cealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list above referred to opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles induce members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all the articles of merchandise, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said operator the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium or cash award as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said circulars and pull cards use the said pull cards in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the said sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other methods which are contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use by respondent of said methods because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 23, 1938, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent William A. Frew, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, William A. Frew, is an individual with his principal office and place of business located in the city of Paradise, State of Pennsylvania. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy, garden seed, watches, blankets, towels, musical instruments, housekeeping sets, bedspreads, flashlights, cameras, tableware, toilet sets, and numerous other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In carrying on said business, respondent has adopted and used various trade names, among which are Paradise Products Co., Paradise Seed Co., Paradise Candy Co., Paradise Chocolate Co., Square Deal Co., Lancaster County Seed Co., Lancaster Seed Co., Garden Spot Seed Co., Garden Seed Co. of America, and Good Luck Gardens. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in Pennsylvania, to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at the respective points of location of said customers. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said products by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes or causes to be distributed to the general public certain advertising literature, catalogs, and sales circulars. In selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent has made use of various sales plans or methods differing in detail in accordance with the particular merchandise offered for sale, but all involving the same principle.

One of said plans involves the sale of a number of packages or boxes of candy, together with various other articles of merchandise, which other articles of merchandise are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said packages or boxes of candy in the following manner:

The catalog or circular of respondent has on the back cover thereof a number of partially perforated tabs or pulls, each of which has a legend or design. Sales are 20 cents each, and each purchaser of a package or box of candy is entitled to separate one of the said tabs from the catalog or circular, and on the reverse side thereof appears a legend stating the particular prize or the number of the particular prize to which such purchaser is entitled without additional charge. The inside of the back cover of said circular has a legend that a piece of blank paper is to be pasted over, the legend showing the particular prize which is to be distributed, and purchasers and prospective purchasers are thus unable to ascertain which prize they will receive until a purchase has been made and the particular tab separated from the circular or catalog. The person operating the pull card receives his choice of a cash commission or a premium for selling said boxes of candy, together with the prizes offered by respondent in connection therewith. The prizes or other articles of merchandise which ultimate purchasers receive in connection with the purchase of a package or box of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Another assortment sold and distributed by respondent consists of a number of articles of merchandise, and such assortment is sold and distributed to the consuming public in the following manner:

A portion of one of said sales circulars consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to said list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of one of the articles of merchandise appearing in said list and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list above referred to opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles induce members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all the articles of merchandise, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said operator the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium or cash award as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said circulars and pull cards use the said pull cards in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the said sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of his merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other methods which are contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use by respondent of said methods because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That William A. Frew, individually and trading under the names of Paradise Products Co., Paradise Seed Co., Paradise Candy Co., Paradise Chocolate Co., Square Deal Co., Lancaster County Seed Co., Lancaster Seed Co., Garden Spot Seed Co., Garden Seed Co. of America, and Good Luck Gardens, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy, garden seed, watches, blankets, towels, musical instruments, housekeeping sets, bedspreads, flashlights, cameras, tableware, toilet sets or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Order

30 F. T. C.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling and distributing such merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 3929. Complaint, Oct. 18, 1939—Decision, Mar. 20, 1940

Where five corporations engaged in the manufacture or assembly of fire fighting equipment, including carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in the several States and in the District of Columbia, in competition among themselves, except insofar as such competition might have been hindered, lessened, restricted or restrained as below set forth; acting in concert with one another—

- (a) Fixed and agreed upon minimum prices and terms at which they were to and did sell parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment used in manufacture or assembly of such systems and extinguishers, and including hose assemblies, cylinders, carrying straps, etc., and compiled and published such prices and terms thus agreed on and observed as "Schedule of Minimum Prices and Terms," as part of license agreements issued by one of their number to others under expired patent and unexpired patent governing successful manufacture, assembly and operation of aforesaid portable fire extinguishers, and to which license agreements schedule in question was affixed; and
- (b) Submitted, in response to invitation of Governmental agencies for competitive bids, bids which, pursuant to agreement and minimum price schedules aforesaid, were identical on such parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment, and included, as listed in minimum schedule aforesaid, patented coupling, not controlled by or licensed to aforesaid maker of such license agreements, but sold by manufacturer thereof to anyone desiring to purchase same;

With result that such acts and practices of said manufacturers and assemblers in fixing and maintaining uniform prices of parts, accessories, and apparatus, as above set forth, actually hindered and prevented competition between and among them in sale of such parts, etc., in commerce, and had dangerous tendency so to do, and placed in them power to control and enhance prices and unreasonably restrained commerce in parts, accessories and apparatus aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair methods of competition in violation of Section 5 of act of Congress approved Sept. 26, 1914, as amended; and of parts, accessories and apparatus, whether for use by licensee in assembling completed units of aforesaid extinguishing systems or aforesaid portable fire extinguishers, or whether such parts, accessories and apparatus were to be resold by it separately from such completed units, and by which licensee parts, accessories and apparatus thus sold were charged for in accordance with agreed uniform price schedules, and practice of which licensee was to place with such licensing concern orders for fire fighting equipment received by it for manufacture and assembly in factory thereof, while purchasing from it all necessary parts, accessories and apparatus for Government orders received by licensee for assembly at licensee's place of business, and sale as manufactured by it:

Where said license agreement maker—

Held, That such acts and practices of said licensing concern, in requiring licensee aforesaid to purchase from it all of its requirements of said parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment, as above set out, constituted violation of Section 3 of act of Congress approved Oct. 15, 1914, and amendments thereto.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the respondent herein named have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect in count 1 hereof.

Also pursuant to the provisions of section 3 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914 entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraint and monopolies and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act, the Commission having reason to believe that the respondent, Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., has violated and now is violating the provisions of section 3 of said Act of Congress, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, the Commission issues this its complaint stating its charges in respect thereto in count 2 hereof.

THE CHARGE UNDER FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT

PARAGRAPH 1. (a) Respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 140 Cedar Street, New York, N. Y.

(b) Respondent American La France & Foamite Industries, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at Elmira, N. Y.

(c) Respondent C-O-Two Fire Equipment Co. is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 560 Belmont Avenue, Newark, N. J.

(d) Respondent National Foam System, Inc. is a corporation, the place of whose incorporation is not known to the Commission, having its principal place of business at 1632 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(e) Respondent Fryout Co., Inc. is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California and having its principal place of business at 90 West Street, New York, N. Y. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. The above-named corporate respondents are engaged in the manufacture and assembly of fire fighting equipment including carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, and in the sale and distribution thereof to purchasers located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondents in the regular course of their business in the sale and distribution of fire fighting equipment, parts, accessories and apparatus thereof cause the same to be shipped and transported from the various points at which their manufacturing and assembling plants are located into and through the several States of the United States, other than the State of the origin of such shipments, and in the District of Columbia. They are in competition among themselves except insofar as such competition has been hindered, lessened, restricted, or restrained as hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 3. In the year 1933 and for several years prior thereto, there were two basic patents which govern the successful manufacture, assembly and operation of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, to wit, the Rustige and Minor patents. The Rustige invention consists of a system of uniform piping which permits the continuous flow of carbon dioxide fluid and gas from a cylinder. The patent on this invention was issued by the United States Patent Office on March 30, 1920. The Minor invention consists of a discharge horn or nozzle which insures the successful application of carbon dioxide liquid and gas to a fire. The patent on this invention was issued by the United States Patent Office on May 27, 1930. Both of said basic patents were owned by respondent, Walter Kidde & Co., Inc.

PAR. 4. The respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., under the Rustige and Minor patents, has, prior to 1933, entered into a licensing agreement with each of the other named respondents herein; said licensing agreements have been continued in effect to the present time:

(a) The agreements entered into between respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc. and respondents American La France & Foamite Industries, Inc. and C-O-Two Fire Equipment Co. grant licenses to said respondents to manufacture and sell the inventions set forth in the respective patents.

(b) The agreement entered into between respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., and respondent National Foam System, Inc. grants a license to said respondent, to make, sell, install, and use the inventions set forth in the respective patents, but under the provisions of said agreement the respondent National Foam System, Inc., as licensee, is required to purchase from the respondent, Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., as licensor, all the parts, apparatus, and equipment pertinent thereto, necessary for the manufacture, sale and installation, and use of the said inventions.

(c) Attached to each of the licensing agreements, entered into by the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc. with each of the other named respondents herein, is a schedule of minimum prices at which the respondents agree to sell carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers and all the parts, apparatus and equipment used in the manufacture or assembly of the said carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers. Said price schedules further provide and fix the prices on used parts, apparatus and equipment when traded in as part of the purchase price on new parts, apparatus and equipment.

