief so naturally no one should ever need to suffer the handicap of a badly regulated system.

A danger sign you should never neglect is a condition of sluggishness in your system. To protect your good health, keep your system regular. * * *

Syrup Pepsin helps you get well, it encourages your system to get back to normal working order.

Syrup Pepsin will clear away that dull, listless feeling. There’s no need to go around feeling only half fit when you can so easily regain energy and good spirits.

Par. 5. The representations concerning the said preparation, as set out in preceding paragraph 4 hereof, are false and misleading in the following particulars: As to subparagraph 1, the assertion and representation that respondent’s preparation is a doctor’s prescription is a doctor’s prescription is misleading and deceptive in that, in fact and in general public understanding, a doctor’s prescription is his treatment for a diagnosed condition. Constipation is not an ailment in itself but is a symptom of an ailment, and may arise from any one or more of a number of ailments. There are a number of classes of laxatives and purgatives, some of which are suitable in certain cases and would be unsuitable in other cases. In some cases some classes would be positively harmful. A physician doesn’t prescribe a laxative without regard to the physical condition of the patient, his age, the ailment which gave rise to the constipation, and other considerations. Dr. W. B. Caldwell did not prescribe or administer Syrup Pepsin in all cases of constipation, under all conditions, or to patients of all ages.

In regard to subparagraph 2, the assertion and representation that doctors and hospitals prefer the liquid laxative, because of its liquidity, is false. A laxative is not chosen by a physician or hospital because it is liquid, or rejected because it is not liquid, but the considerations set out in the preceding subparagraph of this paragraph are the determining factors. The assertion and representation that persons come home from the hospital in normal working order is false in fact, and whether or not such is the case depends upon what condition or ailment gave rise to the constipation, and whether that condition or ailment was successfully treated at the hospital. Syrup Pepsin is not the liquid laxative generally used by physicians, hospitals, or members of the public.

As to subparagraph 3, the assertion and representation that respondent’s said preparation will not cause the patient to form the laxative habit but will on the contrary relieve such habit, if already formed from taking other laxatives, is untrue in fact. All laxatives are habit-forming, including the ingredients contained in respondent’s medicine, in that the use of a laxative tends to cause the intestines to depend upon such stimulants and to continue to bring about action of the bowels an increasing dose is required. The change from another laxative to respondent's preparation would not and does not work a change in the dependence of the bowels upon the laxative, but will and can only continue the tendency, the bowels depending on the new laxative instead of the old.

As to subparagraph 4, it is not the function or effect of respondent's product or of any laxative to bring about a return to normal conditions or restore normal working order in the bowels or system, or relieve from the effects of overeating, or in any manner regulate the bowels or system. The function and effect of a laxative is only to give temporary relief while treatment to correct the condition that brought about the constipation is proceeding.

Par. 6. Said product is referred to in said advertising literature and on the labels of its containers and otherwise as Dr. W. B. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin. The respondent directly and through implication represents by the use of the designation and name, Dr. W. B. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin, that said product contains pepsin in an active state as an enzyme, and that the product is either a composition of pepsin, of syrup of pepsin, pepsin syrup, or essence of pepsin, and that the product is composed of a major element of pepsin so as to have the effect of a pepsin compound.

In truth and in fact said product is composed of only 4 grains of pepsin which is merely a dusting of pepsin. The product is not and does not act as an enzyme. It is not a syrup of pepsin, pepsin syrup, essence of pepsin, or any other type of pepsin.

The product does not contain a sufficient amount of pepsin to justify the trade name "Syrup of Pepsin," and the reference to the product under this name is misleading as to the composition of the preparation.

Par. 7. There are in the United States other persons, partnerships, and corporations who manufacture and sell and ship to the wholesale and retail drug trade and to members of the public, in interstate commerce, laxative preparations, who correctly advertise and represent and who have correctly advertised and represented their preparations and their functions and effects. With these other persons, partnerships, and corporations, respondent has been and is in direct and substantial competition. Respondent's misrepresentations of and concerning its product, as hereinabove set forth, has had and has the capacity and tendency to lead the public to erroneously believe that respondent's preparation is more than a mere laxative, that it is a regulator of the bowels and system, that it is a doctor's prescription for the cure of constipation from whatever cause it may arise, and that it has not the effect of forming the so-called laxative habit as have other competing preparations; that it contains pepsin as an enzyme and that the product is either a composition of pepsin, syrup of pepsin, pepsin syrup, or essence of pepsin, and further, that the product is composed of a major element of pepsin so as to have the effect of a pepsin compound. Such misrepresentations and such erroneous belief has the capacity and tendency to cause the public to prefer respondent's product, and thus to divert business from respondent's said competitors to respondent, to the substantial injury of said competitors.

PAR. 8. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 1st day of May 1937, issued and thereafter served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said amended complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said amended complaint were introduced by W. L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Rogers, Ramsey and Hoge, attorneys for respondent, before John L. Hornor and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the amended complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, and having its office and principal place of business at Monticello, in the State of Illinois. Respondent, prior to the year 1933, conducted its business under the name of Pepsin Syrup Co. On or about the year 1933 respondent's name was changed to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and has been during all the times mentioned herein engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a laxative medicinal preparation, liquid in form, designated as "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," "Syrup Pepsin," and "Syrup of Pepsin." Respondent sells said preparation to wholesale and retail dealers situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia for resale to the purchasing public, and causes the said preparation when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. Respondent also distributes to members of the public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia a sample bottle of its said preparation. Respondent in its advertising, disseminated as hereinafter described, invites members of the public to send for samples of its preparation and in response to such requests distributes a substantial quantity of its preparation from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to said members of the public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing medicinal and other preparations designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation.

Paragraph 4. The ingredients contained in respondent's said preparation are pepsin, syrup, senna, cascara sagrada, and peppermint oil aromatics. The respondent uses the syrup and pepsin in the preparation as a vehicle for the senna and cascara sagrada, which are the active ingredients contained in the preparation. Pepsin has no therapeutic value as a laxative. Senna and cascara sagrada, when used singly or in combination in formulas such as respondent's preparation, are laxatives and such drugs have been in common use as laxatives for many years.

Respondent's preparation is sold and distributed by the respondent in bottles of different sizes. Each bottle of such preparation is placed in a carton wrapper and pamphlets containing statements and representations relative to the preparation are wrapped around the bottle and also placed in the carton. On the front of each carton is printed and on one side of each bottle there is also pasted a label with a picture depicting a bearded man. Above such picture in large letters are printed the words, "Dr. W. B. Caldwell's" and underneath such words, also in large letters, there are the words "Syrup Pepsin," and in smaller letters the words "Combined With," and then in larger letters the words "Laxative Senna Compound." In smaller letters on such label are also the words "Alcohol 4½ Percent," and in smaller letters the words "Syrup Pepsin, Composed of Pepsin; 4 gr. Syrup: 1 oz. Senna Compound Composed of Senna, Cascara Sagrada, Peppermint Oil Aromatics, No Mercurials or Narcotics." There are also printed on such labels the words "A Laxative For Constipation." There are also printed on the side of such packages the words "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Combined With Laxative Senna Compound."

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation, respondent has caused advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to said preparation, the therapeutic properties thereof, and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The respondent has caused such advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and other publications having a circulation throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Colombia, and has caused such advertisements to be published and circulated by other means among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the representations contained in said advertisements, so used and disseminated, are the following:

The answer to all your worries over constipation. * * * The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
If he's got a cold, it's mighty important that he get some Syrup Pepsin right away. If all mothers realized that, there'd be fewer cases of bad colds, it's the clean system that's the healthy one.

When you feel doopy and sluggish after too much heavy food, it's well to remember that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will restore normal working order in your system very quickly, easily, gently.

The usually rich food (of the holidays) and the general festivity, is liable to put even the most regular system just a little out of kilter. And all it takes to put you right with the world again is just a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin.

It brings relief so naturally no one should ever need to suffer the handicap of a badly regulated system.

A danger sign you should never neglect is a condition of sluggishness in your system. To protect your good health, keep your system regular. Syrup Pepsin helps you get well, it encourages your system to get back to normal working order.

Syrup Pepsin will clear away that dull, listless feeling. There's no need to go around feeling only half fit when you can so easily regain energy and good spirits.

PAR. 6. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body and the cause of such ailments and conditions, respondent has represented directly and by implication, among other things, that such preparation is a liquid laxative and that physicians and hospitals prefer a liquid laxative; that patients returning from hospitals do so with their systems functioning properly and normally for the reason that liquid laxatives are used in hospitals; that the liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin; that such preparation is not a habit-forming laxative but on the contrary will correct the laxative habit caused by the use of other laxatives; and that the use of such preparation restores and maintains health by regulating the system and causing the system to function properly and normally.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid representations by the respondent, used and disseminated in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, deceptive, and untrue, and constitute false advertisements.

The respondent represents to the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by means of the advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, that such preparation is a competent and effective laxative and cathartic and is a competent and effective treatment for constipation. Constipation is not a disease or an ailment in itself but is the symptom of a disease or ailment. There are numerous drugs having laxative and cathartic properties which are prescribed by medical doctors in the treatment of constipation. The particular drug or drugs which are prescribed by medical doctors in the course of such treatment depend upon the age and condition of the patient and the reaction of the patient to the drug or drugs used. The respondent's preparation is merely a formula containing the ingredients, senna and cascara sagrada, which have laxative properties.

Par. 8. In truth and in fact physicians and hospitals do not prefer liquid laxatives because of their liquidity. The type of laxative used or prescribed by hospitals and physicians depends solely on their diagnosis of the patient. A liquid laxative is not used or prescribed by hospitals and physicians unless a diagnosis of the patient indicates a liquid laxative should be used.

Par. 9. In truth and in fact patients do not always return from confinement in hospitals with their systems functioning properly and normally for the reason that a liquid laxative was used by the patient in the hospital. Many patients suffering from constipation return from confinement in hospitals with their systems continuing to function improperly and abnormally. The successful treatment of patients suffering from constipation in hospitals is not dependent upon the use of a liquid laxative solely because of its liquidity.

In truth and in fact respondent's said preparation is not the liquid laxative generally used or prescribed by hospitals and physicians and used by members of the public.

Par. 10. The aforesaid statement and representation by the respondent that the use of such preparation is not habit-forming but on the contrary will correct the laxative habit caused by the use of other laxatives, is false and misleading. In truth and in fact the use of such preparation is habit-forming in the sense that the continued use of any laxative is habit-forming. The use of respondent's preparation in place of the use of other laxatives does not correct the habit of taking laxatives.

Par. 11. The aforesaid statement and representation by the respondent that the use of such preparation will restore and maintain health by regulating and maintaining the human system and causing the system to function properly and normally is false and misleading. The use of such preparation will produce a laxative or cathartic effect depending on the amount of the dosage, but the human system is not, because of such laxative or cathartic effect, restored to normal working order or to functioning properly. The use of such preparation does not cure the cause of the constipation but it relieves the symptom of the ailment which is the constipation. Constipation is the result of many factors, including lack of exercise, diet, the habits of the patient, his general condition, and resistance toward disease, and his occupation. There are many conditions of the human body, in which constipation is not a factor or a symptom, which disturb the normal working order of the system, and for the treatment of which respondent's preparation has no therapeutic value.

Par. 12. Respondent in the aforesaid statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, designates and describes such preparation as "Dr. W. B. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin" and "Syrup Pepsin," without qualification. Respondent also causes to be placed on the containers of such preparation, sold and distributed as aforesaid, labels bearing the legend "Syrup Pepsin," in large type, and in smaller type the words "Combined with Laxative Senna Compound."

The designation by the respondent of such preparation as "Syrup of Pepsin" and "Syrup Pepsin" is deceptive and misleading. Pepsin has no therapeutic value as a laxative or as a relief from constipation. Pepsin is secreted normally in the stomach for the digestion of proteins and is commonly used as a vehicle in medicinal preparations for other drugs. The use by the respondent of the pepsin and syrup in said preparation is as a purported vehicle for the senna and cascara sagrada contained in said preparation. In abnormal cases in which there is a deficiency in the amount of pepsin secreted in the stomach, a treatment for such condition is to administer pepsin alone and not in a preparation with other drugs, especially with laxatives, as in respondent's preparation. Physicians very rarely prescribe pepsin, however, for it is the consensus of the medical profession that pepsin has very little, if any, therapeutic value.

Respondent sells and distributes its preparation as a laxative and a cathartic and for the treatment of constipation. Pepsin is not one of the ingredients of the preparation upon which the therapeutic value of the preparation depends. Neither the Pharmacopoeia nor the National Formulary recognizes the title "Syrup of Pepsin" or the title "Syrup Pepsin" or the title "Syrup of Pepsin Combined with Laxative Senna Compound" as descriptive of any preparation. Such preparation is not a syrup of pepsin, pepsin syrup, essence of pepsin, or any other type of pepsin for the reason that the physiological effects of the preparation are not due to its content of pepsin but to the ingredients senna and cascara sagrada.

The use by the respondent of the words "Syrup Pepsin" and "Syrup of Pepsin" to describe and designate such preparation in which the active ingredients are senna and cascara sagrada is a misleading and deceptive designation and description of such preparation and has the capacity and tendency to cause members of the purchasing public who are uninformed as to the therapeutic value of pepsin to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the pepsin contained in such preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of the conditions for which respondent recommends the use of such preparation, to wit: as a laxative or cathartic and for the treatment of constipation.

The use by the respondent of the aforesaid terms to describe and designate such preparation has the capacity and tendency to cause members of the purchasing public who are informed as to the value and purpose of the use of pepsin to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that pepsin is the principal active ingredient in such preparation—that such preparation is a pepsin preparation—that such preparation is designed, intended, and used for the purposes for which a preparation in which pepsin is the principal active ingredient would be used, and that the use of such preparation is a competent and effective method of administering pepsin to the human system. In truth and in fact the use of such preparation has very little, if any, value as a method of administering pepsin to the human system. The maximum dosage of such preparation recommended by the respondent is two tablespoonfuls. The average dose of pepsin recommended by the Pharmacopoeia of the United States is 8 grains. Respondent's preparation contains from 2\(\frac{1}{4}\) to 4 grains of pepsin per ounce of fluid. The maximum amount of pepsin contained in the maximum dosage of such preparation is 4 grains of pepsin, which is one-half of the pepsin contained in the average dosage of pepsin recommended by the United States Pharmacopoeia. Such preparation cannot be taken in volume or at frequent intervals because of the cathartic properties, senna and cascara sagrada, contained in such preparation.

Senna and cascara sagrada are very powerful drugs and the use of respondent's said preparation in a sufficient dosage will produce a cathartic effect. The use of the aforesaid terms to describe a preparation in which the pepsin serves as a purported vehicle for the senna and cascara sagrada is misleading and deceptive as to the composition of such preparation and the use of such term or terms, in the manner aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the identity of the active ingredients contained in such preparation and to conceal the presence of the powerful drugs contained in such preparation, to wit: senna and cascara sagrada.

Par. 13. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent's said preparation is as represented and possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise their respective preparations and the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before John L.
Horner and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said amended complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by W. L. Taggart, counsel for the Commission, and by Edward S. Rogers of Rogers, Ramsey & Hoge, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the pro-

It is ordered, That the respondent, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any other corporate device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of a liquid laxative medicinal preparation now designated as "Syrup Pepsin," "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," and "Syrup of Pepsin," or any other preparation containing substantially similar ingredients or possessing similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under those names or any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from:
1. Representing that doctors and hospitals prefer liquid laxatives unless such representation is qualified by an equally conspicuous statement that any such preference is limited to those cases where diagnosis of the disorder and the patient's reaction to various types of laxatives indicate that the use of a liquid laxative is preferable.

2. Representing that the use of liquid laxative causes systems to function properly and normally unless such representation is qualified by an equally conspicuous statement that any such result obtained will be limited to those cases where the individual user's reaction to laxatives indicates that the use of a liquid laxative is preferable.

3. Representing that the use of said preparation restores or maintains health or regulates the system or causes the system to function properly and normally other than to the extent which such results may be accomplished by a laxative or cathartic temporarily relieving constipation.

4. Representing through the use of the word "pepsin" alone or in association with any other word or words in the designation or description of such preparation or in any other manner or through any other means or device, that said preparation owes its laxative and cathartic properties to its pepsin content.

5. Using the word "pepsin" alone or in association with any other word or words to designate, describe, or refer to any preparation which does not contain a sufficient quantity of pepsin, as an active ingredient, to possess substantial therapeutic value by reason of such pepsin content.

6. Using any term or name to describe, designate, or refer to such preparation containing senna and cascara sagrada as its active ingredients, which name or term conceals or deceptively minimizes the presence of such ingredients.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

W. J. BUSH & COMPANY, INC.

Complaint

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of two lines of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations—

(a) Affixed tags on the straw-covered bottles containing its "Mitcham Lavender," on which was printed trade name "Potter & Moore's Mitcham Lavender, London," and, in less conspicuous type, words "Printed in England," and attached to straw at bottom of bottle container thereof metal tag bearing label "Made in England," and set forth words, on stopper of bottle, "Potter & Moore, England," and made similar representations with reference to place of manufacture in connection with sale of its "Potter & Moore's Lavender Smelling Salts"; and

(b) Set forth words, on paper labels on outside cardboard containers of its "Grenoville" perfume, "Extrait Oellet Fane, Petit Model," followed by words "Grenoville, Paris, Made in France," and caused words "Oellet Fane, Grenoville, Paris" to appear on side of smaller carton enclosed within large cardboard container, on which said matter first above referred to was set forth, and displayed same words on label affixed to glass container within said last-mentioned carton, and impressed on the glass at the bottom of the bottle the words "Grenoville, Made in France";

Notwithstanding fact said domestic preparations or products were respectively neither made by London firm of Potter & Moore, or Paris firm of Grenoville, long possessed of enviable reputations for excellence of their respective products, and were not made in England or France and imported into the United States, for which more costly products particularly, as for imported goods, wares, and merchandise, there is preference on part of substantial portion of members of buying public;

With effect of misleading customers and prospective customers into erroneous belief that its said perfumes and products, as aforesaid, were made by Potter & Moore of London and Grenoville of Paris, and with result that trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes and similar compounds there made, or who make, in this country, perfumes and similar products for sale to buying public and truthfully represent and advertise place of manufacture and quality thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes;” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. J. Bush & Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, W. J. Bush & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at Linden, in the State of New Jersey.

Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of two certain lines of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, one being known as the Grenoville line of perfumes, and the other as the Potter & Moore line of Mitcham Lavender perfumes or toilet waters.

Paragraph 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in New Jersey to purchasers located in States other than the State of New Jersey, and respondent now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in said products manufactured, distributed, and sold by it between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, certain of respondent’s perfume products so sold bear labels, tags, and markings purporting to describe and refer to the place of origin or manufacture of said products in the following manner:

On the straw-covered bottle containing Mitcham Lavender respondent has affixed tags on which are printed the trade name “Potter & Moore’s Mitcham Lavender, London” and in less conspicuous type, the words “Printed in England.” Respondent also causes to be attached to the straw at the bottom of said bottle container a metal tag bearing the legend “Made in England,” and on the stopper of said bottle is printed the words “Potter & Moore, England.” Similar representations with reference to the origin of respondent’s products are made by tags, markings, and labels by respondent in connection with the sale of Potter & Moore’s Lavender Smelling Salts.

On the paper label affixed by respondent to the outside cardboard container of Grenoville Perfume appears the legend “Extrait Oelliet Fane, Petit Model,” followed by the words “Grenoville, Paris, Made in France.” Enclosed in this cardboard container respondent places its perfume encased in a cylindrical carton. On the side of the carton respondent has caused the words “Oelliet Fane, Grenoville, Paris” to be printed. The same words also appear on a label affixed to the glass container within the cylindrical carton, and impressed in the glass at the bottom of the bottle are the words, “Grenoville, Made in France.”

The use of such statements as hereinabove set forth serve as representations that said products were, and are, manufactured or compounded in England and France, respectively, and imported into this country.

The use of the above representations on the cartons and containers of respondent’s products has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the products of respondent are manufactured or compounded in France and England and imported into the United States. In truth and in fact none of the above referred to products of respondent are manufactured or compounded in France or England, but are manufactured or compounded in the United States.

Par. 5. There is a preference on the part of certain of the buying public for goods, wares, and merchandise which are manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States; this is particularly true regarding perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations manufactured in France and such goods so manufactured and imported command from that said part of the purchasing public a higher price in the market of the United States than do domestic perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations of the same nature and description.

Par. 6. For many years the English firm of Potter & Moore of Tysson Street, Dalston, London, and the French firm of Grenoville, 42 Rue de Paradis, Paris, France, have enjoyed enviable reputations for the excellence of their products. Among the products of the aforesaid Potter & Moore is Potter & Moore’s Mitcham Lavender, and among the products of the aforesaid Grenoville is Grenoville’s Perfumes. The above representations made by respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that the products of respondent as described by the tags, labels, and markings affixed to said products are manufactured by Potter & Moore of London and Grenoville of Paris. In truth and in fact said products are not manufactured by Potter & Moore of London and by Grenoville of Paris, but are compounded by respondent corporation.

As a result of the use of the aforesaid labels, tags, and markings, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes and similar products manufactured in foreign countries, or who manufacture or compound perfumes and similar products in this country for sale to the buying public and who truthfully represent and advertise the place of origin and quality of their products.

Par. 7. The acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 18th day of February 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, W. J. Bush & Company, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a stipulation of facts, signed and executed by the respondent through R. R. Webb, its treasurer, and W. T. Kelly, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts, its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, W. J. Bush & Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, which has its principal place of business located at New York, N. Y., and a factory located at Linden, N. J.

Until June 15, 1938, and for more than 1 year prior to that date, respondent has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of two lines of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, one being known as the Grenoville line of perfumes and the other as the Potter and Moore line of Mitcham Lavender perfumes or toilet waters.

PAR. 2. The respondent caused its products when sold to be transported from its factory in Linden, N. J., to purchasers located in States other than the State of New Jersey and respondent maintained a constant course of trade in commerce in its products manufactured and sold by it between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the conduct of its business the respondent has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the conduct of its business, as herein set out, certain of respondent's perfume products bear labels, tags, and markings purporting to describe and refer to the place of manufacture of said products in the following manner:

On the straw-covered bottle containing Mitcham Lavender, the respondent has affixed tags on which are printed the trade name "Potter & Moore's Mitcham Lavender, London," and in less conspicuous type the words "Printed in England." The respondent has also caused to be attached to the straw at the bottom of the bottle container a metal tag bearing the label "Made in England," and on the stopper of the bottle are printed the words "Potter & Moore, England." Similar representations with reference to the place of manufacture of respondent's products are made by tag markings and labels by respondent in connection with the sale of Potter & Moore's Lavender Smelling Salts.

On the paper label attached by respondent to the outside cardboard container of Grenoville perfume appears the label "Extrait Oelliet Fane, Petit Model," followed by the words "Grenoville, Paris, Made in France." Enclosed in this cardboard container respondent places its perfume encased in a carton on the side of which respondent has caused the words "Oelliet Fane, Grenoville, Paris" to be printed.
Findings

The same words also appear on a label affixed to the glass container within the carton and impressed in the glass at the bottom of the bottle are the words “Grenoville, Made in France.”

The use of such statements as herein set out serve as representations that respondent’s products were and are manufactured in England or France and imported to the United States.

The use of the above representations by the respondent has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the products of respondent are manufactured in France and England and are imported into the United States. In truth and in fact none of the respondent’s products are manufactured in France or England but are manufactured in the United States.

Par. 5. There is a preference on the part of certain members of the buying public for goods, wares, and merchandise which are manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States. This is particularly true regarding perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations manufactured in France and imported into the United States. Such goods so manufactured and imported command from the purchasing public a higher price on the markets in the United States than do those perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations of the same nature and description.

Par. 6. For many years the English firm, Potter & Moore of Tysson Street, Dalston, London, and the French firm of Grenoville, 42 Rue de Paradis, Paris, France, have enjoyed enviable reputations for the excellence of their products.

The representations herein set out and used by respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent’s perfumes, herein described, are manufactured by Potter & Moore of London and Grenoville of Paris. In truth and in fact the products of the respondent are not manufactured by Potter & Moore of London and Grenoville of Paris but are manufactured by the respondent in the United States.

As a result of the use by respondent of the representations herein set out, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes and similar compounds manufactured in foreign countries or who manufacture perfumes and similar products in this country for sale to the buying public and who truthfully represent and advertise the place of manufacture and the quality of their products.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. J. Bush & Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "Made in England," or any other word or words indicating English origin, on the labels, cartons, or containers of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations made or compounded in the United States.

2. Using the words or names "Potter & Moore's Mitcham Lavender of London," or "Potter & Moore, England," or any other word, words, or names which may indicate English origin on the labels, cartons, or containers of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations made or compounded in the United States without clearly and conspicuously stating in immediate connection or conjunction therewith that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

3. Using the words "Made in France" or any other word or words indicating French origin on the labels, cartons, or containers of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, made or compounded in the United States.

4. Using the words or names "Extrait Oelliet Fane" or "Grenoville, Paris," or any other word, words, or names which may indicate French origin on the labels, cartons, or containers of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations, made or compounded in the United States without clearly and conspicuously stating in immediate connection or conjunction therewith that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report, in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Docket 3412. Complaint, May 9, 1938—Decision, Mar. 8, 1939

Where three corporations and two individuals (1) engaged as jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers in selling tobacco and confectionery products to retailers in the Wilkes-Barre trading area, and in purchasing such products, which are made in many different States and some of which include certain widely known, nationally advertised articles in constant demand by consuming public and necessary largely or entirely to tobacco and confectionery retail business, from manufacturers located, for the most part, in States other than Pennsylvania, and (2) constituting a large and important part of jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers of such products in said large and important outlet and market therefor to manufacturers, producers, and distributors located therein, and to those located in other States, and particularly in the eastern half of the United States, and constituting (3) in said area, a group sufficiently influential in the trade as to be able to control and influence flow of trade and commerce within, to and from such area, and (4) naturally and normally in competition with each other in the conduct of their respective businesses, and in actual and potential competition with others engaged in purchase of such products from manufacturers in other States and in resale thereof in Pennsylvania and neighboring States; and four individuals who held responsible executive positions in such concerns or businesses and directed policies and practices thereof—

Entered into and carried out an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves to prevent competing dealers in such products in said area from obtaining the same directly from the manufacturers thereof, and, incident thereto and as a part thereof, to fix and establish uniform prices at which aforesaid concerns should sell their products, and prevent others from selling at lower prices, and thus suppress, hinder, and lessen competition in substantial Interstate commerce in sale and distribution of such products in said territory; and for the accomplishment of said purposes—

(a) Exacted and procured pledges and other promises and agreements from their said concerns and from manufacturers and producers of such products serving said area, to the effect that such dealers, manufacturers, and producers would support, adhere to, and enforce program above set forth;

(b) Used, in concert and agreement among themselves and with others, coercive and concerted action, boycott, threats thereof, and other united action against confectionery manufacturers, dealers, and others to induce and require them, and to attempt to induce and require them, to agree and conform to and support and enforce their program and refrain from selling such products to other dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers not parties thereto; and
(c) Engaged in other acts, cooperative and concerted action, and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing, and carrying out the program of their said agreement, combination, conspiracy, and undertaking, as above set forth;

With result that the capacity, tendency, and effect of such agreement, combination, confederation, etc., as above set forth, and said acts and practices in said trade area and other related or connected territory, were—

(1) To close and curtail sundry outlets within said State for direct and immediate sale by manufacturers located in other States of goods shipped by them into said State, and to monopolize in said concerns business of dealing in and distributing tobacco and confectionery products;

(2) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said tobacco and confectionery industry in such State, and deprive purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed or free and fair competition in said trade and industry, and otherwise operate as a restraint upon and detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition therein; and

(3) To obstruct the natural flow of commerce in the channels of interstate trade and oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which were or had been engaged in selling tobacco and confectionery products, and to prejudice and injure the public and manufacturers, producers, dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers and others who did not conform to their said program:

Held, That such acts and practices in entering into and carrying out said agreement, understanding, combination, and conspiracy, and in doing the acts and things done thereunder, and in furtherance thereof as above set-out, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Andrew Hourigan, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for respondents.

Complaint

Paragraph 1. Five of the respondents named in the caption hereof are corporations or individuals engaged as jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers in selling tobacco and confectionery products to retail dealers in that portion of the State of Pennsylvania known as the Wilkes-Barre trading area. These respondents are all located in the city of Wilkes-Barre, in the State of Pennsylvania and are the following: Respondent Star Tobacco Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business located at 39 South Pennsylvania Avenue in said city; respondent Sperling Tobacco Co. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its office and principal place of business located at 47 South Pennsylvania Avenue in said city; respondent Key Stores, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business located at 80 East Northampton Street in said city; respondent Frank Klein, is an individual trading under the firm name and style of Klein Candy Co., with his principal place of business located at 231 East Market Street in said city; respondent Meyer H. Abelson, is an individual trading under the firm name and style of Wilkes-Barre Cigar & Tobacco Co., with his principal place of business located at 192 East Northampton Street in said city.

The remaining four respondents named in the caption hereof are individuals who are employed by and hold responsible offices with the trade respondents named herein, and in such capacities direct the policies of the above-named trade respondents, and engage in organization and trade association activities concerning the tobacco and confectionery industry; said individual respondents are: Edward A. Stroud, Sr., president and treasurer of respondent Star Tobacco Co., and located at 39 South Pennsylvania Avenue, in said city; William Smulyan, president of respondent Sperling Tobacco Co., and located at 47 South Pennsylvania Avenue in said city; Haskell Ginsburgh, vice president of respondent Key Stores, Inc., and located at 80 East Northampton Street in said city; and respondent Robert Jaffee, employee of respondent Meyer H. Abelson, and located at 192 East Northampton Street in said city.

Par. 2. The said tobacco and confectionery products industry includes among its products certain widely known nationally advertised articles for which the consuming public maintains a consistent demand. These nationally advertised tobacco and confectionery products are manufactured in many different States of the United States and the conduct of the aforesaid business requires the dealing in all or most of such products. The trade respondents hereinbefore named purchase the aforesaid tobacco and confectionery products, in which they deal, directly and immediately from manufacturers thereof located for the most part in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, and the manufacturers ship said products, when so purchased, from their respective places of business in such other States to said trade respondents in the State of Pennsylvania.

In the course and conduct of their aforesaid respective businesses, said trade respondents, but for the matters and things hereinafter set out, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, and otherwise are in such competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations also engaged in the purchase of tobacco and confectionery products from aforesaid manufacturers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, and the resale thereof in the State of Pennsylvania and neighboring States.

The said trade respondents constitute a large and important part of the jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers in tobacco and confectionery products in the Wilkes-Barre trade area; and such trade respondents constitute a group so influential in the trade as to be able to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in such products within, to and from said trade area. The volume of consumption of tobacco and confectionery products in said Wilkes-Barre trade area, and the volume of trade and commerce dealt in by said trade respondents in such products in, to and from said area constitute a substantial part of the trade and commerce of the United States in the tobacco and confectionery products industry. Said trade area is a large and important outlet and market for the sale of tobacco and confectionery products by manufacturers, producers, and distributors within said trade area and also by those in various other States, particularly those of the eastern half of the United States.

PAR. 3. In August 1937, or thereabouts, respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof, entered into, have since carried out, and are still carrying out an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves, to prevent said competing dealers in tobacco and confectionary products, mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, from obtaining tobacco and confectionery products directly from aforesaid manufacturers thereof; to fix and establish uniform prices at which said trade respondents should sell said products and to prevent others from selling at less prices and by and through the aforesaid means to suppress, hinder, and lessen competition in substantial interstate commerce in the sale and distribution of said products in the aforesaid territory served by respondents. To carry out the aforesaid purposes the respondents have done, among others, the following acts and things:
(a) Exacted and procured pledges and other promises and agreements from each such trade respondent and from manufacturers and producers of tobacco and confectionery products to the effect that such dealers, manufacturers, and producers would support, adhere to, and enforce the foregoing program of respondents set forth in paragraph 3 hereof.

(b) Used in concert and agreement among themselves and with others, coercive and concerted action, boycott, threats of boycott, and other united action against confectionery manufacturers, dealers, and others to induce and require them, and to attempt so to induce and require them, to agree and conform to and to support and enforce the said program of respondents, and to refrain from selling said products to other dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers who were not parties to such program of respondents.

(c) Used and engaged in other acts, cooperative, and concerted action, and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing, and carrying out the foregoing program and agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking hereinabove set forth.

Par. 4. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking, and the said acts and practices of respondents set forth in paragraph 3 hereof are and have been in aforesaid Wilkes-Barre trade area and other related or connected territory, to close and curtail sundry outlets within the State of Pennsylvania for the direct and immediate sale by manufacturers located in other States of goods shipped by such manufacturers into the State of Pennsylvania; to monopolize, in said trade respondents, the business of dealing in and distributing tobacco and confectionery products; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said tobacco and confectionery industry in the State of Pennsylvania, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry; to obstruct the natural flow of commerce in the channels of interstate trade; to oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which were or had been engaged in selling and distributing tobacco and confectionery products; and to prejudice and injure the public and manufacturers, producers, dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers and others who did not conform to respondents' program.
Par. 5. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of competitors of respondent as herein alleged public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale of tobacco and confectionery products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained interstate commerce in tobacco and confectionery products, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 9, 1938, issued, and on May 10, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Star Tobacco Co., Sperling Tobacco Co., Key Stores, Inc., Frank Klein, an individual trading under the firm name and style of Klein Candy Co., Meyer H. Abelson, an individual trading under the firm name and style of Wilkes-Barre Cigar & Tobacco Co., Edward A. Stroud, Sr., William Smulyn, Haskell Ginsburgh, and Robert Jaffe, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission by order herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Star Tobacco Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business at 39 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Respondent, Sperling Tobacco Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its office and principal place of business at 47 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The five above-named respondents are all engaged as jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers in selling tobacco and confectionery products to retail dealers in that portion of the State of Pennsylvania known as the Wilkes-Barre trading area. These five respondents will hereinafter be referred to as the trade respondents.

Respondent, Edward A. Stroud, Sr., president and treasurer of respondent Star Tobacco Co., is located at 39 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Respondent, William Smulyan, president of respondent Sperling Tobacco Co., is located at 47 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Respondent, Robert Jaffee, employee of respondent Meyer H. Abelson, is located at 192 East Northampton Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The four respondents last above named are individuals employed by, and holding responsible executive positions with, the five trade respondents, and in such capacities these individuals direct the policies and practices of the trade respondents and represent such trade respondents in organization and trade association activities concerning the tobacco and confectionery industry.

Par. 2. Tobacco and confectionery products are manufactured in many different States of the United States. Some of such products include certain widely known, nationally advertised articles for which the consuming public maintains a constant demand. The business of selling tobacco and confectionery products to retail dealers requires the dealing in all or most of such nationally advertised articles.

The above-named trade respondents purchase the tobacco and confectionery products in which they deal, directly from manufacturers located, for the most part, in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, and such products, when so purchased, are shipped from the place of manufacture in other States, to said trade respondents in the State of Pennsylvania.

The trade respondents herein, in the conduct of their respective businesses, but for the matters and things hereinafter set-out, would be naturally and normally in competition with each other, and are in actual and potential competition with other corporations, partnerships, and individuals who are also engaged in the purchase of tobacco and confectionery products from manufacturers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, and the resale of such products in the State of Pennsylvania and neighboring States.

The Wilkes-Barre trade is a large and important outlet and market for the sale of tobacco and confectionery products by manufacturers, producers, and distributors located within the trade area, and also by those located in other States, particularly those of the eastern half of the United States.

Par. 3. A part of such agreement was the fixing and establishing of uniform prices at which trade respondents in the Wilkes-Barre trade area should sell such products, and the prevention of other dealers from selling at less prices, and through this means to suppress, hinder, and lessen competition in substantial interstate commerce in the sale and distribution of such products in this territory. For the accomplishment of these purposes respondents have done the following acts:

Respondents exacted and procured pledges and other promises and agreements from trade respondents in the Wilkes-Barre trade area, and from manufacturers and producers of tobacco and confectionery products serving such area, to the effect that such dealers, manufac-

Respondents used in concert and agreement among themselves and with others, coercive and concerted action, boycott, threats of boycott, and other united action against confectionery manufacturers, dealers, and others to induce and require them, and to attempt to induce and require them to agree and conform to, and to support and enforce the program of respondents, and to refrain from selling such products to other dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers who were not parties to such program of respondents.

Respondents engaged in other acts, cooperative, and concerted action, and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing, and carrying out the program of the agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking above set forth.

Par. 4. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking, and the said acts and practices of respondents above set forth are and have been in aforesaid Wilkes-Barre trade area and other related or connected territory, to close and curtail sundry outlets within the State of Pennsylvania for the direct and immediate sale by manufacturers located in other States of goods shipped by such manufacturers into the State of Pennsylvania; to monopolize, in said trade respondents, the business of dealing in and distributing tobacco and confectionery products; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said tobacco and confectionery industry in the State of Pennsylvania, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry; to obstruct the natural flow of commerce in the channels of interstate trade; to oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which were or had been engaged in selling and distributing tobacco and confectionery products; and to prejudice and injure the public and manufacturers, producers, dealers, jobbers, distributors, and wholesalers and others who did not conform to respondent's program.

Docket 3590. Complaint, Sept. 15, 1938—Decision, Mar. 8, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of hosiery, watches, and other articles of merchandise; in soliciting the sale of and selling his said merchandise—

Distributed to public certain literature and instructions including push cards, order blanks, and circulars explaining plan of selling his said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles as premiums or prizes to operators of said push cards for use in distribution of his said products to the purchasing public, wholly by lot or chance, under a plan and in accordance with said card's explanatory legends by which amount paid was dependent upon number pushed by chance, as was customer's success or failure in securing article being thus disposed of or nothing other than chance, through selecting from list of feminine names displayed on card name, concealed number of which entitled selector to such article, or hosiery, as was maker of last sale; and

Supplied thereby and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his said merchandise in accordance with aforesaid or similar sales plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance, or sale of chance to win by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and in violation of criminal laws, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said methods in sale and distribution of his merchandise, and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to merchandise offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to him from his said competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, that such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Cyril J. Conrad, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Cyril J. Conrad, is an individual with his principal office and place of business located at 2301 Sixth Avenue, Altoona, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, watches, and other articles of merchandise to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused his products when sold to be transported from his afore­said place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location.

There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Co­lumbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with cor­porations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling his merchandise in said commerce has adopted and pursued the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public certain literature and instruc­tions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles of merchandise as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 81 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the name of the feminine name selected. Said push card has 81 small partially perforated disks marked "push" and immediately beneath each of said disks is printed one of the feminine names printed al­phabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each of said disks is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:
Sales of respondent’s merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said merchandise prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. Persons who are not successful in selecting a disk containing one of the said numbers or the last number on said card receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a disk from said card. The said hosiery is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent distributes and has distributed various push cards for use in the sale of his said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme but all of said push cards are similar to the card hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent’s merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and cor-corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other methods that are contrary to public policy and in violation of the criminal laws and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 15, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Cyril J. Conrad, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Cyril J. Conrad, is an individual with his principal office and place of business located at 2301 Sixth Avenue, Altoona, Pa. Respondent causes and has caused his products when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location.

There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling his merchandise in said commerce has adopted and pursued the following methods and practices:

Respondent distributes to the public certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it and other articles of merchandise as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 81 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the name of the feminine name selected. Said push card has 81 small partially perforated disks marked "push" and immediately beneath each of said disks is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each of said disks is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed.
or separated from the card. The push card bears printed legends or instructions as follows:

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said merchandise prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends. Persons who are not successful in selecting a disk containing one of the said numbers or the last number on said card receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a disk from said card. The said hosiery is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent distributes and has distributed various push cards for use in the sale of his said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme but all of said push cards are similar to the card hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent as above found are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other methods that are contrary to public policy and in violation of the criminal laws and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Cyril J. Conrad, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of hosiery, watches, or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

IN THE MATTER OF

W. M. JACOBSON DOING BUSINESS AS WONDER WOOD-TEX COMPANY

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of wood pulp articles to retail dealers and operators of gift shops in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar articles in commerce and in said District, and including many who do not misrepresent their respective products, sales policies, or methods of doing business—

(a) Represented, in statements which he caused to be disseminated in commerce among the various States and in said District, that his father was a wealthy retired citizen now engaged, as a hobby, in manufacture of said wood pulp articles sold and distributed by him, and that he was permitted by his father, and as latter's sole sales representative, to sell such articles with and on the understanding that he would not make any misrepresentations relative thereto and would not overcharge purchasers thereof, and invited prospective purchasers to visit his father's large Long Island estate, and gift show conducted by said individual in the Palmer House in Chicago, with all expenses paid by such individual;

Facts being said individual's father had been dead for many years prior to times mentioned, neither he nor his father ever made said articles, and his father did not have Long Island estate, nor did individual in question conduct gift shop, as aforesaid, at the Palmer House or elsewhere, and said statements and representations disseminated as above set forth were false, misleading, and untrue;

(b) Represented that the prices for which purchasers from him could resell the articles which they thus bought were 50 to 100 percent more than the prices they paid therefor, and that such articles were similar to samples displayed to prospective purchasers, and that said individual had been referred to such prospects by satisfied customers of said individual;

Facts being purchasers could not thus resell such articles, but found it necessary to resell same at the prices paid therefor, articles shipped to purchasers were inferior to samples displayed prior to shipment, and said individual had not been referred to prospective purchasers by satisfied customers as above set forth; and

(c) Represented that he exchanged articles purchased from him which were not sold readily for other articles which would thus sell, and that purchasers received from him exclusive territory for sale and distribution of his said articles, and that payment therefor could be made by deferred purchase plan whereby time of payment for articles not readily salable would be extended to conform to retail sales thereof, and that promissory notes signed by purchasers were merely evidence of the debt and in no case would be used by him as collateral for a loan or sold to third party;
Facts being purchasers making such exchanges received back articles inferior in quality and quantity to those exchanged, did not receive exclusive territory for resale and distribution of his said articles, and he did not extend them time for payment of accounts as above set forth, and promissory notes signed by purchasers were resold to finance companies which immediately notified maker of note that same must be paid in full on due date; With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in various States and in said District into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of his said wood-pulp articles because of such belief, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors in commerce as aforesaid, who truthfully advertise their respective products, sales policies, and methods of doing business, to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. M. Jacobson, an individual, trading and doing business as Wonder Wood-Tex Co., and hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, W. M. Jacobson, an individual, is the sole owner and operator of Wonder Wood-Tex Co., with his business address at 308 East Fifty-first Street, Chicago, Ill.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been, since about the year 1933, engaged in the business of selling wood-pulp articles to retail dealers and operators of gift shops.

Par. 3. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes, and has caused, said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped to purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade in commerce in the aforesumined articles, sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent is, and has been, in substantial competition with other persons, and with corporations, firms, and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of wood-pulp articles, similar to those sold and distributed by the respondent, among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors are many who did not in any manner engage in the practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent has made, and is still making, certain representations in connection with the sale of the aforementioned articles in said commerce. Among said representations are, and have been, the following:

1. That the father of respondent is a wealthy, retired citizen who is now engaged, as a hobby, in the manufacture of the articles sold by respondent.

2. That respondent's father only permits respondent, as his sole sales representative, to sell said articles with the distinct understanding that respondent will not make any misrepresentations concerning them and will not overcharge the purchasers thereof.

3. That the prospective purchaser was invited to visit respondent's father's large Long Island estate and also the gift show conducted by respondent at the Palmer House in Chicago, with all expenses paid.

4. That the resale prices for which prospective purchasers could sell the articles, which they purchased from respondent, were 50 percent to 100 percent more than the prices at which respondent offered said articles to them.

5. That the articles which respondent would ship to purchasers would be similar to the samples displayed by respondent.

6. That respondent was referred to the prospective purchaser by some satisfied purchaser to whom respondent has previously sold.

7. That respondent would exchange slow-moving articles for other articles more susceptible to ready sale.

8. That the prospective purchaser would receive an exclusive territory for the neighborhood in which said purchaser resided.

9. That the payment for the articles purchased from respondent could be made by a deferred purchase plan, whereby, should said articles not prove readily saleable, the time of payment would be extended according to the retail sales of same.

10. That promissory judgment notes signed by purchasers, in which notes the due dates were not the same as those shown on the orders, were merely evidence of the debt, and in no case would be used as collateral for a loan or sold outright.
PAR. 6. In truth and in fact:
1. Respondent's father had been dead for many years prior to the times mentioned herein.
2. Neither respondent nor his father has ever manufactured the articles sold by respondent.
3. Respondent's father never had a Long Island estate.
4. Respondent never conducted a gift show at the Palmer House in Chicago or anywhere else.
5. Purchasers from respondent were required to resell the articles which they thus purchased at approximately the same prices they paid respondent.
6. The articles which respondent shipped in filling orders from purchasers were decidedly inferior to the samples which respondent displayed in securing the orders.
7. Respondent was never referred to prospective purchasers by satisfied purchasers of respondent.
8. When purchasers exchanged articles, they received back merchandise inferior in quality and quantity to those which they exchanged.
9. Purchasers did not receive any exclusive territories, because respondent will sell to anyone, wherever located, who would purchase his articles.
10. The time for payments of accounts due by purchasers to respondent was not extended by respondent according to retail sales of respondent's specific articles by the purchasers.
11. When respondent secures the purchaser's signature on a promissory judgment note, respondent sells same at the very first opportunity to a finance company which presumably is an innocent purchaser for value and which immediately notifies the maker of the note, that same must be paid in full on its due date.

PAR. 7. Respondent's representations described in paragraph 5 hereof are false, deceptive, and misleading, were, and are, calculated to, and had, and have, a tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all said representations are true. Further, as a true consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by said representations of respondent, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's articles, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors and substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to said competitors in the commerce hereinbefore described.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 23d day of December 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, W. M. Jacobson, an individual doing business under the trade name of Wonder Wood-Tex Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 16th day of January 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and the conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent, W. M. Jacobson, is an individual trading as the Wonder Wood-Tex Co., and having his office and principal place of business at 308 East Fifty-first Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is the sole owner and operator of the business conducted under the trade name Wonder Wood-Tex Co.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been since the year 1933, engaged in the business of selling and distributing wood-pulp articles to retail dealers and operators of gift shops situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said wood-pulp articles, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said wood-pulp articles among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships, engaged in the business of selling and distributing wood-pulp articles in commerce among and between various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent their respective products, sales policies, or methods of doing business.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, and in furtherance of the sale of his wood-pulp articles, respondent has caused to be disseminated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia statements and representations relative to his wood-pulp articles, sales policies, and methods of doing business. Among and typical of the statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

That the father of the respondent is a wealthy retired citizen, who is now engaged as a hobby, in the manufacture of the wood-pulp articles sold and distributed by the respondent;

That respondent's father permits respondent, as his sole sales representative, to sell said articles, but with the understanding that respondent will not make any misrepresentations relative to such articles and will not overcharge the purchasers thereof;

That prospective purchasers of respondent's articles are invited to visit the large Long Island estate of respondent's father and the gift show conducted by respondent at The Palmer House in Chicago, with all expenses paid by respondent;

That the prices for which purchasers from respondent can resell the articles purchased from respondent are 50 to 100 percent more than the prices they pay respondent for such articles;

That the articles which respondent ships to purchasers are similar to the samples of such articles displayed by respondent to prospective purchasers;

That the respondent has been referred to prospective purchasers by satisfied customers of respondent;

That respondent exchanges articles purchased from respondent which are not sold readily for other articles which will sell readily;

That purchasers receive from respondent an exclusive territory for the sale and distribution of respondent's articles;

That the payment to the respondent for the articles purchased from respondent can be made by a deferred purchase plan whereby the time of payment for the articles not readily salable will be extended by respondent to conform to the retail sales of the same; and

That the promissory judgment notes signed by purchasers of respondent's merchandise are merely an evidence of the debt and in no case will be used by respondent as a collateral for a loan, or sold to third parties.
Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent, in the manner aforesaid, are false, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, the father of the respondent is not a wealthy retired citizen who is now engaged, as a hobby, in the manufacture of the articles sold and distributed by respondent.

In truth and in fact, the father of respondent had been dead for many years prior to the times mentioned herein. Neither the respondent nor his father has ever manufactured the articles sold and distributed by the respondent. The respondent's father does not and did not have an estate on Long Island. The respondent has not and did not conduct a gift shop at The Palmer House in Chicago, or at any other location.

The purchasers from respondent do not resell the articles they purchase from respondent at from 50 to 100 percent profit. In truth and in fact, such purchasers have found it necessary to resell such articles at the same prices they paid respondent.

The articles which respondent ships to purchasers are very inferior to the samples of such articles which respondent displays to such purchasers prior to such shipment.

Respondent has not been, and is not, referred to prospective purchasers by satisfied customers of respondent.

Purchasers from respondent exchanging articles with respondent receive back from respondent articles inferior in quality and quantity to those which they exchange with respondent.

Purchasers do not receive from respondent an exclusive territory for the resale and distribution of such articles.

The times for payment of accounts to respondent by purchasers of such articles are not extended in accordance with the resale of such articles by such purchasers. The promissory notes signed by purchasers of respondent's merchandise are resold to a finance company which immediately notifies the maker of the note that same must be paid in full on its due date.

Par. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent, used and disseminated in the manner aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondent's wood-pulp articles because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who truthfully advertise their respective products, sales policies, and methods of doing business. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegation of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. M. Jacobson, an individual, doing business under the trade name of Wonder Wood-Tex Company, or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of wood-pulp articles or other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

1. That either the respondent or his father is engaged in the manufacture or carving of wood-pulp articles.

2. That the respondent conducts a gift show at Chicago or elsewhere, unless and until the respondent does actually conduct such gift show at such place or places.

3. From representing that the price charged the customer by respondent is or will be such an amount that will permit the customer to resell each of the different articles in the list purchased, at a competitive retail price and a reasonable profit, when the price charged by respondent will not permit a resale for such a profit.

4. That respondent's products are similar in quality and quantity to samples displayed by respondent, unless and until such is the fact, or that respondent has been referred to prospective purchasers by satisfied customers, unless and until such is the fact.

5. That respondent will exchange merchandise more readily salable for other merchandise purchased from respondent.

6. That purchasers of respondent’s merchandise receive an exclusive territory for the resale of such merchandise.

7. That the times for payment of accounts due respondent by purchasers are extended in accordance with the date of resale of such merchandise, unless and until such is the fact.

8. That promissory notes taken from purchasers will be extended beyond their due date, or will be otherwise modified, unless such promise of extension or modification is written in the face of the note.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
WHEREAS an individual engaged, under various fictitious trade names and addresses, in selling and distributing tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and frames therefor, through the medium of salesmen, agents, or representatives who—

(1) Worked on a strictly commission basis in crews or groups and under supervision of crew manager or "verifier," in his employ, in visiting homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns, and rural communities of the various States; and

(2) Whom he furnished with identification card or card of credentials, and with cases containing samples of "paintings," and with printed order or contract forms bearing names and addresses of one of trade company names under which he was transacting business, and in which order it was variously certified that customer was entitled to a "Hand Painted" or "Polychrome" or "Colora" convex portrait, of specified size and unframed, for "special producing charge of $2.95," or "for cost of production, $2.95," or "for the special advertising price of $2.95," with payment to be made upon presentation of proof at customer's residence, and with provision in such blank or "certificate" for agent's signature in his representative capacity; and

(3) Who gave purchasers of pictures to understand that they were contracting with duly constituted agent of one or the other of the trade-name companies indicated by trade names employed by said individual as aforesaid, and gave receipts similar in tenor to such printed order or contract form, for particular trade-name company making sale, and induced customer to sign paper promising payment of sum of $2.95 when proof of portrait was shown to him at his home;

In selling said enlargements and frames therefor to customers in various States, in direct and substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and frames thereof, and likewise with those engaged in sale of genuine original paintings, including oil paintings and water-color paintings, as aforesaid; through representations of his salesmen and other representatives, made with his knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation, and for the purpose of selling said products and inducing purchasers thereof to sign contracts without understanding the nature, terms, and conditions thereof—

tures as "paintings," "hand-painted portraits," "Colura portraits," or "Polychrome portraits," and informed prospect that said individual was offering similar portraits or paintings at a "special advertising price" of $2.95, or at a "reduced price," or for a "special producing price," or for the "cost of production," and that such purported paintings or portraits were worth $25 or some similar amount, and that completed "painting" furnished by said individual would be similar to sample exhibited;

(b) Displayed, as above set forth, on its order blanks, contract forms, etc., and conducted his said business under, trade names including such words as "Academy of Fine Arts" and "Art Association," and represented to prospective purchaser that the company, concern, or organization soliciting his order was an art association or association of artists skilled in making portraits, paintings, and similar works of art, and was a member of the National Portrait Association, and induced him to sign order or contract in guise of certificate purporting to entitle him to receive a portrait or painting upon payment only of cost of production, and induced customer to loan agent or representative photograph or snapshot of relative or member of family whose portrait was to be painted, to be used, as represented, as model or guide to the artist who was to paint the same, and to be returned to customer with completed picture;

Facts being alleged pictures or "paintings" made by said individual were different from and greatly inferior in quality, workmanship, and character to samples exhibited by his agents when soliciting and obtaining contracts for such alleged pictures or "paintings," which, in fact, were not portraits or paintings in any sense of the word, but merely cheap, quickly made, photographic enlargement costing about $1.25 each, and tinted or colored by use of pastel or crayon, water color, or other powdered pigments sprayed, in solution and largely through use of an air brush and compressed air, upon the photographic enlargement, said alleged portraits or paintings were not sold at special advertising price or at reduced price, or for special reducing price, or for cost of production, but price of $2.95 thus charged for the unframed photographic tinted enlargement was regular and customary price charged by him for such enlargements, and he or his said business did not operate any association of artists, give work to unemployed artists, employ artists, nor commercialize talents of any of America's foremost portrait artists, and were not, as represented through such trade names and otherwise, members of or sponsored by nationally recognized association of portrait painters, so-called portrait association was either fictitious or long dormant, if existing at all, business conducted by him through aforesaid trade names was merely business enterprise to sell to public for profit cheap, colored, or tinted photographic enlargements and frames therefor, and so-called "certificate" was, in truth and in fact, binding contract containing numerous provisions and representations of binding nature not explained to or understood by customers, and not evidence that he was to receive valuable portrait or painting; and

from customer as to shading, coloring, and other details for the supposed "painting," of delivering finished picture, fully framed in peculiar octagonal shape and size, by another salesman who made use of coercion, threats, abuse, and misrepresentation of various kinds in endeavoring to sell frame to customer at varying prices, and informed purchaser objecting to quality, design, or price of frame, and who had been previously advised that there was no obligation to buy frame, and from whom it had been concealed that so-called portrait would be delivered in such peculiar form, shape, and size, that it would be impossible for customer to obtain frame to fit it except from said individual and at prices exacted therefor, that said individual or business was the only company that furnished frames of such particular design, and that original order or certificate signed by customer obligated him to frame picture in a suitable manner, and, in many instances, refused to deliver completed picture, previously fully paid for, or original treasured family photograph borrowed from customer, until frame was ordered or claimed balance paid in full;

Facts being said individual's selling methods were directed primarily to accomplish sale of a frame at an exorbitant price, its activities in securing contracts for alleged "portraits" or "paintings," and in filling same were merely "bait" or a "come-on" to "hook the sucker" and enable said individual's high-pressure frame salesmen to contact purchaser and sell frames of cheap and inferior quality at prices which were exorbitant and far above value thereof, through sales accomplished, as aforesaid, by coercive and oppressive acts and practices and representations, including retention, without any such understanding, of original photograph submitted by customer, or of completed portrait, or both, until alleged balance due had been paid or frame was purchased by customer, who neither wished for, desired, nor ordered same;

With effect of misleading and deceiving public as to character of business actually conducted by said individual through use of such trade names and representations, and causing it to confuse business in question with various organizations similar in name or designation which were conducting, or might properly be designated as, art associations or academies of fine art, and with effect, through use of such various false and misleading representations and practices in sale and offer for sale of purported "portraits" and "paintings," of deceiving purchasing public concerning quality and value of his products sold as above set forth, and inducing public to purchase said products under erroneous belief that same were high-grade quality portraits or paintings and picture frames of exceptional merit and value, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to him from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs in commerce, and who truthfully represent their products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Sherriff, Lindsay, Weis & Hutchinson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George H. Lewis, an individual, trading variously as Association Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, the Commission hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, George H. Lewis, is an individual, residing at 909 Union Avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa. He does business under the trade names, Associated Arts, Box 843, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Associated Arts, 507 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.; Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, 234 West Water Street, Syracuse, N. Y.; Van Dyke Art Association, 271 Erie Boulevard, West Syracuse, N. Y.; and Sterling Art Association, Suite 506, The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio. The various trade names and addresses hereinabove set out are fictitious names and addresses used for mailing purposes only; the addresses 234 West Water Street and 271 Erie Boulevard West, Syracuse, N. Y., being the principal address of the Seals Copying Co., Inc., a corporation engaged in the business of jobbing picture frames, preparing printed enlargements of photographs, and painting photographs with water colors; the address Suite 506, The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio, being the address of an art studio of one Frank Thompson, and the address 507 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y., being used merely for lending prestige in the obtaining of business. All orders or correspondence received at said addresses are forwarded to respondent personally at his home address or post office box at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Respondent is the sole owner and operator of the business conducted by him through the medium of the aforementioned trade-name companies, and directs the activities and controls the business policies and practices of each, including the conduct of sales campaigns, character of sales representations made, and all business interviews and correspondence incident thereto.

PAR. 2. Respondent George H. Lewis, trading variously as Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association, is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing tinted or colored enlargements of photographs, and frames therefor. Respondent sells his products to customers located in various States of the United States through the medium of salesmen or representatives and causes said tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and frames when so sold by him to be transported from his place of business in Pittsburgh in the State of Pennsylvania to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent George H. Lewis has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and of frames therefor, and likewise with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of genuine original paintings, including oil paintings and water-color paintings, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns, and rural communities of the various States of the United States. Said agents or representatives, sometimes called "floaters" or "coxeys," work on a strictly commission basis, living in rooming houses and working from town to town in crews or groups under a crew manager or "verifier," who keeps in constant touch with the daily activities of the respective salesmen, and who is also employed by respondent. Purchasers of pictures are given to understand that they are contracting or dealing with a duly constituted agent of one or the other of respondent's trade-name companies, and each agent or salesman is furnished by respondent with an identification card or card of credentials to be presented or exhibited by him when interviewing prospective purchasers. Equipment, including sample cases containing samples of "paintings," is also furnished by respondent to his agents and representatives for use in soliciting orders in his behalf.

Respondent causes orders or contracts for pictures or paintings to be taken on printed forms provided by him bearing the name and address of one of the trade-name companies under which he is transacting business across the top thereof, and in such order it is variously "certified" that the customer is entitled to a "Hand Painted" or "Polychrome" or "colura" Convex Portrait, 10 by 16 inches in size, unframed, for the "special producing charge of $2.95," or "for cost of production, $2.95," or "for the special advertising price of $2.95," payment to be made upon presentation of proof at customer's residence. Said order blank or "certificate" is duly signed by respondent's agent in his representative capacity on a line provided therefor. Receipts similar in tenor are signed for the trade-name company by the agent making a sale, and the customer is induced to sign a paper promising to pay the sum of $2.95 when the proof of the portrait is shown to him at his home.

The form of "certificate" used by respondent in his business under the trade name "Van Dyke Art Association," and used with minor variations under his other trade names, and therefore typical of respondent's usual order blank, is as follows:

271 Erie Blvd. West, Syracuse, N. Y.

NPA National Portrait Association

Certificate for a Polychrome Portrait

All other orders $25.00. This certificate Entitles the Bearer -------------------------------- to one, 10 x 16, Octagon, Convexed, Polychrome Portrait (without frame) for cost of production, $2.95.

In a few days, the proof of your portrait will be shown at your home and the cost of production must then be paid. Read this contract—this order cannot be countermanded.

An Association that has commercialized the talents of some of America's foremost portrait artists. We only ask that you appreciate this portrait and be kind enough to display it and recommend it at its value and not the amount you expended for it. All photographs returned with the finished work.

I agree to pay the cost of production, $2.95, when the proof of portrait is shown at my home.

Address--------------------------------

Par. 5. For the purpose of selling the respondent's colored enlargements of photographs and frames therefor, and inducing purchasers thereof to sign contracts without understanding the nature, terms, and conditions thereof, salesmen and other representatives of the respondent, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of the respondent, make false and misleading representations as follows:

Salesmen and other representatives of the respondent, when calling upon prospective purchasers, exhibit several samples of attractively colored specimens of respondent's purported work. The prospective purchaser is told that respondent is offering similar portraits or paintings at a "special advertising price" of $2.95, or at a "reduced price," or for a "special producing price," or for the "cost of production."
Said salesman particularly calls the prospective purchaser's attention to the beauty of the work, its finish, and to the natural colors of the hair, eyes, complexion, and clothing. Invariably the pictures are represented and referred to by the said salesman as "paintings," "hand-painted portraits," "Colura portraits," or "Polychrome portraits," and are represented as being worth $25 or some similar amount.

Said salesman then informs the prospective purchaser that the completed "painting" furnished by the respondent will be similar to the sample exhibited, that the respondent is an art association or association of artists skilled in making portraits, paintings, and similar works of art, and is a member of the National Portrait Association. The prospective purchaser is then induced to sign an order or contract in the guise of a "certificate" purporting to entitle the customer to receive a "portrait" or "painting" upon payment only of the cost of production.

Said salesman then induces the customer to loan him a photograph or kodak snapshot of the relative or member of the family whose portrait is to be painted, and represents that such photograph is to be used as a model or guide to the artist who is to paint the portrait, and will be returned to the customer with the completed picture.

The original order taker is followed a few days later by a high pressure salesman also employed by respondent, known as a "proof passer" or "framer." The "proof passer" submits to the customer a black and white print of the original photograph in enlarged form, and collects the $2.95 called for by the "certificate" and receives instructions from the customer as to shading, coloring, and other details for the painting which is to be produced.

The delivery of the finished picture is made by still another salesman employed by respondent, who presents the picture fully framed in a peculiar octagonal shape and size, and by means of coercion, threats, abuse, and misrepresentations of various kinds endeavors to sell the frame to the customer at varying prices.

If the purchaser objects to the quality, design, or price of the frame, although previously advised that there is no obligation to buy a frame, he is now, and for the first time, informed that respondent is the only company that furnishes frames of this particular design, and that the original order or "certificate" signed by the customer obligates him to frame the picture in a suitable manner. As a result of such representations, the deliveryman usually succeeds in selling the frame for an exorbitant price, usually $15 or more.

graph borrowed from the customer, until a frame is ordered or a claimed balance is paid in full.

Par. 6. A crayon is a pencil-shaped piece of colored clay, chalk, or charcoal used for drawing upon paper. A crayon drawing is the act or art of drawing with crayons. A drawing is a representation produced by the art of drawing; a work of art produced by pen, pencil, or crayon. The pastel, in art, is a colored crayon made of pigments ground with chalk and compounded with water into a sort of paste. A drawing made with a colored chalk or crayon is called a pastel, as is also the art of drawing with colored crayons.

Par. 7. In truth and in fact, the various statements and representations made by respondent and by his sales agents and representatives, and the acts and practices employed by them in the sale and offering for sale of their pictures in cities, towns, and communities of the various States of the United States, were and are false, deceptive, and misleading in the following, among other, particulars:

1. Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association are not and never have been art associations or academies in the sense that such terms are known and accepted in the world of art. On the contrary, the business conducted by respondent, through the medium of the above-styled trade names, is and has been no more, in fact, than a business enterprise to sell to the public for profit cheap colored or tinted photographic enlargements and frames therefor. The use by respondent of the term “art association” or “academy of fine arts” has misled and deceived the public as to the character of the business actually conducted by respondent, and has caused the public to confuse respondent’s business with various organizations similar in name or designation which are conducting, or which may properly be designated as art associations or academies of fine arts.

2. The so-called “paintings,” “hand-painted portraits,” “Colura Portraits,” or “Polychrome portraits” as sold by respondent are not portraits or paintings in any sense of the word, but on the contrary, are merely cheap, quickly made photographic enlargements costing about $1.25 each, and tinted or colored by the use of pastel or crayon, water color, or other powdered pigments sprayed upon the photographic enlargement in solution, largely through the use of an air brush and compressed air. Said alleged "portraits" or "paintings" are not sold at a "special advertising price" or at a "reduced price," or for a "special producing price" or for the "cost of production." In truth and in fact the price of $2.95 at which respondent sells the unframed photographic tinted enlargement is not a special or reduced price or the cost of production, but on the contrary, is the regular and customary price which respondent charges for such enlargements.

3. The alleged pictures or "portraits" made by respondent are different from and greatly inferior in quality, workmanship, and character to the samples exhibited by respondent's agents when endeavoring to obtain and in obtaining contracts for such alleged pictures or "portraits."

4. Customers do not understand and have not agreed, in connection with contracts, that treasured family photographs are to be retained by respondent until payment of any sum alleged by respondent to be due him.

5. Respondent does not operate any association of artists and does not give work to unemployed artists or employ any artists, nor has he commercialized the talents of any of America's foremost portrait artists.

6. Respondent conceals and has concealed from purchasers at the time the "portrait" is ordered that the portrait as ordered will be delivered in such a peculiar convexed form, shape, and size that it will be impossible for the customer thereafter to obtain a frame to fit said "portrait" except from the respondent and at prices exacted by respondent therefor.

7. Respondent's selling methods are directed primarily to accomplish the sale of a frame at an exorbitant price, and the respondent's activities in securing contracts for alleged "portraits" or "paintings" and fulfilling the same are merely "bait" or a "come-on" to "hook the sucker" and enable respondent's high pressure frame salesmen to contact the purchaser and sell frames of cheap and inferior quality at prices which are exorbitant and far above the value thereof.

8. Respondent's sales of frames are accomplished by coercive and oppressive acts, practices, and representations, including retention of the original photograph submitted by the customer or the completed "portrait," or both, until an alleged balance due respondent is paid, or until a frame is purchased by the customer who has neither wished for, desired nor ordered same.
9. There is no such organization as the National Portrait Association, or, if such organization actually exists, it is dormant and not actively functioning at the present time or in recent years, and the use by respondent in his order blanks or "certificates" of the name and symbol of such association, and reference thereto by respondent's agents is a representation to the public that respondent's various trade name companies are members of, or sponsored by, a nationally recognized association of portrait painters, when such is not the fact.

10. The use of the word "certificate" for the order blank or form used by respondent in the solicitation of orders is false and deceptive in that it is a representation to the public that it is a thing of value held by him to evidence and certify that he is to receive a valuable "portrait" or "painting" upon payment of a trifling sum of money. In truth and in fact the so-called "certificate" is a binding contract which the customer has been induced unfairly to sign and which contains numerous provisions and representations of a binding nature which are not explained to or understood by the customers.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and practices in the sale and offering for sale of purported portraits and paintings has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to and does deceive the purchasing public concerning the quality and value of his products sold as hereinbefore described, and has thereby induced, and is inducing the public to purchase said products under the erroneous belief that the same were and are high-grade quality portraits or paintings, and picture frames of exceptional merit and value. The use by respondent of the aforesaid practices further tends to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from his competitors, likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia who truthfully represent their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 30, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, George H. Lewis, an individual, trading as Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

Subsequently, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, George H. Lewis, is an individual, residing at 909 Union Avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa. He does business under the trade names, Associated Arts, Box 843, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Associated Arts, 507 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.; Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, 234 West Water Street, Syracuse, N. Y.; Van Dyke Art Association, 271 Erie Boulevard, West, Syracuse, N. Y., and Sterling Art Association, Suite 506, The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio. The various trade names and addresses hereinabove set out are fictitious names and addresses used for mailing purposes only; the addresses 234 West Water Street and 271 Erie Boulevard West, Syracuse, N. Y., being the principal address of the Seals Copying Co., Inc., a corporation engaged in the business of jobbing picture frames, preparing printed enlargements of photographs, and painting photographs with water colors; the address Suite 506, The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio, being the address of an art studio of one Frank Thompson, and the address 507 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y., being used merely for lending prestige in the obtaining of business. All orders or correspondence received at said addresses are forwarded to respondent personally at his home address or post-office box at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Respondent is the sole owner and operator of the business conducted by him through the medium of the aforementioned trade-name com-companies, and directs the activities and controls the business policies and practices of each, including the conduct of sales campaigns, character of sales representations made, and all business interviews and correspondence incident thereto.

Par. 2. Respondent, George H. Lewis, trading variously as Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association, is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing tinted or colored enlargements of photographs, and frames therefor. Respondent sells his products to customers located in various States of the United States through the medium of salesmen or representatives and causes said tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and frames when so sold by him to be transported from his place of business in Pittsburgh in the State of Pennsylvania to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent George H. Lewis has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and of frames therefor, and likewise with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale of genuine original paintings, including oil paintings and water-color paintings, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns, and rural communities of the various States of the United States. Said agents or representatives, sometimes called "floaters" or "coxeys," work on a strictly commission basis, living in rooming houses and working from town to town in crews or groups under a crew manager or "verifier," who keeps in constant touch with the daily activities of the respective salesmen, and who is also employed by respondent. Purchasers of pictures are given to understand that they are contracting or dealing with a duly constituted agent of one or the other of respondent's trade name companies, and each agent or salesman is furnished by respondent with an identification card or card of credentials to be presented or exhibited by him when interviewing prospective purchasers. Equipment, including sample cases containing samples of

Respondent causes orders or contracts for pictures or paintings to be taken on printed forms provided by him bearing the name and address of one of the trade name companies under which he is transacting business across the top thereof, and in such order it is variously “certified” that the customer is entitled to a “Hand Painted” or “Polychrome” or “Colura” Convex Portrait, 10 x 16 inches in size, unframed, for the “special producing charge of $2.95,” or “for cost of production, $2.95,” or “for the special advertising price of $2.95,” payment to be made upon presentation of proof at customer’s residence. Said order blank or “certificate” is duly signed by respondent’s agent in his representative capacity on a line provided therefor. Receipts similar in tenor are signed for the trade name company by the agent making a sale, and the customer is induced to sign a paper promising to pay the sum of $2.95 when the proof of the portrait is shown to him at his home.

The form of “certificate” used by respondent in his business under the trade name “Van Dyke Art Association,” and used with minor variations under his other trade names, and therefore typical of respondent’s usual order blank, is as follows:

271 Erie Blvd. West, Syracuse, N. Y.
NPA National Portrait Association
Certificate for a Polychrome Portrait

All other orders $25.00. This certificate Entitles the Bearer to one, 10 x 16, Octagon, Convexed, Polychrome Portrait (without frame) for cost of production, $2.95.

In a few days, the proof of your portrait will be shown at your home and the cost of production must then be paid. Read this contract—this order cannot be countermanded.

An Association that has commercialized the talents of some of America’s foremost portrait artists. We only ask that you appreciate this portrait and be kind enough to display it and recommend it at its value and not the amount you expended for it. All photographs returned with the finished work.

I agree to pay the cost of production, $2.95, when the proof of portrait is shown at my home.

Par. 5. For the purpose of selling the respondent’s colored enlargements of photographs and frames therefor, and inducing purchasers thereof to sign contracts without understanding the nature, terms, and conditions thereof, salesmen and other representatives of the respondent, with the knowledge, acquiescence, and active cooperation of the respondent, make false and misleading representations as follows:

Salesmen and other representatives of the respondent, when calling upon prospective purchasers, exhibit several samples of attractively colored specimens of respondent's purported work. The prospective purchaser is told that respondent is offering similar portraits or paintings as a "special advertising price" of $2.95, or at a "reduced price," or for a "special producing price," or for the "cost of production."

Said salesman particularly calls the prospective purchaser's attention to the beauty of the work, its finish, and to the natural colors of the hair, eyes, complexion, and clothing. Invariably the pictures are represented and referred to by the said salesman as "paintings," "hand-painted portraits," "Colora portraits," or "Polychrome portraits," and are represented as being worth $25 or some similar amount.

Said salesman then informs the prospective purchaser that the completed "painting" furnished by the respondent will be similar to the sample exhibited, that the respondent is an art association or association of artists skilled in making portraits, paintings, and similar works of art, and is a member of the National Portrait Association. The prospective purchaser is then induced to sign an order or contract in the guise of a "certificate" purporting to entitle the customer to receive a "portrait" or "painting" upon payment only of the cost of production.

Said salesman then induces the customer to loan him a photograph or kodak snapshot of the relative or member of the family whose portrait is to be painted, and represents that such photograph is to be used as a model or guide to the artist who is to paint the portrait, and will be returned to the customer with the completed picture.

The original order taker is followed a few days later by a high pressure salesman also employed by respondent, known as a "proof passer" or "framer." The "proof passer" submits to the customer a black and white print of the original photograph in enlarged form, and collects the $2.95 called for by the "certificate" and receives instructions from the customers as to shading, coloring, and other details for the painting which is to be produced.

The delivery of the finished picture is made by still another salesman employed by respondent, who presents the picture fully framed in a peculiar octagonal shape and size, and by means of coercion, threats, abuse, and misrepresentations of various kinds endeavors to sell the frame to the customer at varying prices.
If the purchaser objects to the quality, design, or price of the frame, although previously advised that there is no obligation to buy a frame, he is now, and for the first time, informed that respondent is the only company that furnishes frames of this particular design, and that the original order or "certificate" signed by the customer obligates him to frame the picture in a suitable manner. As a result of such representations, the deliveryman usually succeeds in selling the frame for an exorbitant price, usually $15 or more.

If the purchaser refuses to purchase a frame, the deliveryman in many instances refuses to deliver the completed picture, which has been previously fully paid for, or the original treasured family photograph borrowed from the customer, until a frame is ordered or a claimed balance is paid in full.

Par. 6. A crayon is a pencil-shaped piece of colored clay, chalk, or charcoal used for drawing upon paper. A crayon drawing is the act or art of drawing with crayons. A drawing is a representation produced by the act of drawing; a work of art produced by pen, pencil, or crayon. The pastel, in art, is a colored crayon made of pigments ground with chalk and compounded with water into a sort of paste. A drawing made with a colored chalk or crayon is called a pastel, as is also the art of drawing with colored crayons.

A painting is a likeness, image, or scene depicted with paints without the aid of photography. A water color is a painting with pigments for which water, and not oil, is used as a solvent. An oil painting is a painting done by hand with brushes in plastic oil colors on canvas, or other material, without the aid of photography.

Par. 7. In truth and in fact, the various statements and representations made by respondent and by his sales agents and representatives, and the acts and practices employed by them in the sale and offering for sale of their pictures in cities, towns, and communities of the various States of the United States, were and are false, deceptive, and misleading in the following, among other, particulars:

1. Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association are not and never have been art associations or academies in the sense that such terms are known and accepted in the world of art. photographic enlargements and frames therefor. The use by respondent of the term "art association" or "academy of fine arts" has misled and deceived the public as to the character of the business actually conducted by respondent, and has caused the public to confuse respondent's business with various organizations similar in name or designation which are conducting, or which may properly be designated as art associations or academies of fine arts.

2. The so-called "paintings," "hand-painted portraits," "Colura portraits," or "Polychrome portraits" as sold by respondent are not portraits or paintings in any sense of the word, but on the contrary, are merely cheap, quickly made photographic enlargements costing about $1.25 each, and tinted or colored by the use of pastel or crayon, water color, or other powdered pigments sprayed upon the photographic enlargement in solution, largely through the use of an air brush and compressed air. United States and in the District of Columbia who truthfully represent their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered That the respondent George H. Lewis, an individual trading under the name and style of Associated Arts, Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, and Sterling Art Association, or trading under any other name, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of colored or tinted photographs or enlargements having a photographic base, and of frames therefor, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or in any manner, that colored or tinted pictures, photographs, or photographic enlargements are portraits or paintings, or are "hand-painted portraits," "colura portraits," or "polychrome portraits."

2. Using the terms "painting" or "portrait," either alone or in conjunction with the words "hand-painted," "colura," "polychrome," or any other terms or words in any way to designate, describe, or refer to colored or tinted pictures, photographs, or photographic enlargements, or other pictures produced from a photographic base or impression.

3. Misrepresenting that any specified sum is the actual cost of materials in a picture, or the “cost of production,” or a “special advertising price,” or a “reduced price,” or a “special producing price,” or otherwise misrepresenting the actual cost of either materials or production, or both.

4. Representing, by the use of the word “certificate” or any other word or words, that the order blank or form used by him in the solicitation of orders is anything other than a contract form for the purchase of a picture or pictures.

5. Representing that a picture similar to sample displayed will be delivered, unless in fact the picture delivered is of the same kind, quality, design, and workmanship.

6. Representing that frames can be purchased elsewhere unless the odd design used can in fact be purchased from other sources, or unless a standard design is furnished.

7. Concealing, from or failing to disclose to customers that the finished picture when delivered will be so shaped and designed that it can only be used in a specially designed odd style of frame which can be procured only from the respondent, and generally at prices equal to, or in excess of, the prices already charged for pictures.

8. Representing, as the customary or regular prices or values for such pictures and frames, prices and values which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said pictures and frames are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business.

9. Representing, by the use of the trade names Blackstone Academy of Fine Arts, Van Dyke Art Association, Sterling Art Association, or any other fictitious trade name of similar import, that respondent is an artist or conducts an art association or academy, or is connected with an association or academy of artists or similar groups or organizations.

10. Representing, by the use of the name and symbol of the National Portrait Association or other nonexistent or dormant association or organization, that respondent is a member of, or sponsored by, a nationally recognized association of portrait painters, when such is not the fact.

11. Representing that respondent gives work to unemployed artists or employs artists or that he has commercialized the talents of any of America’s foremost portrait artists, when such is not the fact.
12. Using any coercive or oppressive acts, practices, or representations in the sale of pictures or the frames therefor, including retention of the original photograph submitted by the customer or the completed picture or both, until a frame is purchased from him.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
WHERE a corporation engaged in publication of reference book designated as "The Volume Library," and in sale of entire output thereof to its president, and owner of 95 percent of its stock; said president, vice president, and second vice president; and various individuals engaged also, under trade name similar to that of said corporation, in sale of said reference book to ultimate consumers through agents or canvassers under contracts entered into with aforesaid corporate president, and required, in conduct of their said business, to make use of such name, registered with proper department of State in which representative was conducting such business, in course of which, in aggregate, millions of parents of school children had been solicited to buy said books at prices ranging from $10 to $17 a copy, and from one to two million copies had been thus sold; in variously soliciting sale of and selling said book as above indicated, in competition with others likewise engaged in selling and marketing reference books in commerce among the several States—

(a) Represented, through use of term "Educators Association" in the respective corporate and trade names employed in conduct of such business and displayed on corporate seal set forth on so-called certificate of membership furnished each purchaser and giving him privilege of consulting its so-called Bureau of Research and Service, and on the guarantee thus furnished, that they constituted a group of educators or teachers formed into an association;

Facts being neither said corporation nor similarly named purported association constituted an official organization or association of altruistic educators, but solely a business enterprise organized and existing for profits derived from the sale of said "Volume Library";

With result of misleading substantial portion of prospective purchasers into erroneous and false belief that such corporate and trade names meant that said corporation and association were organizations operated by a group of teachers or educators properly so-called, united for a common purpose other than financial gain, and with capacity and tendency to induce members of public, under such false and erroneous belief, to make purchases of said volume which they would not make except for such false and erroneous belief;

(b) Represented or implied to prospective purchasers, in some instances, that they came directly from the school which was attended by the child of the particular prospect, through their canvassers, who thus gained admission to such homes and who also, in accordance with their instruction, made sales talks so worded as to mislead prospective purchaser into erroneous and false belief that the canvasser was in some manner connected with school work, and that book itself was a necessary requirement of the school attended by the particular child;
EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION, INC., ET AL.

Facts being said "Volume Library" was not used as textbook by schools, and no school authorities required its purchase, and there was no connection whatever between sales persons and any school or other educational organization, but such book, on the contrary, was offered for sale by private business organization for profit;

With capacity and tendency to induce parents of school children to purchase book who would not make such purchase if they were truthfully informed of facts as aforesaid; and

(c) Falsely and misleadingly offered specific salary in advertisements for college students or teachers in "Help Wanted" columns of newspapers and periodicals circulating among the several States, and through which canvassers were secured; and

(d) Refused, on many occasions, and for a period of time, to return to canvassers amount deposited for equipment in accordance with requirements of contract required of canvasser, and which called for deposit of $5.50 or other sum for sales equipment, returnable after 15 days or 120 hours of work, for the reason, as believed, that canvassers had failed to comply with such contracts by not making required number of calls or of required length, or for some other reason;

Notwithstanding fact canvassers thus secured were actually employed to sell such book to public on 30 percent commission basis, and payment of difference, if any, between commissions earned and salary thus offered, was conditioned upon canvassers fulfillment of certain requirements set forth in contract above referred to, which canvasser was required to sign before entering upon sale of book, and which included, among other things, making of deposit as aforesaid, memorizing of sales talk of 6,000 to 7,000 words, and the making of minimum of 10 calls a day lasting a minimum of 20 minutes, as shown by daily and weekly reports, and they failed and refused to pay difference aforesaid to many canvassers who failed to earn commissions aggregating amounts offered as salary, or to fulfill such requirements, including, in some instances, memorizing verbatim of said sales talk; and

Notwithstanding failure fully to advise canvasser at time of signing contract that such memorizing was necessary condition precedent to such payment; and in some instances, and for a time, representations to applicants that such contracts were mere matters of form, might be signed without full understanding of all terms thereof, and, in rare instances and contrary to instructions, managers' verbal representations to applicants differing from those in contracts, copies of which, for a time, were not given applicants at time of signing, and which, in certain instances, applicants were told they must hurry and sign if they wished to join study class being formed;

Held, That such acts, representations, and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public, of competitors, and of applicants for places as canvassers for respondents, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Addison and Mr. William G. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Townsend, Kindleberger & Campbell, of New York City, for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Educators Association, Inc., a corporation, and Leo L. Tully, Oron E. Richards, Donald W. Henry, individually and as president, vice president, and second vice president of said corporation, respectively; and Miss Louise Sims, Miss Marian A. Miller, Miss C. L. MacDonald, Mrs. B. M. Gambert, Mrs. Marie C. Hostler, Mrs. V. B. Decker, Mr. J. E. Stronks, Mr. H. Lyle Goldsberry, Mr. J. R Hostler, Mr. J. P. Tully, Mrs. M. W. Lees, Miss Sarah E. Atkinson, Mrs. Bessie Morrell, each individually trading and doing business under the trade name of Educators Association, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Educators Association, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal offices at 307 Fifth Avenue, in the city and State of New York.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, Leo L. Tully, is president of said Educators Association, Inc., and also trades and does business individually under the trade name of Educators Association. He maintains offices in both capacities at 307 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Oron E. Richards, is an individual, trading and doing business under the name of Educators Association, at 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill. He also occupies the office of vice president of the aforesaid corporation.

Respondent, Donald W. Henry, is an individual, trading and doing business under the name of Educators Association, with offices at 517 Garland Building, Los Angeles, Calif. He also occupies the office of second vice president of said corporation.

The respondents, Louise Sims, 901 Wm. Oliver Building, Atlanta, Ga.; Marian A. Miller, 11 East Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.; C. L. MacDonald, 41 Winter Street, Boston, Mass.; B. M. Gambert, 511 Burt Building, Dallas, Tex.; Marie C. Hostler, 451-452 Book Building, Detroit, Mich.; V. B. Decker, 503 Inland Building, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. E. Stronks, Johnson County Savings Bank Building, Iowa City, Iowa; H. Lyle Goldsberry, 506 Andrus Building, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. R. Hostler, 726 Canal Bank Building, New Orleans, La.; J. P. Tully, 1030 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. M. W. Lees, 335 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Sarah E. Atkinson, 916 Title Guaranty Building, St. Louis, Mo.; and Bessie Morrell, 603 Nissen Building, Winston-Salem, N. C., all are individuals, each trading and doing business under the trade name of Educators Association, and each maintaining offices in the city and State hereinabove set forth in connection with each of said respondents named.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent, Educators Association, Inc., for a number of years immediately last past has been and is now publishing a reference book which is designated by it as "The Volume Library," said respondent corporation causes said book to be printed and bound by a publishing firm in Chicago, Ill. Besides its main office in New York, N. Y., said corporation maintains shipping offices in the following cities: New York, N. Y.; Steubenville, Ohio; Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Dallas, Tex.; and Miami, Fla.