PAR. 5. Supplementing said license agreements and in support thereof but without authority under the patents and license agreements described in paragraphs 3 and 4, the said respondents have done and performed, and still do and perform, the following:

(a) Said respondents agreed to fix and maintain and have fixed and maintained a uniform price in the sale of unpatented parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment used in the manufacture, assembly, or operation of carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

(b) Said respondents agreed to fix and maintain and have fixed and maintained uniform prices in the sale of certain couplings, used as accessories on hose assemblies of carbon dioxide fire extinguishers, without the requirement of a license or other authority from the owner of a lawfully issued patent on said couplings.

(c) Said respondents agreed to submit and have submitted identical bids on said parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment, where competitive bids were called for by Governmental agencies.

(d) Said respondents have used and are now using other methods and means designed to suppress and prevent competition and restrict and restrain the sale of parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment used in the manufacture, assembly and operation of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondents as alleged in paragraph 5 hereof are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment used in the manufacture, assembly, and operation of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices on all such commodities; have created in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of said parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in the said parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

THE CHARGE UNDER THE CLAYTON ACT

PARAGRAPH 1. Paragraphs 1a and 3 of count 1 hereof are hereby incorporated and made a part of this charge to precisely the same extent and if each and all of them were set forth in full and repeated verbatim in this count. Paragraphs 2 and 4b of count 1 hereof are hereby incorporated and made a part of this charge, but only to the extent that the same refer and apply to the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Under the provisions of the license agreement granted by respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., to National Foam System, Inc., the said respondent as licensor agrees to sell to National Foam System, Inc., as licensee, and said licensee agrees to purchase from said licensor, all the parts, apparatus and equipment necessary for the manufacture, sale, installation, and use of carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

The effect of the aid provisions in said license agreement may be, is, and has been, to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in parts, apparatus and equipment necessary for the manufacture, sale, installation and use of carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3 of the hereinabove mentioned act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, (The Clayton Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and amendments thereto, the Federal Trade Commission on October 18, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents above named, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said acts. On December 13 and 14, 1939, the respondents filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and their counsel and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. (a) Respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 140 Cedar Street, New York, N. Y.

(b) Respondent American La France & Foamite Industries, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at Elmira, N. Y.

(c) Respondent C-O-Two Fire Equipment Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 560 Belmont Avenue, Newark, N. J.

(d) Respondent National Foam System, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 1632 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(e) Respondent Fryout (referred to in the complaint as Fryout) Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California and having its principal place of business at 90 West Street, New York, N. Y. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. The above-named corporate respondents are engaged in the manufacture and/or assembly of fire fighting equipment including carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, and in the sale and distribution thereof to purchasers located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondents, in the regular course of their business in the sale and distribution of fire fighting equipment, parts, accessories, and apparatus thereof, cause the same to be shipped and transported from the various points at which their manufacturing and/or assembling plants are located into and through the several States of the United States, other than the State of the origin of such shipments, and in the District of Columbia. They are in competition among themselves excepting insofar as such competition may have been hindered, lessened, restricted, or restrained as hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 3. Respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., was the assignee of two patents, known as the Rustige and Minor patents, which governed the successful manufacture, assembly, and operation of carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers. The Rustige patent expired on or about March 30, 1937. The Minor patent was issued by the United States Patent Office on May 27, 1930, and covered a fire-extinguishing method which supplies carbon dioxide liquid from a container to one or more discharge nozzles so constructed or supplemented as to prevent the entrainment of air, together with the necessary appurtenances for carrying out the method. Prior to the expiration of the Rustige patent, respondent Walter Kidde & Co.,

Findings

30 F. T. C.

Inc., issued license agreements, based on both of said patents, to the respondents, which license agreements have continued in force to the present time.

PAR. 4. Affixed to, and forming a part of, each of the license agreements, entered into by respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., with each of the other respondents, is a "Schedule of Minimum Prices and Terms."

The said schedule of minimum prices and terms included uniform prices at which respondents agreed to sell, and did sell, parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment used in the manufacture or assembly of the said carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers. Included among said parts listed in the price schedules were: hose assemblies, cylinders, carrying straps, etc.

PAR. 5. All of the respondents, pursuant to the agreement to maintain the uniform prices as listed in the said minimum price schedules, have submitted identical bids on said parts, accessories, apparatus, and equipment, in response to invitations of governmental agencies for competitive bids.

The Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the United States Navy Department, on June 3, 1937, issued an invitation for competitive bids for hose assemblies, in "Schedule 919," to be opened June 25, 1937. There were three lots involved in Schedule 919: Lot 936 covered the delivery to the Supply Officers, Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y., of 800 hose assemblies described in said invitation as "Assemblies, hose, discharge, flexible, inside diameter  $\frac{5}{16}$  inch," for use with portable 15-pound carbon dioxide fire extinguisher; Lot 937 covered the delivery of 400 similar hose connections to the Supply Officer, Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.; Lot 937-A covered the delivery of 300 similar units to the Supply Officer, San Diego, Calif. All the respondents named herein, in response to said invitation, filed bids on each of the 3 lots and the bids of each respondent were identical and were the same as the figures then appearing in the agreed minimum price schedule.

PAR. 6. The particular type of coupling used and included in the hose assemblies, which hose assemblies were the subject matter of the bid invitations referred to in the preceding paragraph is not manufactured by respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., or by any of the respondent licensees. Said coupling is itself a patented item manufactured by Flex-O-Tube Co., of Detroit, Mich., under Patent No. 1752976 which is owned by the said Flex-O-Tube Co. Flex-O-Tube Co. has never licensed respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., or any of the respondents named herein to manufacture said couplings.

The minimum price schedules attached to the license agreements referred to herein included a minimum price allotted to the said patented coupling. No license agreement or other authorization exists between Flex-O-Tube Co. and respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., authorizing or requiring the latter to include the said patented coupling as one of the items in minimum price schedules. Flex-O-Tube Co. has sold the said patented couplings to the respondents named herein and will sell the said patented couplings to any one who desires to buy them.

PAR. 7. The license agreement issued on December 2, 1935, by respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., to respondent National Foam System, Inc., licensed National Foam System, Inc., to make, sell, install, and use the inventions set forth in the license agreement. Respondent National Foam System, Inc., does not manufacture carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems, or carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, or any of the parts, accessories or appurtenances thereto. The license issued by respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., is in reality not a license to manufacture but one to assemble the parts, accessories and apparatus purchased from the licensor.

Under said agreement respondent National Foam System, Inc., is required to purchase from respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., all of its requirements of the said parts, accessories and apparatus, whether the said parts, accessories and apparatus were to be used by respondent National Foam System, Inc., in assembling completed units of carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems or carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, or whether said parts, accessories and apparatus were to be resold, by respondent National Foam System, Inc., separately from said completed units. When said parts, accessories, and apparatus were sold, by National Foam System, Inc., separately from complete units the prices charged for same were in accordance with the agreed uniform price schedules.

PAR. 8. In most instances when the respondent National Foam System, Inc., obtains orders for carbon dioxide fire-fighting equipment, such orders are placed by respondent National Foam System, Inc., and the equipment so ordered is manufactured and assembled at the factory of respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc. However, on Government orders for carbon dioxide fire-fighting equipment received by the respondent National Foam System, Inc., the said respondent National Foam System, Inc., purchases all the necessary parts, accessories and apparatus from the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., and assembles the parts at its place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., and sells the said equipment as being manufactured by it.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents in fixing and maintaining uniform prices of parts, accessories and apparatus as herein set out in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6, are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition between and among respondents in the sale of said parts, accessories, and apparatus in commerce; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in said parts, accessories and apparatus and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and the acts and practices of the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., in requiring the respondent National Foam System, Inc., to purchase from it all of its requirements of said parts, apparatus, and equipment as herein set out in paragraphs 7 and 8 constitute a violation of section 3 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" approved October 15, 1914, and amendments thereto.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between counsel representing the respondents and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusions based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and that the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., has violated the provisions of section 3 of an Act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes";

It is ordered, That the respondents, Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., American La France & Foamite Industries, Inc., C-O-Two Fire Equipment Co., National Foam System, Inc., and Fyrout Co., Inc., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution, in commerce as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of parts, accessories, and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, do forthwith cease and desist from doing and performing by understanding, agreement, or combination, between or among any two or more of said respondents, or with others, the following acts and things:

1. Fixing, or fixing and maintaining the sale or purchase price for parts, accessories, and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

2. Compiling, publishing, and distributing any list of prices for the parts, accessories, and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

3. Filing bids where competitive bids are called for by Governmental agencies or other buyers for parts, accessories, and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers.

It is further ordered, That the respondent Walter Kidde & Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce as defined in the Clayton Act of parts, accessories and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Making any sale or contract for the sale of parts, accessories, and apparatus for use or in connection with the manufacture or assembly of carbon dioxide fire-extinguishing systems and carbon dioxide portable fire extinguishers, for use or resale, or fix a price charged therefor on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, wares, merchandise, supplies or other commodities of a competitor or competitors of the said respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

M. LINKMAN &amp; COMPANY

Docket 4018. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1940—Decision, Mar. 20, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of pipes and in sale and distribution thereof, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which consisted of (1) number of Dr. Grabow pipes, together with punchboard, for use in sale and distribution of such products, and cigarettes supplied by dealer-operator of board, under plan and in accordance with board's explanatory legend, by which customers securing by chance certain numbers or legends paid for their chances amounts ranging from 1¢ to 5¢ and received nothing and those securing certain other legends or punching last slip in each of four sections into which board was divided received, as case might be, one of said pipes or package of cigarettes supplied as above set forth; and (2) various assortments of merchandise with various other lottery devices for use in distribution thereof to purchasing public by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme involving substantially same sales plans or methods employed as that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold such assortments, together with said lottery devices, to dealer purchasers by whom devices in question were used in sale and distribution of its said merchandise in accordance with such sales plans or methods, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lottery in sale of its said products in accordance with such plans or methods as above set forth, involving in sale of merchandise to purchasing public game of chance or sale of chance to procure article without cost, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any methods involving use of a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said methods and by element of chance involved in sale of such merchandise in manner above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its products in preference to merchandise offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with result, through use of said methods and because of said game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from its competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent sales plans or methods, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices under the circumstances set forth were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Complaint

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Charles L. Schwartz, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that M. Linkman & Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, M. Linkman & Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1150 West Fullerton Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of pipes and in the sale and distribution thereof, to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said pipes when sold to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of "Dr. Grabow" pipes, together with a device commonly known as a punchboard. Said punchboard contains a number of small sealed tubes, each of which tubes contains a small slip of paper. Each of said slips of paper has printed thereon either "Put 1¢," "Put 2¢," "Put 3¢," "Put 4¢," "Put 5¢," "Take Dr. Grabow Pipe" or "Take 1 pkg. (20) cigarettes". Said tubes are divided into four sections. Purchasers who punch the slips with "Put 1¢," "Put 2¢," "Put 3¢," "Put 4¢," or "Put 5¢," pay the amounts specified on said slips and receive nothing therefor unless such slip is the last slip in that particular section. The person punching the last slip in either section is entitled to and receives one of said pipes. Purchasers who punch said slips of paper with "Take Dr. Grabow pipe" or "Take 1 pkg. (20) cigarettes" appearing thereon are entitled to and receive without cost the articles of merchandise so designated. The cigarettes are supplied by the dealer operating said punchboard. The facts as to whether a person pays 1¢, 2¢, 3¢, 4¢ or 5¢ and receives nothing in return therefor, unless such slip is the last slip in one of said sections, and whether a person receives a pipe or a package of cigarettes without cost are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of its merchandise and sells and distributes various other lottery devices for use in the distribution of such merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments are substantially the same as the sales plans or methods hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells or furnishes said lottery devices use the same in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above alleged and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 5, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, M. Linkman & Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 24, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, M. Linkman & Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 1150 West Fullerton Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of pipes and in the sale and distribution thereof, to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said pipes when sold to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments was sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: This assortment consisted of a number of "Dr. Grabow" pipes, together with a device commonly known as a punchboard. Said punchboard contains a number of small sealed tubes, each of which tubes contains a small slip of paper. Each of said slips of paper has printed thereon either "Put 1¢," "Put 2¢," "Put 3¢," "Put 4¢," and "Put 5¢," "Take Dr. Grabow pipe" or "Take 1 pkg. (20) cigarettes." Said tubes are divided into four sections. Purchasers who punch the slips with "Put 1¢," "Put 2¢," "Put 3¢," "Put 4¢," or "Put 5¢" pay the amounts specified on said slips and receive nothing therefor unless such slip is the last slip in that particular section. The person punching the last slip in either section is entitled to and receives one of said pipes. Purchasers who punch said slips of paper with "Take Dr. Grabow pipe" or "Take 1 pkg. (20) cigarettes" appearing thereon are entitled to and receive without cost the articles of merchandise so designated. The cigarettes are supplied by the dealer operating said punchboard. The facts as to whether a person pays 1¢, 2¢, 3¢, 4¢, or 5¢ and receives nothing in return therefor, unless such slip is the last slip in one of said sections, and whether a person receives a pipe or a package of cigarettes without cost are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent has sold and distributed various assortments of its merchandise and has sold and distributed various other lottery devices for use in the distribution of such merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments were substantially the same as the sales plans or methods hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondent has sold or furnished said lottery devices used the same in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons were attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, had the tendency and capacity to, and did, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Order

30 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, M. Linkman & Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of pipes or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing pipes or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such pipes or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of other assortments of pipes or other merchandise, together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling and distributing such pipes or other merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of pipes or other merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling and distributing such pipes or other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of pipes or other merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (1) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which (1) original order issued on February 8, 1928, 12 F. T. C. 19, and in which (2) Circuit Court of Appeals for Third Circuit, on June 14, 1930, 14 F. T. C., 708, rendered decree modifying said order, (3) on November 21, 1930, 14 F. T. C. 708, amended said decree, and (4) on June 26, 1939, 29 F. T. C. 1574, rendered its substitute decree, (vacating prior modifying decree of May 8, 1939, 28 F. T. C. 1958), modifying said amended decree and also modifying order in question of Commission in certain particulars and affirming the same in other particulars—

- (a) Requiring respondent, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, servants and employees, on and after two years from June 26, 1939, and in connection with sale or distribution of cigars from any of its factories in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from using, as in said order in detail below specified, trade-mark or trade name "Havana Ribbon," as descriptive of such cigars as sold by it under such trade or brand name, and from using the word "Havana," or word or words of similar import, for cigars not composed entirely or in substantial part of tobacco grown in Cuba, and that the various provisos be adhered to, as set forth, in event of such use for cigars composed only in part of such tobacco—
- (b) Authorizing and permitting said corporation, pending expiration of period in question, and in event of adoption by it of new brand name containing the word "Ribbon", but without the word "Havana," to accept such name with words "Formerly Havana Ribbon," as below set forth—
- (c) Requiring and directing such corporation within two years and thirty days from June 26, 1939, to file with the Commission report in writing setting forth with particularity the manner in which it has complied with the terms aforesaid of the instant modified order; and
- (d) Requiring said respondent, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, servants, and employees, in connection with sale or distribution of cigars as above set forth, to cease and desist from using (1) "MAPACUBA," or other word, or words, of similar import for cigars not composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown in Cuba, and subject to provisions below set forth in event of such use for cigars composed in part only of such tobacco, and (2) depiction, simulating the flag, emblem, insignia or coat-of-arms of Cuba, map of Cuba, Cuban tobacco fields, city or Harbor of Havana, Cuba, or depiction of similar import, in the advertising, branding, or labeling of any such cigars which are not composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown in Cuba, and subject to provisions set forth in event of such use in connection with cigars composed in part only thereof, and to cease and desist from (3) representing in any manner that any of its cigars contain or are composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown in Cuba, when such is not the fact.

Order

30 F. T. C.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on February 8, 1928, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondent had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on June 14, 1930, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit rendered its decree modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission and on November 21, 1930 amended the aforesaid decree, and on June 26, 1939 rendered its substitute decree modifying its aforesaid amended decree and also modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission in certain particulars and affirming said order in other particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said Court decree:

It is ordered, That the respondent Bayuk Cigars, Incorporated, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, servants, and employees, on and after 2 years from June 26, 1939, shall cease and desist, in connection with the sale or distribution of cigars from any of its factories in interstate commerce:

1. From using the trade-mark or trade name "Havana Ribbon" as descriptive of cigars of the type and composition or substantially of the type and composition lately and now sold under the aforesaid trade or brand name.