In the course and conduct of respondents' business, as hereinafter more fully shown, said books are shipped from the said respective shipping offices to purchasers thereof located in States other than those in which said shipping offices are located, and in the District of Columbia; and there now is and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned a constant current of trade in said books, flowing through and into the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business, the said respondents are, and were at all times herein referred to, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar commodities in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Leo L. Tully, in his individual capacity, purchases the total output of the said Volume Library from said Educators Association, Inc. Leo L. Tully individually enters into contracts with persons who undertake to sell said Volume Library to the ultimate consumers in their respective territories through the means of agents or canvassers. At the present time, such contractual relations exist between said Leo L. Tully and the individuals named in the last subparagraph of paragraph 2. The number and personnel of said representatives vary with the exigencies of respondent, Leo L. Tully's business. Likewise, the terms of the agreements between Leo L. Tully and his representatives vary. In some cases the books are sold outright to such representatives. In other cases, they are sold on a percentage basis. Each of said representatives is required to do business under the name of Educators Association, said name being registered with the proper department in the State in which such representative is doing business.

In connection with the selling, marketing, and distributing the said Volume Library, the respondent, Leo L. Tully, and all of the other individual respondents hereinbefore named, entered into, and thereafter carried out, and are still carrying out, an understanding, agreement, and conspiracy to employ the methods and means hereinafter more fully described. Said individual representatives, under the direction of the respondent, Leo L. Tully, secure agents or sales persons through the medium of newspaper and magazine advertisements. The copies of the Volume Library which are sold by the sales persons engaged as aforesaid are shipped to the purchasers thereof from the nearest respective shipping point heretofore named, and are paid for by such purchasers in cash on delivery.

The respondent, Educators Association, Inc., is likewise connected with and engaged in the common enterprise of selling, marketing, and distributing the said Volume Library, in that each purchaser of said book is furnished with a certificate of membership in Educators Association, Inc., which bears on its face a facsimile of the corporate seal of the respondent corporation. The receipt which is furnished by the sales person to the purchaser for the down payment contains a guarantee to the purchaser which is subscribed "Educators Association, Inc., capital stock $250,000" and listing the names and addresses of all the officers of the corporation.

Par. 5. The advertisements which are inserted in newspapers and in teachers' magazines by the respondents' representatives are composed and phrased by them, but in many instances such representatives will consult respondent, Leo L. Tully, with respect to such advertisements and receive his help and suggestions; and the said Leo L. Tully supervises and directs the policies under which the several branch offices are conducted by the respective managers.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses the several representatives insert advertisements in various newspapers as aforesaid, usually under the "Help Wanted" column.

The following are examples of such advertisements published as aforesaid:

Complaint 28 F. T. C.
College student or teacher, travel for summer for healthful work, $270 for ninety days.

Lady with ability and refinement, ex-teacher preferred, permanent advancement, four months trial $300, Box —.

Vacation position for college student or teacher, splendid experience, pleasant work.

Persons who answer such advertisements receive a notification that their application has been favorably considered and they are invited to come to the office of the respective respondent for an interview. At that time such applicant is advised that a contract must be executed setting forth the terms of employment; also that a deposit of stipulated amount which varies but which usually is $5.50, is required to cover the expense of the sales equipment, such as a sample book, order blanks, and similar material and the cost of training. A receipt is furnished for such deposit which recites that the deposit will be refunded after 15 days' of work. The contract provides, among other things, that the applicant must memorize a sales talk, consisting of several closely printed pages, must make a minimum of 10 calls per day on prospective purchasers, each call lasting a minimum of 20 minutes; that the applicant must work in the territory assigned by such respondent; that the applicant is entitled to a commission of 30 percent of the retail price of all orders taken by such agent; and that if such commissions do not amount to a certain specified minimum sum, said respondent will pay the difference between the commissions earned and such specified amount.

Par. 7. By inserting said advertisement in the “Help Wanted” columns of newspapers, by stressing the fact that students or teachers are desired for the work, and by specifying a definite amount as salary, applicants are led into the erroneous belief that the work offered consists of a salaried position; that it is connected with teaching work and that substantial compensation will be paid therefor.

In truth and in fact, the work consists of canvassing and selling “The Volume Library” from house to house and cannot be entered upon without first making the required deposit as described in paragraph 6; and the terms of the contract as hereinabove described, are of such a difficult nature that persons engaging in the sale of said book find it a physical impossibility to comply therewith.

By reasons of such inability to comply with the terms of said contract, sales persons find that they have forfeited the said deposit for the reason that they have not worked 15 days as a working day is defined by said contract; for the same reason, payment of the difference between the commissions earned and the minimum amount contracted for is refused by respondents.
PAR. 8. The Volume Library contains a list of prominent scientists and educators who are alleged to have contributed to compiling articles and other editorial work in compiling the said book. In truth and in fact, a number of persons named as such contributors are either dead or have long since ceased to contribute to any revision of the book or never did contribute in any manner whatsoever.

The name, Educators Association, Inc., used by the corporation, and Educators Association used by the individual respondents, misleads the general public and purchasers into the belief that said Educators Association, Inc. or Educators Association, is an official organization or an association of teachers or educators. In truth and in fact, it is not an official organization nor an association of educators but solely a business enterprise organized and existing for the sale of the book "Volume Library." The sales talk which the sales persons are required to make to prospective purchasers is worded in such a fashion as to create the erroneous belief in the mind of the prospective purchaser of the book that the sales person is in some manner connected with school work and that the book itself is a necessary requirement of the school attended by children of prospective purchasers. Such representations are calculated to induce parents of school children, to purchase the book who would not make such purchases if they were truthfully informed of the fact that said Volume Library is not a book required in the school work of such child, and that there is no connection whatever between the sales person and any school or other educational organization, but that, on the contrary, it is offered for sale by a private business organization for profit.

PAR. 9. The practice of respondents to place advertisements in the "Help Wanted" columns of newspapers and teachers' magazines, the inferences contained in the advertisements that the remuneration is based on a definite salary rather than commissions, the failure to state in said advertisements that the payment of a deposit for supplies as a condition precedent to employment, the requirement, among others, of having to memorize many pages of sales material, the requirement to make a minimum of 10 calls per day, each lasting 20 minutes, the refusal to return deposits and to pay deficiency amounts under the pretext that the sales person has breached the contract, the use of the phrase "Educators Association," and the representations implying that said organization is connected with school or educational work, all have a tendency to, and do in fact, induce persons seeking work and salaried positions to apply therefor by answering respondents' said advertisements under the erroneous belief that the work offered is a position with a definite salary and is connected with teaching or similar work. Such representations further have a tendency to and do in fact induce prospective purchasers to buy said Volume Library under the erroneous belief that the said book is required in the school work of children or constitutes a necessary equipment in connection with schools; further, that the said book is edited by all of the individuals named in the book when such is not a fact.

All of said representations have a further tendency and capacity to and do in fact divert trade unfairly from competitors of respondents who are engaged in like business and otherwise to injure said competitors who do not engage in the unfair practices and methods of competition hereinabove described.

Par. 10. The above acts and things done by respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and accomplish substantial injury to substantial competitors of respondents in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 29, 1937, issued and on June 1, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents herein except Bessie Morrell, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter hearings were held and evidence was introduced before John W. Addison and William C. Reeves, trial examiners theretofore duly appointed by the Commission, by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and Townsend, Kindelberger & Campbell by E. Crosby Kindelberger, attorneys for respondents. Thereupon this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral arguments of counsel on behalf of Commission and respondents, and the Commission having duly considered said complaint, testimony, and evidence, briefs and oral arguments and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Educators Association, Inc., is a New York Corporation having its office and principal place of business at 307 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Respondents, Leo L. Tully, 307 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Oron E. Richards, 50 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill., and Donald W. Henry, 517 Garland Building, Los Angeles, Calif., are individuals who are respectively president, vice president, and second vice president of the Educators Association, Inc. Each of these officers, as such, maintains an office at the address given after his name and at the same address each also trades and does business under the trade name Educators Association. All other respondents named in the complaint except Louise Sims, C. L. MacDonald, V. B. Decker, and Sarah E. Atkinson are individuals also severally trading and doing business at their respective addresses given in paragraph 2 of the complaint under the name Educators Association.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Educators Association, Inc., in the course and conduct of its business, is and for a number of years last past has been publishing a reference book designated by it as “The Volume Library.” It causes said book to be printed and bound by a publishing firm in Chicago and sells the total output to respondent, Leo L. Tully who owns over 95 percent of its share capital.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Leo L. Tully, keeps a stock of said books in New York City and maintains shipping offices in Steubenville, Chicago, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, Dallas, and Miami. He individually enters into contracts with the other individual respondents and other persons who undertake to sell and sell said books to ultimate consumers in their respective territories through means of agents or canvassers. The number and personnel of these representatives vary with the needs of his business. About 1,500 are employed in summer and about 700 the rest of the year. In some cases they buy the books outright from said Tully and in others sell them for said Tully on a percentage basis. Each representative is required to do business under the name Educators Association registered with the proper department in the State in which the representative is doing business. They have solicited twelve to fifteen million parents of school children throughout the several States to buy said books at prices ranging from $10 to $17 a copy and have sold copies of the volume to from one to two million of such parents. The purchasers pay for the books in cash on or before delivery.

PAR. 4. As orders are taken by said representatives the books are distributed from the nearest shipping office in the territory where the respective orders are taken and are shipped to the buyers thereof located in States other than those in which said shipping offices are located and in the District of Columbia. There is and at all times herein mentioned has been a constant current in trade in said books among the several States.
Findings

PAR. 5. Respondents are and have been, in the course and conduct of their said business, in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in selling and marketing reference books in commerce among the several States.

PAR. 6. Respondents furnish each purchaser of said book a certificate of membership with the corporate seal of Educators Association, Inc., which gives him the privilege of consulting what it designated as its Bureau of Research and Service, and a guarantee subscribed "Educators Association, Inc." The corporate and trade names Educators Association, Inc., and Educators Association, as used by respondents, mislead a substantial portion of prospective purchasers into the erroneous and false belief that said corporate and trade names mean that Educators Association, Inc., and Educators Association are organizations operated by a group of teachers or educators properly so-called, united and for a common purpose other than financial gain and have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the public under such false and erroneous belief to make purchases of said volume which they would not make except for such erroneous and false belief. In truth and in fact neither Educators Association, Inc., nor Educators Association is an official organization nor an Association of altruistic educators but solely a business enterprise organized and existing for profits derived from the sale of said The Volume Library.

PAR. 7. The canvassers of respondents in some instances have gained admission to the homes of prospective purchasers by implying or stating directly that they came from the school which was attended by the child of such prospective purchasers and respondents require these canvassers to make to prospective purchasers a sales talk so worded as to mislead prospective purchasers into the erroneous and false belief that the canvassers are in some manner connected with school work and that the book itself is a necessary requirement of the school attended by children of prospective purchasers. The sales talk and the other representations made by canvassers have the capacity and tendency to induce parents of school children to purchase the book who would not make such purchases if they were truthfully informed of the fact that said Volume Library is not used as a textbook by schools and no school authorities require it to be purchased by pupils and that there is no connection whatever between the sales person and any school or other educational organization but that on the contrary it is offered for sale by a private business organization for profit.

PAR. 8. Respondents have secured canvassers through advertisements for college students or teachers in "help wanted" columns of newspapers and magazines circulating among the several States offering them a specific salary. The advertisements showed neither the name nor the business of respondents. The canvassers so secured were actually employed to sell said book to the public on a commission of 30 percent of the sales price of books sold by them. If the commissions for the period named in the advertisement did not aggregate the amount of money offered therein as salary, the difference between the commissions earned and the amount offered as salary was paid by respondents to the canvasser only if he had fulfilled certain requirements set forth in a contract which he or she had been required to sign before entering upon the sale of said books, as follows: Deposit $5.50 or other sum of money for sales equipment, returnable after 15 days or 120 hours of work, memorize a sales talk of 6,000 to 7,000 words and show by daily and weekly reports that she or he had made a minimum of 10 calls a day on prospective purchasers each call lasting a minimum of 20 minutes. Many canvassers failed to fulfill these requirements or to earn commissions aggregating the amounts offered as salary and respondents failed and refused to pay them the amounts of money necessary to cover the difference between salary offered and commissions earned. In some instances the payment was refused because the canvasser had not memorized verbatim the 6,000 to 7,000 word sales talk, although he had not at the time of signing the contract been fully advised that the memorizing of the sales talk verbatim was a necessary condition precedent to the payment. Respondents now always inform applicants before signing the contract that they must take a difficult course of training of at least 1 week of from 6 to 8 hours a day. Memorizing the sales talk is a part of the course.

Par. 9. Respondents, on many occasions, refused to return to the canvassers the amount deposited for equipment, as aforesaid, when respondents believed the canvassers had failed to comply with the contract by not making the required number of calls, by not making the calls of the required length of time or for some other reason. This practice has been changed. Respondents now agree to and do refund this deposit to the canvasser after 120 hours of work without further condition.

Par. 10. The terms of the contract of employment submitted by respondents to applicants for places as canvassers to sign, are of importance to both respondents and applicant and were customarily so represented to applicants by respondents. Respondents, in some instances, however, represented to the applicants that the contracts were mere matters of form and might be signed without a full understanding of all of its terms; and in rare instances, contrary to instructions of leading respondents, managers of respondents made verbal representations to applicants which differed from the statements contained in the contracts. Before 1933 applicants were not given copies of the contracts at the time of signing and in certain instances the managers told them they must hurry and sign the contracts if they wished to join the study class that was being formed. After 1933, copies of the contracts were given applicants at the time of signing.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, representations, and practices of respondents have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public, of competitors of respondents, and of applicants for places as canvassers for respondents, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by E. Crosby Kindelberger, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Educators Association, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondents, Leo L. Tully, Oron E. Richards, and Donald W. Henry, individually and as officers of Educators Association, Inc., Miss Marion A. Miller, Mrs. B. M. Gambert, Mrs. Marie C. Hostler, Mr. J. E. Stronks, Mr. H. Lyle Goldsberry, Mr. J. R. Hostler, Mr. J. P. Tully, Mrs. M. W. Lees, each individually, and trading under the trade name and style of Educators Association, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a students' reference book entitled, The Volume Library, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From representing through the use of the term "Educators Association" in any corporate or trade name or through any other means or device, that they, or any of them, constitute a group of educators or teachers formed into an association or that the business operated by them, or any of them, is anything other than a private business enterprise for profit.

2. Representing to prospective representatives that they will refund deposits or pay any specific sums of money or salaries to such representatives until and unless they fully and adequately disclose all of the terms and conditions upon which refunds or payments are actually made.

3. From representing or implying that they or their representatives, agents, or canvassers are connected in any manner with public schools or other educational institutions, or that said Volume Library, or any other and similar publication is prescribed as a textbook or required to be used in connection with school work.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME COMPANY, AND BEN DIAL TRADING AS DE LUXE ART STUDIO, AND DANIEL F. ORANGE AND CHARLES C. ORANGE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2548. Complaint, Sept. 11, 1935—Decision, Mar. 11, 1939

Where corporation and certain officers and certain agent or employee thereof, as variously engaged in sale and distribution of pictures and frames, namely—

I. Corporation engaged in sale of such products through groups or crews of salesmen who (1) canvassed from house to house throughout the various States to procure orders therefor, and whom it (2) supplied with standard selling and operating supplies for their use as aforesaid, and including sample selling kits, order blanks, and envelopes, and selling paraphernalia such as "lucky envelopes," used to create impression in prospect's mind that, by reason of pretended lucky "draw" or other lure, he was to be recipient of special price advantage or free picture, and (3) with catalogs containing descriptions and prices of its merchandise and also instructions and method of approach to be employed by them in contacting prospective purchasers, and representations to be made by them in offering pictures and frames, and who (4) obtained and forwarded, with said orders, snapshot or other picture of customer or member of customer's family, as a rule, together with instructions pertaining to manner in which customer desired picture made;

II. The president and vice president of said corporation, who operated, controlled, and directed its corporate affairs and activities and managed, from the corporate address, the transaction of all the office business incident to offer and sale of their pictures as herein set forth, including keeping of files, correspondence with customers and others, and collection of delinquent accounts, including action in said respect under names of fictitious finance companies made use of by them in such connection; and

III. An individual who was engaged in sale of pictures made by said corporation and of frames purchased by it from manufacturers thereof, and who, in carrying on, under trade name "De Luxe Art Studio," such business, along with others similarly engaged and employed by it, through supervision of one of said groups or crews;

In soliciting and selling such pictures and frames, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of such products and who do not sell the same through using "lucky envelopes" or misrepresenting terms and conditions of sale thereof, but truthfully representing value and quality of their products and terms and conditions of sale thereof—

(a) Represented to customers and prospective customers that the pictures which were made by said corporation were "paintings" or "finely finished paintings," through making use of latter characterization thereof in the order blanks supplied such salesmen, and through describing and referring to same as “paintings” in the sales catalogs with which it supplied such salesmen;

Facts being pictures involved were neither paintings nor finely finished paintings, but enlarged colored photographs made through enlargement of small snapshots and other similar pictures and coloring thereof through application thereto of paint in color; and

(b) Induced prospective purchasers solicited by their said salesmen and canvassers as aforesaid, to believe that, as a result of a lucky drawing they would or might procure two pictures of the value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20, as a result of their supposed good luck and the display of the pictures in a conspicuous place as a means, purportedly, of advertising the same to people living in the respective communities, and thus enabling the salesmen to sell such pictures to neighbors of the customer at the represented usual price of $40, through manipulation by salesman of envelopes from which prospective customer was induced to draw, so that prospective customer invariably drew the “lucky envelope” containing so-called “Merchandise Discount Check” setting forth that if person whose name appeared thereon agreed “to assist us in advertising, we will accept this credit check as a $20 payment on a $40 painting and will deliver to such person one additional $40 painting without additional cost”; and in a number of instances induced customers to participate in such drawings by representing that mere participation in such drawings, with no obligation on customer’s part, would secure free premium;

Facts being such alleged drawing was a fraudulent scheme conceived for sole purpose of inducing prospective purchasers to believe that if they drew a “lucky envelope” they would procure, as above, two pictures of a value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20, pictures or so-called “paintings” sold by it had a value substantially less than such represented value, and customer, after participating in such draw, was informed that free “painting” would not be delivered until he had purchased “paintings” upon which he was entitled to credit for drawing, as above set forth, and they were not conducting advertising campaigns in communities where pictures were being sold, and their said pictures were sold to all customers at uniform prices;

With result that customers were deceived into belief that they had been lucky and won distinct advantage over other customers in same locality by entering into contracts for purchase of said pictures; and

Where said individual engaged, as above set forth, in sale of said corporation’s pictures and frames under trade name employed by him, in common with others similarly supervising and working through groups or crews of salesmen, and his said salesmen, engaged as aforesaid—

(c) Represented to prospective purchasers, whom they solicited to sign contracts, that orders signed by them were merely receipts for the small photographs furnished by such customers from which enlargements were to be made, and sometimes represented such orders as either memorandum as to time of delivery or that customer was entitled to free picture;

Facts being papers signed by customers as aforesaid were binding contracts to purchase pictures or “paintings,” signed first by salesmen, described therein as “advertising salesmen,” containing memorandum of credit for drawing “lucky envelope,” provision for free “painting,” and other provisions and representations of binding nature on customer, not explained to him by salesman, and including provisions to effect that contract could not be countermanded and that verbal agreements were not recognized;

(d) Represented to prospective customers that frames sold and offered were “gold leaf” frames, and that said “gold leaf” was of high quality and of high value, and represented actual and usual value of such frames as much higher than they in fact were, and glass in many of said frames as being imported Belgium glass;

Facts being the finish thereon was not “gold leaf,” such frames were not “gold leaf” as term “gold leaf” is used and accepted in trade, but were finished with burnished bronze material of inferior value, usual and actual value thereof was substantially lower than that represented by said individual and salesmen, and glass was not imported Belgium, nor unique in quality or of high value; and

Facts being said individual did not maintain an independent studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce said portraits, enlarged and tinted, as aforesaid by such corporation, and said trade name was adopted by said corporation and said corporation’s officers and individuals in order to conceal fact that such corporation was manufacturer and distributor of the pictures, and to mislead and deceive public into belief that said individual maintained a studio of his own in which he made his own pictures;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all said false and misleading statements and representations were true, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of their pictures and frames, and trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors who truthfully represent their products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. George Foulkes for the Commission.

Mr. John Lewis Smith and Mr. James O’Connor Roberts, of Washington, D. C., for Ben Dial.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, and Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal places of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past engaged in offering for sale and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent sells its products through salesmen or representatives appointed by it as agents in its behalf, to customers, some located in the State of Illinois and others in other States of the United States. Pursuant to such sales, shipments are made by respondents from its place of business in Illinois to such customers in States other than the State of Illinois.

The respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, is and at all times hereinafter mentioned has been an individual trading under the name of DeLuxe Art Studio with his principal place of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is engaged in the business of selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs. The sales are made through salesmen or representatives appointed by said respondent as agents in his behalf, to the general public throughout the United States, and pursuant to said sales, shipments are made by said respondent from his place of business in Chicago to purchasers, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

The respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, are, respectively, president and vice president of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., with their principal place of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Both in his individual capacity and as an officer of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondent, Daniel F. Orange, acts as the agent of the respondent, Ben Dial, trading as the DeLuxe Art Studio, at the above-stated address, or as an agent of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. Both in his individual capacity and as an officer of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondent, Charles C. Orange, is and has been actively engaged as agent and manager of the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., a fictitious name used by the respondent, Ben Dial, for the purpose of impressing debtors in the collection of delinquent accounts. The present address of the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., is 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

In the course and conduct of their aforesaid respective businesses, the respondents are in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In offering for sale and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof employ salesmen or agents to canvass from house to house in various cities located in the several States of the United States, for the purpose of contacting purchasers of the said products. Respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, has direct charge and supervision over the aforesaid agents or salesmen. When orders are obtained from customers by said agents or salesmen, they are forwarded to a supervisor who in turn forwards the order for portraits and frames, if frames are ordered, to the respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., or to the respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio. The respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., or the respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually or as agents of respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, thereupon open the correspondence containing the orders addressed as aforesaid, manufacture the portraits so ordered and mail them to the supervisor or the agents or salesmen who procured said orders.

The respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually, the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., and the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., occupy the same offices at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. The files and records and the books of account of the respondent, Ben Dial, are maintained in the said offices. Respondent, Daniel F. Orange, has charge of the books of account and records of respondent, Ben Dial, supervises and maintains the same, and answers all complaints of customers, and makes all adjustments with customers, in connection with the sale of frames and tinted enlargements and photographs sold by the respondent, Ben Dial, his agents, or salesmen, and the respondents, their agents, or salesmen.

In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Ben Dial, and all of the aforesaid respondents, employ the term, “Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc.,” a fictitious name, for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts. When a customer orders a tinted enlargement of a photograph termed by the respondents’ agents as a “painting” and fails to pay for the same upon delivery, a form letter is sent to the customers upon the stationery of the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., by the respondent, Charles C. Orange. When a series of the form letters fail to effect a payment in full from the said delinquent customer, a letter is sent out from the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., also located in the offices at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. These letters are signed by Charles C. Orange. The Moorg Collection Agency is likewise a fictitious name possessing no assets, no bank account, and is solely a device used by the respondent, Ben Dial, and all the aforesaid respondents, for inducing by fear an immediate payment.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, in the manufacture, soliciting the sale of, and selling of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, the respective respondents, through salesmen or representatives appointed by them as agents in their behalf, and as an inducement to prospective customers to purchase their portraits or “paintings,” represent the actual value of said portraits or “paintings” to be much greater than they in fact are, and represent the usual prices to be far in excess of the prices at which said portraits actually sell, and then offer the said prospective customers pretended special prices which are usually much less than the represented actual value and usual prices of said portraits or “paintings.” Such pretended special prices for such portraits or “paintings” are made upon the claimed consideration that such prospective customers will recommend the portraits and advertise the businesses of respondents in the respective communities in which they live, and by inducing prospective customers to participate in a drawing for a so-called “lucky envelope” from a number of envelopes carried by agents of the respondents for that purpose, the greater number of which envelopes contain copies which purport to entitle those drawing the same to discounts from the represented usual prices of portraits or “paintings” sold by respondents, and such drawings are so manipulated by agents of respondents that each prospective customer receives one of the said “lucky envelopes.” The agents and salesmen of the respondents represent to prospective customers, in order to induce such customers to participate in the drawing of a “lucky envelope,” that upon such drawing the customer will receive a free portrait or “painting,” when in truth and in fact the prices represented by the respondents to be the actual and usual values of their portraits or "paintings" do not indicate the true value nor actual value nor usual value of said portraits. The prices represented by the respondents to be the usual prices of their portraits or "paintings" are fictitious and misleading and are calculated to, and actually do mislead and deceive purchasers as to the values of said portraits or "paintings" and their usual selling prices, and mislead and deceive them into the belief that they are obtaining said portraits at prices substantially below their usual selling prices, and below their true values or worth when they buy at the pretended special prices offered by respondents. The offer of the alleged free picture to the customer by the respondents is in truth and in fact a misrepresentation, in that the customer is advised after and not before the drawing that he will not be entitled to the alleged free picture until the customer has purchased the portrait or "painting" upon which he is entitled to a credit for drawing a so-called "lucky envelope." In truth and in fact, the price paid by the customer for the portrait or "painting" he contracts to buy also includes the cost of the portrait or "painting" he is told he is to receive free of charge.

Par. 4. The respondents further, in the course of their said businesses, fraudulently induce persons to whom they furnish tinted enlargements of photographs to sign a contract to purchase said reproductions upon the false representation that said contract is merely a receipt for the small photographs from which enlargements are to be "painted," obtained from the customers or a memorandum as to the time of delivery of the said portrait or "painting" or a memorandum that the customer is entitled to a free picture or "painting" or a memorandum. In truth and in fact the document or paper signed by the customer, as aforesaid, is a binding contract to purchase such reproductions containing memorandum of credit for the drawing of a "lucky envelope" and a provision for a free picture and like other provisions, which instrument is first signed by the agent for respondents, who is falsely described in such contract as "advertising salesman," and which contract contains numerous provisions and representations of a binding nature on the customers which are not explained to or understood by said customers, among which are provisions to the effect that such contract cannot be countermanded, and that verbal agreements are not recognized.

Par. 5. The aforesaid respondents further, in the conduct of their said businesses, cause their agents to call upon prospective customers and to represent to said customers that the finished enlargement offered for sale is an oil painting, or a painting, when in truth and in fact the said tinted enlargement of a photograph is not an oil painting, or a painting, but is an enlarged photograph tinted with oil by a method known in the trade as the "air brush method." The term "oil painting" is a well-established term and recognized as such among artists and the general public to designate and denominate an object created on a blank surface by the use of oil and by free hand. A tinted or colored enlargement of a photograph is not a "painting" as that term is used and accepted by members of the industry and the general public. The use by the said respondents of the words "painting" and "oil painting" has had and still has the tendency and capacity to deceive, and has deceived and still deceives customers and prospective customers into the belief that the portraits which they will receive will be and are oil paintings, and to purchase said portraits from said respondents in such erroneous belief.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid respondents, further, in the conduct of their said businesses, cause their said agents to call upon prospective customers and to represent to said customers that the frames which the respondents sell are "gold leaf" frames, and that the said "gold leaf" is of high quality and of high value, and represent the actual and usual value of said frames to be much higher than they in fact are, and represent that the glass in said frames is imported Belgium glass, whereas in truth and in fact the said finish on the said frames designated by the respondents as "gold leaf" is not a finish of high value, nor is the said glass imported from Belgium, but on the contrary the prices represented by the respondents to be the actual values and the usual values of said frames do not indicate such values and in truth and in fact said glass is manufactured in the United States. That the frames represented by the respondents to be "gold leaf" frames are not in fact frames finished with "gold leaf" nor are they "gold leaf" frames as the term "gold leaf" is used and accepted in the trade, but are frames finished with burnished bronze. The use by the said respondents, as aforesaid, of the words "gold leaf" and the representation of quality and value, and that the glass is imported, made by the respondents concerning such frames, have had and still have the tendency and capacity to deceive, have deceived and still deceive customers and prospective customers into the belief that the said frames which they are to receive will be finished in "gold leaf" and will be "gold leaf" frames of high value, and that the glass is unique and of high value, and to purchase the said frames in such erroneous belief.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their businesses as aforesaid, the respondents, or more specifically, the respondent Ben Dial trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, in soliciting the sale of and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, have adopted in years last past and used and still adopt and use as and for a trade name the words "DeLuxe Art Studio" under which to carry on business. Salesmen in the employ of the respondents use said designated trade name in soliciting orders from customers. Letterheads feature the said trade name and the added phrase "Artists and Creators of the Original DeLuxe Paintings." Envelopes, invoices, credit slips, receipts, statements, and other printed material used by said respondents feature the trade name, DeLuxe Art Studio. The term, "Art Studio," is a standard and accepted term and recognized as such among the trade and the general public to designate and denominate a studio or workshop in which an artist applies his art. In truth and in fact the said respondents or the respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, does not maintain an independent studio termed the DeLuxe Art Studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce the said portraits, but the said portraits are enlarged and tinted by the respondent, The Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. The use of such term as aforesaid by the respondents or the respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, is calculated to deceive and mislead, and does deceive and mislead customers and prospective customers into the belief that the said respondents trading as the DeLuxe Art Studio maintain a studio called the DeLuxe Art Studio in which they employ artists who paint or produce the paintings or portraits ordered by said customers, and to purchase the said paintings or portraits in such erroneous belief.

Par. 8. There are among the competitors of the respondents, described in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs who do not employ and maintain the practices as set forth in paragraphs 3 to 7 of this complaint, but who truthfully represent their products and honestly vend the same, and there are also among the competitors of the respondent corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons engaged in the business of painting portraits who truthfully represent their products as being paintings.

Par. 9. The use by the respondents of the said practices as set forth in paragraphs 2 to 7 of this complaint unfairly diverts trade from their competitors and thereby substantial injury has been done and is being done by respondents to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

Par. 10. The acts and practices set forth in paragraphs 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 hereof are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 11, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, and Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by James O'Connor Roberts and Frederic L. Goff, attorneys for respondents, before John L. Hornor and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said Complaint, the answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling pictures and frames.

Respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, are, respectively president and vice president of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., and as such operate, control, and direct its corporate affairs and activities.
Findings

Respondent Ben Dial is an individual engaged in the business of selling pictures manufactured by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. Respondent Ben Dial also sells frames for said company which the company purchases from manufacturers of picture frames. Respondent Ben Dial's office is also located at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The office business of all the respondents named herein, such as the keeping of files, correspondence with customers and others, and the collecting of delinquent accounts, is handled by respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange at this address.

Respondents cause said pictures and frames, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments are made.

Respondents are now and have been in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing pictures and frames in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. sells its products through salesmen who canvass from house to house throughout the various States of the United States for the purpose of procuring orders for respondent's pictures and frames.

In order to sell its pictures and frames, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. makes use of the services of certain salesmen who organize and supervise groups or what are known in the trade as "crews" of salesmen. These individual salesmen who organize and supervise groups or "crews" of salesmen maintain their offices at the place of business of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Said individual salesmen usually accompany their groups or "crews" of salesmen and assist them in their selling efforts as they go from place to place obtaining orders for pictures and frames.

Each salesman is furnished by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. with standard selling and operating supplies for use by them in soliciting orders for pictures and frames. These supplies consist of sample selling kits, order blanks, order envelopes, and various other selling paraphernalia such as "lucky envelopes."

Respondent Ben Dial, in selling the products of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., had under his supervision one of the said groups or "crews" of salesmen, and during the time herein mentioned sold a substantial number of pictures and frames throughout the various States of the United States. Respondent Ben Dial, in soliciting orders for pictures and frames and in the conduct of his selling activities, used the trade name DeLuxe Art Studio.

Respondent Ben Dial, together with other salesmen who likewise operated groups or "crews" of salesmen engaged in selling the products of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., made use of such a trade name, and on all order blanks and business stationery designated the office address of the DeLuxe Art Studio as 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

In soliciting the services of salesmen, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. causes to be printed and issued to persons interested in selling its products various types of catalogs which set forth descriptions and prices of its merchandise. On the cover pages of said catalogs the following labels appear in large print:

The Company That Helps Agents
Consolidated Portrait and Frame Company,
The Company That Helps Agents

In said catalogs, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. sets forth the selling technique to be employed by salesmen in offering for sale and selling its products to customers. In this way salesmen are instructed by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. in the method of approach to be employed by them in contacting prospective purchasers and in the representations to be made by them in offering pictures and frames for sale.

Orders for the pictures and frames are solicited from customers and prospective customers in the following manner:

Respondent Ben Dial and salesmen obtain from each customer a small snapshot picture or other picture, which is usually a picture of the customer or of a member of the customer's family, and forward the same to respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., together with an order signed by the customer and a small envelope upon which are written by the salesmen the instructions of the customer pertaining to the manner in which the customer desires the picture to be made.

Thereupon a picture is made by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. from the small snapshot or other picture in accordance with the instructions set forth on the order envelope, and the same is then forwarded by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. to respondent Ben Dial and salesmen for delivery to the customer. In a number of instances, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. shipped the picture directly to the customer.

Payment for the pictures and frames is made by said customers to salesmen either in cash or part cash. If the customer at the time of signing an order for pictures or frames pays only a part of the purchase price of said merchandise, he signs a promissory note for the unpaid balance. The promissory note used by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. and respondent Ben Dial and salesman is a form of negotiable note which bears the name of the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., as payee. The Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., is a trade name used by respondents with its address also designated as 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Said finance company possesses no bank account or other assets and is merely a trade name used by respondents for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts.

If said promissory note is not paid upon maturity by the customer, respondents send a form letter to said customer upon the stationery of the Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., demanding payment of the same. If the promissory note still remains unpaid, further notices are sent by respondents to said customer upon the stationery and letterhead of the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., which notices also demand payment. The Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., is also a trade name used by respondents for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts.

All of the correspondence by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., respondent Ben Dial, DeLuxe Art Studio, Great Eastern Finance Co., Not Inc., and Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., is handled by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. in its office at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange answer all letters addressed to all of the above-named firms or individuals on the letterheads of said firms or individuals.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents represented to customers and prospective customers that the pictures which are manufactured by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. are "paintings" or "finely finished portraits."

These representations are made in various ways. On the order blanks with which the salesmen were supplied by respondents, as hereinabove set forth, and which were signed by customers when ordering one of respondents’ pictures, a picture is described as a "painting" or "finely finished painting." Said order blanks read as follows:
You will please make for the undersigned from the photograph delivered to your advertising salesman this day finely finished painting (how many) and deliver the same to me on or about the day of The price of the painting is $.

In various statements made in the sales catalogs used by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. for the purpose above set forth said pictures are described as "paintings." The following are examples of such statements but are not all inclusive:

To begin with, you want to arouse a desire on the part of the prospect for one of these paintings.

In nine cases out of ten, the paintings, themselves, in your sample case, will create this desire.

In truth and in fact, respondents' products are not paintings and are not finely finished paintings but are enlarged photographs colored.

Respondents' products are made by enlarging small snapshot pictures and other similar pictures and coloring the enlargements.

Paint and coloring are applied to the enlarged photographic outline.

The testimony shows and the Commission finds that a painting, as understood by photographers who color photographs, and by artists who paint pictures, is an original representation by a painter or artist of a design, image, or object on a surface by means of paint, either pastel, water color, or oil; a freehand image painted directly on the surface without the intervention of any mechanical means such as a camera.

Par. 4. Further, in offering for sale and in selling their pictures, respondents use the so-called "lucky envelope device." Salesmen who canvass from house to house soliciting orders are supplied by respondents with a number of small envelopes, the greater number of which contain a so-called "Merchandise Discount Check" which purports to entitle the person who "draws" one to two "paintings" having a usual selling price of $40 each at the special price of $20. Said Merchandise Discount Check has the following statements thereon:

Special Check—If the person whose name appears on this check agrees to assist us in advertising, we will accept this credit check as a Twenty Dollar payment on a $40 painting and will deliver to such person one additional $40 painting without additional cost.

Prospective customers are induced to "draw" an envelope from a number of envelopes in order to obtain the lucky envelope containing the so-called Merchandise Discount Check. The envelopes from which the customers are induced to "draw" are manipulated by the salesman in such a manner that each prospective customer draws a lucky envelope containing the so-called Merchandise Discount Check.
Findings

In a number of instances salesmen induced customers to participate in a drawing for a lucky envelope by representing to them that upon merely participating in the “draw,” with no obligation on the customer’s part, the customer would secure a free “painting.” After the customer participated in the “draw,” he would be informed by the salesman that the “painting” he would get free would not be delivered until the customer purchased the paintings upon which he was entitled to a credit for drawing the so-called lucky envelope containing the Merchandise Discount Check.

The Commission finds that the pictures or “paintings” sold by respondents have a value substantially less than the represented value of $40. The Commission further finds that the respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. enabled respondent Ben Dial and the salesmen working under his supervision to mislead and deceive purchasers by supplying them with the aforesaid sales device. The Commission finds that the alleged “drawing” is a fraudulent scheme conceived for the sole purpose and with the result of inducing prospective purchasers to believe that if they draw a lucky envelope they will procure two pictures of the value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20. In fact, however, every prospective purchaser is approached in the same way and all pay the same price. By means of this scheme members of the purchasing public are beguiled into believing that they are the exceptional few whom fortune has favored.

Par. 5. Customers were also led to believe by statements of respondents’ salesmen and statements printed on the so-called Merchandise Discount Checks that if they displayed the pictures in a conspicuous place and thereby advertised said pictures to people living in their communities, the salesmen would thereby be able to sell said pictures to neighbors of said customers at the represented usual price of $40. The Commission finds that respondents and their salesmen did not conduct and were not conducting advertising campaigns in the communities where the pictures were sold, and that respondents’ pictures were sold to all customers at a uniform price. As a result of the representations made by salesmen in connection with the “drawing,” customers were deceived into believing that they had been lucky and had won a distinct advantage over other customers in the same locality by entering into contracts for the purchase of respondents’ pictures.

Par. 6. Respondent Ben Dial and salesmen induced persons from whom they solicited orders for pictures to sign contracts to purchase said pictures by representing to such persons that orders signed by them were merely receipts for the small photographs furnished by such persons from which enlargements were to be made. Ofttimes said salesmen, instead of representing said order blanks as "receipts," represented the same to be either a memorandum as to the time of delivery of said picture, or a memorandum that the customer was entitled to a free picture.

In truth and in fact, the papers signed by the aforesaid customers were binding contracts to purchase pictures or "paintings." All such contracts contained a memorandum of credit for drawing a "lucky envelope" and a provision for a free "painting" and other provisions. Said orders were first signed by the salesman, who is described in such contract as an "advertising salesman." The order blanks also contained numerous other provisions and representations of a binding nature on the customer, which were not explained to the customer by the salesman, among which were provisions to the effect that such contract could not be countermanded and that verbal agreements are not recognized.

PAR. 7. Respondent Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, sold frames of many different qualities and designs.

Salesmen called upon prospective customers and represented to said customers that frames which they sold and offered for sale were "gold leaf" frames, and that the said "gold leaf" was of high quality and of high value. They also represented the actual value and usual value of such frames to be much higher than they in fact were. They also represented the glass in many of said frames to be imported Belgium glass.

In truth and in fact, the finish on said frames was not a "gold leaf" finish, nor were the frames "gold leaf" frames as the term "gold leaf" is used and accepted in the trade. Said frames were frames finished with burnished bronze, a material of inferior value.

The usual and actual value of said frames was substantially lower than the value represented by respondent Ben Dial and salesmen.

The glass in said frames was not imported Belgium glass, nor was it unique in quality or of high value.

PAR. 8. Respondent Ben Dial, in soliciting the sale of and selling frames and pictures, has adopted, and used as and for a trade name, the words "DeLuxe Art Studio" with which to carry on business.

Respondent Ben Dial used said designated trade name in soliciting orders from customers. Letterheads feature the said trade name and added phrase "Artists and Creators of the Original DeLuxe Paintings."

The term "Art Studio" is a standard and accepted term and recognized as such among the trade and the general public to designate and denominate a studio or workshop in which an artist applies his art.

In truth and in fact, respondent Ben Dial does not maintain an independent studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce portraits, but the said portraits are enlarged and tinted by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. The name DeLuxe Art Studio is a name adopted by all of the respondents in order to conceal the fact that respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. is the manufacturer and distributor of the pictures, and to mislead and deceive the public into believing that respondent Ben Dial maintains a studio of his own in which he manufactures his own pictures.

Par. 9. In the course and conduct of their business, said respondents were and are in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of frames and pictures in commerce as herein set-out, who did not and do not sell their products by using "lucky envelopes," nor misrepresent the terms and conditions of sale of their pictures and frames, but who truthfully represent the value and quality of their products and truthfully represent the terms and conditions of sale of their said pictures and frames.

Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondents in offering for sale and selling pictures and frames had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous belief induced by the false and misleading statements and representations herein referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who truthfully represent their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

L. Hornor and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission therefore duly designated by it, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by George Foulkes, counsel for the Commission, and John Nash and James O'Connor Roberts, attorneys for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and its officers, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually and as officers of Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., and Ben Dial, an individual trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, and their respective representatives, salesman, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of colored or tinted photographs or enlargements having a photographic base, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or in any other manner that colored or tinted photographs or photographic enlargements are paintings or "finely finished paintings."

2. Using the term "painting" either alone or in conjunction with any other terms or words in any way to designate, describe, or refer to colored or tinted photographs, or photographic enlargements or other pictures produced from a photographic base or impression.

3. Representing that respondents, or any of them, are conducting a special campaign or advertising campaign in any particular place or locality for the purpose of obtaining customers who will exhibit their pictures, or for any other purpose, unless such campaign is in fact then being conducted in such locality for such purpose.

4. Representing, through use of the "draw" or through the use of "lucky" envelopes, special discount checks, blanks, slips, coupons, or certificates, or through the use of any other device, plan, or scheme, or special advertising offer, that any customer would thereby obtain a financial advantage or be entitled to receive any picture free or receive a substantial discount, or reduction in the price of any picture or pictures.

5. Representing as the customary and regular prices or values for such pictures, prices and values which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said pictures are regularly and customarily sold.

It is further ordered, That respondent, Ben Dial, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, his servants, agents, and salesmen, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of colored or tinted photographs or enlargements having a photographic base, and frames therefor, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that order blanks signed by purchasers are other than contracts for the purchase of a picture or pictures.

2. Using the term “gold leaf” or any other term of similar import and meaning to designate or describe frames finished in burnished bronze or materials other than “gold leaf.”

3. Representing, by use of a trade name containing the term “Art Studio,” or by use of any other name, or through any other means or device, that respondent, Ben Dial, owns, maintains, or operates a studio in which pictures are made by artists.

4. Representing that the domestic glass used in said frames is imported glass, or is superior in quality and value to its actual quality and value.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days from service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

The president and vice president of said corporation, who operated, controlled, and directed its corporate affairs and activities and managed, from the corporate address, the transaction of all the office business incident to offer and sale of their pictures as herein set forth, including keeping of files, correspondence with customers and others, and collection of delinquent accounts, including action in said respect under names of fictitious finance companies made use of by them in such connection; and

III. An individual who was engaged in sale of pictures made by said corporation and of frames purchased by it from manufacturers thereof, and who, in carrying on, under trade name "De Luxe Art Studio," such business, along with others similarly engaged and employed by it, through supervision of one of said groups or crews.

In soliciting and selling such pictures and frames, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of such products and who do not sell the same through using "lucky envelopes" or misrepresenting terms and conditions of sale thereof, but truthfully represent value and quality of their products and terms and conditions of sale thereof—

(a) Represented to customers and prospective customers that the pictures which were made by said corporation were "paintings" or "finely finished paintings," through making use of latter characterization thereof in the order blanks supplied such salesmen, and through describing and referring to same as "paintings" in the sales catalogs with which it supplied such salesmen;
Facts being pictures involved were neither paintings nor finely finished paintings, but enlarged colored photographs made through enlargement of small snapshots and other similar pictures and coloring same through application thereto of paint in color; and

(b) Induced prospective purchasers solicited by their said salesmen and canvassers as aforesaid, to believe that, as a result of a lucky drawing they would or might procure two pictures of the value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20, as a result of their supposed good luck and the display of the pictures in a conspicuous place as a means, purportedly, of advertising the same to people living in the respective communities, and thus enabling the salesmen to sell such pictures to neighbors of the customer at the represented usual price of $40, through manipulation by salesman of envelopes from which prospective customer was induced to draw, so that prospective customer invariably drew the “lucky envelope” containing so-called “Merchandise Discount Check” setting forth that if person whose name appeared thereon agreed “to assist us in advertising, we will accept this credit check as a Twenty Dollar payment on a $40 painting and will deliver to such person one additional $40 painting without additional cost,” and in a number of instances induced customers to participate in such drawings by representing that mere participation in such drawings, with no obligation on customer’s part, would secure free premium;

Facts being such alleged drawing was fraudulent scheme conceived for sole purpose of inducing prospective purchasers to believe that if they drew a “lucky envelope” they would procure, as above, two pictures of a value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20, pictures or so-called “paintings” sold by it had a value substantially less than such represented value, and customer, after participating in such draw, was informed that free “painting” would not be delivered until he had purchased “painting” upon which he was entitled to credit for drawing, as above set forth, and they were not conducting advertising campaigns in communities where pictures were being sold, and their said pictures were sold to all customers at uniform prices;

With result that customers were deceived into belief that they had been lucky and won distinct advantage over other customers in same locality by entering into contracts for purchase of said pictures; and

Where said individual engaged, as above set forth, in sale of said corporation’s pictures and frames under trade name employed by him, in common with others similarly supervising and working through groups or crews of salesmen, and his said salesmen, engaged as aforesaid—

(c) Represented to prospective purchasers, whom they solicited to sign contracts, that orders signed by them were merely receipts for the small photographs furnished by such customers from which enlargements were to be made, and sometimes represented such order as either memorandum as to time of delivery or that customer was entitled to free picture;

Facts being papers signed by customers as aforesaid were binding contracts to purchase pictures or “paintings,” signed first by salesmen, described therein as “advertising salesmen,” containing memorandum of credit for drawing “lucky envelope,” provision for free “painting,” and other provisions and representations of binding nature on customer, not explained to him by salesman, and including provisions to effect that contract could not be countermanded and that verbal agreements were not recognized;
(d) Represented to prospective customers that frames sold and offered were "gold leaf" frames, and that said "gold leaf" was of high quality and of high value, and represented actual and usual value of such frames as much higher than they in fact were, and glass in many of said frames as being imported Belgium glass;

Facts being the finish thereon was not "gold leaf," such frames were not "gold leaf" as term "gold leaf" is used and accepted in trade, but were finished with burnished bronze material of inferior value, usual and actual value thereof was substantially lower than that represented by said individual and salesmen, and glass was not imported Belgium, nor unique in quality or of high value; and

Facts being said individual did not maintain an independent studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce said portraits, enlarged and tinted as aforesaid, by such corporation, and said trade name was adopted by said corporation and said corporation's officers and individuals in order to conceal fact that such corporation was manufacturer and distributor of the pictures, and to mislead and deceive public into belief that said individual maintained a studio of his own in which he made his own pictures;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all said false and misleading statements and representations were true, and with result that public, acting under mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of their pictures and frames, and trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors who truthfully represent their products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor and Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiners. Mr. George Foulkes for the Commission.

Mr. John Lewis Smith and Mr. James O'Connor Roberts, of Washington, D. C., for Paul Broyle.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, and Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past engaged in offering for sale and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent sells its products through salesmen or representatives appointed by it as agents in its behalf, to customers, some located in the State of Illinois and others in other States of the United States. Pursuant to such sales, shipments are made by respondent from its place of business in Illinois to such customers in States other than the State of Illinois.

The respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, is and at all times hereinafter mentioned has been an individual trading under the name of DeLuxe Art Studio with his principal place of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is engaged in the business of selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs. The sales are made through salesmen or representatives appointed by said respondent as agents in his behalf, to the general public throughout the United States, and pursuant to said sales, shipments are made by said respondent from his place of business in Chicago to purchasers, some located in the State of Illinois and others located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

The respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, are, respectively, president and vice president of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., with their principal place of business and office at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Both in his individual capacity and as an officer of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondent, Daniel F. Orange, acts as the agent of the respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as the DeLuxe Art Studio, at the above stated address, or as an agent of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. Both in his individual capacity and as an officer of the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondent, Charles C. Orange, is and has been actively engaged as agent and manager of the Midwest Finance Co., Not Inc., a fictitious name used by the respondent, Paul Broyle, for the purpose of impressing debtors in the collection of delinquent accounts. The present address of the Midwest Finance Co., Not Inc., is 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

In the course and conduct of their aforesaid respective businesses, the respondents are in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In offering for sale and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof employ salesmen or agents to canvass from house to house in various cities located in the several States of the United States, for the purpose of contacting purchasers of the said products. Respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, has direct charge and supervision over the aforesaid agents or salesmen. When orders are obtained from customers by said agents or salesmen, they are forwarded to a supervisor who in turn forwards the order for portraits and frames, if frames are ordered, to the respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., or to the respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio. The respondent, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., or the respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually, or as agents of respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, thereupon open the correspondence containing the orders addressed as aforesaid, manufacture the portraits so ordered, and mail them to the supervisor or the agents or salesmen who procured said orders.

The respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., the respondents, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually, the Midwest Finance Co., Not Inc., and the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., occupy the same offices at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. The files and records and the books of account of the respondent, Paul Broyle, are maintained in the said offices. Respondent, Daniel F. Orange, has charge of the books of account and records of respondent, Paul Broyle, supervises and maintains the same, and answers all complaints of customers, and makes all adjustments with customers, in connection with the sale of frames and tinted enlargements and photographs sold by the respondent, Paul Broyle, his agents or salesmen, and the respondents, their agents or salesmen.

In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent, Paul Broyle, and all of the aforesaid respondents, employ the term, "Midwest Finance Company, Not Inc.", a fictitious name, for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts. When a customer orders a tinted enlargement of a photograph termed by the respondents' agents as a "painting" and fails to pay for the same upon delivery, a form letter is sent to the customers upon the stationery of the Mid­west Finance Co., Not Inc., by the respondent, Charles C. Orange. When a series of the form letters fail to effect a payment in full from the said delinquent customer, a letter is sent out from the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., also located in the offices at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. These letters are signed by Charles C. Orange. The Moorg Collection Agency is likewise a fictitious name possessing no assets, no bank account, and is solely a device used by the respondent, Paul Broyle, and all the aforesaid respondents, for inducing by fear an immediate payment.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, in the manufacture, soliciting the sale of, and selling of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, the respective respondents, through salesmen or representatives appointed by them as agents in their behalf, and as an inducement to prospective customers to purchase their portraits or "paintings," represent the actual value of said portraits or "paintings" to be much greater than they in fact are, and represent the usual prices to be far in excess of the prices at which said portraits actually sell, and then offer the said prospective customers pretended special prices which are usually much less than the represented actual value and usual prices of said portraits or "paintings." Such pretended special prices for such portraits or "paintings" are made upon the claimed consideration that such prospective customers will recommend the portraits and advertise the business of respondents in the respective communities in which they live, and by inducing prospective customers to participate in a drawing for a so-called "lucky envelope" from a number of envelopes carried by agents of the respondents for that purpose, the greater number of which envelopes contain copies which purport to entitle those drawing the same to discounts from the represented usual prices of portraits or "paintings" sold by respondents, and such drawings are so manipu­lated by agents or respondents that each prospective customer re­ceives one of the said "lucky envelopes." The agents and salesmen of the respondents represent to prospective customers, in order to induce such customers to participate in the drawing of a "lucky envelope," that upon such drawing the customer will receive a free portrait or "painting," when in truth and in fact the prices repre­sented by the respondents to be the actual and usual values of their portraits or "paintings" do not indicate the true value nor actual value nor usual value of said portraits. The prices represented by the respondents to be the usual prices of their portraits or "paintings" are fictitious and misleading and are calculated to, and actually do disable and deceive purchasers as to the values of said portraits or “paintings” and their usual selling prices, and mislead and deceive them into the belief that they are obtaining said portraits at prices substantially below their usual selling prices, and below their true values or worth when they buy at the pretended special prices offered by respondents. The offer of the alleged free picture to the customer by the respondents is in truth and in fact a misrepresentation, in that the customer is advised after and not before the drawing that he will not be entitled to the alleged free picture until the customer has purchased the portrait or “painting” upon which he is entitled to a credit for drawing a so-called “lucky envelope.” In truth and in fact, the price paid by the customer for the portrait or “painting” he contracts to buy also includes the cost of the portrait or “painting” he is told he is to receive free of charge.

Par. 4. The respondents further, in the course of their said businesses, fraudulently induce persons to whom they furnish tinted enlargements of photographs to sign a contract to purchase said reproductions upon the false representation that said contract is merely a receipt for the small photographs from which enlargements are to be “painted,” obtained from the customers or a memorandum as to the time of delivery of the said portrait or “painting” or a memorandum that the customer is entitled to a free picture or “painting” or a memo-dandum. In truth and in fact the document or paper signed by the customer, as aforesaid, is a binding contract to purchase such reproductions containing memorandum of credit for the drawing of a “lucky envelope” and a provision for a free picture and like other provisions, which instrument is first signed by the agent for respondents, who is falsely described in such contract as “advertising salesman,” and which contract contains numerous provisions and representations of a binding nature on the customers which are not explained to or understood by said customers, among which are provisions to the effect that such contract cannot be countermanded, and that verbal agreements are not recognized.

Par. 5. The aforesaid respondents further, in the conduct of their said businesses, cause their agents to call upon prospective customers and to represent to said customers that the finished enlargement offered for sale is an oil painting, or a painting, when in truth and in fact the said tinted enlargement of a photograph is not an oil painting, or a painting, but is an enlarged photograph tinted with oil by a method known in the trade as the “air brush method.” The term “oil painting” is a well-established term and recognized as such among artists and the general public to designate and denominate an object created on a blank surface by the use of oil and by free hand. A tinted or colored enlargement of a photograph is not a "painting" as that term is used and accepted by members of the industry and the general public. The use by the said respondents of the words "painting" and "oil painting" has had and still has the tendency and capacity to deceive, and has deceived and still deceives customers and prospective customers into the belief that the said frames which they are to receive will be finished in "gold leaf" and will be "gold leaf" frames of high value, and that the glass is unique and of high value, and to purchase the said frames in such erroneous belief.

Par. 6. The aforesaid respondents, further, in the conduct of their said businesses, cause their said agents to call upon prospective customers and to represent to said customers that the frames which the respondents sell are "gold leaf" frames, and that the said "gold leaf" is of high quality and of high value, and represent the actual and usual value of said frames to be much higher than they in fact are, and represent that the glass in said frames is imported Belgium glass, whereas in truth and in fact the said finish on the said frames designated by the respondents as "gold leaf" is not a finish of high value, nor is the said glass imported from Belgium, but on the contrary the prices represented by the respondents to be the actual values and the usual values of said frames do not indicate such values and in truth and in fact said glass is manufactured in the United States. That the frames represented by the respondents to be "gold leaf" frames are not in fact frames finished with "gold leaf" nor are they "gold leaf" frames as the term "gold leaf" is used and accepted in the trade, but are frames finished with burnished bronze. The use by the said respondents, as aforesaid, of the words "gold leaf" and the representation of quality and value, and that the glass is imported, made by the respondents concerning such frames, have had and still have the tendency and capacity to deceive, and have deceived and still deceive customers and prospective customers into the belief that the said frames which they are to receive will be finished in "gold leaf" and will be "gold leaf" frames of high value, and that the glass is unique and of high value, and to purchase the said frames in such erroneous belief.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of their businesses as aforesaid, the respondents, or more specifically, the respondent Paul Broyle trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, in soliciting the sale of and selling frames and tinted enlargements of photographs, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, have adopted in years last past and used and still adopt and use as and for a trade name the words "DeLuxe Art Studio" under which to carry on business. Salesmen in the employ of the respondents use said designated trade name in soliciting orders from customers. Letterheads feature the said trade name and the added phrase “Artists and Creators of The Original DeLuxe Paintings.” Envelopes, invoices, credit slips, receipts, statements, and other printed material used by said respondents feature the trade name, DeLuxe Art Studio. The term, “Art Studio,” is a standard and accepted term and recognized as such among the trade and the general public to designate and denominate a studio or workshop in which an artist applies his art. In truth and in fact the said respondents or the respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, does not maintain an independent studio termed the DeLuxe Art Studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce the said portraits, but the said portraits are enlarged and tinted by the respondent, The Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. The use of such term as aforesaid by the respondents or the respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, is calculated to deceive and mislead, and does deceive and mislead customers and prospective customers into the belief that the said respondents trading as the DeLuxe Art Studio maintain a studio called the DeLuxe Art Studio in which they employ artists who paint or produce the paintings or portraits ordered by said customers, and to purchase the said paintings or portraits in such erroneous belief.

Par. 8. There are among the competitors of the respondents, described in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of frames and tinted enlargements of photographs who do not employ and maintain the practices as set forth in paragraphs 3 to 7 of this complaint, but who truthfully represent their products and honestly vend the same, and there are also among the competitors of the respondent corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons engaged in the business of painting portraits who truthfully represent their product as being paintings.

Par. 9. The use by the respondents of the said practices as set forth in paragraphs 2 to 7 of this complaint unfairly diverts trade from their competitors and thereby substantial injury has been done and is being done by respondents to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

Par. 10. The acts and practices set forth in paragraphs 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 hereof are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents’ competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”
Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 11, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and Paul Broyle, trading as De Luxe Art Studio, and Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by James O'Connor Roberts and Frederic L. Goff, attorneys for respondents, before John L. Horner and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 100 South Jefferson Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling pictures and frames.

Respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange are, respectively, president and vice president of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., and as such operate, control, and direct its corporate affairs and activities.

Respondent Paul Broyle is an individual engaged in the business of selling pictures manufactured by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. Respondent Paul Broyle also sells frames for said company which the Company purchases from manufacturers of picture frames. Respondent Paul Broyle's office is also located at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

The office business of all the respondents named herein, such as the keeping of files, correspondence with customers and others, and the collecting of delinquent accounts, is handled by respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange at this address.

Respondents cause said pictures and frames, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments are made.

Respondents are now and have been in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing pictures and frames in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. sells its products through salesmen who canvass from house to house throughout the various States of the United States for the purpose of procuring orders for respondent's pictures and frames.

In order to sell its pictures and frames, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. makes use of the services of certain salesmen who organize and supervise groups or what are known in the trade as "crews" of salesmen. These individual salesmen who organize and supervise groups or "crews" of salesmen maintain their offices at the place of business of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Said individual salesmen usually accompany their groups or "crews" of salesmen and assist them in their selling efforts as they go from place to place obtaining orders for pictures and frames.

Each salesman is furnished by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. with standard selling and operating supplies for use by them in soliciting orders for pictures and frames. These supplies consist of sample selling kits, order blanks, order envelopes, and various other selling paraphernalia such as "lucky envelopes."

Respondent Paul Broyle, in selling the products of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., had under his supervision one of the said groups or "crews" of salesmen, and during the time herein mentioned sold a substantial number of pictures and frames throughout the various States of the United States. Respondent Paul Broyle, in soliciting orders for pictures and frames and in the conduct of his selling activities, used the trade name DeLuxe Art Studio.
Findings

Respondent Paul Broyle, together with other salesmen who likewise operated groups or "crews" of salesmen engaged in selling the products of respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., made use of such a trade name, and on all order blanks and business stationery designated the office address of the DeLuxe Art Studio as 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.

In soliciting the services of salesmen, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. causes to be printed and issued to persons interested in selling its products various types of catalogs which set forth descriptions and prices of its merchandise. On the cover pages of said catalogs the following labels appear in large print:

The Company That Helps Agents
Consolidated Portrait and Frame Company
The Company That Helps Agents

In said catalogs, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. sets forth the selling technique to be employed by salesmen in offering for sale and selling its products to customers. In this way salesmen are instructed by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. in the method of approach to be employed by them in contacting prospective purchasers and in the representations to be made by them in offering pictures and frames for sale.

Orders for the pictures and frames are solicited from customers and prospective customers in the following manner:

Respondent Paul Broyle and salesmen obtain from each customer a small snapshot picture or other picture, which is usually a picture of the customer or of a member of the customer's family, and forward the same to respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., together with an order signed by the customer and a small envelope upon which are written by the salesmen the instructions of the customer pertaining to the manner in which the customer desires the picture to be made.

Thereupon a picture is made by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. from the small snapshot or other picture in accordance with the instructions set forth on the order envelope, and the same is then forwarded by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. to respondent Paul Broyle and salesmen for delivery to the customer. In a number of instances, respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. shipped the picture directly to the customer.

Payment for the pictures and frames is made by said customers to salesmen either in cash or part cash. If the customer at the time of signing an order for pictures or frames pays only a part of the purchase price of said merchandise, he signs a promissory note for the unpaid balance. The promissory note used by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. and respondent Paul Broyle and salesmen is a form of negotiable note which bears the name of the Mid-West Finance Co., Not Inc., as payee. The Mid-West Finance Co., Not Inc., is a trade name used by respondents, with its address also designated as 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Said finance company possesses no bank account or other asserts and is merely a trade name used by respondents for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts.

If said promissory note is not paid upon maturity by the customer, respondents send a form letter to said customer upon the stationery of the Mid-West Finance Co., Not Inc., demanding payment of the same. If the promissory note still remains unpaid, further notices are sent by respondents to said customer upon the stationery and letterhead of the Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., which notices also demand payment. The Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., is also a trade name used by respondents for the purpose of collecting delinquent accounts.

All of the correspondence by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., respondent Paul Broyle, DeLuxe Art Studio, Mid-West Finance Co., Not Inc., and Moorg Collection Agency, Not Inc., is handled by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. in its office at 100 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange answer all letters addressed to all of the above-named firms or individuals on the letterheads of said firms or individuals.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents represented to customers and prospective customers that the pictures which are manufactured by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. are "paintings" or "finely finished paintings."

These representations are made in various ways. On the order blanks with which the salesmen were supplied by respondents, as hereinabove set forth, and which were signed by customers when ordering one of respondents' pictures, a picture is described as a "painting" or "finely finished painting." Said order blanks read as follows:

You will please make for the undersigned from the photograph ______ delivered to your advertising salesman this day _______ finely finished painting—(how many) and deliver the same to me on or about the ______ day of ________— 193— The price of the painting— is $__________.

In various statements made in the sales catalogs used by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. for the purpose above set forth, said pictures are described as "paintings." The following are examples of such statements but are not all inclusive:

To begin with, you want to arouse a desire on the part of the prospect for one of these paintings.

In nine cases out of ten the paintings, themselves, in your sample case, will create this desire.

In truth and in fact, respondents' products are not paintings and are not finely finished paintings but are enlarged photographs colored.

Respondents' products are made by enlarging small snapshot pictures and other similar pictures and coloring the enlargements.

Paint and coloring are applied to the enlarged photographic outline.

The testimony shows and the Commission finds that a painting, as understood by photographers who color photographs and by artists who paint pictures, is an original representation by a painter or artist of a design, image, or object on a surface by means of paint, either pastel, water color, or oil; a freehand image painted directly on the surface without the intervention of any mechanical means such as a camera.

Par. 4. Further, in offering for sale and in selling their pictures, respondents use the so-called "lucky envelope device." Salesmen who canvass from house to house soliciting orders are supplied by respondents with a number of small envelopes, the greater number of which contain a so-called "Merchandise Discount Check" which purports to entitle the person who "draws" one to two "paintings" having a usual selling price of $40 each at the special price of $20. Said Merchandise Discount Check has the following statements thereon:

Special Check.—If the person whose name appears on this check agrees to assist us in advertising, we will accept this credit check as a TWENTY DOLLAR payment on a $40 painting and will deliver to such person one additional $40 painting without additional cost.

Prospective customers are induced to "draw" an envelope from a number of envelopes in order to obtain the lucky envelope containing the so-called merchandise discount check. The envelopes from which the customers are induced to "draw" are manipulated by the salesman in such a manner that each prospective customer draws a lucky envelope containing the so-called merchandise discount check.

tomar’s part, the customer would secure a free “painting.” After the customer participated in the “draw,” he would be informed by the salesman that the “painting” he would get free would not be delivered until the customer purchased the paintings upon which he was entitled to a credit for drawing the so-called lucky envelope containing the merchandise discount check.

The Commission finds that the pictures or “paintings” sold by respondents have a value substantially less than the represented value of $40. The Commission further finds that the respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. enabled respondent Paul Broyle and the salesmen working under his supervision to mislead and deceive purchasers by supplying them with the aforesaid sales device. The Commission finds that the alleged “drawing” is a fraudulent scheme conceived for the sole purpose and with the result of inducing prospective purchasers to believe that if they draw a lucky envelope they will procure two pictures of the value of $40 each at a reduced price of $20. In fact, however, every prospective purchaser is approached in the same way and all pay the same price. By means of this scheme members of the purchasing public are beguiled into believing that they are the exceptional few whom fortune has favored.

Par. 5. Customers were also led to believe by statements of respondents’ salesmen and statements printed on the so-called merchandise discount checks that if they displayed the pictures in a conspicuous place and thereby advertised said pictures to people living in their communities, the salesmen would thereby be able to sell said pictures to neighbors of said customers at the represented usual price of $40. The Commission finds that respondents and their salesmen did not conduct and were not conducting advertising campaigns in the communities where the pictures were sold, and that respondents’ pictures were sold to all customers at a uniform price. As a result of the representations made by salesmen in connection with the “drawing,” customers were deceived into believing that they had been lucky and had won a distinct advantage over other customers in the same locality by entering into contracts for the purchase of respondents’ pictures.

Par. 6. Respondent Paul Broyle and salesmen induced persons from whom they solicited orders for pictures to sign contracts to purchase said pictures by representing to such persons that orders signed by them were merely receipts for the small photographs furnished by such persons from which enlargements were to be made. Ofttimes said salesmen, instead of representing said order blanks as “receipts,” represented the same to be either a memorandum as to the time of delivery of said picture, or a memorandum that the customer was entitled to a free picture.

In truth and in fact, the papers signed by the aforesaid customers were binding contracts to purchase pictures or "paintings." All such contracts contained a memorandum of credit for drawing a "lucky envelope" and a provision for a free "painting" and other provisions. Said orders were first signed by the salesman, who is described in such contract as an "advertising salesman." The order blanks also contained numerous other provisions and representations of a binding nature on the customer, which were not explained to the customer by the salesman, among which were provisions to the effect that such contract could not be countermanded and that verbal agreements are not recognized.

Par. 7. Respondent Paul Broyle, trading as DeLuxe Art Studio, sold frames of many different qualities and designs.

Salesmen called upon prospective customers and represented to said customers that frames which they sold and offered for sale were "gold leaf" frames, and that the said "gold leaf" was of high quality and of high value. They also represented the actual value and usual value of such frames to be much higher than they in fact were. They also represented the glass in many of said frames to be imported Belgium glass.

In truth and in fact, the finish on said frames was not a "gold leaf" finish, nor were the frames "gold leaf" frames as the term "gold leaf" is used and accepted in the trade. Said frames were frames finished with burnished bronze, a material of inferior value.

The usual and actual value of said frames was substantially lower than the value represented by respondent Paul Broyle and salesmen. The glass in said frames was not imported Belgium glass, nor was it unique in quality or of high value.

Par. 8. Respondent Paul Broyle, in soliciting the sale of and selling frames and pictures, has adopted, and used as and for a trade name, the words "DeLuxe Art Studio" with which to carry on business.

Respondent Paul Broyle used said designated trade name in soliciting orders from customers. Letterheads feature the said trade name and added phrase "Artists and Creators of the Original DeLuxe Paintings."

The term "Art Studio" is a standard and accepted term and recognized as such among the trade and the general public to designate and denominate a studio or workshop in which an artist applies his art.
In truth and in fact, respondent Paul Broyle does not maintain an independent studio in which artists are employed to paint or produce portraits, but the said portraits are enlarged and tinted by respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. The name DeLuxe Art Studio is a name adopted by all of the respondents in order to conceal the fact that respondent Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co. is the manufacturer and distributor of the pictures, and to mislead and deceive the public into believing that respondent Paul Broyle maintains a studio of his own in which he manufactures his own pictures.

Par. 9. In the course and conduct of their business, said respondents were and are in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of frames and pictures in commerce as herein set out, who did not and do not sell their products by using “lucky envelopes,” nor misrepresent the terms and conditions of sale of their pictures and frames, but who truthfully represent the value and quality of their products and truthfully represent the terms and conditions of sale of their said pictures and frames.

Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondents in offering for sale and selling pictures and frames had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. Acting under the mistaken and erroneous belief induced by the false and misleading statements and representations herein referred to, the public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who truthfully represent their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

by George Foulkes, counsel for the Commission, and John Nash and James O'Connor Roberts, attorneys for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., a corporation, and its officers, Daniel F. Orange and Charles C. Orange, individually and as officers of Consolidated Portrait & Frame Co., and Paul Broyle, an individual trading as Deluxe Art Studio, and their respective representatives, salesmen, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of colored or tinted photographs or enlargements having a photographic base, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or in any other manner that colored or tinted photographs or photographic enlargements are paintings or "finely finished paintings".

2. Using the term "painting" either alone or in conjunction with any other terms or words in any way to designate, describe, or refer to colored or tinted photographs, or photographic enlargements or other pictures produced from a photographic base or impression.

3. Representing that respondents, or any of them, are conducting a special campaign or advertising campaign in any particular place or locality for the purpose of obtaining customers who will exhibit their pictures, or for any other purpose, unless such campaign is in fact then being conducted in such locality for such purposes.

4. Representing, through use of the "draw" or through the use of "lucky" envelopes, special discount checks, blanks, slips, coupons, or certificates, or through the use of any other device, plan, or scheme, or special advertising offer, that any customer would thereby obtain a financial advantage or be entitled to receive any picture free or receive a substantial discount, or reduction in the price of any picture or pictures.

5. Representing as the customary and regular prices or values for such pictures, prices and values which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said pictures are regularly and customarily sold.

It is further ordered, That respondent, Paul Broyle, trading as Deluxe Art Studio, his servants, agents, and salesmen, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of colored or tinted photographs or enlargements having a photographic base, and frames therefor, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that order blanks signed by purchasers are other than contracts for the purchase of a picture or pictures.

2. Using the term "gold leaf" or any other term of similar import and meaning to designate or describe frames finished in burnished bronze or materials other than "gold leaf."

3. Representing, by use of a trade name containing the term "Art Studio," or by use of any other name, or through any other means or device, that respondent, Paul Broyle, owns, maintains, or operates a studio in which pictures are made by artists.

4. Representing that the domestic glass used in said frames is imported glass, or is superior in quality and value to its actual quality and value.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days from service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

HERSHEY CHOCOLATE CORPORATION, PETER CAILLER KOHLER SWISS CHOCOLATES COMPANY, INC., CHOCOLATE SALES CORPORATION, LAMONT, CORLISS & COMPANY, SANITARY AUTOMATIC CANDY CORPORATION, BERLO VENDING COMPANY, AND CONFECTION CABINET COMPANY

Where three vending machine operators which (1) were engaged in operation of such machines in various sections of the United States and in sale and distribution through said machines in theaters of confections, (2) thus sold certain special Hershey and Nestlé solid chocolate bars made by the respective manufacturers for the vending-machine trade, and most popular solid chocolate bars made by far, enjoying much greater consumer demand than any such competitive products, and, prior to matters below set forth, sold generally to such operators' competitors, and (3) constituted the three largest operators of such machines in the industry, composed of 25 or more of such operators, and in competition with many other similarly engaged operators of such machines—

(a) Entered into exclusive distributing contract with exclusive selling agent of said Nestlé items, sale of which, or of others equal in size and weight and at as low a price, was thereafter no longer made to any member of the vending-machine trade other than three operators aforesaid; and

(b) Protested sale of certain special Hershey competitive chocolate vending-machine items theretofore put on the market by said manufacturer to meet competition of such Nestlé items, with result that such manufacturer immediately established policy of restricting sales of its said items, theretofore sold to trade in question generally, to three operators aforesaid, and so informed trade; and

Where manufacturer of said Nestlé bars, and its said exclusive selling agent, engaged in manufacturing and sale of such bars in active competition with others similarly engaged—

(c) Entered into exclusive distributor contract above set forth with such vending-machine operators and, in compliance therewith, notified immediately its vending-machine customers that it had discontinued manufacture of said special items and would no longer be able to supply other special bars as substitutes therefor, and thereafter neither made, offered, nor sold to any member of vending-machine trade other than said three operators any solid chocolate bar equal in size and weight to, and at as low a price as, said items aforesaid; and
Where manufacturer of said Hershey bars, engaged in active competition with others similarly engaged as aforesaid, and following protest, as aforesaid set forth, of such operators with reference to sale of its said special bars to vending-machine trade at large—

(d) Established policy of restricting sale of such items to said operators, and thus informed trade, for fear that it would not otherwise obtain as large a percentage of the business of such operators as it had previously obtained unless it did so, and thereafter neither made nor offered to said vending-machine trade at large, whether through its selling agent or own selling organization, any solid chocolate bar comparable in size and weight to size and weight of aforesaid items, and at as low a price;

With results that—

(1) Vending-machine operators competing with the three aforesaid were unable to service their machines during such period with Hershey and Nestle solid chocolate bars, preferred by some theater managements for such machines located on their premises, and requested by such managements of competitors of three aforesaid, because of inability to obtain said bars at price which would insure sufficient profit to said competitors to permit them to grant the theater managements percentage of gross take necessary to obtain locations, and such competing vending-machine operators met with difficulty in negotiations for, and lost, theater locations because of inability, by reason of said exclusive distributor arrangements, to obtain such bars; and

(2) The effects of said exclusive distributor arrangements between said chocolate bar manufacturers and their selling and distributing agencies on the one hand, and such vending-machine operators on the other, entered into pursuant to agreements and understandings as above set out, were effectively to close sources of supply of such Hershey and Nestle solid chocolate bars made by their respective manufacturers to members of vending-machine trade other than said three vending-machine operators, and thereby deprived members of consuming public, who might desire to purchase such special chocolate bars from vending machines of competitors of said operators, of opportunity so to do:

Held, That such acts and practices had a dangerous tendency to monopolize sale of such chocolate bars in said vending-machine operators, and actually hindered and prevented competition in sale thereof in commerce, and unreasonably restrained such commerce in vending-machine industry and constituted unfair methods of competition therein.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Par. 8. There are other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the business of operating vending machines in the various States of the United States and the distribution and sale of confectionery through the medium of vending machines, and with such individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations, the respondents “Sanitary,” “Berlo,” and “Cabinet,” at all times mentioned herein have been, and are, in competition.

Par. 9. On or about October 1, 1935, all of the parties respondent herein agreed, conspired, combined, and confederated together, and united in, and pursued, a common and concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves to close the source of supply of the special chocolate bar manufactured by the respondents “Hershey” and “Kohler” for the vending-machine trade to all members of the vending-machine trade other than the respondents “Sanitary,” “Berlo,” and “Cabinet,” and to eliminate, harass, and unduly burden competitors of the respondents “Sanitary,” “Berlo,” and “Cabinet” in the candy vending-machine trade.

(a) To monopolize in the respondents "Sanitary," "Berlo," and "Cabinet," the sale of the products of the respondents "Kohler" and "Hershey," for which products there is substantial public demand.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in the candy vending-machine industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in prices, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, and a detriment to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

(c) To substantially increase the cost of candy products with which competitors of respondents service or stock their vending machines, thereby eliminating the source of supply to the consuming public of products of equal quality and value.

(d) To place respondents in a position to persuade the proprietors and managements of theaters and public gathering places to permit the installation or location of their vending machines on such premises in lieu, or instead, of vending machines of competitors because of a public demand for respondents' products with the attendant result of obstructing, eliminating, oppressing, stifling, and restricting competition in the location and installation of candy-vending machines.

PAR. 11. The above alleged acts and things done by respondents as set forth in paragraphs 9 and 10 hereof, are monopolistic practices and are methods of competition which are unfair, and they constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning, and in violation, of Section 5 of said act approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 20, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thomas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Par. 7. The respondent, Confection Cabinet Co. (hereinafter referred to as Cabinet), is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey. It is now, and for many years prior hereto has been, engaged in the business of operating vending machines and selling and distributing confectionery products through the medium of vending machines. It maintains an office and principal place of business at 315 Clinton Avenue, in the city of Newark, N. J.

Par. 8. There are many other parties engaged in the manufacture and sale of solid chocolate bars, who pursuant to orders therefor, ship their said products into and through the various States of the United States to the respective places of business of purchasers located in the various States of the United States, and with such parties, the respondents Kohler, Lamont, Hershey, and Chocolate Sales Corporation (until it was dissolved in June 1937), at all times referred to herein have been, and are, in active competition.

Par. 9. There are also many other parties engaged in the business of operating vending machines in the various States of the United States and in the sale of confectionery products through the medium of such vending machines, and with said parties the respondent Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, at all times referred to herein have been, and are, in active competition.

Par. 10. For many years, in the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent Kohler has manufactured, and respondent Lamont, its exclusive selling agent, has sold a variety of chocolate candy products under the trade name Nestle. trade. The special chocolate bars so manufactured have been sold to the respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, and to competitors of the last-named respondents, except insofar as sales of said products have been restricted as hereinafter set forth, for many years, pursuant to which sales said products have been shipped by respondent Hershey into and through the various States of the United States to said purchasers.

PAR. 12. The special Hershey and Nestlé solid chocolate bars manufactured by respondents Hershey and Kohler, respectively, for the vending-machine trade are by far the most popular solid chocolate bars manufactured and they enjoy a much greater consumer demand than any competing solid chocolate bars.

PAR. 13. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, each of the respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, seek to and do negotiate contracts with theater owners and operators providing for the installation of one or more of their machines on the premises of the theaters operated by such theater owners or managements. Some of the vending machines used by respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, contain six slots and some contain nine slots. A large variety of confectionery products, probably 25 or more, are sold through the machines. The types of confectionery products with which the vending machines are serviced are determined upon the basis of the relative popularity of confectionery items in the particular locality in which the machines are located. Respondent Sanitary operates in the metropolitan area of New York, and to some extent through subsidiaries on the West coast. Respondent Berlo operates in the Middle Atlantic States and respondent Cabinet operates throughout the United States. The products are taken from the vending machines by customers, who are patrons of the theaters in which such machines are located, upon deposit of a coin therein. Generally the machines are serviced with confectionery products by the operator installing the machines. Occasionally, they are serviced by the theater management with confectionery products purchased from the machine operator.

The predominant consideration in the negotiation of contracts permitting installation of machines on theater premises is the percentage of the gross take, or income, of each machine offered the theater management for such privilege. Other considerations are the type of machine used, service offered, and quality of the products with which the machines are to be serviced. Respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet are the three largest operators of vending machines in the industry which is composed of 25 or more vending-machine operators. The respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet for several years have serviced their vending machines with the special solid chocolate bars manufactured for the vending machine trade by the respondents Hershey and Kohler.

Par. 14. In 1932 respondent Lamont solicited the business of the respondent Sanitary and was informed that respondent Sanitary was not interested in the solid chocolate bars then being manufactured by respondent Kohler, but would be interested in a bar of such size and shape as would be suitable for use in its vending machines. Negotiations ensued between respondents Lamont and Sanitary resulting in respondent Sanitary submitting to respondent Lamont a design and specifications for a special chocolate bar for use in vending machines. Respondent Lamont, accepted the design submitted by respondent Sanitary and respondent Kohler began the production of a solid chocolate bar in accordance therewith. This bar was designated by respondent Kohler as Item No. 634, and purchase thereof was open to all candy vending machine operators. In 1934 respondent Sanitary requested a bar of lighter weight than No. 634 with a corresponding reduction in price. Respondent Lamont acceded to this request and respondent Kohler thereupon discontinued the manufacture of Item No. 634 and began the manufacture of a lighter solid chocolate bar which was designated No. 635. At this time respondent Kohler also began the manufacture of a special almond bar for the vending machine trade, which bar was designated as Item No. 637. The special bars Nos. 635 and 637 manufactured by respondent Kohler were sold generally to the candy vending-machine trade until the summer of 1935. In the period between September 1, 1934, and May 1, 1935, respondent Lamont sold 4,400,000 bars of Items Nos. 635 and 637 to 22 different vending-machine operators, of which approximately 1,200,000 were purchased by parties other than respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet.

Par. 15. In 1934 respondent Hershey in an effort to meet competition of the Special bars, Nos. 635 and 637, then being manufactured by respondent Kohler and sold by respondent Lamont to the vending-machine trade, obtained some of said bars and designed a mold in imitation thereof and began the production of a solid chocolate bar and an almond bar through the use thereof, which said bars were designated Items Nos. 38 and 106, respectively. Respondent Chocolate Sales Corporation offered and sold the Items Nos. 38 and 106 manufactured by respondent Hershey to the vending-machine trade at large until the summer of 1935.

Par. 16. In the spring of 1935 respondent Lamont, in an effort to increase the volume of sales of chocolate bars for vending machines, requested respondent Sanitary to confine its purchases of solid chocolate bars to respondent Lamont. Respondent Santary rejected this request and countered with the proposal that respondent Lamont confine the sale of Items Nos. 635 and 637 being manufactured by respondent Kohler to respondent Santary. After several months of negotiation, during which time respondents Santary, Berlo, and Cabinet, held numerous conferences with reference to obtaining an exclusive distributor contract of Items Nos. 635 and 637 then being manufactured by respondent Kohler and sold by respondent Lamont to the vending-machine trade at large, a contract was entered into between respondent Lamont and respondent Santary on August 29, 1935, which provided in substance that sales of the special chocolate bars No. 635 and No. 637 being manufactured by respondent Kohler in accordance with the design submitted by respondent Santary would be confined to respondents Santary, Berlo, and Cabinet, in consideration of their agreement to purchase at least 10,000,000 bars per year. The contract also provided that such bars would, in the future, be wrapped with the ABC monogram, which is a symbol for respondent Santary's trade-mark, America's Best Candies. In compliance with said contract respondent Lamont immediately notified its vending-machine customers that respondent Kohler had discontinued the manufacture of Items Nos. 635 and 637, and that it would not be able to supply other special bars as substitutes therefor. The Nos. 681 and 682 were used in said exclusive distributor contract to designate the special chocolate bars referred to therein in lieu of the Nos. 635 and 637 which were used prior to the execution of said contract, but respondent Lamont continued to sell Items Nos. 635 and 637 to respondents Santary, Berlo, and Cabinet as late as the middle of November 1935. The Items Nos. 681 and 682, which were ultimately substituted by respondent Kohler for Items Nos. 635 and 637, were substantially the same as the bars which were formerly designated Nos. 635 and 637, the only difference being a slight change in design and the ABC monogram with which they were wrapped. The substituted bars, namely, Items Nos. 681 and 682, were sold to the respondents Santary, Berlo, and Cabinet under the exclusive distributor contract at the same price that Items Nos. 635 and 637 were previously sold to the trade at large.

Prior to the execution of the said exclusive distributor contract between respondent Lamont and respondent Santary, respondent Santary had sold respondents Berlo and Cabinet vending machines bearing respondent Santary's trade-mark, America's Best Candies, and respondents Berlo and Cabinet were granted the privilege of using said trade-mark on confectionery products sold through such machines.
Respondent Sanitary's requirements of special chocolate bars for use in its vending machines have never amounted to 10,000,000 bars per year. Prior to the execution of the said exclusive distributor contract between respondent Lamont and respondent Sanitary for the special chocolate bars manufactured by respondent Kohler, conferences were held between respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet with the view of pooling their requirements in order to comply with the condition of agreeing to purchase 10,000,000 bars per year in consideration of the exclusive distributor arrangement. Pursuant to such conferences respondents Berlo and Cabinet authorized respondent Sanitary to execute said exclusive distributor contract on their behalf and each of the respondents Berlo and Cabinet committed itself to purchase 2,500,000 bars per year.

After the expiration of the first year under the said exclusive distributor contract between respondents Lamont and Sanitary, respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet had failed to purchase the 10,000,000 bars stipulated in said contract, and a controversy arose between the parties thereto with respect to the provisions thereof, whereupon the said exclusive distributor contract was terminated. At this time respondent Lamont agreed to continue to supply respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet with its Items Nos. 681 and 682 wrapped with Sanitary's ABC monogram.

At no time since the execution of the exclusive distributor contract between the respondents Lamont and Sanitary on August 29, 1935, and its termination in October 1936, to the date of the closing of the taking of testimony herein, viz, April 6, 1938, did respondent Kohler manufacture and respondent Lamont offer and sell to any member of the vending-machine trade other than the respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, any solid chocolate bar equal in size and weight to, and at a price as low as, the size, weight, and price of its Items Nos. 681 and 682.

Par. 17. Almost simultaneously with the execution of the exclusive distributor contract between respondents Lamont and Sanitary, respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet protested to respondent Hershey with reference to the sale of its special chocolate bars Nos. 38 and 106 to the vending-machine trade at large. Respondent Hershey immediately established the policy of restricting sales of its Items Nos. 38 and 106 to respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, and so informed the trade. Respondent Hershey agreed to confine sales of Items Nos. 38 and 106 to respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet for fear that it would not obtain as large a percentage of the business of respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet as it had previously obtained unless it did so. Respondent Hershey has never labeled any of its products with respondent Sanitary's ABC trade-mark.

From the time respondent Hershey established the policy of confining sales of its Items Nos. 38 and 106 to respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet in the summer of 1935 to the spring of 1938, respondent Hershey did not manufacture and offer to the vending-machine trade at large, either through its selling agent, respondent Chocolate Sales Corporation, or through its own selling organization, any solid chocolate bar comparable in size and weight to, and at a price as low as, the size, weight, and price of its Items Nos. 38 and 106.

Respondent Hershey professes to have abandoned the policy of confining sales of its Items Nos. 38 and 106 to respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet in the spring of 1938. Sales of Items Nos. 38 and 106 were made to only one customer other than respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet prior to the closing of the taking of testimony herein on April 6, 1938.

Par. 18. Some theater managements prefer that vending machines located on their premises be serviced with Hershey and Nestle solid chocolate bars and have requested competitors of respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet to service their machines with such bars.

Vending-machine operators competing with respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet have been unable to service their machines with Hershey and Nestle solid chocolate bars during the period covered by the exclusive distributor arrangements between respondents Lamont and Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet on the one hand, and between respondents Hershey and Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet on the other hand, because of their inability to obtain such bars at a price which would insure sufficient profit to them to permit such competing operators to grant the theater managements a percentage of the gross take necessary to obtain locations.

Vending-machine operators competing with respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet have met with difficulty in their negotiations for, and have lost, theater locations because of their inability to obtain Hershey and Nestle solid chocolate bars because of the exclusive distributor arrangements above referred to.

Par. 19. The effects of the aforesaid exclusive distributor arrangements between respondents Lamont and Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet on the one hand, and between respondent Hershey and Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet on the other hand, entered into pursuant to the agreements and understandings between the said parties respondent herein-above set out has been to effectively close the sources of supply of the Hershey and Nestle special chocolate bars manufactured by respondents Hershey and Kohler respectively, to members of the vending-machine trade other than respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, thereby depriving members of the consuming public who may desire to purchase said special chocolate bars from the vending machines of competitors of said respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet, of the opportunity to do so.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents have a dangerous tendency to monopolize the sale of said solid chocolate bars in the respondent vending-machine operators, and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale of said products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in the vending-machine industry, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, Berlo Vending Co., and Confection Cabinet Co., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale or purchase of confectionery products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Entering into or carrying out any agreement or understanding among themselves, or between or among any two of them, or between or among any one of them and any other or others, to influence, persuade, or coerce any one or more of the respondents, Hershey Chocolate Corporation, Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolates Co., Inc., or La-mont, Corliss & Co., or any other manufacturer or seller of confectionery products, to refuse to sell any of such products to any other member of the vending-machine trade, or to refuse to sell any of such products to any other member of the vending-machine trade upon terms and conditions as favorable as the terms and conditions upon which such products are purchased by any one of the respondent vending-machine operators.

2. Entering into or carrying out any agreement or understanding among themselves, or between or among any two of them, or between or among any one of them and any other or others, to prevent, interfere with, or hinder, directly or indirectly, the purchase of any of such products by any other member of the vending-machine trade from any manufacturer or seller thereof, or to prevent, interfere with, or hinder, directly or indirectly, the purchase of any such products by any other member of the vending-machine trade from any manufacturer or seller thereof upon terms and conditions as favorable as the terms and conditions upon which such products are purchased by any one of the respondent vending-machine operators.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Hershey Chocolate Corporation, Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolates Co., Inc., and Lamont, Corliss & Co., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and each of them, cease and desist from participating in, or doing any act or thing in furtherance of any agreement or understanding between or among any of the respondent vending-machine operators, or between or among any one of them and any other or others, having for its purpose the accomplishment of any of the restraints prohibited in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondent, Chocolate Sales Corporation, for the reason that this respondent has been legally dissolved.

It is further ordered, That the said parties respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
LUX-VISEL COMPANY, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of electric hot water heaters under name "Lux" or "Superlux"; in advertising for salesmen to sell and distribute its said products throughout the various States, in newspapers and periodicals, and in follow-up literature, letters, pamphlets, and order blanks sent to prospective salesmen making inquiry—

(a) Represented and implied to purchasing public and to prospective agents and salesmen, that by purchasing one heater at a stipulated amount they would receive an additional one free, or that by purchasing larger quantities they would receive others free of charge, or that they would receive a "free offer" or "free sample offer," through such statements as "Free Offer," "Free Sample Offer—No Risk," and "I will send you two Super Lux Heaters for the price of only one which is $3.00," etc., and "Don't forget I give you Free Heaters to cover transportation charges regardless of the quantity you buy";

Facts being it did not make such free offer, nor would customer get heater free, but price of so-called "free heater" was included in price of other articles, rendering of a service or payment of money was required before such free heater was furnished by it, and price charged for the one heater and the "free" heater was the regular customary price charged for two, and said offer was not special, but one of long standing which constituted its permanent method of doing business, with price referred to included in that of other articles which must be purchased to obtain so-called "free" item;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that its agents normally or usually made up to $30 a day or other large amounts of money as profits derived from their efforts in selling its said product, through such statements as "Up to $30 Profit Daily," "Up to $30 and More Daily," and "Pays Agents Up to $20, $30, $40 in a Day," and "Try to think of any business offering you the chance to make up to $15 to $35 and over in a single day that you can get into as easily as this one";

Facts being its said agents do not normally or usually make profits up to $30 a day, or any comparable or similar amounts, its claims of earnings made by its agents were greatly in excess of average earnings made by active full-time agents under normal conditions in usual course of business, very few of its agents were full-time employees or had even given it "repeat" orders, only a small percentage of its customers actually worked as agents for it or made any further purchase of its said product other than the original small order, and its sales methods accomplished, in general, only initial sale to a customer, rather than continuous and numerous repeat sales to agents and salesmen; and

(c) Represented that its product had been approved or tested by the Underwriters Laboratories through placing in its advertising pamphlets, leaflets, and circulars, for purpose of misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers, sketch of its said heater together with statement, in large prominent letters, "Underwriters Laboratories Seal of Approval," followed by, in small type, "is on the 8-foot cord of every," and below and again in large prominent letters, "Lux Electric Water Heater," and thereby led purchasers or prospective purchasers to believe that entire heater had been thus approved;

Facts being only cord used for attaching same to electric outlet had been approved as aforesaid, and "seal of approval" of heater had not been thus given;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of its said product into erroneous belief that all of such false and misleading representations, and others of similar purport and effect, were true, and that said product had been approved by recognized testing laboratory with respect to quality and effectiveness, and with result that such purchasers were misled into believing that by answering its advertisements or purchasing its products or acting as its agents or salesmen they would receive something free or be able to earn large and exaggerated profits or commissions, and that, as a direct consequence of such erroneous beliefs thus induced, substantial number of purchasing public bought large quantity of its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Lux-Visel Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Lux-Visel Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its office and principal place of business located at 415 West Franklin Street, Elkhart, Ind.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the manufacture and sale of an electric hot water heater, sold under the name of Lux Electric Water Heater or Superlux Electric Water Heater. In the conduct of its business respondent uses the trade names "The Lux Company" and "Superlux." Respondent's heater consists essentially of a small aluminum disc combined with a wire heating element, designed for use in the home, shop or office, for the purpose of heating water.

In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent causes its product when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Indiana to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said electric water heaters sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent employs agents and salesmen to sell and distribute its product throughout the various States of the United States, and for the purpose of securing the services of such agents and salesmen it publishes advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, and magazines soliciting agents to sell its product. Such advertisements emphasize and stress the claimed money-making possibilities for agents selling respondent's product.

Among the advertisements so published by respondent and typical of its representations in this respect are the following:

Par. 4. When an inquiry is received from a prospective salesman who has read one of respondent's above advertisements and has indicated his interest in becoming an agent for the sale of respondent's product, respondent sends to such person "follow-up" literature, letters, pamphlets, and order blanks, containing, among others, representations as follows:
Thousands of others have accepted my Free Sample Offer and are now making profits up to 233% and you can do the very same thing.

Don't forget I give you FREE HEATERS to cover transportation charges regardless of the quantity you buy.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and implies to the purchasing public and to prospective agents and salesmen:

1. That by purchasing one heater at a stipulated amount they will receive an additional one free, or that by purchasing larger quantities of heaters they will receive others free of charge, or that they will receive a “free offer” or “Free sample offer”.

2. That respondent's agents normally or usually make up to $30 a day or other large amounts of money as profits derived from their efforts in selling respondent's product.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, respondent does not make a “free offer” or “free sample offer,” since the customer does not get a heater “free.” The price of the so-called “Free” heater is included in the price of other articles, and the rendering of a service or a payment of money is required before such “free” heater is furnished by respondent. The price charged for the one heater and the “free” heater is the regular and customary price charged for two heaters, and is not a special offer. Furthermore, this offer of the “Free” heater or heaters is one of long standing and constitutes the respondent's permanent method of doing business and the price thereof is included in the price of the other articles which must be purchased to obtain the so-called free items.

Respondent's agents do not normally or usually make profits “up to $30 a day” or any comparable or similar amounts, and respondent's claims of earnings made by its agents are greatly in excess of the average earnings made by respondent's active full-time agents under normal conditions in the usual course of business. In truth and in fact, very few, if any, of respondent's agents are full-time employees or have even given the respondent "repeat" orders. Only a small percentage of respondent's customers actually work as agents for respondent or make any further purchase of respondent's heater than the original small order, and respondent's sales methods accomplish in general only the initial sale to a customer, rather than continuous and numerous "repeat" sales to agents and salesmen.

Par. 7. For the purpose of misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers the respondent places a pictorial representation or a sketch of its heater in its advertising pamphlets, leaflets, and circulars, which pictorial representation is accompanied by the statement "Underwriters Laboratories Seal of Approval" in large prominent letters, below which appears in small type "is on the 8-foot cord of every," and below this again in large prominent letters "Lux Electric Water Heater." By this means the purchaser or prospective purchaser is led to believe that the entire electric water heater has been approved by the Underwriters Laboratories when in truth and in fact only the cord used for attaching respondent's heater to an electric outlet has been approved by the Underwriters Laboratories, and respondent's heater is not so approved or given its "seal of approval."

Par. 8. The use of the foregoing false and misleading representations by respondent as above set-out and others of similar purport and effect have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said product has been approved by a recognized testing laboratory as to its quality or effectiveness in use. Such purchasers and prospective purchasers are also misled into believing that by answering respondent's advertisements or purchasing its products or acting as its agents or salesmen, they will receive something free or that they will be able to earn large and exaggerated profits or commissions. As a direct result of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by the false representations hereinbefore set-out, a substantial number of the purchasing public have purchased a large quantity of respondent's products.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 5, 1939, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Lux-Visel Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce and in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequently, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lux-Visel Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its office and principal place of business located at 415 West Franklin Street, Elkhart, Ind.

Par. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set-out herein, the respondent represents and implies to the purchasing public and to prospective agents and salesmen:

1. That by purchasing one heater at a stipulated amount they will receive an additional one free, or that by purchasing larger quantities of heaters they will receive others free of charge, or that they will receive a “free offer” or “Free sample offer.”

2. That respondent’s agents normally or usually make up to $30 a day or other large amounts of money as profits derived from their efforts in selling respondent’s product.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, respondent does not make a “free offer” or “free sample offer,” since the customer does not get a heater “free.” The price of the so-called “free” heater is included in the price of other articles, and the rendering of a service or a payment of money is required before such “free” heater is furnished by respondent. The price charged for the one heater and the “free” heater is the regular customary price charged for two heaters, and is not a special offer. Furthermore, this offer of the “free” heater or heaters is one of long standing and constitutes the respondent’s permanent method of doing business and the price thereof is included in the price of the other articles which must be purchased to obtain the so-called free items.

Respondent’s agents do not normally or usually make profits “up to $30 a day” or any comparable or similar amounts, and respondent’s claims of earnings made by its agents are greatly in excess of the average earnings made by respondent’s active full-time agents under normal conditions in the usual course of business. In truth and in fact, very few, if any, of respondent’s agents are full-time employees or have even given the respondent “repeat” orders. Only a small percentage of respondent’s customers actually work as agents for respondent or make any further purchase of respondent’s heater than the original small order, and respondent’s sales methods accomplish in general only the initial sale to a customer, rather than continuous and numerous “repeat” sales to agents and salesmen.

writers Laboratories when in truth and in fact only the cord used for attaching respondent's heater to an electric outlet has been approved by the Underwriters Laboratories, and respondent's heater is not so approved or given its "seal of approval."

Par. 8. The use of the foregoing false and misleading representations by respondent as above set-out and others of similar purport and effect have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said product has been approved by a recognized testing laboratory as to its quality or effectiveness in use. Such purchasers and prospective purchasers are also misled into believing that by answering respondent's advertisements or purchasing its products or acting as its agents or salesmen, they will receive something free or that they will be able to earn large and exaggerated profits or commissions. As a direct result of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by the false representations hereinbefore set-out, a substantial number of the purchasing public have purchased a large quantity of respondent's products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Lux-Visel Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of an electric hot water heater sold under the name of Lux Electric Water Heater or Superlux Electric Water Heater, or any other name or names, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "free" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to goods, wares, or merchandise regularly offered in connection with the purchase of specified quantities of identical, similar, or other merchandise.

2. Representing any specified sum of money as possible earnings or profits of agents, salesmen, representatives, or distributors, for any given period of time, which is not a true representation of the average earnings or profits consistently made by its active, full-time agents, salesmen, representatives, or distributors in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

3. Representing any specified sum of money as earnings or profits of any specified agent, salesman, representative, or distributor, for any given period of time, which has not in fact been consistently earned by such agent, salesman, representative, or distributor in the ordinary course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

4. Representing that its product has been approved or tested by the "Underwriters' Laboratory" or any similar organization unless said product has been so approved or tested, and when only a portion or part of said product has been so approved or tested such fact must be clearly and unequivocally stated so that there is no deception as to which part or parts have been so approved or tested.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

LIGHTMORE APPLIANCE CORPORATION AND SOLAR-RAY LAMP COMPANY, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of incandescent bulbs for general lighting service, and of 28-40-volt lamps for country home lighting service through use of current from storage batteries and low-voltage generators, and second concern, engaged, for time, in sale of products made by former, and under same control and management—

(a) Represented that their said lamps were guaranteed to give 1,000 hours average service, and were made according to and complied with standard specifications set by the United States Government, facts being said lamps had no guarantor other than themselves, did not give said number of hours average service, but were very erratic in both intake and output, lamps labeled 60 watts used more current and emitted more light, in many cases, than those labeled 100 watts, some lamps produced over twice as much light as others which bore identical labels as to voltage and wattage, said lamps were not made according to and in compliance with standards and specifications set by the Government, which bought no 28-40-volt lamps and had no specifications for such lamps, and specifications or requirements of which, for general lighting service lamps, were not met in the majority of cases by their said lamps, which either greatly exceeded, or fell far short of, labeled wattage and of light output required for lamps so marked;

(b) Represented that their said lamps were quality products made for service and economy, and were rigidly tested and checked by experts at every stage of manufacture to insure high quality and uniformity, and were sold at prices lower than those of competing products, made possible by short cut, efficient methods of distribution, elimination of red tape and heavy overhead expenses, through which they were enabled to pass on to public purchasing their said products in preference to such competitive lamps, substantial important saving, facts being they were not of high quality, etc., nor rigidly tested, etc., as above set out, nor sold at lower prices, and they did not pass on to public preferentially buying their said products substantial or important savings, but general use thereof throughout United States would have cost purchasing public, in course of a year, on basis of estimates of Bureau of Standards, over $100,000,000 more than was then paid for current consumed by lamps in actual use;

(c) Represented that their said products were guaranteed and made in the United States by skilled American workers, facts being they were not wholly thus made, but in the case of many contained substantially cheaper bases made in Japan by foreign workers, with label "Made in Japan" concealed from view of buyers through construction of completed products ready for use; and
(d) Represented that their country home-service lamps were of voltage 28–32, and that purchase orders should specify such voltage and "country home lighting," facts being their said lamps were not labeled "28–32 volts" and were not such voltage, in accordance with reasonable, regular, and customary practice of all members of the industries engaged in manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps for country-home service, but were, as labeled, 28–40 volts, representing impracticable voltage range in that lamp burning in 28-volt circuit should last about 125 times as long as one in 40-volt circuit, and
(e) Represented that said second and selling concern above referred to was manufacturer of lamps sold by it prior to February 1937, at which time, though continuing its existence, it discontinued business, facts being said concern never made any lamps;
With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and false belief that such various false, misleading, and untrue representations, made by them as aforesaid, were true, and to induce number thereof to buy substantial quantities of such lamps, which they would not purchase except for such erroneous and false belief, and to cause number of such public, with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from others likewise engaged in sale of incandescent lamps and who truthfully advertise and represent their said products; to competitors' substantial injury:

Held, That such acts and representations were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.
Mr. Edward E. Reardon and Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.
Mr. Willis B. Rice, of New York City, for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lightmore Appliance Corporation and Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Lightmore Appliance Corporation, is a corporation, organized on or about July 14, 1930, under the laws of the State of New York, having a place of business at Nos. 16 to 20 East Twelfth Street in the city of New York, and it is and has been since on or about the date of its organization engaged in the business of the manufacture and in the business of the sale of incandescent lamps.

Par. 2. Respondent, Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized on or about February 10, 1934, under the laws of the State of New York, having a place of business at Nos. 16 to 20 East Twelfth Street in the city of New York, and it is and has been since on or about the date of its organization engaged in the business of the sale of incandescent lamps. The respondents above mentioned occupy the same premises in the city of New York as their place of business.

Par. 3. Peter Kornstein, Augusta Kornstein, and Louis Gottlieb, residents of the city of New York, are and have been, respectively, the president, vice president, and the secretary-treasurer of each respondent corporation since the time of its organization above mentioned and they have directed and controlled the business and all the activities of the respondents in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps.

Par. 4. During all the times, respectively, since their organization as corporations the respondent Solar-Ray Lamp Co., directly, and the respondent Lightmore Appliance Corporation, either directly or through the Solar-Ray Lamp Co., have sold incandescent lamps, manufactured by respondent Lightmore Appliance Corporation or others, including the lamps hereinafter mentioned and referred to, some of which were made and sold for general lighting service for operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations and some of which were made and sold for country home lighting service for operation in connection with electric current supplied from storage batteries and low-voltage generators, to purchasers, including wholesale dealers or jobbers and retail dealers therein, located in various States of the United States other than New York or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale by the dealer for use or consumption. The respondents, respectively, have caused the lamps when so sold by them to be transported from New York, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in other States.

Par. 5. During all the times above mentioned and for many years prior thereto, other individuals, firms, and corporations, hereinafter referred to as sellers, have been engaged, some of them in the business of the manufacture and sale, and others in the business of the sale of incandescent lamps for operation both with electric current supplied by public service corporations for general lighting service and with electric current supplied for country home lighting service from storage batteries and low-voltage generators, to purchasers, wholesale dealers, or jobbers and retail dealers therein, located in various States of the United States other than the State of the seller or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale by the dealers for use or consumption. The sellers, respectively, have caused the lamps, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in other States.

Par. 6. The respondents, in the sale of incandescent lamps, are and have been in substantial competition in interstate commerce with the other individuals, firms, and corporations, referred to as sellers in paragraph 5 hereof, during all the times referred to in paragraph 4 hereof.

Par. 7. Substantially, at all the times above mentioned and referred to and for many years prior thereto, it has been the custom and practice of public service corporations throughout the United States to supply users of electric current for general lighting service in the respective communities served by them, variously for the particular community, on either 110-, 115-, or 120-volt multiple circuits, as the case may be. During said times, all the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps throughout the United States have known of this custom and practice and of the voltage of the electric current supplied by the service corporations in their respective localities.

Substantially, at all the times above mentioned and referred to and for many years prior thereto, it has been known to and recognized by all of the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps throughout the United States that the electromotive force supplied by storage batteries and low-voltage generators for service in the operation of country home lighting has averaged and continues to average from 28–32 volts.

Par. 8. There is and has been, during all the times above mentioned and referred to and for many years prior thereto, an established and universal custom in the United States in connection with the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps manufactured for general lighting service for operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations, and of incandescent lamps manufactured for country home service for operation in connection with electric current supplied from storage batteries and low-voltage generators, that, at the times they are displayed or offered for sale or sold by the manufacturers to dealer distributors for resale and at the times they are displayed or offered for sale or sold by manufacturers, dealer distributors, or others to users or consumers, including the Federal and State Governments and their agencies, and municipal and other corporations, and members of the public, the lamps shall be legibly, durably marked or branded, among other things, with the words and figures indicating, respectively, the number of volts and watts that is the measure of their electromotive force and power, allowing for certain tolerances, more or less, in the statement of the number of watts with which they are marked or branded. The tolerances in the watt measurement above referred to are and have been known to and recognized, substantially by all the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps in the United States during all the times above mentioned and referred to. And, the tolerances in the watt measurements of incandescent lamps manufactured for general lighting service, above referred to, have during said times coincided with the tolerances as set forth in the Federal Specifications for the purchase of incandescent lamps by the United States Government.

Par. 9. Prior to and during all the times above mentioned and referred to, it is and has been the universal understanding in the commercial manufacturing and distributing industries in incandescent lamps, that the lamps operated for general lighting service on 110-, 115-, and 120-volt multiple circuits should produce a certain number of lumens of light per watt, according to the watt rating of the lamp, allowing for certain tolerances of measure above or below the said number of lumens, in order to be adequately and practicably efficient in the production of light. During substantially all of the times above mentioned and referred to, the said number of lumens per watt and the tolerances referred to, have been known to and have been recognized by the members of the manufacturing and distributing industries engaged in the commercial manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps in the United States, and substantially during said times the lamps made and sold by the members of the said industries when operated for general lighting service have produced the amount of lumens per watt above referred to, which has during said times coincided with the amount of lumens per watt and with the tolerances therefor as set forth in the Federal Specifications for the purchase of incandescent lamps by the United States Government.

For example, for the years beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1933; beginning July 1, 1933, and ending June 30, 1934; and beginning July 1, 1934, and ending June 30, 1935, the rated initial lumens, and the rated initial lumens per watt for large tungsten fila-

For the 2 years above mentioned, from July 1, 1933 to June 30, 1934, and July 1, 1934 to June 30, 1935, the rated lumens per watt for the 25-watt lamps listed above were for 115-volt lamps only. For 25-watt lamps, for 110-volt multiple lighting service, to obtain the correct rated lumens per watt there should be added 0.05 to the rated lumens per watt listed above; and, for 120-volt lamps there should be subtracted 0.05 from the rated lumens per watt listed above.

For the 2 years from July 1, 1933 to June 30, 1935, the rated lumens listed above for the 40-, 60-, 75-, and 100-watt lamps were for 115-volt lamps only. To obtain the correct rated lumens for 110-volt lamps of those watt measurements there should be added 0.15; and, for 120-volt lamps of such watt measurement there should be subtracted 0.15 from the lumens per watt listed above.
PAR. 10. The tolerances allowed in the statement of the number of watts with which incandescent lamps are and have been marked or branded and the tolerances allowed and recognized in the measure of the lumens of light produced by incandescent lamps or the rate of lumens per watt mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 8 and 9 hereof, during the times mentioned and referred to in said paragraphs 8 and 9, for example, for the years beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1933; beginning July 1, 1933, and ending June 30, 1934; and beginning July 1, 1934, and ending June 30, 1935, for large tungsten filament lamps for general lighting service, on 110-, 115-, and 120-volt multiple circuits, for standard bulbs marked 25, 40, 60, 75, and 100 watts, were as follows:

PAR. 11. At all times in the use of incandescent lamps, the purchaser, or user, of the lamp is really buying light and the most efficient lamp is the one which produces the required amount of light for the least cost. Generally the cost of the electricity consumed by an incandescent lamp is many times more than the cost of the lamp to the purchaser or user and the efficiency of the lamp purchased by the user determines how advantageously or economically the electricity used by the lamp produces light. Lamps of low efficiency are inferior to lamps of high efficiency and waste electricity, thereby increasing the cost of light to the purchaser.
Incandescent lamps may be manufactured or designed for a long or a short life performance but as the efficiency of such lamps is in general not maintained at their initial light output beyond a certain period, it is desirable to manufacture such lamps in accordance with a design for a certain period of life, and to such effect that they will come as nearly as possible to maintaining their initial light output throughout their life.

There is and has been during all the times above mentioned and referred to, a standard of life performance, stated in hours, for large tungsten filament incandescent lamps of the different watt measurements for general lighting service, for 110-, 115-, and 120-volt multiple lighting service and which lamps produce, respectively, the amount of lumens of light referred to in paragraph 9 hereof, the amount of lumens for 25-, 40-, 60-, 75-, and 100-watt lamps being, for example, set forth in said paragraph 9. The standard of life performance above referred to coincides with the specifications therefor in the above-mentioned Federal Specifications for such incandescent lamps, and is known to, and recognized by, all the members of the industry engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps throughout the United States.

The efficient life performance, referred to, of incandescent lamps measuring 25, 40, 60, 75, and 100 watts, and of standard lumen production as above set forth, was, during the year beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1933, 1,000 hours, respectively. For the years beginning July 1, 1933 and ending June 30, 1934, and beginning July 1, 1934 and ending June 30, 1935, it was 1,000 hours for lamps rated at 25, 40, and 60 watts, and for lamps rated at 75 and 100 watts, the rated life performance was 750 hours, respectively.

Par. 12. During all the times above mentioned it is and has been the reasonable, regular, and customary practice of all members of the industries in the United States engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps for country-home service, to design them for an average electromotive force, or voltage, suitable for operation on 28-32-volt circuits, and only of 15-, 25-, 50-, and 100-watts elec-tromotive power.

During all the times above referred to, standard incandescent lamps,
A-17, A-19, A-21, and A-23, for country-home service and of 15, 25, 50, and 100 watts, respectively, and of an average voltage of 28-32-volts have been customarily made to produce 160, 318, 770, and 1,720 rated initial lumens respectively; or, 10.7, 12.7, 15.4, and 17.2
rated initial lumens per watt, respectively, and such lamps have been customarily represented and sold to have and they have had during said times, respectively, an average life performance of 1,000 hours.
Par. 13. During the times mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 4 and 6 hereof the respondents in offering for sale and in the sale of incandescent lamps sold by them as set forth in said paragraph 4 have represented to dealers and to members of the public who purchase such lamps for use, on the bulbs of the lamps and in advertisements on the labels of the cartons in which the individual lamps were packed when sold by them, and in which they were re-sold by dealers to the public for use, as set forth in said paragraph 4, and they have also represented to dealers and to the public in statements and representations in circulars and other advertisements to the effect that the lamps referred to and so sold by them were manufactured by and were the product of the respondent Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc. The respondents have also represented to dealers and to the public in statements in circulars and in other printed forms of advertising and verbally through their respective officers, agents, and salesmen that the incandescent lamps so sold by them, respectively, were a guaranteed product made in the United States of America by highly skilled American workers.

The respondents made and caused dealers or others, engaged in the sale of their said lamps to make, in turn, the above statements and representations to the public who purchase incandescent lamps for use; and the respondents further made and caused dealers and others likewise to make statements in similar forms of advertisements to the effect that the incandescent lamps sold by them for general-lighting service under the trade names or trade-marks Solar-Ray and Lightmore, respectively, were guaranteed to give 1,000 hours average service and that their lamps were made according to and that they complied with the standard specifications set by the United States Government (Catalog W–L–101); that the lamps were made for service and economy, were quality products, were rigidly tested and checked by experts at every stage of manufacture before leaving the factory in order to insure their high quality and uniformity; that the lamps were offered for sale and sold at lower prices than incandescent lamps were offered for sale and sold by competitors, which prices were made possible by short cut, efficient methods of distribution and by the elimination of red tape and heavy overhead expenses which enabled the respondents to pass on to the public a substantial important saving if their incandescent lamps were purchased by dealers and users in preference to lamps of respondents' competitors; that the use of the mushroom lamp, made by respondents, effected a gain of 36 percent in light, or a saving of 36 percent in lighting cost; that, by replacing an 100-watt ordinary standard lamp with an 100-watt mushroom lamp made by the respondents, the user would get light exceeding that given by an ordinary 150-watt lamp of a competitor; that the fact that respondents' mushroom lamps give 36 percent more light than ordinary standard lamps of competitors has been proven by scientific tests.

The respondents during the times above mentioned and referred to, represented in printed circulars and catalogs of their lamps, that orders received by them from dealers or others for country home-service lamps made by the respondents, respectively, should specify "28–32-volts" and "Country Home Lighting," and also represented in their catalogs that country home-service lamps sold by them were of the voltage 28–32 volts; and the respondents represented that the incandescent lamps made by them for country home service were guaranteed to give 1,000 hours average service, that is that they would have 1,000 hours of life performance.

The respondents made and caused dealers and others, in turn, to make the above statements and representations concerning the incandescent lamps sold by them, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, and many other statements and representations similar in form and effect during the times above mentioned.

The respondents caused statements of the watt and voltage measurement of the electromotive force and power of the incandescent lamps sold by them, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, to be printed or placed on the bulbs of the lamps by such method and in such manner that the figures or numbers representing the number of watts and volts were easily erased, and contrary to the usual custom in marking or branding such numbers or figures, employed by the members of the industries engaged in making and selling such lamps in the United States who etch or otherwise cause such numbers or figures to be placed on the lamps practically permanently during their lifetime use.

Par. 14. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, the respondent Solar Ray Lamp Co. was not engaged in the manufacture of incandescent lamps, and the representation above referred to that it was the manufacturer of the lamps sold by it, was false.

During all the times above mentioned the figures or numbers which the respondents caused to be printed or placed on the bulbs of the incandescent lamps sold by them, representing the number of watts of their electromotive power, were either greatly in excess of or less than the actual watt measurement of the lamps, after taking into consideration the tolerance above mentioned, and the respondents knew or with ordinary care should have known, their lamps were falsely branded or labeled with respect to their watt measurement.
The respondents, knowing or having reason to believe their lamps to be falsely branded or labeled in that respect, caused the watt marking to be placed on the lamps in such manner that it could be and was easily, purposely, or accidentally by wear and tear, erased and the evidence thereby destroyed, which would show to be false, the statements and representations respecting the same, made by the respondents to dealers and caused by respondents to be passed on by the dealers, in turn, to members of the public.

In consequence of the false marking or branding of the watt measurement and the method by which respondents' lamps were marked or branded, purchasers and users of respondents' lamps, as a practical matter, were thereby prevented from readily learning the facts concerning the operation of the lamps in comparison with the facts in the operation of lamps of competitors, and in further consequence from learning that the lamps of competitors were more efficient in producing light and less expensive than respondents' to purchase and to operate.

During the times above mentioned the incandescent lamps for general lighting service, sold by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, were not made according to, and they did not when made comply with, the Federal Specifications for the purchase of incandescent lamps by the United States Government, in that, among other particulars, the actual measure of their electromotive power was generally either above or below the number of watts with which they were marked or branded or caused to be marked or branded by the respondents and generally they were lower in lumen efficiency, and in lumens per watt, than the measure of lumen efficiency and lumens per watt contained in the Federal Specifications above referred to, and they were lower in number of lumens of light per watt than is and has been the recognized requirement for such lamps within the understanding of the commercial manufacturing and distributing industries in such lamps in the United States during said times, after allowing for the tolerances above mentioned.

The lamps, both those for general lighting and those for country home-lighting service, so sold by the respondents as above set forth were not the product of highly skilled American workers and made in the United States of America, but were lamps a part of which, namely the bases, were made by foreign workmen in a foreign country and marked at the time of their importation into the United States with the name of the foreign country in which such bases were made. Such bases, when the lamps in which they were used by respondents were assembled ready for sale and distribution, were so marked that the name of the country in which they were manufactured was concealed and therefore not visible to purchasers or prospective purchasers or users of respondents' lamps. The respondents caused such lamps, made in part in a foreign country and by foreign workmen, to be falsely stamped on the outside and also to be falsely represented in advertisements with the words "Made in U. S. A."

The lamps sold by the respondents above referred to, both those made for general-lighting service and those made for country home-lighting service, were not quality products; were not economical in use; were not rigidly tested and checked by experts before leaving respondents' factory to insure high quality and uniformity. The respondents' lamps were not offered for sale and sold at lower prices than incandescent lamps represented to be for the same service or use and of the same watt measurement which were offered for sale and sold by competitors. The respondents did not pass on to the public who purchased incandescent lamps made and sold by them, as above set forth, any saving in expense either in the purchase of their lamps or in the operation of their lamps afterwards in use, but on the contrary the initial cost and also the cost of operation of respondents' lamps was more expensive to members of the public than the initial cost and the cost of operation of lamps of respondents' competitors. The so-called mushroom lamp made and sold by the respondents did not effect a gain of 36 percent or of any percent in lighting cost, and, when an 100-watt mushroom lamp of the respondents was used to replace an 100-watt ordinary standard lamp of respondents' competitors, the user of such a mushroom lamp would not get light exceeding that given by an 100-watt ordinary standard lamp, but on the contrary the use of the so-called mushroom lamp, in any watt size, made by the respondents produced less light, and was more expensive in lighting cost than a standard lamp of the same watt measurement made and sold by respondents' competitors.

While the respondents represented to purchasers and prospective purchasers that purchasers should specify "28-32-volts" in purchasing respondents' incandescent lamps for country-home lighting, the respondents sold such lamps for country home-lighting service which they marked or labeled "28-40 volts," and incandescent lamps for country-home service with a range of 28 to 40 volts are impracticable for use and the life of such lamps when operated at 40 volts would not exceed, in many instances, more than 20 to 30 hours.

The incandescent lamps made and sold by the respondents for general lighting service and for country home-lighting service did not give 1,000 hours average service, or have a life performance of 1,000 hours, excepting in such instances when respondents' lamps were so deficient in lumen production that as a consequence their life performance was thereby extended and equalled or surpassed the period of 1,000 hours, during which time such lamps did not maintain their initial light output throughout their life performance and they were during such period inefficient and excessively expensive in operation.

Each and all of the representations mentioned and referred to in paragraph 13 hereof, made and caused to be made by respondents concerning the incandescent lamps made and sold by them, including the incandescent lamps made and sold by them as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, were false representations of material facts in the sale of incandescent lamps and when made by the respondents were known, or with reasonable care should have been known by them to be false.

Par. 15. The statements and representations made by the respondents mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 13 and 14 hereof had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead wholesale and retail dealers and to cause such dealers in turn to pass on to members of the public, purchasers, and users of incandescent lamps, the representations made by the respondents; and, the said wholesale and retail dealers and members of the public were deceived and misled thereby into purchasing the respondents lamps, to their injury and prejudice, in place of incandescent lamps sold by respondents' competitors, and trade in incandescent lamps was thereby diverted from respondents' competitors to the respondents.

Par. 16. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondents were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act (U. S. Code, Title 15, Sec. 45), the Federal Trade Commission, on October 9, 1935, issued, and October 11, 1935, served its complaint in this proceeding upon Lightmore Appliance Corporation and Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act, and respondents entered their appearance and filed their answer herein. Thereafter hearings were held and evidence was introduced by E. E. Reardon and Clark Nichols, attorneys for the Commission, and two of the four witnesses were cross-examined by Willis B. Rice, attorney for respondents, before John W. Addison, trial examiner theretofore duly appointed by the Commission. Opportunity was given respondents to offer testimony in their behalf. Thereupon this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, evidence, and brief on behalf of the Commission (brief for respondents and oral argument having been waived), and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents, Lightmore Appliance Corporation and Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., are, respectively, 1930 and 1934 New York corporations, having their places of business in common at 16–18–20 East Twelfth Street, New York, N. Y.

Paragraph 2. Philip (misnamed "Peter" in the complaint) Kornstein is president, Augusta Kornstein, vice president, and Louis Gottlieb, secretary-treasurer of both companies. They have controlled the business and activities of both companies from inception.

Paragraph 3. Respondent Lightmore Appliance Corporation employs about 20 people and has been and is engaged in the business of making incandescent lamps in New York—some for general-lighting service in connection with current supplied by public service companies, and some for country-home lighting by use of current supplied from storage batteries and low-voltage generators—and of selling such lamps to wholesale and retail dealers located in various States of the United States, for resale to the public for use. It causes the lamps so sold to be transported from New York to purchasers located in other States.

Paragraph 4. Respondent Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., is still in existence, but has not continued to do business since about February 1937. Prior to that time it sold a portion of Lightmore Appliance Corporation's output of said lamps in commerce among the several States, in the same manner as Lightmore Appliance Corporation, itself, sold such lamps as aforesaid.

Paragraph 5. General Electric Co. and other corporations, partnerships, or individuals are also engaged in the business, some making and selling and others of selling, incandescent lamps for the same purposes of use as the lamps described in paragraph 3 hereof. They also sell such lamps, in competition in commerce with respondents, to wholesale and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States.
other than the State of the seller, for resale to the public for use, and cause the lamps so sold to be transported from the State of the seller to the purchasers located in other States.

Par. 6. Substantially at all the times above mentioned and referred to, and for many years prior thereto, it has been the custom and practice of public service corporations throughout the United States to supply users of electric current for general-lighting service in the respective communities served by them, variously for the particular community, on either 110-, 115-, or 120-volt multiple circuits, as the case may be. During said times, all the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps throughout the United States have known of this custom and practice and of the voltage of the electric current supplied by the service corporations in their respective localities.

Par. 7. Substantially at all the times above mentioned and referred to, and for many years prior thereto, it has been known to and recognized by all of the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps throughout the United States that the electromotive force supplied by storage batteries and low-voltage generators for service in the operation of country home lighting, has averaged and continues to average 28–32 volts.

Par. 8. At all times in the use of incandescent lamps, the purchaser or user of the lamp is really buying light, and the most efficient lamp is the one which produces the required amount of light for the least cost. Generally, the cost of the electricity consumed by an incandescent lamp is many times more than the cost of the lamp to the purchaser or user, and the efficiency of the lamp purchased by the user determines how advantageously or economically the electricity used by the lamp produces light. Lamps of low efficiency are inferior to lamps of high efficiency and waste electricity, thereby increasing the cost of light to the purchaser.

Par. 9. Incandescent lamps may be manufactured or designed for a long- or a short-life performance, but, as the efficiency of such lamps is in general not maintained at their initial light output beyond a certain period, it is desirable to manufacture such lamps in accordance with a design for a certain period of life, and to such effect that they will come as near as possible to maintaining their initial output throughout their life.

Par. 10. During all the times above mentioned it is and has been the reasonable, regular, and customary practice of all members of the industries in the United States engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps for country-home service, to design them for an average electromotive force or voltage suitable for operation on 28–32 volt circuits, and only of 15, 25, 50, and 100 watts electromotive power.
Findings

Par. 11. Respondents, to promote the sale of said lamps, represent or represented that the lamps:

(a) Are guaranteed to give 1,000 hours average service.

(b) Are made according to and comply with the standard specifications set by the United States Government.

(c) Are quality products made for service and economy and are rigidly tested and checked by experts at every stage of manufacture, in order to insure high quality and uniformity; are sold at prices lower than prices of competing lamps; that such lower prices are made possible by short cut, efficient methods of distribution, and by the elimination of red tape and heavy overhead expenses which enable them to pass on to the public buying their lamps in preference to competing lamps, a substantial, important saving.

(d) Are guaranteed products, made in the United States by skilled American workers.

It is further represented by respondents that the country home-service lamps are of the voltage 28–32 volts and that purchase orders should specify "28–32 volts" and "country-home lighting." It is represented by respondent Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., that it was the manufacturer of lamps sold by it prior to February 1937.

Par. 12. In truth and in fact:

(a) The lamps have no guarantor other than respondents; they do not give 1,000 hours average service. Tests of 125 general lighting lamps and 25 country home-service lamps sold in commerce by the respondents showed service varying from zero to 8,707 hours and averaging for different wattages from 391 to 930 hours for the general-service lamps, and from 406 to 4,056 for the country home-service lamps. They are very erratic in both intake and output. In many cases lamps labeled 60 watts use more current and emit more light than those labeled 100 watts. Some of the lamps produce over twice as much light as others which bear identical labels as to voltage and wattage.

(b) The lamps are not made according to and in compliance with the standards and specifications set by the United States Government. The Government buys no 28–40-volt lamps and has set no specifications for such lamps. The requirements of Government specifications for initial light output, with wattage and output tolerances allowable for 25-, 40-, 60-, 75-, and 100-watt large tungsten filament lamps, for general-lighting service in 110-, 115-, and 120-volt multiple lighting circuits, for the 3 years ending June 30, 1935, are correctly set forth in the tables in paragraphs 9 and 10 of the complaint. Respondents' general-lighting service lamps, in the majority... of cases, do not meet these requirements. They either greatly exceed or fall far short of labeled wattage and of the light output required for lamps so marked.

(c) The lamps are not products of high quality and uniformity, effecting good service and economy; they are not rigidly tested and checked by experts at every stage of manufacture in order to insure high quality and uniformity; they are not sold at prices lower than prices of competing lamps, and respondents do not pass on to the public, buying their lamps in preference to competing lamps, substantial or important savings. On the contrary, it is estimated by the Bureau of Standards, that if respondents’ lamps had been used throughout the United States in the year 1931, instead of the 25-, 40-, 60-, 75-, and 100-watt lamps that were used, 109.1 million more lamps would have been required, and the cost of current for operating respondents’ lamps, assuming a price of 5 cents per kilowatt hours, would have been $107,000,000 greater than was paid for the current consumed by the lamps actually used.

(d) The lamps are not wholly made in the United States by skilled American workers. Many of them contain bases made in Japan by foreign workers, and labeled “Made in Japan”; but this label is concealed from the view of buyers when these bases are by respondents placed in lamps ready for use. The cost of these bases is $4.25 per thousand, as compared with $5.65 per thousand for domestic bases.

(e) The country home-service lamps are not labeled 28–32 volts, but are labeled 28–40 volts. The voltage range of 28–40 is impracticable, because a lamp burning in a 28-volt circuit should last about 125 times as long as the same lamp in a 40-volt circuit.

Par. 13. Each and all of the false, misleading, and untrue representations so made by respondents, as set forth in paragraph 11, have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and false belief that said representations are true; and to induce a number of the purchasing public to buy a substantial quantity of said lamps when they would not buy them except for such erroneous and false belief. Further, said representations have the capacity and tendency, as a direct consequence of such erroneous and false belief induced by the misrepresentations of respondents, as aforesaid, to cause a number of the purchasing public to buy substantial quantities of said merchandise, with the result that trade is diverted unfairly to respondents from other individuals, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale of incandescent lamps, who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise. Substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents herein to their competitors in commerce among the several States of the United States, and to the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and representations of the respondents, Lightmore Appliance Corporation and Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Lightmore Appliance Corporation and Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of incandescent electric lamp bulbs in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that the respondent Solar-Ray Lamp Co., Inc., is a manufacturer of incandescent electric lamp bulbs, unless and until said respondent actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls, a manufacturing plant wherein said products are manufactured.

2. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' lamp bulbs are made by skilled American workmen, with the most modern equipment, from the finest materials obtainable, under the supervision of highly paid engineers who have devoted their lives to the manufacture of incandescent lamp bulbs, unless such is the fact.

3. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' lamp bulbs will give 1,000 hours average service, unless and until such bulbs meet this standard.
4. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' lamp bulbs are made according to the standard specifications fixed by the United States Government, unless and until such bulbs meet these specifications.

5. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' lamp bulbs are rigidly tested and checked by experts at every stage of manufacture, unless such is the fact.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that incandescent lamp bulbs, known as country home-service lamps, constructed for use on 28–40-volt circuits will operate efficiently on a 28–32-volt circuit.

7. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' said products sell for less, or operate more economically, than similar products offered for sale and sold by competitors.

8. Selling, or offering for sale, as products wholly made in the United States by skilled American workmen, electric lamp bulbs constructed with bases imported from Japan.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SIDNEY A. WEITZMAN, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS CERTIFIED SALES SERVICE

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of various articles of merchandise, including clocks, cameras, electric dry shavers, and other articles; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising, which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for distribution of said articles to members of public, wholly by lot or chance, and which consisted of push cards for use in sale and distribution of his said products under a plan and in accordance with said cards' explanatory legends by which amount paid for chance, or receipt of free chance, as case might be, by purchaser or customer was dependent upon number pushed by chance, and receipt by customer of article being thus disposed of was dependent upon success or failure in selecting from list on card, girl's name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal, and under which, in case of some, person selecting by chance certain number received secondary prizes, and maker of last purchase, and under which, failing the aforesaid contingencies, customer received nothing, and operator of card was compensated for services by one of said articles being thus disposed of; and

Supplied and placed thereby in hands of others means by which games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes were conducted through distribution to public wholly by lot or chance of such articles, and ascertainment, similarly, of amount, if any, paid for chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure one of said articles without cost, or by expenditure of a sum much less than price at which one of said articles would sell in usual course of retail trade, contrary to an established policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several of the States, and in competition with many who sell articles of merchandise of like or similar type, grade, and quality, and are unwilling to sell such articles by any method or sales plan involving game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme and refrain from use thereof;

With result that many persons were attracted by element of chance involved in sales plan or method by which articles dealt in by him were distributed to public by use of such cards and induced to purchase such articles from him in preference to like or similar articles of competitors who do not furnish with their merchandise any push card or other device or devices by which such articles can be distributed to public by lot or chance, and he sold, as result, substantial quantities of his merchandise and trade was thus diverted unfairly to him from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sidney A. Weitzman, individually and trading as Certified Sales Service, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual trading under the name and style of Certified Sales Service, with his principal office and place of business located at 357 West Sixty-third Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in offering for sale and selling various articles of merchandise including, among others, clocks, cameras, automatic vibro shavers, Marvel dry shavers, fountain pen and desk sets, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. He causes said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused and causes the representation to be made to his customers and prospective customers by his salesmen and agents, and to be set forth on his business stationery, billheads, invoices, and other printed literature, that he is a manufacturer's distributor of the merchandise which he sells, making among other representations the following:

Certified Sales Service—Manufacturers' Distributors

By the representation that he is a manufacturer's distributor, respondent represents that he is the direct distributor of the concern or concerns manufacturing the merchandise which he sells. A substantial portion of the purchasing public have expressed, and have, a preference for purchasing merchandise direct from the manufacturer or his distributors, such persons believing that they secure lower prices, superior quality, and other advantages that are not obtained when they purchase from an independent selling agency or middleman.

Par. 3. The use by respondent of said representation that he is a manufacturer’s distributor has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive many of respondent’s said customers and prospective customers into the erroneous belief that respondent is the direct distributor of a business concern or business concerns which control and operate a factory or factories in which the merchandise sold by respondent is manufactured and that persons dealing with the respondent are buying such merchandise from the direct agent of the manufacturer thereof, thereby eliminating the profits of middlemen and obtaining various advantages, including advantages in service, delivery, and adjustment of account, that are not obtained by persons purchasing goods from middlemen. The truth and fact is that respondent is not the direct distributor for the manufacturer or manufacturers of the merchandise which he sells, but on the contrary only purchases from others the merchandise which he sells.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many who manufacture the merchandise which they sell or who are direct distributors of such manufacturers and who rightfully represent that they are the manufacturers thereof or are the distributors of such manufacturers. There are others of said competitors who purchase the merchandise in which they deal and resell the same at a profit to themselves and who in no wise represent that they manufacture said merchandise or are the manufacturers’ distributors. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent, as set out in paragraphs 2 and 3, tend to and do divert business from and otherwise injure and prejudice said competitors.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in interstate commerce, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The methods and practices adopted and used by respondent are substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the public through the United States mails in interstate commerce certain literature, instructions, and sales outfits, including paper push cards, order blanks, and advertisements containing illustrations of his merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling said merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of the push cards. Said push cards bear a number of feminine names with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said push cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated disks marked "Push," below each of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the cards. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the cards. The push cards have a master disk, concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards. The push cards bear printed legends or instructions, one of which is as follows:

VIBRO

Numbers Under 29

Numbers Over 29
Only Pay 29¢

The other push cards bear similar legends, but vary in detail. Such variations cover the merchandise to be distributed, the quantity thereof, and the price to be paid therefor. Said articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondent vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push cards. Sales of merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. The fact as to whether a customer receives a specified article of merchandise or nothing for the amount paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which a customer pays for a particular push is also determined wholly by lot or chance.
PAR. 6. Respondent, in selling his said merchandise in connection with the aforesaid push cards, conducts lotteries or places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The sale of respondent's merchandise to the purchasing public, as hereinabove alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure respondent's merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 7. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 20, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Sidney A. Weitzman, individually, and trading as Certified Sales Service, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issu-
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. THE RESPONDENT, SIDNEY A. WEITZMAN, IS AN INDIVIDUAL TRADING UNDER THE NAME AND STYLE OF CERTIFIED SALES SERVICE, WITH HIS PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS AT 357 WEST SIXTY-THIRD STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. HE HAS BEEN ENGAGED IN THE BUSINESS OF OFFERING FOR SALE AND SELLING VARIOUS ARTICLES OF MERCHANDISE, INCLUDING CLOCKS, CAMERAS, ELECTRIC DRY SHAVERS, AUTOMATIC VIBRO SHAVERS, AND FOUNTAIN PEN AND DESK SETS. RESPONDENT CAUSES AND HAS CAUSED SAID ARTICLES OF MERCHANDISE WHEN SOLD TO BE SHIPPED OR TRANSPORTED FROM HIS AFORESAID PLACE OF BUSINESS IN THE STATE OF ILLINOIS TO PURCHASERS THEREOF IN VARIOUS OTHER STATES OF THE UNITED STATES AT THEIR RESPECTIVE POINTS OF LOCATION. THERE IS NOW AND HAS BEEN FOR SOME TIME LAST PAST A COURSE OF TRADE BY RESPONDENT IN SUCH MERCHANDISE IN COMMERCE BETWEEN AND AMONG VARIOUS STATES OF THE UNITED STATES. IN THE COURSE AND CONDUCT OF HIS SAID BUSINESS RESPONDENT HAS BEEN AND IS NOW IN ACTIVE COMPETITION WITH VARIOUS PARTNERSHIPS AND CORPORATIONS, AND WITH OTHER PERSONS ALSO ENGAGED IN THE SALE AND DISTRIBUTION OF LIKE AND SIMILAR ARTICLES OF MERCHANDISE IN COMMERCE BETWEEN AND AMONG VARIOUS STATES OF THE UNITED STATES.

PAR. 2. IN THE COURSE AND CONDUCT OF HIS BUSINESS, AS DESCRIBED IN PARAGRAPH 1 HEREOF, RESPONDENT, IN SOLICITING THE SALE OF THE ARTICLES OF MERCHANDISE DEALT IN BY HIM, AND IN SELLING AND DISTRIBUTING SAME, HAS FURNISHED VARIOUS DEVICES AND PLANS OF MERCHANDISING WHICH INVOLVED THE OPERATION OF GAMES OF CHANCE, GIFT ENTERPRISES, OR LOTTERY SCHEMES BY WHICH SAID ARTICLES OF MERCHANDISE HAVE BEEN DISTRIBUTED TO MEMBERS OF THE PUBLIC WHOLLY BY LOT OR CHANCE. SAID DEVICES AND plans of merchandising consisted of push cards which were operated in substantially the following manner:

Each of the cards had printed thereon a number of girls' names, and below each name was a partially perforated disk which concealed a number. Each of the cards also had stamped thereon a larger disk in the form of a seal which concealed a name which was the same as one of the names on the card. Members of the public were solicited to select one or more of the names on the card and pay the number of cents indicated by the number concealed by the disk below each of the names selected. When all of the names were selected the seal was removed and the name concealed thereby was disclosed and the article of merchandise involved in the operation of the card was given to the person who had selected the name which was the same as that concealed by the seal, and the agent or salesman in charge of each of some types of the cards, who had induced members of the public to select the names and to pay the amounts indicated by the concealed numbers, also was given, for his services in this regard, one of the articles of merchandise involved in each of the lotteries. With some of the types of cards so used selectors of numbers higher than 29 paid only 29 cents, and with one type of the cards used selectors of numbers higher than 25 paid only 25 cents, and some of the numbers were designated as "Free," and selectors of those numbers paid nothing; and the selectors of No. 33 and the person to whom the last sale was made on one of the cards each was given a secondary prize, but the selectors of all other numbers received nothing. Each of the articles of merchandise distributed by the use of one of the cards was of a value greater than the cost of the selection of any one of the names on one of the cards. By the use of these cards the articles of merchandise dealt in by respondent were distributed to the public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount that any member of the public was required to pay for a chance to participate in the lottery or whether such chance was free also was determined wholly by lot or chance. As a result of the use of these cards respondent has sold between 400 and 500 electric dry shavers in sets of two for which he obtained $16.95 for each set; also about 100 vibro shavers in sets of two for which he obtained $6.95 for each set; also about 200 cameras in sets of two for which he obtained $7.95 for each set; also about 100 rotary clocks in sets of two for which he obtained $6.45 for each set; also about 200 pendulum clocks for which he obtained $8.95 each.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished push cards and the sales plans as described in paragraph 2 hereof, used same in purchasing, selling, and distributing articles of merchandise obtained from respondent. Respondent in this manner has supplied to others, and placed in their hands the means by which games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes have been conducted. The sale and distribution of articles of merchandise by the use of such push cards and in accordance with such sales plans, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the laws of several of the States of the United States. Many competitors of respondent sell articles of merchandise of like or similar type, grade, and quality to those sold by respondent, and in competition with respondent, which competitors are unwilling to sell such articles of merchandise by any method or sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and refrain from the use of same, and as a result are placed at a disadvantage in competition.

PAR. 4. The sale and distribution of articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner, and by the method hereinbefore found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of such articles of merchandise without cost or by the expenditure of a sum of money much less than the price at which one of such articles of merchandise would sell in the usual course of retail trade. Many persons have been attracted by the element of chance involved in the sales plan or method by which articles of merchandise dealt in by respondent have been distributed to the public by the use of push cards, and have been induced to purchase such articles of merchandise from respondent in preference to like or similar articles of merchandise sold by competitors of respondent who did not and do not furnish with articles of merchandise sold by them any push card, or other device or devices by the use of which such articles of merchandise could be distributed to the public by lot or chance, and as a result respondent has sold substantial quantities of the articles of merchandise, which has caused trade to be diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinbefore found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief of the attorney for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sidney A. Weitzman, individually, and trading as Certified Sales Service, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, cameras, electric dry shavers, automatic Vibro shavers, fountain pen and desk sets, or any other merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hand of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

FRED W. HERRSCHNER, JR., INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS 20TH CENTURY SALES CO.

Where an individual, engaged in sale and distribution of cameras, vibro shavers, clocks, and pen and pencil sets; in soliciting sale of and in selling his said articles—

Furnished to purchasers and prospective purchasers of his said merchandise various devices and plans and methods of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was to be distributed to members of public wholly by lot or chance through use of push cards, under plan and in accordance with said cards' explanatory legends and instructions for use thereof by which amount paid by customer for chance or, in case of some, receipt of free chance was dependent upon particular number selected by chance, and customer's receipt of article being thus disposed of was dependent upon success or failure in selecting from list of girls' names displayed on card name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal and under which, failing such contingencies, customer received nothing; and

Supplied thereby and placed in the hands of others means by which lotteries were conducted in the sale and distribution of articles of merchandise sold by said individual and under which distribution of such articles and amount, if any, which member of public was required to pay for chance to obtain such an article was determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles for sum less than price at which such or similar articles were being sold in usual course of retail trade, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several States, and in competition with those engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles and who do not make use of any game of chance, gift enterprise, lottery scheme, or other similar device or devices in sale of their products;

With result that many purchasers of articles sold by said individual were attracted by element of chance in sales plan and method used by him and thereby induced to purchase his articles in preference to like or similar products offered and sold by competitors who did not use same or similar sales plans and methods, and public, by reason of such preference, purchased substantial volume of merchandise from him, and trade was diverted unfairly to him from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

20TH CENTURY SALES CO.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Fred W. Herrschner, Jr., individually and trading as 20th Century Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of 20th Century Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 329 South Wood Street, Chicago, Ill. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including, among others, clocks, automatic razors, cameras, and pen and pencil sets, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and a distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards bear a number of girls' names. Concealed under each name is a number. Also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 pay 29¢ for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push cards bear various legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed, and the person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise described without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting purchases of chances, as above described, also receives an article of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names until the selection has been made and the name removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customers pay for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes said devices use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make, sell, or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale or distribution thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell or distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 25, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Fred W. Herrschner, Jr., individually, and trading as 20th Century Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (respondent not having filed answer), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondent, in person (respondent not being represented by counsel), before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed an answer or brief, and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Fred W. Herrschner, Jr., is an individual doing business under the name and style of 20th Century Sales Co., with its principal place of business at 329 South Wood Street, Chicago, Ill. Since about April 1, 1937, respondent has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing cameras, vibro shavers, clocks, and pen and pencil sets. Since about April 1, 1938, respondent also has carried on business under the name and style of Princess Garment Co., and under that name and style has sold and distributed articles of wearing apparel for men and women. Respondent has caused the articles of merchandise sold by him to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois, to the respective purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent at all times mentioned herein has been, and is now in substantial competition with various partnerships and corporations, and other persons, also engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In carrying on his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of articles of merchandise and in the sale and distribution of same, has furnished to purchasers of such merchandise and to prospective purchasers various devices, and plans and methods of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was to be distributed to members of the public wholly by lot or chance, which plans and methods were to be carried on by the use of devices commonly known as "push cards," which cards had printed thereon an explanation of the purposes for which such cards were intended, and detailed instructions to be followed in the use and operation of such cards in the sale and distribution of the articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondent. Also additional detailed instructions concerning the use and operation of the cards were contained in printed matter accompanying such cards. Each of the cards had printed thereon a number of girls' names arranged in alphabetical order, and opposite each name was a space in which the name of the member of the public who had selected that name on the card should be written. Each of the cards had a corresponding number of disks with the word "Push" printed thereon, each immediately below one of the names printed elsewhere on the card, and each disk concealed a number which was disclosed when the disk was separated from the card. Also upon each of the cards was a larger disk in the form of a seal which concealed one of the names printed on the card. When a member of the public selected one of the names he was required to pay the number of cents corresponding with the number concealed by the disk immediately below the name so selected, and when all of the names had been selected the larger disk was removed and the name concealed thereby disclosed, and the person who had selected the name on the card, which was the same as the name concealed by the seal, was given the article of merchandise involved in that particular lottery scheme without further charge. On some of the cards so furnished by respondent, certain of the disks concealed numbers which were designated as free, and selectors of those numbers paid nothing, and in the operation of other cards so furnished by respondent, selectors of numbers higher than 19 paid only 19 cents, and with still other such cards, selectors of numbers higher than 20 paid only 20 cents. Customers who selected names other than that concealed by the seal received nothing. From April 1937, to May 1938, respondent furnished push cards to purchasers of 2,400 cameras, 200 vibro shavers, and a smaller number of clocks. The price obtained by respondent for two of the cameras was $7.59, and for two of the vibro shavers $6.95.

The Commission finds that the articles of merchandise sold by respondent were distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and that the amount which a member of the public was required to pay for a chance to obtain such an article of merchandise, or whether such chance would cost nothing, was determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom respondent furnished push cards, as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, used same in purchasing, selling, and distributing articles of merchandise sold by respondent in accordance with the methods and plans described in said paragraph 2. Respondent in this manner has supplied to others, and placed in their hands, the means by which lotteries have been conducted in the resale and distribution of articles of merchandise sold by respondent; that the sale of such merchandise to the purchasing public by the use of such cards involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise for a sum less than the price at which such articles or like or similar articles were being sold in the usual course of retail trade; that the use by respondent of such methods in the sale and distribution of merchandise has the capacity and tendency to induce, and has induced numerous customers of respondent to purchase the articles of merchandise sold by respondent in preference to like or similar articles of merchandise sold by competitors of respondent who do not use, and have not used, like or similar sales plans or methods in the sale and distribution of articles of merchandise sold by them; that the use of such sales plans and methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several States of the United States.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, persons, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise to those sold by respondent, in commerce between and among various States of the United States, which persons, partnerships and corporations do not make use of any game of chance, gift enterprise, lottery scheme, or other similar device or devices in the sale of such merchandise. Many purchasers of articles of merchandise sold by respondent were attracted by the element of chance in the sales plans and methods used by respondent, and as a result were induced to purchase articles of merchandise sold by respondent in preference to like or similar articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who did not use the same or similar sales plans and methods. Because of this preference the public has purchased a substantial volume of merchandise from respondent with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinbefore found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Fred W. Herrschner, Jr., individually and trading as 20th Century Sales Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cameras, vibro shavers, clocks, pen and pencil sets, or any other merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, to forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public push or pull cards or punchboards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards or punchboards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

E. J. BRACH & SONS, AND EMIL J. BRACH, EDWARD M. KERWIN, EDWIN O. BLOMQUIST, THEODORE STEMPFEL, AND EMIL J. GUTGSELL, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS OFFICERS OF E. J. BRACH & SONS

Where a corporation and three individuals, officers thereof, engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, and as thus engaged in—

(1) Selling its “Betsy Ross” all-metal baskets, with asserted value of $1, and containing 25 pounds of candy, 50 cellophane bags, and push card for sale and distribution of said items under a plan by which purchasers, for 10 cents, of said half-pound cellophane bags of candy, secured right to select one of number of girls' names displayed on said card and received or failed to receive said basket in accordance with success or failure in selecting name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal; and in—

(2) Furnishing to customers, with plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes, 400-hole, 8-section punchboards, for sale and distribution of candy under plan by which two of numbers concealed in said board entitled chance purchasers to 2-pound boxes of candy, for nickel paid, 4 other numbers entitled each of chance selectors to 1-pound box of chocolates, 24 other numbers entitled each of selectors to 1-pound box of chocolates of another type, and makers of last sale in each of aforesaid sections were similarly entitled to pound boxes of such candy, and purchasers thus received, in event of those making selections as aforesaid, prizes greatly exceeding cost of chance and received, in event of selection of 362 other numbers on board, nothing; and in—

(3) Furnishing various other types of punchboards, together with their candles, for distribution by use of such boards to customers in various States in substantially same manner as above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold to wholesalers and jobbers candy manufactured by it and accompanied by punchboards and push cards for use in sale and distribution of said candy by retail dealer-purchasers thereof, who sold and distributed same to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of such candy, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure quantities of candy at prices much less than prevailing price for like or similar candy in usual course of retail trade, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of the States and in competition with many who sell and distribute like or similar candy and are unwilling to offer or sell their said candy by any method or sales plan which involves game of chance, gift enterprise, lottery scheme, or other method or plan contrary to public policy and refrain from use thereof;
Complaint

With effect of inducing numerous customers to purchase their candies in preference to those sold by competitors who do not use like or similar sales or methods in sale and distribution of their products, and with result that numerous wholesale and retail candy dealers were attracted by element of chance involved in sales plan or method by which their said candies were resold to consuming public by retail dealers as before set out, and such dealers, by reason of said element of chance, were induced to purchase such candies from them in preference to like or similar candies sold by competitors who do not use like or equivalent methods and they or their corporation were thereby enabled to sell substantial quantities of candy and trade was unfairly diverted to corporation aforesaid from competitors thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors of said corporation and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that E. J. Brach & Sons, a corporation, and Emil J. Brach, Edward M. Kerwin, Edwin O. Blomquist, Theodore Stempfel, and Emil J. Gutgsell, individuals and officers of E. J. Brach & Sons, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been, and are now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its offices and principal place of business at 4656 West Kinzie Street in the city of Chicago in said State.

Respondent Emil J. Brach is the president and director of said corporation and resides in St. Petersburg, Fla. Respondent Edward M. Kerwin is vice president, assistant secretary, and assistant treasurer of said corporation and lives at 530 North Euclid Avenue, Oak Park, Ill. Respondents Edwin O. Blomquist, Theodore Stempfel, and Emil J. Gutgsell are vice presidents of corporate respondent and, together with respondent Kerwin, have their business offices at the same address as said E. J. Brach & Sons. Respondent Brach, as an officer and director, and respondents Kerwin, Blomquist, Stempfel, and Gutgsell, as officers of said corporation, control and direct the policies, acts, and practices thereof. Respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof, to retail and wholesale dealers and jobbers. Respondents cause and have caused said candy when sold to be transported from their principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondents in such candy between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove described, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and assortments of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business as described in paragraph 2 hereof, respondents in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing their candy, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said candy is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards and punchboards. The methods and practices adopted and used by respondents are substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to customers and prospective customers, including wholesale dealers and jobbers, retail dealers and the purchasing public, through the United States mails in interstate commerce, certain literature including various order blanks, advertisements, catalogs, circulars, and other printed matter containing illustrations of their products and explaining respondents' plan of selling said candy and of allotting candy and other merchandise as premiums or prizes to the consuming public and to the operators of said push cards or punchboards. Said push cards or punchboards vary in detail and involve different assortments and various plans of distribution. One such plan is described in detail for illustration, but other plans used by respondents involve the same principle or method.

One such assortment consists of a number of bars or small pieces of assorted candy, 50 cellophane transparent bags, and an additional article of merchandise, together with a 50-hole push card. The said push card is a paper card having 50 partially perforated disks, said disks being divided into two sections. A master seal is attached to the upper right-hand corner thereof. Concealed within each disk is a girl's name. At the right of said disk sections are printed 50 girls' names. Sales are 10 cents per 6-ounce bag of said candy, and with each purchase the customer is given a free push. The name of said purchaser is written opposite the listed name corresponding to the name secured by said customer from said disk. When all of the candy has been sold and all of the disks have been pushed, the master seal is removed and the person selecting the name corresponding to the name under said seal is given an additional article of merchandise which is worth more than 10 cents, without additional charge. The additional article of merchandise is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The push card bears legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said candy is being sold or distributed. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded into purchasing pushes from said card in the hope that they may select a prize-winning name and thus obtain an additional article of merchandise without additional charge.

PAR. 4. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondents sell said candy resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondents sell direct expose said products for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of said candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth; and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency to induce purchasers thereof to purchase respondents' said candy in preference to the candy offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 5. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an additional item of merchandise. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which the common-law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondents of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly, in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 6. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in the candy trade, to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents, and in such other distributors of said candy as use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods by respondents has the capacity and tendency to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, as hereinabove related. Said acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 19, 1938, issued and afterward served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, E. J. Brach & Sons, a corporation, Emil J. Brach, Edward M. Kerwin, Edwin O. Blomquist, Theodore Stempfel, and Emil J. Gutgsell, individually, and as officers of E. J. Brach & Sons, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Ryan, Condon & Livingston, attorneys for the respondents, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts, and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at Chicago in said State; it is engaged in the business of the manufacture and sale of candy. The respondent, Emil J. Brach is the president of the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, and a member of its board of directors; the respondent, Edward M. Kerwin, is vice president, assistant secretary, and assistant treasurer of the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons; and the respondents, Edwin O. Blomquist and Emil J. Gutgsell, also are vice presidents of the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons; and the respondent, Theodore Stempfel is vice president and general merchandising manager of the respondent E. J. Brach & Sons. The respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, has caused candy manufactured by it to be transported when sold from its place of business in Chicago, in the State of Illinois, through and into or into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof, and in the course and conduct of its said business said respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, has been in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the manufacture and sale, or the sale; of candy, in commerce between and among several of the States of the United States.

Para. 2. The greater portion of the output of the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, consists of candy sold in bulk, packed in 30-pound units, but it manufactures a small amount of penny goods, bars intended for resale to the public at 5 cents each, and some box candy. In April 1937 it featured what it termed “Betsy Ross Baskets,” each of which contained 25 pounds of candy; the container was described as “an all-metal combination bread box, picnic box or tackle box,” and was represented as being of the value of $1; 2,100 of these baskets were sold; with each of the baskets of candy there were packed 50 cellophane bags, each suitable for holding one-half pound of candy, and these bags were to be used in the resale of the candy in half-pound bags at 10 cents per bag. Also there was packed in each of the baskets a push card, and the use to be made of said card was explained in a circular letter which the respondent sent out on April 21, 1937, addressed to “Our Jobbers.” Each of the cards had printed thereon a number of girls’ names, and near the upper right-hand corner there was a disk in the form of a seal which concealed a name which was the same as one of the names printed on the card. Each purchaser of one of the bags of candy for 10 cents was to be given the right to select one of the names on the card without additional charge, and the names of each of the selectors were to be written on the card; when all the names had been selected the seal was then opened, and the name concealed thereby was disclosed, and the person who had selected the name on the card which was the same as that concealed by the seal, was awarded the metal basket, the determination in each instance being wholly a matter of chance, and purchasers who did not select a prize-winning name received no prize. The gross sales by the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, aggregated $8,776,000 in 1937, and $7,790,000 in 1936; its sales of candy with which it furnished punchboards or push cards aggregated $48,000 in 1937, and $78,000 in 1936. Said respondent has discontinued the practice of furnishing punchboards or push cards with candy sold by it.

Par. 3. In carrying on its business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, also has supplied or furnished its customers with devices known as “punchboards” and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. One of the boards so furnished by respondent had 400 holes arranged in 8 sections; in each of the holes was inserted a rolled slip of paper on each of which was printed a number, the numbers running from 1 to 400, both inclusive; it was operated substantially as follows: Members of the public were required to pay 5 cents for the privilege of punching 1 of these slips from 1 of the boards, and 2 of the numbers so obtained entitled each of the selectors to a 2-pound box of chocolates; 4 other numbers so obtained entitled each of the selectors to a 1-pound box of chocolates, and 24 other numbers, so obtained, entitled each of the selectors to a 1-pound box of another type of chocolates, and each of the persons to whom the last sale in each section was made, was given a 1-pound box of chocolates. Each of the prizes so obtained by members of the public who had selected winning numbers, greatly exceeded the cost of a single number punched from the board, but the selectors of each of the other numbers, 362 out of 400, received nothing. By the use of these boards in the manner described, candy sold by respondent has been distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Said respondent has furnished various other types of punchboards together with candies to be distributed by the use of such boards to customers in various States of the United States, but the boards of each of said types were operated in substantially the same manner as the one herein described, and varied only in detail.

Par. 4. Respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, has sold candy manufactured by it accompanied by “push cards” or “punchboards” for use in the distribution of same as described herein, to wholesalers and jobbers who have resold such candy accompanied by such boards and cards, to retail dealers who in turn sold and distributed such candy by means of such push cards and punchboards to members of the purchasing public, in accordance with the sales plans hereinbefore described. Said respondent in this manner has supplied to others, and placed in their hands, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of such candy. Said sales plans have the capacity and tendency to induce, and have induced numerous customers of respondent to purchase candies manufactured by it in preference to candies sold by competitors of said respondent who did not and do not use like or similar sales plans or methods in the sale and distribution of candies sold by them.

Par. 5. The sale and distribution of candies to the purchasing public in the manner, and by the method described in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to procure quantities of candy at prices much less than the prevailing price for like or similar candy in the usual course of retail trade. The sale and distribution of candy by such methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several of the States of the United States. Among the competitors of respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, are many persons, partnerships, and corporations who sell and distribute like or similar candies to those sold by said respondent, and in competition with it, which competitors are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said candies by any method or sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, lottery scheme, or any other method or plan that is contrary to public policy, and said competitors refrain from the use of any such plan or method and as a result are placed at a disadvantage in competition.

Par. 6. Numerous wholesale and retail dealers in candy have been attracted by the element of chance involved in the sales plan or method by which candies sold by respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, have been resold to the consuming public by retail dealers as hereinbefore set out, and said dealers by reason of such element of chance, have been induced to purchase such candies from said respondent in preference to like or similar candies sold by competitors of said respondent who do not use like or equivalent methods, and as a result of such preference said respondent has been able to sell substantial quantities of candy, and thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to said respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as hereinbefore found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and to competitors of the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, E. J. Brach & Sons, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy, or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;
Order

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others assortments of candy or other merchandise which are used, or which may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of said assortments to the public;

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others assortments of candy or other merchandise, together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public;

4. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of said merchandise or separately, which lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public;

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery device or devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint insofar as it relates to respondents, Emil J. Brach, Edward M. Kerwin, Edwin O. Blomquist, Theodore Stempfel and Emil J. Gutgsell, as individuals, be, and the same hereby is, dismissed without prejudice.

Docket 3480. Complaint, July 9, 1938—Decision, Mar. 15, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of cosmetics with claimed therapeutic properties—

(a) Represented, in printed advertising matter shipped and distributed in interstate commerce and used in connection with offer and sale of its said products, that they were of remedial or therapeutic value in the prevention or treatment of skin conditions or disorders because of the hormones or gland extracts therein contained, and that use thereof would nourish and rejuvenate the skin, prevent sagging or wrinkling thereof, and overcome effect of age on the skin and preserve the soft contour and firmness of youthful skin, and that its "Creme Hormonique" was designed, among other things, "to penetrate the outer skin and give new life to the subcutaneous cells;" and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said preparations, as the case might be, would beneficially affect the oil glands and pores of the skin and were of special value in correcting an oily, muddy type of skin, or shrunken and anemic skin, because of the hormones or gland extracts contained therein;

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that De Kama, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, De Kama, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California with its principal office and place of business at 3255 Wilshire Boulevard in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. Respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing cosmetics with claimed therapeutic properties.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, causes said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of California. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said products sold and distributed in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing cosmetics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said products, respondent has made, and makes, by means of printed advertising matter shipped and distributed in interstate commerce and used in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said products, representations concerning said products and the results obtained from the use thereof. Among other things, the respondent represents and claims that certain of its cosmetics and preparations made or compounded under secret formula by impregnating its creams and preparations for human facial use with certain hormones or glandular extracts are scientifically sound preparations and have substantial medicinal and therapeutic value as preventives of aging, restoratives of youthfulness in, and nourishers of, the human skin. Specifically, some of the representations and claims so made are:

De Kama's principles were new to the cosmetic world—scientific, logical. Therefore, it is only logical that the scientific way to overcome the effects of age is to incorporate these hormones which control tissue restoration and hence prolonged youth into a fine face crème, the application of which would tend to produce the results that women are seeking.
In short, it is not enough merely artificially and temporarily to disguise the defects of the skin. The need is to preserve the skin's undertone, its soft, youthful contour and firmness, its silky, smooth texture; briefly—to attack directly the cause of aging and skin blemishes, to arrest for many years to come the merciless process of sagging and wrinkling • • • to make youthful loveliness of complexion immune to the ravages of time. De Kama Preparations are Created to Answer This Need.

De Kama Crème Hormonique, De Kama Crème Vi-Tavo, and De Kama Nature-Tone Crème make a complete group for the treatment of the skin in the scientific manner.

De Kama injected certain active hormone extracts, known only to himself, formulated and produced exclusively by him in his own laboratory, and which therefore cannot be duplicated. So was born the first complete organic beauty treatment in the world—the De Kama original Hormone Facial Preparations.

Crème Hormonique is created to revitalize those tiny, dormant glands within your skin and to make them glow again with their own youthful vigor.

De Kama Cream Hormonique is designed to penetrate the outer skin and give new life to the subcutaneous cells.

Crème Hormonique • • • This is the basic preparation in the De Kama Treatment Group. Its use is essential for all types and ages of skin. It embodies the De Kama active hormone principle previously outlined and combats aging by treating the cause. Its astonishing results have received world-wide acclaim.

Crème Hormonique is also intended to preserve and immunize the youthful charm of a skin that has not yet shown the cruel traces of fleeting time. De Kama Crème Hormonique is producing truly astonishing results. It fulfills its every promise and gives the lasting charm of a youthful complexion to the woman who uses it.

De Kama Creme Vi-Tavo contains a special De Kama Glandular Extract, plus certain elements of ripe avocados which are rich in vitamins.

De Kama Nature-Tone Creme aids the pores in regulating their flow of natural oil, and at the same time, assists the minute oil glands themselves. It contains a gland extract especially prepared for the oily, muddy type of skin.

De Kama Creme Hormonique Special contains a specific hormone extract for devitalized and anaemic skins. This creme is exceptionally beneficial for skins which are undernourished to a marked degree. It contains the same ingredients as Crème Hormonique.

De Kama-De-Kar Mone—De Kama's most recent masterpiece of rejuvenation • • • Contains a special De Kama hormone extract found to have a highly rejuvenative effect on these distressing skin conditions.

Par. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the character, nature, and effect of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, misleading, deceptive, and false. In truth and in fact, hormones or glandular extracts are not absorbed through the skin in therapeutically significant amounts, and respondent's products cannot produce the results represented and claimed. The use of respondent's products does not enable the users to retain or restore the youthful contour and firmness, or the silky smooth texture of the skin, nor will said products in any manner rejuvenate the skin and facial contours.
Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who make, sell, and distribute cosmetics who do not in any way misrepresent the effectiveness of their respective products.

Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its products and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have a tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in said commerce, who truthfully represent their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 9, 1938 issued, and on July 15, 1938 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, De Kama, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

GOOD HUMOR CORPORATION OF AMERICA

Where owner of patents covering subject matter of confections frozen on sticks or handle members, and engaged for short period in sale and distribution to licensees of wooden sticks and paper bags including certain assortments thereof which involved use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed as frozen confections to consumers thereof, and included assortments in which 10-cent consumer-purchaser securing by chance "lucky stick" concealed in confection, was entitled, without cost, to additional bar—

Sold as aforesaid such assortments to dealers by whom such sticks and bags were employed in sale and distribution of their frozen confections or bars to their customers and awards made as above described, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products as above set forth, under aforesaid and similar plans, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws of several States and in competition with various manufacturers and distributors of such sticks and bags which, when used by retail dealers, do not constitute operation of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and with many who make and sell various sticks and bags and devices for promoting or increasing sales of retail dealers and are unwilling to offer and sell their said products or devices so designed and arranged as above set forth or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise and refrain therefrom;

With result that consuming public because of lottery scheme connected with its said sticks and bags was induced to deal with or purchase such frozen confections from dealers using its said devices, in preference to dealers using those of competitors, and dealers were thus induced to purchase its said sticks and bags in preference to devices of competitors, and substantial trade was thus unfairly diverted to it from its competitors aforesaid, and with capacity and tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly through tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not use same or equivalent or similar method involving same or equivalent or similar elements of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise:

Held, That such acts and practices are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Good Humor Corporation of America, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Good Humor Corporation of America, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 64-81 Metropolitan Avenue, Maspeth, Long Island, N.Y. Respondent owns two patents, one No. 1,470,524, being a process patent which teaches a method of inserting wooden handles or sticks into a container of partially frozen liquids, which, when subjected to further refrigeration causes a bond between the frozen confection and the stick, by congelation. The other patent, No. 1,718,997, a product patent, covers claims for the resulting product, to wit: A frozen confection on a wooden stick or handle. Respondent issues licenses to manufacturers of ice cream to manufacture and sell frozen confections in accordance with the teachings of said patents. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the issuing of licenses, as above mentioned, and in the sale and distribution of wooden handles or sticks and paper bags to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused its products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of New York, or from the respective points of location of the manufacturers of said products, to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in said sticks and bags, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is in competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of similar or like products and of various containers and holders for frozen confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 thereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers assortments of sticks and paper bags, which sticks, when covered with ice cream as hereinbefore related, and packed in said bags, involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Assortments of said frozen confections or bars are sold to the consuming public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of frozen confections or bars packed in paper bags. Sales are 10 cents each. Through the center of each of said confections or bars is one of the small sticks or handles hereinabove mentioned. On certain of said handles or sticks appear the words "Lucky Stick," which words are effectively concealed until a purchaser has made a purchase and the frozen confection or bar has been consumed or removed from the stick. Purchasers who receive one of the sticks marked "Lucky Stick," are entitled to and do receive an additional frozen confection or bar without additional cost. The additional confections or bars are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent sells various assortments of sticks and bags to be used in the sale and distribution of such frozen confections or bars by lot or chance, but the above-described sales plan is illustrative of the principle involved in all such assortments.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells assortments of said sticks and bags employ them in the distribution of their frozen confections or bars to their customers, and make the awards as above described.

Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondent various manufacturers and distributors of such sticks and bags, which, when used by the retail dealers, do not constitute a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase such products from dealers using respondent's said sticks and bags in preference to dealers using devices of respondent's competitors because of the lottery scheme connected with respondent's said sticks and bags. For that reason dealers are induced to purchase respondent's said sticks and bags in preference to devices of respondent's competitors, and trade is thus unfairly diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of said method in designing and arranging its said sticks and bags is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and which is in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said method has a capacity and tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly, in this to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not use the same method or an equivalent or similar method, involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell various sticks and bags or devices for promoting or increasing the sales of retail dealers are unwilling to offer for sale and sell sticks and bags or devices designed or arranged so as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 28, 1938, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent Good Humor Corporation of America, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 5, 1938, respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation in lieu of testimony and other evidence was entered into by and between Daniel G. Albert, counsel for the respondent, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Good Humor Corporation of America, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 64-81 Metropolitan Avenue, Maspeth, Long Island, N.Y. Respondent owns two patents, No. 1,470,524 and No. 1,718,997, both covering the subject matter of confections frozen on sticks or handle members. Respondent has issued in the past licenses to manufacturers of ice cream to manufacture and sell frozen confections in accordance with the teachings of the said patents, but it no longer issues such licenses and its only business and function now is the collection of royalties from the holders of licenses which have been granted by it in the past. Respondent was engaged for a short period in the past in the sale and distribution of wooden sticks and paper bags to some of its licensees located in the various States of the United States. Respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from the respective points of location of the manufacturers of said products to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There was a course of trade by said respondent in said sticks and bags in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent was in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In so carrying on said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has sold to dealers assortments of sticks and paper bags, which sticks when covered with ice cream, as hereinbefore described, and packed in said bags, involve the use of a lottery scheme, when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments showing the method of sale and distribution to the consuming public, was as follows: This assortment consisted of a number of frozen confections or bars packed in paper bags. Sales were 10 cents each. Through the center of each of said confections or bars was one of the small sticks or handles hereinbefore described. On certain of said sticks appeared the words “Lucky Stick,” which words were effectively concealed until a purchaser had made a purchase and the frozen confection or bar had been consumed or removed from the stick. Purchasers who received one of the sticks marked “Lucky Stick” were entitled to and did receive an additional frozen confection or bar without additional cost. The additional confections or bars were thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent has sold and distributed various assortments of sticks and bags for use in the sale and distribution of such frozen confections or bars by lot or chance, but the above-described sales plan is illustrative of the principle involved in all such assortments.

Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sold assortments of said sticks and bags employed them in the sale and distribution of their frozen confections or bars to their customers, and made the awards as above described. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in the manner hereinbefore described.

Par. 4. There are in competition with respondent various manufacturers and distributors of such sticks and bags, which, when used by retail dealers, do not constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Because of the lottery scheme connected with respondent's said sticks and bags, the consuming public was induced to deal with or purchase said products from dealers using respondent's said sticks and bags in preference to dealers using devices of respondent's competitors. As a result thereof, dealers were induced to purchase respondent's said sticks and bags in preference to devices of respondent's competitors, and substantial trade was thus unfairly diverted to respondent from its said competitors.