2. From using the word "Havana" or other word or words of similar import, alone, or in conjunction with the word "Ribbon," or any other word or words, either as a brand or trade name or as descriptive of cigars, unless such cigars are composed entirely or in substantial part of tobacco grown on the island of Cuba; Provided, That if the cigars be composed in part only of such tobacco, that fact shall be indicated by the brand or trade name (if the word "Havana" or like word occurs therein) the words of which that are descriptive of tobacco content shall be of uniform size, together with such accompanying descriptive words as may be necessary clearly to indicate the true composition and character of said cigars. If the word "Havana" or like word is not used in the brand name, but only in descriptive words applied to cigars composed in substantial part of Havana tobacco, such descriptive matter shall fairly indicate the true composition and character of the cigars. In all such descriptive matter the filler tobaccos used in said cigars shall be set forth in the order of their predominance by weight in letters of equal size and conspicuousness. Provided further, That the words "Havana Filler" may, without other description, be applied, either as part of a brand name or otherwise, to cigars having a filler composed entirely of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba.

It is further ordered, That pending the expiration of said period of 2 years from June 26, 1939, the respondent Bayuk Cigars, Incorporated, upon the adoption of some new brand name containing the word "Ribbon" but eliminating the word "Havana" may, during said period of 2 years, but not thereafter, accompany such new brand name with the words "Formerly Havana Ribbon" without the addition of other qualifying language; Provided, however, That such accompanying words be in letters substantially smaller than the new brand name.

It is further ordered, That within the period of 2 years and 30 days from June 26, 1939, Bayuk Cigars, Incorporated, be, and it is hereby directed and ordered to file with Commission a report in writing setting forth with particularity the manner in which it has complied with the aforesaid terms of this modified order.

It is further ordered, That the respondent Bayuk Cigars, Incorporated, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, servants, and employees, shall cease and desist, in connection with the sale or distribution of cigars from any of its factories in interstate commerce;

1. From using the word "Mapacuba" or other word or words of similar import, as or in a brand name for or as descriptive of any such cigars which are not composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba.

2. From using the word "Mapacuba," or other word or words of similar import, as or in a brand name for or as descriptive of any such cigars which are composed in part only of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, unless said word be immediately followed and accompanied by a word or words in letters of substantial size, visibility, and conspicuousness, clearly and unequivocally indicating or stating that such cigars are not composed wholly, but in part only, of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba;

3. From using a depiction simulating the flag, emblem, insignia, or coat-of-arms of the Republic of Cuba, map of Cuba, Cuban tobacco fields, city or harbor of Havana, Cuba, or depiction of similar import, in the advertising, branding, or labeling of any such cigars which are not composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba;

Order

4. From using a depiction simulating the flag, emblem, insignia or coat-of-arms of the Republic of Cuba, map of Cuba, Cuban tobacco fields, city or harbor of Havana, Cuba, or depiction of similar import, in the advertising, branding or labeling of any such cigars which are composed in part only of tobacco grown in the Island of Cuba, unless such depiction be accompanied by a word or words in letters of substantial size, visibility and conspicuousness, clearly and unequivocally indicating or stating that such cigars are not composed wholly, but in part only, of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba;

5. From representing in any other manner whatsoever that any of said cigars contain or are composed in whole or in part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba when such is not true in fact

It is further ordered, That the respondent, within 30 days after the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the five prohibitions of this modified order immediately hereinabove set forth.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on May 29, 1937, 24 F. T. C. 1370, and in which Court of Appeals for Third Circuit, on Aug. 10, 1939, in H. N. Heusner & Son v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 596, 29 F. T. C. 1580, rendered its decree modifying order of the Commission in question so as to allow respondent two years from date thereof within which to eliminate word "Havana" from brand name and labels of its cigars not made of Havana tobacco, sold by it as "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers" and "Martinez Havana Smokers"—

Requiring respondent, its officers, representatives, employees, or agents, on and after two years from Aug. 10, 1939, and in connection with offer for sale and distribution of cigars in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, to cease and desist from representing, through use of words "Havana" or "Habana," or otherwise as below set forth, that cigars not manufactured entirely from tobacco grown in Cuba are Havana cigars.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on May 29, 1937, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondent had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on August 10, 1939, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit rendered its decree modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission so as to allow the respondent 2 years from the date thereof within which to eliminate the word "Havana" from the brand name and labels of cigars not made of Havana tobacco and sold by it as "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers" and "Martinez Havana Smokers."

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said Court decree;

It is ordered, That the respondent, H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, its officers, representatives, employees, or agents, individually or corporate, on and after 2 years from August 10, 1939, shall cease and desist, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cigars in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia;

30 F. T. C.

From representing, through the use of words "Havana" or "Habana," alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or through the use of any other words of similar import and effect, or in any other manner, that cigars not manufactured entirely from tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba are Havana cigars.

It is hereby further ordered, That within the period of 2 years and 30 days from August 10, 1939, the respondent, H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, be, and it hereby is, directed and ordered to file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth with particularity the manner in which it has complied with the terms of the modified order herein.

BEAR MILL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on April 5, 1937, 24 F. T. C. 912, and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, on July 5, 1938, in Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 98 F. (2d) 67, 27 F. T. C. 1685, rendered its opinion and on July 26, 1938, issued its order modifying Commission order aforesaid in certain particulars and affirming same in certain other particulars—

Requiring respondent, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with sale and distribution of cotton and rayon fabrics in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, to forthwith cease and desist from representing through use of words "mills" or "manufacturing," as part of its corporate or trade name, or in any other way that it manufactures the product sold by it, until and unless it owns and operates, etc., as below provided, mill or factory in which such products are made and subject to permitted use of its corporate name, as below set forth, when words "Converters, Not Manufacturers of Textiles" are appended thereto and used in connection therewith.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on April 5, 1937 the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondent had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on July 5, 1938, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit rendered its opinion and on July 26, 1938 issued its order modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission in certain particulars and affirming said order in other particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said Court order:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bear Mill Manufacturing Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale and distribution of cotton and rayon fabrics, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

Representing, directly or by implication, through the use of the words "mills" or "manufacturing," along or in conjunction with other words, as part of its corporate or trade name, or in any other manner, or through any other means or device, that it manufactures the product which it sells until and unless it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the mill or factory wherein such products are made; provided, however, Respondent may continue to use its corporate name, Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., on its stationery, folders, labels, cartons and advertising when the words "Converters, Not Manufacturers of Textiles," are appended thereto and used in connection therewith.

IN THE MATTER OF HELEN ARDELLE, INC.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 2775. Order, Mar. 25, 1940

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on June 30, 1937, 25 F. T. C. 361, and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, on Feb. 14, 1939, in Helen Ardelles, Inc., et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 101 F. (2d) 718, 28 F. T. C. 1804, rendered its opinion and issued its decree modifying order in question in certain particulars and affirming same in other particulars—

Requiring respondent, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offer for sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy, to forthwith cease and desist from selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesalers for resale to retailers, or to retailers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales thereof to the general public are to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise, or supplying to, or placing in the hands of wholesalers, jobbers or retailers, assortments of candy, contents of which are arranged to constitute a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of such candy to the public, or packing or assembling in the same assortment for sale to the public at retail, boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a "punchboard," which is for use, or which may be or is designed to be used, in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail, or furnishing to retail and wholesale dealers and jobbers punchboards, with assortments of candy or separately, bearing statements informing the purchasing public that the candy is being sold by lot or chance, or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise as below set forth.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on June 30, 1937, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondent has violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on February 14, 1939, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit rendered its opinion and issued its decree modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission in certain particulars and affirming said order in other particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission

Order

issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said decree:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Helen Ardelle, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers or retail dealers assortments of candy whose contents are arranged to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distributon of the candy contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a "punchboard" which punchboard is for use, or which may be or is designed to be used, in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

4. Furnishing to retail and wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a "punchboard," either with assortments of candy or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchasing public that the candy is being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

It is further ordered, That respondent, Helen Ardelle, Inc., a corporation, shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Sections 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on January 6, 1938, 26 F. T. C. 244, and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for Third Circuit on March 29, 1939, in Belmont Laboratories, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 103 F. (2d) 538, 28 F. T. C. 1941, rendered its opinion and issued its mandate modifying said order in certain particulars and affirming same in other particulars—