Par. 5. The use by respondent of said method in designing and arranging its said sticks and bags is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and which is a violation of the criminal laws of several States of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a capacity and tendency unduly to hinder competition or create a monopoly, in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude competitors who do not use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, or corporations who make and sell various sticks and bags or devices for promoting or increasing the sales of retail dealers, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell sticks and bags or devices so designed and arranged as hereinabove described, or otherwise designed and arranged, so as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinabove set forth are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent Good Humor Corporation of America, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of sticks or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing sticks or other merchandise to dealers, which said sticks or other merchandise are to be used or may be used in the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, sticks or other articles of merchandise, which are used, or which may be used, without alteration thereof, to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise, when distributed to the consuming public.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others any lottery device which is to be used, or may be used, in the sale and distribution of merchandise to the consuming public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Docket 5520. Complaint, July 30, 1938—Decision, Mar. 15, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale of garden hose and other rubber goods to customers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with the others engaged in sale and distribution of such products in commerce and in said District, and including many jobbers and distributors of like and similar products who do not falsely and deceitfully represent to public that they are manufacturers thereof, or that their products have a value, merit, and quality that they do not have—

(a) Represented to prospective customers and to buying public generally that he was manufacturer of such goods and products by causing to appear on his letterheads word "Manufacturers," along with trade name employed by him and statement of goods dealt in, and such references in correspondence with customers and prospective customers as "* * * We bought a lot of Extra Heavy Yarn, at a price, and used it to make this Hose * * *," and "In order to keep our factory running full time * * *," and "As soon as we have received enough orders to run us full time * * *," etc., and, through such letterheads and aforesaid and other similar statements in correspondence, informed customers that he was a manufacturer of such products and owned or operated a factory, mill, or plant for manufacture thereof;

Facts being all garden hose sold by him for many years last past had been made by another company, to which he transmitted all orders for such goods and which filled same and made shipment thereof in his name from its said factory direct to purchasers, he was only jobber of rubber goods and not manufacturer of such products, for direct purchase of which as from manufacturer there is marked preference on part of substantial portion of purchasing public, as affording better prices, products, and advantages not obtainable from jobbers or other middlemen, and representations made by him as aforesaid were false and misleading; and

(b) Sent to customers and prospective customers samples of garden hose, together with quoted price thereon, and represented that product offered, and which would be shipped upon order, was of same quality, fabric, material, construction, merit, and value as sample thus enclosed;

Facts being garden hose sold and shipped as result of such solicitation was of an inferior grade and quality to sample originally forwarded to purchaser, in that it contained approximately one-third less fabric;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that all said representations were true, and with effect of leading such public into false and erroneous belief that garden hose and other products sold and distributed by him were made by him and had a greater value, quality, and merit than they actually possessed, and with result, as direct consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volumes of his said product and trade was diverted unfairly to him from competitors likewise engaged in distribution and sale of garden hose and other products and who truthfully advertise the same:

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. H. Barnard, an individual trading and doing business under the name of W. H. Barnard Rubber Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof, would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. W. H. Barnard is an individual trading and doing business under the name of W. H. Barnard Rubber Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 131 South Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Par. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling garden hose and other rubber goods. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from the manufacturer in the State of New Jersey to his customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained, a course of trade in said products sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of garden hose and other rubber products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said products, respondent has represented to prospective customers and to the buying public generally that he is a manufacturer of garden hose, mechanical rubber goods, and other rubber products, by causing to appear on his letterheads, which he has transmitted to customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, the following words:

W. H. BARNARD RUBBER CO.

Manufacturers of

Mechanical Rubber Goods

Garden Hose Mats and Mattings

Respondent has further represented that he is a manufacturer of said products by including in his correspondence to customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia such phrases as:

We have 25,000 ft. of ½" Extra Heavy One Braid Brown Corrugated Barnard Moulded Garden Hose, like sample enclosed. We bought a lot of Extra Heavy Yarn, at a price, and used it to make this Hose and are giving our customers the benefit of the purchase. Quote you a special price of 5½¢ per ft. coupled in 50 ft. sections, freight prepaid on full bales (500 ft.) or more;

In order to keep our factory running full time the month of November; and,

As soon as we have received enough orders to run us full time for the month of November.

Respondent’s letterheads and all said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s correspondence, inform his customers that respondent is a manufacturer of garden hose and rubber products and owns or operates a factory, mill, or plant for the manufacture of said product.

Par. 5. The representations thus made by respondent are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent is not a manufacturer of garden hose or other rubber products, and neither owns, operates, nor controls any factory, plant, or mill for the manufacture of such products. Respondent is only a jobber of rubber goods. All the garden hose sold by him for many years last past has been manufactured by the Thermoid Co., a corporation having its offices and factory at Trenton, N. J., and all orders for such goods received by respondent have been, and are, transmitted by him to the Thermoid Co. at its place of business in Trenton, N. J., where the said Thermoid Co. fills all of such orders and makes shipments in respondent’s name from the factory of said company in Trenton, N. J., direct to the purchasers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said garden hose, respondent has sent and is sending to customers and prospective customers, located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, samples of garden hose, quoting his price thereon and representing that the product thus offered for sale and which will be shipped upon order, is of the same quality, fabric, material, construction, merit, and value as the sample so enclosed. In truth and in fact, the garden hose thus sold and shipped as a result of said solicitation was and is of an inferior grade and quality to the sample originally forwarded to the purchaser, in that the product so sold and shipped by respondent contains approximately one-third less fabric, the fabric portion of same being braided with one end per carrier, each end being composed of a six-ply yarn, while the fabric portions of the sample forwarded by said respondent are braided with two ends per carrier, each end being composed of three strands, and each strand being a two-ply yarn.

Par. 7. For many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has shown a marked preference for products sold and distributed to the public by the manufacturers thereof, said preference resulting from the belief that the manufacturer is able to offer better prices, superior products and other advantages not obtainable from jobbers or other middlemen.

There are among the competitors of respondent, many who are jobbers and distributors of like and similar products, who do not falsely and deceitfully represent to the public that they are manufacturers of such products, or that the products they are selling and offering for sale, have a value, merit, and quality that they do not have.

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent, as hereinabove alleged, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true, and have led said purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that the garden hose and other rubber products sold and distributed by respondent are manufactured by him, and that said products have a greater value, quality, and merit than they do actually have.

As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said product, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors, likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling garden hose and other products, who truthfully advertise their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 30, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, W. H. Barnard, an individual, trading as W. H. Barnard Rubber Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 28, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. W. H. Barnard is an individual, trading and doing business under the name of W. H. Barnard Rubber Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 131 South Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Par. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling garden hose and other rubber goods. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from the manufacturer in the State of New Jersey to his customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and has for more than the past 2 years maintained, a course of trade in said products sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of garden hose and other rubber products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said products, respondent has represented to prospective customers and to the buying public generally that he is a manufacturer of garden hose, mechanical rubber goods, and other rubber products, by causing to appear on his letterheads, which he has transmitted to customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, the following words:

W. H. BARNARD RUBBER CO.
Manufacturers of
Mechanical Rubber Goods
Garden Hose Mats and Mattings

Respondent has further represented that he is a manufacturer of said products by including in his correspondence to customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia such phrases as:

We have 25,000 ft. of 5/8" Extra Heavy One Braid Brown Corrugated Barnard Moulded Garden Hose, like sample enclosed. We bought a lot of Extra Heavy Yarn, at a price, and used it to make this Hose and are giving our customers the benefit of the purchase. Quote you a special price of 51/4¢ per ft. coupled in 50 ft. sections, freight prepaid on full bales (500 ft.) or more;
In order to keep our factory running full time the month of November; and,
As soon as we have received enough orders to run us full time for the month of November.

Respondent's letterheads and all said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent's correspondence, inform his customers that respondent is a manufacturer of garden hose and rubber products and owns or operates a factory, mill, or plant for the manufacture of said products.

Par. 5. The representations thus made by respondent are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent is not a manufacturer of garden hose or other rubber products, and neither owns, operates, nor controls any factory, plant, or mill for the manufacture of such products. Respondent is only a jobber of rubber goods. All the garden hose sold by him for many years last past has been manufactured by the Thermoid Co., a corporation having its offices and factory at Trenton, N. J., and all orders for such goods received by respondent have been, and are, transmitted by him to the Thermoid Co. at its place of business in Trenton, N. J., where the said Thermoid Co. fills all of such orders and makes shipments in respondent's name from the factory of said company in Trenton, N. J., direct to the purchasers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said garden hose, respondent has sent and is sending to customers and prospective customers, located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, samples of garden hose, quoting his price thereon and representing that the product thus offered for sale and which will be shipped upon order, is of the same quality, fabric, material, construction, merit, and value as the sample so enclosed. In truth and in fact, the garden hose thus sold and shipped as a result of said solicitation was and is of an inferior grade and quality to the sample originally forwarded to the purchaser, in that the product so sold and shipped by respondent contains approximately one-third less fabric, the fabric portion of same being braided with one end per carrier, each end being composed of a six-ply yarn, while the fabric portions of the sample forwarded by said respondent are braided with two ends per carrier, each end being composed of three strands, and each strand being a two-ply yarn.

Par. 7. For many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has shown a marked preference for products sold and distributed to the public by the manufacturers thereof, said preference resulting from the belief that the manufacturer is able to offer better prices, superior products, and other advantages not obtainable from jobbers or other middlemen.

There are among the competitors of respondent, many who are jobbers and distributors of like and similar products, who do not falsely and deceitfully represent to the public that they are manufacturers of such products, or that the products they are selling and offering for sale, have a value, merit, and quality that they do not have.

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent, as aforesaid, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true, and have led said purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that the garden hose and other rubber products sold and distributed by respondent are manufactured by him, and that said products have a greater value, quality, and merit than they do actually have.
As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said product, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors, likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling garden hose and other products, who truthfully advertise their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. H. Barnard, an individual, trading as W. H. Barnard Rubber Co., or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of rubber garden hose and other rubber goods in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or indirectly that respondent manufactures said products, unless and until respondent owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the factory or plant wherein said products are manufactured.

2. Representing that a product similar to sample displayed will be delivered, unless in fact the product delivered is of the same quality, fabric, material, construction, and value as the sample.

3. Representing directly or indirectly that said products are of a quality, fabric, material, construction, or value other than such products are in fact.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing; setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of various novelties and articles of merchandise, including rotary clocks, electric razors, toasters, and other articles; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished with such articles various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for distribution of such merchandise to ultimate consumer, wholly by lot or chance, and which included number of different types of push cards for use in sale and distribution of said products under plan and in accordance with said card's explanatory legends, pursuant to which amount paid by customer or, in case of some, receipt of free chance, was dependent upon number pushed by chance, and receipt of article being thus disposed of was dependent upon success or failure in selecting, from list on card, girl's name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal and selectors of certain numbers, in case of some, received secondary prizes and under which, failing such contingencies, customers received nothing, and operator handling cards received for his services one of articles without additional charge; and

Supplied thereby and placed in the hands of others, means by which lotteries were conducted in the sale of his said merchandise in accordance with such sales plan, under which various articles were distributed to members of the public wholly by lot or chance and amount that each member of public was required to pay for chance to participate in lottery was also thus determined, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise for sums much below the prices for which they sell in usual course of trade, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several of the States, and in competition with many engaged in sale of articles of like or similar grade and quality and who are not willing to sell such articles by any sales plan involving game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and refrain from use thereof;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to purchase articles from him and resell same to consuming public by use of such plan in preference to buying and reselling like or similar articles of merchandise offered by competitors who do not make use of such or equivalent sales plan, and he was thus able to sell substantial quantities of some of the articles dealt in by him and trade was diverted unfairly to him from competitors:
Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Martin M. Slaton, individually and trading as Allied Gift Shop, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of Allied Gift Shop, with his principal office and place of business located at 710 Michigan Theatre Building, Detroit, Mich. He is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including, among others, rotary clocks, electric clocks, electric roasters, washing machines, electric mixers, electric toasters, vacuum cleaners, electric razors, fountain pen and pencil sets, radios, and raincoat combinations, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. He causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof in Michigan and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such merchandise between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of such business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing the said merchandise, has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises or lottery schemes and a distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of a variety of push cards, the use of which, in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, was and is substantially as follows:

The said push cards bear a number of girls' names. Concealed under each name is a number. Also, under a master seal there is a name corresponding to one of the names on the card. Prospective purchasers select one of the names and remove the same disclosing the number thereunder. Persons selecting numbers from 1 to 29 pay in cents the amount of such number, and persons selecting numbers over 29 pay 29 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names. The push cards bear various legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers of the plan or method by which said push card is operated and by which the merchandise described thereon is to be distributed. When all the names have been purchased the master seal is removed, and the person who has selected the name corresponding to the name under the master seal receives the article of merchandise described without further charge, and the person, salesman, agent, or representative soliciting purchases of chances, as above described, also receives an article of merchandise without further charge or additional service. The numbers under the names are concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers, and they do not know how much they will have to pay for the privilege of selecting one of the names until the selection has been made and the name removed. The name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the names have been selected. Those customers selecting names which do not correspond to the name under the master seal receive nothing but the privilege of making a selection for the money which they pay. The said articles of merchandise vary in value, but each of said articles of merchandise is of a greater value than the cost of a single push from said push card. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customers pay for a chance is determined wholly by lot or chance.

The various push cards furnished and distributed by respondent involve the same principle but vary in detail. Such variations cover the merchandise to be distributed, the quantity thereof, the number of pushes on said push cards, and the price or cost of the individual pushes.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes said devices use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make, sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale or distribution thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell or distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 25, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Martin M. Slaton, individually, and trading as Allied Gift Shop, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint (no answer having been filed by respondent), testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it (no testimony or evidence was tendered by respondent in opposition to the allegations of the complaint). Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Martin M. Slaton, for a number of years has carried on business under the name and style of Allied Gift Shop, with his principal place of business in 710 Michigan Theater Building, in Detroit, Mich. He has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing various novelties, and articles of merchandise, including rotary clocks, electric razors, electric roasters, electric toasters, washing machines, rainette combinations, and pen and pencil sets. Respondent has caused said novelties and articles of merchandise when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Michigan to the respective purchasers thereof in the State of Michigan and various other States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent has been and is now in active competition with various partnerships and corporations and other persons engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar novelties and articles of merchandise between and among various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of articles of merchandise, and in the sale and distribution of same, has furnished with such articles of merchandise various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by means of which the distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumer has been accomplished wholly by lot or chance. Said devices and plans of merchandising include a number of different types of push cards, similar in principle but varying in detail, which devices have been operated in the sale and distribution of articles of merchandise sold by respondent substantially as follows:
Each of the cards had printed thereon a number of girls' names, and beneath each name was concealed a number. In the use of the cards members of the public were solicited to select one or more of these names and to pay the number of cents indicated by the number concealed beneath each of the names selected, except that in the operation of one type of card selectors of numbers higher than 29 paid only 29 cents, and with another type of the cards selectors of numbers higher than 35 paid only 35 cents, and with still another type of the cards certain of the numbers were designated as "Free," and selectors of those numbers paid nothing. On each of the cards was a disk in the form of a seal which concealed a name which was the same as one of the names printed on the card. When all of the names on one of the cards had been selected the seal was then removed, and the name concealed thereby was disclosed, and the article of merchandise involved in the operation of the card was then given to the person who had selected the name on the card which was the same as the name concealed by the seal, without further charge, and selectors of names other than the name concealed by the seal received nothing. The cards of the various types furnished by the respondent differed as to the number of names printed thereon, and the articles of merchandise distributed by the use of the several types of cards were of different values, and the cards of some of the types provided for one or more secondary prizes to be given to selectors of certain of the numbers, and in the operation of certain types of cards so furnished by respondent the agent or salesman handling the cards also received for his services one of the articles of merchandise without additional charge. The amount of the value of each article of merchandise so distributed by the use of one of the cards was, in each instance, greater than the amount paid by a member of the public for any one of the names selected. By the use of these cards the various articles of merchandise were distributed to the members of the public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount that each member of the public was required to pay for a chance to participate in the lottery also was determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent has furnished the push cards described in paragraph 2 hereof, used same in purchasing merchandise from respondent, and reselling and distributing such merchandise in accordance with the sales plan described in said paragraph 2. Respondent, in this manner has supplied to others, and placed in their hands the means by which lotteries have been conducted in the resale of such merchandise in accordance with such sales plan. The use by respondent of said sales plan in the sale of such merchandise, and the resale of such merchandise by the use of such push cards and sales plans, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the laws of several of the States of the United States. Many competitors of respondent sell and have sold articles of merchandise of like or similar grade and quality to the articles of merchandise sold by respondent, and in competition with respondent, which competitors are unwilling to sell such articles of merchandise by any sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and refrain from the use of such plan, and as a result are placed at a disadvantage in competition. Respondent by means of such push cards and sales plan has sold approximately 3,000 rotary clocks; approximately 400 electric razors; approximately 400 rainette combinations, and smaller numbers of other articles of merchandise offered for sale by him.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the sales plan and in the manner herein found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise for sums of money much below the prices at which such articles of merchandise sell in the usual course of retail trade. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to purchase articles of merchandise from respondent and resell same to the consuming public by the use of such sales plan in preference to buying and reselling like or similar articles of merchandise offered for sale by competitors of respondent who do not make use of the same or an equivalent sales plan, and as a result the respondent has been able to sell substantial quantities of some of the articles of merchandise dealt in by him, which has caused trade to be diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as hereinbefore found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (respondent having filed no answer), testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint (respondent having offered no proof in opposition thereto), brief filed by the attorney for the Commission (respondent not having filed brief or requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Martin M. Slaton, individually and trading as Allied Gift Shop, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, electric razors, electric roasters, electric toasters, washing machines, Rainette combinations, pen and pencil sets, or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents, or to distributors, or members of the public, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

3. Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 3490. Complaint, July 13, 1938—Decision, Mar. 16, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of pharmaceutical tablets, composed of acetyl salicylic acid or aspirin, and magnesium oxide, to purchasers including, principally, wholesale druggists, in the various States and in District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar pharmaceutical products or other products designed and intended for similar usage, and including those who do not misrepresent the therapeutic qualities of their products or otherwise misrepresent the same; in advertising its said product in various newspapers and magazines of interstate circulation, and in various other ways—

(a) Represented that said preparation was a new product or new discovery, which was superior to and would give more effective and quicker relief than ordinary aspirin, and counteracted toxic effects and would stop all pain, and that it was unqualifiedly safe for use;

Facts being it had been on the market since 1929, was not superior to and more effective than ordinary aspirin and would not give quicker relief, though it would perform substantially the same analgesic functions as said substance, would not counteract toxic effects or stop all pain, and was not one which could be indiscriminately used with safety by reason of aspirin ingredient of product, and fact that there are many people who are allergic to such substance and for whom said preparation would not be safe, and others cannot safely take such product into their systems beyond prescribed or usual dosage; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said product was a remedy, cure, or effective treatment for acid condition of the stomach, which would have beneficial alkalizing effect, and that it was also such a cure or remedy for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, muscular and rheumatic pains, sleeplessness, period pains, nervousness and colds, and possessed therapeutic properties in excess of or different from ordinary aspirin;

Facts being it was not an effective cure or remedy for headaches and various other ailments and conditions above set forth, many of which are caused by systemic or organic disturbances in which its said product would not be a proper or effective treatment, and some of which are, in many cases, symptoms of organic disturbance, in treatment of which its said product would not be indicated or effective, and it would not be a cure or remedy for colds;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that said preparation possessed the properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish results indicated, and of causing substantial portion of such public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Voss Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Voss Co., Inc., is a corporation doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey. Its principal office and place of business are at 505 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of a pharmaceutical product, in tablet form, marketed under the name "Magnespirin." Each 6¾-grain tablet consists of 3¾ grains of aspirin and 3½ grains of magnesium oxide.

Respondent now causes, and for approximately 1 year last past has caused, its said product, when sold by it, to be shipped from its said place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the purchasers thereof, principally wholesale druggists, located in the various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said pharmaceutical product so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for approximately 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of similar pharmaceutical products, or other products designed and intended for similar usage, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has advertised and now advertises its said product in various newspapers and magazines having an interstate circulation, and in various other ways. Representative of the respondent’s advertising claims with respect to its said product are the following:

Magnespirin is a new, different kind of aspirin.
Aspirin improved 100%.
Acts twice as fast as ordinary aspirin.
It is more effective than ordinary aspirin.
It is safe.
In fact it actually tones * * * the stomach.
Sweetens the breath.
Stops all pains.
Doctors advise it.
Millions praise it.
Counteracts toxic effects.
Magnespirin is aspirin plus magnesium which alkalizes like milk of magnesia—neutralizes the acid.
Fastest relief ever known for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, muscular and rheumatic pains, colds, sleeplessness, period pains, nervousness.

The aforesaid advertising claims for magnespirin serve as representations on the part of respondent that said product is a new discovery and is an adequate remedy or cure for the various ailments, disorders, and diseases mentioned in said advertising matter; that said product is superior to ordinary aspirin in that it is safer, more effective, gives quicker relief, and that it will stop all pains; that its use is advised by doctors, and that millions use it; that it counteracts toxic effects, and that its alkalizing qualities neutralize acidic conditions of the stomach.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact, magnespirin is not a new discovery, but has been on the market for several years. It is not superior to ordinary aspirin. It is no more effective and does not relieve pain any quicker than ordinary aspirin. It will not stop all pains. Its use is not advised by doctors, nor is it praised by millions of users. It will not counteract toxic effects and has no appreciable systemic alkalizing effect. Its unsupervised use by persons generally is not safe. There are persons who are allergic to aspirin, consequently, it it not safe for such persons to take said tablets at all. There is also another class of persons who may not safely take into the system amounts of aspirin in excess of the prescribed or usual dose. There are many persons to whom the use of such tablets in excessive amounts is highly dangerous and may prove fatal.

Respondent’s said product is not an adequate remedy or cure for the various ailments and disorders mentioned in respondent’s said advertising matter. Some of the disorders and ailments listed in said advertising matter arise from many causes, and there is no specific remedy or treatment that is effective in all cases and under all conditions. Such ailments and disorders are, in many instances, caused by or associated with a systemic or organic derangement and, in order to treat such cases effectively, it is necessary to ascertain the cause or causes thereof. Nervousness and sleeplessness are, in many instances, merely symptoms or an organic disturbance which may necessitate expert medical treatment. Likewise, there is a wide variety of causes of menstrual pains, some of which may be serious and may require a surgical operation. The common cold and so-called rheumatic aches and pains are conditions for which respondent's product is in no sense adequate. In all disorders and ailments of the human body arising from or associated with systemic or organic disturbance or derangement a thorough diagnosis by an expert is necessary in order to ascertain the cause or causes of the disorder and the proper treatment therefor.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, individuals, partnerships, and corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of pharmaceutical products advertised and sold as remedies for various ailments and disorders of the human body, that do not misrepresent the therapeutic qualities or otherwise misrepresent their products which they offer for sale and sell.

Par. 5. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's Magnespirin tablets as a result of such erroneous belief. By the representations aforesaid trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from its aforesaid competitors and as a result thereof injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 13, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Voss Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 23, 1938, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a regularly scheduled hearing the facts were stipulated on the record and it was agreed that said stipulation of facts may be taken as the facts in this proceeding. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, stipulation as to the facts, and brief in support of the allegations of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Voss Co., Inc., is a corporation doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware. Its principal office and place of business are at 505 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of a pharmaceutical product, in tablet form, marketed under the name "Magnespirin." Each 6½-grain tablet consists of 3½ grains of aspirin and 3½ grains of magnesium oxide.

Respondent now causes, and for approximately 1 year last past has caused, its said product, when sold by it, to be shipped from its said place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the purchasers thereof, principally wholesale druggists, located in the various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said pharmaceutical product so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is, and for approximately 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of similar pharmaceutical products, or other products designed and intended for similar usage, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has advertised and now advertises its said product in various newspapers and magazines having an interstate circulation, and in various other ways. Representative of the respondent's advertising claims with respect to its said product are the following:
Magnespirin is a new, different kind of aspirin.
Aspirin improved 100%.
Acts twice as fast as ordinary aspirin.
It is more effective than ordinary aspirin.
It is safe.
In fact it actually tones • • • the stomach.
Sweetens the breath.
Stops all pains.
Doctors advise it.
Millions praise it.
Counteracts Toxic effects.
Magnespirin is aspirin plus magnesium which alkalizes like milk of magnesia—neutralizes the acid.
Fastest relief ever known for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, muscular and rheumatic pains, colds, sleeplessness, period pains, nervousness.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's product, respondent has represented, and does now represent, that its preparation "Magnespirin" is a new discovery, the use of which is advised and prescribed by doctors, and which is superior to, and will give more effective and quicker relief than, ordinary aspirin; that it is a safe remedy which will stop all pain and counteract toxic effects. Respondent by this means further represents that said preparation is an adequate or effective cure or remedy for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, muscular and rheumatic pains, colds, sleeplessness, period pains, nervousness; that is neutralizes acidic conditions of the stomach by reason of its alkalizing qualities.

Para. 3. In fact magnespirin is a product which consists of the combination of acetyl salicylic acid or aspirin and magnesium oxide. It is not a new discovery as it has been on the market since 1929. This preparation is not superior to ordinary aspirin and is not more effective, and will not give quicker relief than aspirin, though it will perform substantially the same analgesic functions as aspirin. It will not stop all pain, and its use is not generally advised or prescribed by doctors. This preparation will not counteract toxic effects and has no appreciable effect in neutralizing acid conditions of the stomach. This preparation is not one which can be indiscriminately used with safety by reason of the existence of aspirin as an ingredient of this product. There are many persons who are allergic to aspirin and it would not be safe for such persons to take respondent's preparation. There are other persons who cannot safely take aspirin into their systems beyond the prescribed or usual dosage with safety.
Conclusion

Respondent's preparation, magnespirin, is not an adequate or effective cure or remedy for headaches, sleeplessness, period pains, and nervousness. Many of these disorders or ailments are caused by systemic or organic disturbances in which respondent's preparation would not be a proper or effective treatment. Furthermore, nervousness and sleeplessness are in many cases symptoms of an organic disturbance, in the treatment of which respondent's product would not be indicated or effective. Menstrual pains, likewise, have a variety of causes, some of which might be serious and require surgical operation. Respondent's preparation would not be a cure or remedy for any diseases of which the above-mentioned conditions or ailments might be symptomatic. This preparation would not be a cure or remedy for colds.

Paragraph 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, individuals, partnerships, and corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of pharmaceutical products advertised and sold as remedies for various ailments and disorders of the human body, who do not misrepresent the therapeutic qualities or otherwise misrepresent their products which they offer for sale and sell.

Paragraph 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, a stipulation as to the facts entered upon the record, and a brief in support of the allegations of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Voss Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a medicinal preparation now designated "Magnespirin," or of any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties whether sold under that name or any other name, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That said preparation is a new product or a new discovery.
2. That said preparation is superior to or will give more effective or quicker relief than ordinary aspirin.
3. That said preparation is unqualifiedly safe for use.
4. That said preparation counteracts toxic effects or that it will stop all pain.
5. That said preparation is a remedy, cure, or effective treatment for acid conditions of the stomach, or that it will have any beneficial alkalizing effect.
6. That said preparation is a cure or remedy for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, muscular and rheumatic pains, sleeplessness, period pains, nervousness, or colds, or that it possess therapeutic properties in excess of, or different from, ordinary aspirin.

BURN, POLLAK & BEER

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

SEYMOUR BURN, ARTHUR POLLAK AND FRANZ BEER, TRADING AS BURN, POLLAK & BEER

Where partners engaged in soliciting orders for line of fabrics known as "Loden Cloth," for principals without United States, and in importing said cloth into United States and transporting same from warehouses to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in active and substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such cloth in commerce and in said District, and including some who sell and distribute such cloth loomed in the Tyrol in that territory formerly part of Austria, and others who sell and distribute such cloth loomed in other Central European localities and countries; with intent that tailoring concerns would use and disseminate such statements and representations in connection with sale and distribution of commodities made by said concerns from such loden cloth—

(a) Represented, through statements which they disseminated or caused to be disseminated throughout the United States to such concerns purchasing such cloth, that term Tyrolean woven loden cloth can be truthfully applied only to product of one famous Austrian mill, and that genuine Tyrolean loden cloth can be procured in United States only through themselves;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that the water of the mountain streams of the Tyrol, with its peculiar chemical content, used in finishing Tyrolean loden cloth, gives it magnificent finish and stamp of authenticity which defies imitation elsewhere, and that such cloth is loomed only from the wool of sheep grown in the Tyrol;

Facts being such cloth is made in many countries other than in the Alps in Tyrol in that territory formerly part of Austria, genuine Tyrolean loden cloth is produced by many mills in the Tyrol, and, during times involved, was not offered in the United States exclusively by or through them, waters in Tyrol do not give to such cloth any peculiar or distinctive qualities which cannot be obtained in such cloth produced elsewhere, and loden cloth fabric sold and distributed by them in the United States contained some wool from sheep grown in localities other than in Tyrol;

With effect of causing members of purchasing public situated in the various States and in said District to have an erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and to purchase substantial quantities of such cloth because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to themselves from their said competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.
Complaint

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Seymour Burn, Arthur Pollak, and Franz Beer, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Par. 1. Respondents, Seymour Burn, Arthur Pollak, and Franz Beer, are copartners trading as Burn, Pollak & Beer, with their office and principal place of business at 381 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Par. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 18 months last past have been engaged in the business of soliciting orders for a line of fabrics known as loden cloth for principals located outside the United States. Respondents cause said cloth, when ordered, to be shipped by the foreign principals into the United States from foreign countries and cause said cloth to be transported from warehouses in the State of New York to customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents sell and have sold said cloth to tailoring concerns and at all times mentioned herein have caused said tailoring concerns to maintain a course of trade in said cloth in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, some of which handle loden cloth loomed in the Province of Tyrol and others of which handle loden cloth loomed in other Central European localities and countries.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and other partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of loden cloth in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said loden cloth the respondents have made many representations concerning the character and nature of said loden cloth. Respondents, aforesaid, have made representations to tailoring concerns to induce tailoring concerns to purchase said loden cloth and were calculated and intended to induce tailoring concerns to act thereon and that tailoring concerns would republish and use the same representations in advertising and selling commodities made by said tailoring concerns from said loden cloth.
Complaint

in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among said representations made by the respondents are those of the following import and effect:

(a) Tyrolean woven loden cloth can only be applied to genuine fabric which is only the product of one famous Austrian mill.

(b) Genuine Tyrolean loden cloth can only be procured in the United States through respondents.

(c) That the water of the mountain streams of the Tyrol, with its peculiar chemical content, used in finishing Tyrolean loden cloth, gives it a magnificent finish and a stamp of authenticity that defies imitation by man elsewhere.

(d) Tyrolean loden cloth is loomed only from wool of sheep grown in the Tyrol.

All said statements, together with similar statements, purport to be descriptive of respondents’ product.

PAR. 5. The representations made, or caused to be made, by respondents with respect to the nature of its product are grossly exaggerated and untrue. In truth and in fact, loden cloth is made in many countries and is not confined to the Alps in the Tyrol in that territory which was formerly Austria. Genuine Tyrolean loden cloth is produced by many mills in the Tyrol in the territory which was formerly Austria. At the time of the making of said representations by respondents, genuine Tyrolean loden cloth was not offered exclusively in the United States by or through respondents. The waters in the Tyrol do not give to the Tyrolean loden cloth any peculiar or distinctive qualities that defy imitation by man or otherwise. The loden fabrics used and sold by respondents in the United States of America are not woven of fine Tyrolese wool, and in truth and in fact, contain the wool from sheep grown in and from other regions.

PAR. 6. The false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made as alleged in paragraph 4 hereof are calculated to, and have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs that only respondents and those to whom they sell have genuine Tyrolean loden cloth in the United States; that only one mill in the Province of Tyrol produces genuine loden cloth; that only that loden cloth, the fiber of which has been washed in the waters of the Tyrolean streams, has the appearance and finish of genuine loden cloth; and that genuine Tyrolean loden cloth is made only from the wool of sheep grown in the Tyrol; and were, and are, calculated to, and have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, cause, and have caused, business to be unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 26, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint upon the respondents Seymour Burn, Arthur Pollak, and Franz Beer, copartners, trading as Burn, Pollak & Beer, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 23, 1939, respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondents, Seymour Burn, Arthur Pollak, and Franz Beer, are copartners, trading as Burn, Pollak & Beer, and having their office and principal place of business at 381 Fourth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

Par. 2. Respondents are now and have been for more than 18 months last past engaged in the business of soliciting orders for a line of fabrics known as "Loden Cloth" for principals located outside the United States. Respondents cause said cloth when ordered to be imported into the United States and to be transported from warehouses in the State of New York to purchasers thereof in their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said laden cloth between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents are in active and substantial competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of laden cloth in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Some of said competitors of the respondents sell and distribute laden cloth loomed in the Tyrol in that territory which was formerly a part of Austria, and others of said competitors sell and distribute laden cloth loomed in other Central European localities and countries.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business, and to induce the purchase of said laden cloth, respondents have disseminated, or caused to be disseminated, throughout the United States various statements and representations relative to the quality and nature of said laden cloth. Respondents have made such statements and representations to tailoring concerns, purchasers of said laden cloth, with the intention that said concerns would use and disseminate such statements and representations in connection with the sale and distribution of commodities, made by said concerns from said laden cloth, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The statements and representations by the respondents, used and disseminated in the manner aforesaid, are as follows:

(a) That the term Tyrolean woven laden cloth can be truthfully applied only to the product of one famous Austrian mill.

(b) That genuine Tyrolean laden cloth can be procured in the United States only through respondents.

(c) That the water of the mountain streams of the Tyrol, with its peculiar chemical content, used in finishing Tyrolean laden cloth, gives it a magnificent finish and a stamp of authenticity that defies imitation by man elsewhere.

(d) That Tyrolean laden cloth is loomed only from the wool of sheep grown in the Tyrol.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with others similar thereto not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of the quality and nature of respondents' products.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations by the respondents, used and disseminated as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated and untrue. In truth and in fact, laden cloth is made in many countries other than in the Alps and Tyrol in that territory which was formerly a part of Austria. Genuine Tyrolean woven loden cloth is produced by many mills in that territory known as the Tyrol. During the times mentioned herein genuine Tyrolean loden cloth was not offered in the United States exclusively by or through the respondents. The waters in the Tyrol do not give to the Tyrolean loden cloth any peculiar or distinctive qualities which cannot be obtained in loden cloth produced elsewhere. The loden cloth fabrics sold and distributed by the respondents in the United States contain some wool from sheep grown in localities other than in the Tyrol.

Par. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations have the tendency and capacity to, and do, cause members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that said false and misleading statements and representations are true and into purchasing substantial quantities of said loden cloth because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof, trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been, and is now, unfairly diverted to the respondents from their said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Seymour Burn, Arthur Pollak, and Franz Beer, individually and as copartners, trading as Burn, Pollak & Beer, or under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of loden cloth, or any cloth or fabric of similar weave or content, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or indirectly:

(a) That any mill or plant located in that European territory known as the Tyrol is the sole producer of Tyrolean woven loden cloth.

(b) That Tyrolean woven loden cloth can be procured in the United States only through or from the respondents.

(c) That the water in the Tyrol gives Tyrolean woven loden cloth distinctive qualities which can not be obtained in loden cloth produced elsewhere.

(d) That said loden cloth is made wholly of Tyrolese wool unless and until said cloth is made wholly and exclusively from the wool of sheep grown in the Tyrol.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GRAND GASLIGHT, INC.

Where a corporation engaged in sale of incandescent lamps for general lighting service and operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations, and in selling its said products through salesmen and the mails to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others likewise engaged in sale and distribution of such products in commerce and in said District, and including many who correctly brand their said products as to wattage and voltage—

(a) Represented and implied to purchasers of its said bulbs that it was the manufacturer thereof and owned and operated, or directly and absolutely controlled manufacturing plant in which such products were made, through statement “Manufacturers and importers of electric light bulbs” on folders, statements, and letterheads sent to prospective purchasers and to purchasers, facts being it did not make any such bulbs during period in question, but purchased same from domestic corporation and from foreign sources, and did not own, operate, nor control plant in which such bulbs were manufactured; and

(b) Caused bulbs offered and sold by it to be marked with figures and letters misleadingly and prejudicially indicative of wattage and voltage of particular product, facts being its said bulbs, marked in accordance with custom and practice in industry, did not, due allowance made for recognized and established tolerances, produce light and consume current as thus indicated, but, excepting those marked “25-W, 120-V,” produced less light and consumed more current than indicated, purchasers of such bulbs would, with exception aforesaid, produce substantially less light and consume less current, and all bulbs tested were, as compared with recognized standards, of inferior quality as producers of light;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive many members of purchasing public and cause them erroneously and mistakenly to believe that it was the manufacturer of the bulbs offered and sold by it, and that said bulbs were of wattage and voltage indicated by letters and figures thereon, on which ordinary purchaser must rely in determining value or efficiency of such products, and to cause such members, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its said products and thus unfairly divert trade in commerce to it from its competitors who do not misrepresent their business status, and who truthfully brand and mark their products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.
Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Grand Gaslight, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Grand Gaslight, Inc., is a corporation, incorporated on or about January 24, 1933, under the laws of the State of New York, having a place of business in the city of New York, and it is and has been since on or about the date of its incorporation engaged in the business of the sale of incandescent lamps.

Paragraph 2. During all the times since its organization as a corporation the respondent has sold incandescent lamps, made for general lighting service for operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations, including the lamps hereinafter mentioned and referred to, to purchasers, including wholesale dealers or jobbers and retail dealers therein, located in various States of the United States other than New York or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale by the dealers for use or consumption. The respondent has caused the lamps when so sold by it to be transported from New York, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in other States.

Paragraph 3. During all the times above mentioned and for many years prior thereto, other individuals, firms, and corporations, hereinafter referred to as sellers, have been engaged, some of them in the business of the manufacture and sale, and others in the business of the sale of incandescent lamps for operation with electric current supplied by public service corporations for general lighting service to purchasers, wholesale dealers or jobbers and retail dealers therein, located in various States of the United States other than the State of the seller or the State of origin of the shipment, for resale by the dealers for use or consumption. The sellers, respectively, have caused the lamps, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to the purchasers located in other States.

Paragraph 4. The respondent, in the sale of incandescent lamps, is and has been in substantial competition in interstate commerce with the other individuals, firms, and corporations, referred to as sellers in paragraph 3 hereof, during all the times referred to in paragraph 3 hereof.

Par. 5. There is and has been, during all the times above mentioned and referred to and for many years prior thereto, an established and universal custom in the United States in connection with the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps manufactured for general lighting service for operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations, that, at the times the lamps are displayed or offered for sale or sold by manufacturers, dealer distributors, or others, to users or consumers, including the Federal and State Governments and their agencies, and municipal and other corporations, and members of the public, the lamps shall be legibly, durably marked or printed, among other things, with the words and figures indicating, respectively, the number of volts and watts that is the measure of their electromotive force and power, allowing for certain tolerances, more or less, in the statement of the number of watts with which they are marked or branded.

The tolerances in the watt measurement above referred to are and have been known to and have been recognized, substantially by all the members of the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps in the United States, during all the times above mentioned and referred to. And, the tolerances in the watt measurement of incandescent lamps, manufactured for general lighting service, above referred to, have during said times coincided with the tolerances as set forth in the Federal specifications for the purchase of incandescent lamps by the United States.

Par. 6. The tolerances in the statement of the number of watts with which incandescent lamps are and have been marked or branded, mentioned and referred to in paragraph 5 hereof, for example, for the years beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1933; beginning July 1, 1933, and ending June 30, 1934; and beginning July 1, 1934, and ending June 30, 1935, for large tungsten filament lamps for general lighting service, for standard bulbs marked 25, 40, 60, 75, and 100 watts, were as follows:

For the year beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1933

Par. 7. During all the times above mentioned and referred to in paragraphs 2 and 4 hereof, the respondent in offering for sale and in the sale of incandescent lamps, sold by it as set forth in paragraphs 2 and 4 hereof, has represented on its letterheads and invoices and verbally by statements of its agents to dealers, who purchase such lamps for resale to the public for use or consumption, that respondent was a manufacturer of incandescent lamps and the manufacturer of the lamps sold by it; and it has caused such representation to be made by dealers, who purchased its lamps for resale, to the public to whom the lamps were resold for use or consumption by the dealers.

The respondent also caused its incandescent lamps mentioned and referred to above to be offered for sale and sold during all the times above-mentioned and referred to with the number of watts of their electromotive power marked or branded thereon by such method and in such manner that the marking or branding thereof was easily erased in handling the lamps, contrary to the customary method and manner recognized and used by the industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of such lamps, and with the watt measurement that was in some instances in excess of and in other instances less than their actual watt measurement, after allowing for the tolerances above-mentioned.

Par. 8. The respondent during all the times above-mentioned and referred to was not a manufacturer of incandescent lamps, and was not the manufacturer of the lamps sold by it as above set forth, and the statements and representations above-mentioned that it was a manufacturer of incandescent lamps and the manufacturer of the incandescent lamps sold by it, and the marking or branding of the lamps sold by it as above set forth with the watt measurement that was in excess of or less than the actual watt measurement of the lamps, had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead dealers and the members of the public who purchase incandescent lamps for use or consumption into the belief that the respondent was the manufacturer of the lamps offered for sale and sold by it, and, that when purchasing respondent's lamps from respondent they obtain a direct from factory price and save a middleman's profit; and, that the lamps were of the watt measurement with which they were marked or branded, and in reliance upon such belief, into purchasing respondent's lamps in place of incandescent lamps sold by respondent's competitors, and the dealers and members of the public were deceived and misled thereby into purchasing respondent's lamps in preference to and in place of lamps sold by respondent's competitors and trade in incandescent lamps was thereby diverted from respondent's competitors to the respondent.

PAR. 9. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondent were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 23, 1935, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint upon respondent, Grand Gaslight, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, no answer having been filed by the respondent, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by Clark Nichols, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondent through its president, Samuel Rudefer, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, no brief having been filed by the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Grand Gaslight, Inc., is a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.
GRAND GASLIGHT, INC.

Findings

It has its principal office and place of business in New York, N. Y. It is engaged in the sale of incandescent lamps made for general lighting service and for operation in connection with electric current supplied by public service corporations. When said products are sold, respondent causes the same to be transported from its said place of business in New York, N. Y., to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of electric light bulbs or incandescent lamps in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Among said competitors are many who correctly brand their products as to wattage and voltage.

PAR. 2. Respondent makes use of salesmen and the United States mails in connection with the sale and distribution of its said products. It does no newspaper advertising. It mails to prospective purchasers, and purchasers, folders, statements, and letterheads which, for a considerable period of time prior to October 1935, contained the following statement:

Manufacturers and importers of electric light bulbs.

By this means the respondent represented and implied to purchasers of its said products that it was the manufacturer thereof and owned and operated, or directly and absolutely controlled, the manufacturing plant wherein such products were made and manufactured.

In truth and in fact the respondent did not manufacture any of the light bulbs offered for sale and sold by it during the period in which it made the representations aforesaid, but purchased said bulbs in part from the Lednew Corporation, a domestic corporation, and from foreign sources. Respondent did not own, operate, nor control the manufacturing plant wherein the bulbs were made or manufactured. The representation that respondent was a manufacturer of bulbs was false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 3. Respondent, as is the custom and practice in the industry, caused the bulbs offered for sale and sold by it to be marked with figures and letters to indicate the wattage and voltage of the particular bulb on which the figures and letters were placed. Figures and letters, such as 25-W, 40-W, and 60-W, are used to indicate the number of watts of electricity consumed by the bulb when attached to a current of the voltage likewise indicated on the bulb by figures and letters, such as 110-V, 115-V, and 120-V, indicating the voltage of the electrical current on which the bulb should be used. The wattage of a bulb indicates the amount of light which should be produced by such bulb when attached to a current of the voltage indicated on the bulb.

Recognized scientific tests by the National Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce, of a representative number of bulbs, marked, "25-W, 120-V," "40-W, 120-V," "60-W, 120-V," "75-W, 120-V," and "100-W, 120-V," respectively, sold by the respondent and delivered to a retailer in Chicago, Ill., disclosed that a great majority of the bulbs consume, after making due allowance for the generally recognized tolerances permitted in the marking of such bulbs, a substantially greater wattage of electricity and produced substantially less light than indicated and represented by the markings on the bulbs. Some of the bulbs consumed less electricity but gave less light than indicated by the markings thereon. The results of this test show, and the Commission finds, that the bulbs marked, "25-W, 120-V" used less electricity but gave approximately 20 percent less light than indicated by the markings thereon; that the bulbs marked, "40-W, 120-V" and "60-W, 120-V" used substantially more watts of electricity and produced approximately 20 percent less light than indicated by the markings thereon; and that bulbs marked "75-W, 120-V" and "100-W, and 120-V" used substantially more watts of electricity and gave approximately 25 percent less light than indicated by the markings thereon.

Purchasers of these bulbs would, in all instances, except as to the 25-W bulbs, be using substantially more electricity and securing substantially less light than indicated by the markings thereon or which should be secured by the amount of electricity used. All of the bulbs tested are of inferior quality, insofar as producing light is concerned, when compared to recognized standards.

The acts and practices of the respondent in misbranding its said bulbs as to the wattage are misleading and deceptive as the ordinary purchaser must rely on the markings found on a bulb in determining the value or efficiency thereof.

Par. 4. The acts and practices of the respondent, as aforesaid, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia are false, misleading, and deceptive and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive many members of the purchasing public and cause them erroneously and mistakenly to believe that the respondent is the manufacturer of bulbs offered for sale and sold by it, and that the bulbs are of the wattage and voltage indicated by the letters and figures placed thereon, and to cause them, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s said products, and, as a result, to unfairly divert trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent their business status and who truthfully brand and mark their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony, and other evidence taken before William W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Grand Gaslight, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of incandescent lamp bulbs in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That it is a manufacturer of incandescent lamp bulbs, unless or until said respondent actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls, a manufacturing plant wherein said products are manufactured.

2. That incandescent lamp bulbs are of any designated number of watts or designed to operate on any designated voltage other than the actual wattage and voltage of such bulbs.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ROBERT C. TAYLOR TRADING AS MARVEL PRODUCTS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3316. Complaint, Jan. 27, 1938—Decision, Mar. 21, 1939

Where an individual engaged in manufacturing hair and scalp lotions including product designated as "Hair Marvel," and in selling same through wholesale barber supply houses, department stores, barber shops, beauty shops, drug stores, and by mail direct—

(a) Represented, through statements circulated through newspapers, booklets, and labels, including therein purported testimonial quotations, directly and by implication, that said product was not a hair dye or was something other than a hair dye, and would restore the natural color of the hair, and that it did not have the detrimental qualities usually attributed to hair dyes and was unqualifiedly safe, and would stimulate the growth of the hair, and rejuvenate, invigorate, and nourish hair roots, and restore scalp to natural healthy condition; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said preparation possessed germicidal antiseptic properties and would stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff, and constituted effective cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, itch, eczema, and blotchy scalp;

Facts being said product was a dye and not harmless, by virtue of lead acetate ingredient therein, which might prove harmful under some conditions of use, or used by certain persons, either children or adults, and said preparation would not effectively restore natural color of hair, stimulate growth thereof, etc., and aforesaid representations were false; and

(c) Represented that he owned or controlled laboratory used in connection with scientific experiment, analyses, or manufacture of said "Hair Marvel," through use on letterheads, stationery, and other printed matter of legend including word "Laboratory," together with trade name employed, and address, facts being he neither owned, operated, nor controlled any such laboratory used as aforesaid;

With result that members of consuming public believed true such representations and statements as to said product not being dye and bought and used same in such belief, and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all said representations were true, and of inducing members of such public to buy and use said "Hair Marvel" because of such erroneous belief, and of diverting thereby trade to him from competitors engaged in sale in interstate commerce of hair color restorers and like and similar preparations and treatments for scalp and hair, and who, in sale of their said products, in no wise misrepresent their scientific or experimental equipment or efficiency or therapeutic value thereof; to the substantial injury and prejudice of competitors:
COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Robert C. Taylor, an individual, trading as Marvel Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Robert C. Taylor, is an individual doing business under the trade name of Marvel Products Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1604 E. Jarvis Avenue, Hazel Park, Mich., a suburb of Detroit, Mich. Respondent is now, and has been for some years, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling in commerce, as herein set out, hair and scalp lotions, including a product designated "Hair Marvel."

Paragraph 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said products, when sold, to be transported from his office and place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years, a course of trade and commerce in said products so manufactured, distributed, and sold by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling hair and scalp lotions or similar products designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said product, designated as "Hair Marvel," respondent has caused his said product to be packed in bottles labeled in part as follows:

HAIR MARVEL
Promotes a Healthy Scalp
FREE FROM DANDRUFF and Irritation
REVIVES LIFE—LUSTRE
and NATURAL COLOR to
When used Consistently

Par. 5. In the course of the operation of said business, respondent causes the interstate distribution of an advertising booklet, on the front page of which are set forth statements identical with those appearing on the label as hereinbefore set forth. Said booklet also contains many statements with respect to respondent's product, of which the following are typical:

Hair Marvel has proven very effective in stimulating the growth of new hair.

Hair Marvel contains several ingredients which are found in the human body, and it is our belief that the color cells which are nourished through the central shaft of hair are invigorated and nourished by Hair Marvel. Other Hair Marvel ingredients would break down the film or bubbles which surround the color pigment in the hair, thereby restoring natural color.

Many dyes, rinses, tints, etc. used in coloring the hair have proven detrimental in the giving of Permanent Waves. Where only Hair Marvel has been used Permanent Waves have been very successful.

For Dandruff, Irritation and Falling Hair.

Hair Marvel is Very Effective in Eradicating Dandruff and Companionate Ailments, Restoring the Scalp to a Natural Healthy Condition.

Hair Marvel's germicidal effectiveness has been proven through its use in clearing up many apparently hopeless cases of Alopecia (Spotted baldness), Psoriasis (Itch), Eczema, Blotchy Scalps, etc. where hundreds of dollars had previously been spent without results.

A number of alleged testimonials are printed in the booklet. Certain of them represent:

Hair Marvel restored the natural color to my white hair. * * * removed the dandruff.

Now it has regained its natural dark brown color, bald spots are fast disappearing as new hair is starting to come in, and at the same time all of my hair is nearly back to its original color of black.

By the said means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondent makes and has made to the general public many false and misleading statements with reference to the alleged therapeutic value of said product and its effect upon the users thereof, and through the statements herein set out, and others of similar import and effect, the respondent represents, either directly or through implication, that the use of said preparation—

1. Will effectively restore the natural color of the hair.
2. Stops falling hair and eradicates dandruff.
3. Acts on gray hair without the aid of harmful dyes that ruin the health and beauty of the hair and scalp.
4. Has a rejuvenating, invigorating, and nourishing effect upon the roots of the hair.
5. Stimulates the growth of new hair and restores the scalp to a natural healthy condition.
6. Is effective as a cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, itch, eczema, and blotchy scalps, and possesses germicidal or antiseptic properties; and
7. Is not a dye and achieves the results claimed for it in restoring natural color because of its nourishing and invigorating effect on the color cells of the hair.

PAR. 6. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of his product are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, said product when applied to the hair, will not impart nourishment to such hair through the “central shaft” or the roots of the hair so as to revive or bring back to its original natural color the hair which has turned gray, white, or faded. To date medical science has not found a means of restoring natural color to hair. The only method of lending color to hair is by process of dyeing. There is no preparation known to medical science at the present time which can be truthfully claimed to restore the natural color to hair. In fact, “Hair Marvel” is a dye, and will not color or restore color to gray, white, or faded hair, except in the sense that it may dye the hair. It contains lead acetate, sulphur, and ammonia among its ingredients. Ammonia with sulphur forms ammonium sulphide, which reacts with lead acetate and results in the formation of lead sulphite, which is a black precipitate, and an application of this preparation will give or tend to give a black color to hair. Application of “Hair Marvel” to persons originally with blonde, red, brown, or black hair will in all cases tint the hair black, and does not restore the natural color to hair. “Hair Marvel” is therefore a dye, and the lead acetate contained therein is an accumulative poison which may prove harmful under some conditions of its use, or when used by certain persons, either children or adults. The consequences of lead poisoning may be rheumatic and arthritic pains, digestive disturbances, painter’s colic, and other ailments.

Said preparation does not possess germicidal or antiseptic properties and its use will not promote a healthy scalp or restore the scalp to a healthy condition. Said preparation will not stop falling hair or eradicate dandruff nor will it stimulate the growth of new hair or restore new life to hair. Said preparation does not contain "several ingredients that are found in the human body" and does not contain ingredients capable of replacing the natural oils of the hair and scalp, and will not prevent or stop falling hair or grow new hair. Said preparation is not a competent and effective cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, eczema, or dandruff. Psoriasis is a chronic skin disease, the cause of which is unknown, but there is no specific cure or remedy for psoriasis. Eczema may be due to a number of causes such as digestive disturbances and cannot be remedied by respondent's preparation. These is no known preparation for external application that serves as a competent and effective cure or remedy for dandruff. Alopecia is in most cases due to some internal disorder or maladjustment of the nervous system and there is no preparation for external application to the scalp that will cure alopecia.

Par. 7. Through statements such as—

MARVEL PRODUCTS CO.
Detroit, Michigan
Office and Laboratory

the respondent represents that he owns and operates or controls the laboratory used in connection with scientific experimentation and analysis.

In truth and in fact said respondent does not own and operate or directly and absolutely control any laboratory or place devoted to experimental study in any branch of science by the application of scientific principles in making tests and analyses of said preparation so as to warrant the representation that he owns and operates a laboratory.

Par. 8. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing his product and the effectiveness of said product for treating hair and scalp conditions, as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling his product known as "Hair Marvel" was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of the said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the misrepresentations of respondent as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchases a substantial volume of respondent's preparation known as "Hair Marvel," with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling hair-color restorers and like and similar preparations and treatments for the scalp and hair, who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof in use. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent herein have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondent, Robert C. Taylor, an individual, trading as Marvel Products Co., charging respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of section 5 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint respondent entered his appearance and filed his answer herein. Hearings were held and testimony was introduced by Merle P. Lyon, attorney for the Commission in support of the allegations of the complaint, and by Norval B. Fast, attorney for respondent in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, before Edward J. Hornibrook, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the testimony and other evidence, the brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint, and respondent's exceptions to the report of the trial examiner upon the evidence; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent Robert C. Taylor is an individual doing business under the trade name of Marvel Products Co. with his office and principal place of business located at 1604 East Jarvis Avenue, Hazel Park, Mich., a suburb of Detroit, Mich., is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling in commerce through the medium of wholesale barber supply houses, department stores, barber shops, beauty shops, drug stores, and by direct mail, hair and scalp lotions including the product designated as “Hair Marvel.”

Par. 2. Respondent in the regular course and conduct of his business, upon receipt of orders, causes and has caused his products to be transported, from his place of business in Hazel Park, Mich., to the purchasers thereof located in California, Arkansas, Ohio, and other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade in said product so sold, distributed, and transported by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is now and has been in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling hair and scalp lotions or similar products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as set forth in paragraph 1, respondent has, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the product “Hair Marvel,” offered for sale and sold by him, published representations and statements with reference to the manufacture and quality of the said product. Such representations, among others, set forth and circulated through the medium of newspapers, booklets, and labels, are as follows:

HAIR MARVEL

REVIVES LIFE—LUSTRE

Findings

Hair Marvel has proven very effective in stimulating the growth of new hair. Hair Marvel contains several ingredients which are found in the human body, and it is our belief that the color cells which are nourished through the central shaft of hair are invigorated and nourished by Hair Marvel. Other Hair Marvel ingredients would break down the film or bubbles which surround the color pigment in the hair, thereby restoring natural color.

Many dyes, rinses, tints, etc. used in coloring the hair have proven detrimental in the giving of Permanent Waves. Where only Hair Marvel has been used Permanent Waves have been very successful.

For Dandruff, Irritation and Falling Hair.

Hair Marvel is Very Effective in Eradicating Dandruff and Companionate Ailments, Restoring the Scalp to a Natural Healthy Condition.

Hair Marvel's germicidal effectiveness has been proven through its use in clearing up many apparently hopeless cases of Alopecia, (Spotted baldness), Psoriasis (Itch), Eczema, Blotchy Scalps, etc. where hundreds of dollars had previously been spent without results.

Hair Marvel restored the natural color to my white hair. * * * removed the dandruff.

Now it has regained its natural dark brown color, bald spots are fast disappearing as new hair is starting to come in, and at the same time all of my hair is nearly back to its original color of black.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's product, the respondent represents either directly or through implication that the use of said preparation will effectively restore the natural color of the hair; stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff; act on gray hair without the aid of harmful dyes that ruin the health and beauty of the hair and scalp; that it has a rejuvenating, invigorating, and nourishing effect upon the roots of the hair; that it stimulates the growth of new hair and restores the scalp to a natural healthy condition; that it is effective as a cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, itch, eczema, and blotchy scalps, and possesses germicidal or antiseptic properties; that it is not a dye and achieves the results claimed for it in restoring natural color because of its nourishing and invigorating effect on the color cells of the hair.

Furthermore, the respondent represents that he owns or controls a laboratory used in connection with scientific experiment analyses or manufacture of said product, "Hair Marvel," by use of the following legend on letterheads, stationery, and other printed matter.

MARVEL PRODUCTS CO.
Detroit, Michigan
Office and Laboratory
Findings 28 F. T. C.

Par. 5. The formula used by the respondent in the manufacture of 6½ gallons of "Hair Marvel" is as follows:

18 ounces of glycerin
32 " " bay rum
4 " " 5½% ammonia
16 " " chloride of sodium
3½ " " precipitated sulphur
1½ " " lead acetate
¾ " " perfume
6 gallons of distilled water

Par. 6. The testimony shows and the Commission so finds as a fact that the product "Hair Marvel" is a dye and will not effectively restore the natural color of the hair; stimulate the growth of new hair and restore the scalp to a natural healthy condition; rejuvenate, invigorate and nourish the roots of the hair; stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff; act as an effective cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, itch, eczema, or blotchy scalp; and it is not a harmless preparation because the lead acetate contained in the product "Hair Marvel" is an accumulative poison which may prove harmful under some conditions of its use or when used by certain persons, either children or adults.

Par. 7. Respondent neither owns, operates, nor controls any laboratory used in connection with scientific experiment analysis or manufacture of the product "Hair Marvel."

Par. 8. The testimony is to the effect and the Commission so finds as a fact that members of the consuming public believed the representations and statements of respondent that "Hair Marvel" is not a dye and bought and used same under such belief.

Par. 9. The representations of respondent, as aforesaid, have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and did deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, said representations of respondent have had and do have a tendency and capacity, to induce, and have induced, members of the purchasing public to buy and use respondent’s "Hair Marvel" because of the erroneous belief as set forth above, and to divert and have diverted, trade to the respondent from competitors engaged in the sale, in interstate commerce, of hair color restorers and like and similar preparations and treatments for the scalp and hair who, in the sale of their products, in no wise misrepresent their scientific experimental equipment or the efficiency or the therapeutic value of their competing products; and respondent’s acts and practices are to the substantial injury and prejudice of his competitors.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Edward J. Hornibrook, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint, no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent and no oral arguments having been requested or made, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Robert C. Taylor, individually and trading as Marvel Products Co., or trading under any other name, his agents, servants, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of hair and scalp lotion or preparation now designated by the name of "Hair Marvel," or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients, or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under that name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing through the use of the word "laboratory" or any other word or words of similar import and meaning, in advertising, circulars, letterheads, and other printed matter, or in any other manner, that the respondent owns, operates or controls a scientific laboratory, employs trained scientists and technicians, and is equipped to test his products in the manner and with the methods used by recognized scientific laboratories.

2. Representing that said preparation is not a hair dye or is something other than a hair dye or that it will restore the natural color of the hair.

3. Representing that said preparation will stimulate the growth of hair or restore the scalp to a natural, healthy condition.
4. Representing that said preparation will rejuvenate, invigorate, or nourish the roots of the hair.
5. Representing that said preparation will stop falling hair or eradicate dandruff.
6. Representing that said preparation is an effective cure or remedy for alopecia, psoriasis, itch, eczema, or blotchy scalp.
7. Representing that said preparation possesses germicidal or anti-septic properties.
8. Representing directly or indirectly that said preparation does not have the detrimental qualities usually attributed to hair dyes or that it is unqualifiedly safe for use.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether he intends to comply with this order, and, if so, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 3454. Complaint, June 11, 1938—Decision, Mar. 21, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in importing, and in buying from local sources, bicycles and bicycle frames, parts, and accessories, and in selling and distributing such products and, as thus engaged, in (1) importing from Japan bicycle parts, accessories, and frames upon which were marked name of country of origin and, in many cases, upon which were set forth, stamped, or marked by decalcomania in said country, words "Made in Japan," in accordance with tariff law and custom regulations of the United States requiring disclosure of source of origin, and in (2) selling and distributing, as aforesaid, bicycle frames and parts and, after assembly, complete bicycles and accessories to purchasers in the various States and in the District of Columbia from its place of business in New York, and including among such products made in Japan, completely assembled bicycles there made and others with frames and essential parts of Japanese origin, to which had been added some American parts, and (3) possessed of number of name plates or emblems, purchased by it from New York manufacturer of such products who had made same for American manufacturer and for wholesale distributor upon order, for use on American-made bicycles;

In selling its Japanese-made bicycle frames, parts and accessories, and bicycles composed of frame and other parts of Japanese origin combined with some American parts, and for purpose of inducing public to purchase such frames and bicycles—

(a) Placed thereon name plates of American manufacturers and distributors in such manner as to completely cover up notice of origin denoted by words "Made in Japan" or other designation placed thereon in said country; and

(b) Removed, in many instances, notice of origin denoted by words "Made in Japan" placed thereon as aforesaid, and attached to such bicycles and frames name plates or emblems of American manufacturers, over part on said frames from which notice of origin denoted by words "Made in Japan," had been erased or otherwise obliterated; and

(c) Furnished, in other instances, name plates or emblems of said American manufacturer, or made for use by New York distributor on American-made bicycles, to customers or dealers to whom it had sold and shipped bicycles and bicycle frames, and by whom such name plates or emblems were placed upon such Japanese bicycle frames in exactly same manner in which said corporation had placed name plates or emblems on bicycles which it had, in many instances, sold and shipped from its place of business to the dealers;

With result of thereby placing in the hands of its retail dealer customers instruments and means of deceiving and misleading public, and with effect of deceiving and misleading prospective purchasers of such bicycles and members of purchasing public, on part of substantial portion of which there is decided preference for such products made in the United States over those made in foreign countries and imported, because of superior quality of former over latter, into erroneous belief that products in question, made in Japan and imported, with source of origin thereon in all cases, were product of American manufacturers, and with result, as direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by such representations, acts, and practices, that substantial portion of said public was induced to purchase such bicycles and frames and purchased substantial number thereof from it and its dealers, and trade was unfairly diverted from others likewise engaged in sale and shipment in commerce in the various States of such products, frames, and accessories, and who truthfully represent the same and do not in any manner use any misrepresentation calculated to deceive trade or purchasing public; to the injury of competition in commerce; and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Mr. Jacques D. Del Monte, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that K & K Supply Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, K & K Supply Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 146 Chambers Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now, and has been for many years last past, engaged in the business of buying, selling, and distributing bicycles and bicycle parts and accessories. In the course and conduct of its business respondent imports bicycle frames and bicycle parts manufactured in Japan and sells and distributes said products to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade and commerce by respondent between and among the various States of the United States, in said bicycle frames and parts manufactured in Japan.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of bicycles, bicycle frames, and parts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent assembles said bicycle frames and parts imported by it from Japan together with other parts manufactured in the United States and sells and ships the completed bicycles thus assembled to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which shipment is made.

Section 304 of the United States Tariff Act of 1930, in force now and at all times herein referred to, governing the importation of foreign-made goods, requires imported bicycle frames to be properly marked at the time of importation to indicate the country of origin. The bicycle frames imported by respondent from Japan in many instances bore no name plates, and the words "Made in Japan" were marked on the head of the frame by decalcomania or other similar process which could easily be covered, obliterated, or removed so as to escape the notice and attention of prospective purchasers.

At various times during the year 1936, respondent purchased large quantities of brass name plates or bicycle emblems bearing the name and insignia of the Shapleigh Hardware Co., St. Louis, Mo.; and in many instances respondent placed said brass name plates or emblems on the imported bicycle frames in such manner and with such effect as to cover or conceal the words "Made in Japan" placed thereon by decalcomania mark pursuant to the provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930 heretofore set forth. In many other instances, where said brass name plates or emblems were of insufficient size to cover the mark "Made in Japan," said mark was erased or otherwise obliterated or removed by respondent. Said brass name plates or emblems are oval in shape, with a large letter "S" and the words "Shapleigh Special," "Shapleigh Hardware Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.," thereon.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the name plates or emblems bearing the words "Shapleigh Special," "Shapleigh Hardware Co., St. Louis, U. S. A." on the frames of the bicycles offered for sale and sold by it, served, and now serves, as a representation to the purchasing public that said bicycles or bicycle frames were and are the products of the Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo.; and the obliteration, removal, or concealment by respondent of the mark "Made in Japan" on said bicycle frames as hereinabove described, served and now serves as a representation to the purchasing public that said bicycles or bicycle frames were and are manufactured in the United States; when in truth and in fact said bicycles or bicycle frames were and are neither products of the Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo., nor products manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 5. A substantial portion of the purchasing public has indicated and has a decided preference for bicycles and bicycle frames and parts manufactured in the United States over such articles manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States.

PAR. 6. There are now and have been competitors of respondent selling and distributing bicycles and bicycle frames and parts in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia who do not misrepresent in any manner whatsoever the nature, character, origin, or manufacturer or distributor of the products offered for sale and sold by them.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of a name plate or emblem of the Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo., on the frames of the bicycles or bicycle frames offered for sale and sold by it, and the obliteration or concealment in any manner whatsoever of the words "Made in Japan" or other words to indicate that said articles are imported and not of domestic manufacture, had and has a capacity and tendency to, and did and does, deceive and mislead prospective purchasers and purchasers of its bicycles and bicycle frames into the erroneous belief that said articles are the products of the Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo., and that they are of domestic manufacture.

On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been and is induced to purchase bicycles and bicycle frames from respondent, and thereby trade has been, and is, diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors named in paragraphs 2 and 6 hereof. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
K & K SUPPLY CO., INC. 1199

Findings

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, under date of June 11, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, K & K Supply Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, the respondent having entered its appearance by its attorney, Jacques D. Del Monte, Esq., of 80 Wall Street, city of New York, N. Y., respondent thereafter filed its answer to the complaint in which it in part admitted and in part denied the various allegations of the complaint. Thereafter hearings were had and evidence was thereupon introduced in support of the allegations of the complaint and on behalf of the respondent before John J. Keenan, a trial examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, therefore duly appointed. The evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. A brief was filed on behalf of the Commission in support of the allegations in the complaint. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer and evidence adduced at said hearings, and the Commission having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. The respondent, K & K Supply Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 146 Chambers Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now, and has been for many years last past, engaged in the business of importing, buying from local sources, selling, and distributing in commerce bicycles, bicycle frames, parts, and accessories. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent imports from Japan bicycle frames and bicycle parts and accessories manufactured in Japan; the said bicycle frames are marked with the name of the country of origin and in many instances said bicycle frames carry on said frames, stamped or marked by decalcomania, the words "Made in Japan" which were placed thereon in Japan in accordance with the Tariff Law and Customs Regulations of the United States requiring disclosure of the source of origin. Respondent sells and distributes said bicycle frames, bicycle parts and, after assembly, complete bicycles and accessories to purchaser thereof in and among various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, from its place of business at 146 Chambers Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a continuous course of trade in commerce by respondent between and among various States of the United States in said bicycle frames, bicycle parts, and accessories manufactured in Japan, completely assembled bicycles manufactured in Japan and others with the frame and essential parts of Japanese origin, to which some American parts have been added.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent purchased from a manufacturer of name plates or emblems in New York City, N. Y., a large quantity of name plates or emblems which said manufacturer had made for the Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo., and a large quantity of other name plates or emblems bearing the name "Motor Bike" thereon which had been made for a wholesale distributor in New York City, N. Y. All of the said name plates or emblems were manufactured upon order for use on American-made bicycles.

The respondent, in the sale of its Japanese-manufactured bicycle frames, bicycles, parts, and accessories, and bicycles composed of frames and other parts of Japanese origin combined with some American parts and for the purpose of inducing the public to purchase said bicycle frames and bicycles, placed thereon name plates of American manufacturers and distributors in such manner as to completely cover up the notice of origin denoted by the words "Made in Japan" or other designation placed thereon in Japan; in many instances respondent has removed the notice of origin denoted by the words "Made in Japan" placed thereon by decalcomania, and attached to said bicycles and bicycle frames the name plates or emblems of American manufacturers over the part on the said bicycle frames from which the notice of origin denoted by the words "Made in Japan" had been erased or otherwise obliterated; in other instances, respondent had furnished its customers or dealers to whom it had sold and shipped bicycles and bicycle frames name plates or emblems of the Shapleigh Hardware Co. or the plates or emblems manufactured for use by a New York distributor on American-made bicycles, which name plates or emblems were placed upon the Japanese bicycle frame by the said retail dealers in exactly the same manner as the respondent had placed the name plates or emblems on the bicycles which it had, in many instances, sold and shipped from its place of business to the dealers; all of the said bicycle frames and bicycles upon which the name plates or emblems were placed by the respondent or its dealers had been manufactured in Japan and imported into the United States with the source of origin on the same. The acts and practices hereinbefore set forth placed in the hands of its retail dealer customers instruments and means of deceiving and misleading the public.

Par. 3. A substantial portion of the purchasing public has indicated and has a decided preference for bicycles and bicycle frames and parts manufactured in the United States of America because of their superior quality over similar articles manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States.

Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the name plates or emblems of Shapleigh Hardware Co. of St. Louis, Mo., or other American manufacturers representing that the said imported bicycles to which they were attached were products of an American manufacturer or distributor and the obliteration or concealment by the respondent of the Japanese notice of origin denoted by the words "Made in Japan" or other words indicating the Japanese manufacture and origin and the placing thereon of the American manufacturers' name plates or emblems by respondent has a capacity to, and tendency to, and did and does deceive and mislead members of the purchasing public and prospective purchasers of said bicycles into the erroneous belief that said bicycles are the product of American manufacturers; and, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the representations, acts, and practices of respondent as aforesaid, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been and is induced to purchase bicycles and bicycle frames and have purchased a substantial number of said bicycles and bicycle frames from the respondent and its dealers. As a consequence of the acts and practices of respondent, trade has been unfairly diverted from other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and shipment in commerce into and among the various States of the United States of bicycles, bicycle frames, and accessories who truthfully represent their products and who do not in any manner use any misrepresentation calculated to deceive the trade or the purchasing public; and, as a result of the acts and practices of respondent, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of respondent's business it represented the said bicycles or bicycle frames to be of American manufacture, whereas, in truth and in fact the said bicycles were not of American manufacture, the same having been manufactured in Japan and, in many instances, imported by the respondent from Japan and in other instances purchased by it from other importers in the United States. And on all of said bicycles at the time of the receipt by respondent the source of origin was disclosed either by a name plate or by decalcomania placed upon the head of said bicycle frames in Japan, and when offered for sale by the respondent or its dealers to the general public the said general public had no means of discovering or knowing that the said bicycles or bicycle frames were of Japanese origin and could not be distinguished from bicycles of American origin.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, practices and representations of the respondent, K & K Supply Co., Inc., a corporation, have been, and are, to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent and no oral arguments having been requested or made), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, K & K Supply Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bicycles, bicycle frames, parts, and accessories in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist, directly or indirectly, from:

1. Representing, by the use of misleading, fictitious, or obsolete nameplates or emblems, or in any other manner, that the bicycles sold and distributed by the respondent are wholly of American manufacture, when such products, or the frames thereof, or a substantial portion of the parts thereof, are of foreign manufacture.

2. Causing the brands or marks on imported bicycle frames or other parts, or other similar products, which indicate the foreign origin or manufacture of such merchandise, to be removed, erased, or concealed so as to mislead or deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture thereof, unless the removal or erasure or concealment of said brands or marks is necessary to the further manufacture or processing of said merchandise.

3. Furnishing to dealers or distributors any brands, emblems, or any other devices which enable such dealers or distributors to cover up, erase or conceal brands or marks indicating foreign origin of bicycles, bicycle frames, or other parts, or other similar products, or which enable such dealers or distributors to represent bicycles, bicycle frames, or other parts, or other similar merchandise of foreign manufacture as being of American manufacture.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where five individuals engaged, personally and through various agents, salesmen, solicitors, and employees, in offering, selling and distributing, under name "Modern American Encyclopedia," eight-volume reference set, together with "Quarterly Loose-Leaf Extension Service" for use in connection therewith, to purchasers in the various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in offer, sale, and distribution of reference books, encyclopedias, and extension services of same general character in commerce among the States and in said District, and including many who truthfully represent the nature of their business and do not make to the general public such false and misleading representations as made use of by them in conduct of their said business as below set forth, and do not use deceptive and misleading sales methods as made use of by individuals aforesaid;

In soliciting, as above set forth, and in selling said books and services, under trade name "Modern American Company" or otherwise, and through various agents, solicitors and representatives whom they employed, and who (1) were authorized and directed to solicit and sell such books and services and traveled from place to place throughout the United States in so doing, and whom (2) they furnished with prospectuses, order blanks, contracts, and other literature, and who (3) on making sale, required purchaser's signature to printed order blank or contract which was transmitted to individuals aforesaid, and through whom (4) they collected, at said time, part of agreed purchase price as down payment, with balance payable on delivery or in monthly installments—

(a) Represented, in course of their business as aforesaid, directly and through such agents, etc., and by means of said order blanks, prospectuses and other literature used and distributed as aforesaid, that said so-called "Modern American Encyclopedia" was a new, modern and up-to-date encyclopedia and reference work, facts being it was an old work and substantially the same as prior sets put out at various times from 1893 to 1933 under various other names and titles, and, while revised in certain respects in 1936, it had not been for many years and was not then modern or up-to-date reference work which in any reasonable degree met needs and requirements of purchasing and using public for reliable work of such character, and the many and rapid scientific, historical and other changes and discoveries which had occurred since 1893 and the making of the original plates, from which said so-called "Modern American Encyclopedia" was printed, rendered it practically valueless for its supposed purpose as such work; with tendency to and with effect of confusing and misleading public, which generally rely implicitly upon such works as furnishing up-to-date facts, revised to date of actual issue, into believing, through aforesaid false, fraudulent, misleading, deceptive, and injurious claims, representations and implications, that they were buying and obtaining for use new and useful up-to-date reference work;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that the material in said "Modern American Encyclopedia" was "prepared by a large number of experts and specialists in the various fields of human knowledge", and that “further assistance was given by eminent scholars, scientists, and men of affairs, who reviewed and revised various articles," and in preface, for ostensible purpose of attesting to the "authenticity" of such encyclopedia, listed names of 37 persons prominent in particular fields of learning, and represented the same as substantial contributors to preparation of said work, facts being not one of the persons listed as above set forth had made any contribution to such work or done anything in connection therewith to make it new and modern, excepting only some very slight contributions by a few to original 1893 work, and the earlier revisions thereof, and some of those listed had been dead for a number of years; with tendency to and effect of furthering deception of members of purchasing public into belief they were receiving a work which was new and modern and product of eminent specialists and experts named as aforesaid;

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, to prospective and actual purchasing public, that said "Modern American Encyclopedia" had been sold at prices far in excess of those at which it was then being offered, and that latter prices were special or introductory, and that after such introductory campaign had ceased publication would sell for considerably, or much, higher prices, as variously named, and also that said work was being specially offered free to certain selected purchasers without cost, except for nominal binding charge, and that it had been decided, instead of purchasing advertising space in newspapers and radio time, to place few sets in selected homes, under plan by which those selected would pay only actual cost of binding and cost of 10-year supplemental or revision service, and in consideration of the use of the names of such "privileged" customers in the later regular sales campaign, facts being prices, as variously charged under various forms of contracts at different times and in different localities, were the regular and usual prices of said books, which were available to any one of public generally who could be induced to purchase same, were not simply introductory or special, but regular, as was campaign being conducted in usual course of business, prospective purchasers were not selected to receive books at special price, which was greatly in excess of actual cost of binding volumes and of actual cost of 10-year revision service, and names of such customers were not used or intended to be used as references in later regular sales campaign, which was not ever planned or carried out;

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that extension or supplemental revision service was free or without extra cost, facts being guarantee certificate furnished in connection with sale of books, and to which were attached set of ten coupons covering such 10-year extension service, provided that $1.85 must be remitted with each coupon before service would be furnished, which was never given free or without extra cost, but always charged for, as aforesaid, and
(e) Represented further that said work was sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation, and that such Modern American Co. was the selling agent of such foundation or institute, and that members of latter were largely responsible for preparation thereof, facts being work in question was not sponsored as above set forth, there was no such connection or responsibility, and said statements relating to Carnegie Foundation or Institute were wholly false; and

Where a corporation which, under name "The Modern American Corporation," functioned chiefly as the owner and holder of the plates from which said reference work was printed, and officers of which, including particularly one of individuals here involved and above set forth, had knowledge of sales methods above enumerated and engaged in by said individuals—

(f) Loaned its name to said old reference work, and through thus furnishing and supplying said name, cooperated with and served said individuals in furthering their scheme of selling said encyclopedias as new and modern; With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, through such acts, practices and scheme to foist upon purchasing public at a profit old and obsolete set of reference books of little or no value as such, through reprints poorly made on inferior paper from plates cast originally in 1893 and issued and sold under its deceptive and misleading title aforesaid, substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result that, as direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs thus induced, number of purchasing public bought substantial quantity of their merchandise and trade was unfairly diverted to them from others likewise engaged in sale of reference books and who truthfully advertise and represent their said products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts, practices and representations were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.
Hickey, Hall & Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Charles E. Knapp, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, Modern American Corporation, a corporation, Blanche Wynne, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., and A. J. Rivenbark, Jr., Cleo Samdahl, and A. B. Landrum, hereinafter referred to as the respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent Charles E. Knapp is an individual trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Charles E. Knapp, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Modern American Corporation is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Blanch Wynne is an individual trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., with her principal office and place of business located at 1508 Main Street, Dallas, Tex. Respondents A. J. Rivenbark, Jr., Cleo Samdahl, and A. B. Landrum, are salesmen, agents, and representatives of respondent Charles E. Knapp, with their principal office and place of business at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now, and have been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling and distributing to the general public a certain set of reference books or encyclopedias entitled and known as "Modern American Encyclopedia," in eight volumes, together with a "Quarterly Loose-Leaf Extension Service" to be used in connection therewith. All of said respondents have acted together and in cooperation with each other during all the times herein mentioned in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged in connection with the sale and distribution of said books and extension services.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents, through various agents, salesmen, solicitors, and employees, and personally, offer to sell, sell, and distribute the said reference books or encyclopedias and extension services to persons located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause said reference books or encyclopedias and extension services, when so sold, to be transported from the city of Chicago, Ill., to, into, and through other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof at their respective locations. Respondents maintain and, during the times mentioned herein, have maintained, a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by them in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, are in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in offering for sale, selling, and distributing reference books and encyclopedias and extension services of the same general character as those distributed by the respondents to the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors there are many who truthfully represent the nature of their business and who do not make to the general public the false and misleading representations hereinafter alleged to have been made and used by the respondents in the conduct of their said business, and who do not make any other false representations in the conduct of their business and who do not use the decepttive and misleading sales methods hereinafter alleged as having been used by the respondents.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce, respondents employ various agents, solicitors, and representatives, who are authorized and directed to solicit orders for and to sell said reference books or encyclopedias and loose-leaf extension services to prospective purchasers throughout the United States.
These agents, solicitors and representatives ordinarily travel from place to place throughout the United States, canvassing prospective purchasers at the various places visited. Respondents furnish such agents, solicitors, and representatives with prospecti, order blanks, contracts, and other literature and paraphernalia, which are exhibited, distributed and used in connection with the sale and in the solicitation of the sale of said books and extension services. When a sale is made, the purchaser is required to sign a printed order blank or contract, which is then transmitted to one of the respondents in Chicago, Ill.
Respondents thereupon cause the shipment of said books to be made to such purchaser from Chicago, Ill., and transmit from Chicago, Ill., to such purchaser from time to time the loose-leaf extension service.
At the time the order or contract is signed, respondents, through their agents, solicitors, and representatives, collect a part of the agreed purchase price as a down payment and the order or contract ordinarily requires the balance to be paid upon delivery of the books or that payment be made in monthly installments until the total purchase price is paid in full.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents, directly and through said agents, solicitors, and representatives, and by means of the order blanks, prospecti and other literature used and distributed and exhibited to prospective purchasers, have made to purchasers and prospective purchasers, many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations, as hereinafter set forth.

1. They have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public throughout the United States that said so-called "Modern American Encyclopedia" is a new, modern, and up-to-date encyclopedia and reference work.

The truth and facts are that said encyclopedia is a descendant of a two-volume set first published in 1893 under the name of "The Student's Cyclopedia." In 1901, after several revisions and additions had been made, the name of the encyclopedia was changed to "The Student's Reference Work" and it was increased to four volumes. No revisions or additions were made until 1909, when the number of volumes was increased to six, and the name was again changed to that of "The New Student's Reference Work." Subsequently the encyclopedia was increased to eight volumes, although the name was not changed. In 1933 the respondent Charles E. Knapp and two associates, Walter H. Gorham and Edwin P. Rucker, purchased the plates of said "The New Student's Reference Work" from the trustee or receiver in bankruptcy of the owner of same, and subsequently on November 14, 1933, organized the respondent Modern American Corporation under the laws of the State of Illinois, to which corporation title to said plates was transferred by said respondent Charles E. Knapp and said associates. Said parties owned and controlled and now own and control all the stock in said respondent Modern American Corporation, and an agreement was entered into between said stockholders that either of them would have the privilege of selling the encyclopedia free of any royalty payments upon payment of the printing and binding cost. The name of the encyclopedia was then changed from "The New Student's Reference Work" to "Modern American Encyclopedia," and an eight volume set was published under the latter name, and has been and now is sold by the various respondents herein in commerce as above set out. Said encyclopedia was revised in certain respects in 1936, but it has not been for many years and is not now a modern or up-to-date reference work which in any reasonable degree meets the needs and requirements of the purchasing and using public for a reliable reference work. Respondents have failed and neglected in any proper way to disclose to or inform prospective purchasers of the fact that the so-called Modern American Encyclopedia is an old work, and is substantially the same as prior sets of reference works put out at various times from 1893 to 1933 under the various other names and titles above stated.

The chief value of any reference book or set is that it is in fact "modern" and contains the latest facts and data available on each subject treated. The purchasing public generally buy such reference books or encyclopedias for the purpose of procuring such up-to-date facts, data and information, and generally rely implicitly upon them as furnishing such facts revised up to the date of actual issue. Reference books which purport to be, but are not of that character, are not only in themselves misleading, deceptive and of little or no value for the purpose for which purchased, but are in fact injurious to the purchasing public who consult and read them, by reason of the misguided reliance placed on the antiquated data, erroneous facts, and superseded theories and processes therein set forth or treated. The many and rapid scientific, historical and other changes and discoveries that have occurred since 1893, the date of the original plates from which the so-called "Modern American Encyclopedia" is printed, render it practically valueless as a reference work.

For these reasons, all claims, representations, and implications, as above described, made by respondents, have been and are false, fraudulent, misleading, deceptive, and injurious to the purchasing public in that they tend to and do confuse and mislead the public into the belief that they are buying and obtaining for use a new and useful up-to-date reference work.

2. Respondents have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that the material in said "Modern American Encyclopedia" was "prepared by a large number of experts and specialists in the various fields of human knowledge," and that "further assistance was given by eminent scholars, scientists and men of affairs, who reviewed and revised various articles." In the preface to said encyclopedia, for the ostensible purpose of attesting to the "Authenticity of the Modern American Encyclopedia," there are listed the names of 37 persons, each prominent in some particular field of learning or industry, and said persons are represented as having contributed substantially to the preparation of the "Modern American Encyclopedia."

In truth and in fact, not one of the persons named in said list has made any contribution to the "Modern American Encyclopedia" or does anything in connection therewith to make it a new and modern encyclopedia, save that some few of the persons named did contribute very slightly to the said original work in 1893 and the earlier revisions thereof. Some of the persons listed have been dead for a number of years. The use and circulation of such a list of alleged contributors is false, deceptive, and misleading, and tends to and does further the deception of the members of the purchasing public into the belief that they are receiving a work which is new and "modern," and is the work of the eminent specialists and experts named in said list.

3. Respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that said "Modern American Encyclopedia” has been sold at prices far in excess of those at which it is being offered by the respondents, that the prices at which it is being offered are “special” or “introductory” prices, and that the publication had sold, and, after the “introductory” campaign had ceased, would sell, for considerably higher prices.

Several different forms of contract have been used by respondents at various times in the sale of said reference books. Under one form of contract, the publication is sold for $19.50, $9.50 of which is collected as a cash deposit, and $10 plus transportation charges upon delivery of the books. Another contract requires an initial payment of $10, the balance of $13.50, plus delivery charges being due upon delivery of the books. Another contract calls for the payment of $5 as a deposit, $6.60 on delivery of the books, and $4 per month thereafter until a total of $27.60 has been paid. Under a fourth form of contract, the cost to the purchaser is $29.60 under terms optional with him. Under a fifth form of contract, the reference books together with a choice of certain premiums are sold for $39.60.

In their efforts to sell said Modern American Encyclopedia, respondents and their agents and salesmen have made and do make representations that the aforesaid prices were and are simply introductory and that the publication ordinarily and usually sells, has sold, and would sell for much higher prices. Some of the figures used in this connection ranged anywhere from $79 to $100 for the set. Some agents made the representation that the price of the books was $39 and if a revision service was desired separately, the cost would be something like $50 additional.

4. Respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that said Modern American Encyclopedia is being specially offered free to certain selected purchasers without cost except for a nominal binding charge. They represented and do represent that, instead of the purchase of advertising space in newspapers and time on radio stations, it has been decided to place a few sets of the encyclopedias in selected homes, and that the individuals selected to receive the books were being asked to pay only the actual cost of binding and the cost of a ten-year supplemental or revision service. These “privileged” customers were and are advised that their names would be used later in the regular sales campaign in return for their obtaining such a low price on the special introductory offer. In some cases the books were and are offered for $19.50, in others, $23.50, and in others, $29.60. Furthermore, the respondents represented and do represent that the extension or supplemental revision service was free or without extra cost, whereas the guaranty certificate furnished in connection with the sale of the books and to which were attached a set of coupons, one for each year extending over a ten-year period, provided and provide that $1.85 must be remitted with each coupon before the service would be furnished.

5. Respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that the Modern American Encyclopedia was and is sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation, and that the Modern American Co. was and is the selling agent of the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and that members of said institute were largely responsible for the preparation of the Modern American Encyclopedia.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, all of said statements and representations set forth in paragraph 5 herein were and are false, misleading, and untrue. Said Modern American Encyclopedia has never been sold at prices far in excess of those at which it has been and is now being sold by respondents. The prices set under the various forms of contracts used by the respondents at different times and in different localities were and are the regular and usual prices of said books, and the books are available to anyone of the public generally who can be induced to purchase same. The prices asked were not simply “introductory” or “special” prices, and the campaign being conducted was not in fact an introductory campaign, but was and is a sales campaign in the usual course of business and the prices asked were regular prices, and the said books never sold for or were priced at prices ranging from $79 to $100.

The prospective purchasers were not and are not in fact “selected” from the general public to receive the books at a “special” price, and the price asked for the books was greatly in excess of the actual cost of binding the volumes and in excess of the actual cost of the 10-year revision service. The names of such customers were not used, or intended to be used, as references in a later “regular” sales campaign, and in fact there never was such a later campaign ever planned or carried out. The extension service was never given free or without extra cost but there always was a charge of $1.85 for each year’s service.

Furthermore, the Modern American Encyclopedia was not and is not in fact sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and the Modern American Co. was not and is not the selling agent of the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and members of said institute were not and are not largely or in any way responsible for the preparation of the Modern American Encyclopedia.
The whole plan and methods employed by the respondents constitute merely a scheme to foist upon the purchasing public, at a profit, an old and obsolete set of reference books of little or no value as reference books, by reprints poorly made on an inferior quality of paper, from plates originally cast in 1893, and now issued and sold under the deceptive and misleading title "Modern American Encyclopedia."

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents were and are calculated to, and had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Furthermore, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the misrepresentations of the respondents as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial quantity of said merchandise, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other individuals, corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale of reference books who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being done by the respondents herein to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations of the respondents as herein alleged have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 20th day of July 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, Charles E. Knapp, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co.; Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, Modern American Corporation, a corporation, Blanche Wynne, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co.; and A. J. Rivenbark, Jr., Cleo Samdahl, and A. B. Landrum, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 12, 1938, answers were filed by the respondents Charles E. Knapp, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co.; Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation; Modern American Corporation, a corporation; A. J. Rivenbark, Jr.; and Cleo Samdahl. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into by all of the respondents whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the said respondents by their counsel, Hickey and Hall, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Charles E. Knapp is an individual trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Charles E. Knapp, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Modern American Corporation is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Blanche Wynne is an individual, formerly trading as and in the name of Modern American Co., with her principal office and place of business located at 1508 Main Street, Dallas, Tex.

Respondents A. J. Rivenbark, Jr., and Cleo Samdahl have never been salesmen, agents, nor representatives of the respondent Charles E. Knapp. At the present time, and for some time past, said respondents purchased certain books from Charles E. Knapp which they sold as independent dealers to members of the public. The contracts of sale of such books were delivered by said respondents to Charles E. Knapp, and he handled the collections and retained the contracts of sale, notes, and collections as security and as payment for the books sold to said respondents. The principal books involved in the above-mentioned transactions were a set of reference books known as Modern American Encyclopedia, published and bound in eight volumes together with a quarterly loose-leaf extension service to be used as a supplement to the books.

Respondents, with the exception of the respondents Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, and Modern American Corporation, a corporation, are now, or have been engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing to the general public a certain set of reference books or encyclopedias entitled and known as "Modern American Encyclopedia" in eight volumes, together with a "Quarterly Loose-Leaf Extension Service" to be used in connection therewith. The respondent Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, has not been engaged in offering for sale, selling, or distributing to the general public the set of books known as Modern American Encyclopedia, but is a publisher and vendor of an entirely different set of books. The respondent A. B. Landrum about a year and a half ago, and for a short period previous to that time, was an agent and salesman of the respondent Charles E. Knapp in the sale of the Modern Encyclopedia on a commission basis, with his principal office and place of business at 201 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business, all of the respondents except Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, and Modern American Corporation, a corporation, personally and through various agents, salesmen, solicitors and employees, offer to sell, sell and distribute the said reference books or encyclopedias and extension services to persons located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause said reference books or encyclopedias and extension services, when so sold, to be transported from the city of Chicago, Ill., to, into, and through other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof at their respective locations. Said respondents maintain, and during the times mentioned herein, have maintained, a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by them in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. The word "respondents" as hereinafter set forth in Paragraphs Three to Seven, inclusive, shall be understood to include all of the respondents except Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, and Modern American Corporation, a corporation.

Par. 3. Said respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, are in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in offering for sale, selling, and distributing reference books and encyclopedias and extension services of the same general character as those distributed by the respondents to the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors there are many who truthfully represent the nature of their business and who do not make to the general public the false and misleading representations made and used by the respondents in the conduct of their said business, and who do not use the deceptive and misleading sales methods used by said respondents.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce, said respondents employ various agents, solicitors, and representatives, who are authorized and directed to solicit orders for and to sell said reference books or encyclopedias and loose-leaf extension services to prospective purchasers throughout the United States. These agents, solicitors, and representatives ordinarily travel from place to place throughout the United States, canvassing prospective purchasers at the various places visited. Respondents furnish such agents, solicitors, and representatives with prospecti, order blanks, contracts, and other literature and paraphernalia, which are exhibited, distributed, and used in connection with the sale and in the solicitation of the sale of said books and extension services. When a sale is made, the purchaser is required to sign a printed order blank or contract, which is then transmitted to one of the said respondents in Chicago, Ill. Said respondents thereupon cause the shipment of said books to be made to such purchaser from Chicago, Ill., and transmit from Chicago, Ill., to such purchaser from time to time the loose-leaf extension service. At the time the order or contract is signed, said respondents, through their agents, solicitors, and representatives, collect a part of the agreed purchase price as a down payment and the order or contract ordinarily requires the balance to be paid upon delivery of the books or that payment be made in monthly installments until the total purchase price is paid in full.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, said respondents, directly and through said agents, solicitors, and representatives, and by means of the order blanks, prospecti, and other literature used and distributed and exhibited to prospective purchasers, have made to purchasers and prospective purchasers many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations, as hereinafter set forth.

1. They have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public throughout the United States that said so-called “Modern American Encyclopedia” is a new, modern, and up-to-date encyclopedia and reference work.

The truth and facts are that said encyclopedia is a descendant of a two-volume set first published in 1893 under the name of “The Student's Cyclopedia." In 1901, after several revisions and additions had been made, the name of the encyclopedia was changed to "The Student's Reference Work" and it was increased to four volumes. No revisions or additions were made until 1909, when the number of volumes was increased to six, and the name was again changed to that of "The New Student's Reference Work." Subsequently the encyclopedia was increased to eight volumes, although the name was not changed. In 1933 the respondent Charles E. Knapp and two associates, Walter H. Gorham and Edwin P. Rucker, purchased the plates of said "The New Student's Reference Work" from the trustee or receiver in bankruptcy of the owner of same, and subsequently on November 14, 1933, organized the respondent Modern American Corporation under the laws of the State of Illinois, to which corporation title to said plates was transferred by said respondent Charles E. Knapp and said associates. Said parties owned and controlled and now own and control all the stock in said respondent Modern American Corporation, and an agreement was entered into between said stockholders that either of them would have the privilege of selling the encyclopedia free of any royalty payments upon payment of the printing and binding cost. The name of the encyclopedia was then changed from "The New Student's Reference Work" to "Modern American Encyclopedia," and an eight volume set was published under the latter name, and has been and now is sold by the various respondents herein in commerce as above set out. Said encyclopedia was revised in certain respects in 1936, but it has not been for many years and is not now a modern or up-to-date reference work which in any reasonable degree meets the needs and requirements of the purchasing and using public for a reliable reference work. Respondents have failed and neglected in any proper way to disclose to or inform prospective purchasers of the fact that the so-called Modern American Encyclopedia is an old work, and is substantially the same as prior sets of reference works put out at various times from 1893 to 1933 under the various other names and titles above stated.
Findings

The chief value of any reference book or set is that it is in fact "modern" and contains the latest facts and data available on each subject treated. The purchasing public generally buy such reference books or encyclopedias for the purpose of procuring such up-to-date facts, data and information, and generally rely implicitly upon them as furnishing such facts revised up to the date of actual issue. Reference books which purport to be, but are not of that character, are not only in themselves misleading, deceptive and of little or no value for the purpose for which purchased, but are in fact injurious to the purchasing public who consult and read them, by reason of the misguided reliance placed on the antiquated data, erroneous facts, and superseded theories and processes therein set forth or treated. The many and rapid scientific, historical, and other changes and discoveries that have occurred since 1893, the date of the original plates from which the so-called "Modern American Encyclopedia" is printed, render it practically valueless as a reference work.

For these reasons, all claims, representations, and implications, as above described, made by said respondents, have been and are false, fradulent, misleading, deceptive, and injurious to the purchasing public in that they tend to and do confuse and mislead the public into the belief that they are buying and obtaining for use a new and useful up-to-date reference work.

2. Said respondents have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that the material in said
"Modern American Encyclopedia" was "prepared by a large number of experts and specialists in the various fields of human knowledge," and that "further assistance was given by eminent scholars, scientists and men of affairs, who reviewed and revised various articles." In the preface to said encyclopedia, for the ostensible purpose of attesting to the "Authenticity of the Modern American Encyclopedia," there are listed the names of 37 persons, each prominent in some particular field of learning or industry, and said persons are represented as having contributed substantially to the preparation of the "Modern American Encyclopedia."

In truth and in fact, not one of the persons named in said list has made any contribution to the "Modern American Encyclopedia" or does anything in connection therewith to make it a new and modern encyclopedia, save that some few of the persons named did contribute very slightly to the said original work in 1893 and the earlier revisions thereof. Some of the persons listed have been dead for a number of years. The use and circulation of such a list of alleged contributors is false, deceptive, and misleading, and tends to and does further the deception of the members of the purchasing public into the belief that they are receiving a work which is new and "modern", and is the work of the eminent specialists and experts named in said list.

3. Said respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that said "Modern American Encyclopedia" has been sold at prices far in excess of those at which it is being offered by the said respondents, that the prices at which it is being offered are "special" or "introductory" prices, and that the publication had sold, and, after the "introductory" campaign had ceased, would sell, for considerably higher prices.

Several different forms of contract have been used by said respondents at various times in the sale of said reference books. Under one form of contract, the publication is sold for $19.50, $9.50 of which is collected as a cash deposit, and $10 plus transportation charges upon delivery of the books. Another contract requires an initial payment of $10, the balance of $13.50, plus delivery charges being due upon delivery of the books. Another contract calls for the payment of $5 as a deposit, $6.60 on delivery of the books, and $4 per month thereafter until a total of $27.60 has been paid. Under a fourth form of contract, the cost to the purchaser is $29.60 under terms optional with him. Under a fifth form of contract, the reference books together with a choice of certain premiums are sold for $39.60.

In their efforts to sell Modern American Encyclopedia, said respondents and their agents and salesmen have made and do make representations that the aforesaid prices were and are simply introductory and that the publication ordinarily and usually sells, has sold, and would sell for much higher prices. Some of the figures used in this connection ranged anywhere from $79 to $100 for the set. Some agents made the representation that the price of the books was $59 and if a revision service was desired separately, the cost would be something like $50 additional.

4. Said respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that said Modern American Encyclopedia is being specially offered free to certain selected purchasers without cost except for a nominal binding charge. They represented and do represent that, instead of the purchase of advertising space in newspapers and time on radio stations, it had been decided to place a few sets of the encyclopedias in selected homes, and that the individuals selected to receive the books were being asked to pay only the actual cost of binding and the cost of a 10-year supplemental or revision service. These "privileged" customers were and are advised that their names would be used later in the regular sales campaign in return for their obtaining such a low price on the special introductory offer. In some cases the books were and are offered for $19.50, in others, $23.50, and in others, $29.60. Furthermore, the said respondents represented and do represent that the extension or supplemental revision service was free or without extra cost, whereas the guaranty certificate furnished in connection with the sale of the books and to which were attached a set of coupons, one for each year extending over a 10-year period, provided and provide that $1.85 must be remitted with each coupon before the service would be furnished.

5. Said respondents further have represented, and now represent, to the prospective and actual purchasing public that the Modern American Encyclopedia was and is sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation, and that the Modern American Co. was and is the selling agent of the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and that members of said Institute were largely responsible for the preparation of the Modern American Encyclopedia.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, all of said statements and representations set forth in paragraph 5 herein were and are false, misleading and untrue. Said Modern American Encyclopedia has never been sold at prices far in excess of those at which it has been and is now being sold by said respondents. The prices set under the various forms of contracts used by the said respondents at different times and in different localities were and are the regular and usual prices of said books, and the books are available to anyone of the public generally who can be induced to purchase same. The prices asked were not simply "introductory" or "special" prices, and the campaign being conducted was not in fact an introductory campaign, but was and is a sales campaign in the usual course of business and the prices asked were regular prices, and the said books never sold for or were priced at prices ranging from $79 to $100.

The prospective purchasers were not and are not in fact "selected" from the general public to receive the books at a "special" price, and the price asked for the books was greatly in excess of the actual cost of binding the volumes and in excess of the actual cost of the 10-year revision service. The names of such customers were not used, or intended to be used, as references in a later "regular" sales campaign, and in fact there never was such a later campaign ever planned or carried out. The extension service was never given free or without extra cost but there always was a charge of $1.85 for each year's service.

Furthermore, the Modern American Encyclopedia was not and is not in fact sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and the Modern American Co. was not and is not the selling agent of the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, and members of said Institute were not and are not largely or in any way responsible for the preparation of the Modern American Encyclopedia.

The whole plan and methods employed by the said respondents constitute merely a scheme to foist upon the purchasing public, at a profit, an old and obsolete set of reference books of little or no value as reference books, by reprints poorly made on an inferior quality of paper, from plates originally cast in 1893, and now issued and sold under the deceptive and misleading title "Modern American Encyclopedia."

PAR. 7. The Modern American Corporation, a corporation, was organized, and has functioned chiefly as the owner and holder of the plates from which the Modern American Encyclopedia is printed. It, however, has loaned its name to the printed encyclopedia and by furnishing and supplying the said name, has cooperated with and served the other respondents in furthering their scheme of selling the encyclopedias as a new and modern encyclopedia. Its officers, particularly Charles E. Knapp, have had knowledge of the sales methods hereinbefore enumerated engaged in by the respondents.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondents with the exception of Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, were and are calculated to, and had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Furthermore, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the misrepresentations of the said respondents as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial quantity of said merchandise, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other individuals, corporations, firms and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale of reference books who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being done by the said respondents herein to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, practices and representations of the said respondents with the exception of Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

mission, which provides, among other things, that the statement of facts contained therein may be made a part of the record herein, and may be taken as the facts in this proceeding, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based therein, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents, with the exception of Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation, have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Charles E. Knapp, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co.; Modern American Corporation, a corporation, and its officers; Blanche Wynne, an individual, trading as and in the name of Modern American Co.; and A. J. Rivenbark, Jr., Cleo Samdahl, and A. B. Landrum; individually, or in combination or conspiracy with each other, their respective agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a set of books, now known as, and sold under the name, "Modern American Encyclopedia," whether sold under that name or under any other name, and the extension services sold in connection therewith, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of the word "Modern" or any other word or words of similar import and meaning in the title of said books, or in the corporate or trade name used in connection with the sale thereof, or in any other manner, that said books are a new, modern, up-to-date encyclopedia or reference work.

2. Representing any person as being a contributor to or editor of any set of books or publications who has not performed services in making or preparing contributions to or who has not performed services in the editing of such books or publications and consented that he may be held out to the public as a contributor or as an editor or assistant editor.

3. Representing that any price is a special reduced or introductory price for respondents' set of books or publications when such price is the usual and customary price charged by the respondents for said set of books or publications.
4. Representing that the usual price at which respondents’ set of books or publications is sold is higher than the price at which they are offered, when such is not the fact.

5. Using the term “free” or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate or describe articles of merchandise regularly included in a combination offer with identical, similar or other articles of merchandise.

6. Representing that purchasers or prospective purchasers of respondents publications are only paying the cost of binding and buying or paying for loose-leaf supplements intended to keep the set of books up-to-date and revised for a period of 10 years or any other period of time, when such is not the fact.

7. Representing that the set of books or publications sold and distributed by the respondents is sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, or any other organization, unless the set of books or publications sold by the respondents is so sponsored by such organization.

8. Representing that the respondents are agents for or have any connection with the Carnegie Foundation or Institute, or any other organization, unless they are in fact agents for or have a connection with such organization.

9. Representing that the members of the Carnegie Foundation or Institute are in any way responsible for the preparation of the “Modern American Encyclopedia.”

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same is, hereby dismissed as to the respondent Charles E. Knapp, Inc., a corporation.
IN THE MATTER OF

H. S. McCracken Box & Label Company

Docket 3606. Complaint, Sept. 23, 1938—Decision, Mar. 21, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of boxes, cartons, and labels, and in sale thereof to manufacturing, wholesale, and retail drug trade for the packaging of drugs, proprietary remedies and prescription preparations, and in selling as aforesaid such products to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, and principally retail druggists, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of articles which were similar and designed to be used for like purposes in commerce as aforesaid, and with various manufacturers and distributors of boxes, containers, and circulars descriptive of medicinal preparations which were not designed, when used by retailer of drugs and medicinal preparations, to permit the deceiving and defrauding of purchasing public thereby—

(a) Sold certain boxes, upon which were set forth design and label "ENGLISH CROWN Female (representation of a crown) Pills—A Boon to Suffering Womanhood, Price $2.00. Will positively remove the most obstinate obstructions and irregularities of menstruation. Guaranteed, the most powerful and effective emmenagogue on earth. PREPARED ONLY BY CROWN CHEMICAL Co., LONDON, ENG.," or with said price shown as $3 or $5, at election of buyer; and

(b) Furnished to purchasers of such boxes, circulars printed in English and German, for use in connection therewith and containing at top thereof words "Female Pills" and, at bottom, "Prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," and such statements and representations as "Caution—Women in a state of pregnancy should avoid the use of these pills as they are liable to induce a miscarriage," "Commence taking these pills—until the desired effect is produced," and "When arrest of menses is feared—using the pills—will in most cases produce the natural function of the organ," and others to effect that pills therein contained had been used with decided success in "* * * cases of impotency, sterility, seminal weakness and other diseases and conditions of the genital organs * * " and that " * * by exercising a reasonable amount of perseverance the valuable curative properties of these pills will soon be felt, and a perfect restoration to health, strength and vigor will be sure to follow," and that they were also effective on liver and bowels, affording speedy relief in cases of biliousness, constipation, headache, etc;

Facts being boxes were empty at time of sale, it did not at any time supply purchasers with "Female Pills" prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng., nor with any other pills, but such boxes and aforesaid circulars were sold to purchasers who desired to package therein and sell to purchasing public pills either of their own compounding or purchased from some other source, within such purchasers' sole discretion and in no way subject to its control, and pills offered and sold therein were not made, prepared, compounded or supplied by such English company, or in England;
Complaint

With effect of misleading public into false belief that said boxes, when filled and offered, contained pills prepared or compounded in London, England, and by an English company, known as Crown Chemical Co., and was one of English drug and medicinal preparations for which there is preference among many purchasers and prospective purchasers, as of superior quality, and of inducing purchasing public to believe that pills placed therein were boon to suffering womanhood, and would accomplish results, and had qualities and properties indicated, and had undergone severe tests and given universal satisfaction when properly employed, and with consequence that many purchased drugs and preparations packaged in said boxes and referred to in said advertising matter, in preference to those not misbranded and misrepresented; and

With result that it thus supplied to and placed in the hands of purchasers of said boxes and circulars means and instrumentalities designed to, and capable of permitting them to mislead and deceive purchasing and consuming public as to price, source, place of origin, and therapeutic value of, and results to be obtained from use of, drug or medical preparation placed therein for sale to purchasing and consuming public, and whereby said public could be and was defrauded, and many retail druggists were induced, by reason of designed possibilities of deception and fraud inherent in such boxes and circulars, to purchase substantial volume thereof in preference to those of competitors, and trade was thereby unfairly diverted to it from competitors aforesaid; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. W. L. Taggart for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that H. S. McCracken Box & Label Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, H. S. McCracken Box & Label Co., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2640 South Shields Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling boxes, cartons and labels to the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail drug trade for the packaging of drugs, proprietary remedies and prescription preparations. Respondent causes, and has caused, the said boxes, cartons and labels, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of articles similar to those sold and distributed by the respondent, and designed to be used for like purposes, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent manufactures and sells, and has sold, certain boxes designed and lettered as follows:

ENGLISH CROWN

Female (representation of a crown) Pills

A Boon to Suffering Womanhood—Price $2.00.

Will positively remove the most obstinate obstructions and irregularities of menstruation. Guaranteed, the most powerful and effective emmenagogue on earth.

PREPARED ONLY BY CROWN CHEMICAL CO., LONDON, ENG.

On the said boxes the price, shown above as $2, may appear as $2, $3 or $5 at the election of the purchaser.

Respondent also, in the course and conduct of its said business, furnishes to the purchasers of the said boxes, circulars printed in the English and German languages for use in connection with the said boxes. The said circulars, which bear at the top the words "Female Pills" and at the bottom the words "Prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," contain directions, given both directly and by implication, for the use of the said "Female Pills" as an emmenagogue, as an abortifacient, and in connection with the treatment of other ailments, and also contains certain claims, made both directly and by implication, with respect to the therapeutic value of the said "Female Pills." Included among, and typical of, said directions and claims are the following:

Caution—Women in a state of pregnancy should avoid the use of these pills as they are liable to induce a miscarriage.

Commence taking these pills—until the desired effect is produced.

To aid these pills in effecting a cure—

When arrest of menses is feared—using the pills—will in most cases produce the natural function of the organ.

These pills have also been used with decided success in cases of impotency, sterility, seminal weakness and other diseases and conditions of the genital organs—by exercising a reasonable amount of perseverance the valuable curative properties of these pills will soon be felt, and a perfect restoration to health, strength and vigor will be sure to follow.

These pills have undergone some of the most severe tests and have given universal satisfaction in all cases when properly employed.

In addition—these pills act with remarkable effect on the liver and bowels, promoting the natural functions of these organs and thereby affording speedy relief in cases of biliousness, constipation, headache, etc.

PAR. 5. Said boxes and circulars have been, and are, sold by respondent principally to retail druggists. At the time of sale the said boxes are empty, and at no time does the respondent supply the purchasers with "Female Pills" prepared by "Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," nor with any other pill, the said boxes together with the circulars being sold to purchasers who desire to package therein and sell to the purchasing public pills either of their own compounding or purchased from some other source, the composition and the source of the said pills being solely in the discretion of the purchasers of the said boxes and in no way subject to control by respondent.

PAR. 6. The use of the statements "Prepared only by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," "Prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," and the name "English Crown Female Pills" independently or in connection with a simulation of a crown, on the box and circular as herein set forth, has a tendency to, and does, mislead the public into the belief that the box, when filled and offered for sale, contains pills prepared of compounded in London, England, by an English company known as "Crown Chemical Co." There has been, and is, a widespread belief among purchasers and prospective purchasers of drugs and medicinal preparations that certain drugs and medicinal preparations compounded or prepared in England are superior to those compounded or prepared in the United States of America, and many such persons have had, and have, a preference for English drug and medicinal preparations because of said belief in their superiority. Such preference includes preparations of the type described by the respondent on said boxes and in said printed matter sold in connection therewith.

PAR. 7. The belief engendered in the minds of purchasers and prospective purchasers of the pills contained in the box hereinbefore described by the statements set forth in paragraph 6 hereof, is false, misleading, and untrue, since in truth and in fact the pills so offered and sold are not made, prepared, compounded, or supplied by Crown Chemical Co., London, England, nor made, prepared or compounded in England.

PAR. 8. The use of the statements, directions, and claims as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, made directly and by implication, as to
Complaint

PAR. 9. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of purchasers of said boxes and circulars, means and instrumentalities designed to permit, and capable of permitting said purchasers to mislead and deceive the purchasing and consuming public as to the price, source, place of origin and the therapeutic value of, and the results to be obtained from, the use of the pills placed in the said boxes by the purchasers of the said boxes, has a tendency to, and does, induce the purchasing public to believe that the said pills: are a boon to suffering womanhood; will remove the most obstinate obstructions and irregularities of menstruation; are the most powerful and effective of emmenagogues; are effective as a treatment for impotency, sterility, seminal weakness and other diseases and conditions of the genital organs, and will restore them to health, strength and vigor; have undergone severe tests and have given universal satisfaction when properly employed; are effective in promoting the natural functions of the liver and bowels, affording speedy relief in cases of biliousness, constipation, and headache; will induce a miscarriage if taken by a pregnant woman; and that the price as stated on the said boxes is one established by Crown Chemical Co. As a result of this mistaken and erroneous belief many persons purchase the drugs and preparations packaged in said boxes and referred to in said advertising matter in preference to drugs and preparations not so misbranded and misrepresented.

Par. 10. There are in competition with respondent various manufacturers and distributors of boxes and containers and circulars descriptive of medicinal preparations which are not designed, when used by retailers of drugs and medicinal preparations, to permit such retailer to deceive and defraud the purchasing public. Because of the designed possibilities of deception and fraud inherent in the boxes and circulars sold by respondent, many retail druggists are induced to purchase respondent's boxes and circulars in preference to those of respondent's competitors, and trade is thus diverted unfairly to respondent from its said competitors. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 23, 1938, issued, and on September 26, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, H. S. McCracken Box & Label Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On November 1, 1938, respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said fact. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, H. S. McCracken Box & Label Co., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2640 South Shields Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling boxes, cartons, and labels to the manufacturing wholesale and retail drug trade for the packaging of drugs, proprietary remedies, and prescription preparations.

In the conduct of its business respondent causes, and has caused, the said boxes, cartons, and labels, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the operation of its said business, respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of articles similar to those sold and distributed by the respondent, and designed to be used for like purposes, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent manufactures and sells, and has sold, certain boxes designed and lettered as follows:

ENGLISH CROWN

Female (representation of a crown) Pills

A boon to suffering womanhood—Price $2.00.
Will positively remove the most obstinate obstructions and irregularities of menstruation. Guaranteed, the most powerful and effective emmenagogue on earth.

PREPARED ONLY BY CROWN CHEMICAL CO., LONDON, ENG.

On the said boxes the price, shown above as $2 may appear as $2, $3 or $5 at the election of the purchaser.

Further, in the conduct of its business respondent furnishes to the purchasers of the said boxes, circulars printed in the English and German languages for use in connection with the said boxes. The said circulars, which bear at the top the words “Female Pills” and at the bottom the words “Prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.,” contain directions, given both directly and by implication, for the use of the said “Female Pills” as an emmenagogue, as an abortifacient, and in connection with the treatment of other ailments, and also contains certain claims, made both directly and by implication, with respect to the therapeutic value of the said “Female Pills.”

Included among, and typical of, said directions and claims are the following:

Caution—Women in a state of pregnancy should avoid the use of these pills as they are liable to induce a miscarriage.
Commence taking these pills—until the desired effect is produced.
To aid these pills in effecting a cure—
When arrest of menses is feared—using the pills—will in most cases produce the natural function of the organ.

These pills have also been used with decided success in cases of impotency, sterility, seminal weakness and other diseases and conditions of the genital organs—by exercising a reasonable amount of perseverance the valuable curative properties of these pills will soon be felt, and a perfect restoration to health, strength and vigor will be sure to follow.

These pills have undergone some of the most severe tests and have given universal satisfaction in all cases when properly employed.
In addition—these pills act with remarkable effect on the liver and bowels, promoting the natural functions of these organs and thereby affording speedy relief in cases of biliousness, constipation, headache, etc.
Par. 5. The Commission finds that said boxes and circulars have been, and are, sold by respondent principally to retail druggists.

The Commission further finds that at the time of sale the said boxes are empty, and at no time does the respondent supply the purchasers with "Female Pills" prepared by "Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," nor with any other pill, the said boxes together with the circulars being sold to purchasers who desire to package therein and sell to the purchasing public pills either of their own compounding or purchased from some other source, the composition and the source of the said pills being solely in the discretion of the purchasers of the said boxes and in no way subject to control by respondent.

Par. 6. The Commission finds that the use of the statements "Prepared only by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," "Prepared by Crown Chemical Co., London, Eng.," and the name "English Crown Female Pills" independently or in connection with a simulation of a crown, on the box and circular as herein set forth, has a tendency to, and does, mislead the public into the belief that the box, when filled and offered for sale, contains pills prepared or compounded in London, England, by an English company known as "Crown Chemical Co."

There has been, and is, a widespread belief among purchasers and prospective purchasers of drugs and medicinal preparations that certain drugs and medicinal preparations compounded or prepared in England are superior to those compounded or prepared in the United States of America, and many such persons have had, and have, a preference for English drug and medicinal preparations because of said belief in their superiority. Such preference includes preparations of the type described by the respondent on said boxes and in said printed matter sold in connection therewith.

Par. 7. The Commission finds that the belief engendered in the minds of purchasers and prospective purchasers of the pills contained in the box hereinbefore described by the statements set forth in paragraph 6 hereof, is false and untrue.

In truth and in fact the pills so offered and sold are not made, prepared, compounded or supplied by Crown Chemical Company, London, England, nor made, prepared or compounded in England.

Par. 8. The use of the statements, directions, and claims as found in paragraph 4 hereof, made directly and by implication, as to the character and the therapeutic effect of, and results to be obtained from, the use of the pills placed in the said boxes by the purchasers of the said boxes, has a tendency to, and does, induce the purchasing public to believe that the said pills are a boon to suffering womanhood; will remove the most obstinate obstructions and irregularities of menstruation; are the most powerful and effective of emmenagogues; are effective as a treatment for impotency, sterility, seminal weakness and other diseases and conditions of the genital organs, and will restore them to health, strength, and vigor; have undergone severe tests and have given universal satisfaction when properly employed; are effective in promoting the natural functions of the liver and bowels, affording speedy relief in cases of biliousness, constipation, and headache; will induce a miscarriage if taken by a pregnant woman; and that the price as stated on the said boxes is one established by Crown Chemical Co. As a result of this mistaken and erroneous belief many persons purchased the drugs and preparations packaged in said boxes and referred to in said advertising matter in preference to drugs and preparations not so misbranded and misrepresented.

Par. 9. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of purchasers of said boxes and circulars, means and instrumentalities designed to permit, and capable of permitting said purchasers to mislead and deceive the purchasing and consuming public as to the price, source, place of origin and the therapeutic value of, and the results to be obtained from the use of, the drug or medical preparation placed in said boxes for sale to the purchasing and consuming public, thereby placing in the hands of said purchasers of said boxes and circulars, the means and instrumentalities whereby the purchasing public can be, and is, defrauded.

Par. 10. In the course of the operation of its business respondent is in competition with various manufacturers and distributors of boxes and containers and circulars descriptive of medicinal preparations which are not designed, when used by retailers of drugs and medicinal preparations, to permit such retailer to deceive and defraud the purchasing public.

Because of the designed possibilities of deception and fraud inherent in the boxes and circulars sold by respondent, many retail druggists were and are induced to purchase a substantial volume of respondent's boxes and circulars in preference to those of respondent's competitors, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its said competitors. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, H. S. McCracken Box & Label Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, servants, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of boxes, cartons, labels, circulars or other printed matter in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Furnishing to dealers or distributors boxes, cartons, containers, circulars or other printed matter which enable said dealers or distributors to mislead and deceive the purchasing public with reference to the place of origin of the products sold and distributed by them, or the name of the manufacturer or compounder thereof, or the remedial or therapeutic value of such products.

2. Representing, by any name or address designating the manufacturer, or by seals, emblems, or any other device, or in any other manner, that said products, or the contents of said boxes, cartons, or containers are manufactured at any place other than the place of manufacture or that they are manufactured by or for any person, corporation, or partnership, other than the person, corporation, or partnership by whom or for whom said boxes, cartons or containers or the contents thereof are actually manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Zukernick & Zukernick, of Miami Beach, Fla., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Cohen, individually and trading as S. & C. Sales, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Samuel Cohen, is an individual trading as S. & C. Sales, with his principal office and place of business located at 4949 D Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of cameras, sports jackets, pencils, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR 2. In the course and conduct of his business in said commerce as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method of sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 54 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 54 small, partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prices or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, or whether a person receives an article of merchandise without cost, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push card is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 3, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Samuel Cohen, individually and trading as S. & C. Sales, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 1, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. As a result trade has been, and is now being, diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise their business status and the nature and quality of their products.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of ice cream cones and in sale and distribution thereof and in selling and distributing certain of its cones by means of a lottery scheme, gift enterprise, or game of chance under which retail dealer assembling from coupons, of which it enclosed and concealed one with each 250 cone-package, letters to spell legend "S-A-F-E-T C-O-N-E-S," became entitled to receive from his jobber-seller 1,000 additional cones without additional cost—

Sold assortments as aforesaid to wholesaler and jobber customers by whom coupons, in accordance with aforesaid plan and explanatory legends enclosed, were redeemed for retailer customers in accordance with such plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in sale of its products in accordance with such sales plans, contrary to public policy as long considered, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who make and sell such products and are unwilling to offer or sell such cones by said or equivalent or similar method involving same or equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme and refrain therefrom;

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Illinois Baking Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 2230 South Union Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of ice cream cones and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of ice cream cones in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent has, for the past several months, sold and distributed, and is now selling and distributing, certain of its said ice cream cones by means of a lottery scheme, gift enterprise, or a game of chance. Findings

PAR. 4. The sale of ice cream cones in the manner above described involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme, and the use by respondent of said method in the sale of ice cream cones and the sale of ice cream cones by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which has long been deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell ice cream cones in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to offer for sale or sell ice cream cones by said method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of selling its ice cream cones and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent because of said element of chance has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from its said competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done to said competitors of respondent.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 16, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Illinois Baking Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefore an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 2230 South Union Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of ice cream cones and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of ice cream cones in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent has, for the past several months, sold and distributed, and is now selling and distributing, certain of its said ice cream cones by means of a lottery scheme, gift enterprise, or a game of chance. Respondent packs and assembles its "Safe-T Cones" in packages containing 250 of said cones and also packs and assembles in each of said packages containing 250 cones, a coupon containing the following statements and legends, among others:

The letters in the corners of said coupons are one of the letters in the words "Safe-T Cones" and retail dealers obtaining coupons the letters on which spell the words "Safe-T Cones" are entitled to receive and are to be given by the jobber from whom said cones were purchased one thousand additional cones free of charge or without additional cost. The said printed coupons are sealed in the packages containing 250 cones and the letters in the corners of the coupons cannot be ascertained until the package of cones has been delivered and opened by the retail dealer. Retail dealers thus secure additional cones wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells the above described packages of ice cream cones containing the above described printed slip, resell such packages of cones as packed by respondent to retail dealers and redeem the said coupons in accordance with the above described legends. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove described and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency to induce retail dealers to purchase respondent's said products in preference to ice cream cones manufactured and offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of ice cream cones in the manner above described involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme, and the use by respondent of said method in the sale of ice cream cones and the sale of ice cream cones by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which has long been deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell ice cream cones in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to offer for sale or sell ice cream cones by said method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers are attracted by respondent’s said method and manner of selling its ice cream cones and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s products in preference to products offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent because of said element of chance has the capacity and tendency to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from its said competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done to said competitors of respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Illinois Baking Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of ice cream cones or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing ice cream cones so packed and assembled that sales of such cones are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Selling or distributing ice cream cones together with coupons so designed or printed that the use of said coupons in the sale or distribution of said cones constitutes the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914¹

Docket 3517. Complaint, July 30, 1938—Decision, Mar. 27, 1939

Where a corporation engaged, as wholesale dealer in motor oils and lubricants, in selling and distributing such products to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such products as aforesaid, and including dealers therein who are not refiners or manufacturers of such products and who sell and offer the same in commerce and do not in any way misrepresent that they are refiners or otherwise misrepresent their business or products—

Caused its corporate name, including word "Refining," to appear variously in its catalogs and other advertising matter and on its letterheads, invoices and other printed matter and on its containers, issued and circulated by it through the mails, transportation facilities and otherwise to its customers and prospective customers in the various other States and in said District, and represented thereby and otherwise to members of purchasing public, dealers and others, that it owned, controlled and operated a refinery, and that purchasers of its products were dealing directly with the manufacturer or refiner of such motor oils and lubricants, for purchase of which oils direct from refiner thereof there is a preference on part of substantial number among members of purchasing public, as securing them, in their belief, better prices, superior quality, and other advantages not ordinarily obtainable when purchasing through middlemen or others who are not actual refiners of such motor oils being purchased;

Facts being it did not manufacture or refine motor oils and lubricants advertised and sold by it as aforesaid, and did not own, operate, or control a refinery, and did not refine any of products which it sold, and said representations were false, misleading, and untrue;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public, and purchasers for resale, into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief induced by its advertising and representations, that number of consuming public and purchasers for resale bought substantial quantities of its said motor oils and lubricants, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of such products and who truthfully advertise the same and their business status:

Held, That such acts, practices, and representations were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.

Chamberlin, Kafer, Wilds & Jube and Mr. Frederick G. Weisser, of New York City, for respondent.

¹ Original findings and order, issued as of January 18, 1939, not published.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Columbia Refining Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Columbia Refining Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 4402 Twenty-third Street, Long Island City, in said State, and with an oil blending and grease compounding plant located at 1 Westside Avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

Par. 2. Respondent has been for many years last past, and now is, engaged in business as a wholesale dealer in motor oils and lubricants and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in District of Columbia. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of New York and its said branch in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the States of New York and New Jersey, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of motor oils and lubricants, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, respondent causes its said corporate name, to wit: Columbia Refining Co. of New York, to appear variously in its catalogs and other advertising material and also on its letterheads, invoices, and other printed matter, all of which are issued and circulated by the respondent, through the United States mails and otherwise, to its customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Through the use of respondent's corporate name, in the manner hereinabove stated, and through other means, the respondent represents to members of the purchasing public that it owns, controls, and operates a refinery and that purchasers of its products are dealing direct with the manufacturer or refiner of said products.

The products so advertised and sold in commerce, as herein described, by the respondent are not in fact manufactured or refined by the respondent. Respondent does not own, operate, or control a refinery and does not refine the products sold by it.

There are among the members of the purchasing public a substantial number who prefer to purchase motor oils directly from the refiner thereof, believing that in so doing they secure better prices, superior quality and other advantages not ordinarily obtainable when purchasing through middlemen or others who are not the actual refiners of the motor oils being purchased.

Par. 4. There are dealers in motor oils and lubricants who are not refiners or manufacturers of said products and who sell and offer for sale their products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and who do not in any way misrepresent that they are refiners, or otherwise misrepresent their business or products.

The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations of the respondent in the course of its advertising, offering for sale, and selling of its products in commerce, as aforesaid, were and are calculated to have, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent’s products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing motor oils and lubricants who truthfully advertise their respective products and their business status. In consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 30, 1938, issued and on August 1, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Columbia Refining Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance and service of said complaint the respondent herein, on September 10, 1938, filed an answer in which it in part admitted and in part denied the allegations of the complaint. Subsequent thereto, on December 7, 1938, respondent, with the approval of the Commission, withdrew its original answer and filed herein a substitute answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and having found that the proceeding was in the interest of the public, made and entered its findings as to the facts and conclusion on January 18, 1939, and the Commission now being desirous of modifying its said findings, as is provided for under the provision of said Act of Congress, makes this its modified findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom.

MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPh 1. Respondent Columbia Refining Co. is a corporation duly organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 4402 Twenty-Third Street, Long Island City, N. Y., and with an oil blending and grease compounding plant located at 1 Westside Avenue, Jersey City, N. J. Respondent's grease compounding operations are not involved in this proceeding.

PAR. 2. Respondent has for many years last past, and now is, engaged in business as a wholesale dealer in motor oils and lubricants and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of New York and its said branch in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the States of New York and New Jersey and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and in-individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of motor oils and lubricants in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, respondent causes its said corporate name, to wit, Columbia Refining Co. of New York, to appear variously in its catalogs and other advertising material, and also on its letterheads, invoices and other printed matter, and on its containers, all of which are issued and circulated by the respondent through the United States mails, transportation facilities and otherwise, to its customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States other than the States of New York and New Jersey and in the District of Columbia.

Through the use of the said corporate name in the manner hereinabove stated, and through other means, the respondent represents to the members of the purchasing public, to dealers and others, that it owns, controls, and operates a refinery, and that purchasers of its products are dealing directly with the manufacturer or refiner of such motor oils and lubricants.

PAR. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to its business as set out in paragraph 3 hereof, are false, misleading, and untrue. The motor oils and lubricants advertised and sold in commerce, as hereinbefore described, by the respondent, are not manufactured or refined by it. Respondent does not own, operate, or control a refinery and does not refine any of the products sold by it.

There are, among the members of the purchasing public, a substantial number who prefer to purchase motor oils directly from the refiner thereof, believing that in so doing they secure better prices, superior quality and other advantages not ordinarily obtainable when purchasing through middlemen or others who are not the actual refiners of the motor oils being purchased.

There are dealers in such motor oils and lubricants who are not refiners or manufacturers of said products and who sell and offer for sale their products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and who do not in any way misrepresent that they are refiners or otherwise misrepresent their business or products.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations of the respondent, in the course of its advertising, offering for sale and selling of its products in commerce as aforesaid, were and are calculated to have, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public and purchasers for resale into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct result of such erroneous and mistaken belief induced by the advertising and representations of respondent, a number of the consuming public and purchasers for resale have purchased a substantial quantity of respondent's motor oils and lubricants with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing motor oils and lubricants who truthfully advertise their respective products and their business status.

CONCLUSION

The acts, practices and representations of the respondent, Columbia Refining Co., as herein found, have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission, on January 18, 1939, having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and having issued its order to cease, and the Commission having on this date modified its said findings as to the facts and now being desirous of modifying its order to cease and desist so as to conform with its said modified findings as to the facts and conclusion, and being advised in the premises.

It is ordered, That the order to cease and desist issued on January 18, 1939, be, and the same is hereby, modified to read as follows:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Columbia Refining Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its motor oils and lubricants in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing through the use of the word "Refining" or any word or term of similar import and meaning in its corporate name, catalogs, advertising material, or in any other manner or through any means or device, that it is a refiner or manufacturer of motor oils and lubricants (other than greases) until and unless it owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a refinery or plant wherein such motor oils and lubricants are manufactured or refined by it.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
In the Matter of

Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation and Fred J. Kavanagh and Charles Van Buren

Complaint, Findings, and Order in Regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 28, 1914

Docket 3562. Complaint, Aug. 29, 1938—Decision, Mar. 27, 1939

Where a corporation and two individuals, who were general officers and principal stockholders thereof and jointly managed, controlled, and directed its policies and operation, engaged in sale and distribution in commerce among States of correspondence course of study and instruction to prepare students for positions as traffic inspectors or checkers, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses in commerce and in District of Columbia, and including many who do not in any manner use misrepresentations in connection with sale and distribution of their courses; through newspaper advertisements, circulars, and other printed matter circulated to general public throughout the United States, and through verbal statements made by their agents and solicitors—

(a) Represented "Inspectors Needed $150-$175 Per Month," and "Trained men and women are needed constantly as Railroad, Electric Railway, Streetcar, and Busline Passenger Traffic Inspectors" and that such occupation or "transportation" offered steady employment at high salaries, with opportunity to travel or stay near home, and opportunity for "well-paid position" in "new and uncrowded field";

Facts being there was no such demand, which exceeded supply of trained and experienced inspectors, transportation companies will not employ those who have theoretical knowledge only and no practical experience, such employment has been going on for 50 years and field is not new and does not offer well-paid positions or steady or permanent work or opportunity to remain in given locality for any length of time, or choice of locations, and traffic inspectors do not earn salaries as above set forth, but are compensated, usually, on per diem basis;

(b) Made many representations as to guaranteeing and securing positions, including statements, in many instances, to prospective purchasers, that there was great demand on said corporation by railroad companies for its graduates, and that they had connections with a large number of such companies and were, therefore, in a position to place graduates without difficulty or delay, and that women graduates could be placed readily with any such company, and other statements of similar import;

Facts being there was no such demand, few, if any, individuals who completed said course found employment as such inspectors, they had no connection whatever with any railroad or other carrier of passengers, and could not and did not fulfill promises and guarantees made to students with respect to employment, and many passenger carriers do not employ women as such inspectors; and
(c) Represented, as aforesaid, to students and prospective students, that their said 30-lesson course could be completed in 2 or 3 months, and that while completing his studies person could be sufficiently qualified to secure position and earn substantial salary;

Facts being no one had ever completed said course within 3, or even 6, months or ever found employment after partially completing said course, lessons thereof were mailed by them to their students at intervals of week or 10 days, and grading of papers and mailing of lessons were in many instances delayed for much longer periods;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers of such courses of study and training into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, and with capacity and tendency so to do and to induce them to act on belief aforesaid and purchase and pay for their said courses, with result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.
Mr. Harlow B. Ansell, of Syracuse, N. Y., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation, a corporation, and Fred J. Kavanagh and Charles Van Buren, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.

Respondent Fred J. Kavanagh is president and respondent Charles Van Buren is secretary and treasurer of said corporation, both individuals being the principal stockholders, jointly managing, controlling, and directing its policies and operations. The offices and principal places of business of all three of said respondents are in the Chimes Building, city of Syracuse and State of New York. Prior to the incorporation of said Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation on September 9, 1937, said individual respondents on April 27, 1937, had started the business hereinafter described, as copartners, continuing as such copartnership until the date of said incorporation.
Par. 2. Said respondents are now and since the dates set forth in paragraph 1 have been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a course of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for positions as traffic inspectors or checkers, which said course is pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Said respondents in the course and conduct of their said business, during the time aforesaid, caused, and do now cause, their said course of study and instruction to be transported from their said place of business in Syracuse, N. Y., to, into and through States of the United States other than New York, to the various purchasers thereof in such other States.

Par. 3. There is now, and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned a course of trade in said course of instruction so sold and distributed by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents are now, and since the dates aforesaid have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of instruction in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their course, respondents, by means of newspaper advertisements, circulars, and other printed matter circulated to the general public throughout the United States, and by verbal statements made by their agents and solicitors to purchasers and prospective purchasers of said course make many representations to the effect that trained traffic inspectors are constantly in demand at high salaries and that employment may be had on the road or near home. Examples of such representations are the following:

INSPECTORS NEEDED $150-$175 Per Month

Trained men and women are needed constantly as Railroad, Electric Railway, Streetcar and Busline Passenger Traffic Inspectors.

Transportation offers interesting outdoor employment at high salaries.

Travel or stay near home.

Would you like to know how you can qualify in a short time at home for a well-paid position in this new and uncrowded field?

In truth and in fact passenger traffic inspectors are not in constant demand by the various passenger transportation companies for the reason that the supply of trained and experienced inspectors is greater than the demand. Moreover, transportation companies will not employ applicants who have only a theoretical knowledge of the work and no practical experience. The representation that traffic inspection is a new field is also false in that traffic inspectors have been employed by passenger carriers for about 50 years.

In truth and in fact the representations that traffic inspectors earn between $150 and $175 per month and that there are well-paid positions are false and misleading. The nature of the work is such that it can be neither steady nor permanent, and compensation is usually on a per diem basis. Traffic inspectors are generally hired for one trip and employment rarely extends over 1 month.

Representations that traffic inspectors may secure positions near their homes are also false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the location of the work is determined by the needs of the carriers for traffic inspectors and not subject to choice by applicants for said work. Moreover, no traffic inspector can remain in any given locality for any length of time for the reason that his services in such locality are valueless as soon as his identity becomes known to the employees of the carrier for whom such inspector is working.

Par. 6. Respondents also make many representations in the manner aforesaid, as to guaranteeing and securing positions, which are false and misleading. In many instances representations are made to prospective purchasers of said course of instruction that there is a great demand by railroad companies on respondent Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation for its graduates; that respondents have connections with a large number of railroad companies and are therefore in a position to place their graduates without difficulty or delay; that women graduates can be placed readily with any railroad company; and many other representations of similar import.

In truth and in fact there is no demand made on respondents by passenger carriers for traffic inspectors who have completed respondents' said course. Few, if any, individuals who have completed said course have found employment as traffic inspectors. Respondents have no connection whatever with any railroad company or other carrier of passengers and cannot and do not fulfil the promises and guarantees made to their students with respect to employment. There are many passenger carriers who do not employ women as traffic inspectors.

Par. 7. By the means aforesaid, respondents falsely and misleadingly represent the length of time required in which said course of study and training may be completed, by assuring students and prospective students that the course could be completed in 2 or 3 months.
and that while the complete course consists of 30 lessons, a person could be sufficiently qualified to secure a position and earn a substantial salary while completing his studies.

In truth and in fact no one has ever completed said course of study and training within 3 or even 6 months; nor has anyone ever found employment after partially completing said course. On the contrary, respondents mail the lessons comprising said course to their students at intervals of a week or 10 days and in many instances delay the grading of papers and mailing of lessons for much longer periods.

Par. 8. The said advertisements and representations set forth in paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 hereof, and others of like and similar import are false, misleading, and deceptive in that respondents thereby represent that:

1. Trained men and women are constantly needed as traffic inspectors.
2. Traffic inspectors earn substantial salaries and have steady employment.
3. Traffic inspectors may elect to travel or work near their homes.
4. The field of traffic inspection is new and uncrowded.
5. Positions are guaranteed because of their connections with passenger carriers.
6. The traffic inspectors training course can be completed within 3 months or less.
7. Students are enabled to secure positions and earn salaries before said course is completed.

In truth and in fact all of said representations are either false and misleading or grossly exaggerated and not warranted by the facts. There is no constant demand for traffic inspectors by passenger carriers. Traffic inspectors do not earn high salaries but are employed only for short periods of time and usually on a per diem basis; the location of their work is not of their own choosing but is determined by the passenger carriers employing them; the work of traffic inspection is not new but has been carried on for many years and the number of trained and experienced inspectors exceeds the demand for them. Respondents do not guarantee positions and have no connections of any sort enabling them to find immediate employment for their students either before or after completion of said course of study and training. Students are not given an opportunity to complete said course in a short time but are supplied with their lessons in not less than 30 weeks.

Par. 9. The statements and representations so made by respondents in the manner and by the means hereinabove alleged, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of said course of study and training into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to induce them to act on such belief and to purchase and pay for respondents' course of study and instruction. Thereby trade is diverted unfairly to respondents from respondents' competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. Among the competitors of the respondents described in paragraph 4 hereof are many who do not in any manner use misrepresentations in connection with the sale and distribution of their said correspondence courses of instruction.

PAR. 11. The above-alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 29, 1938, issued, and on August 31, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation, a corporation, and Fred J. Kavanagh, and Charles Van Buren, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answers, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.
Respondent, Frank J. Kavanagh, erroneously named in the complaint as Fred J. Kavanagh, is president, and respondent Charles Van Buren is secretary and treasurer of said corporation, both individuals being the principal stockholders, jointly managing, controlling, and directing its policies and operations. The offices and principal places of business of all three of said respondents are in the Chimes Building, city of Syracuse and State of New York. Prior to the incorporation of said traffic Inspectors Training Corporation on September 9, 1937, said individual respondents on April 27, 1937, had started the business hereinafter described, as copartners, continuing as such copartnership until the date of said incorporation.

Par. 2. Said respondents are now and since the dates set forth in paragraph 1 have been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a course of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for positions as traffic inspectors or checkers, which said course is pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Said respondents in the course and conduct of their said business, during the time aforesaid, caused, and do now cause, their said course of study and instruction to be transported from their said place of business in Syracuse, N. Y., to, into and through States of the United States other than New York, to the various purchasers thereof in such other States.

Par. 3. There is now, and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned, a course of trade in said course of instruction so sold and distributed by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents are now, and since the dates aforesaid have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of instruction in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their course, respondents, by means of newspaper advertisements, circulars and other printed matter circulated to the general public throughout the United States, and by verbal statements made by their agents and solicitors to purchasers and prospective purchasers of said course make many representations to the effect that trained traffic inspectors are constantly in demand at high salaries and that employment may be had on the road or near home. Examples of such representations are the following:

INSPECTORS NEEDED $150-$175 Per Month

Trained men and women are needed constantly as Railroad Electric Railway, Streetcar and Busline Passenger Traffic Inspectors.

Transportation offers interesting outdoor employment at high salaries. Travel or stay near home.

Would you like to know how you can qualify in a short time at home for a well-paid position in this new and uncrowded field?

In truth and in fact passenger traffic inspectors are not in constant demand by the various passenger transportation companies for the reason that the supply of trained and experienced inspectors is greater than the demand. Moreover, transportation companies will not employ applicants who have only a theoretical knowledge of the work and no practical experience. The representation that traffic inspection is a new field is also false in that traffic inspectors have been employed by passenger carriers for about 50 years.

In truth and in fact the representations that traffic inspectors earn between $150 and $175 per month and that there are well-paid positions are false and misleading. The nature of the work is such that it can be neither steady nor permanent, and compensation is usually on a per diem basis. Traffic inspectors are generally hired for one trip and employment rarely extends over 1 month.

Representations that traffic inspectors may secure positions near their homes are also false and misleading. Moreover, no traffic inspector can remain in any given locality for any length of time for the reason that his services in such locality are valueless as soon as his identity becomes known to the employees of the carrier for whom such inspector is working.

Par. 6. Respondents also make many representations in the manner aforesaid, as to guaranteeing and securing positions, which are false and misleading. In many instances representations are made to prospective purchasers of said course of instruction that there is a great demand by railroad companies on respondent Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation for its graduates; that respondents have connections with a large number of railroad companies and are therefore in a position to place their graduates without difficulty or delay; that women graduates can be placed readily with any railroad company; and many other representations of similar import.

In truth and in fact there is no demand made on respondents by passenger carriers for traffic inspectors who have completed respondents' said course. Few, if any, individuals who have completed said

1. Respondents have no connection whatever with any railroad company or other carrier of passengers and cannot and do not fulfill the promises and guarantees made to their students with respect to employment. There are many passenger carriers who do not employ women as traffic inspectors.

In truth and in fact no one has ever completed said course of study and training within 3 or even 6 months; nor has anyone ever found employment after partially completing said course. On the contrary, respondents mail the lessons comprising said course to their students at intervals of a week or ten days and in many instances delay the grading of papers and mailing of lessons for much longer periods.

Par. 8. The said advertisements and representations set forth in paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 hereof, and others of like and similar import are false, misleading, and deceptive in that respondents thereby represent that:

1. Trained men and women are constantly needed as traffic inspectors.
2. Traffic inspectors earn substantial salaries and have steady employment.
3. Traffic inspectors may elect to travel or work near their homes.
4. The field of traffic inspection is new and uncrowded.
5. Positions are guaranteed because of their connections with passenger carriers.
6. The traffic inspectors training course can be completed within three months or less.
7. Students are enabled to secure positions and earn salaries before said course is completed.

In truth and in fact all of said representations are either false and misleading or grossly exaggerated and not warranted by the facts. There is no constant demand for traffic inspectors by passenger carriers. Traffic inspectors do not earn high salaries but are employed only for short periods of time and usually on a per diem basis; the location of their work is not of their own choosing but is determined by the passenger carriers employing them; the work of traffic inspection is not new but has been carried on for many years and the num-
Order

The number of trained and experienced inspectors exceeds the demand for them. Respondents do not guarantee positions and have no connections of any sort enabling them to find immediate employment for their students either before or after completion of said course of study and training. Students are not given an opportunity to complete said course in a short time but are supplied with their lessons in not less than 30 weeks.

Par. 9. The statements and representations so made by respondents in the manner and by the means hereinafore alleged, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of said courses of study and training into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to induce them to act on such belief and to purchase and pay for respondents' courses of study and instruction. Thereby trade is diverted unfairly to respondents from respondents' competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 10. Among the competitors of the respondents described in paragraph 4 hereof are many who do not in any manner use misrepresentations in connection with the sale and distribution of their said correspondence courses of instruction.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of respondents, in which answers respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Traffic Inspectors Training Corporation, a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, and Frank J. Kavanagh, named in the complaint as Fred J. Kavanagh, and Charles Van Buren, their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in con-connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction for the purpose of training traffic inspectors, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That trained men and women are constantly needed as traffic inspectors, earn substantial salaries, have steady employment, and may elect to travel or work near their homes.

2. That the field of traffic inspection is new and uncrowded.

3. That positions are guaranteed by the respondents because of their connections with passenger carriers.

4. That the traffic inspectors training course can be completed within a period of 3 months or less.

5. That students are enabled to secure positions and earn salaries before said course of instruction is completed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
W. H. COMSTOCK COMPANY, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3650. Complaint, Nov. 10, 1938—Decision, Mar. 27, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of medicinal preparations known as “Comstock’s Dead Shot Worm Pellets” and “Comstock’s N and B Liniment,” to purchasers in other States and in District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution among the various States and in said District of similar medicinal products or products designed for same or similar purposes, and including many who sell such preparations and do not in any way misrepresent the nature and effectiveness thereof—

(a) Represented, through advertisements disseminated through the mails and in commerce and otherwise, to induce purchase of its said preparations, that said preparation for treatment of worm infection was a specific medicine for such condition which eliminated said worms from the body and was unfailing in its action in the treatment of such infection, facts being it was not such a specific treatment, would not accomplish such results, and was not unfailing in its action; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, including use of purported testimonial quotations, that its said “N and B Liniment” had therapeutic value in the treatment of, and relieved pain of, rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia, and was a remedy or cure for, and had therapeutic value in treatment of, chest colds, and in treatment of muscular pains, sprains, strains, and bruises, facts being said liniment did not give quick relief to all types of muscular pains and was not effective treatment for pains of rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia, nor treatment or remedy for chest colds, and would not cure or aid in treatment of serious muscular ailments, but was merely counter-irritant and only of value in treatment of muscular pains when due to minor conditions such as exercise or fatigue, and was not aid in treatment of chest colds which, as internal disorders, will not yield to external counter-irritant application;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such belief, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its said preparations, and trade in commerce as aforesaid was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors likewise engaged in distribution and sale of similar medicinal preparations, or those designed for similar purposes, and who truthfully advertise their respective products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada, with its principal offices and place of business located in the city of Brockville, Province of Ontario, and with a branch office located in Morristown, N. Y., U. S. A.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing medicinal preparations known as "Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets" and "Comstock's N and B Liniment." Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to its customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times herein mentioned has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar medicinal products, or of products designed for the same or similar purposes as are respondent's preparations, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent has disseminated and caused to be disseminated false advertisements—

1. By the United States mails and in commerce by other means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the aforesaid preparations; and

2. By other means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce of said preparations.
Among and typical of representations thus made by the respondent are the following:

Comstock’s Dead Shot Worm Pellets for round and pin worms. Easy to take expellant. The specific medicine for treatment of worm infection. Positively eliminates stomach (round or maw) worms and pin (thread and seat) worms. Unfailing in action. * * *

Comstock’s N and B Liniment Works Quickly—It rapidly penetrates the skin and throws a comforting, soothing warmth into the tissues. * * * It eases most muscular pains in a few minutes.

When a liniment is needed it is needed for quick relief of muscular pains. That’s the principal purpose of any liniment.

Use it as a liniment should be used, for muscular pains, sprains, strains and bruises; for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago and neuralgia; and for the irritation of chest colds.

When a child, I contracted an illness which left one leg under-developed. It is sometimes impossible for me to walk. Sometime ago I purchased a bottle of your N and B Liniment and it promoted circulation as no other liniment did.

I suffered with a lame back caused by weak muscles and at times was unable to straighten up. I read in your Almanac what Comstock’s N and B Liniment had done for others and decided to give it a trial. After two weeks' applications my back felt much stronger, in fact better than it had in three years.

All such statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s literature, purported to be descriptive of respondent’s products. In all of its advertising literature and through other means, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, respondent directly or by inference represents: that its medicinal preparation known as “Comstock’s Dead Shot Worm Pellets” is the specific medicine for the treatment of worm infections, that it positively eliminates stomach worms and pin worms and is unfailing in its action; that its medicinal preparation known as “Comstock’s N and B Liniment” gives quick relief to all types of muscular pains, that it is an effective treatment for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia, that it is a treatment or remedy for chest colds, that it will aid or cure serious muscular ailments of the human body.

PAR. 5. Representations made by respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its preparations are greatly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, Comstock’s Dead Shot Worm Pellets is not the specific treatment for worm infection and will not eliminate stomach worms and pin worms, nor is it unfailing in its action. Comstock’s N and B Liniment does not give quick relief to all types of muscular pains. This preparation is not an effective treatment for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia. This preparation is not a treatment or remedy for chest colds and will not cure or aid serious muscular ailments of the human body.
The true facts are that this preparation is merely a counter-irritant and is only of value in the treatment of muscular pains when those pains are due to minor conditions such as exercise or fatigue. It will not constitute an effective treatment for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia. It is not an aid in the treatment of chest colds because chest colds are internal disorders which will not yield to an external counter-irritant application.

Par. 6. There are among the respondent's competitors many who distribute and sell similar medicinal preparations designed for the treatment of the same or similar conditions who do not in any way misrepresent the nature and effect of their respective products.

Par. 7. The use of the false and misleading statements as hereinabove described has had and now has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's preparations, with the effect that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar medicinal preparations or medicinal preparations designed for similar purposes who truthfully advertise their respective products.

As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 10, 1938, issued and on November 15, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada, and having its principal offices and place of business located in the city of Brockville, Province of Ontario, and a branch office located in Morristown, N. Y., U. S. A.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing medicinal preparations known as "Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets" and "Comstock's N and B Liniment." Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations, sold and distributed by it, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of similar medicinal products, or of products designed for the same or similar purposes as are respondent's preparations.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has disseminated and caused to be disseminated false advertisements—

1. By the United States mails and in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by other means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the aforesaid preparations; and

2. By other means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations.

Among and typical of representations thus made by the respondent are the following:

Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets for round and pin worms. Easy to take expellant. The specific medicine for treatment of worm infection. Positively eliminates stomach (round or maw) worms and pin (thread and seat) worms. Unfailing in action.

Comstock's N and B Liniment Works Quickly—It rapidly penetrates the skin and throws a comforting, soothing warmth into the tissues.

When a liniment is needed it is needed for quick relief of muscular pains. That's the principal purpose of any liniment.

Use it as a liniment should be used, for muscular pains, sprains, strains, and bruises; for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago and neuralgia; and for the irritation of chest colds.

When a child, I contracted an illness which left one leg underdeveloped. It is sometimes impossible for me to walk. Sometime ago I purchased a bottle of your N and B Liniment and it promoted circulation as no other liniment did.

I suffered with a lame back caused by weak muscles and at times was unable to straighten up. I read in your Almanac what Comstock's N and B Liniment had done for others and decided to give it a trial. After two weeks' applications my back felt much stronger, in fact better than it had in three years.

All such statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent's literature, purported to be descriptive of respondent's products. In all of its advertising literature and through other means, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, respondent directly or by inference represents: that its medicinal preparation known as "Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets" is the specific medicine for the treatment of worm infections, positively eliminates stomach worms and pin worms, and is unfailing in its action; that its medicinal preparation known as "Comstock's N and B Liniment" gives quick relief to all types of muscular pains, is an effective treatment for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago and neuralgia, is a treatment or remedy for chest colds, and will aid in the treatment of or cure serious muscular ailments of the human body.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations by respondent with respect to the nature and effectiveness in use of its said preparations are greatly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets is not the specific treatment for worm infection, will not eliminate stomach worms and pin worms, and is not unfailing in its action. Comstock's N and B Liniment does not give quick relief to all types of muscular pains.
Such preparation is not an effective treatment for the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, and neuralgia, is not a treatment or remedy for chest colds, and will not cure or aid in the treatment of serious muscular ailments of the human body.

The true facts are that Comstock's N and B Liniment is merely a counter-irritant and is only of value in the treatment of muscular pains when those pains are due to minor conditions such as exercise or fatigue. It is not an aid in the treatment of chest colds because chest colds are internal disorders which will not yield to an external counter-irritant application.

Par. 6. There are among the respondent's competitors in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia many who distribute and sell medicinal preparations designed for the treatment of the same or similar conditions who do not in any way misrepresent the nature and effectiveness in use of their respective products.

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true. As a direct result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's preparations, and trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has thereby been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar medicinal preparations or medicinal preparations designed for similar purposes who truthfully advertise their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States Mails or in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a preparation for the treatment of worm infection, now designated by the name of "Comstock's Dead Shot Worm Pellets," or a liniment preparation, now designated as "Comstock's N and B Liniment," or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under said names or under any other names; or disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication:

(a) That such preparation for the treatment of worm infection is a specific medicine for worm infection, eliminates stomach or pin worms from the human body, or is unfailing in its action in the treatment of worm infection.

(b) That such liniment preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of, or relieves the pains of, rheumatism, lumbago, or neuralgia.

(c) That such liniment preparation is a remedy or cure for, or has therapeutic value in the treatment of chest colds.

(d) That such liniment preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of muscular pains of the human body, other than as a counter-irritant for muscular pains due to minor conditions, such as excessive exercise or fatigue.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

HERSHEY CREAMERY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of frozen confections and assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, and including (a) a number of 5¢ so called "Fudgicle" and "Banjo" frozen confections for sale and distribution to purchasing public under plan by which purchaser securing handle of one of said confections displaying thereon, after confection's removal, words "Return this stick for free Banjo" (or "free Fudgicle") as case might be, was thus entitled to such additional frozen confection without additional cost, and (b) other assortments involving same principle—Sold such assortments to dealers by whom same were sold as above described and awards made, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure frozen confections at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who sell or distribute such confections and are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan or method employed in sale and distribution of its frozen confections and by element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its said products in preference to such products offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with effect, by reason of said game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade to it from its said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hershey Creamery Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect, as follows:

200346m—40—vol. 28——84
Paragraph 1. The respondent, Hershey Creamery Co., is a corporation, incorporated and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at Harrisburg, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of frozen confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania, to the purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in said frozen confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is now and for some time last past has been in competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of like or similar products and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of frozen confections so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Assortments of said frozen confections are sold to the consuming public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of frozen confections packed in paper bags and known as "Fudgicle" and "Banjo." Sales are 5¢ each. Through the center of each of said confections is a small stick or handle used by the consumer to handle the confection. On certain of said handles or sticks appear the phrases "Return this stick for free Banjo" or "Return this stick for free Fudgicle." These phrases are effectively concealed until the purchaser has made a purchase and the frozen confection has been consumed or removed from the stick. Purchasers who receive one of the sticks marked with the said phrases are entitled to and do receive an additional frozen confection without additional cost. The additional confections are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent sells various assortments of frozen confections by lot or chance, but the above described sales plan is illustrative of the principle involved in all such assortments.
Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells such assortments of said confections make the awards, as above described. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products. The use by the respondent of said method in distributing its said frozen confections is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of frozen confections to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure frozen confections at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute frozen confections in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its frozen confections and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s frozen confections in preference to frozen confections offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 7th day of February 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Hershey Creamery Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 28, 1939, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Hershey Creamery Co., is a corporation, incorporated and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at Harrisburg, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of frozen confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania, to the purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in said frozen confections in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is now and for some time last past has been in competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of frozen confections so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Assortments of said frozen confections are sold to the consuming public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of frozen confections packed in paper bags and known as "Fudgicle" and "Banjo." Sales are 5¢ each. Through the center of each of said confection is a small stick or handle used by the consumer to handle the confection. On certain of said handles or sticks appear the phrases "Return this stick for free Banjo" or "Return this stick for free Fudgicle." These phrases are effectively concealed until the purchaser has made a purchase and the frozen confection has been consumed or removed from the stick. Purchasers who receive one of the sticks marked with the said phrases are entitled to and do receive an additional frozen confection without additional cost. The additional confections are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent sells various assortments of frozen confections by lot or chance, but the above-described sales plan is illustrative of the principle involved in all such assortments.

Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells such assortments of said confections make the awards, as above described. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products. The use by the respondent of said method in distributing its said frozen confections is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of frozen confections to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure frozen confections at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute frozen confections in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its frozen confections and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's frozen confections in preference to frozen confections offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent is violating the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hershey Creamery Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of frozen confections or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing frozen confections or other merchandise so designed that the sale thereof by retail merchants constitutes or may constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others frozen confections or other articles of merchandise which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof, to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise when distributed to the consuming public.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, any lottery device which is to be used or may be used in the sale and distribution of merchandise to the consuming public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

LANTEEN LABORATORIES, INC., LANTEEN MEDICAL LABORATORIES, INC., ALSO TRADING AS MEDICAL BUREAUS OF INFORMATION, AND RUFUS RIDDLES-BARGER

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where two corporations and an individual, who was officer thereof and directed and controlled their sales policies and business operations, engaged in manufacture, advertisement, distribution, and sale of certain medical preparations and appliances for so-called feminine hygiene and contraceptive use, in substantial competition with others engaged in distribution and sale of similar products, and including those who do not in any way misrepresent the character, nature, and size of their respective businesses, and do not misrepresent in any way the nature and character of their respective products; In advertising said products through show window displays and in trade literature such as booklets, pamphlets, and circulars, distributed to members of purchasing public through medium of boxes in which said products were marketed, through drug stores, through mails and direct to prospective purchasers, and sometimes sold, and sometimes given away free—

(a) Represented, in connection with its cap diaphragm and preparation sold therewith, that the "Diaphragm Method" was the standard prescription which was given by medical specialists and marriage hygiene clinics throughout the world, and was recognized as the superior of all other methods for such hygiene, and that its products were sold only for use by married couples on physician's prescription for cure or prevention of ill health, and that its said method was the only method for such hygiene that had the full approval of the medical specialists in this practice, and was the one and only method universally prescribed by the world's leading doctors, marriage hygiene clinics and hospitals, and that use thereof brought health, happiness, and freedom from worry; and

(b) Represented that said cap diaphragm, in its one standard size, was adaptable to all normal anatomies and would function simply and effectively under all circumstances, and that said preparation would insure quick destruction of all germs and would destroy all germ life, and provided complete sterilization, and, used with said diaphragm, gave the well-known double protection and assured complete reliability, and that its said products were ethical and widely available through the drug or medical profession, but not otherwise distributed;

Facts being products in question did not form or constitute competent treatments, remedies, cures, and preventives of ill health, as represented by them, and were of no beneficial therapeutic value and not generally prescribed for cure or prevention of ill health, none of said products, when used in connection with applicators furnished by them and with said diaphragm as recommended, and used as directed, would in all cases serve as competent contraceptives, and would fit all normal anatomies, but were capable of causing Injuries and deleterious effects to those making use thereof; with tendency and capacity, directly and through implication, to cause substantial portion of purchasing public to believe erroneously that such products, when used as set forth by them, afforded safe, competent and effective contraceptives and, used as designated, safe, competent, and reliable remedies, cures and preventives of ill health, and that their said diaphragm was adaptable to all normal anatomies; and

(c) Made use of trade names "Medical Bureaus of Information," and represented, thereby and otherwise in window displays and other advertising matter purportedly issued by aforesaid so-called "Bureaus," and in their advertising literature generally, that supposed "Medical Bureau of Information" was an organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, through such statements as "association not for profit," "rendering a high grade of professional service," because of the large numbers applying, "staffed entirely with women physicians and nurses, each one specially trained in the science of contraception," and "The First Medical Bureau of Information on Birth Control was opened to the public in Chicago in 1929. It immediately became a mecca for Chicago wives, and many women have traveled great distances to secure this information from women physicians who have made a special study in this practice"; and

(d) Represented, through aforesaid advertising, by pictures and otherwise, that some of its literature was composed by Norman Carr, M.D., London, and made such statements in advertisements referring to such doctor as "probably the most widely read author on this subject in the entire world. So great has been the acclaim accorded his writings that their publication has now exceeded 12,000,000 copies, in 26 editions. His technical treatises are respected by the medical profession as fully as his nontechnical works are appreciated by the laity";

Facts being such "Medical Bureaus of Information" were not organizations or institutions organized and conducted to carry on scientific research on questions involving such methods or methods of preventing, treating or curing maladies peculiar to women, or on any other questions, but were operated to promote sale of their products, so-called method, supposedly universally used by marriage hygiene clinics as outlined in pamphlets and advertising of such bureaus, was not generally prescribed or recommended by physicians, and said Norman Carr, M.D., referred to in their advertising, was a fictitious name used by them to encourage sale of their products and to deceive and mislead prospective and purchasing public and induce such erroneous belief that said "Medical Bureaus of Information" were organizations or institutions organized and conducted to carry on scientific research on methods above set forth, as represented by them, and there was no such physician as said Dr. Norman Carr, and mention thereof was to deceive and mislead purchasing public in order to induce sale of their said products;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations were true and into purchase of substantial quantities of their said various products by reason of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs thus induced, and trade was thereby unfairly diverted from competitors who do not, in sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of same or similar misrepresentations; to the injury of competition in commerce.
Held, That such acts and practices, under the conditions and circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall and Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiners.

Mr. W. L. Taggart for the Commission.

Defrees, Buckingham, Jones & Hoffman, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., trading under its own name and under Medical Bureaus of Information and Rufus Riddlesbarger, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at 900 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business at 900 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Medical Bureaus of Information is operated by the Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc. to advertise and distribute information in regard to the products of the respondents Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., and Lanteen Laboratories, Inc. The principal offices of the Medical Bureaus of Information are 734 State Lake Building, 190 North State Street, Chicago, Ill., Suite 804 Industrial Bank Building, Detroit, Mich., and 161 Wisconsin Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent Rufus Riddlesbarger of 1224 Pratt Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., is engaged in business individually and is an official of the Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., of Illinois and Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc. of Delaware. He directs and controls the sales policies and business operations of the corporate respondents.
The respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, advertising, distributing, and selling certain medical preparations and appliances for so-called feminine hygiene and contraceptive use to purchasers in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The respondents cause these products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business to the purchasers thereof located in various States other than the States from which said shipments of said products originate and in the District of Columbia, and maintain a constant course of trade and commerce in said products so distributed and sold by them.

In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been, and are, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the distribution and sale of similar products, and other products intended and designed for similar use by women in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. The products marketed by respondents are variously known and described as Lanteen Blue (jelly), Lanteen Brown (cap diaphragm), Lanteen Lilac (mensina type diaphragm), Lanteen Yellow (solution—powder or liquid), Lanteen Pink (capsule), Lanteen Russett (rubber sponge tampon), Lanteen Rose (tampon in capsule), Lanteen Green (rose scented cones) and Lanteen Grey (a special jelly).

In the operation of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products on the part of members of the purchasing public, the respondents have made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and show-window displays representing to be descriptive of the various products herein named; and the applicators and diaphragms used in connection therewith, as well as the effectiveness of said products and appliances when used. The advertising literature herein referred to is distributed to members of the purchasing public through the medium of the boxes in which said products are marketed, in advertising literature distributed through the medium of drug stores, through the United States Mails direct to the prospective purchasers and in other ways.

With reference to the products designated as Lanteen Blue and the cap diaphragm such statements as the following are made:

Diaphragm Method, which is now the standard prescription given by Medical Specialists and Marriage Hygiene Clinics throughout the world, and is recognized as the superior of all other methods for Marriage Hygiene. * * * this provides the wife with complete security against the hazards of foreign germ life that may enter the vaginal tract. Sold only for use by married couples on physician's prescription for the cure or prevention of ill health.
A small injection of the antiseptic jelly should then be placed in the vaginal tract, outside the diaphragm, to insure quick destruction of all germs that may enter the vagina. A douche is not necessary, but if desired, delay at least 15 to 30 minutes to give the antiseptic jelly ample time to destroy all germ life.

The diaphragm method, combination of diaphragm and prophylactic jelly, is the only method for marriage hygiene that has the full approval of the medical specialists in this practice. It is the one and only method that is universally prescribed by the world's leading doctors, Marriage Hygiene Clinics and hospitals.

The antiseptic jelly provides complete sterilization.

The Lanteen Brown Cap Diaphragm, in its one standard size, is adaptable to all normal anatomies; it is self-locating by simply inserting and will securely maintain its position over and around the os cervix (mouth of the womb) under all circumstances.

The Lanteen Blue Jelly used with it destroys germ life, thus giving the well-known "double protection" and assuring complete reliability. Lanteen Blue is the clinically proven formula for feminine jelly, entirely bland and non-irritating.

Lanteen are ethical products, widely available through the drug or medical professions, but are not distributed through any other channels.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out with respect to the products herein named in paragraph 2 and their other products, and in their general advertising, respondents, directly and through implication, represent that said products designated hereinabove form safe, competent and effective preventatives against conception; that said products form safe, competent, and reliable remedies, cures, and preventatives of ill health, and that said cap diaphragm is adaptable to all normal anatomies.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact the products designated above do not form or constitute competent treatments, remedies, cures and preventatives of ill health hereinabove set out, and are of no beneficial therapeutic value, and are not generally prescribed by physicians for the cure or prevention of ill health. None of said products, when used in connection with the applicators furnished by the respondents and with said cap diaphragm as recommended for use with said products and used under respondents' directions, will in all cases serve as competent preventatives of conception. Said diaphragms will not fit all normal anatomies, but they are capable of causing injuries and deleterious effects to those making use of them.

Par. 4. In the course of the operation of their business, as aforesaid, respondents employ and use agents for the promotion of the distribution and sale of the various products hereinabove named; make use of window displays and other advertising matter purporting to be issued by so-called "Medical Bureaus of Information." The advertising literature herein referred to purports to describe the functions of said bureaus in statements such as:
These Bureaus are an association not for profit, and because of the large numbers applying, they are rendering a high grade of professional service. They are staffed entirely with women physicians and nurses, each one specially trained in the science of contra-ception. * * * Their nominal fees, the maximum for professional services never exceeding five dollars.

The dear, old wrinkled face of our grandmother is the price she was compelled to pay for her lack of proper information during her early years of marriage. Our grandparents would have bartered ten years of their lives for the authoritative information and the reliable contraceptives now easily available to the women of today. * * * The First Medical Bureau of Information on Birth Control was opened to the public in Chicago in 1929. It immediately became a mecca for Chicago wives, and many women have traveled great distances, from nearly every state in the Union and from many parts of Canada, to secure this information on birth control from women physicians who have made a special study in this practice.

In said statements, together with other statements not herein set out, and in their advertising literature generally, respondents represent, directly or through implication, that respondent Medical Bureaus of Information is an organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, and, through the aforesaid advertising, by pictures and otherwise, that some of its literature is composed by Norman Carr, M. D., London. It is further represented that:

Dr. Norman Carr is probably the most widely read author on this subject in the entire world. So great has been the acclaim accorded his writings that their publication has now exceeded 12,000,000 copies, in 26 editions. His technical treatises are respected by the medical profession as fully as his non-technical works are appreciated by the laity.

In truth and in fact the Medical Bureaus of Information are not organizations or institutions organized and conducted for the carrying on of scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, or methods of preventing, treating, or curing maladies peculiar to women, or on any other questions, and said bureaus are operated for the purpose of promoting the sale of respondents' products, and further the said so-called methods supposedly universally used by Marriage Hygiene Clinics, as outlined in the pamphlets and advertising of the Medical Bureaus of Information, are not generally prescribed or recommended by physicians, and the said Norman Carr, M. D. referred to in its advertising appears to be a fictitious name used by the said respondents for the purpose of encouraging the sale of the products of the respondents.

There are among the respondents' competitors in commerce, as herein set out, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character, nature and size of their respective businesses and who do not misrepresent in any way the nature and character of their respective products, and do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondents, in offering for sale and selling their various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted from competitors of respondents who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The methods, acts, and practices of respondents herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondents Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, also trading under the name Medical Bureaus of Information, and Rufus Riddlesbarger, individually and in his official capacity as an officer of said respondents, charging respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of Section 5 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by W. L. Taggart, an attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall and John L. Hornor, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by George T. Buckingham, Chas. O. Butler and Stephen E. Hurley for the respondents, and said testimony and other evidence has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence and briefs and argument in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Lanteen Laboratories, Inc. is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at 900 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc. is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business at 900 North Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Rufus Riddlesbarger of 1224 Pratt Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., is an individual and is an official of the Lanteen Laboratories, Inc. of Illinois and Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc. of Delaware. He directs and controls the sales policies and business operations of the corporate respondents.

The Medical Bureau of Information, designated herein, is a trade name used by the respondents named. It is used by them in maintaining and furthering respondents' course of trade in interstate commerce as hereafter detailed. The principal offices of the Medical Bureaus of Information are 734 State Lake Building, 190 North State Street, Chicago, Ill., Suite 804 Industrial Bank Building, Detroit, Mich., and 161 Wisconsin Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Paragraph 2. The respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, advertising, distributing, and selling certain medical preparations and appliances for so-called feminine hygiene and contraceptive use to purchasers in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause these products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business to the purchasers thereof located in various States other than the States from which said shipments of said products originate and in the District of Columbia, and maintain a constant course of trade and commerce in said products so distributed and sold by them. The products marketed by respondents are variously known and described as Lanteen Blue (jelly), Lanteen Brown (cap diaphragm), Lanteen Lilac (mensigna type diaphragm),
Findings

Lanteen Yellow (solution—powder or liquid), Lanteen Pink (capsule), Lanteen Russett (rubber sponge tampon), Lanteen Rose (tampon in capsule), Lanteen Green (rose scented cones) and Lanteen Gray (a special jelly).

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been, and are, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the distribution and sale of similar products, and other products intended and designed for similar use by women in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 4. In the operation of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products on the part of members of the purchasing public, the respondents have made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and show-window displays represented to be descriptive of the various products herein named; and the applicators and diaphragms used in connection therewith, as well as the effectiveness of said products and appliances when used. Such advertising literature herein referred to is distributed to members of the purchasing public through the medium of the boxes in which said products are marketed, in advertising literature distributed through the medium of drug stores, through the United States mails and direct to the prospective purchasers, and is sometimes sold for 10 cents and sometimes given away free of charge. With reference to the products designated as the cap diaphragm and the jelly, the following statements are made:

Diaphragm Method, which is now the standard prescription given by Medical Specialists and Marriage Hygiene Clinics throughout the world, and is recognized as the superior of all other methods for Marriage Hygiene. * * * This provides the wife with complete security against the hazards of foreign germ life that may enter the vaginal tract. Sold only for use by married couples on physician's prescription for the cure or prevention of ill health.

A small injection of the antiseptic jelly should then be placed in the vaginal tract, outside the diaphragm, to insure quick destruction of all germs that may enter the vagina. * * * A douche is not necessary, but if desired, delay at least 15 to 30 minutes to give the antiseptic jelly ample time to destroy all germ life. * * * The antiseptic jelly provides complete sterilization.

The diaphragm method, combination of diaphragm and prophylactic jelly, is the only method for marriage Hygiene that has the full approval of the medical specialists in this practice. It is the one and only method that is universally prescribed by the world's leading doctors, Marriage Hygiene Clinics and hospitals. * * * Its use brings health, happiness and freedom from that ever recurring worry.