Requiring respondents, its officers, etc., in connection with the offer for sale and distribution in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, of its Mazon or other similar medicinal products, to cease and desist from representing directly or through use of testimonials or indorsements, or in any other manner that such Mazon is a competent remedy or cure for eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin, unless such representations are limited to those types of said diseases and disorders which are not caused by, or associated with, systemic or metabolic disorder, or are not caused by syphilis, or that it has been clinically proved permanently to eliminate eczema, etc., as above described, unless qualified as aforesaid, or that it is used exclusively by well known specialists in treatment of various skin disorders, or that physicians throughout the country have successfully prescribed it to permanently eliminate or cure skin ailments, etc., irrespective of type thereof, or representing that the product is original or only treatment of its character for skin disorders.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on January 6, 1938 the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondent had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on March 29, 1939, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit rendered its opinion and issued its mandate modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission in certain particulars and affirming said order in other particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said mandate;

It is ordered, That the respondent, Belmont Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a medicinal product now designated as Mazon, or of any other medicinal product containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, sold under that name or any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. Directly or through the use of testimonials or indorsements or in any other manner

(a) That Mazon is a competent remedy or cure for eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia, and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin unless such representations are limited to those types of said diseases and disorders which are not caused by, or associated with, a systemic or metabolic disorder, or are not caused by syphilis;

(b) That Mazon has been clinically proved to permanently eliminate eczema, acne, dandruff, alopecia and other disorders and ailments manifested by diseased conditions of the skin unless such representations are limited to those types of said diseases and disorders which are not caused by, or associated with, a systemic or metabolic disorder, or are not caused by syphilis;

(c) That the product is used exclusively by well-known specialists in the treatment of various skin disorders;

(d) That physicians, throughout the country, have successfully prescribed Mazon to permanently eliminate or cure ailments, disorders and diseased conditions of the skin, irrespective of the type of the particular disorder or the cause or condition thereof;

2. That the product is the original or only treatment of its character for skin disorders.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Sections 5 (1) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on February 19, 1938, 26 F. T. C. 806, and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for Second Circuit on December 5, 1938, in Fioret Sales Co., Inc., et al. v. Federal Trade Commission 100 F. (2d) 358, 27 F. T. C. 1702, rendered its opinion and on April 28, 1939, issued its final decree affirming order in question by modification thereof in certain particulars—

Requiring respondent, its officers, etc., in connection with offer for sale and distribution of perfumes in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, to forthwith cease and desist from representing through use of such words as "Les Parfums des Jardines de Fioret," or through the use of any foreign words or phrases, or otherwise, that perfumes made or compounded in the United States are made or compounded in France or any other foreign country or are imported, subject to provision that so long as respondents obey terms of aforesaid prohibition, they may imprint upon or affix to packages, etc., or other containers of their perfumes, words "The concentrates of which these perfumes are made were produced in France and, as such, were imported into the United States where they were combined or diluted with domestic alcohol and the resulting perfume was bottled in United States of America."

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on February 19, 1938, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondents had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on December 5, 1938, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit rendered its opinion and on April 28, 1939 issued its final decree affirming the aforesaid order of the Commission by modifying said order in certain particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said decree:

Order

30 F. T. C.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Fioret Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Murray W. Morin and Irving Unterman, individually, and as officers of respondent Fioret Sales Co., Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of perfumes in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or through implication:

Representing, through the use of such words as "Les Parfums des Jardine de Fioret," or through the use of any foreign words or phrases, or through any other means or device, or in any manner, that perfumes manufactured or compounded in the United States are made or compounded in France or in any other foreign country, or are imported.

It is hereby further ordered, That, so long as respondents shall obey the terms of prohibition 1 hereof, that they be, and hereby are, permitted and authorized to imprint upon, or affix to, packages, cartons, bottles, or other containers of their said perfumes the following words, to wit: "The concentrates of which these perfumes are made were produced in France and, as such, were imported into the United States where they were combined or diluted with domestic alcohol and the resulting perfume was bottled in United States of America."

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

FAIRBANKS TAILORING COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3525. Complaint, Aug. 4, 1938—Decision, Mar. 27, 1940*

Where a corporation engaged in tailoring, on individual orders, suits, overcoats and other clothing for men and suits and coats for women, and in selling and distributing its said wearing apparel through salesmen or agents, who solicited and accepted orders from members of purchasing public, to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others also engaged in sale and distribution of such wearing apparel in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including among its said competitors many who do not misrepresent wool content of fabrics from which said garments are made and do not in any manner misrepresent or exaggerate earnings of their salesmen or agents, and do not designate or describe as "free" suits and overcoats not given as gift or gratuity, but as additional compensation for sale of garments—

- (a) Represented, in advertisements in periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, in which it stated that it had openings for ambitious men to wear suits and overcoats tailored to measure by it and to act as its agents in selling said products, that such agents could make up to $10 per day by selling its clothing without canvassing, and that experience was not necessary, facts being inexperienced salesman could not earn such amount without canvassing, and it would be necessary for salesman, in order to earn such sum or any amount approximating it, to be consistently employed in, and necessarily in canvassing, sale of its garments;
- (b) Referred, in its said advertisements for agents, to so-called free suit offer, facts being such suits were not free and were not delivered to those replying to such advertisements without cost and unconditionally, but were delivered only to those who sold, within stated period of time, 12 or specified number of its garments, and so-called free suits were earned by those securing same through their services in selling its said products and not as a gift or gratuity; and
- (c) Described, in literature sent to those replying to aforesaid advertisements, material from which wearing apparel was produced by it as "The finest of wool fabrics," "all worsted" and "all wool," and in sample fabric books supplied to its salesmen and agents for display in promoting sale of its said products, respectively described as "all wool Herringbone," etc., and "all worsted twist with rayon design," the two fabrics concerned, and further labeled and described by sample as "all worsted" other fabrics, and in advertising matter referring generally to aforesaid samples, referred thereto as "all wool," "wool," "woolen" and "100% all wool," facts being fabric first referred to was not composed of wool in its entirety or within such tolerances as might have been recognized in industry at time in question, but contained, in substantial part, silk and rayon, "all worsted" fabric aforesaid, designation of which as such word "twist" in no wise modified, was not, as understood by trade and purchasing public from use of unqualified term aforesaid, of wool entirely, with small percentage of rayon for decorative purposes, or of wool entirely within such tolerances as above described, but was composed in substantial part of other material or materials, and, while many of fabrics generally referred to as above set forth were all wool, number were included therein which were not thus composed in their entirety;

With tendency and capacity, through acts and practices aforesaid in connection with securing of representatives and offer and sale of its said products in commerce, in making such false and misleading representations with regard to free garments, salesmen's earnings and composition of fabrics involved, to induce substantial number of members of purchasing public to become its representatives and agents, and to induce many members of said public to purchase its said products because of mistaken and erroneous beliefs engendered by representations aforesaid, and thereby unfairly to divert trade in such commerce to it from its competitors; to their injury and that of the public:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Fairbanks Tailoring Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Fairbanks Tailoring Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 2286 Wabansia Street in the city of Chicago in said State.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Fairbanks Tailoring Co., is and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing, among other items of merchandise, suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men. The sales of its products are made directly and through salespersons or canvassers to the purchasing public throughout the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes its said products when sold to be transported from its said place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, has been and is in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and persons likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its suits, overcoats and other clothing for men by members of the purchasing public, and in endeavoring to secure salespersons to procure consumers' orders therefor, respondent has from time to time inserted advertisements in newspapers, magazines, periodicals, other publications and in descriptive circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising media, circulated into and through States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

In said advertisements respondent has made or caused to be made various representations concerning the quality and designs of the cloth used in making its products, the financial success its salespersons can and usually do make without canvassing or experience, and its gifts of suits or topcoats to them free of cost, also concerning the nature and character of its business, among which are the following:

Order your new suit or topcoat tailored to your measure by Fairbanks, from the finest all wool fabrics.

Men's clothes tailored to measure of all wool—$19.50 up.

"All worsted"—"all wool" on labels attached to its samples.

Start making money the day outfit arrives.

Openings for men. No Experience Necessary.

Make up to $10.00 in one Day without canvassing.

There is Mr. Tyron of Michigan for example. He is now 68 years old and has been with us for 12 years. He is one of our successful salesmen often making as high as $10 or more a day. These are just a few of the hundreds of men depending on the Fairbanks line.

Even if you sell only two suits per day, you will make up to $60.00 in a week—Besides Getting Your New Suit Free of Cost.

A New Suit or Topcoat for You Free of cost. * * * Free Suit Offer.

By far the most elaborate and fastest selling line in the country.