The Lanteen Brown Cap Diaphragm, in its one standard size, is adaptable to all normal anatomies; it is self-locating by simply inserting and will securely maintain its position over and around the os cervix (mouth of the womb) under all circumstances.
The Lanteen Blue Jelly used with it destroys germ life, thus giving the well-known “double protection” and assuring complete reliability. Lanteen Blue is the clinically proven formula for feminine jelly, entirely bland and non-irritating.

Lanteen are ethical products, widely available through the drug or medical professions, but are not distributed through any other channels.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the products designated herein in paragraph 2 do not form or constitute competent treatments, remedies, cures and preventatives of ill health as represented by respondents, and are of no beneficial therapeutic value, and are not generally prescribed by physicians for the cure or prevention of ill health. None of said products, when used in connection with the applicators furnished by the respondents and with said cap diaphragm as recommended for use with said products and used under respondents’ directions, will in all cases serve as competent preventatives of conception. Said diaphragms will not fit all normal anatomies, but they are capable of causing injuries and deleterious effects to those making use of them. The advertisements herein mentioned in paragraph 4 have the tendency and capacity, directly and through implication, to cause a substantial portion of the public to erroneously believe such products when used as designated by respondents afford safe, competent and effective preventatives against conception, and that such products when used as designated afford safe, competent and reliable remedies, cures and preventatives of ill health, and that said cap diaphragm is adaptable to all normal anatomies.

PAR. 6. In the course of the operation of their business, as described in paragraph 2 herein, respondents employ and use agents for the promotion of the distribution and sale of the various products hereinabove named; make use of window displays and other advertising matter purporting to be issued by so-called “Medical Bureaus of Information.” In advertising literature herein referred to which purport to describe the functions of said bureaus are the following excerpts:

These Bureaus are an association not for profit, and because of the large numbers applying, they are rendering a high grade of professional service. They are staffed entirely with women physicians and nurses, each one specially trained in the science of contraception.

The dear, old wrinkled face of our grandmother is the price she was compelled to pay for her lack of proper information during her early years of marriage. Our grandparents would have bartered ten years of their lives for the authoritative information and the reliable contraceptives now easily available to the women of today.

* * * The First Medical Bureau of Information on Birth Control was opened to the public in Chicago in 1929. It immediately became a mecca for Chicago wives, and many women have traveled great distances, from nearly every state in the Union and from many parts of Canada, to secure this information on birth control from women physicians who have made a special study in this practice.

In such statements, together with other statements not herein set out, and in their advertising literature generally, respondents represent, directly or through implication, that respondent, Medical Bureaus of Information, is an organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, and, through the aforesaid advertising, by pictures and otherwise, that some of its literature is composed by Norman Carr, M. D., London. In the advertisements referring to Dr. Carr, this statement is made:

Dr. Norman Carr is probably the most widely read author on this subject in the entire world. So great has been the acclaim accorded his writings that their publication has now exceeded 12,000,000 copies, in 26 editions. His technical treatises are respected by the medical profession as fully as his non-technical works are appreciated by the laity.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, the Medical Bureaus of Information are not organizations or institutions organized and conducted for the carrying on of scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, or methods of preventing, treating, or curing maladies peculiar to women, or on any other questions, and said Bureaus are operated for the purpose of promoting the sale of respondents' products, and the said so-called methods supposedly universally used by Marriage Hygiene Clinics, as outlined in the pamphlets and advertising of the Medical Bureaus of Information, are not generally prescribed or recommended by physicians, and the said Norman Carr, M. D., referred to in its advertising, is a fictitious name used by the said respondents for the purpose of encouraging the sale of the products of the respondents and used to deceive and mislead the prospective and purchasing public and to induce in such the erroneous belief such Medical Bureaus of Information are organizations or institutions organized and conducted for carrying on scientific research on methods preventing conception or curing maladies peculiar to women as represented by respondents, and there is and was not any such physician as Dr. Norman Carr mentioned by respondents' literature as set out herein, and such mention of Dr. Carr was and is used likewise to deceive and mislead the purchasing public in order to induce the sale of respondents' products.

PAR. 8. There are among the respondents' competitors in commerce, as set out in paragraph 2 herein, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character, nature and size of their respective businesses and who do not misrepresent in any way the nature and character of their respective products, and do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondents, in offering for sale and selling their various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted from competitors of respondents who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents Lanteen Laboratories, Inc. and Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., corporations, and Rufus Riddlesbarger, an individual, under the conditions and circumstances set forth in the foregoing findings of fact are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before John L. Hornor and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by William L. Taggart, counsel for the Commission, and by George T. Buckingham, of the law firm of DeFrees, Buckingham, Jones and Hoffman, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, also trading under the name Medical Bureaus of Information, their officers, agents, representatives and employees, and Rufus Riddlesbarger, individually and as an officer of the Lanteen Laboratories, Inc., and Lanteen Medical Laboratories, Inc., his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of so-called feminine hygiene preparations and appliances, now known as and sold under the names “Lanteen Blue,” “Lanteen Brown,” “Lanteen Lilac,” “Lanteen Yellow,” “Lanteen Pink,” “Lanteen Russet,” “Lanteen Rose,” “Lanteen Green,” “Lanteen Gray,” or any other preparation or appliance composed of similar ingredients or possessing similar characteristics, under whatever name or names sold, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist, directly or by implication, from representing:

1. That any of said preparations or appliances, whether used alone or in connection with any other preparation or appliance, forms or constitutes a competent treatment, remedy or preventive of ill health of any nature, or is of any beneficial therapeutic value.

2. That the use of any of said preparations or appliances, whether used alone or in connection with others of said preparations or appliances, will prevent conception.

3. That the appliance now known as and sold under the name “Lanteen Brown,” described as a diaphragm, or any other of said appliances, will fit all anatomies or all normal anatomies.

4. That any of said preparations or appliances has been tested and approved by an independent non-profit organization, or any organization, devoted to scientific research on questions involving the methods of preventing conception and the prevention, treatment and cure of the diseases, maladies and conditions peculiar to women, or that respondents are noted on account of the manufacture and sale of high class pharmaceutical products, when such is not the fact.

5. That any of said preparations or appliances is prepared, designed, approved or recommended by a member or members of the medical profession, when such is not the fact.

6. That any of said preparations or appliances may be used with safety and without deleterious effects by all women.

7. That the use of a diaphragm, or the so-called diaphragm method, is the only method that has the approval of medical specialists, marriage hygiene clinics and hospitals, or that the use of the diaphragm or the so-called diaphragm method is recognized by medical specialists, marriage hygiene clinics and hospitals as superior to all other methods for the prevention of conception, or that such an appliance or said method provides complete security against the hazards of “foreign” germ life.

8. That any of said preparations or appliances (a) destroys germ life, (b) gives double protection, (c) insure complete reliability, (d) provides complete security against the hazards of "foreign" germ life, (e) acts as a prophylactic, (f) has the full approval of specialists in the medical profession, marriage hygiene clinics or hospitals, (g) is recognized as superior to all other products of a similar type, or (h) will bring health, happiness and freedom to the user thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

TWENTIETH CENTURY BUSINESS BUILDERS, INC., AND EDWIN I. GORDON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2774. Complaint, Apr. 20, 1936—Decision, Apr. 3, 1939

Where a corporation and an individual, its general manager who directed and controlled its sales activities and policies with respect to acts and practices herein set forth, engaged in sale and distribution of a sales promotional plan to retail merchants in the various States, under contracts entered into with such merchants, pursuant to which they—

(1) Furnished merchant with "count the dot" or "count the block" puzzle advertising mats for use by merchant in his local paper, covering merchant's trade area, and representing, and usually with headline streamers, that merchant was conducting a contest and upon a given day would give away free of charge, to person most closely approximating number of dots or blocks in picture, items of merchandise there described and depicted and represented as of stated value, such as "$159 living room suite," etc., and that person submitting answers or solutions nearest correct answer or solution would receive vouchers or checks redeemable in merchandise of particular retailer, and that only stated number of such vouchers and checks were issued, and pursuant to which they—

(2) Undertook to furnish "an experienced manager who will prepare for this sale and supervise same during the period of the sale"; and—

In substantial competition in commerce with others engaged in sale and distribution of various sales promotional plans to stimulate trade, and who do not engage in practice of causing merchants with whom they contract to make false representations relative to values of their merchandise or to issue checks or credit vouchers for stated amounts, but which in fact have no monetary value in purchasing from such merchants, and do not make or cause to be made any other false statements and representations in connection with sale and distribution of their said sales promotional plans or of merchandise involved in use thereof;

In carrying on their said business and plan, purpose of which was not to make awards of cash credit slips to contestants who submitted correct and accurate answer or solution to number of dots in advertisements, but to issue cash credit slips to all persons who submitted answers or solutions without regard to accuracy of answers submitted, and thereby entice such contestants into stores of merchants for purpose of effecting sales of merchandise of such merchants, who, acting under their direction and advice and that of their agents and representatives, (1) increased the selling price and represented value of their merchandise, and represented same as of a value in excess of the real worth by an amount which approximated the purported value of the credit vouchers distributed to contestants submitting answers or solutions, (2) widely advertised such false and fictitious values by newspaper advertisements and otherwise throughout such merchants' respective trade areas, and (3) distributed indiscriminately credit vouchers or credit checks without regard to solutions submitted—
Caused retail merchants with whom they contracted to represent aforesaid sales promotional advertisement and plan as a contest, and to make false representations relative to values of their merchandise, and to issue checks or credit vouchers for various stated amounts, but which in fact were of no monetary value in purchasing from such merchants their said merchandise, to which they had assigned, as above set forth, fictitious special or sale prices and values in excess of those at which it was regularly and customarily offered for sale;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public, through publication by such retail merchants, as thus caused by them, of such false and fictitious selling prices and values, and such indiscriminate issuance of credit vouchers or checks, into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that such false and fictitious selling prices and values were the usual selling prices and actual values for merchandise involved, and that by entering said "count the dot" contests and winning credit vouchers by accurately counting dots or blocks, they would receive special discounts in purchasing retailer's merchandise, and thereby effect savings to the extent of the amount of the credit vouchers won by them; and

With the result that substantial number of members of purchasing public, in reliance upon such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, entered such contests and purchased substantial quantities of the merchandise featured therein, and substantial number of merchants purchased such sales promotional plan of said corporation and individual and trade was diverted unfairly (1) to said merchants from their merchant competitors in commerce who do not make false representations relative to the value of their merchandise or issue checks or credit vouchers for various stated amounts, but in fact of no monetary value in purchasing merchandise from them, and (2) to said corporation and individual from competitors who, as hereinebefore set forth, do not, in sale and distribution of their various sales promotional plans, cause merchants with whom they contract to make false representations relative to values of their merchandise or to issue checks or credit vouchers as above set forth, or otherwise make or cause to be made other false statements and representations in connection with their said promotional sales plans or merchandise involved in use thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, Mr. Robert S. Hall, and Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiners.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley, Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett, and Mr. George Foulkes for the Commission.

Chritton, Wiles, Davies, Hirschel & Dawson, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

Complaint
Complaint

Century Business Builders, Inc., a corporation, and Edwin I. Gordon, an individual, hereinafter called respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as commerce is defined in said act and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, it hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges as follows in that respect.

Respondents, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., in its entire corporate existence, to wit, since October 6, 1934, and Edwin I. Gordon, have been engaged in selling, and offering for sale, to retail merchants throughout the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois a certain sales promotion plan, with the representation to the purchasers, and prospective purchasers thereof that the use of such plan, which is copyrighted, the copyright being owned by Edwin I. Gordon, is as follows:

Respondents procure contracts with various retail merchants throughout the various States of the United States as aforesaid under and by the terms of which, for a stated consideration, respondents agree, among other things, to furnish to such merchant advertising mats to be used in the manner hereinafter related, which said mats, however, remain at all times the property of respondents. Such mats, when used, reproduce what are known to the trade as “Count the Dot” and “Count the Block” puzzles, which consist of a reproduction or photograph of various merchandise and commodities featured by such retail merchant. Superimposed upon such reproduction or photograph are numerous blocks or dots. The retail merchant, when the contract is made, is instructed by the respondents to cause the insertion of such photograph in a paper or other periodical or periodicals of general circulation within the trade area of such merchant for a contracted and stated period of time. Accompanying such picture is a representation made by the dealer, acting under instructions by the respondents, that upon a given day the retail dealer will give free of charge to the person most closely approximating the number of dots or blocks in the picture certain described merchandise which is represented to be of considerable value.
Further representations are made that a stated number of persons submitting answers or solutions to such puzzles nearest the correct answer or solution of the same will receive vouchers or checks redeemable in merchandise only and sold only at the store of such retail dealer.

Par. 2. In truth and in fact such credit vouchers are indiscriminately distributed without regard to the solution submitted, and are used solely and only for the stimulation of trade, the object and purpose of the advertisements being that in connection with the sale of merchandise, which sale is widely advertised, increased number of patrons may be attracted.

Par. 3. The contract between the respondents and retail merchant provides, among other things, that the merchant shall be entitled to the advice and business experience of the respondents. Acting under the direction and advice of the respondents, the retail merchant procures, in many instances, goods of an inferior character and of cheap manufacture, which, upon instruction of the respondents, he falsely represents to be of a value in excess of the real worth thereof; such increase in represented value amounting to approximately the purported value of said credit vouchers.

It is likewise the common practice of merchants, at the instance and advice of the respondents, to procure old or antiquated stock of little value and falsely to represent such stock to have a value in excess of its real worth; such increase in represented value amounting approximately to the purported value of said credit vouchers.

These false and fictitious values are widely advertised by circulars, handbills, in periodicals, magazines, newspapers, by radio broadcasts and other means throughout the trade area wherein such retail merchant operates, and the publishing of such false and fictitious prices has a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of purchasers into the false belief that by purchasing the merchandise so advertised and represented during the period of the sale hereinbefore described, they effect economies and make pecuniary gains and savings. Relying upon such belief, a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public have so purchased said merchandise.

Par. 4. The acts and practices of the respondents, as hereinabove described, have caused, and now cause, a substantial injury to a substantial number of retail merchants who are competitors of those retail merchants with whom respondents contract and who engage in the sale, transportation, and distribution throughout the various States of the United States other than the particular States wherein such competitors are located, of commodities similar in character, nature and design to those in which such contracting retail merchants deal, and who do not use false and fictitious prices in the sale of the commodities vended by them, nor issue to customers, or prospective customers credit vouchers of a kind and in a manner herein before related. Such acts and practices have occasioned, and still occasion, a substantial diversion of trade from such competitors to those with whom respondents contract and who act in the manner above set out.

Par. 5. In engaging in the business of stimulating trade and holding itself out as a business consultant, the respondents are in competition with a substantial number of other persons, firms, copartner­ships, and corporations who likewise represent themselves to be business consultants and are engaged in the business of stimulating trade but who do not engage in the practice of fostering false or fictitious prices and who do not cause those with whom they contract falsely to represent to the purchasing public that the commodity offered for sale is new, or is of a superior quality at the price for which the same is offered and who do not mislead and deceive or cause a deception of members of the purchasing public by issuing, or causing to be issued, trade or credit vouchers for various stated amounts which are actually of no monetary value in purchasing from the merchants so issuing.

Par. 6. The facts and practices of the respondents, as above set forth, have a tendency and capacity to, and do in fact, cause a substantial diversion of trade from its competitors, as above described, to the respondents.

Par. 7. The acts and practices of the respondents are intended to, and do, cause the public to be misled and deceived, and cause a diversion of trade, as above related. In so doing, respondents furnish a method of deception and diversion to those with whom it contracts.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 28, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., a corporation, and Edwin I. Gordon, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Alden S. Bradley, DeWitt T. Puckett, and George Foulkes, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Horace Dawson, attorney for the respondents, before W. C. Reeves, Robert S. Hall, and Arthur F.
Findings

Thomas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (respondent not having requested oral argument); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, and having its principal place of business located at 917 Furniture Mart Building, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent, Edwin I. Gordon, is General Manager of respondent, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., and as such directs and controls the sales activities and policies of said respondent corporation with respect to the acts and practices herein set forth.

Respondents, since the date of incorporation of respondent, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., in the year 1934, have been and are now engaged in the business of the sale and distribution of a sales promotional plan to retail merchants situated in the various States of the United States.

Respondents enter into contracts with retail merchants doing business in various States of the United States, by the terms of which respondents agree, among other things, for a stated consideration, to furnish merchants with certain advertising mats for use by said merchants in conducting a “count the dot” contest.

The mats, when used, reproduce what is known to the trade as “count the dot” or “count the block” puzzles which consist of a reproduction or photograph of various merchandise and commodities upon which is superimposed many small “dots” or “blocks.”

The retail merchant is instructed by respondents to cause the insertion of said reproduction or photograph in local newspapers which cover the merchant’s trade area.

The mats furnished retail dealers by respondents usually contain headline streamers and other language which serve as representations that the retail dealer or merchant is conducting a contest and that upon a given day the retail dealer or merchant will give away free of charge to the person most closely approximating the number of dots or blocks in the picture certain described items of merchandise which are represented to be of a stated value.

Following is a typical example of some of the representations appearing on a mat furnished to a retail furniture dealer by respondents:

More than $10,000 worth of prizes to be given away free.
Introducing our Twentieth Century furniture exhibit.
First prize a beautiful $159 living room suite free.
Second prize two credit checks $75 each redeemable on any Twentieth Century living room, dining room or bedroom suite.
How to win?
Just count the dots.

In the middle of the mat containing these representations is a picture of a davenport and large living room chair, upon which is superimposed a number of dots.

It is further represented that the person submitting answers or solutions to such puzzles nearest the correct answer or solution of the same will receive vouchers or checks redeemable in the merchandise sold at the store of such retail dealer.

Representations are made in the advertisements that only a stated number of these vouchers and checks are issued by the retail merchant.

Par. 2. After written contracts have been entered into between the respondents and retail merchants, respondents supply merchants with the aforesaid mats.

These mats are shipped by respondents from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., across state lines to merchants and retail dealers who reside in States other than the State of Illinois.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact the representations made by merchants and retail dealers, at the instance of respondents, that premiums and credit checks are awarded to persons submitting answers or solutions to the number of dots or blocks in advertisements, are false, misleading, and untrue.

The record shows, and the Commission finds, that credit vouchers or credit checks were indiscriminately distributed by retail merchants without regard to the solution submitted by contestants, and that this was done by retail merchants at the instance of respondents.

A retail furniture merchant, who entered into a contract with respondents and whose place of business is located in Gary, Indiana, distributed 3,000 cash credit slips to contestants, although the advertisement stated that only 234 cash credit slips in varying amounts would be awarded contestants who submitted the best solutions to the number of dots in the advertisements run in local newspapers.
by said merchant. This was done under the direction and supervision of respondents' representatives who were in constant attendance at the merchant's store during the period of time covered by the sale.

Par. 4. The Commission further finds that the purpose of the plan is not to make awards of cash credit slips to contestants who submit correct and accurate answers or solutions to the number of dots in the advertisements, but to issue cash credit slips to all persons who submit answers or solutions to the number of dots without regard to the accuracy of the answers submitted, and thereby to entice said contestants into the stores of merchants for the purposes of effecting sales of merchandise.

Par. 5. The contract entered into between respondents and retail merchants further provides among other things that respondents will furnish "an experienced manager who will prepare for this sale and supervise same during the period of the sale."

Acting under the direction and advice of respondents and their agents and representatives, the Commission finds that retail merchants increased the selling price and represented value of their merchandise and represented such merchandise to be of a value in excess of the real worth of the same. The increase in the selling price and represented value of the merchandise amounted to approximately the purported value of the credit vouchers distributed to contestants submitting answers or solutions to the number of dots or blocks in the puzzle.

These false and fictitious values were widely advertised by retail merchants in newspaper advertisements and other means throughout the trade area of the retail merchants.

Par. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, by causing such retail merchants to publish statements containing such false and fictitious selling prices and values relative to such merchandise and the causing of such retail merchants to indiscriminately issue such credit vouchers or checks to contestants without regard to the answers or solutions submitted by them, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that such false and fictitious selling prices and values are the usual selling prices and actual values for such merchandise, and that by entering said "count the dot" contests and winning a credit voucher by accurately counting the dots or blocks, they would receive special discounts in purchasing the retail dealer's merchandise and thereby effect savings to the extent of the amount of the credit vouchers won by them. In reliance upon such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial number of members of the purchasing public entered into these contests and purchased substantial quantities of the merchandise featured in such contests. As a result, a substantial number of merchants have purchased the sales promotional plan of the respondents and trade has been diverted unfairly to said merchants from other merchants who are competitors in commerce of the merchants with whom respondents contract and who do not make false representations relative to the value of their merchandise or issue checks or credit vouchers for various stated amounts which are in fact of no monetary value in purchasing merchandise from them. Further, as a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors described in paragraph 7 hereof.

PAR. 7. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships and firms who are engaged in the sale and distribution of various sales promotional plans for the stimulation of trade, and who do not engage in the practice of causing the merchants with whom they contract to make false representations relative to the value of their merchandise or to issue checks or credit vouchers for various stated amounts which are in fact of no monetary value in purchasing merchandise from such retail merchants, and who do not make, or cause to be made, any other false statements and representations in connection with the sale and distribution of their sales promotional plans or of the merchandise involved in the use thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before W. C. Reeves, Robert S. Hall and Arthur F. Thomas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein (respondent not having requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Twentieth Century Business Builders, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Edwin I. Gordon, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of a sales promotional plan designated in the trade as a "count the dot" or "count the block" plan, or any other sales promotional plan, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, that any sales promotional plan in which credit vouchers, checks, gifts, or any form of so-called prizes, are given to the entrants or contestants therein without regard to the relative correctness of the answers or solutions submitted by said entrants or contestants, is a contest.

2. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, that credit vouchers or checks, or any other form of prizes or gifts awarded in connection with such sales promotional plan, enable the recipients thereof to receive a "credit," "reduction" or other financial advantage in the purchase of merchandise when, in fact, said merchandise is offered for sale in the course of such sales promotional plan or so-called "contest" at a price in excess of the normal and customary price of said merchandise.

3. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, as "special" or "sale" prices of merchandise offered for sale in connection with said sales promotional plan, prices which are the same as or in excess of the regular and customary prices of said merchandise.

4. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, as the customary or regular prices or values of merchandise offered for sale in connection with the said sales promotional plan, prices or values which are in fact fictitious and in excess of the prices at which such merchandise is regularly and customarily offered for sale.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM W. CHAMBERS DOING BUSINESS AS THE GREATER CHAMBERS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3035. Complaint, Jan. 15, 1937—Decision, Apr. 3, 1939

Where an individual engaged in operating group of undertaking establishments and in selling and distributing line of caskets, vaults, accessories, and facilities usually connected with conduct of funerals and operation of such establishments, to purchasers in commerce among and between various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like and similar products in commerce among the various States and in said District; in advertising, through various circulars, folders, booklets, and newspapers and periodicals of national circulation, his complete funerals, caskets, vaults, accessories, and facilities—

(a) Represented that certain undertaking facilities and merchandise were furnished free, through such statements, among others, as "The many extra services rendered by Chambers are given without charge. • • •," "Complete funerals, cars and all, use of our buildings and chapels free," "• • • None of the extra services offered • • • are charged for • • •," etc., facts being he did not furnish any articles of merchandise or undertaking facilities free, but price thereof was included in that charged on purchase of a casket or other similar merchandise;

(b) Represented that prices charged by him were discounts or reductions from those ordinarily charged, through such statements among others, as "This $500.00 service by Chambers for only $265.00," and through representation that he furnished a $300 funeral for $165 and a $150 funeral for $75, and that such prices charged for complete funerals represented saving in discount to purchaser, facts being they did not represent such discount or reduction but his usual and customary prices; and

(c) Represented that burial vaults sold by him for $85 were of a value of $150, and were waterproof and airtight and would answer the purpose of a "$5,000.00 mausoleum" because of nature of their construction, facts being said vault was usually sold for sum of $85, was not waterproof and airtight, and would not answer all the purposes of a mausoleum;

With a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief induced by his advertising statements and representations, that number of purchasing public bought substantial quantities of his said products and trade was unfairly diverted to him from others likewise engaged in sale in commerce among the various States of complete funerals, caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities and who truthfully advertise their products and services:
Held, That such acts, representations and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

Mr. Leonard A. Block and Mr. Lucius Q. C. Lamar, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William W. Chambers, an individual doing business under the firm name and style of The Greater Chambers Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been and is using unfair methods in competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, William W. Chambers, an individual doing business under the firm name and style of The Greater Chambers Co., is an undertaker operating a group of undertaking establishments. His main office and principal place of business is located at 1400 Chapin Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., with branches located at 517 Eleventh Street, S.E., Washington, D. C., and 918 Cleveland Avenue, Hyattsville, in the State of Maryland. He is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in selling "complete funerals," which include among other things, caskets, vaults, and other facilities usually connected with the operation of a funeral home or undertaking establishment and in shipping said caskets, vaults, and the accessories pertaining thereto, or causing the same to be shipped, when sold from his several places of business to various places located in the District of Columbia, or the State of Maryland, or other States of the United States. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by the respondent in the aforesaid complete funerals, caskets, vaults, and other funeral accessories or facilities. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, corporations, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale of "complete funerals" including, among other things, caskets, vaults, and other facilities usually connected with the operation of a funeral home or undertaking establishment, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Many members of the purchasing public have a preference for purchasing merchandise including caskets, vaults, and undertaking facilities from establishments of large size, believing that in so doing they will obtain merchandise of superior quality at better prices than can be obtained elsewhere and that they will be dealing with establishments of recognized leadership in their field.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for a long time past, the respondent herein in soliciting the sale of and selling his complete funerals, including caskets, vaults, and other funeral accessories, in commerce as herein set out, makes use in his letterheads, circulars, catalogs, trade literature, and advertising matter of statements, among others, such as the following:

One of the largest undertakers in the world.
Forty assistants, twenty-five cars, seven chapels, fourteen parlors.

Said statements serve as representations on the part of the respondent to a substantial portion of the purchasing public that respondent is one of the largest undertakers in the world, and that in purchasing caskets, vaults, and other facilities from him the public will secure the advantages as to price, quality and service regularly and usually obtained by the public in dealing with establishments of large size.

In truth and in fact respondent is not one of the largest undertakers in the world and does not maintain 40 employees of all types, nor 40 employees of the type susceptible of classification as undertakers, assistant undertakers, or assistant funeral directors, or persons engaged in the preparation of the dead for burial, and does not own, operate, or maintain the number of cars, chapels, or parlors so represented.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for a long time past, the respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling his complete funerals including caskets, vaults, and other funeral accessories, makes use in his letterheads, circulars, catalogs, trade literature, and advertising matter of statements, among others, such as the following:

The many extra services rendered by Chambers are given without charge. Here are just a few of the uncharged-for services that remove much of the funeral responsibility from your shoulders:
Complaint

Attending to funeral notices in all local papers.
Skilled expert to arrange floral displays.
Beautiful Chambers funeral chapel at the disposal of the family.
Attendance to all funeral details.
Lady attendants to fix hair and attend to dressing of women and children.
Plastic surgery.
Securing death certificates and burial permits, etc.

The wooden box is furnished free by CHAMBERS when a vault is not purchased.
Complete funerals, cars and all, use of our buildings and chapels free.
The unstinted luxury, comfort and convenience of its parlors and chapels are free to you! None of the extra services offered by Chambers are charged for—you are allowed every privilege of the Chambers funeral home without any additional charge.
This $300.00 service by Chambers for only $265.00.
The same service as all Chambers services goes with a beautiful funeral complete for only $75.00.
How do you feel when you pay $300.00 for something you could have bought for $165.00—$135.00 saved.

In truth and in fact the aforesaid statements and representations of the respondent that the services, cars, hearses, and other funeral facilities which are furnished in connection with the sale of a casket, are free, or that he renders a $500 service in connection with every funeral or that customers at his establishment will save one-half of the usual price or one-half of the former price of a funeral, or that members of the public will receive a $500 funeral for $265 or a $300 funeral for $165, or through any similar comparison of value and cost that the public receives a higher priced funeral service than for which the public pays, are false and misleading. The respondent does not give free services or free extras in connection with the sale of his caskets, vaults, and funeral facilities but charges the full price therefor in the purported charge for the said caskets, facilities, and funeral services. The respondent does not sell his funeral services at half price, half the usual price, or half the old-time price therefor, and does not give a $500 funeral service for $265 or a $300 funeral for $165, but the said prices charged are respondent's usual and customary prices and the usual and customary market values of said caskets, vaults, facilities, and funeral services.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof and for a long time last past the respondent herein in soliciting the sale of and selling his complete funerals including caskets, vaults, and funeral accessories in commerce as herein set out, makes use in his letterheads, circulars, catalogs, trade literature, and advertising matter of statements, among others, such as the following:
The $85.00 steel vault. This air-sealed vault is a perfect symbol of security—made of 12-gauge copper-bearing steel—this vault is water-proof and air-tight—very reasonably priced.

World’s finest water-proof, air-tight, guaranteed steel burial vault may be had from Chambers for $85.00.

This steel vault—400 pounds of solid steel—always sold for $150.00 until Chambers reduced its price to $85.00.

Answering the purpose of a $5,000.00 mausoleum—400 pounds of solid steel burial vault, one of the best that’s made—only $85.00. For those who want the best, you will find this affords the finest burial vault you can obtain in metal protection.

The aforesaid statements serve as representations on the part of the respondent to purchasers and prospective purchasers that his steel vaults are airsealed, waterproof, and airtight; that the vault which he sells for $85 is worth $150; that the vault he sells for $85 answers the purpose of a $5,000 mausoleum and is the finest burial vault which can be obtained. In truth and in fact the aforesaid representations are false and misleading, as his burial vaults are not waterproof or airtight, and the vault which he sells for $85 does not now and has not heretofore sold for $150 and does not answer the purpose of a $5,000 mausoleum, and is not the finest burial vault which can be obtained.

Par. 6. There are among the competitors of the respondent, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, other individuals, firms, corporations, or partnerships who do sell complete funerals including vaults, caskets and funeral facilities or accessories in commerce, as herein set out, who do not misrepresent the relative size of their undertaking establishments, the number of their assistants, or the extent of their facilities, or make use of misrepresentations similar to those set forth in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 hereof, or who do not in any wise misrepresent the character, price, or extent of the commodities, services or facilities sold.

Par. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent in making the representations herein set forth are calculated to mislead and deceive, and have and have had the capacity, tendency and effect of misleading and deceiving, and have misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and into the purchase of the respondent’s caskets, vaults, and other facilities in reliance on said representations.

By means of the aforesaid false and misleading representations made to the purchasing public as above described, respondent has increased his own sales of said caskets, vaults, and funeral facilities, thereby lessening the market for similar caskets, vaults, and funeral facilities sold by other undertaking establishments who truthfully represent the price, nature, quality, or advantage of their products, or the extent of their facilities and their true size and character in the undertaking business.

As the result thereof, trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in the District of Columbia or in commerce as herein set out of similar caskets, vaults, and funeral facilities, who truthfully represent the true nature of their facilities, products and services, the true price thereof, or the true size of their business as undertakers. Further, as the result thereof, substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent to the purchasing public and to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent have been and are unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, under date of January 15, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, William W. Chambers, an individual doing business under the firm name and style of "The Greater Chambers Company," charging said respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of said act.

The respondent having entered his appearance by his attorneys, Leonard A. Block and Lucius Q. C. Lamar, filed his answer herein. The Commission is represented by James M. Hammond. Thereafter, hearings were had and evidence was thereupon introduced in support of the allegations of the complaint and on behalf of respondent before John J. Keenan, a trial examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, theretofore duly appointed. During the taking of testimony respondent entered into a stipulation of facts, which stipulation was incorporated in the record.

Thereafter this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer, evidence and stipulation, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, William W. Chambers, an individual, doing business under the firm name and style of The Greater Chambers Co., is an undertaker operating a group of undertaking establishments, with his main office and principal place of business at 1400 Chapin Street, NW., Washington, D. C., and with branch offices located at 517 Eleventh Street, SE., Washington, D. C., and 918 Cleveland Avenue, Hyattsville, Md.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than ten years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a line of caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities usually connected with the conduct of funerals and operation of a funeral home or undertaking establishment, to purchasers thereof in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, causing his products when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Maryland to purchasers in States of the United States other than the State of Maryland and from his establishments in the District of Columbia to purchasers in said District of Columbia and other States. Respondent maintains, and during the times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities connected with complete funerals sold and distributed by him in competition with other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent in the sale of his caskets, vaults, accessories, and facilities connected with complete funerals, and in inducing the public to purchase said vaults, caskets, accessories and facilities, has, by means of various advertising circulars, folders, booklets, advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines of national circulation throughout the United States, made statements and representations concerning the price, character and nature of said complete funerals, caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities, among which are the following:

The many extra services rendered by Chambers are given without charge. Here are just a few of the uncharged-for services that remove much of the funeral responsibility from your shoulders: Attending to funeral notices in all local papers; skilled expert to arrange floral display; beautiful Chambers funeral chapel at the disposal of the family; attendance to all funeral details; lady attendants to fix hair and attend to dressing of women and children; plastic surgery; securing death certificates and burial permits.

The wooden box is furnished free by CHAMBERS when a vault is not purchased.
Complete funerals, cars and all, use of our buildings and chapels free.

The unstinted luxury, comfort and convenience of its parlors and chapels are free to you! None of the extra services offered by Chambers are charged—you are allowed every privilege of the Chambers funeral home without any additional charge.

This $500.00 service by Chambers for only $265.00.

The same service as all Chambers services goes with a beautiful funeral complete for only $75.00.

How do you feel when you pay $300.00 for something you could have bought for $165.00—$135.00 saved.

Here is that $165.00 funeral I claim old-time undertakers sell for $300.00.

The $85.00 steel vault. This air-sealed vault is a perfect symbol of security—made of 12-gauge copper-bearing steel—this vault is water-proof and airtight—very reasonably priced.

World’s finest water-proof, airtight, guaranteed steel burial vault may be had from Chambers for $85.00.

This steel vault—400 pounds of solid steel—always sold for $150.00 until Chambers reduced its price to $85.00.

Answering the purpose of a $5,000.00 mausoleum—400 pounds of solid steel burial vault, one of the best that’s made—only $85.00. For those who want the best, you will find this affords the finest burial vault you can obtain in metal protection.

PAR. 4. By means of the foregoing and other and similar statements and representations which purport to be descriptive of respondent’s complete funerals, undertaking facilities, caskets, vaults, and other similar merchandise, the respondent represents that certain undertaking facilities and merchandise are furnished free, that the respondent furnishes a $500 funeral for $265, a $300 funeral for $165 and a regular $150 funeral for $75, and that the prices charged by the respondent for complete funerals represent a saving and discount to the purchaser. By this means also the respondent represents that the burial vaults sold by him for $85 are of a value of $150 and are waterproof and airtight and will serve the purposes of a mausoleum because of the nature of their construction.

In truth and in fact, the respondent does not furnish any articles of merchandise or undertaking facilities free, but the price thereof is included in the price charged on the purchase of a casket or other similar merchandise. The respondent does not furnish a $500 funeral for $265, a $300 funeral for $165 or a regular $150 funeral for $75, but in truth the prices charged by the respondent are the usual and customary prices generally charged for such complete funerals. The prices so charged by the respondent are not a discount or reduction from the prices ordinarily charged by the respondent, but represent respondent’s usual and customary prices. The steel burial vault sold by respondent is not of a value of $150, but is a vault which is usually and customarily sold for the sum of §85; said vault is not waterproof and airtight and will not answer all the purposes of a mausoleum.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the misleading and untrue statements and representations made by respondent in offering for sale and selling his complete funerals, caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities were, and are, calculated to and had and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by the advertising, statements and representations of respondent, as aforesaid, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale in commerce among and between the various states of the United States of complete funerals, caskets, vaults, accessories and facilities, who truthfully advertise their products and services.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the charges alleged in paragraph 3 of the complaint herein have not been sustained.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, representations and practices of the respondent, William W. Chambers, an individual, doing business under the firm name and style of The Greater Chambers Co., have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, William W. Chambers, individually and doing business under the name The Greater Chambers Co., or under any other trade name, his agents, employees, and representatives, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of caskets, vaults, or other undertaking facilities in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing as the customary or regular prices or values for funerals, caskets, vaults or other and similar merchandise, prices and values which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said funerals, caskets, vaults or similar merchandise are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business.

2. Representing that the price at which funerals, caskets, vaults or other and similar merchandise are offered for sale is a saving or discount to the purchaser when in fact said price is the usual and customary price at which the respondent sells said funerals, caskets, vaults or similar merchandise in the normal and usual course of business.

3. Using the term “free” or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate or describe articles of merchandise or undertaking facilities regularly included in a combination offer with caskets or other similar articles of merchandise.

4. Representing that the vaults or any other articles of merchandise of similar design and construction sold by the respondent are waterproof or airtight or will answer the purposes of a mausoleum when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That the charges set out in paragraph 3 of the complaint be, and the same hereby are, dismissed.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Idaho Candy Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Idaho, with its principal office and place of business located at 412 South Eighth Street, in the city of Boise, State of Idaho. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and various articles of novelty merchandise to wholesale dealers and jobbers and retail dealers located at points in the State of Idaho and in various other States of the United States. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in the city of Boise, State of Idaho, to purchasers thereof in Idaho and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy and other merchandise between and among the States of the United States. course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and in the sale and distribution of various articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers and retail dealers various packages or assortments of candy and other articles of novelty merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve, or which are designed to or may involve, the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof. Respondent assembles, sells and distributes various assortments, some of which contain candy only while others contain packages of candy, together with other articles of merchandise. All such assortments include a push card or a punchboard, and each assortment involves the use of the same method of chance for the distribution of the candy or other articles of merchandise to the consuming public by means of said push card or punchboard; for illustration:

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of bars of candy, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The said bars of candy are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push card in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and each purchaser is entitled to one push from said card. When a push is made from said card, a legend is disclosed. The card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain legends receive five bars of candy, that certain other legends receive four bars of candy, that certain other legends receive three bars of candy, that certain other legends receive two bars of candy, that certain other legends receive one bar of candy, and that the last sale from said assortment receives four bars of candy. The legends on said card are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular push separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one or more than one bar of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment is composed of a number of packages of candy and another article of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a "punchboard." The candy and the other article of merchandise are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and each purchaser is entitled to punch a concealed slip of paper bearing a printed number from said board. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board; but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain numbers receive specified packages of candy, that a certain other number or the last punch from said board receives the other article of merchandise, and that purchasers not qualifying by obtaining one of the specified numbers or by making the last purchase from the board receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from said board. The slips of paper bearing printed numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular punch or slip of paper separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the packages of candy or the other article of merchandise, or nothing other than the privilege of punching a number from said board, for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional bars of candy, packages of candy, or another article of merchandise. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and other articles of merchandise, and the sale of candy and other articles of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the said trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery schemes. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy and other articles of merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy and merchandise so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged, and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy and other articles of merchandise are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and other merchandise and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy and other articles of merchandise so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade and to tend to create a monopoly in said trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy and other articles of merchandise as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

Par. 6. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 15, 1937 issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Idaho Candy Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PAR. 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Idaho, with its principal office and place of business located at 412 South Eighth Street, in the city of Boise, State of Idaho. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and various articles of novelty merchandise to wholesale dealers and jobbers and retail dealers located at points in the State of Idaho and in various other States of the United States. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the city of Boise, State of Idaho, to purchasers thereof in Idaho and in other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy and other merchandise in commerce between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and in the sale and distribution of various articles of novelty merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers and retail dealers various packages or assortments of candy and other articles of novelty merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve, or which are designed to or may involve, the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof. Respondent assembles, sells and distributes various assortments, some of which contain candy only while others contain packages of candy, together with other articles of merchandise. All such assortments include a push card or a punchboard, and each assortment involves the use of the same method of chance for the distribution of the candy or other articles of merchandise to the consuming public by means of said push card or punchboard; for illustration:

(a) One of said assortments is composed of a number of bars of candy, together with a device commonly called a "push card." The said bars of candy are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push card in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and each purchaser is entitled to one push from said card. When a push is made from said card, a legend is disclosed. The card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain legends receive five bars of candy, that certain other legends receive four bars of candy, that certain other legends receive three bars of candy, that certain other legends receive two bars of candy, that certain other legends receive 1 bar of candy, and that the last sale from said assortment receives four bars of candy. The legends on said card are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular push separated from the card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one or more than one bar of candy for the price of 5 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

(b) Another assortment is composed of a number of packages of candy and another article of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a "punchboard." The candy and the other article of merchandise are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and each purchaser is entitled to punch a concealed slip of paper bearing a printed number from said board. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain numbers receive specified packages of candy, that a certain other number or the last punch from said board receives the other article of merchandise, and that purchasers not qualifying by obtaining one of the specified numbers or by making the last purchase from the board receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from said board. The slips of paper bearing printed numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular punch or slip of paper separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the packages of candy or the other article of merchandise, or nothing other than the privilege of punching a number from said board, for the price of 5 cents, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell said assortments to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans have the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said products in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy and other articles of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional bars of candy, packages of candy, or another article of merchandise. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and other articles of merchandise, and the sale of candy and other articles of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the said trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same methods or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent or similar elements of chance or lottery schemes. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy and other articles of merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy and other merchandise so packed and assembled as above found, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy and other articles of merchandise are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and other merchandise and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase substantial quantities of said candy and other articles of merchandise.
so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy and other articles of merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade and to create a monopoly in said trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy and other articles of merchandise as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondent as hereinabove found are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission, upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Idaho Candy Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy and other merchandise are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy or other merchandise, which assortments are to be used or may be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of said candy or other merchandise contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy or other merchandise together with push cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which push cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of dealers a lottery device either with assortments of candy or other merchandise, or separately, which lottery device is to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

HIRAM E. BARBER DOING BUSINESS AS MOTOR EQUIPMENT SPECIALTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution of two devices for use in connection with automobile work, namely, the “Mesco Fender Roller” and the “Universal Wheel Check,” to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of other devices intended and sold for similar usage; in advertising in various periodicals and newspapers circulating throughout the various States for salesmen to engage in distribution of said devices, and in letters and circulars sent through the mails to prospective agents and salesmen purchasing for resale, and to those purchasing for use—

(a) Made such statements, with respect to purported earnings or profits of salesmen of said devices, as “Up to $250 weekly profits made with amazing new ‘Mesco’ fender tools,” “Salesmen wanted—$250 weekly profit made selling special tool set to garages,” “Every garage needs one so you see $250 per week isn’t unreasonable. Really it is only a good week,” and made, among others, such statements as “Hewett made $84.50 in one day,” etc., “Felton averaged better than $150 weekly all summer long—Barber cleared $1,100 in seven weeks—We will show you how to do as well,” and “Dealers can just coin money”;

Facts being successful demonstration is necessary in practically all cases to effect sales of said roller, and it is necessary to acquire considerable skill, which may be had only by actual practice and experience, in order to give such demonstration, those who do not acquire ability to operate roller so as to obtain successful and satisfactory results essential to success of a salesman cannot reasonably be expected to approach aforesaid earnings, many purchasers, without personal demonstration, have been unable to operate roller satisfactorily, notwithstanding written instructions, any earnings of $250 a week were made by persons who had acquired sufficient skill to be able to demonstrate roller successfully, and even they had not earned at said rate consistently in ordinary course of business under normal conditions, stated earnings for specific periods of individuals named, who included owner and seller herein and all of whom were sufficiently skilled to give satisfactory demonstration, were not representative of their earnings over long periods, and none of salesmen obtained as result of said individual’s advertising having earnings even approaching those of individuals mentioned;

(b) Made such statements, with respect to efficacy of said roller and ease with which proficiency in use thereof might be acquired, and with respect to merchantability of said articles, as “Actually lifts dents out of fender and makes them perfectly smooth without hammering, grinding or filing,” “Does not mar paint or varnish,” “Saves the long practice required with other tools,” “Badly needed by every garage and shop,” and “No competition.
Facts being that, while said roller will, if capably operated, remove many dents, it will not remove all, additional work, in some cases, must be done either prior to or following use of roller, in order to obtain desired smoothness, operation cannot, in all cases, be carried on without marring paint or varnish, dependent upon number of factors including skill of operator, etc., proficiency in use cannot be acquired without certain amount of practice, and articles in question are in fact competitive, affecting salability of roller, and garage or shop owner's need thereof is reflected by present equipment and prospective purchaser's opinion as to relative merits of that and article in question; and

(c) Made such statements, with respect to terms and conditions of sale, as "If you can't sell them we will sell them for you or refund your money";

Facts being he did not refund to customers purchase price for such devices upon being advised of customer's inability to sell same, but required customers demanding such refund, and notwithstanding nondisclosure of such a requirement in his aforesaid advertising matter, to furnish lists of those to whom devices had been offered and reasons given for their refusal to purchase;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations were true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of his devices because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and with result that trade in commerce was thereby diverted unfairly to him from competitors engaged in sale and distribution of devices designed and intended for similar use:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hiram E. Barber, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Motor Equipment Specialty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Hiram E. Barber, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Motor Equipment Specialty Co., with his office and principal place of business at Beaver City, in the State of Nebraska. The respondent is now, and for more than one year past, has been, engaged in the manufacture and sale of various articles known generally as Automotive Specialties and particularly two devices known as the "Mesco Fender Roller" and the "Universal Wheel Chock," the former for use in the removal of dents from automobile fenders and the latter for use in determining the correctness of the alignment of automobile wheels. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent causes said devices, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Nebraska to the prospective purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Nebraska and respondent maintains, and has at all times herein referred to maintained, a course of trade in said devices in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of other devices designed, intended, and sold for similar usage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said devices by salesmen purchasing for resale and by others, the respondent has advertised for salesmen to engage in the distribution of his devices in newspapers, magazines and other periodicals having a large interstate circulation particularly among prospective agents and salesmen for devices of this character. Among, and typical of, the advertisements so used by the respondent are the following:

Par. 4. For the purposes aforesaid, the respondent has caused letters and circulars relative to the purported profits or earnings of salesmen of said devices, to the terms and conditions upon which said devices might be purchased, and to the character, utility and merit of said devices, to be sent through the United States mails and otherwise to prospective agents and salesmen purchasing for resale and to others purchasing for use. Among, and typical of, the statements so made as to the purported earnings or profits of salesmen of said devices are the following:

Every garage needs one, so you see $250 per week isn't unreasonable. Really it is only a good week.

Jewett, who had never sold a lick, went out for about two and a half months, took his family—came back with over $1000 clear.

D. F. Felton—said “Even $450 per month straight wouldn't tempt me in the least.” He made as high as $300 clear profit in a single week.

The profits our boys make don’t look reasonable and I hesitate to mention them.

D. F. F. made $90 clear in about six hours on his first trip.

Dealers can just coin money.

You have, as soon as these tools reach you, the makings of $250 per week salary.

Among, and typical of, the statements so made by the respondent as to the purported terms and conditions upon which purchases of said devices might be made are the following:

If you can't sell them, we will sell them for you or refund your money.

Your sample outfit, the roller and check, cost you only $12.50 if remittance accompanies order—Enclose one-third of amount of order if you wish it shipped C. O. D.

Among, and typical of, the statements so made by the respondent as to the character, utility and merit of said devices are the following:

It is new but we have not a single dissatisfied customer to our knowledge.

I have seen and used all kinds of fender rollers and I never saw a roller work as nice as that roller does.

We have had our roller for 3 weeks and sure like it fine.

This is the only wheel gauge I ever saw that tells us what we want to know. It is quick, accurate and not too expensive.

Par. 5. Through use of the aforesaid statements appearing in his advertising literature, and through other statements of similar import and meaning, the respondent represents (1) that said fender roller device will make dented fenders smooth without hammering, grinding or filing or without marring the paint or varnish; (2) that said devices can be successfully operated without long experience; (3) that large profits amounting to approximately $250 per week could be earned by ordinary salesmen and distributors of said devices under normal and usual conditions; (4) that respondent would sell the devices for purchasers or refund the purchase price thereof in the event said salesmen and distributors could not sell such devices; (5) that there is in fact no substantial competition between respondent’s devices and other devices designed and intended for similar usage; and (6) that said devices possess such utility and merit as to render them readily salable to all garages.

Par. 6. The aforesaid representations so made and disseminated by the respondent in the course of his aforesaid business are misleading, deceptive, and false. In truth and in fact, the use of said fender roller device does not in all cases make dented fenders smooth without hammering, grinding or filing and will not generally perform a smooth operation on fenders without marring the paint or varnish. Respondent’s devices cannot be successfully used except by those who have devoted a substantial amount of time to practice therewith. Large profits amounting to approximately $250 per week have not been and cannot be earned by ordinary salesmen and distributors under normal and customary business conditions. In the few instances, if any, in which profits approximating said sum were earned, there were special and unusual circumstances in connection therewith which were not revealed to prospective purchasers purchasing for resale. Ordinary salesmen and distributors under normal and usual conditions of business cannot earn profits in any amount closely approximating the sums represented. Respondent does not customarily refund the purchase price of said devices or sell said devices for purchasers in instances wherein the purchasers have been unable to sell such devices themselves. There is in fact substantial competition between respondent’s devices and other devices intended for similar uses. Respondent’s said devices do not generally possess the degree of utility and merit represented and can be successfully operated only after long practice and experience with said devices.

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said devices in commerce as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive prospective purchasers of such devices into the false and erroneous beliefs that said representations are true and into the purchase of respondent’s said devices in and on account of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs so induced by respondent’s representations. As a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in selling similar devices or other devices designed and intended for similar usage who do not misrepresent the amount of profits that can be earned through selling said devices or otherwise misrepresent the nature, utility and merit of their respective devices. In consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices hereinabove alleged on the part of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and to the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 30, 1938, issued, and on October 3, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Hiram E. Barber, trading and doing business as Motor Equipment Specialty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 7, 1938, the respondent filed his answer in this proceeding. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Hiram E. Barber, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Motor Equipment Spe-specialty Co. His office and principal place of business is at Beaver City, Nebr. The respondent is, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of two devices known as the “Mesco Fender Roller” and the “Universal Wheel Check.” The former is used in the removal of dents from automobile fenders and the latter in determining the correctness of the alignment of automobile wheels. Respondent causes said devices, when sold, to be transported from the State of Nebraska to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than in the State of Nebraska. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said devices among and between various States of the United States.

During this period the respondent has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of other devices intended and sold for similar usage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In connection with the sale of its devices, the respondent has advertised in various periodicals and newspapers having a circulation through the various States of the United States for salesmen to engage in the distribution of these devices, and has also caused letters and circulars to be sent through the United States mails between and among various States of the United States to prospective agents and salesmen purchasing for resale and to others purchasing for use.

In the manner and by the means aforesaid the respondent has made statements and representations relating to (1) purported earnings or profits of salesmen of the devices; (2) the efficacy of the fender roller; (3) the ease with which proficiency in the use of the fender roller may be acquired; (4) the merchantability of the articles, and (5) the terms and conditions of sale by respondent. The statements and representations by respondent, disseminated as aforesaid, are hereinafter set forth.

Par. 3. With respect to the purported earnings or profits of salesmen, the following representations were made by respondent:

Up to $250 weekly profits made with amazing new “Mesco” fender tools.
Hewett made $84.50 in one day selling “Mesco” fender tools—Felton averaged better than $150 weekly all summer long—Barber cleared $1100 in seven weeks—We will show you how to do as well.
Salesmen wanted—$250 weekly profit made selling special tool set to garages.
Salesmen—$84.50 profit in one day by Hewett. $1100 in seven weeks by Barber. Over $200 per week all summer by Felton.
Every garage needs one so you see $250 per week isn't unreasonable. Really it is only a good week.

Jewett, who never sold a lick, went out for about 2½ months, took his family—came back with over $1000 clear.

D. F. Felton said—"Even $450 per month straight wouldn't tempt me in the least." He made as high as $300 clear profit in a single week.

The profits our boys made don't look reasonable and I hesitate to mention them.

D. F. F. made $90 clear in about 6 hours on his first trip.

Dealers can just coin money.

A successful demonstration is necessary in practically all cases to effect sales of respondent's fender roller and it is necessary to acquire considerable skill in order to give a successful demonstration, which skill can be acquired only by actual practice and experience. Ability to operate the roller so as to obtain successful and satisfactory results is essential to success as a salesman and those who do not acquire such ability cannot reasonably be expected to approach the aforesaid represented earnings. Without personal demonstration, many purchasers have been unable to operate the roller satisfactorily although respondent furnishes to such purchaser-salesmen written instructions for the operation of the device. Any earnings of $250 per week which may have been made by those selling the device have been made by persons who have acquired sufficient skill in the operation of the roller to be able to demonstrate it successfully, but even such persons have not earned at that rate consistently in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions or circumstances.

The earnings of the various individuals mentioned above were made prior to 1935. Those attributed to one individual were made in 1929 while selling for $12.50 a single article that cost him $3, whereas the dealers now sell four articles which cost them $10.75 and have a recommended resale price of $36. Two of the individuals mentioned above are not now engaged in the sale of the device. "Barber," who is stated to have earned $1,100 in 7 weeks, is the respondent and is extremely proficient in the use of the fender roller of which he is the designer and manufacturer.

The stated earnings for specific periods of the individuals named are not representative of consistent earnings by these persons over long periods. All of them were sufficiently skilled in the operation of the fender roller to give a satisfactory demonstration.

None of the respondent's salesmen obtained as a result of his advertising have had earnings even approaching those of the individuals mentioned in respondent's advertisements and circulars.

Par. 4. With respect to the efficacy of the fender roller, the following representations were made:
Actually lifts dents out of fenders and makes them perfectly smooth without hammering, grinding or filing.

Does not mar paint or varnish.

The fender roller will, if capably operated, remove many dents. It will not, however, since dents may be so located as to be inaccessible to the device, remove all dents from all types of fenders. In some cases work must be done either prior to or after the use of the roller in order to obtain the desired smoothness. The operation cannot in all cases be carried on without marring the paint or varnish. Whether or not such marring occurs depends upon a number of factors which include the skill of the operator, the severity of the dent, the condition of the paint or varnish, and the extent to which it was damaged.

Par. 5. With respect to the ease with which proficiency in the use of the fender roller may be acquired the following representation was made:

Saves the long practice required with other tools.

Proficiency in the use of the roller cannot be acquired without a certain amount of practice.

Par. 6. With respect to the merchantability of the devices the following representations were made:

Privately needed by every garage and shop.

No competition.

Every garage needs one.

The articles are competitive. The existence of this competition affects the saleability of the fender roller, and whether or not it is needed by a garage or shop will depend upon its present equipment and the opinion of the purchaser as to the relative merits of this equipment and the respondent's article.

Par. 7. With respect to the conditions upon which purchases of the devices might be made the following representation was made:

If you can't sell them we will sell them for you or refund your money.

Respondent does not refund to his customers the purchase price for such devices upon being advised of the customer's inability to sell the same. When demands for such refunds are made, respondent requires the customers, demanding such refund, to furnish lists of those to whom the devices have been offered for sale by such customers and the reasons given for their refusal to purchase. Respondent does not disclose such requirement to prospective purchasers of his devices in the advertising matter disseminated as aforesaid.

Par. 8. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the said statements and representations are true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondent’s devices because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof trade in commerce among and between various States of the United States has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors engaged in the business of selling and distributing devices designed and intended for similar usage.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provide, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hiram E. Barber, individually and trading as Motor Equipment Specialty Co., or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of certain devices now designated as the “Mesco Fender Roller” and “Universal Wheel Check,” or any other devices of substantially similar construction or design, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing any specified sum of money as possible earnings or profits of agents, salesmen, representatives, or distributors for any given period of time which is not a true representation of the average net earnings or profits consistently made by respondent’s active, full time agents, salesmen, representatives, or distributors in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.
2. Representing any specified sum of money as earnings or profits of any specified agent, salesman, representative or distributor for any given period of time which has not in fact been consistently earned net by such agent, salesman or distributor in the ordinary course of business and under normal business conditions.

3. Representing that the use of such fender roller will remove all dents from all fenders, or will in all cases remove dents from fenders without the necessity of hammering, grinding, filing, or performing other work on the fender, or will in all cases remove dents from fenders without causing damage to the finish of the fender.

4. Representing that such fender roller can be operated adequately or successfully without practice in the operation thereof.

5. Representing that there is no competition in connection with the sale of such devices with other devices designed and intended for similar usage or that such devices are needed by every garage or shop.

6. Representing that respondent will refund the purchase price for such devices to his customers who are unable to resell the same unless and until such is the fact and unless all the terms and conditions of such offer of refund are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection therewith.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF ARONSON-CAPLIN COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3649. Complaint, Nov. 9, 1938—Decision, Apr. 3, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of women's lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, to retailers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such products and garments made of silk, rayon, and other fabrics, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent the nature, character or quality of their merchandise or materials of which made, and do not make any other false statements in connection with sale and distribution thereof—

Represented, through use of such terms as "satin," "taffeta," and "pure dye," and such phrases as, "Taffeta De Luxe 100 percent pure dye, finest tested acetate yarns," on statements purportedly describing material of which its said merchandise was made in catalogs or price lists distributed among prospective purchasers, and on labels attached to articles in question, that said merchandise was made of silk, product of cocoons of silkworm;

Notwithstanding fact said products were not made of silk as aforesaid, as long associated in mind of purchasing public and retailers, were understood and believed to be used only to describe merchandise made of silk, and word "acetate," used either separately or in conjunction with words "satin," "taffeta," or "pure dye," and other words and phrases of similar import or meaning, not sufficiently well known and understood by purchasing public to indicate to or inform them that merchandise thus described was made in whole or in part of material other than silk, and of rayon, was, on contrary, in and as incorporated in such designations, understood by substantial portion of such public to describe silken fabrics and merchandise or products of silk, long held in great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities and preferred by substantial number of members of such public in purchase of lingerie, including slips and nightgowns;

With result of placing, through such labeling on its said articles, distributed as aforesaid, in hands of retailers instrumentality which might be used by them to divert trade unfairly from its competitors who truthfully mark and brand their merchandise, and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements were true, and that its said products were made of silk, product of cocoon of silkworm, and of causing substantial portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its said goods, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to it from its competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise, brand and mark their products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.
Mr. Milton N. Mound, of New York City, for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Aronson-Caplin Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Par. 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than three years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing women’s lingerie including slips and nightgowns. Respondent sells said merchandise to retail dealers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said merchandise, when sold by it, to be transported from its said factory in the State of Pennsylvania to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing women’s lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, made of silk, rayon, and other fabrics. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent the nature, character, or quality of their merchandise or of the materials of which such merchandise is made and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said merchandise, respondent has caused false advertisements containing statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of the material of which such merchandise is made to be inserted in catalogs or price lists distributed among prospective purchasers of said merchandise situated in various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and has caused false statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of the material of which such merchandise is made to be placed on labels attached to said articles of merchandise. Among and typical of the statements and representations used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Made of Satin La Rue.
Made of New Satin La Rue 100% Pure Dye.
Seamprufe made of Taffeta De Luxe 100% pure dye, finest tested acetate yarns.
Crepe La Rue.

Par. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's merchandise and of the material of which such merchandise is made, respondent has represented directly and by implication that such merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk fiber has been woven for many years into a variety of fabrics which are designated or referred to as "satin," "crepe," "taffeta," or "pure dye." Such terms have been for many years, and are now, associated in the mind of the purchasing public with the product of the cocoon of the silkworm commonly known to retail dealers and the purchasing public as "silk." It is the understanding and belief of a substantial portion of the purchasing public and retail dealers that such terms are used only to describe merchandise made of silk. The word "acetate," when used either separately or in combination or in conjunction with the words "crepe," "satin," "taffeta," or "pure dye" and with other words and phrases of similar import or meaning, is not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing public to indicate to or inform them that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk, to wit: rayon; but, on the contrary, such designations are understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to describe silken fabrics and merchandise made of silk.

Par. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are misleading and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, the said merchandise of the respondent is made in whole or in part of rayon.
Findings

Par. 7. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and now has, in the minds of the purchasing public and retail dealers, a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products have had for many years, and now have, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. A substantial number of the members of the purchasing public have had, and now have, a preference in purchasing lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, for lingerie made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

Par. 8. The dissemination by the respondent of the aforesaid false statements and representations by placing such statements and representations on labels on the said articles of merchandise which the respondent distributes to retail dealers, places in the hands of such retail dealers an instrumentality which may be used by such retail dealers to divert trade unfairly from the competitors of respondent in said commerce who truthfully mark or brand their merchandise.

Par. 9. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated, as aforesaid, with respect to said merchandise, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said merchandise. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise, brand, and mark their merchandise. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 9, 1938 issued, and on November 10, 1938 served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Aronson-Caplin Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Respondent filed its answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except respondent denied that it misrepresented the fiber content of "Crepe La Rue" as set forth in the complaint, and alleged in its answer that the said "Crepe La Rue" is in fact made of silk. Respondent, in its answer, waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Aronson-Caplin Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and has its office and principal place of business at 148 Madison Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York and its factory in the city of Easton, State of Pennsylvania.

Par. 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than three years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing women's lingerie including slips and nightgowns. Respondent sells said merchandise to retail dealers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said merchandise, when sold by it, to be transported from its said factory in the State of Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing women's lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, made of silk, rayon and other fabrics. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent the nature, character, or quality of their merchandise or of the materials of which such merchandise is made, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said merchandise, respondent has caused false advertisements containing statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of the material of which such merchandise is made to be inserted in catalogs or price lists distributed among prospective purchasers of said merchandise situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has caused false statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of the material of which such merchandise is made to be placed on labels attached to said articles of merchandise. Among and typical of the statements and representations used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Made of Satin La Rue.
Made of New Satin La Rue 100% Pure Dye.
Seamprufe made of Taffeta De Luxe 100% pure dye, finest tested acetate yarns.

Par. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent’s merchandise and of the material of which such merchandise is made, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that such merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk fiber has been woven for many years into a variety of fabrics which are designated or referred to as “satin,” “taffeta,” or “pure dye.” Such terms have been for many years and are now associated in the mind of the purchasing public with the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known to retail dealers and the purchasing public as “silk.” It is the understanding and belief of a substantial portion of the purchasing public and retail dealers that such terms are used only to describe merchandise made of silk. The word “acetate,” when used either separately or in conjunction with the words “satin,” “taffeta,” or “pure dye” and with other words and phrases of similar import or meaning, is not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing public to indicate to or inform them that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk, to wit: rayon; but on the contrary, such designations are understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to describe silken fabrics and merchandise made of silk.

Par. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are misleading and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, the said merchandise of the respondent is made in whole or in part of rayon.

PAR. 7. The word "silk," for many years last past, has had, and now has, in the mind of the purchasing public and retail dealers, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products have had for many years, and now have, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities, and a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public have had and now have a preference in purchasing lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, for lingerie made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

PAR. 8. The dissemination by the respondent of the aforesaid false statements and representations by placing such statements and representations on labels on the said articles of merchandise which the respondent distributes to retail dealers, places in the hands of such retail dealers an instrumentality which may be used by such retail dealers to divert trade unfairly from the competitors of respondent in said commerce who truthfully mark or brand their merchandise.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said merchandise, has had and now has a capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and that respondent's said merchandise is made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said merchandise. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise, brand and mark their merchandise. In consequence thereof injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint except that it denies that its fabric "Crepe La Rue" is made of any product other than silk, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Aronson-Caplin Co., Inc., and its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of women's lingerie, including slips and nightgowns, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "pure dye" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe or designate any fibers or fabrics or other products which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

2. Using the words "satin" or "taffeta" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, unless said descriptive word or words are used truthfully to designate the type of weave, construction, or finish, in which case such word or words shall be qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words clearly and accurately naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said fabric or product is made.

3. Using the word "acetate" or any other name as indicative of any process of manufacturing rayon, to describe or designate any fabrics, garments, or other products made from rayon unless the word rayon is used in immediate conjunction with such word or name in type of equal size and conspicuousness.

This order shall not be construed as permitting the advertising or offering for sale of fabrics, garments, or other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without disclosing the rayon content of such products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MUELLER COMPANY, A. Y. McDONALD MANUFACTURING COMPANY, HAYS MANUFACTURING COMPANY, FAR-NAN BRASS WORKS COMPANY, AND KITSON COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where five corporations engaged in manufacture and sale of corporation stops and curb stops, principal purchasers of which fittings for water works and gas systems were municipalities and owners of public utilities, who, because of substantial quantity used, bought said products through invitation for bids, for selection therefrom of member of industry for particular purchase, and constituting substantially all the manufacturers of such products and, prior to adoption of practices below set out, in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the industry, and which, but for said practices, would still have been in such active substantial competition; with intent of fixing and maintaining prices, suppressing price competition, restraining interstate trade, and eliminating competition between themselves, and suppressing competition and monopolizing said trade—

Entered into and engaged in, and carried out, a wrongful and unlawful agreement, combination, and conspiracy to maintain prices, suppress price competition, eliminate competition between themselves and restrain interstate trade and drive out competitors and monopolize trade aforesaid; and, in pursuance of said understanding, etc., and to carry out the same—

(1) Agreed to fix and maintain, and did fix and maintain, prices at which said products were sold, and uniform terms and conditions covering sale thereof;

(2) Agreed to submit, and did submit, in response to requests for bids, uniform and identical bids on such products; and

(3) Used coercive measures to compel jobbers to maintain the prices thereon;

With result that the capacity, tendency and effect of such agreement, combination, etc., and their said acts and practices done thereunder and pursuant thereto, were to monopolize in themselves business of manufacture and sale of such products, and unreasonably to lessen, eliminate and restrain, and hamper and suppress competition in sale thereof in interstate commerce, and deprive purchasing public of advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said industry, and otherwise to operate as a restraint of trade and detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in trade in question, and to obstruct natural flow of trade into channels of commerce:
Held, That such acts and practices, and each of them, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Floyd O. Collins for the Commission.

IN THE MATTER OF

ALLEN B. WRISLEY COMPANY, ALLEN B. WRISLEY DISTRIBUTING COMPANY, ALSO TRADING AS REGAL SOAP COMPANY, AND KARL MAYER, GEORGE A. WRISLEY AND WRISLEY B. OLESON, TRADING AS KARL MAYER & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 6 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3021. Complaint, Dec. 24, 1936—Decision, Apr. 6, 1939

Where a corporation, its subsidiary, and three individuals, partners, and officers and employees of said corporations, engaged, as case might be, in manufacture, offer, and sale of many kinds of soaps, and in branding, stamping, or imprinting on certain of their said soaps certain brands, and in labeling, wrapping, and packaging product in question and distributing same, and in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture and sale of genuine olive oil soaps in commerce among the various States, and also with those thus engaged in manufacture and sale of soap, oil content of which is not wholly olive oil—

Made use of words "Oliv-ilo," "Olive Oil," "Olive," and "Oliv," in names, brands, designations, and descriptions of certain of their said soaps, through such names and designations as "Wrisley's Oliv-iló pronounced Oliv-eye-ilo," "ROYAL OLIVE OIL Pure Allen B. Wrisley Co., Chicago," "PURITO OLIVE OIL CASTILE," "PALM and OLIVE SOAP," etc., facts being six of the seven brands thus involved and designated contained from 5 to 15 percent of olive oil or olive oil fats only, and its "Del Gloria Castile, Spanish Process" contained, for a time, 36 percent of said product and thereafter approximately 51 percent, and none of said soaps were genuine olive oil soap, as understood and preferentially bought and used by substantial number of consuming public as soap containing as fatty ingredient, to exclusion of all other oils or fats, the more costly olive oil, and considered by manufacturers, dealers, and public generally, by reason of qualities of said oil, as high-quality soap free from substances harmful to skin or delicate fabrics and possessing desirable qualities not obtained in other soaps, and as such preferentially purchased and used for many purposes by substantial portion of purchasing and consuming public, and long considered by medical profession as having qualities requisite and desirable for use in the bathing of infants and sick and ailing, and in medicinal preparations, and prescribed and recommended by it for such purposes;

With result that they were enabled to and did sell their soaps at prices substantially less than those at which competitors who imported or manufactured and sold genuine olive oil soaps, with their more costly olive oil ingredient, could and did sell their products, and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of trade and purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of their said soaps by reason of such belief, and of thereby diverting unfairly trade to themselves from competitor manufacturers and distributors of genuine olive oil soap and competitor manufacturers and distributors of soap, oil content of which is not wholly olive, and who truthfully advertise, sell, and distribute their said products among the various States; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts, practices, and methods were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.
Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.
Mr. Frank W. Sullivan of Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Allen B.
Wrisley Co., a corporation, Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., a corporation, also trading under the name Regal Soap Co.; and Karl Mayer, George A. Wrisley, and Wrisley B. Oleson, copartners, trading as Karl Mayer & Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are now using unfair methods of competition in Commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said Act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Allen B. Wrisley Co., is a corporation, organized in 1895, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal office and place of business at 6801 West Sixty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., is a corporation, organized in 1933, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 6801 West Sixty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill. It is an affiliate and sales agent of the Allen B. Wrisley Co. Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. also trades under the name Regal Soap Company.
Respondent Wrisley B. Oleson is president and respondent George A.
Wrisley is vice president and general manager of both companies.

Respondents, Karl Mayer, Wrisley B. Oleson, and George A. Wrisley, are copartners, trading as Karl Mayer & Co. The place of business of said partnership is located in the Merchandise Mart Building, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, Karl Mayer, originally owned and operated Karl Mayer & Co. In 1932, the respondents, Wrisley B. Oleson and George A. Wrisley became associated with the said Karl Mayer in his business. The policies and practices of the respondents are controlled and directed by the respondent Allen B. Wrisley Co.

Respondent, Allen B. Wrisley, Co., is engaged in the business of manufacturing soap and all of said respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of soap to the purchasing and consuming public located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now cause, and for several years last past have caused, their soap, when sold by them, to be shipped from their respective places of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof, located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a constant current of trade in commerce by the respondents, in soap, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents are, and for several years last past have been, in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals, engaged in the manufacture and sale of genuine olive oil soap in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia; and respondents are, and for several years last past have been in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals, engaged in the manufacture and sale of soap the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 thereof, respondents offer for sale and sell many kinds of soap some of which are branded, labeled, and otherwise advertised and represented as olive oil soap. Among the brands and labels so used by the respondents are:

WRISLEY'S
- Oliv-oil
- pronounced
- Oliv-eye-oil

PURITO OLIVE OIL CASTILE
- Wrisley's
- OLIV-SKIN
- pure
- Toilet
- Soap

ROYALE
- OLIVE OIL
- PURE

Allen B. Wrisley Co., Chicago

PALM and OLIVE SOAP
Regal Soap Co.

Palm and Olive Oil Soap

In truth and in fact the oil or fat ingredient of said soap so labeled and branded is not wholly olive oil.
Complaint

Par. 3. Genuine olive oil soap is one the oil ingredient of which always has been and now is olive oil to the exclusion of all other oils and fats. Said soap has for many years been sold to and used by the purchasing public throughout the United States. Because of the qualities of olive oil as a soap material, said soap has long been and now is considered by manufacturers of and dealers in soap, and by the public generally, as a high-quality soap, free from substances harmful to the human skin or delicate fabrics; and possessing desirable qualities not contained in other soaps. For many purposes, a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public prefers to purchase and use soap, the oil content of which is wholly olive oil. Said olive oil soap has long been and is now considered by the medical profession to have the qualities requisite and desirable for bathing infants, sick and ailing persons, and is used in medicinal preparations. Said soap has long been and now is prescribed and recommended by the medical profession for said purposes.

Par. 4.—Genuine olive oil soap is more costly to manufacture than respondents' said soaps for the reason that olive oil is uniformly substantially higher in price than the oils and fats used by respondents as substitutes therefor. By reason of that fact, respondents are enabled to and do sell their soaps at prices substantially less than respondents' competitors who import, or manufacture, and sell genuine olive oil soap, can and do sell the same. Respondents' aforesaid practices have the capacity and tendency to cause and do cause the trade and public to purchase respondents' said soaps as and for genuine olive oil soap in preference to the more costly genuine olive oil soap sold by said competitors referred to in paragraph 1 hereof.

Par. 5. The use by respondents of the representations set forth herein has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the trade and purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said soap on account of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of genuine olive oil soap and manufacturers and distributors of soaps, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, who truthfully advertise, sell, and distribute their soaps among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By use of the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, thereby substantial injury is being, and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce as herein set out.
The above alleged acts, practices, and methods of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 24, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Allen B. Wrisley Co., a corporation, Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., a corporation, also trading under the name Regal Soap Co., Karl Mayer, George A. Wrisley, and Wrisley B. Oleson, copartners trading as Karl Mayer & Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Frank V. Sullivan, attorney for the respondents before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondents, Allen B. Wrisley Co. and Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois with their principal place of business at 6801 West Sixty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill., and respondent Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. is a subsidiary of the respondent Allen B. Wrisley Co. Wrisley B. Oleson is president of both respondent corporations, and George A. Wrisley is vice president and general manager of both corporations. Karl Mayer is employed as a salesman by the Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co.
Findings

Respondents George A. Wrisley, Karl Mayer, and Wrisley B. Oleson are partners doing business under the firm name and style of Karl Mayer & Co., in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Allen B. Wrisley Co. is engaged in the manufacture and sale of soap, certain brands being sold through the medium of its subsidiary, respondent Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. All branding, stamping, or imprinting on the soap is done by the Allen B. Wrisley Co., and all labeling, wrapping, and packaging of the soap is done by the respondent Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. The Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co. sells to respondent Karl Mayer & Co. a soap labeled "Del Gloria Castile."

Par. 2. Upon receipt of orders, respondents Allen B. Wrisley Co. and Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., Karl Mayer, George A. Wrisley, and Wrisley B. Oleson ship their stamped, branded, and labeled products from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., to customers located in the States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business in commerce, respondents are, and for several years last past have been, in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the manufacture and sale of genuine olive oil soap in commerce between and among the various States of the United States; and respondents are, and for several years last past have been, in substantial competition with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the manufacture and sale of soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their businesses as set forth above, respondents offer for sale and sell many kinds of soap, some of which is not wholly olive oil, in commerce between and among the named as olive oil soaps. Among the brands and labels so used by the respondents are:

Palm and Olive Oil Soap

"Oliv-Palm Complexion Soap", having branded on the back thereof, "Contains olive, palm and coconut oils, best for the skin, hair, and baby."

Del Gloria Castile, Spanish Process, made with pure olive oil, for nursery, toilet, bath, shampoo, Karl Mayer & Company, Chicago, U. S. A.

PAR. 5. The testimony shows and the Commission finds the oil or fat ingredient of said soaps so labeled and branded as set forth in paragraph 4 is not wholly olive oil but each has an olive oil content as follows:

(a) Wrisley's Oliv-ilo Toilet Soap contains 5 to 15 percent of olive oil or olive oil foots.

(b) Purito Olive Oil Castile, which is also labeled, "Purito Baby Castile Soap, pure and mild, for nursery and clinic. Allen B. Wrisley Company," contains 5 to 15 percent denatured olive oil.

(c) Oliv-Palm Complexion Soap, having branded on the back thereof, "Contains olive, palm, and coconut oils, best for the skin, hair, and baby," contains 5 to 15 percent olive oil foots.

(d) Palm and olive oil soap, having branded on the back thereof, "for the complexion, scalp, skin, and toilet," contains 5 to 15 percent olive oil foots.

(e) Royale Pure Olive Soap contains 5 to 15 percent olive oil foots.

(g) "Del Gloria Castile, Spanish Process, made with pure olive oil, for nursery, toilet, bath, shampoo, Karl Mayer & Company, Chicago, U. S. A.," contained 36 percent prior to the fall of 1936, and since that time it has contained approximately 51 percent olive oil. Its olive oil content was never less than 36 percent and never greater than 51 percent.

PAR. 6. Olive oil soap is a soap containing olive oil as its fatty ingredient, to the exclusion of all other oils or fats. Some of the brand names and labels used by respondents in advertising their soap have led a substantial number of the trade and purchasing public to believe that the soap so labeled, branded, and otherwise advertised is olive oil soap.

PAR. 7. Because of the qualities of olive oil as a soap material, said soap has long been, and is now, considered by manufacturers of and dealers in soap, and by the public generally, as a high-quality soap, free from substances harmful to the human skin or delicate fabrics; and, possessing desirable qualities not contained in other soaps. For many purposes, a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public prefer to purchase and use soap, the oil content of which is wholly olive oil. Said olive oil soap has long been and is now considered by the medical profession to have the qualities requisite and desirable for bathing infants, sick and ailing persons, and is used in medicinal preparations. Said soap has long been, and is now, prescribed and recommended by the medical profession for said purposes.

Par. 8. Olive oil has been higher in price than other oils and fats commonly used in the manufacture of soap, and genuine olive oil soap is more costly to manufacture than respondents' said soaps, and respondents are enabled to, and do, sell their soaps at prices substantially less than respondents' competitors who import, or manufacture, and sell genuine olive oil soap, can and do sell the same.

Par. 9. There are a substantial number of the consuming public who understand an olive oil soap to be a soap containing 100 percent olive oil as its oil or fat content, and prefer to buy and use said soaps.

Par. 10. The use by the respondents of the representations as set forth above has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the trade and purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said soaps on account of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondents manufacturers and distributors of genuine olive oil soap and manufacturers and distributors of soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, who truthfully advertise, sell, and distribute their soaps among the various States of the United States. By the use of the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, thereby, substantial injury is being and has been done by the respondents to competition in commerce as herein set forth.

CONCLUSION

The above acts, practices, and methods of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by DeWitt T. Puckett, counsel for the Commission, and by Frank L. Sullivan, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Allen B. Wrisley Co. and Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., also trading under the name Regal Soap Co., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, and Karl Mayer, George A. Wrisley, and Wrisley B. Oleson, copartners trading as Karl Mayer & Co., or trading under any other name, their agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of soap in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the word “olive” or any other word or words or any combination of words or parts thereof or any device of similar import or meaning to describe, designate, or in any way refer to soap, the oil or fatty content of which is not wholly olive oil, except that in the case of soap containing olive oil and other oils as the fatty content, the word “olive” may be used as descriptive of the olive oil content if there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent oil in the order of its predominance by volume, beginning with the largest single oil constituent, and provided that if any particular oil in said soap is not present in an amount sufficient substantially to affect its detergent or other qualities, the percentage in which such oil is present shall then be specifically disclosed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2829. Complaint, May 21, 1936—Decision, Apr. 10, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in preparation, sale and distribution of certain packaged mineral salts which (1) were designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," and of which (2) salt ingredients were obtained from Soap Lake, Washington, and of which (3) its "Salts" constituted the unadulterated residue, after evaporation was complete, of the natural water of said lake, while its "Spirit" was the liquid concentrate bottled before evaporation was complete, and its "Seltzer" was 60 percent "Salts" and 40 percent citric and tartaric acid salts, added for effervescence and palatability, and (4) contents of which, as disclosed by analysis, included trifle more than 20 percent sodium sulphate or Glauber's salts, laxative effect of which was minimized by combination with other ingredients therein, about 54 percent sodium carbonate or caustic alkali known as washing soda, and about 25 percent sodium chloride and potassium chloride, or ordinary table salt, and, as thus engaged, in competition with others likewise engaged in preparing, selling and distributing mineral salt products or other products intended and sold for same purposes as its said products;

In advertising its said packaged mineral salts through booklets, folders, pamphlets and other advertising literature distributed to members of the purchasing public in the various States and furnished to customers for distribution to members of said public, and through newspapers and magazines of general circulation throughout the various States, and through radio broadcasts of extrastate audience—

Represented through said advertisements, in all of which it featured its corporate name in connection with aforesaid trade names of its said products as above set forth, and various statements therein made, directly or by implication, that said various products would prevent and cure and were beneficial in the treatment of many of the diseases, afflictions, ailments, and conditions which may be present or exist in the body, and thus included rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body and scalp sores, Buerger's disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth and pyorrhea;

Facts being its said packaged mineral salts alone, used either externally or internally, will not prevent or cure, and are not beneficial in the treatment of, rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis and the various other ailments and conditions above set forth, or any other disease, affliction, ailment or condition which may be present or exist in the body, as represented as above set forth, but therapeutic benefits, if any, generally obtained from use of any or all of said products, are limited to those resulting from the laxative, diuretic, and cleansing properties of the various ingredients thereof;
Complaint

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by said acts and representations as above set forth, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its product and trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to it from those likewise engaged in preparing, distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended and sold for use in the cure, relief or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions named above, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Henry M. White, Mr. Charles P. Vicini, and Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiners.

Mr. P. C. Kolinski and Mr. Reuben J. Martin for the Commission.

Hyland, Elvidge & Alvord, of Seattle, Wash., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Soap Lake Products Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, in the city of Seattle, State of Washington. Respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, certain packaged mineral salts designated as “Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts” and packaged kindred products designated as “Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer” and “Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit,” obtained from Soap Lake located in the State of Washington.
Par. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said salts and kindred products, when sold, to be transported from its office and place of business in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times since the organization of respondent corporation, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so prepared, distributed, and sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mineral salts or other products designed, intended and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said salts and kindred products, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals, and trade journals of general circulation throughout the United States, has printed and circulated throughout the several States to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, letters, and literature, and has made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States; in all of which advertisements, respondent has caused its corporate name to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

* * * Ask almost anyone who has been there (Soap Lake) and who faithfully took the treatments for such ills as rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak or ivy, gangrene, infections, or body and scalp sores. In many cases you will be told stories of complete and prompt recovery so astonishing as to be almost unbelievable.

No longer need you journey far and expensively to prove the virtue of Soap Lake minerals. They are now easily and inexpensively available to you through your druggist under the name of Mother Nature Soap Lake Products—Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts for the bath; Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer—pleasantly effervescent—for internal use, and Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit for external application—all natural products from Nature's own laboratory.

The answer to all such arguments are the thousands and thousands of cases of neuritis, arthritis, rheumatism, Insomnia, Buerger's Disease, gangrene, infections, etc., that have been benefited by Soap Lake baths alone.

You will find that Mother Nature Soap Lake baths are a wonderful aid to Nature in correcting certain forms of eczema, itch, poison oak and ivy, athlete's foot and disorders resulting from hyperacidity.
For rheumatic swellings and congestion, sore muscles, lumbago, etc., poulticing is recommended.

Ulcers of the Stomach. Soap Lake water has proven wonderfully beneficial in aiding Nature to correct this distressing trouble. No one should submit to an operation for ulcers without first having given Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer a trial.

Oral Hygiene: Trench Mouth—Pyorrhea. * * * Wonderful aid to Nature in Pyorrhea and Trench Mouth.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their effectiveness in treating or curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body. In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that its various packaged products to wit: Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts, Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer and Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit, will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions named by the respondent in said radio broadcasts and advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions which the use of said, above named, products will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, are the following: rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak or ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger's Disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, and pyorrhea.

Par. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's packaged products will not prevent and cure, nor is it beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions hereinabove named. The beneficial properties, if any, of said products are limited to laxative and diuretic action. Said packaged products have no therapeutic value in the treatment of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions above named.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute and sell various products designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving or treating the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body hereinabove named and who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.
Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing its products and the effectiveness of said products for curing, treating or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions of the human body herein named, in offering for sale and selling its said products was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinafter detailed, a number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended and sold for use in the cure, relief or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of May, A. D., 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answer thereto by the respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by P. C. Kolinski and Reuben J. Martin, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Ivan D. Hyland, 910 Dexter Horton Building, Seattle, Wash., attorney for the respondent, before Henry
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, in the city of Seattle, in said State. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of preparing, selling and distributing in commerce, certain packaged mineral salts designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit." The salt ingredients which go to make up these products are obtained by said respondent from a body of water called "Soap Lake," which is situated in the State of Washington.

Par. 2. Respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Seattle, in the State of Washington, to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by the respondent in said products, between and among various States of the United States.

Par. 3. Said respondent, in the course of the operation of its said business, as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms also engaged in the business of preparing, selling and distributing mineral salt products or other products intended and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Par. 4. In the course of the operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said packaged mineral salts, the respondent has made use of booklets, folders, pamphlets and other advertising literature, some of which it distributes to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States, and some of which it furnishes to its customers to be by them placed in the hands of members of the purchasing public. It has also made use of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States. It has also made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States. In all of its said advertisements, respondent has caused its corporate name to be prominently and conspicuously displayed in connection with the trade names of its products, "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," together with the following statements:

Findings 28 F. T. C.

Oral Hygiene: Trench Mouth—Pyorrhea. * * * Wonderful aid to Nature in Pyorrhea and Trench Mouth * * * Hold in mouth in contact with sore places as long as possible. Wonderful results.

Through the use of said statements and other statements of similar import and meaning used in its advertising matter, respondent represents directly or by implication that “Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts,” “Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer,” and “Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit,” will prevent and cure, and are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, afflictions, ailments and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body. Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by respondent in said radio broadcasts and said advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions which the use of the said above-named products will benefit, prevent and cure, are the following: Rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete’s foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger’s disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, and pyorrhea.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent’s packaged mineral salts alone, either externally or internally, will not prevent or cure, and are not beneficial in the treatment of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete’s foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger’s disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, pyorrhea, or any other disease, affliction, ailment or condition which may be present or exist in the human body, as represented in its radio broadcasts and other advertisements and advertising literature.

Respondent obtains its above-named products by evaporation of the waters of Soap Lake. An analysis has been made of the natural water of Soap Lake and also of respondent’s product, “Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts.” Respondent’s “Salts” are the unadulterated residue after evaporation is complete, and its “Spirit” is the liquid concentrate bottled before evaporation is complete. Its “Seltzer” is 60 percent “Salts” and 40 percent citric and tartaric acid salts, which are added solely for effervescence and palatability.

Findings

The chemical content of the natural water is the same as that of respondent's "Salts," except that certain volatiles are lost in the evaporation process. There is no radioactivity or vitamin D content in the respondent's packaged preparations.

No merit is claimed for the calcium carbonate or for the negligible traces of silica, phosphorus, iron, alumina, magnesium, iodine, and lithium.

Sodium sulphate, or Glauber's salts, a well known purgative, accounts for a trifle more than one-fifth of the total solid content. Concentrated Glauber's salts give a laxative effect. The effect of the Glauber's salts in respondent's products, however, is so minimized by its combination with the other ingredients therein as to require increased dosage and the ingestion of a very large amount of water, in order to have the same effect as that given by a concentrated laxative requiring a much less amount of water. Physicians prefer to prescribe a laxative in concentrated form, in order that the patient be not required to drink more water than he would normally consume.

More than one-half of the content of the "Salts" is sodium carbonate, a caustic alkali known as washing soda. For the purpose of temporarily neutralizing acid in cases where ulcers or a condition of hyperacidity exists, an alkali is sometimes prescribed by physicians. One of the elements usually prescribed for temporarily overcoming hyperacidity is sodium bicarbonate which is less caustic and more readily decomposed by the hydrochloric acidity of the stomach than sodium carbonate. While the respondent's products, because of the sodium carbonate therein, do have an alkalinizing effect, they are not a proper treatment for ulcers or hyperacidity because of their extremely caustic effect.

Of the total content 24.76 percent is sodium chloride and potassium chloride. Potassium chloride is ordinary table salt. The medicinal properties of potassium chloride and sodium chloride are practically the same. The normal diet contains an adequate supply of salt and other chlorides for all purposes.

In the treatment of neuritis, arthritis, or lumbago, which are types of rheumatism, and kidney trouble, the use of chlorides is restricted by physicians because an excess of chloride irritates and aggravates the pathological processes in the kidneys. The internal use of respondent's products by persons afflicted with any type of rheumatism causes additional aggravation and irritation of the kidneys. Frequently, the conditions prevalent when the patient is suffering from so-called rheumatism are associated with some degree of kidney involvement, and the use of respondent's product is distinctly harmful.
When taken internally the respondent's product acts as a mild and indefinite diuretic and laxative. There are many well known harmless laxatives, diuretics, and neutralizers of hyperacidity which do not aggravate the pathological processes of the organs of the patient. Many of these other preparations will react definitely as prescribed by physicians.

Bathing in hypertonic salt solutions will promote dehydration through the skin and thus eliminate to a certain extent toxic products circulating in the blood. This effect is increased when baths are taken hot. Hot baths with or without salts of this character are very useful in giving temporary relief to internal pains, especially those associated with the joints, arising from neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, rheumatism, gangrene, or Buerger's disease. The dehydrating effect of the hypertonic salt solution very probably results in the lessening of congestion in and about swollen joints or other afflicted parts and thus temporarily relieves pain because of the slight hypertonic effect of respondent's products. There are many hypertonic salts other than respondent's which likewise furnish temporary relief when mixed with hot bath water.

Eczema and other similar diseases are generally considered of systemic origin and are manifested by skin lesions. When sodium carbonate is applied to this diseased skin, it acts as a counterirritant and temporarily relieves the itching and discomfort. Respondent's products, however, are not effective in curing or preventing these skin diseases.

Athlete's foot is a fungoid infection deeply embedded in the layers of the skin. While some of the ingredients of respondent's product might cleanse the diseased tissue, there are no antiseptic properties in respondent's products which will prevent or cure athlete's foot.

Poison oak and poison ivy are skin diseases which spread rapidly unless properly checked. The rapidity with which the infection is spread over the body is greatly accentuated by the use of liquid solutions. External applications of respondent's product are harmful to a person suffering from this affliction.

Body and scalp sores are commonly treated with medicines having astringent qualities. It is also necessary to keep the afflicted parts clean. Respondent's products have no astringent properties whatever. The beneficial effect following the use of these products on sores is limited to the cleansing properties thereof.

Trench mouth is caused by a germ which is not affected in any way by respondent's products. The cause and cure of pyorrhea are not known to medical science as yet. The only benefit which a person afflicted with trench mouth and/or pyorrhea could derive from re-
Respondent's products would be through its use as a mouth wash. When so used the effect would be similar to that of table salt.

Hot and cold baths are beneficial in temporarily relieving the pain incidental to Buerger's Disease and gangrene. Gangrene is sometimes due to diabetes. In that event, respondent's products may be soothing when mixed with bath water. However, respondent's packaged products, when administered in any form, are not competent treatments for gangrene or Buerger's Disease.

The therapeutic benefits, if any, generally obtained from the use of any or all of said products are limited to those resulting from the laxative, diuretic and cleansing properties of the various ingredients thereof.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations in its advertising circulars, pamphlets, radio continuities and other advertising media, in offering for sale and selling its products in commerce, had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct result of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade in commerce has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from individuals, firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of preparing, distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended and sold for use in the cure, relief or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products, to the injury of competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Henry M.
White, Charles P. Vicini, and Miles J. Furnas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the briefs filed herein (counsel for respondent not having requested oral argument) and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of packaged mineral salts obtained from the waters of Soap Lake located in the State of Washington, now designated as "Mother Nature Mineral Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," whether sold under those names or any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That said packaged mineral salt preparations will cure eczema or similar skin diseases of systemic origin, or have any beneficial effect in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving the itching and discomfort incidental to said diseases.

2. That said mineral salt preparations will cure athlete's foot or any body or scalp sores or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than cleansing effect upon surface lesions.

3. That said mineral salt preparations will cure poison oak or poison ivy or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof.

4. That said mineral salt preparations will cure pyorrhea or trench mouth or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than as a cleansing agent.

5. That said mineral salt preparations will cure ulcers of the stomach or hyperacidity or constitute a competent and proper treatment therefor or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving the pain and discomfort incident thereto by temporarily neutralizing excess acid.

6. That the said mineral salt preparations, when taken internally, will prevent or cure rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, gangrene, or Buerger's Disease, or constitute a proper treatment thereof or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof.

7. That said mineral salt preparations when used externally will prevent or cure rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, gangrene, or Buerger's Disease, or have any beneficial effect in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving pain and congestion in the afflicted parts.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Where said individual—

(d) Represented, through use of term "overcome rupture troubles," that use of their said truss would cure a rupture, and that the necessity for an operation for rupture would be eliminated by reason of the use of such truss;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in various States into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representation were true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of their said products because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and with result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from their competitors aforesaid who truthfully advertise their respective products;

and statements and representations of similar import.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondent represents and implies that the Cluthe Truss is a new kind of truss and invention; that by using the Cluthe Truss rupture troubles can be "overcome"; that the Cluthe Truss will fit and cure the rupture; that the wearing of said appliance is a way of obtaining sure results; that by using said appliance the person will end rupture worries; that said appliance will make one secure against all likelihood of having his rupture come out; that said appliance can be worn with absolute safety; that elastic or spring trusses are not adapted to the human body; that the Cluthe Truss will enable its user to engage in the most severe form of exercise and strain; that said truss will seal the opening; and that the Cluthe Truss will save the necessity of an operation.

In truth and in fact, said product is not a new kind of truss and invention; will not overcome rupture troubles; will not fit and cure the rupture; is not a way of obtaining sure results; will not end rupture worries; will not make one secure against all likelihood of having his rupture come out; can not be worn with absolute safety; that elastic or spring trusses can be adapted to the human body; that the Cluthe Truss will not enable its user to engage in the most severe form of exercise and strain; will not seal the opening; and will not save the necessity of an operation.

Par. 6. Among the competitors of respondent are those who do not in any manner misrepresent the qualities and properties of their products and who do not use the methods, acts and practices used by the respondent, as herein alleged, in connection with the sale and distribution of their said products in said commerce.
Findings

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent in making and using said representations and implications in connection with the sale and distribution of said product in said commerce and to induce the purchase thereof, as hereinabove alleged, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that all of said representations and implications are true and have caused many members of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase a substantial volume of respondent's said product with the result that trade in said commerce has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors to their injury and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 27, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

On October 21, 1938, the complaint was amended by director of the Commission so as to make Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, a party respondent thereto, and all the allegations in the complaint relating to acts and practices committed subsequent to July 8, 1937, were also directed against Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation.

On March 2, 1939, respondent Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, Bloomfield, N. J., and the respondent Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, filed motions to be allowed to withdraw their answers in this proceeding and not to substitute in lieu thereof answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. The Commission by order entered herein granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations set forth in said amended complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final Paragraph 1. Respondent, Frederick Cluthe, is an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, and having his principal office and place of business located at 232 Broad Street, Bloomfield, N. J. Respondent, Charles Cluthe & Sons, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and having its principal office and place of business at 232 Broad Street, Bloomfield, N. J. Respondent Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, for more than one year prior to July 8, 1937, was, and respondent Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, is now and has been since July 8, 1937, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of trusses, which are appliances used for bodily afflictions commonly called rupture. Such trusses, when sold, are transported, or caused to be transported, by respondents to purchasers of the same located in various States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey, and thus respondents at the times herein mentioned have maintained, and now maintain, a constant current of trade in commerce in said products into and through various States of the United States.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business, and to induce the purchase of their trusses, respondent, Frederick Cluthe, prior to July 8, 1937, and respondent, Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, subsequent to July 8, 1937, caused statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of their trusses, to be inserted in pamphlets and circulars, distributed to prospective purchasers situated in various States of the United States, and in newspapers, magazines and periodicals having a circulation among and between various States of the United States. Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Ruptured? Try the Cluthe Automatic Comfort Truss. Doctors themselves wear and recommend it. Guaranteed to hold your rupture safely under heaviest strain.

Ruptured? Get Up-To-Date Relief. Why try to worry along with old-fashioned trusses that gouge your flesh—press heavily on hips and spine—enlarge opening—fail to hold rupture up and in? You need the Cluthe. No and statements and representations of similar import.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondent, Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, and respondent, Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, represent and imply that the Cluthe Truss will enable its users to engage safely in the most severe form of exercise and strain; that by using said appliance the person will end rupture worries; that said appliance will seal the rupture opening; and that said appliance will make one secure against all likelihood of having his intestines pass through the rupture.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business and in addition to the aforesaid statements and representations, the respondent Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Son, caused other statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of his trusses to be disseminated in the manner described in paragraph 2 hereof. Among and typical of such statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Ruptured? Improvement or recovery can result only from having your Rupture continuously held. The principle of the famous Cluthe Comfort Truss provides the needed holding support and in the proper direction as is possible with no other type of truss or appliance. • • • Positively guaranteed to hold.

time without trying a Cluthe Truss. • • • you are secure against all likelihood of such trouble and danger the minute you put on a Cluthe Truss • • •.
and statements and representations of similar import.

By means and in the manner aforesaid the respondent, Frederick Cluthe, an individual trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, Bloomfield, New Jersey, represents and implies that the Cluthe Truss is a new kind of truss and invention; that by using the Cluthe Truss rupture troubles can be “overcome”; that the Cluthe Truss will fit and cure the rupture; that the wearing of said appliance is a way of obtaining sure results in the treatment of a rupture; that elastic or spring trusses are not adapted to the human body; and that the Cluthe Truss will save the necessity of an operation for rupture.

PAR. 4. The representations thus made by the respondents are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, said product is not a new kind of truss and invention; will not overcome rupture troubles; will not fit and cure the rupture; is not a way of obtaining sure results in the treatment of a rupture; will not end rupture worries; will not make one secure against all likelihood of having his intestines pass through the rupture; will not enable a ruptured person to engage safely in the most severe form of exercise and strain. Elastic or spring trusses can be adapted for use on the human body. Respondents' truss will not seal the rupture opening and will not save or eliminate the necessity of an operation for rupture.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents are now, and have been during all the times mentioned herein, in competition with other individuals and corporations and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of trusses and appliances similar to those of respondents.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of each and all of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations now has, and has had, the tendency and capacity to, and does, and did, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondents' products because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof trade in commerce among and between various States of the United States has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their said competitors engaged in the sale and distribution of trusses and who truthfully advertise their respective products.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, and the answers of the respondents, in which answers the respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Frederick Cluthe, individually and trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondent Charles Cluthe & Sons, a corporation, its representatives, officers, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a truss now designated as the “Cluthe Truss,” or any other truss of substantially the same design, style and workmanship, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

(a) By the use of the term “guaranteed to hold,” or any other term or terms of similar import and meaning, or in any other manner, that the use of such truss will prevent the intestines from passing through the rupture.

(b) That the use of such truss will enable ruptured persons to engage safely in severe forms of exercise and physical effort.

(c) That such truss will seal a rupture.

It is further ordered, That the respondent Frederick Cluthe, individually and trading as Charles Cluthe & Sons, or under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a truss now designated as the “Cluthe Truss” or any other truss of substantially the same design, style, and workmanship, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

(a) That such truss is a new kind of truss or invention.
(b) That a ruptured person using such truss will be assured of beneficial results by reason of the use thereof.
(c) That elastic or spring trusses are not adaptable for use on the human body.
(d) That such truss will fit ruptures.
(e) By the use of the term "overcome rupture troubles", or any other term or terms of similar import and meaning, or in any other manner, that the use of such truss will cure a rupture.
(f) That the necessity for an operation for rupture will be eliminated by reason of the use of such truss.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service on them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

HAROLD L. ROTHSCHILD, TRADING AS CORONADO MANUFACTURING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2829. Complaint, May 29, 1936—Decision, Apr. 11, 1939

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations among the various States, under a plan involving (1) the disposition of his products through distributors who were required to deposit $300 and were then supplied with assortment of such products, together with thirty display cases to be placed in drug stores and other establishments, for sale of product on commission by proprietors of such stores and establishments, and (2) employment of supervisors who visited various cities and advertised at own expense, but with copy which he furnished, for distributors, in business and opportunity columns of local papers, and were paid by him commission of 25 percent on amount of business placed by them—

(a) Represented through such advertising and through his said representatives or supervisors, that he had been established in business since 1923, and that a substantial demand had been established for his preparations, and exhibited letters setting forth high quality and salability of his said products, and represented that distributors would receive $50 weekly with steady increase, and that they were earning from $10 a day to $5,000 a year, even without sales experience, and that least distributor would earn would be $40 a week, and in some instances guaranteed minimum income of between $3,000 and $5,000 a year, and exhibited to applicants list containing names of those represented as receiving such amounts, and letters purporting to be from distributors showing their sale of large quantities of his said merchandise;

Facts being he established his business in 1933 and not in 1923, had not established substantial demand for his preparations, letters setting forth high quality and salability of his said products above referred to had been, in a number of such cases, presented to storekeepers for their signature when the goods were placed with them and before they had time to verify statements contained therein and later found such products not of high quality and with very little sale therefor, and distributors did not earn amounts as above alleged, and none had earned such amounts, but instead, in numerous cases, had suffered losses, and in some instances loss of entire investment, and in others loss ranging from $165 to $285, and, according to admission of supervisor, in no case had met with success or earned any substantial amount; and

(b) Represented to applicants that supervisors would assist them in disposing of his merchandise, and that if applicants were unable to dispose thereof their money would be refunded upon its return to him, and informed applicants that after having made original purchase, they would be furnished with additional supplies of cosmetics and toilet preparations under profit-sharing plan, and that they would be given new and exclusive territory;
Complaint

Facts being said supervisors did not assist distributor in disposing of merchandise in question, and he failed and refused to make refund for any such merchandise thus returned, and refused in numerous instances to furnish distributors with additional products on profit-sharing basis after they had made original purchase, and territory assigned to distributors as new and exclusive in numerous instances had previously been worked by other distributors of said individual, with exclusive agency still held by some;

With result that some 300 distributors were secured as a result of such misrepresentations, and with effect of causing numerous persons to believe that such false and misleading representations made by said individual and his agents, as above set forth, were true, and to purchase said products in such belief in preference to like products sold in commerce among the various States by competitors, and of thus diverting trade to himself from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. Reuben J. Martin for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Harold L. Rothschild, trading under the name and style of Coronado Manufacturing Co., has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Harold L. Rothschild, is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of Coronado Manufacturing Co. Said respondent maintains his office and place of business at 500 Robert Street in the city of St. Paul, in the State of Minnesota. Said respondent is now, and for more than one year last past, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various cosmetics and toilet preparations between and among the various States of the United States. Said respondent causes said cosmetics and toilet preparations, when sold by him, to be transported to the purchasers thereof located in the State of Minnesota and in various other States of the United States. There is now, and has been for a long time, to wit, more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondent in cosmetics and toilet preparations between and among the various States of the United States.
In the course and conduct of his said business, said respondent is now, and for a long time, to wit, for more than 1 year last past, has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States with various other individuals, corporations, partnerships, and firms engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations.

Par. 2. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, sells and distributes several lines of cosmetics and toilet preparations. Among the lines sold by said respondent are cosmetics and toilet preparations sold under the trade name "Coronet." Respondent also sells a more expensive line of cosmetics and toilet preparations under the trade name of "Lovely Lady," and still another higher priced line under the trade name of "Priscilla Parker." In the regular course and conduct of his business respondent sells the "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations by three methods and to three different classes of dealers, namely, to drug and beauty supply jobbers and department stores; to retail druggists; and to distributors appointed by salesmen called supervisors.

Par. 3. Said respondent for a long time, to wit, for more than one year last past, in the course and conduct of his said business of selling the "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, has adopted a policy of advertising in the financial and business opportunity columns of daily newspapers for men with capital to invest to act as managers or other representatives, using in said advertisements false, misleading and deceptive statements (a) as to the size of said respondent's business, (b) as to the length of its establishment, (c) as to the equipment and cooperation furnished by said respondent, (d) as to opportunities offered, and (e) as to the possible and probable earnings or profits to be derived from the business operated and the money invested therein.

Par. 4. Said respondent, for a long time, to wit, for more than one year last past, in the course and conduct of his said business of selling "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, has adopted the policy of entering into agreements, or seeking to enter into agreements, with individuals who apply for positions with said respondent as a result of the advertisements inserted in daily newspapers by said respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, whereby said respondent purports to employ said applicants as managers and other representatives for said respondent in certain specified exclusive territories, and in consideration for such appointment the said applicants are required to purchase from said respondent a designated quantity of said "Coronet" cosmetics and toilet preparations, varying in number with the amount of capital said applicants have to invest, and whereby said applicants are also required to agree to purchase from said respondent a designated number of said "Coronet" cosmetics and toilet preparations per month at a specified price with the understanding that said applicants, as managers or other representatives, shall cause said "Coronet" cosmetics and toilet preparations to be sold at a specified price; with the further understanding that if after offering the said "Coronet" line for sale in accordance with the instructions in the agreement, and after having carried out in full all of the provisions of the said agreement, the applicants may then secure additional quantities of said "Coronet" preparations on a profit sharing basis, or may return the supply of said "Coronet" preparations in their hands and receive a refund of the money paid therefor.

Par. 5. Said respondent for a long time, to wit, for more than one year last past, in the course and conduct of his said business of selling the "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, in order to induce said applicants who answer advertisements of said respondent, as described in paragraph 3 herein, to enter into said agreements, and to purchase said "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations from said respondent, as set out in paragraph 4 herein, has used and is now using false, misleading, and deceptive statements.

(a) As to the length of time it has been engaged in business.

(b) As to the demand for said "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations.

(c) As to the possible and probable earnings or profits to be derived from the business operated and the money to be invested therein.

(d) As to the profits or earnings realized by other representatives of said respondent, and as to the success of other representatives of said respondent.

(e) As to many other important facts relating to the business being operated by said respondent.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and things done and performed by said respondent has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive the general public, and particularly the said applicants who apply for positions as managers or other representatives of said respondent in response to said advertisements as set forth in paragraph 3 herein, into the belief that said respondent is an old established firm engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations with substantial capital; that there is a substantial demand for said "Coronet" line of cosmetics and toilet preparations; that managers and other representatives of said respondent have made substantial profits and earnings in the sale of respondent's “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations; that any man of good character, without experience, by the investment of a small amount of capital in said business, may make substantial profits or earnings within a short period of time; that letters of reference furnished by said respondent are bona fide, and that statements contained therein are true; that said applicants would be given exclusive territories where they would have no competition in the sale of said “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations; that the money invested by said applicants or prospective managers or other representatives would be refunded upon the return of said “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations purchased by them if said applicants or prospective managers or other representatives were unable to dispose of said “Coronet” line of cosmetics or toilet preparations; and that after the original purchase said applicants will be furnished additional supplies of the “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations on a “profit sharing plan”; and in said belief said applicants have been and are now induced to purchase and enter into agreements to purchase the said “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations from said respondent.

The truth and fact is that said respondent has been engaged in the sale of cosmetics and toilet preparations for a short time, to-wit, less than 5 years, and is a relatively small and unknown factor in the cosmetic and toilet preparation field; that there is a very limited demand for said “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations on the part of the buying public; that the portfolio of letters of reference used by said respondent in the solicitation of the appointment of managers or other representatives contains statements which are not true in fact, and letters which are unauthorized; that there is keen competition in the sale of cosmetics and toilet preparations; that managers or other representatives of said respondent had not realized the substantial profits or earnings represented by said respondent as aforesaid; that the said respondent has not refunded and does not now refund the purchase price of said “Coronet” cosmetics and toilet preparations which said applicants, as managers or other representatives, were or are unable to sell, and which were or are returned to the said respondent; and that said managers or other representatives have not been and are not now furnished additional supplies of the “Coronet” line of cosmetics and toilet preparations on a “profit sharing plan.”

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and things done and performed and representations made by said respondent have had and do now have the tendency to cause the various applicants or prospective managers or other representatives, acting in the belief that said representations are true, to enter into contracts or agreements for the sale of his products with said respondent rather than with other persons engaged in the interstate sale of cosmetics and toilet preparations, and thereby tends to divert trade to said respondent from his said competitors engaged in the interstate sale of cosmetics and toilet preparations.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and things done and performed by said respondent, Harold L. Rothschild, trading and doing business as Coronado Manufacturing Co., are to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 29, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Harold L. Rothschild, individually and trading under the name and style of Coronado Manufacturing Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Reuben J. Martin, attorney for the Commission, before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly appointed by it. Respondent was not represented by counsel and introduced no testimony or other evidence in opposition to the complaint. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

pany." Since about January, 1933, respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations between and among the various States of the United States. His place of business during said period has been in St. Paul, Minnesota. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in active and substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent disposes of his product through distributors who are required to deposit $300, whereupon they receive an assortment of respondent's products together with 30 display cases, and, in accordance with respondent's sales plan, they place said display cases containing the products of respondent, in drug stores and other establishments, the proprietors of which sell the products and receive a commission on such sales from the distributor. Respondent's annual sales amount to from $50,000 to $75,000.

Par. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, employs supervisors who visit various cities throughout the United States and advertise in the Business and Opportunity columns of local daily newspapers for distributors of respondent's products. These supervisors pay their own traveling expenses and the costs of the advertisements, but the respondent furnishes the copy used in the advertisements. The supervisor is paid by the respondent a commission of 25 percent on the amount of business placed by him with the distributors.

Par. 4. By means of advertising and through representations made by respondent's representatives known as supervisors, the respondent has represented that he has been established in business since 1923 and that a substantial demand has been established for his cosmetics and toilet preparations. By the same means the respondent has variously represented that distributors will receive $50 weekly with steady increase; that distributors are earning $10 a day to $5,000 a year, even though they have no sales experience, and that the least the distributor would earn would be $40 a week; and in some instances has guaranteed a minimum income of between $3,000 and $5,000 a year. Respondent further causes to be exhibited to the applicants a list containing the names of persons who are represented as receiving such amounts and also letters purporting to be from distributors showing they were selling large quantities of respondent's merchandise. It is also represented to applicants that respondent's supervisors would assist them in disposing of the merchandise, and that if the applicants were unable to dispose of the merchandise their money would be refunded upon the return of such merchandise to the respondent. Applicants are further informed that after having made the original purchase they would be furnished with additional supplies of cosmetics and toilet preparations under a profit sharing plan. The applicant is also told he would be given new and exclusive territory. Approximately 300 distributors located in various States throughout the United States were secured as the result of such representations.

Par. 5. All of the representations referred to in the foregoing paragraph are false. In truth and in fact respondent established this business in 1933 and has not established a substantial demand for his preparations. Distributors do not earn the amounts which respondent alleges can be earned, nor have any of respondent's distributors earned the amounts which respondent alleges to have been earned. Numerous distributors instead of earning a profit have suffered substantial losses, in some instances the loss of the entire investment, and in others losses ranging from $165 to $285. One of respondent's supervisors admitted that none of said distributors had met with success in the sale of respondent's products or earned any substantial amount. Respondent's supervisors do not assist the distributor in disposing of this merchandise and respondent fails and refuses to make refund for any such merchandise returned by a distributor. In numerous instances respondent refused to furnish distributors with additional products on a profit sharing basis after they had made the original purchase. In numerous instances also the territory assigned to distributors as new and exclusive territory had previously been worked by other distributors of the respondent, some of whom still held the exclusive agency for such territory.

Par. 6. The respondent, in order to induce persons to purchase his products and become distributors thereof, caused to be exhibited to them letters setting forth the high quality and salability of his said products. A number of said letters were presented to storekeepers for their signatures at the time the goods were placed with them and before they had time to verify the statements contained therein. Later, they found said products were not of high quality and that there was very little sale for them.

Par. 7. The false and misleading representations made by the respondent and his agents, as hereinbefore set forth, have caused numerous persons to believe that said statements and representations are true, and to purchase such products in such belief in preference to like products sold in commerce between and among the various States of the United States by his competitors; and as a result, trade has been diverted from such competitors to the respondent.
CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondent, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Harold L. Rothschild, individually and trading under the name and style of Coronado Manufacturing Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cosmetics and toilet preparations in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that any sum required to be paid by any agent, representative or distributor will be refunded, unless such refund is actually made, and if there are any conditions connected with such refund, such conditions must be clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness in immediate connection and conjunction with such offer of refund in such a manner that there is no deception as to the terms of such conditions.

2. Representing that he will furnish to distributors of his products additional goods on credit on a profit sharing basis unless such merchandise is actually furnished on credit to be paid for by the distributor out of the profits from the sale thereof.

3. Representing any specified sum of money as possible earnings or profits of agents, salesmen, representatives or distributors for any given period of time, which is not a true representation of the average net earnings or profits consistently made by his active full-time agents, salesmen, representatives, or distributors in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

4. Representing any specified sum of money as earnings or profits of any specified agent, salesman, representative or distributor for any given period of time which has not in fact been consistently earned net by such agent, salesman, representative or distributor in the ordinary course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

5. Representing that the territory assigned any agent, representative, or distributor is new or exclusive territory, unless new or exclusive territory is actually assigned to such agent, representative or distributor.

6. Representing that supervisors employed by the respondent will assist agents, representatives or distributors in the sale of said products when such is not the fact.

7. Representing by the use of false or fictitious testimonial letters or in any other manner that respondent's products have a salability which does not in fact exist.

8. Representing that respondent has been established in business for a long period of time or that a substantial demand has been established for his products when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged, under name "Rightway Institute," in sale, under name "Rightway Method," of courses of instruction represented as treatment and cure for indigestion, heartburn and relief of gas, and in thus selling and distributing, under such various designations as "Rightway Method," "Relief Without Medication," and "Rightway Institute," books and pamphlets which purportedly contained system or method of exercising for the treatment of or relief from conditions above set forth, and in describing, in advertisements, magazines, newspapers, and other media circulated in the various States and in the District of Columbia and in books, pamphlets, circulars and letters distributed from his place of business through the mails and otherwise, his said method to purchasers or prospective purchasers in other States, in competition with many who make and compound various products and publish various books, pamphlets and treatises on methods designed and intended to relieve, cure or treat the various ailments or conditions similar to those for which he represented his said method as relief or cure, and who do not, in thus selling and distributing their products and publications in commerce among the several States and in said District, in any way misrepresent their nature and character or their effectiveness or their true status as private business vendors—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that his said system or method of exercising was a scientific way to relieve indigestion and stomach and intestinal gas, and that it would cure such ailments and conditions, and that it could be used with safety by all persons suffering therefrom, through such statements, among others, as "The Rightway Method is a wonderful cure and I can recommend it to anyone who is distressed with heartburn caused from indigestion and gas," "Safe! and Sure!," "I can truthfully say that I am entirely cured from my old ailment that I had been troubled with for years," and "Scientific Guaranteed Method," and "Stop Gas Pains"; and

(b) Represented, through use of word "institute" in aforesaid trade name, which he featured, and through other statements including those hereinabove indicated, that his business was that of an institute or scientific research body conducted by graduate physicians and specially trained experts in physical culture, and that he maintained a trained technical staff of employees and a properly equipped laboratory for the conduct of scientific research and experiments as to use and effect of exercise in treatment and cure of aforesaid ailments and conditions, or that his said system or method of exercising was founded on, or the result of, such research and experiments;
Facts being he did not conduct an institute or organization for scientific research, had no place of business other than desk space, conducted his business without aid of employees or assistants, was not a physician, had no knowledge of physical culture, and did not have associated with him, or consult with, any physician or specialists in said subject, had never made or had made any physical examination of any customers or prospective customers and users of the system or method, or any clinical test of the therapeutic value thereof, exercises provided could not properly be represented as a treatment or cure for said conditions and would not remove such gas, causes of which can be determined only by physical examination by physicians or specially trained physical experts, and his said system was not a scientific one for aforesaid purposes, nor a safe and sure cure for relief of such pain and distress, and use thereof under certain conditions sometimes attending those suffering therefrom would be dangerous;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive public and persons suffering from indigestion and gas as above set forth, and from pains in stomach and intestines thus caused, and with result that customers and potential customers, through reading of statements as above indicated, were deceived and mislead into false and erroneous belief that such statements were true and that said system or method had a definite and valuable therapeutic effect in the treatment of such conditions and maladies, and with tendency and capacity, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to cause members of consuming public to purchase and use such system or method instead of remedies, products and courses of treatment of competitors, devised, intended and used for treatment of same or similar maladies, diseases and conditions, and with effect of diverting trade to him from competitors who do not use such false and deceptive acts and practices in sale of methods of treatment by correspondence and commodities sold for similar ailments and diseases; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini, trial examiner.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Joseph Rosenfeld, an individual trading as Rightway Institute, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been, and now is, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent Joseph Rosenfeld, is an individual trading under the name and style Rightway Institute with his principal office and place of business located at 815 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of books, pamphlets, and other literature variously designated "Health Service," "Method of Relief without Medication," and "The Rightway Method." These books and pamphlets describe and set out respondent's methods of undertaking to cure or relieve indigestion, heart burn, excess gas in the stomach and other distressed intestinal and stomach conditions. He causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, his said books and pamphlets describing and setting forth his method of treatment, when sold, to be transported through the United States mail from his place of business in Los Angeles, Calif. to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of California and other (sic) located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce in said pamphlets and method of treatment sold by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with persons, corporations and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale of similar books and pamphlets undertaking to provide methods for curing, relieving or treating the same ills and conditions of the human body or in the sale of various medical preparations designed, intended, and used for the treatment of the same ills and conditions in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course of the operation of his business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchasing of his books and pamphlets, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States and has printed and circulated throughout the several States to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mail and otherwise, advertising folders, letters, and literature. In all of said types of advertisements and advertising literature, the respondent has caused his trade name "Rightway Institute" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with such statements as the following:

The Rightway Method is a wonderful cure and I can recommend it to anyone who is distressed with heartburn caused from indigestion and gas.
And if you decide to try the Rightway Method, the Rightway Institute positively guarantees you that the $3 you spend will be the last money you will need to spend.

And knowing the “Rightway” not any of you will be without the means for quick, blessed relief from the evils of indigestion no matter where you happen to be.

Do this and you will obtain the same prompt and gratifying results as the other numerous users of the “Rightway.”

You can rest assured that with it you get rid of your gas distress promptly. Safe! and Sure!

HOW I RID MYSELF OF GAS PAINS in three minutes.

I can truthfully say I am entirely cured from my old ailment that I had been troubled with for years.

SCIENTIFIC GUARANTEED METHOD.

STOP GAS PAINS.

Par. 3. All of said statements, together with other similar statements appearing in respondent’s advertising that are not herein set out in full purport to be descriptive of respondent’s method of undertaking to cure or relieve indigestion, heartburn, excess gas in the stomach and other distressed intestinal and stomach conditions and the effectiveness of respondent’s method in curing or relieving said ailments and conditions. Through said statements, the respondent represents that his recommended methods or treatments set out in his books and pamphlets form competent and effective cures or competent and effective treatments for the relief of all cases of indigestion, heartburn, excess gas in the stomach and other distressed intestinal and stomach conditions.

Par. 4. In addition, the use of the trade name which includes the word “Institute” serves as a representation to members of the public that the respondent is conducting an institute which is some sort of an organization devoted to the scientific study of the various ailments and conditions of the human body hereinabove named and to a study of competent and effective remedies, treatments and cures for said ailments and conditions and that said organization is primarily interested in such scientific investigation rather than in the sale of any books and pamphlets or other articles of commerce.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact, the representations made by the respondent with respect to the effect of his method of treating the above named ills and conditions are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the study of respondent’s books and pamphlets and the use of his method set out herein will not afford relief in three minutes or in any other length of time for all persons suffering from distressed heartburn, indigestion or gas. The methods described in respondent’s pamphlets consist principally in a series of body movements which will not have any effect in overcoming the causative factors in the production of gas either in the stomach or in the intestines. The use of such body movements will not afford permanent aid in this respect and is not in all cases a reliable procedure for the relief of such ailments and conditions. The use of respondent's method will not afford relief in cases of indigestion.

The respondent does not operate any institute within the commonly accepted meaning of that term. He does not conduct any place where research or scientific investigation is conducted and he maintains no scientific body or group of persons cooperating in research work. The business conducted by the respondent is nothing more than a private venture designed, intended, and used in the furtherance of the sale of his aforementioned books and pamphlets.

Par. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute and sell various books, pamphlets or products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating the various ailments and conditions of the human body, hereinabove named, who do not, in any way, misrepresent the nature or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used and who do not misrepresent their true status as private business ventures.

Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating and describing his business status and the effectiveness of the methods set out in his books and pamphlets for curing, treating or relieving the aforementioned ailments and conditions of the human body were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that upon following respondent's methods of treatment, the results claimed will be accomplished. Further, as a consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced as aforesaid, a number of the consuming public have purchased and used a substantial number of respondent's books and pamphlets with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors described in paragraph 6 hereof. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the several states of the United States.

Par. 8. The aforementioned methods, acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issued and served its complaint upon respondent, Joseph Rosenfeld, an individual, trading under the name and style, Rightway Institute, charging respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, as commerce is defined in said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Clarence T. Sadler, and Sherman R. Hill, attorneys for the Commission, before Charles P. Vicini, examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondent in his own behalf, and said testimony and other evidence has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the testimony and other evidence and briefs of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint and that of the respondent in his own behalf; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

 Paragraph 1. The respondent, Joseph Rosenfeld, is an individual trading under the name and style "Rightway Institute," with his principal office and place of business at 815 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent sold and distributed in interstate commerce, from 1929 until February 1937, a course of instruction represented as a treatment and cure for indigestion, heartburn, and relief of gas on the stomach and in the intestines, designating such course as the "Rightway Method," and representing that he conducted the "Rightway Institute" and "Rightway Method Company," and that the Rightway Method is a scientific method and a "wonderful cure guaranteed as a means for quick relief from indigestion and gas pains."

Par. 2. The respondent during the time herein stated in paragraph 1, sold and distributed in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, books and pamphlets variously designated under the titles or captions "Rightway Method," "Relief Without Medication," and "Rightway Institute," and others, which contain, or are purported to contain a system, or method of exercising for the treatment of, or relief from indigestion, gas on the stomach and in the intestines, and pains and distress in the stomach and intestines. Respondent likewise caused statements to be published in advertisements, magazines, newspapers, periodicals, and other media, circulated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in books, pamphlets, circulars, and letters describing his said method of treatment, distributed by respondent from his place of business in Los Angeles, Calif., through the mails and otherwise, to purchasers or prospective purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course of the operation of his said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase by the public of his said books, pamphlets, and other literature outlining and describing his said system or method, respondent caused his trade name, "Rightway Institute," to be prominently and conspicuously displayed. Respondent also represented that his said method was a scientific method, and guaranteed that the $3 spent for his method of treatment would be the last money one would need to spend; and made the following further statements and representations:

The Rightway Method is a wonderful cure and I can recommend it to anyone who is distressed with heartburn caused from indigestion and gas.

And if you decide to try the Rightway Method, the Rightway Institute positively guarantees you that the $3 you spend will be the last money you will need to spend.

And knowing the "Rightway" not any of you will be without the means for quick, blessed relief from the evils of indigestion no matter where you happen to be.

Do this and you will obtain the same prompt and gratifying results as the other numerous users of the "Rightway."

You can rest assured that with it you get rid of your gas distress promptly.

Safe! and Sure!

Gas Pains relieved in three minutes.

I can truthfully say I am entirely cured from my old ailment that I had been troubled with for years.

Scientific guaranteed method.

Stop gas pains.

Through these statements and representations respondent represents that his business is that of an institute or scientific research body conducted by graduate medical doctors and specially-trained experts in physical culture; that his method of treatment is a scientific method, the result of research and scientific tests; that the method will relieve diseases caused from indigestion and gas on the stomach and intestines and will relieve or cure pains in the stomach and intestines produced by gas in the stomach and intestines no matter from what cause; and that the $3 paid for his method of treatment will be all the expense that will be necessary to effect relief from or cure of such distress, pain or disease.

Par. 4. An institute as represented by respondent in his advertising matter, as set out in paragraph 3 hereof, signifies an institution or organization for scientific research. In truth and in fact, respondent does not conduct and never has conducted an institute. In conducting similar businesses, as herein stated, respondent used several designations and names for his business other than those set out in his said advertising matter; and, ascertaining that the State Board of Health of the State of California would permit the use of the word "institute" in the manner described by him in the conduct of such business, employed and now employs the word "institute" as described. Respondent has no place of business other than desk space from which his business is transacted, and conducts such business without the aid of employees or assistants. Respondent is not a physician and has no knowledge of physical culture and does not have associated with him and does not consult with any physician or specialist in physical culture in the conduct of his business. Respondent has never made or caused to be made any physical examination of the customers or prospective purchasers and users of his system or method of treatment, and has never made or caused to be made and there has not been made at his instance any clinical test of the therapeutic value of his system or method of treatment sold and shipped as herein set out, the exercises provided for in respondent's system or method cannot be properly represented as a treatment or cure for heartburn caused by indigestion or gas, and would not remove gas from the stomach or intestines. Gas is caused or produced in the human stomach and intestines by various causes, and unless the cause is removed gas will continue to form. The causes of such gas formations can be determined only by physical examination by graduate medical practitioners or specially-trained physical experts. The respondent's suggested system or method will not relieve or cure such condition, irrespective of its cause and respondent's system or method is not a scientific system or method curing indigestion and removing gas from the intestines and stomach; it is not a safe and sure cure for the relief of pain and distress caused by such gas formation. There are certain conditions sometimes attending persons suffering gas pains wherein the use of respondent's system or method would be dangerous.
PAR. 5. There were and are among respondent's competitors many who manufactured and compounded, and who manufacture and compound, various products and publish various books, pamphlets and treatises on methods designed and intended for the purpose of relieving, curing or treating the various ailments or conditions of the human body, similar to or like those which respondent represented his method would relieve or cure, who sold and distributed and who sell and distribute, said products and publications in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who did not and do not in any way misrepresent the nature and character of their respective products, methods and treatments, or their effectiveness when used, and who did not and do not misrepresent their true status as private business ventures.

PAR. 6. The statements and representations made by respondent, as set out in paragraph 3 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public and persons suffering from indigestion and gas on the stomach and in the intestines and who suffer from pains in the stomach and intestines caused from gas due to indigestion or other causes. Customers and potential customers throughout the several States of the United States, reading the statements made by respondent as set out in paragraph 3 hereof, have been deceived and misled into the false and erroneous belief that the said statements of the respondent were and are true, and that the system or method referred to has a definite and valuable therapeutic effect in the treatment of indigestion and the maladies and diseases causing gas and pain in the stomach and intestines. The said statements and representations also have had and have a tendency and capacity to cause members of the consuming public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase and use the system or method referred to for sale and sold by the respondent instead of purchasing and using the remedies, products and courses of treatment of competitors of the respondent devised, intended and used for the treatment of the same or similar maladies, diseases and pathological conditions of the human body. Substantial testimony of expert and lay witnesses shows, and the Commission finds, that the respondent's representations, as aforesaid, relative to the method or course of treatment sold by him, are exaggerated, misleading, false, and deceptive and tend to and do divert trade to respondent from those of his competitors who do not use such false and deceptive acts and practices in the sale of methods of treatment by correspondence, and commodities sold for like or similar ailments and diseases, for which respondent represents his methods to be a cure, with the result that substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Joseph Rosenfeld, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (no answer having been filed by respondent) testimony and other evidence taken before Charles P. Vicini, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein by Carrel F. Rhodes, counsel for the Commission, and by respondent, Joseph Rosenfeld, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph Rosenfeld, individually, or trading as the Rightway Institute, or any other trade name, his representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of courses of instruction in the system or method of exercising, now known as the Rightway Method, whether sold under that name or any other name, or any other similar or comparable system or method of exercising, under whatever name sold, and in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of books, pamphlets, or other written matter describing said system or method of exercising, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that said system or method of exercising is a scientific way to relieve indigestion or stomach and intestinal gas.

2. Representing, directly or by implication, that said system or method of exercising will cure indigestion or stomach and intestinal gas.

3. Representing, directly or by implication, that said system or method of exercising can be used with safety by all persons suffering from indigestion or stomach and intestinal gas.
4. Representing through the use of the word "institute" in his trade name or through the use of any other word or words, or in any other manner, that the respondent maintains a trained technical staff of employees and a properly equipped laboratory for the conduct of scientific research and experiments as to the use and effect of exercising in the treatment and cure of indigestion or stomach and intestinal gas, or that respondent's said system or method of exercising is founded on or the result of such research and experiments, unless and until respondent actually operates and controls an establishment staffed and equipped for the conduct of such scientific research and experiments wherein respondent's system or method of exercising has been scientifically tested and proven by recognized standards.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

J. P. SHEEHAN, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS NATIONAL ADVERTISERS COMPANY

COMplaint, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of watches, radios, pipe sets, electric mixers, and a variety of other articles of merchandise to purchasers in various other states and in the District of Columbia; in selling and distributing his said merchandise—

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. P. Sheehan, individually and trading as National Advertisers Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, J. P. Sheehan, is an individual trading as National Advertisers Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 230 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, radios, pipe sets, pen and pencil sets, electric mixers, silverware, electric roasters, vacuum cleaners, electric toasters, electric dry shavers, cameras, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Illinois to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in commerce, as hereinabove described, furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance.
Complaint

The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public in commerce, as hereinabove described, certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said products and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 48 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 48 small, partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, or whether a person shall receive an article of merchandise without cost, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 10, 1939 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, J. P. Sheehan, individually, and trading as National Advertisers Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 20, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted that from on or about April 15, 1938 to on or about December 31, 1938, he was engaged in business as described in the complaint, and for further answer admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent J. P. Sheehan is an individual trading as National Advertisers Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 230 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, within the period above set forth, was engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, radios, pipe sets, pen and pencil sets, electric mixers, silverware, electric roasters, vacuum cleaners, toasters, electric dry shavers, cameras, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent caused said products, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Illinois to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There was within the period above set forth a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in commerce, as hereinabove described, furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was substantially as follows:

Respondent distributed to the purchasing public in commerce, as hereinabove described, certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said products and circulars explaining respondent’s plan of selling said push cards. One of respondent’s push cards bears 48 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 48 small, partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Person Selecting Name Under Seal Receives A Guaranteed

What you Draw
Numbers Over 29 Pay only 29¢

TARCO FOUNTAIN PEN

Write Your Name Opposite Name You Select on Reverse Side Push Out With Pencil.

Sales of respondent’s products by means of said push cards were made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums were allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser received an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser received, if any, or whether a person should receive an article of merchandise without cost, was thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards was the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnished the said push cards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to, and placed in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sold or distributed merchandise in competition with the respondent as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, had a tendency and capacity to, and did, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening proceeding and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. P. Sheehan, individually and trading as National Advertisers Co., or under any other name or names, his agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of watches, radios, pipe sets, pen and pencil sets, electric mixers, silverware, electric roasters, vacuum cleaners, electric toasters, electric dry shavers, cameras, or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.
2. Mailing, shipping or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.
3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

In the operations and activities hereinabove referred to, each and every one of said respondents is engaged, in interstate commerce, in practices which contemplate and result in the transportation of goods and commodities in interstate commerce and in making sales or purchases which directly affect and bring about interstate commerce.

Par. 10. Said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., has and does accept and receive, hold and retain, such so-called brokerage fees and commissions for the use and benefit of said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., and has transmitted and paid over and does transmit and pay over such so-called brokerage fees and commissions so received to said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., by means of dividend payments to said respondent, Francis B. Par. 11. In the aforesaid transactions, said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., is the agent and representative, acting in fact for and in behalf, and subject to the control, of said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co. In fact, such so-called brokerage fees or commissions are not transmitted and paid over, nor allowed and credited, by said respondent sellers, and other sellers, to said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., nor are the same accepted, received, held or retained by the said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., as payment for any services rendered to said respondent sellers, or other sellers, by said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., but on the contrary such so-called brokerage fees and commissions are so paid and received for the use and benefit of said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co. No services are or have been rendered to said respondent sellers, or other sellers, by said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., or by said agent, said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., in connection with the sale or purchase in interstate commerce of goods, wares or merchandise, for which said so-called brokerage fees or commissions are or have been paid or received. Reeves, Jr., and the receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co. from said respondent sellers, or other sellers, through said agent and representative, said respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., and said respondent, Francis B. Reeves, Jr., in the manner and under the circumstance hereinabove set forth, is in violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of Section 2 of the act described in the preamble hereof. The acceptance and receipt of said so-called brokerage fees and commissions by said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co. while acting in fact for and in behalf, and subject to the control, of said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., from said respondent sellers or other sellers, and the acceptance and receipt thereof for the use and benefit of said respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., is in violation of the terms of said statute.

them with violation of Section 2, subsection (c) of the said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Mr. J. J. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came up for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral argument of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Par. 9. In all of the transactions of purchase and sale of commodities, as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof, wherein the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. purchases commodities for the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. or negotiates or deals with the seller respondents and other sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. acts for and in behalf of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. only and under its control, and in such transactions the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. does not intend to, and in fact does not, represent the seller respondents or other sellers as their agent or act for or in behalf or under the control of the seller respondents or other sellers, and does not intend to, and in fact does not, render to the seller respondents or other sellers any services in connection with the sale of commodities to the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co.

All of the officers and directors of the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. have owned stock in the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co.

Respondent, Francis B. Reeves, Jr., has been paid a substantial salary by the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. and has been allowed a drawing account by the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co.

There has been no knowledge with regard to customer or consumer demand, requirements of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., or obligations of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. to the seller respondents or other sellers, available to the respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., while acting in his capacity as president and chief executive officer of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. which has not been equally available to him while acting in his capacity as president and chief executive officer of the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co.

There has been no function performed by the respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., while acting in his capacity as president and chief executive officer of the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. which could not have been performed by him in his capacity as president and chief executive officer of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co.

Par. 10. No selling services in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. are intended to be, or are, rendered to the seller respondents or other sellers by the respondents Tri-State Brokerage or Reeves Parvin & Co. or by any agent, representative or employee of either of said respondents.

In all matters and transactions wherein the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. negotiates or deals with sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. is the agent and representative of the respondent Reeves, Parvin & Co., and acts in fact for and in behalf, and is subject to the direct control, of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. and any benefits which may accrue to the seller respondents or other sellers from such negotiations or dealings are benefits wholly incidental to the purchasing services rendered the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. by the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co.

Par. 11. The seller respondents are fairly representative of a large group of sellers engaged in manufacturing various commodities which they sell and ship in interstate commerce as aforesaid to the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. and to other purchasers thereof. CONCLUSION

The Commission concludes as follows with regard to the application of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, to the facts heretofore found:

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, a buyer on his own purchases, whether the same is paid directly to the buyer or transmitted to him through an intermediary set up or employed by him for that purpose, is a practice prescribed by said paragraph of said act.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. has paid dividends in substantial amounts to respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., from the profits made from the payment of the so-called brokerage fees and commissions paid and delivered to respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. by respondent sellers and other sellers upon the purchases of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., all of which dividends have been transmitted and paid over by respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr. to respondent Reeves Parvin & Co.

No selling services whatsoever were in fact rendered to sellers in connection with the purchases of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. by either the respondent Tri-State Brokerage Co. or the respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., or the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., within the meaning of said paragraph of said act.

Since June 19, 1936, the seller respondents and other sellers have paid and transmitted so-called brokerage fees or commissions in substantial amounts to, and the same have been received by, the respondent, Tri-State Brokerage Co., the respondent, Reeves Parvin & Co. and the respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., upon the purchases of the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co. in violation of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents W. N. Clark Co., Martin Gillet & Co., H. J. McGrath Co., Natural Sugars, Inc., Nectar Syrup Corporation, Phillips Sales Co., Inc., their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Robert W. Mairs, in connection with the sale of commodities in interstate commerce to the respondent, Reeves, Parvin & Co., do forthwith cease and desist from granting, paying, transmitting, and delivering to any one of the respondents Tri-State Brokerage Co., Reeves Parvin & Co., their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Francis B. Reeves, Jr., either in his capacity as an officer, director or employee of either of said respondents Tri-State Brokerage Co. or Reeves Parvin & Co., or in his indi-individual capacity, in connection with the purchases of commodities in interstate commerce by the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., do forthwith cease and desist from accepting or receiving from sellers any fees or commissions as brokerage or allowance in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents Reeves Parvin & Co., Tri-State Brokerage Co., their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondent Francis B. Reeves, Jr., either in his capacity as an officer, director or employee of either of said respondents Reeves Parvin & Co. or Tri-State Brokerage Co., or in his individual capacity, in connection with the purchases of commodities in interstate commerce by the respondent Reeves Parvin & Co., do forthwith cease and desist from accepting or receiving from sellers any fees or commissions as brokerage or allowance in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That the parties respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of "Breatheasy," preparation, and atomizer or "nebulizer" for treatment of asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and in the sale and distribution thereof through distributors and drug stores in the various States, in substantial competition with those engaged in interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for, and useful in, treatment of such diseases, and of atomizers for use in connection therewith; in extensively advertising its said product through various newspapers of interstate circulation and through radio broadcasts having Interstate transmission, and through booklets and circulars issued and distributed by it—

Represented that said preparation was a cure or remedy for asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, which could be used successfully without following any particular form of diet, and constituted a harmless remedy which would return the user to vigorous, buoyant health, and was the one sure relief available for treatment of asthma, and constituted a "doctor" ever ready to relieve asthmatics, through such statements, among others, as "For Asthma * * ," " * * only one Remedy for Asthma And that Remedy is Breatheasy," "* * * the one, sure asthmatic relief available today * * * gives a sense of well-being, a return to vigorous, buoyant health * * ," " * * no diet is necessary. You may eat anything you may desire";

Facts being asthma, as classified by medical profession, may result from many varying causes, no specific cure for asthma is recognized by said profession, and such preparation is not cure therefor nor for hay fever, and, while preparation in question, as well as many other remedies containing adrenalin, may in some cases temporarily relieve asthma, it does not constitute treatment therefor, and use thereof will not bring about or restore vigorous, buoyant health or give absolute and instant relief to sufferers therefrom, proper diet is very important in many cases and may become means of effecting a cure, and said product should not be taken at all in many cases in which diet is essential, and is no less dangerous to user because taken through "nebulizer" than if taken through hypodermic injection;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive public into erroneous belief that said "Breatheasy" was in truth and in fact a remedy and cure for asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and that in use thereof it was not necessary to follow any particular diet, and to induce such purchasing public to buy said "Breatheasy" in preference to other preparations designed for treatment of aforesaid diseases and offered for sale by manufacturers, retailers and distributors, and with result of unfairly diverting trade to it from such manufacturers, retailers, and distributors of such other preparations who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof:

_Held_, that such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for the other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pascal Company, Inc. has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 1014 American Bank Building, Second Street at Madison, in the city of Seattle, within the State of Washington. Said respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of a product known as "Breatheasy" for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of an atomizer or so-called "nebulizer" for administering the preparation "Breatheasy," and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said "Breatheasy" and the nebulizer, when sold by it, to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the State of Washington and in various States of the United States other than the State of Washington. There is now and has been for a long time, to wit, for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in said "Breatheasy" and said nebulizer, between and among the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent is now and for a long time, to wit, for more than 1 year last past, has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States with sundry other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for the treatment of asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and of atomizers or nebulizers for use in connection therewith.
Par. 2. The preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer used in connection therewith are manufactured by said respondent and are sold and distributed by said respondent through distributors and drug stores located in the various States of the United States.
Par. 3. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business as hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 1 and 2, has been and now is engaged in extensive advertisement of its said products as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer for use in connection therewith, and as media of such advertising it has been and now is using various newspapers of interstate circulation, and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate reception. Said respondent also issues booklets and circulars describing the said product "Breatheasy.”
Said respondent in its said advertisements of the preparation
"Breatheasy" and the atomizer or nebulizer used in connection therewith, manufactured and distributed by it, has made and is now making various false, deceptive, and misleading statements concerning said products. Among the statements which said respondent has used and is now using in its advertisements in newspapers and over the radio and in its booklets and circulars distributed with its said products, are the following:

ASTHMA

Breatheasy

Breatheasy is a creation of a physician, who himself suffered from asthma, and was developed until now it gives absolute, instant and complete relief.
For asthmatics who seek relief, they will find this remedy their “doctor,” ever ready to relieve them.

BREATHEASY means exactly what the name implies. It is the one, sure asthmatic relief available today. In working its wonders, BREATHEASY gives a sense of well-being, a return to vigorous, buoyant health. BREATHEASY was developed by a physician who suffered from asthma, and, in striving for relief, he evolved this marvelous remedy. IF YOU suffer from asthma or if any of your friends are afflicted with the symptoms stop in at the West End Drug Store, First and Monroe, and ask to have this thoroughly marvelous treatment demonstrated. Remember, there is no charge.

Asthmatics everywhere hail the BREATHEASY method as the one remedy that can be relied upon.

During the use of “Breatheasy,” no diet is necessary. You may eat anything you may desire.

In truth and in fact, “Breatheasy” is not a remedy for and it does not cure asthma. In any treatment for asthma the proper diet is essential, as mucus-forming foods are injurious in cases of asthma.

Respondent in its said advertising has created and is now creating upon the public the false impression and erroneous belief that “Breatheasy” is a reliable and dependable remedy and cure for asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and that in the use of the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet. In fact, “Breatheasy” is not a reliable and dependable cure for asthma, hay fever or kindred diseases.

Par. 4. The use by the said respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading representations has had and does now have the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and untrue belief that “Breatheasy” is in truth and in fact a remedy for and will cure asthma, hay fever and kindred diseases, and that in using the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet. Acting in such erroneous belief, the consuming public, and especially that portion of the public suffering from asthma, hay fever, or kindred diseases, have been induced and are now induced to purchase “Breatheasy” in preference to other preparations designed for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and offered for sale by manufacturers, retail dealers, and distributors. As a result of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations on the part of said respondent, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such manufacturers, retail dealers, or distributors of other preparations for treating asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results obtained from the use thereof.

Par. 5. Said false, deceptive, and misleading representations of said respondent, contained in its advertisements, have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers, and in prejudice to the buying public, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its power and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 15th day of October 1936, issued and on October 20, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., charging said respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Reuben J. Martin, attorney for the Commission, before Henry M. White, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Clarence L. Gere, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, no oral argument having been heard, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being advised in the premises found that this proceeding was in the interest of the public and made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom on September 8, 1937. Thereafter, on February 16, 1938, on motion of Clarence L. Gere, counsel for the respondent, the Commission made its modified findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing on the motion of W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, to further modify the findings as to the facts and the conclusion drawn therefrom, and on the objection of respondent thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises and in accordance with its order entered herein granting said motion, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its modified findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 1014 American Bank Building, Second Street at Madison, in the city of Seattle, within the State of Washington. Said respondent is now, and has been since July 19, 1936, engaged in the manufacture and sale of a preparation known as "Breatheasy" for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of an atomizer or so-called "nebulizer" for administering the preparation "Breatheasy," and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes said "Breatheasy" and the "nebulizer" when sold by it to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the State of Washington and in various States of the United States other than the State of Washington. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in said "Breatheasy" and said "nebulizer" between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and since July 19, 1936, has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States with sundry other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of other preparations recommended for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and of atomizers or "nebulizers" for use in connection therewith, which said preparations are useful in the treatment of said diseases.

Paragraph 2. The preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer," used in connection therewith, are manufactured by said respondent and are sold and distributed by said respondent through distributors and drug stores located in the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 3. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business has been, and now is engaged in extensive advertising of its said products as a means of furthering and aiding in the interstate sale and distribution of "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer" for use in connection therewith, and as media of such advertising it has been, and now is using various newspapers of interstate circulation and broadcasts over radio stations having interstate transmission. Said respondent also issues and distributes booklets and circulars describing the said preparation "Breatheasy."
Par. 4. The respondent, in its said advertisements of the preparation "Breatheasy" and the atomizer or "nebulizer" used in connection therewith manufactured and distributed by it, has made, and is now making, various statements regarding the efficacy of said preparation known as "Breatheasy" in the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases. Among the statements which said respondent has used, and is now using, in its advertisements in newspapers and over the radio, and in its booklets and circulars distributed with its said products are the following:

BREATHEASY is beneficial, according to authorities, in asthma and chronic bronchitis, in heart disease and cardiac distress, in gastric ulcer, in serum rashes, urticaria (hives) and other skin diseases of the erythematous and exzematous types, in hay fever, in inflammation of the nose, throat, tonsils, larynx and lungs, and in neuralgia and neuritis. This by no means completes the list, but it suffices to show the enormous value of this substance elaborated by the adrenal glands and what may happen if they are deficient.

Of course you know that epinephrin is the only specific remedy for asthma and hay fever, and that it has been in the hands of the medical profession for the past twenty years. PAR. 5. The respondent corporation is owned by Dr. Benjamin S. Paschall and other members of his family. Dr. Paschall is a physician and chief chemist of the respondent corporation. The respondent is engaged in the business of making pharmaceutics and its principal product is epinephrin. The product epinephrin, together with the "nebulizer," an apparatus for administering the epinephrin, constitutes the commodity sold to the public in interstate commerce by the respondent under the trade name of "Breatheasy." The respondent maintains a laboratory in which the product epinephrin is manufactured. The product epinephrin is a solution of epinephrin hydrochlorides, at least 2½ percent, put up in physiological salt solution containing traces of carminatives and preservatives of chemically pure grade. Its structure is racemic.

PAR. 6. Epinephrin may be obtained in two ways, namely, by synthetically building it up in the laboratory, and also by extracting it from the glands of animals. The epinephrin sold by the respondent is obtained synthetically. The epinephrin is put into the "nebulizer" and by means of the "nebulizer" is breathed into the lungs of the user. The epinephrin is not injected into the user by means of a hypodermic needle. The "nebulizer" sold and distributed by the respondent is an instrument which turns liquid into vapor and is the means by which the user takes the medicine into the body. The "nebulizer" is manufactured by the respondent for use in connection with its product epinephrin, and epinephrin, together with the "nebulizer," constitutes the commodity sold as "Breatheasy." The chemical ingredients used by respondent in manufacturing its epinephrin are purchased by the respondent in the open market for use in respondent's laboratory. Epinephrin contains the same properties as adrenaline and is synthetic adrenaline. The preparation "Breatheasy" is sold by the respondent for the purpose of treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases. Adrenaline has been constantly used by the medical profession for thirty years in the palliative treatment of asthma to temporarily relieve asthmatic spasms and has been customarily administered to the patient hypodermically.

PAR. 7. True asthma, is defined as "A condition of shortness of breath caused by the constriction of the bronchial muscles and by the exudation of mucus into the narrow bronchial passages, the reason for which is a reflex due to the ingestion or inhalation of substances to which the patient is hypersensitive." There are many various forms of asthma or physical conditions which are generally classified by the medical profession as asthma. The basic causes of the ailments classified by the medical profession as asthma are not yet known to the medical profession, and asthma may result from many varying causes.

PAR. 8. There is no specific cure for asthma generally recognized by the medical profession. "Breatheasy" is not a cure for asthma nor is it a cure for hay fever. Asthma may be, and often is, cured when the cause of the asthma is known and eliminated. The elimination of the cause of asthma may sometimes be produced by surgery and by other methods, but it cannot be eliminated by "Breatheasy." "Breatheasy" as well as many other remedies containing adrenaline, may in some cases temporarily relieve asthma. "Breatheasy" does not constitute a treatment for asthma, and its use will not bring about or restore vigorous, buoyant health.

PAR. 9. "Breatheasy" will not give "absolute, instant, and complete relief" to sufferers from asthma and is not a sure relief for persons suffering with asthma. The use of "Breatheasy" is not harmless in all cases, and there are cases where its use would be distinctly dangerous.

PAR. 10. In many cases of asthma, proper diet is very important and may become the means of effecting a cure. Many persons suffer from asthma due to being allergic to certain foods. In such cases diet is essential, as only by refraining from using the particular food to which the sufferer is allergic may a cure be effected. In such cases diet is essential and "Breatheasy" will not give relief in these cases independent of the proper diet. In many of such cases "Breatheasy" should not be used at all. Epinephrin is no less dangerous to the user because it is taken by means of a "nebulizer" than it would be if taken by means of a hypodermic injection.

PAR. 11. The advertisements and representations made to the purchasing public by the respondent, as hereinbefore set out in paragraph 4, are false and misleading. They have had, and do now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous and untrue belief that "Breatheasy" is in truth and in fact a remedy for, and will cure, asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, and that in the use of the same it is not necessary to follow any particular diet, and to induce such purchasing public to purchase "Breatheasy" in preference to other preparations designed for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases and offered for sale by manufacturers, retail dealers, and distributors. The result of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations on the part of said respondent is to unfairly divert trade to said respondent from such manufacturers, retailers or distributors of other preparations for treating asthma, hay fever, and kindred diseases, who do not misrepresent the character and quality of their respective products or the results to be obtained from the use thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the motion of W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, to modify the findings as to the facts and the conclusion drawn therefrom and the order to cease and desist issued in this proceeding on February 16, 1938, upon the objection of respondent thereto, and the Commission having duly considered said motion and the record herein, and having granted said motion, and being now fully advised in the premises.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pascal Co. Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of the preparation now known as, and sold under the name "Breatheasy," or any preparation, under whatever name sold, composed of the same or similar ingredients, and possessing similar therapeutic properties, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing that

(a) Said preparation is a cure or remedy for asthma, hay fever, or kindred diseases.

(b) Said preparation can be successfully used without following any particular form of diet.

(c) Said preparation is a harmless remedy which will return the user to vigorous, buoyant health.

(d) Said preparation will give relief to those suffering from asthma, other than temporary relief from asthmatic spasms.

(e) Said preparation is the one sure relief available for the treatment of asthma.

(f) Said preparation is a "doctor" ever ready to relieve asthmatics.

(g) And from making any other similar representations of like import or effect as to the therapeutic or medicinal value of said preparation.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Pascal Co., Inc., shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist here-inabove set forth.
IN THE MATTER OF CANADIAN CHAMOIS & LEATHER CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 6 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3691. Complaint, Jan. 24, 1939—Decision, Apr. 18, 1939

Where a corporation engaged in sale, under trade name "Cham-O-Line," of leather interlinings for coats and similar garments, to purchasers in commerce between the several States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution of leather interlinings for coats, and also with those thus engaged in such manufacture, sale and distribution of coat linings not of leather, in commerce as aforesaid and in said District, and including, among such competitors, manufacturers of products similar to those made and sold by it who do not in any wise designate same as "chamois" or represent their said products, through use of words and phrases such as "Cham-O-Line," with view to misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers into belief they are chamois—

Made use of its corporate name, including word "Chamois," in offer and sale of its said product as aforesaid, and stamped on said product, which it thus invoiced and sold, word "Cham-O-Line," and made use of tags featuring head of a goat and, conspicuously, words "Interlined with 'CHAM-O-LINE,'" together with, in smaller, less conspicuous type, words "The New Chamois-Like Animal Hide Interlining • • •" and, at bottom, "'Cham-O-Line' will not shrivel or dry up like ordinary Chamois," which it furnished to purchasers and customers by whom coats and garments made by them with its said product were advertised as having interlinings as represented by it, and tags furnished as aforesaid were affixed to such coats and garments, and by some of whom said garments, thus tagged and interlined, were advertised in said connection as "a new Chamois Interlining—especially treated to prevent it becoming stiff when cleaned" or as "chamois-lined Back";

Notwithstanding fact that product dealt in and represented by it as above set forth was not in fact the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned inner skin of the sheep, as long commercially known and understood from word "chamois" as meaning very soft and pliable product commercially sold under said name, but was made from wild pig and skins other than oil-tanned inner sheepskin or the practically extinct chamois antelope, and, while having same general appearance, did not have peculiar qualities or properties of articles known to trade and public as chamois;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers of said product, through use of its aforesaid designations, advertisements, letterheads, invoices, price lists, and tags as above set forth, into the belief that it was the skin of the chamois antelope or oil-tanned inner skin of the sheep, or chamois, and into purchase of said product in such erroneous belief in preference to products of its competitors, and with result of placing in hands of dealers and retailers means of misleading and deceiving purchasing public, and with capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers as above set forth, and with result of thereby unfairly diverting trade to it from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of similar products in commerce and in said District:

_Held,_ That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

_Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner._

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Mr. Victor F. Boire, of Plattsburgh, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Canadian Chamois & Leather Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

_PARAGRAPH 1._ Respondent, Canadian Chamois & Leather Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal place of business located at 220 West Nineteenth Street in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the business of selling leather interlinings for coats and similar garments under the trade name "Cham-O-Line" in commerce between and among the State of New York and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said product is sold respondent transports it from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

There is now and for some time past there has been a current of trade and commerce in said products thus sold and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for some time past has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of leather interlining for coats, as well as others engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of coat linings not of leather, in commerce among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 2. Respondent, in offering for sale and selling its said product between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, now represents, and for some time past has represented through its corporate name containing the word "chamois" and by advertisements, price lists, letterheads, invoices, and in other ways, as hereinafter more fully set out, that the aforesaid product is chamois. Respondent sells and has sold its said interlining product to purchasers who used and now use said product in the manufacture of coats and similar garments, which coats and similar garments said purchasers in turn advertise as having interlinings as represented by respondent. The said interlining product thus sold and invoiced by respondent to such customers had and still has the name "Cham-O-Line" stamped thereon. Tags were and are furnished by respondent to purchasers for their use. Said customers use and have used said tags by affixing the same to coats and similar garments in which respondent's said product was and is attached as an interlining. Said tags feature the head of a goat and the conspicuously printed words "Interlined with 'CHAM-O-LINE.'" In smaller, less conspicuous type appear the words "The New Chamois-Like Animal Hide Interlining * * *" and, at the bottom of the tag, "'Cham-O-Line' will not shrivel or dry up like ordinary Chamois."

Respondent sold and now sells said interlining product to purchasers located in various States. Certain of said purchasers who used and now use the aforesaid tags on garments interlined with said product and which they offered and now offer for sale and sold, caused and now cause their said garments to be advertised as "a new Chamois interlining—especially treated to prevent it becoming stiff when cleaned" or as "chamois-lined back."

Par. 3. Chamois has its origin in the name of an European antelope, the skin of which is made into a soft, pliable leather which is used in the manufacture of gloves and for the polishing of silver and metals, and makes a desirable leather lining in a coat. The chamois antelope is now practically extinct, and its skin is no longer an article of commerce. At the present and for a long time last past, the word "chamois" as commercially known is used to designate the inner part of a sheepskin which when oil dressed is a very soft and pliable product sold commercially under the name of "chamois." Said product likewise is valuable for polishing and cleaning purposes, and for coat interlinings, possessing particularly the power of quickly absorbing moisture and returning thereafter, when dried, to its original softness and pliable quality. The only trade name and designation given to the skin of a chamois antelope and to oil dressed sheepskin is the word "chamois," and the word "chamois" means to the retail trade and to the public either the skin of a chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of a sheep.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact, the product dealt in and as represented by respondent, as set out in paragraphs one and two hereof is not in fact the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep, but is an article manufactured from wild pig, and skins other than oil-tanned sheepskin or the chamois antelope, and have the same general appearance but not the peculiar qualities or properties of articles known to the public and trade as "chamois."

Par. 5. The use by respondent of the aforesaid designations of its product, and of the advertisements, letterheads, invoices, price lists and tags described in paragraph 2 hereof, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived purchasers of the aforesaid product of respondent into the belief that such product is chamois, to wit: the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep, and into the purchase of said product of respondent in such erroneous belief in preference to the products of its said competitors, and has placed and places in the hands of dealers and retailers the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

Par. 6. Among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, are manufacturers of products similar to those made and sold by respondent, but who do not in anywise designate such products as "chamois" or represent them, through the use of words and phrases such as "Cham-O-Line," with a view to misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers into the belief that they are chamois.

Par. 7. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that the interlining product sold by respondent is chamois and into the purchase of said product on account of such belief. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from respondent's competitors in commerce as herein set out, referred to in paragraph 5 hereof and as a consequence thereof substantial injury is done, and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 24, 1939, issued, and on January 26, 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Canadian Chamois & Leather Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 29, 1939, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Canadian Chamois & Leather Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal place of business located at 220 West Nineteenth Street in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the business of selling leather interlinings for coats and similar garments under the trade name "Cham-O-Line" in commerce between and among the State of New York and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said product is sold respondent transports it from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

There is now and for some time past there has been a current of trade and commerce in said product thus sold and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for some time past has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of leather interlining for coats, as well as others engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of coat linings not of leather, in commerce among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. Respondent, in offering for sale and selling its said product between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, now represents, and for some time past has represented through its corporate name containing the word "chamois" and by advertisements, price lists, letterheads, invoices, and in other ways, as hereinafter more fully set out, that the aforesaid product is chamois. Respondent sells and has sold its said interlining product to purchasers who used and now use said product in the manufacture of coats and similar garments, which coats and similar garments said purchasers in turn advertise as having interlinings as represented by respondent. The said interlining product thus sold and invoiced by respondent to such customers had and still has the name "Cham-O-Line" stamped thereon. Tags were and are furnished by respondent to purchasers for their use. Said customers use and have used said tags by affixing the same to coats and similar garments in which respondent's said product was and is attached as an interlining. Said tags feature the head of a goat and the conspicuously printed words "Interlined with 'CHAM-O-LINE'." In smaller, less conspicuous type appear the words "The New Chamois-like Animal Hide Interlining * * *" and, at the bottom of the tag, "'Cham-O-Line' will not shrivel or dry up like ordinary Chamois."

Respondent sold and now sells said interlining product to purchasers located in various States. Certain of said purchasers who used and now use the aforesaid tags on garments interlined with said product and which they offered and now offer for sale and sold, caused and now cause their said garments to be advertised as "a new Chamois interlining—especially treated to prevent it becoming stiff when cleaned" or as "chamois-lined Back."

PAR. 3. Chamois has its origin in the name of an European antelope, the skin of which is made into a soft, pliable leather which is used in the manufacture of gloves and for the polishing of silver and metals, and makes a desirable leather lining in a coat. The chamois antelope is now practically extinct, and its skin is no longer an article of commerce. At the present and for a long time last past, the word "chamois" as commercially known is used to designate the inner part of a sheepskin which when oil dressed is a very soft and pliable product sold commercially under the name of "chamois." Said product likewise is valuable for polishing and cleaning purposes, and for coat interlinings, possessing particularly the power of quickly absorbing moisture and returning thereafter, when dried, to its original softness and pliable quality. The only trade name and designation given to the skin of a chamois antelope and to oil dressed sheepskin is the word "chamois," and the word "chamois" means to the retail trade and to the public either the skin of a chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of a sheep.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact, the product dealt in and as represented by respondent, as set out in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, is not in fact the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned inner skin of the sheep, but is an article manufactured from wild pig, and the skins other than oil-tanned inner sheepskin or the chamois antelope, and have the same general appearance but not the peculiar qualities or properties of articles known to the public and trade as “chamois.”

Par. 5. The use by respondent of the aforesaid designations of its product, and of the advertisements, letterheads, invoices, price lists, and tags described in paragraph 2 hereof, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived purchasers of the aforesaid product of respondent into the belief that such product is chamois, to-wit: the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned inner skin of the sheep, and into the purchase of said product of respondent in such erroneous belief in preference to the products of its said competitors, and has placed and places in the hands of dealers and retailers the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

Par. 6. Among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, are manufacturers of products similar to those made and sold by respondent, but who do not in any wise designate such products as “chamois” or represent them, through the use of words and phrases such as “Cham-O-Line,” with a view to misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers into the belief that they are chamois.

Par. 7. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that the interlining product sold by respondent is chamois and into the purchase of said product on account of such belief. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from respondent’s competitors likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint to be true, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Canadian Chamois & Leather Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of leather interlinings for coats and similar garments in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of the word "Chamois" in its corporate or trade name or otherwise, or through the use of any words or terms of similar import or meaning, or through any other means or device, or in any other manner, that respondent is a manufacturer of leather products made of Chamois, unless said products are in fact made from the skin of the Alpine antelope or Chamois or the oil dressed inner part of a sheep's skin.

2. Using the words "Chamois," "Cham-O-Line" or any word or words, phrases, terms or names simulating the word "Chamois," alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, in any manner whatever, to describe, designate, or refer to leather products not made from the skin of the Alpine antelope or Chamois or the oil dressed inner part of a sheep's skin.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent shall, within 60 days from the date of service upon it of this order, file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

(b) Removed from their packages, upon which were set forth, in conformance with applicable laws of the United States, words "Made in Germany" or "Germany," said thumbtacks, and sold same repacked in new containers with no words or marks thereon indicating said products' foreign origin to purchasers, by whom such products were resold to members of purchasing public, not informed by brand or mark as to said thumbtacks' German origin, and substantial number of members of which understand and believe that, absent indication of foreign origin on article of merchandise, such article was made or manufactured in the United States;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in various States and in said District into erroneous and mistaken belief that such merchandise was made in the United States, for purchase of which there is a preference on part of substantial number of dealers in said products and articles and members of purchasing public in the various States, and into buying substantial quantities of such merchandise because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and with result that trade in commerce among the various States and in said District was unfairly diverted to them from competitors aforesaid who truthfully brand, represent and mark their respective products:

Amended Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the American Merchandise Co., Inc., a corporation, and Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg, copartners, doing business under the firm name Greenberg & Josefsberg, and under the trade names American Merchandise Co., G & J Manufacturing Co., and G & J Products, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues this, its amended complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, American Merchandise Co., is a corporation, incorporated on or about June 18, 1933, under the laws of the State of New York, and having at all times since its incorporation its usual and principal place of business in the city of New York at the same place hereinafter mentioned as the place of business of the other respondents. At all times since the incorporation of the American Merchandise Co., Inc., the respondents Greenberg and Josefsberg are and have been the owners of all the shares of its capital stock and in control of its management and operation.

Paragraph 2. Respondents, Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg, are and have been copartners doing business under the firm name, Greenberg & Josefsberg, at all times since on or about January 21, 1930, in the city and State of New York and now having a place of business at 27-33 West Twenty-third Street, in said city. During said times the respondents, as copartners, also are and have been doing business at their said place of business under the trade names, American Merchandise Co., G & J Manufacturing Co., and G & J Products.

Paragraph 3. During all of the times above mentioned, the respondents are and have been engaged, among other things, in the importation of merchandise into the United States, including gloves and thumbtacks, and in the business of the sale of such merchandise, including the gloves and thumbtacks mentioned and referred to in paragraph 6 hereof, to individuals, firms, and corporations, purchasers of the merchandise, dealers therein for resale to the public, located in the various States of the United States other than New York or the State of origin of the shipment.

The respondents have caused and still cause the said merchandise, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of New York, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to, into, and through other States and the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof, located in said other States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, other individuals, firms, and corporations, hereinafter referred to as sellers, located in various States of the United States, are and have been engaged; some of them in the business of the domestic manufacture and sale of similar merchandise including gloves and thumbtacks; and others in the business of the importation and sale of such merchandise to dealers for resale to the public, purchasers thereof, located in the District of Columbia and the various States of the United States. The sellers, respectively, have caused the merchandise including gloves and thumbtacks, when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller or from the State of origin of the shipment, to, into, and through other States and the District of Columbia to the purchasers located in said other States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, the respondents are and have been in substantial competition in interstate commerce in the sale of the merchandise above referred to, including gloves and thumbtacks, with the other individuals, firms, and corporations, referred to as sellers in paragraph 4 hereof.

Par. 6. During all the times above mentioned, the respondents caused quantities of gloves and thumbtacks to be imported from Japan and Germany, respectively, and at the time of the entry of the same into the United States the gloves were, all of them, marked "Made in Japan" or "Japan," and the packages or containers of the thumbtacks were, all of them, marked "Made in Germany" or "Germany," indicating that the country of origin of the gloves was Japan and that Germany was the country of origin of the thumbtacks.

After the gloves and thumbtacks were entered in the United States, the respondents caused the words or marks indicating their foreign origin to be removed therefrom and thereafter sold the gloves and thumbtacks, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, to the dealers referred to in said paragraph 3, without any words or marks thereon indicating foreign origin, and caused them to be offered for sale and resold by the dealers to members of the public in that condition, without informing the dealers or the public to whom they were resold that the gloves and thumbtacks were the products of foreign countries.

Par. 7. Prior to and during all the times above mentioned, a substantial number of dealers in merchandise, and of the public, in the United States had a preference, in purchasing articles of merchandise, for articles of merchandise of United States origin and it has been required by law that articles of merchandise of foreign origin imported into the United States shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English, in a conspicuous place, in such manner as to indicate the country of origin.

The offering for sale and the sale by the respondents of gloves and thumbtacks made in foreign countries without any words or marks thereon indicating their foreign origin, constituted a representation by the respondents that the gloves and thumbtacks, above referred to, offered for sale, and sold by respondents, were made in the United States. The said representations by the respondents were untrue and they had the capacity and tendency to mislead and to deceive dealers and members of the public, purchasers of gloves and thumbtacks, and dealers and members of the public were misled and deceived thereby into the belief that they were true, and in reliance upon such belief into purchasing the respondents' said gloves and thumbtacks in preference to those made in the United States and sold by was thereby diverted to respondents from their competitors.

Par. 8. The above acts and things done and caused to be done by the respondents were and are, each and all, to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 2d day of December 1936, issued and served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, American Merchandise Co., Inc., and Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg, copartners doing business under the firm name of Greenberg and Josefsberg and under the trade names of American Merchandise Co., G & J Manufacturing Co., and G & J
Products, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 23d day of December 1936, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent American Merchandise Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at 27-33 West Twenty-third Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. The said corporation was incorporated on or about the 18th day of June 1933. At all times since the incorporation thereof, the respondents, Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg have been the owners of all the shares of capital stock of said corporation and have controlled the sales activities and policies of said corporation with respect to the acts and practices herein set forth.

Par. 2. Respondents Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg are, and have been, copartners since on or about January 21, 1930, doing business under the firm name Greenberg and Josefsberg and under the trade names American Merchandise Company, G & J Manufacturing Co., and G & J Products, and having their office and principal place of business at 27-33 West Twenty-third Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 3. During all the times mentioned herein, the respondents have been engaged, among other things, in the importation of merchandise, including glove hands and thumbtacks, into the United States, and in the sale and distribution of such merchandise to the purchasers thereof for resale to the purchasing public. The respondents have caused such merchandise, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States, other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. During all the times mentioned herein, the respondents have been engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the business of the sale and distribution of gloves and thumbtacks.

Par. 5. The respondents have caused quantities of glove hands to be imported from Japan into the United States and have caused quantities of thumbtacks to be imported from Germany into the United States. At the time of the entry of the same into the United States, the glove hands were marked "Made in Japan" or "Japan," and the packages containing the thumbtacks were marked "Made in Germany" or "Germany," which indicated that Japan was the country of origin of the glove hands and that Germany was the country of origin of the thumbtacks. During all the times above mentioned, it was required by the applicable laws of the United States that, at the time of the importation thereof, the said glove hands and the packages containing the said thumbtacks be so marked as to indicate the country of origin thereof.

After the respondents caused the glove hands to be imported into the United States, respondents caused the words or marks indicating their foreign origin to be removed therefrom and caused to be placed on the glove hands, cuffs made in the United States. After respondents caused the thumbtacks to be imported into the United States, the respondents caused the said tacks to be removed from the packages containing such tacks, on which was indicated the country of their origin, and caused such thumbtacks to be repacked in new packages or containers. The respondents, thereafter, sold the gloves and thumbtacks to the purchasers referred to in paragraph 3 hereof, without any words or marks on the glove hands of such gloves or on the packages, containing such thumbtacks, indicating their foreign origin. The purchasers of such gloves and thumbtacks from the respondents caused such merchandise to be resold to members of the purchasing public, who were not informed by brand or mark on such merchandise, that the glove hands were made in Japan and that the thumbtacks were made in Germany.

Par. 6. During all the times mentioned herein, a substantial number of dealers in gloves and thumbtacks and members of the purchasing public, situated in the various States of the United States, have had, and now have, a preference in purchasing gloves and thumbtacks for gloves and thumbtacks made in the United States.

Par. 7. During all the times mentioned herein, it has been the understanding and belief of a substantial number of members of the purchasing public that unless there is indicated on an article of merchandise a foreign country as the place of origin of such merchandise, that such article of merchandise was made or manufactured in the United States.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents in removing said marks or brands from the glove hands and in reboxing said thumbtacks and in offering for sale and selling such merchandise without any brands or marks thereon, or the containers thereof, indicating the foreign origin of such merchandise, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such merchandise was made in the United States and into purchasing substantial quantities of such merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result, trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their said competitors who truthfully brand, represent and mark their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between respondents herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents American Merchandise Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Harry Greenberg and Leo Josefsberg, individually and as copartners doing business under the firm name Greenberg and Josefsberg, and under the trade names of American Merchandise Company, G & J Manufacturing Co., and G & J Products, or under any other firm or trade name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of imported thumbtacks, glove hands, and other similar imported products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. Causing the brands or marks on imported glove hands, or other similar products, which indicate the foreign origin or manufacture of such merchandise, to be removed, erased, or concealed so as to mislead or deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture thereof.