Tropical worsted—rayon design.

The statements made by respondent as aforesaid purport to be descriptive of its merchandise, and of the financial success salespersons can and do make by becoming its agents and serve as representations to the purchasing public that the material respondent uses in making its suits, overcoats and other clothing for men is composed wholly of "wool"; that respondent's salespersons can and usually do make $10 per day without canvassing and without experience; that respondent gives its salespersons suits or topcoats free of cost; that the line of suits, topcoats and other clothing for men offered for sale and sold by respondent is the fastest selling line in the country; and that some of the materials it uses are of rayon design.

Complaint

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact the representations made by respondent as hereinbefore set out and the impressions and inferences thereby created in the mind of the public are false and misleading, in that all of the suits, overcoats, and other clothing offered for sale and sold by respondent are not made from material composed wholly of wool, but many of said garments are composed in substantial part of cotton, rayon, and other fibers; that respondent's salespersons or agents cannot and do not usually and consistently make up to $10 per day in normal times and under normal conditions without canvassing and without experience; such agents are expected to and do canvass to sell respondent's said products; respondent does not give its salespersons suits or topcoats free but such "free gifts" are in fact bought and paid for in the services performed by said salespersons or agents in the sale of said merchandise for respondent. The line of products respondent offers for sale and sells is not the most elaborate and the fastest selling line in the country. The so-called rayon design is only a distinctive stripe, and not a design, one strand of which is rayon and the other strand cotton.

PAR. 6. There are now and have been competitors of respondent selling and distributing suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not, in the offering for sale and sale of their products, misrepresent the nature, character, quality, or popularity of their products, or the method or manner of, or compensation paid for, the sale or distribution of said products, and who do not represent that men's suits or topcoats or other clothing or other articles are given away free of cost to their salespersons or others, when such is not the fact.

PAR. 7. The false and misleading representations made by respondent in the offering for sale and sale of its suits, overcoats and other clothing for men, as hereinbefore set out, have had and have the capacity and tendency to, and did and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men are made wholly of wool; that its said agents can and usually do make $10 per day without canvassing and without experience; that respondent gives its salespersons suits or topcoats free of cost; that the line of suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men offered for sale and sold by respondent is by far the most elaborate and the fastest selling line in the country; and that the design of some of the material respondent uses is of rayon.

On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been and is induced to purchase suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men from respondent, and thereby trade has been and is diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors named in paragraphs 3 and 6 hereof. As a result thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 4, 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and thereafter caused it to be duly served on the respondent Fairbanks Tailoring Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, at Chicago, Ill., on November 4, 1938, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Merle P. Lyon, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by Henry Junge of the firm of Hickey, Hall & Junge, attorneys for the respondent, before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and thereafter at Chicago, Ill., on May 12, 1939, additional testimony and other evidence in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced by said Henry Junge on behalf of the respondent, and in support of the allegations of said complaint by S. Brogdyne Teu, II, attorney for the Commission, before Arthur F. Thomas, another examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and all of the aforesaid testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, no request for oral argument having been made; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Fairbanks Tailoring Co. is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 2286 Wabansia Street in the city of Chicago, in said State. Respondent is now, and for a number of years prior to the date of the issuance of the complaint in this proceeding has been, engaged in the business of tailoring suits, overcoats, and other clothing for men on individual orders, and of suits and coats for women on individual orders. It has caused and now causes the wearing apparel produced by it, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., through and into various other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent has been, and is now, in competition with various other corporations and with persons, firms and partnerships also engaged in the sale and distribution of tailored wearing apparel in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent distributes the wearing apparel produced by it through salesmen or agents who solicit and accept orders for garments from members of the purchasing public. Respondent supplies its agents with order blanks, samples of materials from which the wearing apparel is to be made, and instructs them as to the manner and method of taking measurements for such wearing apparel. When orders are secured by such salesmen or agents they are transmitted to the respondent at its place of business in Chicago, Ill., where the garments are tailored and in turn shipped to the purchasers at their respective points of location.

PAR. 3. Prior to January 11, 1937, respondent caused advertisements to be published in magazines and other periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States in which the announcement was made that respondent had openings for ambitious men to wear suits and overcoats tailored to measure by respondent and to act as agents for respondent in selling suits and overcoats. In said advertisements it was represented that such agents could make up to $10 per day by selling respondent's clothing without canvassing and that experience was not necessary. Respondent also referred in said advertisements to a so-called free suit offer. Literature sent to persons responding to these advertisements described the material from which wearing apparel produced by the respondent was made as "The finest of wool fabrics," "all worsted," and "all wool."

PAR. 4. In the spring of 1938 respondent distributed to its salesmen or agents books containing samples of materials for use in soliciting orders for wearing apparel. These sample books contained a description of each of the samples therein, and many of the samples were described as "all wool," and "all worsted." These samples were displayed to the purchasing public by said salesmen and agents.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations on the part of the respondent in connection with the sale and distribution of its said wearing apparel in said commerce had the tendency and capacity to lead prospective salesmen or agents to believe that they could secure from the respondent a suit "free" and without cost or condition; that inexperienced salesmen could earn as much as $10 per day by selling respondent's wearing apparel without canvassing; and to lead purchasers and prospective purchasers of said wearing apparel to whom said sample books were displayed by said salesmen and agents to believe that the materials described in said sample books as "all worsted" and "all wool" were in fact composed entirely of wool.

PAR. 6. The suits referred to in respondent's said "free suit offer" were not free and were not delivered to persons responding to said advertisements without cost and unconditionally, but said suits were delivered only to such persons as sold a specified number of respondent's garments, usually 12, within a stated period of time. Said suits described as "free" were earned by the persons securing the same through their services in selling respondent's said garments and were not a gift or gratuity.

Inexperienced salesmen or agents could not earn $10 per day selling respondent's garments without canvassing. In order to earn $10 a day or any sum approximating that sum a salesman would have to be consistently employed in the sale of garments for the respondent which requires canvassing.

PAR. 7. Among the samples of fabrics contained in said sample book, prepared and distributed among its salesmen and agents for display among prospective purchasers in promoting the sale of its said garments in the spring of 1938 as above set out, was a sample labeled and described as follows:

Very stylish green all wool Herringbone with brown overlaid.

This sample and the above statement were displayed to prospective customers in soliciting and securing orders for garments made from the fabric shown by this sample. The fabric from which garments were made, when orders were received for garments from this sample, was not all wool as represented by the respondent, but was in truth and in fact composed in substantial part of materials other than wool, namely, silk and rayon. The wool content of this fabric was approximately 80 percent in one direction and 50 percent in the other, according to a report of a microscopic methods test made by the National Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce. A report of a different test made by a private testing agency shows a wool content of 84.9 percent, silk 12.6 percent, rayon 2.5 percent. Both of these tests show, and the Commission finds that the fabric was not composed of wool in its entirety or within such tolerances as might have been recognized in the industry at the time the fabric was so labeled and described. Respondent's representation that this fabric was "all wool" was false and misleading.

Another sample fabric displayed in the spring of 1938 sample book and used and displayed by respondent's salesmen and agents in soliciting and securing orders made from the fabric shown by this sample, in promoting the sale of respondent's garments, was one labeled and described as follows:

Atlas long wearing all worsted twist with rayon design.

The term "all worsted," without qualification, is understood in the trade and by the purchasing public to mean a fabric made entirely of wool. The use of the word "twist" in no wise modifies the term "all worsted." The term "rayon design" does not indicate or mean to the purchasing public that the fabric contains any substantial percentage of materials other than wool, as this term indicates only a small percentage of rayon for decorative purposes, usually less than 2 percent. This fabric was not composed entirely of wool and a small percentage of rayon for decorative purposes, as indicated by the label on the sample, but was in truth and in fact composed in substantial part of a material or materials other than wool. The wool content of this fabric was 30 percent according to the report of a microscopic method test made by the National Bureau of Standards, United States Department of Commerce. This test shows, and the Commission finds, that this fabric was not composed of wool in its entirety, with a small percentage of rayon for decorative purposes, or within such tolerances as might have been recognized in the industry at the time the fabric was so labeled and described. Respondent's representation that this fabric was "all worsted" was false and misleading.

PAR. 8. Prior to the issuance of the spring of 1938 sample book, the respondent labeled and described a number of samples of fabrics shown in sample books as "all worsted" which were not in truth and in fact composed entirely of wool, but which fabrics contained a substantial percentage of materials other than wool. The respondent in its advertising matter referred to such samples of fabrics generally, including the number branded "all worsted" and composed in substantial part of materials other than wool, as "all wool," "wool," "woolen," and "100 percent all wool." These representations, as well as the "all worsted" labels, were false and misleading when applied to the line of samples as a whole for, while many of the fabrics were all wool, a number, as above set forth, were included therein which were not composed in their entirety of wool.

PAR. 9. There are among competitors of respondent various persons, partnerships and corporations who offer for sale and sell tailored garments for men and women in commerce between and among the several States of the United States, many who do not misrepresent the wool content of the fabrics from which said garments are made and who do not in any manner misrepresent or exaggerate the earnings of their salesmen or agents and who do not designate or describe as "free" suits and overcoats not given as a gift or gratuity but as additional compensation for selling garments.

PAR. 10. The acts and practices of respondent, in connection with the securing of representatives and in connection with offering for sale and selling its said products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in making and using the false and misleading representations hereinabove set out with regard to "free" suits and overcoats, the earnings of salesmen and the composition of the fabrics from which the garments offered for sale and sold are made, have the tendency and capacity to induce a substantial number of members of the purchasing public to become and act as representatives and agents for respondent, and to induce many members of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's said products because of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs engendered by said false and misleading representations, and thereby unfairly to divert trade in said commerce to respondent from its competitors, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations of the respondent, Fairbanks Tailoring Co., are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves and Arthur F. Thomas, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, no request for oral argument having been made, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Fairbanks Tailoring Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of suits and overcoats for men, and suits and coats for women, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "all wool," "all worsted," or any other words indicating a fabric composed of wool in its entirety, to designate, describe or refer to fabrics, the fiber content of which is not composed wholly of wool; provided, however, that such words may be used to describe a fabric composed essentially of wool but containing a small percentage of material or materials for decorative purposes only, such as silk or rayon, when there is used in connection or conjunction with the words indicating an all wool fabric in letters of equal size and conspicuousness, words, such as "rayon decoration" or "rayon stripe," truthfully designating and describing the decorative material or materials used.

2. Using the word "free" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning to designate, describe, or refer to garments delivered to representatives or agents of the respondent as compensation for services performed in connection with the sale and distribution of respondent's products.

3. Representing that inexperienced representatives or agents engaged in the solicitation of orders for respondent's garments can make up to $10 a day without canvassing.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION

Docket 3576. Complaint, Sept. 3, 1938—Decisions, Mar. 27, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale of new and second-hand clothing and other merchandise to purchasers in various other States, pursuant to orders, in practically all cases, received through the mails in response to advertisements and advertising literature circulated by it as below set forth, and by customers who had had no opportunity to examine merchandise until delivered and who relied entirely upon its descriptions and depictions thereof in its advertising, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such products in commerce, and including many who truthfully advertise and represent the value, quality, age, color, size, style, and cleanliness of their products and truthfully represent nature of their business and business methods; in advertisements in many newspapers and periodicals having general circulation throughout the various States, and in advertising booklets, folders, pamphlets, and other forms of advertising literature which it in part directly distributed to members of purchasing public in various States and in part furnished to its customers, by whom same was placed in hands of said public—

- (a) Invited reader to "Be Your Own Boss!" and "Make 200% to 300% profit," operating "Quality used and new clothing business from your own store, home, or auto," with "No selling experience required" and "Catalogue Free," and to "Sell men's, women's, and children's clothing and shoes at big profits. Select from the big values in this new fall and winter catalog," etc., facts being it was impossible for purchasers of its said merchandise, because of unsatisfactory condition thereof as below set forth, to resell same at such profit, and it was difficult, in most instances, to resell same at any profit whatever, and in many cases resale thereof at any price whatsoever was impossible;
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that it shipped kind of merchandise depicted in such advertisements, and that single garments might be obtained in all sizes, colors, and styles, and that its said goods were of latest styles and that slightly used merchandise was always cleaned, pressed, and repaired by its own expert craftsmen and that it guaranteed to replace any goods not satisfactory, through such statements as "Always Finest Quality," "* * * All (coats) are good styled and slightly used. * * * Assorted sizes and colors," "Dresses Smartly Styled * * * Every one salable * * * assorted sizes * * *," etc., "Topcoats you can be proud to sell. * * * cleaned, repaired, and pressed by our own expert craftsmen," "Suits Genuine Wool! styles and modern clothing, goods shipped by it were, in most instances, used, dirty, and unfashionable, it did not ship on order merchandise in any requested size, color, or style, but usually filled orders by shipping customer whatever goods it then had on hand, whether or not in size, style or color requested, used merchandise sold by it was very rarely cleaned, pressed, and repaired before shipping, but ordinarily dirty, rumpled, worn, unpleasantly odorous, and in some cases torn and completely unsalable, its staff consisted of its president and principal stockholder, a packer and clerk, and work of cleaning or pressing, in rare instances in which done, was by independent commercial cleaner and not by its alleged expert craftsmen, and merchandise returned to it was ordinarily replaced with equally unsatisfactory goods; and

(c) Represented that "Buying connections throughout the Nation enable us to supply you with quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices" and "We make it possible for you to beat all price competition with better quality merchandise," thus assuring "substantial business at a profit," facts being it had no buying connections enabling it to purchase quality merchandise at extraordinarily low prices, but bought its goods from peddlers, junk dealers, and charitable organizations, and occasionally made purchases of new merchandise from wholesalers who came to its door, and price paid by it for its goods was approximately same as that paid by competitors for same type of goods.

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that its said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by its said acts and representations, as above indicated, that number of purchasing public bought substantial volume of its products and trade was thereby unfairly diverted to it from its competitors; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce and unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that V. Portnoy & Sons, Inc., a corporation trading under the name of Roosevelt Mercantile Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPHS 1. The respondent, V. Portnoy & Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 566 Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill. For more than 2 years last past, respondent has been and still is engaged in the business of selling new and second-hand clothing and other merchandise. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof at their respective places of location in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and during all the times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise so sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among the competitors of the respondent in said commerce are many who truthfully advertise and represent the value, quality, age, color, size, style, and cleanliness of their merchandise, and who truthfully represent the nature of their business and their business methods.

PAR. 3. In the course of its said business, as hereinabove described, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its merchandise, respondent has made many statements concerning its business methods and concerning the value, quality, age, color, size, style, and cleanliness of its merchandise. Said statements and representations are made by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines, and by means of statements and picturizations in pamphlets, testimonials, letters, and catalogs, all circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among many, the following are typical examples of said advertisements:

All of said statements, together with similar statements and with picturizations appearing in the respondent's advertising literature, but not set out herein, purport to be descriptive of respondent's merchandise and its business methods. In all of its advertising literature and through other means, respondent represents that it ships the kind of merchandise described and pictured in its catalog; that single garments may be obtained from it in all sizes, colors, and styles; that its new merchandise is of the latest style; that its slightly used merchandise is always cleaned, pressed, and repaired by its own expert craftsmen before shipment; that it guarantees to replace any merchandise that is not satisfactory; that its buying connections throughout the United States enable it to purchase quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices to beat all competition; and that purchasers of its merchandise can make large profits by reselling its merchandise.

PAR. 4. The said representations made by respondent are grossly exaggerated, deceptive, misleading, and false. In truth and in fact, respondent does not ship the kind of merchandise described and pictured in its catalogs. Single garments cannot be obtained from it in all sizes, colors, and styles. Its new merchandise is not of the latest style. Its used merchandise is not always cleaned, pressed, and repaired before shipment to customers. Respondent does not replace merchandise which is returned as unsatisfactory. It has no buying connections which enable it to buy quality merchandise at the lowest prices to beat all competition. Salesmen cannot make large profits by reselling merchandise purchased from respondent.

The true facts are that respondent buys its stock of merchandise on the open market from wholesale clothing merchants, army posts, and junk dealers. Respondent employs a few persons to clean, repair and press some of its merchandise. When an order is shipped to a customer, the package frequently contains merchandise that is old, out of style, shopworn, dirty, worn out, valueless, and of a different color, age, quality, style, and condition from the merchandise ordered by respondent's customers.