2. Causing such imported thumbtacks, or other similar products, to be removed from the containers on which are brands or marks indicating the foreign origin or manufacture of such merchandise and to be placed in containers bearing no such brands or marks so as to mislead or deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

(a) Represented said "L'Acqua Otello" or "Otello Water" as not a dye, but "a preparation which gives your hair a natural color and vitality," and "a miraculous water which regenerates the hair bulb and brings back vitality," and which "rejuvenates the roots of the hairs, thus bringing back the natural color of the hair and vitality," and "restores gray hair to its natural color or vitality," facts being said product was a dye, contained in equal quantities ingredients which are constituent parts of similar hair dyes known and advertised as such, was not in any sense a miraculous water, and did not have what could be termed in any sense water as a component part, and would not rejuvenate the roots or bulbs of the hair or give hair a natural color and vitality, or restore natural color to gray hair; and

(b) Represented that said preparation ended and destroyed dandruff and stopped it and baldness and falling hair, and restored to its natural color or vitality gray hair, facts being it was not an effective cure for falling hair and dandruff and would not end latter and baldness and stop falling hair and destroy dandruff, nor give hair a natural color and vitality, or produce any new hair, and representations made by him with respect to nature and effect of his product were false and misleading;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief induced by his said advertising and representations as above set forth, that substantial number of purchasing public bought substantial quantities of his said product and trade was unfairly diverted to him from others engaged in like and similar business and in sale of preparations for head and hair, and who truthfully advertise their products:

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. Y., has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof will be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint and states its charges in that respect as follows:

Palazzolo, with his office and principal place of business located at 436 East Fourteenth Street, New York City, State of New York. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged, among other things, at said location, in the manufacture and sale of a hair dye for use in the dyeing of white or gray hair, which he designates and has designated "Otello Water" and also "L'Acqua Otello." He sells said product directly to the consumers and also to druggists, who in turn sell the same directly to consumers. Respondent's method of sale is usually through the mails.

In the course and conduct of his business respondent ships, or causes to be shipped or transported, his said product when so sold from the State of New York to said purchasers thereof located in points in various States of the United States other than the State of New York. Paragraph 3. the use of photographs and other pictures and on labels attached to, and in circulars inclosed in, the boxes or containers thereof. In, by, and through each and all of the advertising media above enumerated respondent has made and is making, expressly or by implication, the following statements or representations:

(a) L'Acqua Otello is not a dye but is a preparation which gives your hair a natural color, vitality.

(b) Otello Water for gray hair is not a tincture but a compound that restores gray hair to its natural color.

(c) It (Otello Water) ends dandruff, baldness.

(d) Otello Water is not a dye but a miraculous water which regenerates the hair bulb and brings back vitality.

(e) Otello Water destroys dandruff, stops falling hair.

(f) Otello Water for white hair is not a dye.

(g) Otello Water restores gray hair to its natural color or vitality.

(h) Otello Water rejuvenates the roots of the hairs thus bringing back the natural color of the hair and vitality.

Par. 4. The statements and representations set forth in the preceding paragraph are false and misleading in that:

(a) "Otello Water" or "L'Acqua Otello" is a dye.

(b) The use of "Otello Water" will not restore gray hair to its natural color or vitality.

(c) The use of "Otello Water" does not regenerate the hair bulb.

(d) The use of "Otello Water" does not end dandruff or baldness or affect the same beneficially.

(e) The use of "Otello Water" does not stop falling hair.

(f) "Otello Water" is not a miraculous water. It is not a water at all and it is a misnomer to call it a water. It is in fact a typical lead and sulphur hair dye.

(g) "Otello Water" for white hair is a dye.

(h) "Otello Water" does not restore gray hair to its natural color or vitality.

(i) The use of "Otello Water" does not rejuvenate the roots of the hair and does not bring back the natural color of the hair and vitality.

Par. 5. Said statements and representations set forth in paragraph 3 so made by respondent have, and have had, the tendency and capacity to induce the members of the public and prospective purchasers to form the mistaken and erroneous belief that said statements and representations are true, and acting in such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, respondent's products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to respondent from its said competitors to the injury of competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and to the injury of the public.

Par. 6. The above alleged acts and practices are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 16, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this matter upon respondent Joseph Palazzolo, individually and trading as J. Palazzolo, charging him with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the complaint were introduced by Merle P. Lyon, attorney for the Commission, and by respondent on behalf of himself, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. All of said testimony and other evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Y., has been engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling various toilet preparations, among which is a preparation known as "Otello Water" and "L'Acqua Otello," a preparation, for use on the head, scalp and hair. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at respective points of location in various States of the United States other than in the State of New York. (e) Otello Water Destroys Dandruff; stops falling hair.
(f) Otello water for white hair is not a dye.
(g) Otello Water restores gray hair to its natural color or vitality.
(h) Otello Water rejuvenates the roots of the hairs, thus bringing back the natural color of the hair and vitality.

Par. 3. The aforesaid statements by the respondent, together with statements of similar import and meaning not herein set out but disseminated as aforesaid, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s preparation and its effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid respondent represents directly and by implication that such preparation is an effective cure for dandruff and falling hair, will give the hair a natural color and vitality, restores the natural color to gray hair, ends dandruff and baldness, destroys dandruff and stops falling hair, rejuvenates the roots of the hair and thus restores the natural color and vitality to the hair, and that such preparation is not a dye but is a miraculous water which rejuvenates the hair bulb and brings back vitality to the hair.

Par. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of the product when used are false and misleading in that the respondent’s preparation is not an effective cure for dandruff and falling hair. Said product will not give the hair a natural color and vitality. Said product will not restore the natural color to gray hair; will not end dandruff and baldness; destroy dandruff, and stop falling hair. Said product will not rejuvenate the roots of the hair and thus restore the natural color and vitality to the hair. Said preparation is a dye and not a miraculous water which rejuvenates the hair bulb and brings vitality back to the hair. The formula for the said preparation contains, among other things, precipitated sulphur and lead acetate in equal quantities, which ingredients are constituent parts of similar hair dyes that are known and advertised as hair dyes. The said preparation is not in any sense a miraculous water. The only liquid ingredients in said preparation are glycerin and bayrum, and therefore it does not have what can be termed in any sense water as a component part. Users of said preparation will not have the roots or bulbs of the hair rejuvenated; will not secure a natural color and vitality of the hair; will not end dandruff and baldness, and will not stop falling hair or produce any new hair. The said preparation is in truth and in fact a hair dye.

PAR. 5. Each of the false, misleading, deceptive, and untrue representations made by respondent in offering for sale and selling his product were and are calculated to and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief, induced by the advertising and representations of the respondent, as aforesaid, a substantial number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial quantity of said product, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from other corporations, individuals, firms and partnerships engaged in like and similar business and in the sale of preparations for the head and hair, who truthfully advertise their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent herein, as set out in the foregoing findings as to the facts, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in

1. Representing that said preparation is not a dye or is other than a dye.

2. Representing that the use of said preparation will restore the natural color to the hair, regenerate the hair bulb, restore vitality to the hair or rejuvenate, invigorate, or nourish the roots of the hair.

3. Representing that said preparation is a cure or remedy for dandruff or will destroy dandruff.

4. Representing that the use of said preparation will cause a new growth of hair, will cause hair to regrow or will prevent the falling of hair.

5. Representing through the use of the word “water” in the trade name of said preparation or in any other manner or by any other means or device that said preparation is a water.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

With result that consuming public was induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using his cards in preference to purchasing merchandise from dealers using devices of his competitors because of lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise connected with said cards, and with result, through his use of such methods in designing and arranging his cards and distributing them as aforesaid, of unfairly diverting trade to himself from his said competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Earl M. Loban, individually and trading as Century Business Service, Acme Dividend System and Century Publishing Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Earl M. Loban, is an individual trading as Century Business Service, Acme Dividend System and Century Publishing Co., Inc., with his principal office and place of business located at 401 and 402 Lafayette Building, Waterloo, Iowa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of sales promotion cards to dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, his said sales cards, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Waterloo, Iowa, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, other than the State of Iowa, and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such sales promotion cards in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of sales promotion cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons, and trading stamps in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business in commerce, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or gift enterprise, when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. The respondent sells and distributes several groups of sales promotion cards, but they all involve a lottery scheme or gift enterprise and vary only in detail. The sales promotion cards in one such group are herein described for the purpose of showing arrangement, design and principle involved. On the front of such cards is the following:
COURTESY GIFT CARD

within the square at right may be of a 25c, 50c, $1.00, $2.50, or $5.00 "in trade" value!

Present this card to us each time your cash purchases amount to 10c or over.

When they total the amount punched in the margin we will pay you the "Courtesys Gift."

In the ruled square referred to on the face of the card is printed in invisible ink amounts ranging from 25 cents to $5. These amounts are revealed upon the application of sufficient heat to scorch the chemicals in the said ink, but until such heat is applied the legend in the said square is effectively concealed from the holder of said card. The amount which the holder of said card will receive in trade is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

On the reverse side or back of the said sales promotion card is the following language:

Other cards in this group, sold and distributed by the respondent, provide for recording sales of from $5.50 to $20 worth of merchandise by the numbers ranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of amounts from 25 cents to $5 by the legends written with invisible ink in the ruled or blank squares or blank circles. Other cards in the same group are prepared primarily for automobiles, gasoline, and service stations and provide for the purchase of 75 gallons of gasoline and 5 quarts of oil by the numbers ranged around the border of the card and provide for the winning of from 25 cents to $5 in trade by the legend written in invisible ink in the blank circle therein.

The respondent sells and distributes other sales promotion cards for use in various types of business, but the ones described above illustrate the general plan of such cards.

Respondent furnishes his dealers with various display posters and circulars and with advertisements to be used and which are used by said dealers in distributing and using said cards.

Par. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells assortments of said sales promotion cards, distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown when the squares and circles on the said cards are scorched so as to reveal the legend written in invisible ink. The respondent in his literature and by his representations suggests various methods for the use of said cards by their dealers, all of which methods involve a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise.

Par. 4. There are in competition with respondent various sellers and distributors of sales promotion cards, premium cards, price concession cards, coupons and trading stamps, which, when used by dealers, do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute various cards or devices for promoting or increasing the sales of dealers are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged, or otherwise designed and arranged, as to involve a game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. The use by respondent of said methods in designing and arranging his said cards and distributing the same for redistribution to the public, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the government of the United States and is in violation of criminal laws. The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using respondent's cards in preference to using the devices of respondent's competitors, because of the lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise con-ected with respondent's said cards. The use by respondent of said methods in designing and arranging his said cards and distributing them as aforesaid, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 6, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon Earl M. Loban, individually, and trading as Century Business Service, Acme Dividend System and Century Publishing Co., Inc., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 24, 1939, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and answer of the respondent in which answer respondent admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Earl M. Loban, individually and trading as Century Business Service, Acme Dividend System, and Century Publishing Co., Inc., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of sales promotion schemes or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing sales promotion cards or any other device so designed that their use by the retail dealers constitute or may constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of retail dealers or others, sales promotion cards or sales booster plans or schemes or any other devices which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise when distributed to the consuming public.

3. Furnishing or supplying to dealers display posters or circulars or other advertising literature bearing legends or statements informing the public as to the manner in which said sales promotion cards or other lottery devices are to be or may be distributed and used.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where a corporation which was engaged chiefly in producing, manufacturing, distributing, and selling rubber and rubber products of many kinds, including automotive vehicle tires, i.e., casings and tubes, directly and through certain wholly owned or controlled subsidiary corporations, some of which, in turn, owned or controlled, through voting stock ownership, still other operating companies, and which, together with its various subsidiaries, was one of the four largest manufacturers of tires in the United States, selling and distributing its tires, directly and through its subsidiaries, in competition with others engaged in manufacture and sale of such products, to and through, principally, (1) manufacturers of automotive vehicles using tires for original equipment and spares, (2) certain wholesalers, mail order houses, and retail store chains for whom tires were made by it and who resold same under their own private brands or trade-marks, and (3) wholesale and retail tire dealers and service stations numbering many thousands and located in many cities and towns throughout the United States; and operations of which various wholesalers, mail order houses, retail store chains, and wholesale and retail tire dealers and service stations, as above set forth, were competitive in resale by said wholesalers, mail order houses, and chains of said tires purchased from it and its subsidiaries under private brands or trade-marks in competition with other dealers selling tires of said corporation and subsidiaries under their own brands, and also, in some places, in resale of its said products at retail between customers purchasing such tires as "distributors" (and service stations of oil companies purchasing as "distributors") and "service station dealers" and other retailers purchasing tires from said corporation and subsidiaries or their distributors—

(a) Discriminated in price between certain mail order houses and chain stores and other purchasers, through sale to such mail order houses and chains of large quantities of tires bearing the brands, markings, and designs specified, respectively, by said purchasers, at prices different and lower than the prices charged and allowed by it to other purchasers of its tires of like grade and quality bearing its own brands, and under contracts entered into with such mail order houses and chains, by whom tires thus purchased by them and bearing their own brands, markings, and designs were resold and offered for resale throughout the United States or in large territories therein, in substantial competition with other dealers in tires manufactured by it under its own brands, and by other manufacturers;

With the result that effect of such discrimination in price had been and might be substantially to lessen competition and to create a monopoly of the line of commerce in which it and its subsidiaries were engaged, and in line of commerce in which purchasers from it, as above set forth, were engaged, and to injure, destroy and prevent competition with it and its manufacturing subsidiaries and with mail order houses and chain store customers in question, in sale, and distribution of such products; and

Where said corporation, and subsidiary engaged chiefly in distribution and sale of rubber products, including tires made by said corporation and by other corporations owned or controlled by it, and which distributed to tire jobbers, distributors, and dealers at wholesale and at retail and, at least prior to January 1, 1939, through company-owned stores, such tires, and merchandising and pricing policies of which subsidiary were determined, dictated, and controlled by said corporation, and which had same president, secretary, treasurer, and comptroller as did such corporation—

(b) Discriminated in price between certain large purchasers of tires bearing their brands and other purchasers of their tires, through contracts entered into for sale of their said tires at prices different and lower, after deducting amounts of various discounts, commissions, and rebates not allowed to all purchasers, than the prices charged and allowed by them for tires of same grade and quality to other customers whose purchases or requirements were smaller in amount than those of such dealers, oil companies and others with whom they entered into such contracts, and who, knowingly receiving benefit of such discriminations, competed in many places and territories in resale of their said tires at retail and to commercial accounts with other customers of said corporation and subsidiary, who did not receive benefits of such lower net prices, and vendee or service stations of which oil companies resold such tires at retail in many localities in competition with tire dealers purchasing directly from said corporation and subsidiary and their customers;

With result that effect of such discrimination in price had been and might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which said corporation and subsidiary were engaged, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with them and with their customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination, and with the customers of their customers aforesaid who had knowingly received benefit thereof;

(c) Discriminated in price between certain purchaser users and consumers of tires, including so-called commercial accounts, and other retail purchasers for tires of same grade and quality, through selling former at prices different and lower than prices charged latter through retail stores which they owned and operated in certain of the principal cities in the United States, in competition with other retail tire dealers in their respective sales territories;

With result that effect of such discrimination in price had been and might be substantially to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with them in the retail distribution and sale of tires in the sales territories in which their company-owned stores were located:

Held, That such varying prices or price differentials, as hereinabove referred to, did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which tires were sold or delivered by them, or either of them, to the purchasers respectively involved, and that said corporation, and said corporation and its aforesaid subsidiary, by discriminating in price between different purchasers of tires of like grade and quality, as hereinabove set forth, violated subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended; and

Where said corporation and its subsidiary—

(d) Paid and contracted to pay to certain oil companies to which they sold large quantities of tires, and which (1), while principally engaged in distribution and sale of oil and petroleum products, were also engaged in sale of automobile equipment and accessories, (2) marketed tires thus purchased chiefly through oil and gasoline stations which they either owned and operated or leased to the operators, and (3) were permitted thus to purchase tires from said corporation and subsidiary on terms, as to trade, functional, quantity, and volume discounts allowed, at least as favorable as the best terms accorded by said corporation and subsidiary to wholesale tire dealers, certain discounts or “overriding” commissions, which commissions were paid as compensation and in consideration for services furnished by such oil companies in connection with sales and involving exercise of influence and the giving of merchandise and assistance by said oil companies in securing such customers and sales for said corporation and subsidiary, and which “overriding” commissions were in addition to the allowance of the discounts above referred to and applied to sales made by said corporation and its subsidiary to more than 2,800 service stations, widely distributed throughout the greater part of the United States, and were not available on proportionally equal terms to other customers of said corporation and subsidiary competing with said oil companies in the distribution of such tires:

Held, That such payments and contracts to pay to those engaged in distribution and sale of oil and petroleum products, and purchasing such tires from said corporation or its subsidiary, on sales by either said corporation or subsidiary to operators of gasoline stations and jobbers selling products distributed and sold by those engaged in distribution of oil and petroleum products, etc., as above set forth, as compensation, or in consideration, for any services furnished by or through them in connection with sale or offer of casings and tubes or tires manufactured, sold or offered by either said corporation or subsidiary, and not made available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers of said corporation and subsidiary competing with said oil companies in distribution of such tires, constituted violation of subsection (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

Mr. Cyrus B. Austin for the Commission.

Arthur, Dry & Dole, of New York City, for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes” (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13, the Clayton Act), as amended, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the above-named respondents, and each of them, have violated the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of said act, as amended, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Paragraph 1. Respondent United States Rubber Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with principal office and place of business located at 1790 Broadway, New York, N.Y. Said respondent is engaged chiefly in the business of producing, manufacturing, distributing, and selling rubber and rubber products of many kinds, including automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes (hereinafter referred to as "tires"). Said business was formerly carried on by said respondent directly under its own name, but since 1935 said respondent has produced, manufactured, distributed, and sold said products chiefly by and through certain wholly owned (or controlled through 100 percent voting stock ownership) subsidiary corporations, some of which in turn own or control through voting stock ownership still other operating companies.

Paragraph 2. The principal operating subsidiary of respondent United States Rubber Co. engaged in the manufacture and sale of tires is United States Rubber Products, Inc. (hereinafter referred to as "Products Corporation"), a Delaware corporation organized (under a different name) in 1928. All of the capital stock of said corporation is owned by said respondent. Its principal office is located in said respondent's office building at 1790 Broadway, New York City, and the presidents, first vice presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and comptrollers, respectively, of the two companies are the same persons. Most of the tires manufactured and sold by said respondent in the United States are manufactured and sold by it through and by the instrumentality of said Products Corporation. The production, merchandising, and pricing policies of said Products Corporation are determined, dictated, and controlled by said respondent.

Paragraph 3. Respondent owns all of the capital stock of Meyer Rubber Co., a corporation. Meyer Rubber Co. owns approximately 63 percent of the voting stock of Gillette Rubber Co. (hereinafter referred to as "Gillette"), a Wisconsin corporation with principal office located at Eau Claire in that State. Meyer Rubber Co. also owns all of the voting stock of the Samson Corporation (subject to the right of holders of the Samson Corporation 6 percent noncumulative preferred stock to vote when no dividends have been paid for more than 1 year, which right, when in effect, reduces the voting power held by Meyer Rubber Co. to about 58 percent). Meyer Rubber Co. and the Samson Corporation own about 98 percent of the voting stock of Samson Tire and Rubber Corporation (hereinafter referred to as "Samson"), a Delaware corporation with principal office located in Los Angeles, Calif. Both Gillette and Samson are engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling tires. Respondent United States Rubber Co., through the exercise of voting power held as above stated, has the power to and does determine, dictate, and control the production, merchandising, and pricing policies of Gillette and of Samson.

PAR. 4. Respondent U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation (hereinafter referred to as "Dealers Corporation") is a corporation organized in 1936 and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with principal office located at 1790 Broadway, New York, N. Y. All of the capital stock of said respondent is owned by respondent United States Rubber Co. Said Dealers Corporation is an operating subsidiary of United States Rubber Co., being engaged chiefly in the distribution and sale of rubber products, including tires, manufactured by other corporations owned or controlled by United States Rubber Co. Tires are distributed and sold by said Dealers Corporation to tire jobbers, distributors, and dealers (both wholesalers and retailers), through company-owned stores, and to consumers. The merchandising and pricing policies of said Dealers Corporation are determined, dictated, and controlled by respondent United States Rubber Co.; and the presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and comptrollers, respectively, of said respondents are the same persons.

PAR. 5. Respondent United States Rubber Co., together with its said subsidiaries, is one of the four largest manufacturers of tires in the United States. The three principal outlets to and through which said respondent, through its subsidiaries, sells and distributes its tires are (1) manufacturers of automotive vehicles using tires for original equipment and spares, (2) certain wholesalers, mail order houses, and retail store chains for whom tires are manufactured by respondent and who resell the same under their own private brands or trademarks, (3) wholesale and retail tire dealers and service stations, numbering many thousand, located in many cities and towns throughout the United States. Sales to such tire dealers of tires bearing respondents' brands are made by respondent Dealers Corporation pursuant to "distributor sales agreements" and "service station dealer sales agreements," entered into from year to year, which provide that tires will be sold to the distributor or dealer at the prices shown in said respondents' current price list known as "United States Prices," less certain trade, functional, quantity, and volume discounts.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses said respondents, and each of them (United States Rubber Co. through its said subsidiaries), transport tires, or cause the same to be transported from the places where such tires are manufactured or stored to their customers and purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia; and there is and has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in respondents' tires between the States wherein respondents' factories or warehouses are located and various other States of the United States. Said tires are sold by said respondents for use, consumption, or resale within the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. Respondents distribute and sell tires in the same territories and places as, and in competition with, various other persons and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of tires. Through the stores owned and operated by respondent Dealers Corporation in some 20 cities in the United States, respondents compete in the sale of tires with independent wholesale and retail tire dealers doing business in the same sales territories. The wholesalers, mail order houses, and retail store chains which purchase tires from respondent United States Rubber Co. and its subsidiaries under private brands or trade-marks resell such tires in many parts of the United States in competition with other tire dealers selling United States brands of tires. Competition also exists in many places in the resale of respondents' tires at retail between customers purchasing such tires as "distributors" (and service stations of oil companies which purchase as distributors), and "service station dealers" and other retailers purchasing tires from respondents or their distributors.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of its interstate business above described, respondent United States Rubber Co., through its subsidiaries Products Corporation, Gillette, and Samson, sells and has sold large quantities of tires to Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., Atlas Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Agency of Los Angeles, and Arkansas Fuel Oil Co., bearing brands, markings, and designs specified, respectively by said purchasers. Each of said purchasers resells such tires, and offers the same for resale, throughout the United States or in large territories therein, in substantial competition with other dealers in tires manufactured by said respondent under its own brands and by other manufacturers. Said respondent has since June 19, 1936, sold such special brand tires to said named purchasers, respectively, and has entered into contracts with each of them for the sale of such tires, at prices different and lower than the prices charged and allowed by it to other purchasers of its tires of like grade and quality bearing its own brands. By so doing respondent has discriminated in price between each of said named purchasers and other purchasers of its tires.

Par. 9. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 8 hereof has been and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondent United States Rubber Co. and its subsidiaries are engaged, and in the line of commerce in which the purchasers from respondent named in said paragraph 8 are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with said respondent and its manufacturing subsidiaries, and with their said named customers, in the sale and distribution of tires.

PAR. 10. Respondents in the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, have sold tires bearing respondents' brands to different purchasers at substantially differing prices resulting from the allowance to some purchasers of various discounts, commission, and/or rebates which have not been allowed to all purchasers. Respondents sell, have sold, and have entered into contracts for the sale of their tires to certain dealers, oil companies, and others purchasing such tires in large quantities or volume at prices different and lower (after deducting the amounts of such discounts, commissions, and rebates) than the prices charged and allowed by them for tires of the same grade and quality to other customers whose purchases or requirements are smaller in amount. By so doing respondents have discriminated in price between such large purchasers and other purchasers of their tires. Said large purchasers have knowingly received the benefit of such discrimination. In many places and territories said large dealers compete in the resale of respondents' tires at retail and to commercial accounts with others of respondents' customers not receiving the benefit of such lower net prices; and service stations operated by or purchasing such tires from said oil companies resell the same at retail in many localities in competition with tire dealers purchasing directly from respondents and with their customers.

PAR. 11. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 10 hereof has been and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondents are engaged, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with respondents and with their customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination and with the customers of respondents' said customers who have knowingly received the benefit of said discrimination.

PAR. 12. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents have offered for sale and sold their tires, since June 19, 1936, through retail stores owned and operated by respondents in 20 or more of the principal cities in the United States. In the conduct of such business said stores are engaged in competition with other retail tire dealers in their respective sales territories. Through said stores respondents have sold and offered to sell tires to certain users and consumers thereof, including so-called "commercial accounts," at prices different and lower than the prices charged other retail purchasers for tires of the same grade and quality, thereby discriminating in price between such purchasers.

Par. 13. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 12 hereof has been and may be substantially to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with respondents in the retail distribution and sale of tires in the sales territories where their company-owned stores are located.

Par. 14. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents have entered into contracts for the sale of their tires, which contracts are now in force, and have sold large quantities of such tires thereunder to certain corporations principally engaged in the distribution and sale of oil and petroleum products but also engaging in the sale of automobile equipment and accessories. The tires purchased by said oil companies are marketed by them chiefly through oil and gasoline stations either owned and operated by them or leased by them to the operators. Said oil companies purchase tires from respondents on terms, as to trade, functional, quantity, and volume discounts allowed, at least as favorable as the best terms accorded by respondents to wholesale tire dealers. Respondents have contracted for the payment and have paid to certain of said oil companies, since June 19, 1936, in addition to the allowance of the aforementioned discounts, a commission of 7½ percent (formerly 5 percent on sales to jobbers) on sales of tires by respondents and their distributors to operators of oil stations and jobbers selling the petroleum products of said oil companies, as compensation and in consideration for the services of such oil companies in connection with such sales, where such sales are secured through the influence and merchandising assistance of said oil companies. Respondents have contracted to pay and have paid, and are now following the practice of paying such "overriding" commissions, amounting to substantial sums of money, to their following customers, among others: Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., and its operating subsidiaries and affiliates; American Oil Co.; Pan-American Petroleum Corporation; Tide Water Associated Oil Co. The said agreements for the payment of such commission to said named customers apply to sales made by respondents to more than 2,800 service stations widely distributed throughout the greater part of the United States. Such commission and the payment thereof in consideration for such services are not available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers of respondents competing with said oil companies in the distribution of such tires.
Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," (the Clayton Act), as amended, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 6, 1939, issued its complaint against the above-named respondents and caused such complaint to be served as required by law, charging that said respondents were and had been discriminating in price between different purchasers from them of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes of like grade and quality in interstate commerce, in violation of the provisions of section 2 (a) of said act, and had been paying commissions to certain of such purchasers for services furnished by them in connection with the sale of such tire casings and tubes, in violation of the provisions of section 2 (d) of said act.

Respondents duly filed their joint answer to said complaint, which answer admits all the material facts alleged in said complaint excepting the facts alleged in paragraph 2 thereof. As to paragraph 2 of the complaint, the answer alleges that United States Rubber Products, Inc., an operating subsidiary of respondent U. S. Rubber Co., was dissolved and wholly liquidated on or about December 31, 1938, and that said respondent United States Rubber Co., succeeded to the business theretofore carried on by United States Rubber Products, Inc., in the manufacturing and selling of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes. Said answer further waives the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure herein and consents that upon said complaint and answer an order be issued requiring said respondents to cease and desist from the acts and practices alleged in said complaint to be in violation of the provisions of said act.

This proceeding regularly coming on to be heard upon said complaint and answer, filing of briefs, and presentation of oral argument have been waived, the Commission, having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that the respondents and each of them have been and are violating the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, now makes these its findings as to the facts:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent United States Rubber Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with principal office and place of business located at 1790 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Said respondent is engaged chiefly in the business of producing, manufacturing, distributing, and selling rubber and rubber products of many kinds, including automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes (hereinafter referred to as "tires"). Said respondent produces, manufactures, distributes, and sells said products directly and through certain wholly owned or controlled subsidiary corporations, some of which in turn own or control through voting stock ownership still other operating companies.

Par. 2. Prior to January 1, 1939, the principal operating subsidiary of respondent United States Rubber Co. engaged in the manufacture and sale of tires was United States Rubber Products, Inc., a Delaware corporation organized in 1928. All of the capital stock of said corporation was owned by said respondent and its principal office was located in said respondent's office building at 1790 Broadway, New York City. On or about December 31, 1938, said United States Rubber Products, Inc., was dissolved and wholly liquidated and respondent United States Rubber Co. succeeded to its business of manufacturing and selling tires.

Par. 3. Respondent owns all of the capital stock of Meyer Rubber Co., a corporation. Meyer Rubber Co. owns approximately 63 percent of the voting stock of Gillette Rubber Co. (hereinafter referred to as "Gillette"), a Wisconsin corporation with principal office located at Eau Claire in that State. Meyer Rubber Co. also owns all of the voting stock of the Samson Corporation (subject to the right of holders of the Samson Corporation 6 percent noncumulative preferred stock to vote when no dividends have been paid for more than 1 year, which right, when in effect, reduces the voting power held by Meyer Rubber Co. to about 58 percent). Meyer Rubber Co. and the Samson Corporation own about 98 percent of the voting stock of the Samson Tire & Rubber Corporation (hereinafter referred to as "Samson"), a Delaware corporation with principal office located in Los Angeles, Calif. Both Gillette and Samson are engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling tires. Respondent United States Rubber Co., through the exercise of voting power held as above stated, has the power to and does determine, dictate, and control the production, merchandising, and pricing policies of Gillette and of Samson.

Par. 4. Respondent U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation (hereinafter referred to as "Dealer Corporation") is a corporation organized in 1936 and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with principal office located at 1790 Broadway, New York, N. Y. All of the capital stock of said respondent is owned by respondent United States Rubber Co. Said Dealers Corporation is an operating subsidiary of United States Rubber Co., being engaged chiefly in the distribution and sale of rubber products, including tires, manufactured by respondent United States Rubber Co. and by other corporations owned or controlled by United States Rubber Co. Tires are distributed and sold by said Dealers Corporation to tire jobbers, distributors, and dealers (both wholesalers and retailers), and, at least prior to January 1, 1939, through company-owned stores. The merchandising and pricing policies of said Dealers Corporation are determined, dictated, and controlled by respondent United States Rubber Co.; and the presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and controllers, respectively, of said respondents are the same persons.

Par. 5. Respondent United States Rubber Co., together with its said subsidiaries, is one of the four largest manufacturers of tires in the United States. The three principal outlets to and through which said respondent, directly and through its subsidiaries, sells and distributes its tires are (1) manufacturers of automotive vehicles using tires for original equipment and spares, (2) certain wholesalers, mail order houses, and retail store chains for whom tires are manufactured by respondent and who resell the same under their own private brands or trade-marks, (3) wholesale and retail tire dealers and service stations, numbering many thousand, located in many cities and towns throughout the United States. Sales to such tire dealers of tires bearing respondents’ brands are made by respondent Dealers Corporation pursuant to “distributor sales agreements” and “service station dealer sales agreements,” entered into from year to year, which provide that tires will be sold to the distributor or dealer at the prices shown in said respondents’ current price lists known as “United States Prices,” less certain trade, functional, quantity, and volume discounts.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses said respondents, and each of them, transport tires, or cause the same to be transported, from the places where such tires are manufactured or stored to their customers and purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia; and there is and has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in respondents’ tires between the States wherein respondents’ factories or warehouses are located and various other States of the United States. Said tires are sold by said respondents for use, consumption or resale within the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. Respondents distribute and sell tires in the same territories and places as, and in competition with, various other persons and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of tires. Through the stores owned and operated by respondent Dealers Corporation in various cities in the United States, respondents competed in the sale of tires with independent wholesale and retail tire dealers doing business in the same sales territories. The wholesalers, mail order houses, and retail store chains which purchase tires from respondent United States Rubber Co. and its subsidiaries under private brands or trade-marks resell such tires in many parts of the United States in competition with other tire dealers selling United States brands of tires. Competition also exists in some places in the resale of respondents' tires at retail between customers purchasing such tires as "distributors" (and service stations of oil companies which purchase as distributors), and "service station dealers" and other retailers purchasing tires from respondents or their distributors.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of its interstate business above described, respondent United States Rubber Co., directly and through its subsidiaries Gillette and Samson (and prior to 1939 through United States Rubber Products, Inc.), sells and has sold large quantities of tires to Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., Atlas Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Agency of Los Angeles, and Arkansas Fuel Oil Co., bearing brands, markings, and designs specified, respectively by said purchasers. Each of said purchasers resells such tires, and offers the same for resale, throughout the United States or in large territories therein, in substantial competition with other dealers in tires manufactured by said respondent under its own brands and by other manufacturers. Said respondent has since June 19, 1936, sold such special brand tires to said named purchasers, respectively, and has entered into contracts with each of them for the sale of such tires, at prices different and lower than the prices charged and allowed by it to other purchasers of its tires of like grade and quality bearing its own brands. By so doing respondent has discriminated in price between each of said named purchasers and other purchasers of its tires.

Par. 9. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 8 hereof has been and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondent United States Rubber Co. and its subsidiaries are engaged, and in the line of commerce in which the purchasers from respondent named in said paragraph 8 are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with said respondent and its manufacturing subsidiaries, and with said named mail order house and chain store customers, in the sale and distribution of tires.

Par. 10. Respondents in the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, have sold tires bearing respondents' brands to different purchasers at substantially differing prices resulting from the allowance to some purchasers of various discounts, commissions, and/or rebates which have not been allowed to all purchasers. Respondents sell, have sold, and have entered into contracts for the sale of their tires to certain dealers, oil companies, and others purchasing such tires in large quantities or volume at prices different and lower (after deducting the amounts of such discounts, commissions, and rebates) than the prices charged and allowed by them for tires of the same grade and quality to other customers whose purchases or requirements are smaller in amount. By so doing respondents have discriminated in price between such large purchasers and other purchasers of their tires. Said large purchasers have knowingly received the benefit of such discrimination. In many places and territories said large dealers compete in the resale of respondents' tires at retail and to commercial accounts with others of respondents' customers not receiving the benefit of such lower net prices; and service stations operated by or purchasing such tires from said oil companies resell the same at retail in many localities in competition with tire dealers purchasing directly from respondents and with their customers.

Par. 11. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 10 hereof has been and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which respondents are engaged, and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with respondents and with their customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination and with the customers of respondents' said customers who have knowingly received the benefit of said discrimination.

Par. 12. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, and during the years 1936, 1937, and 1938, respondents have offered for sale and sold their tires through retail stores owned and operated by respondents in certain of the principal cities in the United States. In the conduct of such business said stores were engaged in competition with other retail tire dealers in their respective sales territories. Through said stores respondents sold and offered to sell tires to certain users and consumers thereof, including so-called "commercial accounts," at prices different and lower than the prices charged other retail purchasers for tires of the same grade and quality, thereby discriminating in price between such purchasers.

Par. 13. The effect of the discrimination in price described in paragraph 12 hereof has been and may be substantially to injure, destroy, and prevent competition with respondents in the retail distribution and sale of tires in the sales territories where their company-owned stores are located.

Par. 14. It does not appear from the facts before the Commission that the price differentials described in paragraphs 8, 10, and 12 hereof make only due allowance for, and it is therefore found that said differentials do not make only due allowance for, differences in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which tires are sold or delivered by said respondents, or either of them, to the purchasers described, respectively, in said paragraphs.

Par. 15. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents have entered into contracts for the sale of their tires, which contracts are now in force, and have sold large quantities of such tires thereunder to certain corporations principally engaged in the distribution and sale of oil and petroleum products but also engaging in the sale of automobile equipment and accessories. The tires so purchased by said oil companies are marketed by them chiefly through oil and gasoline stations either owned and operated by them or leased by them to the operators. Said oil companies are permitted to purchase tires from respondents on terms, as to trade, functional, quantity, and volume discounts allowed, at least as favorable as the best terms accorded by respondents to wholesale tire dealers. Respondents have also contracted for the payment of and have paid to certain of said oil companies, since June 19, 1936, in addition to the allowance of the aforementioned discounts, a commission of 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) percent (formerly 5 percent on sales to jobbers) on sales of tires by respondents and their distributors to operators of oil stations and jobbers selling the petroleum products of said oil companies. Said commission has been paid as compensation and in consideration for the services furnished by such oil companies in connection with such sales, the nature of such services being the exercise of influence and the giving of merchandising assistance by said oil companies in securing such customers and sales for respondents. Respondents have contracted to pay and have paid, and are now following the practice of paying such "overriding" commissions, amounting to substantial sums of money, to their following customers, among others: Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., and its operating subsidiaries and affiliates; American Oil Co.; Pan-American Petroleum Corporation; Tide Water Associated Oil Co. The said agreements for the payment of such commissions to said named customers apply to sales made by respondents to more than 2,800 service stations widely distributed throughout the greater part of the United States. Such commissions and the payment thereof in consideration for such services are not available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers of respondents competing with said oil companies in the distribution of such tires.
CONCLUSIONS

The Commission concludes:

1. That respondent United States Rubber Co., by discriminating in price between different purchasers of tires of like grade and quality as set forth in paragraph 8 of the foregoing findings, has violated and is violating subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

2. That respondents United States Rubber Co. and U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, and each of them, by discriminating in price between different purchasers of tires of like grade and quality as set forth in paragraph 10 and in paragraph 12 of said findings, have violated and, as to the discrimination set forth in said paragraph 10, are violating subsection (a) of subsection 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

3. That respondents United States Rubber Co. and U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, and each of them, by engaging in the acts and practices described in paragraph 15 of said findings, have violated and are violating subsection (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the joint answer of the respondents by which said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact in said complaint (excepting the allegations of paragraph 2 thereof) and waive the taking of testimony and all intervening procedure, and the Commission being of the opinion upon the facts so admitted that said respondents, and each of them, have violated the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of Section 2 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes” (the Clayton Act) as amended, and having made its report stating its findings as to the facts,

It is ordered, That the respondent, United States Rubber Co. and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes in commerce between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating in price, either directly or indirectly, or by or through its subsidiaries U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, Meyer Rubber Co., Gillette Rubber Co., the Samson Corporation, Samson Tire & Rubber Corporation, or any of them, or by or through any other persons or corporations owned or controlled by it through stock ownership or otherwise, between Montgomery, Ward & Co., Inc., Atlas Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co. of Los Angeles, and Arkansas Fuel Oil Co., or any one or more of them, and other purchasers of such products of like grade and quality by selling such products to Montgomery, Ward & Co., Atlas Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co., Western Auto Supply Co. of Los Angeles, or Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. at net realized prices different and lower than the net realized prices at which such products of like sizes, grade, and quality are sold to other purchasers thereof for resale, except to the extent that such differential or differentials shall make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery, if any, resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such purchasers sold or delivered. "Net realized price" for the purposes of this order shall mean the net amount of money paid by a purchaser for such a tire casing or tube after taking into account all discounts (excepting uniform cash discounts available to all purchasers), commissions, rebates, refunds, and other price adjustments; provided, that any such price adjustments depending upon varying costs of sale and delivery shall be concluded expeditiously after the end of the annual or shorter period for which such costs are computed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents United States Rubber Co. and U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes bearing said respondents' brands in commerce between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist (a) from discriminating in price, directly or indirectly, between different purchasers of such tire casings and tubes of like grade and quality by granting or allowing the cumulative discounts (dependent upon and varying according to total volume of purchases during a specified period) heretofore granted and allowed by said respondents; (b) from discriminating in price, directly or indirectly, between different purchasers of such tire casings and tubes of like grade and quality competing in the resale thereof, by granting or allowing to some of such purchasers discounts, commissions, and rebates heretofore granted and allowed in connection with the sale of such tire casings and tubes as set forth in paragraph 10 of said findings as to the facts, which are not granted or allowed to other such purchasers; (c) from discriminating in price, directly or indirectly, between different purchasers of such tire casings and tubes of like grade and quality by means of price differences resulting from the granting or allowing of any other such discounts, commissions, rebates, or price reductions, where the effect of such price differences may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce in which either of respondents or any of their customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with either of respondents or with any of their customers, or with any customers of a customer of either of said respondents who has knowingly received the benefit of such discrimination, except where such discounts, rebates, or price reductions make only due allowance for differences in cost resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such tire casings or tubes are to such purchasers sold or delivered; provided, however, that nothing contained in this paragraph or in the next following paragraph hereof shall be construed as preventing either of said respondents from showing that any discount, commission, rebate, or lower price hereafter granted or allowed by it, not granted or allowed to other purchasers, was given in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, United States Rubber Co. and U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes in commerce between the several States of the United States through retail stores owned or operated by either of said respondents, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating in price, directly or indirectly, between different purchasers of such products of like grade and quality by selling such products to some users and consumers thereof, including so-called "commercial accounts," at prices different and lower than the prices charged other retail purchasers thereof, except to the extent that such differential or differentials shall make only due allowance for differences in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery, if any, resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, United States Rubber Co. and U. S. Tire Dealers Corporation, and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the distribution and sale of automotive vehicle tire casings and tubes in commerce between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from paying or contracting to pay to any person, firm, or corporation engaged in the distribution and sale of oil and petroleum products and purchasing such tire casings and tubes from either of said respondents for resale (including the oil companies named in paragraph 15 of said findings as to the facts), a commission of 7½ percent on sales by either of said respondents to operators of oil and gasoline stations and jobbers selling products distributed or sold by such person, firm, or corporation, or any other payment or commission as compensation or in consideration for any services furnished by or through such person, firm, or corporation in connection with the sale or offering for sale of tire casings and tubes, manufactured, sold, or offered for sale by either of said respondents, unless such payment or commission is made available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers of said respondents competing with such person, firm, or corporation in the distribution of such tire casings and tubes.

It is further ordered, That each of said respondents, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied and are complying with this order.

QUALITY BAKERS OF AMERICA ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF PARA. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Where a corporation, stock of which was held exclusively by some seventy non-competitive wholesale baking concerns located in various sections of the United States, and which constituted membership of said bakers' unincorporated association, designed and used to facilitate and further the objectives, operations, policies, and business of said corporation and the stockholders of said corporation, which,

(1) Was engaged in purchasing commodities as purchasing agent for its stockholders and members, as aforesaid, of said association;

(2) Constituted the operative agency acting in behalf of said association and members thereof;

(3) Conducted numerous activities for said association members, including services as to purchasing, production, engineering, accounting, sales promotion, advertising, planning, publications, and management assistance;

(4) In executing orders placed with it by its said stockholders and association members, transmitted such orders and purchased commodities from one or more of a group of over 200 manufacturers, processors, producers, or distributors located in many different States; and

(5) Was compensated or reimbursed for the cost of such various services under definite arrangements and agreements, entered into between it and the association on the one hand and the members thereof on the other, by which it was agreed that one-half of the brokerage paid on each member's orders should be applied to the credit of the particular member's dues and remaining half applied by the board of directors, as it shall determine, for service purposes for the benefit of the members of the association in question; and

(6) Supplied to stockholders, whose credits for brokerage fees exceeded the amounts charged against them for dues, benefit of special services not included in the services rendered to all stockholders—

(a) Accepted and received, as above set forth, brokerage fees from sellers on purchases of commodities made by its stockholders, while acting as the agent, representative, and intermediary of such stockholders and in their behalf, and while owned and controlled by them, and rendering no service to those selling commodities to it and paying it such brokerage fees, but rendering services to its stockholders in connection with purchase of commodities by them or with operation of their respective businesses, and no selling services to any seller of commodities or services in connection with the sale of a commodity to it or to its stockholders; and

Where wholesale baking concerns, stockholders of said corporation and members of said association, engaged in purchasing commodities, including flour and many other food materials, and a great variety of supplies and equipment, including machines used in business in question, from sellers in various States, and in transmitting orders for the purchase of merchandise to said corporation or service company—

(b) Accepted and received, as aforesaid, brokerage or commissions from said corporation and service company in money, credits, benefits and services paid for and furnished from and by such brokerage fees, which were paid by the sellers of commodities in question to such service company; and

Where three corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of flour—

(c) Paid, transmitted and granted to said service company, and indirectly to association members through said company, as hereinabove stated, as intermediary acting in fact for such members, commissions and brokerage fees upon the purchases of commodities in question made by such member buyers from such sellers through said service company, in connection with the sale of which commodities and payment of which fees, no service was rendered to any seller so paying:

Held, That such plan of operation and practices and policies of said service company and association, and members and stockholders thereof, resulted in transmission of brokerage fees and commissions from sellers to buyers on transactions involving purchase and sale of commodities in interstate commerce, and that aforesaid acts, practices and policies were violative of the provisions of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Foulston, Siefskin, Foulston & Morris, of Wichita, Kans., for Kansas Milling Co.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act, as amended by an Act of Congress, approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," commonly known as the Robinson-Patman Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the respondents named above in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, have violated, and are now violating, the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of said act as amended, hereby issues its complaint against the said respondents, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. (a) Respondent, Quality Bakers of America, is a voluntary unincorporated association, formed in 1922, having its principal place of business at 120 West Forty-second Street, New York City. It is hereinafter referred to as the "Association" and its members are wholesale baking concerns located in various sections of the United States.

(b) Respondent members of said Association are about 70 in number and are located in various sections of the United States. Said members are corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the wholesale bakery business. All of the members of said Association are not known to the Commission. Those of its officers, executive committee, and representative members who are known, and who can be conveniently reached are specifically named as respondents herein. All the other members of said Association are hereby made respondents without being individually named because they constitute a class or group too numerous to be brought before the Commission in this proceeding without manifest inconvenience and delay. The following named representative members of the Association are made respondents hereto both individually and in their said representative capacity: Respondent, Firch Baking Co., Inc., a Pennsylvania corporation having its principal place of business at Erie, Pa.; Dreikorn Bakery, Inc., a Massachusetts corporation having its principal place of business at 322 Park Street, Holyoke, Mass.; The Jacob Laub Baking Co., an Ohio corporation having its principal place of business at 4909 Lorain Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; Liberty Baking Co., a Pennsylvania corporation having its principal place of business at 6018 Houston Street, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Stroehmann Brothers Co., a Pennsylvania corporation having its principal place of business at Curtin and Seventh Streets, Harrisburg, Pa.; and Vermont Baking Co., a Vermont corporation having its principal place of business at White River Junction, Vt. Respondent members of the Association, both named and unnamed, are hereinafter collectively referred to as "members." Said members are, among themselves, mutually noncompetitive. Membership is lost whenever a member's trade becomes competitive with the trade of another member or members. Such membership is obtained solely through invitation and election.

(c) Respondents, C. F. Stroehmann, located at Curtin and Seventh Streets, Harrisburg, Pa.; J. P. Duchaine, located at 229 Coffin Avenue, New Bedford, Mass.; Grover C. Patton, located at 434 North Morgan Street, Decatur, Ill.; and W. S. Allison, located at 120 W. Forty-second Street, New York, N. Y.; are respectively president, vice president, treasurer, and secretary and general manager of the Association, and each of them are members of the executive committee thereof. Respondents, E. J. Derst, located at 408 East Oglethorpe Avenue, Savannah, Ga.; W. M. Clemens, located at 19 South Main Street, Dubuque, Iowa; Onil O. Cote, located at 87 Elm Street, Manchester, N. H.; S. S. Watters, located at 6018 Houston Street, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Herbert J. Laub, located at 4909 Lorain Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; James H. Swan, located at 1501 East Magnolia Avenue, Knoxville, Tenn.; George C. West, located at White River Junction, Vt.; and James B. Dwyer, located at 1902 Cranberry Street, Erie, Pa.; are the other members of the said Executive Committee. The said respondent officers and executive committee members are made parties respondent hereto in their official capacities and as representatives of the aforesaid class or group of unnamed respondents.

(d) Respondent, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., is a Delaware corporation, having its principal place of business at 120 West Forty-second Street, New York City. It is the operative agency, acts on behalf of the Association, and will be designated and referred to hereinafter as the Service Co. As such, said respondent corporation conducts numerous activities for the members of the Association, including services as to purchasing, production engineering, accounting, sales promotion, advertising, planning, publications, and management assistance. The stock of the Service Co. is held exclusively by members of the Association, no stockholder being entitled to hold more than 10 or less than 5 shares thereof.

Par. 2. The Association, and its members as aforesaid, in the usual course and conduct of their respective businesses, are engaged in interstate commerce, transporting and causing to be transported their wholesale bakery products from the respective States of their production to their respective customers located in other States. The Service Co., in the regular course and conduct of its business, acting for and on behalf of the Association and its members, in its merchandising activities, heretofore in paragraph 1 mentioned and hereafter in paragraph 3 described, is engaged in purchasing materials, supplies and equipment and in causing the same to be transported from the respective States where located at the time of sale to and into and through other States of the United States wherein the Service Co. and the various respondent members are located.

Par. 3. Among the services rendered to members of the Service Co. is that of negotiation for the purchase and the purchase and distribution of merchandise. The lines of merchandise so purchased include flour and many other food materials, required by said members in the production of their products, and a great variety of supplies and equipment, including machinery, used for the manufacture, packaging, storage, and distribution of wholesale bakery products. Some of the said described merchandise is purchased outright by the said Service Co., payment being made by it to the vendors. In other cases said company does not pay the purchase price nor take title to the merchandise, but purchases same for and on behalf of respondent members of the Association. In said purchasing service the Service Co. sometimes receives the merchandise and reships to the members of the Association, and on other occasions it directs the vendor to ship direct to the members as consignees. The said Service Co. and the Association and its members, through the said Service Co. as intermediary, caused to be transported the various lines of merchandise so purchased including flour, food materials, supplies, and equipment from the State of location where sold to, into and through the various other States of the United States in which the respective members of said Association are located, and into the State of New York where the Service Co. is located. In its said purchasing service the said company is obligated to obtain and actually obtains from vendors the best prices, quality and service that it can on behalf of members and therein acts as intermediary between said vendors and said members.

PAR. 4. In the regular course and conduct of its purchasing service, in interstate commerce as hereinabove alleged, respondent Service Co., for more than 5 years last past has received and accepted from several hundred concerns, or their agents, selling practically all materials, supplies and equipment purchased by said company, valuable price concessions, as brokerages, commissions or other compensation, and allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage; and the said Service Co. now receives and accepts the same from many such concerns, including those corporate respondents hereinafter referred to as "respondent sellers." Each year of its said operations the said Service Co. has thus received and accepted substantial sums, and in 1936 received and accepted in the aggregate $181,528.20, as brokerages, commissions or other compensation. The receipts of said company as brokerages and commissions or other compensation all inure to the benefit of the members. One-half thereof is retained by the Service Co. for the purpose of operating the various above-mentioned services maintained and made available to the entire membership by the said company. The remaining one-half thereof is distributed as patronage dividends, proportionally to the individual members, whose purchases are deemed to have earned the so-called brokerages or commissions or other compensation, in the form of credits against dues charged respectively, by the said company, to said members for such of the services, available at cost, as may be individually subscribed to by them.
Under the circumstances as hereinabove set out—namely, that all of the stock in the Service Co. receiving such brokerage fees, compensations and allowances and allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage, is owned and held by the member buyers of the Association—no services connected with the transactions of sale and purchase of the aforesaid materials, supplies and equipment on which such brokerage fees, compensations and other allowances were and are being paid and made, have either been or are being rendered to the said sellers by the Service Co. or the Association or its members.

PAR. 5. Respondent Washburn Crosby Co., Inc., is a corporation with an office and principal place of business at 80 Broad Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. is a corporation with office and principal place of business at 21 West Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent Red Star Milling Co. is a corporation with an office and principal place of business in the city of Wichita, State of Kansas. Respondent Consolidated Flour Mills Co. is a corporation with an office and principal place of business in the city of Wichita, State of Kansas. Respondent Kansas Milling Co. is a corporation with an office and principal place of business in the city of Wichita, State of Kansas. These last named respondents will hereinafter be designated and referred to as “respondent sellers.” Said respondents and each of them in this paragraph named are and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling flour to numerous and divers wholesalers, jobbers, merchants, and dealers, including the aforesaid Service Co., respondent, and respondent members of the aforesaid Association, and in the course of such business cause the said flour when sold to be shipped and transported from the State of its location at the time of said sale to, into and through the various other States of the United States in which the said purchasers are located.

Said respondent sellers are fairly typical and representative members of a large group or class of manufacturers, processors, importers, and producers engaged in the common practice of selling a substantial portion of their commodities, merchandise, flour, food stuffs, equipment, supplies, and machinery in interstate commerce to the aforesaid Service Co., respondent, and to the members of the aforesaid Association for and on behalf of whom the said Service Co., respondent, acts as intermediary, in the manner and form hereinabove described. Said group or class of sellers comprises a large number of corporations, partnerships, and individuals and are too numerous to be individually named herein as respondents or to be brought before the Commission in this proceeding without manifest inconvenience and delay.

In the course of such commerce said respondent sellers and each of them have paid or granted and are paying or granting to the said Service Co. and to the respondent members through that company as intermediary acting in fact for the respondent members of the aforesaid Association, commissions, brokerage fees, and other compensation and allowances or discounts in lieu thereof upon purchases of said commodities made by respondent buyers from said respondent sellers through said Service Co.

PAR. 6. The payment or granting of such commissions, brokerage fees, and other compensations and allowances or discounts in lieu thereof by said respondent sellers to the Service Co., and the receipt and acceptance thereof by the Service Co. acting as intermediary for and on behalf of the Association, and for and on behalf of each of the aforesaid member respondents, and the participation in and direction or conduct of such activities by the individual respondents acting as officers and members of the executive committee of the aforesaid respondent Association, all in the manner and form aforesaid, are in violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the act described in the preamble hereof.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by Section 1 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend Section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes" approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission, on August 28, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, charging them with violating the provisions of paragraph (c) of section 2 of said act, as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence were introduced by Allen C. Phelps, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Addison, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Davis, Wagner, Heater & Hallett, attorneys for all of the above named respondents except Washburn Crosby Co., Inc., Pillsburry Flour Mills Co., Red Star Milling Co., Consolidated Flour Mills Co., and Kansas Milling Co.; and by Frank J. Morley, A. Lyman Beardsley, and John deLaittre, attorneys for respondents Washburn Crosby Co., Inc., and the Red Star Milling Co.; and by Bradshaw Mintener, attorney for respondent Pillsbury Flour Mills Co., and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, answers, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of the said Allen C. Phelps for the Commission and Guy C. Heater of said firm of Davis, Wagner, Heater & Hallett, attorneys for the parties respondent represented by them, and by Bradshaw Mintener, attorney for respondent Pillsbury Flour Mills Co., and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion.

Par. 2. Respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc. (hereinafter referred to as the Service Co.), is a Delaware corporation having its principal place of business at 120 West Forty-second Street, New York City. The officers of this respondent are the same respondents who are the officers of the Association, as described in paragraph 1 above. Respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc. is engaged in the business of purchasing commodities, as a purchasing agent, for the members of the Association, who are likewise holders of the stock of the Service Co., as hereinafter stated. Par. 4. Respondents Washburn Crosby Co., Inc., and Red Star Milling Co. were legally dissolved June 1, 1937, prior to the issuance and service of the complaint herein.

Respondent Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. is a Delaware corporation with its general office located in Minneapolis, Minn. Respondent Consolidated Flour Mills Co. is a corporation with its office and principal place of business in the city of Wichita, State of Kansas. Respondent The Kansas Milling Co. is a corporation with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Wichita, State of Kansas.

All these respondents are engaged in the manufacture and sale of flour. Subsequent to June 19, 1936, these seller respondents paid, transmitted and granted to the said Service Co. and indirectly to the respondent members through that company, as hereinafter stated, as intermediary acting in fact for the respondent members of said association, commissions and brokerage fees upon purchases of said commodities made by respondent buyers from said respondent sellers through said Service Co.

Par. 5. Among the services rendered by the Service Co. to its said stockholders is that of the negotiation for the purchase and the purchase and distribution of merchandise and equipment. The lines of merchandise so purchased include flour and many other food materials, required by said stockholders in the production of their products, and a great variety of supplies and equipment, including machinery, used for the manufacture, packaging, storage, and distribution of wholesale bakery products. Some of the said described merchandise is purchased outright by the said Service Co., payment being made by it to the vendors and said commodities being resold by the Service Co. to its stockholders. In other cases said company does not pay the purchase price nor take title to the merchandise, but purchases same on the order of and on behalf of its stockholders on a brokerage basis, brokerage fees being paid by the vendors to the Service Co. In said purchasing operations the Service Co. usually directs the vendor to ship direct to the stockholders as consignees.

Respondent stockholders of respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc., and the other stockholders, all of whom are named in paragraph 3 hereof, are severally engaged in purchasing commodities from sellers located in States other than State in which such Service Co. and said stockholders individually maintain their respective principal places of business. Said stockholders, or some of them, daily transmit orders for the purchase of merchandise to respondent Service Co. and such orders in nearly every case are transmitted by mail or other means of communication across State lines. In executing said orders and in purchasing the commodities specified therein, respondent Quality
Findings

Bakers of America, Inc., transmits such orders and purchases commodities from one or more of a group of over 200 manufacturers, processors, producers, or distributors, located in many different States, and who in a large majority of cases are located in a State other than the State of New York, where the Service Co. has its principal office and place of business. As a result of such purchase and sale transactions, respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc., and each of its said stockholders transport or cause to be transported baker's supplies and commodities from the sellers thereof, located in many different States, to, through and into States other than the State of origin or shipment of such commodities. Said stockholders habitually transmit money or the equivalent thereof in payment of the purchase price for such commodities by United States mail and other means, from their individual places of business, usually across State lines, to the sellers of such merchandise and products, and the Service Co. daily receives brokerage fees on purchases made by its stockholders through it, which are transmitted to it by such sellers located in States other than the State of New York, through the medium of the United States mails and otherwise, most of such remittances crossing State lines between the offices of such sellers and the offices of the Service Co. Such purchases by the Service Co.'s stockholders through the Service Co., and the collection of such brokerage fees by said Service Co., in the manner stated, cannot be accomplished or brought about and is not effectuated except by the use of interstate channels of communication, nor are such commodities so purchased obtained, nor can they be obtained in most cases except by the transportation of the same, at the instance and request of the Service Co. and its stockholders, from one State to, into, or through other States of the United States. In using such methods of ordering, purchasing, and making payment for commodities so purchased and in obtaining and collecting such brokerage fees, respondent Service Co. and its stockholders operate in the channels of interstate commerce and are engaged in such commerce. Respondent Service Co. is an indispensable interrelated instrumentality in the course of such commerce, and its operations cannot be conducted except by means of the use of facilities available in the channels of interstate trade, communication and commerce. Out of the brokerage fees so collected, respondent Service Co. transmits money or its equivalent and services and benefits paid for by such fees from its office in New York to its stockholders in other States. Said Service Co. habitually sends its representatives from New York to its stockholders on their request to provide them with advice, expert knowledge, work, and labor, reports, recommendations, advertising matter and other valuable things, both tangible and intangible. Many of the suggestions and recommendations of such representatives and the advertising matter are prepared and reduced to writing in the offices of the Service Co. and transmitted by mail and other means to the stockholders in States other than the State of New York. The operations of respondent Service Co. are centered in its offices in New York, but extend into every State in which one or more of its stockholders and the sellers of commodities with whom it negotiates purchases of commodities are located. The plan of operation of the Service Co. and its stockholders, above described, is an integral whole which cannot be separated into constituent parts without destroying the whole. Said plan of operation contemplates the use of and uses the facilities and instrumentalities of interstate commerce and is effectuated almost entirely through the means and channels of traffic and commerce among and between the several States. Some of said stockholders sell the bakery products which they manufacture in States other than the State in which such products are processed and manufactured, and transport or cause the said products to be transported from their respective places of business to such other States.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent Service Co., since prior to June 19, 1936, has and does receive and accept from the numerous sellers of commodities above referred to, brokerage fees or commissions on purchases made by its stockholders through it, in the manner above stated. During the period from July 1, 1936 to July 1, 1937, the Service Co. executed approximately 13,500 orders for the purchase of commodities on a brokerage fee basis for its stockholders, the purchase price of such commodities being estimated as having aggregated between $5,500,000 and $5,900,000 in amount. On such purchases the Service Co. received brokerage fees from the sellers of such commodities totaling $163,933.84 in amount. Since July 1, 1937 the Service Co. has continued to purchase commodities on a brokerage fee basis for its stockholders in the same manner and using the same methods as those used in its operations before that date.

Par. 7. Each member of the Association enters into a certain membership and service agreement with the Association and the Service Co., jointly. Among the provisions of such agreement is the following, which has been observed, complied with and effectuated, to wit:

That all brokerage, selling and commissions, selling discounts or other amounts allowed by suppliers of materials, manufactured advertising, machinery and equipment and collected by the QUALITY BAKERS OF AMERICA, INC. shall be applied one-half to the credit of the Member's dues on whose business the brokerage or allowance originated, and the remaining half shall be applied by the Board of Directors in such manner as it shall determine, for service purposes for the benefit of the members of the QUALITY BAKERS OF AMERICA.
By another of the terms of said membership and service agreement, the members of the Association and the stockholders of the Service Co. agree to pay dues to the Service Co. The amount of said dues for each member-stockholder is determined by the baking capacity of his plant, the minimum being set at the sum of $25 per week or $1,300 a year. Such dues are charged on the books of the Service Co. against the individual member-stockholder and are offset by credits for one-half of the brokerage fees collected by the Service Co. on purchases made by such member-stockholder through the Service Co. In 1936, the dues actually charged to stockholders ranged from nothing for suspended members to $5,920, the latter figure being for a stockholder with five plants. In 1936, of 69 member-stockholders, 36 were credited with more from one-half of the brokerage fees collected by the Service Co. on their purchases than the dues charged against them amounted to. In the cases of all but 10 of said stockholders, the total brokerage fees collected on purchases made by them through the Service Co. exceeded the amount of dues charged against them. During the year 1936 the total amount of brokerage fees collected by the Service Co. amounted to $181,528.20; of the amount, $90,760.10 was credited by the Service Co. to the respective accounts of its member-stockholders. Dues charged against all the stockholders during 1936 amounted to $79,556.

Par. 8. Each member of the Association (who are likewise stockholders in the Service Co.) has the above described membership agreement and service contract with the Association and Service Co. jointly. Among the provisions in said membership agreement and service contract which are and have been observed and effectuated are the following:

QUALITY BAKERS OF AMERICA, INC. agrees, during the term of this agreement, to furnish the Member, in common with other members, various services or assistance in the management of its bakery, such services to be adjusted to meet the needs of the industry and the members. These services shall be rendered along the following broad lines:

"THE MEMBER AGREES to cooperate in furthering the various policies, plans and activities of the organization, and to carry out the suggestions and recommendations made for the improvement of the Member's business, failure to abide by any of them being sufficient reason for the cancellation of this agreement:"

"That all information, ideas, records, forms, proceedings, or any parts of such, submitted to the Member by the QUALITY BAKERS OF AMERICA, or its operating unit, shall be held and treated as confidential, and used only for the benefit of members in good standing;"

"That the Member owns, controls or operates a plant or plants for the manufacture of bakery products in the following named city or cities, a detailed map showing actual trading area covered by all routes to be attached and made a part of this agreement:"

"That inasmuch as this is an organization of non-competitors, if the member shall in any manner become a competitor of any other member in the personal delivery field, the undersigned member consents that automatically he shall be dropped, and that this contract shall terminate, subject however to review by the Executive Committee."
Par. 9. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., renders to all stockholders who purchase commodities through it, the services generally described in Paragraph 8 above under the headings "Executive Service," "Manufacturing Service" and "Merchandising Service."

The expense of providing the above services to said buying stockholders is paid from the monies received by the Service Co. from brokerage fees collected and profits on commodities bought and sold by it. Stockholders whose credits for brokerage fees exceed the amounts charged for dues, may and do request the benefit of such services not included in the above services rendered to all stockholders which are denominated special services and generally described under the heading "Advisory Services" in paragraph 8 above. The cost of such special services is charged by the Service Co. against the brokerage credits in excess of dues standing on the books of the Service Co. in favor of the individual buying stockholder receiving such special services.

All said services above described are in fact services rendered to the stockholder by the Service Co., and are designed to be and are services in connection with the purchase of commodities by such stockholders or in connection with the operation of their respective businesses. Such services are not selling services rendered to any seller of commodities, nor services rendered by either the Service Co. or its stockholders in connection with the sale of a commodity by any seller to the Service Co. or its stockholders. There is no evidence in the record that the Service Co. has contracted with any seller to render him any service in connection with the sale of his commodities or to find buyers for him or to promote the sale of his merchandise.

Par. 10. The Service Co. is a Delaware corporation organized under a general incorporation law governing the organization of corporations for profit. The stockholders elect a board of directors which elects the officers. The board of directors control the direct management, policies and operations of the company, which are similar to those usually followed by corporations operating for profit, except that, exclusive of a nominal stock dividend, one-half of the profits accruing to the Service Co. are distributed to the stockholder on a patronage basis in proportion to the profits realized by the company on brokerage fees or other money received by it on purchasing transactions completed for the individual stockholder.

The stock certificates issued to each stockholder contain the following provisions:
Conclusion

Section 5. Transfer of Ownership of Stock. No sale, assignment or pledge of the shares of capital stock of this Corporation shall be made by the owner thereof without the written consent of this Corporation; and no stockholder of this Corporation shall have and possess any voting rights on said shares should he for any reason cease to be a member of Quality Bakers of America, an Unincorporated Association; and immediately upon ceasing to be such a member, he shall give and grant unto the Corporation the exclusive right, for a period of six months from the date thereof, to purchase, or nominate a purchaser, for the shares of stock then owned by the stockholder, at the price he shall have paid for the same upon his original subscription therefor; but failure on the part of the Corporation to act within such time, unless extended, shall render this restriction void.

All of the profits of said company inure to the benefit of the stockholders in the form of money and credits and valuable benefits and services.

Par. 11. In all matters and transactions in which the Service Co. negotiates or deals with sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by its stockholders, such Service Co. is the agent and representative of such stockholders, acts in fact for them, and in their behalf, and is subject to their direct control.

Conclusion

The Commission concludes from the facts:

That respondent, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., and its stockholders are engaged in interstate commerce in all material aspects of the practices involved herein.

That in the course of such commerce, respondent, Quality Bakers of America, Inc. is and has been accepting and receiving brokerage fees from sellers on purchases of commodities made by its stockholders through it, while acting as the agent, representative and intermediary of such stockholders and for them in their behalf and while owned and controlled by such stockholders.

That respondent stockholders and other stockholders of the Service Co. in practice receive such brokerage fees and commissions from respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc., in money, credits, benefits, and services paid for and furnished from and by means of such brokerage fees.

That said brokerage fees are paid by the sellers of commodities to respondent Service Co., and neither such Service Co. nor any stockholder thereof renders any service, in connection with the sale of commodities, to any seller so paying such fees.

That respondent Quality Bakers of America (The Association) is an organization designed and used to facilitate and further the objectives, operations, policies and businesses of the Service Co. and its stockholders.

That respondent, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., is not a cooperative association within the meaning of Section 4 of the Robinson-Patman Act.

That the plan of operation and the practices and policies of respondents, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., Quality Bakers of America, and their members and stockholders result in the transmission of brokerage fees and commissions from sellers to buyers on transactions involving the purchase and sale of commodities in the course of interstate commerce.

That said acts, practices, and policies are violative of the provisions, paragraph c of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is further ordered, That respondents Firch Baking Co., Inc., Dreikorn Bakery, Inc., The Jacob Laub Baking Co., Liberty Baking Co., Stroehmann Brothers Company and Vermont Baking Co., and their officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the purchase of commodities by said respondents in interstate commerce, do forthwith cease and desist from receiving or accepting from the sellers of such commodities, directly or indirectly, any brokerage fees or commissions or any allowances or discounts in lieu thereof, and from receiving or accepting from respondents Quality Bakers of America or Quality Bakers of America, Inc., any brokerage fees or commissions or any allowances or discounts in lieu thereof, received or accepted by said last-named respondents from such sellers, either in the form of money or credits or in the form of services, facilities, property or benefits provided or furnished by said Quality Bakers of America or Quality Bakers of America, Inc., through or by means of the expenditure or use of any such brokerage fees, commissions, allowances, or discounts.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondents Washburn Crosby Co., Inc. and Red Star Milling Co. for the reason that prior to the issuance and service of the complaint herein these respondents were legally dissolved.

CENTURY METALCRAFT CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of kitchen utensils under trade name "Silver Seal," and in advertising and selling its said kitchen ware and utensils principally through its agents, representatives or employees who, through personal contacts, advertised, and by personal solicitation, sold, said products through, chiefly, giving manual demonstrations, at its direction, of uses for which it represented its said products to have been made, and making such demonstrations generally before groups of prospective purchasers and accompanying the same by various statements and representations as to character, nature and quality of its said products and their effectiveness for purpose for which sold—

(a) Represented and implied, as above set forth, that it manufactured the utensils offered and sold by it, and that they contained an appreciable amount of silver and no aluminum, or so little as not to be noticeable, and that the method of cooking made possible by such utensils was new and revolutionary, and that they were more durable and more easy to clean than were the aluminum or granite utensils of competitors, and that they would not pit;

Facts being it did not make such products, they contained no appreciable amount of silver but, on contrary, contained aluminum as their chief constituent metal, method of cooking made possible through use thereof was neither new nor revolutionary, but had been long in use, they were not any more durable or more easily cleaned than the aluminum or granite products made by competitors and would pit as readily as would such competitive products; and

(b) Represented that competing granite and aluminum utensils were dangerous to the health of consumers of food cooked therein, and represented and implied that certain named competitors were in a precarious financial condition, and that the kitchen utensils sold and distributed by such competitors were inferior in quality to those offered and sold by it; and

(c) Represented that use of food cooked in its utensils would insure improved health and that certain doctors and hospitals had indorsed and recommended its said products, and that they were used generally by the United States Army during the World War;

Facts being use of aluminum or granite utensils of competitors in no wise affects purity or quality of food cooked therein, use of its said utensils would not insure improved health or have any effect on persons consuming such food prepared therein different from or more beneficial than that occasioned by use of food prepared in aluminum, granite, or other types of utensils made by competitors, and no doctors, officials, or employees of hospitals in capacity of dietary experts had recommended its said utensils, which were not used generally by the Army during the World War, and representations and implications with respect to competitors' precarious financial position were without foundation and unfairly defamed and disparaged them, products of which, similarly unfairly defamed and disparaged by it, were not inferior to its own;
With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial number of members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations and implications were true, and of causing substantial portion of purchasing public, because of such belief, to buy its said utensils, and with result, as direct consequence thereof, of diverting unfairly trade to it from its competitors engaged in sale and distribution of kitchen ware and utensils in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and many of whom do not in any manner misrepresent their products or defame and disparage their competitors or competitors' products:
Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. Alden S. Bradley for the Commission.
Mr. Edward H. McDermott, Mr. William M. Emery, Mr. Daniel R. LaBar, Mr. R. S. Oldberg, and Mr. John W. Cavanaugh, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Century Metalcraft Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint against said respondent, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Century Metalcraft Corporation, is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at 1105
Lawrence Avenue, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois.
Respondent is now and since 1933 has been engaged in the sale and distribution of kitchen utensils under the trade name “Silver Seal.”
Respondent causes and has caused its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.
Respondent has at all times mentioned herein maintained and now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in such ware and utensils into and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Complaint

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and copartnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of kitchen ware and utensils in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The advertising and selling of respondent’s said kitchen ware and utensils are conducted principally through the medium of agents, representatives or employees who through personal contacts advertise and by personal solicitation sell said products.

The method chiefly employed by said agents, representatives or employees of respondent at respondent’s direction is the giving of manual demonstrations of the uses for which respondent represents its said products to have been manufactured. These demonstrations are given generally before groups of prospective purchasers and are accompanied by various statements and representations as to the character, nature, and quality of respondent’s said product and their effectiveness in use as hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and used by the agents, representatives and employees of the respondent at its direction and instigation in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said products in commerce as hereinabove alleged are those to the effect that said utensils, offered for sale and sold under the trade name “Silver Seal,” contain no aluminum or such a small amount of aluminum that the presence of such metal is not noticeable; that the method of cooking made possible by said utensils is new and revolutionary; that said utensils are more durable and more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors; that said utensils will not pit; that competing granite and aluminum utensils are dangerous to the health of consumers of food cooked therein; that the use of food cooked in respondent’s said utensils will insure improved health; that certain doctors and hospitals have endorsed and recommended respondent’s said utensils, and that said utensils were used generally by the United States Army during the World War.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid respondent further represents and implies that it manufactures the utensils offered for sale and sold by it and that said utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver. Respondent represents and implies that certain named competitors are in a precarious financial condition, and represents that the kitchen utensils sold and distributed by such competitors are inferior in quality to the utensils offered for sale and sold by respondent.
Par. 5. The above and foregoing representations so made and used by the respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said products are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's said utensils do contain aluminum, aluminum being the chief constituent metal used in the construction of said utensils; the method of cooking "made possible" through the use of said utensils is not new or revolutionary and has long been in vogue; said utensils are not any more durable or more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent; and said utensils will "pit" as readily as will utensils manufactured by respondent's competitors. In truth and in fact, food cooked in granite or aluminum utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent is not dangerous, injurious, or deleterious to the health of the consumers of such food; and the use of aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent in no wise affects the purity or quality of food cooked in said utensils. The use of respondent's said utensils in preparing foods will in no wise insure improved health for the consumers of such foods; and the use of foods cooked in respondent's said utensils will not have any effect on the persons consuming food so cooked different from or more beneficial than the effect occasioned by the use of food cooked in aluminum, granite, or other types of utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent. No doctors or officials or employees of hospitals, in the capacity of dietary experts, have endorsed or recommended respondent's said utensils, and said utensils were not used generally by the United States Army during the World War. The utensils offered for sale and sold by the respondent are not manufactured by the respondent and said utensils do not contain an appreciable amount of silver metal.

Respondent's representations and implications to the effect that certain named competitors are in a precarious financial position, are without foundation and unfairly defame and disparage such competitors. In truth and in fact, the competitors mentioned are not in a precarious financial position or in such a condition as to justify or warrant such representations and implications by the respondent. The products offered for sale and sold by such competitors are not inferior in quality to the products offered for sale and sold by the respondent.

Through the use of the false representations concerning the deleterious effect of the use of food cooked in aluminum and granite utensils and the false representations and implications as to the financial condition of certain named competitors and the false representation as to the superior quality of respondent's said utensils, respondent falsely and unfairly defames and disparages its competitors and their products.

The acts and practices of the respondent in using and making the false and deceptive statements, representations, and implications regarding its products and its competitors and their products, as hereinabove alleged, have a tendency and a capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and implications are true, and cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase respondent's said utensils, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce from its competitors to the respondent as described in paragraph 3 hereof, many of whom do not in any manner misrepresent their said products or defame and disparage their competitors' products. As a consequence, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 22d day of September, A. D., 1938, issued, and on the 23d day of September, A. D., 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Century Metalcraft Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Century Metalcraft Corporation, is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at 1105 Lawrence Avenue, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois.
Respondent is now and since 1933 has been engaged in the sale and distribution of kitchen utensils under the trade name "Silver Seal."
Respondent causes and has caused its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.
Respondent has at all times mentioned herein maintained and now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in such ware and utensils into and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and copartnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of kitchen ware and utensils in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The advertising and selling of respondent's said kitchen ware and utensils are conducted principally through the medium of agents, representatives, or employees who through personal contacts advertise and by personal solicitation sell said products.
The method chiefly employed by said agents, representatives, or employees of respondent at respondent's direction is the giving of manual demonstrations of the uses for which respondent represents its said products to have been manufactured. These demonstrations are given generally before groups of prospective purchasers and are accompanied by various statements and representations as to the character, nature, and quality of respondent's said products and their effectiveness in use for the purpose for which they are sold.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and used by the agents, representatives, and employees of the respondent, at its direction and instigation, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said products in commerce as herein stated, are those to the effect that said utensils, offered for sale and sold under the trade name "Silver Seal," contain no aluminum, or such a small amount of aluminum that the presence of such metal is not noticeable; that the method of cooking made possible by said utensils is new and revolutionary; that said utensils are more durable and more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors; that said utensils will not pit; that competing granite and aluminum utensils are dangerous to the health of consumers of food cooked therein; that the use of food cooked in respondent's said utensils will insure improved health; that certain doctors and hospitals have endorsed and recommended respondent's said utensils, and that said utensils were used generally by the United States Army during the World War.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid respondent represents and implies that it manufactures the utensils offered for sale and sold by it and that said utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver. Respondent represents and implies that certain named competitors are in a precarious financial condition, and represents that the kitchen utensils sold and distributed by such competitors are inferior in quality to the utensils offered for sale and sold by respondent.

PAR. 5. The above and foregoing representations so made and used by the respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said products are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's said utensils do contain aluminum, aluminum being the chief constituent metal used in the construction of said utensils; the method of cooking "made possible" through the use of said utensils is not new or revolutionary and has long been in use; said utensils are not any more durable or more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent; and said utensils will "pit" as readily as will utensils manufactured by respondent's competitors. In truth and in fact, food cooked in granite or aluminum utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent is not dangerous, injurious, or deleterious to the health of the consumers of such food; and the use of aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent in no wise affects the purity or quality of food cooked in said utensils. The use of respondent's said utensils in preparing foods will in no wise insure improved health for the consumers of such foods; and the use of foods cooked in respondent's said utensils will not have any effect on the persons consuming food so cooked different from or more beneficial than the effect occasioned by the use of food cooked in aluminum, granite, or other types of utensils manufactured by competitors of the respondent. No doctors or officials or employees of hospitals, in the capacity of dietary experts, have endorsed or recommended respondent's said utensils, and said utensils were not used generally by the United States Army during the World War. The utensils offered for sale and sold by the respondent are not manufactured by the respondent and said utensils do not contain an appreciable amount of silver metal.

Respondent's representations and implications to the effect that certain named competitors are in a precarious financial position, are without foundation and unfairly defame and disparage such competitors. In truth and in fact, the competitors mentioned are not in a precarious financial position or in such a condition as to justify or warrant such representations and implications by the respondent. The products offered for sale and sold by such competitors are not inferior in quality to the products offered for sale and sold by the respondent.

PAR. 6. Through the use of the false representations concerning the deleterious effect of the use of food cooked in aluminum and granite utensils and the false representations and implications as to the financial condition of certain named competitors and the false representation as to the superior quality of respondent's said utensils, respondent falsely and unfairly defames and disparages its competitors and their products.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent in using and making the false and deceptive statements, representations, and implications regarding its products and its competitors and their products, as hereinabove found, have a tendency and a capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and implications are true, and cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said and mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase respondent's said utensils. As a direct result thereof trade in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors, described in paragraph 2 hereof, many of whom do not in any manner misrepresent their said products or defame and disparage their competitors or competitors' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Century Metalcraft Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of kitchen utensils in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that doctors or hospitals have endorsed and recommended respondent's utensils unless and until such recommendation and endorsement has been made by doctors who are dietary experts or by hospitals acting by and through their dietary experts.

2. Representing that respondent manufactures said utensils unless and until it owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the factory or factories wherein the same are manufactured by it.

3. Circulating or publishing unfair or disparaging statements concerning the business status or the quality of the products of the competitors of the respondent.

4. Representing that food cooked in granite or aluminum utensils is dangerous to the health of the consumers of such food.

5. Representing through the use of the term “Silver Seal,” or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning, as the trade name for said utensils, or in any other manner, that the usefulness, durability or value of such utensils is enhanced or affected by reason of silver metal contained in such utensils.

6. Representing that the utensils now designated as “Silver Seal” contain no aluminum or are not aluminum.

7. Representing that the utensils now designated as “Silver Seal” are more durable or more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils; that said utensils will not pit; that the method of cooking made possible by said utensils is new or revolutionary; that the use of food cooked in said utensils will insure improved health; or that said utensils were used generally by the United States Army during the World War.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Wham & O'Brien, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., is a corporation having its principal office and place of business located at 4949 Pulaski Road, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois. Respondent, for more than 2 years last past has been and still is engaged in assembling weather-indicating instruments known as thermometers, hygrometers, and barometers, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between the State of Illinois and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said weather-indicating instruments are sold, respondent transports same, or causes the same to be transported, from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof, located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than 2 years last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said weather-indicating instruments so assembled, sold, and distributed by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of, or in the assembling and distributing of like and similar weather-indicating instruments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, the respondent assembles various models of said weather-indicating instruments, some being a combination of thermometer, hygrometer, and barometer, others being merely barometers. Respondent adds to the complete barometer mechanism a dial and indicator, and places the same in a case, usually made of bakelite. Upon said cases, in which have been placed said barometers provided with the dial, either as a completed instrument or in combination with thermometer and hygrometer, respondent has caused and now causes to be affixed a name plate bearing the words “Made in U.S.A. by Fee & Stemwedel, Inc. Chi.” When so assembled, respondent sells and has sold said weather-indicating instruments, upon which appear the phrase “Made in U.S.A.,” in commerce, as herein described, to jobbers and directly to persons by whom said instruments are to be used.

Par. 3. There are among the public many who purchase and use thermometers, hygrometers, barometers, and other weather-indicating instruments.
Complaint

28 F. T. C.

instruments manufactured by manufacturers in the United States of America, in preference to similar weather-indicating instruments manufactured in or imported from foreign lands, believing that weather-indicating instruments manufactured in the United States of America by such manufacturers are superior in quality to those manufactured in and imported from any other country.

Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof have the capacity and tendency to deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's said weather-indicating instruments into the false and erroneous belief that the barometers and other instruments are made in the United States of America and are manufactured by respondent. In truth and in fact, the barometers and other instruments have not been, and are not now made in the United States of America by respondent or any other American manufacturer, but were made, and are now made in and imported from a country other than the United States of America. Respondent is not the manufacturer of said barometers and other instruments herein referred to.

Par. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, many manufacturers, assemblers, sellers, and distributors of weather-indicating instruments who truthfully advertise and represent the manufacture and country of origin of their thermometers, hygrometers, and barometers, and who do not advertise and represent that said articles are, or have been, manufactured in the United States of America by them when such is not the case.

Par. 6. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief described in paragraph 4, and into the purchase of respondent's said weather-indicating instruments in and on account of such belief. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from those competitors in commerce described and referred to in paragraph 5. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been, and is done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. Said acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” approved September 26, 1914.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., is a corporation, organized in 1930 and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. Respondent’s office and principal place of business is located in Chicago, Ill. Said respondent is now, and at all times since its organization has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and of assembling and in the sale and distribution of thermometers, hygrometers, barometers, and other weather-indicating instruments and combinations thereof. Respondent now causes, and at all times since its organization has caused, its said weather-indicating products and devices when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Illinois, and others located in the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and to some foreign countries. There has been for many years last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said weather-indicating instruments so manufactured, sold, and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United...
States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and at all times since the date of its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, persons, firms, and partnerships, likewise engaged in the manufacture and sale of thermometers, hygrometers, barometers, and combinations thereof and other weather-indicating devices, similar to those of respondent, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as herein described, the respondent, among the 14 weather-indicating instruments produced by it, has assembled 4 models of barometers, and 1 model of a combination of thermometer, hygrometer, and barometer. Respondent adds to the complete barometer mechanism a dial and indicator and places the same in a case, usually made of bakelite. In case of 3 of the barometer models, respondent has caused to be marked on the dial of the case in which have been placed said barometers the words: "Made in U. S. A. by Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., Chicago." On the combination instrument, respondent has caused a name plate to be riveted upon the instrument which reads: "Airguide Trio, Made in U. S. A. by Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., Chicago." When so assembled, respondent has sold said barometers and weather-indicating instruments, upon which appear the phrase, "Made in U. S. A." in commerce, as herein defined, to jobbers and dealers who in turn resell them to the public.

PAR. 3. There are among the public many who purchase and use weather-indicating instruments manufactured by manufacturers in the United States of America in preference to similar weather-indicating instruments manufactured in or imported from foreign countries, and there is a substantial part of the purchasing public of this country which has a preference for merchandise manufactured in this country especially when compared to goods manufactured in and imported from certain other countries into this country.

PAR. 4. The barometer movements used in respondent's instruments, as herein described, are imported from a foreign country and are marked "Made in Germany"; however, when assembled and encased in respondent's finished unit, this phrase is no longer visible. These marks made upon the instruments by respondent, to wit: "Made in U. S. A." have a capacity and tendency to deceive purchasers of respondent's weather-indicating instruments, as herein described, into the false and erroneous belief that the barometers are made in the United States of America, and are manufactured by the respondent, whereas the fact is that the barometers are not made in the United States of America and the respondent is not the manufacturer of said barometer movements.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such instruments were made by the respondent in the United States, and into the purchase of respondent's barometers and "Airguide Trio" because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof, trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who truthfully advertise and represent the place of manufacture and the manufacturer of their respective products. In consequence thereof, substantial injury is now being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Fee & Stemwedel, Inc., as herein found, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent,

1 Said order was modified, as follows, by Commission order dated July 6, 1939:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Fee & Stemwedel, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of barometers having movements or mechanisms of foreign origin, or manufacture whether sold as single instruments or as part of combination instruments, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, by use of the term "Made in U. S. A.," or any other term indicative of American manufacture, that such barometers are wholly of American manufacture.

2. Causing the brands or marks on imported barometer movements or other parts, or on other similar products, which indicate the foreign origin or manufacture thereof to be removed, erased or concealed so as to mislead or deceive ultimate purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture thereof, unless the removal or erasure or concealment of said brands or marks is necessary to the further manufacture or processing of said products.