PAR. 5. The false and misleading representations used by respondent, as set forth herein, in connection with the sale of its merchandise, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct consequence of the false, deceptive, and misleading representations of the respondent, and the erroneous and mistaken belief induced thereby, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial amount of merchandise from the respondent with the result that trade in said commerce has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in the business of selling clothing and other merchandise, who truthfully advertise and represent the value, quality, age, color, size, style, and cleanliness of their merchandise. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 3, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, V. Portnoy & Sons, Inc., a corporation, trading under the name of Roosevelt Mercantile Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced before examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief nor requested oral arguments), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, V. Portnoy & Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 566 Roosevelt Road in the city of Chicago in said State. Respondent trades under the name of Roosevelt Mercantile Co. Respondent is now and since the year 1935 has been engaged in the business of selling new and second-hand clothing and other merchandise.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes its merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. There is now and has been since the year 1935 a course of trade by the respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The respondent in the course of the operation of its business is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms also engaged in the business of selling and distributing clothing and other merchandise intended and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's merchandise is sold, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Among said competitors of the respondent in said commerce are many who truthfully advertise and represent the value, quality, age, color, size, style, and cleanliness of their merchandise and who truthfully represent the nature of their business and their business methods.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of its said business as hereinabove described and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said clothing and other merchandise, the respondent has made use of advertisements inserted in many newspapers and magazines having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States. Respondent has also made use of advertising booklets, folders and pamphlets, and other forms of advertising literature, some of which it directly distributes to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States, and some of which it furnishes to its customers located throughout the United States who, in turn, place the literature in the hands of the purchasing public. In its said advertisements respondent has made many statements concerning its business methods and concerning the value, quality, age, color, style, and cleanliness of its merchandise. Among many, the following are typical examples of said advertisements:

Our Guarantee

We guarantee to replace any merchandise that is not satisfactory if it is returned to us within five days. You pay all delivery charges.

All of such statements, together with similar statements and picturizations appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's business status and methods and of respondent's merchandise. In all of its advertising literature, and by other means, respondent represents that it ships the kind of merchandise pictured in connection with said literature, that single garments may be obtained in all sizes, colors and styles; that its new merchandise is of the latest style; that its slightly used merchandise is always cleaned, pressed and repaired by its own expert craftsmen; that it guarantees to replace any merchandise that is not satisfactory; that its buying connections throughout the United States enable it to purchase quality merchandise at prices lower than all of its competitors and that purchasers of its merchandise can make large profits by reselling the same.

PAR. 5. Respondent does an annual gross business of approximately $100,000. Practically all of respondent's orders for merchandise are received through the mails in response to advertisements and advertising literature circulated as hereinabove described. The customer thus having no opportunity to examine the merchandise until delivered, must rely entirely upon the respondent's descriptions and picturizations in its advertising literature. The Commission finds that the representations thus made by respondent are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. The pictures of merchandise appearing in respondent's advertising literature are not representative of the merchandise sold by respondent. On many occasions the merchandise so pictured by respondent appears to be new, clean, stylish, and modern clothing, whereas the merchandise shipped by respondent in response to an order is in most instances used, dirty, and unfashionable.

Respondent does not ship on order merchandise in any requested size, color, or style but as a matter of usual practice fills its orders by shipping to the customer whatever merchandise it may then have on hand, whether or not it may be in the size, style, or color requested.

The used merchandise sold by respondent is very rarely cleaned, pressed, and repaired before shipping; usually the merchandise is dirty, rumpled, worn, unpleasantly odorous and, in some cases, torn and completely unsalable. In the rare instances when such merchandise is cleaned or pressed before shipment, it is sent to an independent commercial cleaner. This work is not done by respondent's

30 F. T. C.

"expert craftsmen," because respondent does not employ any expert craftsmen, its entire staff consisting of respondent's president and principal stockholder, V. Portnoy, and a packer and a clerk.

When merchandise is returned to respondent as unsatisfactory, respondent customarily replaces this merchandise with other merchandise equally unsatisfactory. The Commission further finds that respondent has no buying connections which enable it to purchase quality merchandise at extraordinarily low prices. As a matter of fact, respondent buys its merchandise from peddlers, junk dealers, charitable organizations, and occasionally purchases new merchandise from wholesalers who come to its door. The price that respondent pays for its merchandise is approximately the same as that paid by its competitors for the same type of goods.

Because of the above-described unsatisfactory condition of respondent's merchandise, it is impossible for the purchasers thereof to resell the same at a profit of 200 or 300 percent as represented by respondent. In fact, in most instances it is difficult to resell this merchandise at any profit whatsoever, and in many cases it is impossible to resell the merchandise at any price whatsoever.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations in its catalogs, circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising media, in offering for sale and selling its merchandise in commerce, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct result of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent as hereinbefore enumerated, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors, to the injury of competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce and unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before A. F. Thomas and John P. Bramhall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief on behalf of the Commission (counsel for the respondent not having filed any brief nor requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, V. Portnoy & Sons, Inc., a corporation, trading as Roosevelt Mercantile Co., or trading under any other name or names, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that its merchandise is new, clean, or only slightly used, when such is not the fact, or that its used merchandise is of high value or quality or of the latest style.
2. Representing that merchandise which is used, dirty, and unfashionable may be readily resold at a profit.
3. Representing that respondent can or will fill orders for garments in assorted sizes or specified colors, when such is not the fact.
4. Representing that used merchandise sold by respondent is repaired, cleaned, or pressed by expert craftsmen employed by respondent, when such is not the fact.
5. Representing that respondent has buying connections not available to its competitors, or that respondent is able to purchase wearing apparel or other merchandise at prices lower than the prices at which its competitors can purchase similar merchandise.
6. Representing as the profit to be derived from the resale of respondent's merchandise any amount or percentage in excess of the average, usual and customary amount or percentage of profit which has actually been derived from the resale of respondent's merchandise under normal conditions and in due course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

J. W. MARROW MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Docket 3626. Complaint, Oct. 8, 1938—Decision, Mar. 27, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of face powders, creams, lotions, hair shampoos, and kindred cosmetics to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce as aforesaid, of similar products, and including those who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of the respective products made, sold, and distributed by them; in advertising its "massage," "tissue" and "acne" creams and its "muscle oil," "Mar-O-Oil Shampoo" and "Trimal for Cuticle," in advertisements in periodicals of national circulation and in radio broadcasts and through circulars—

- (a) Represented that its "massage" and "tissue" creams were nourishing and nutritive, and that latter prevented lines and corrected wrinkles, and that its said oil smoothed lines and wrinkles and was especially effective in removing fine lines around the eyes and mouth, facts being ingredients contained in products aforesaid do not supply nutrition to or nourish skin, and none of such products were nutrients when applied externally to skin, and would not smooth out lines and wrinkles from face and were not effective in removing, as aforesaid, lines around eyes and mouth;
- (b) Represented that its "acne" cream was antiseptic and aided in correcting blemishes, pimples and enlarged pores, facts being it was not an antiseptic, acne is due to disturbance of glands which feed pores of skin, commonly manifesting itself in form of pimples, and aforesaid cream did not correct blemishes, pimples, or enlarged pores;
- (c) Represented that its said shampoo revitalized starved dry hair and corrected cause of too oily hair, and that all beauty parlors and beauty shops gave "Mar-O-Oil" treatments, facts being not all beauty parlors and barber shops gave such treatments, cause of dry hair is failure of certain glands to secrete oil enough to keep hair in normal condition, it is impossible both to stimulate and, at same time, retard flow of oil from glands in question, and its said products had no value for causing such glands either to cease producing excessive amount of oil or start producing more, and its said shampoo did not accomplish results aforesaid with respect to either starved, or dry, or too oily hair;
- (d) Represented that its said "Trimal for Cuticle" would, among other things, leave live cuticle satin soft, while its "light nutrient oils" were "absorbed deeply by the nail roots to promote the healthy growth of flawless finger nails," facts being finger nails, are merely prolongations of skin, can be revitalized only through action of blood on tissues underlying nails, and its said preparation contained no oil or ingredient having effect on nails and did not revitalize same; and
- (e) Represented that scientists in motion picture studios who had devised definite rules for successful photographic beauty, invariably specified use of said "Trimal" in studio make-up departments as indispensable speedy way to pictorially perfect finger tips, facts being representations aforesaid were false;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all such representations were true, and with result, as consequence thereof, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its products and trade was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce as aforesaid, of products and preparations intended and used for purposes for which it recommended its products aforesaid, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Carleton M. Tower, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. W. Marrow Manufacturing Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. W. Marrow Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business at 3037 North Clark Street, Chicago, Ill. For more than 2 years last past respondent has been and still is engaged in the business of manufacturing for sale and selling face powders, creams, lotions, tonics, hair oils, and shampoo preparations. Respondent causes its said products when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective places of location in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and during all the times herein mentioned has maintained a course of trade in said products so sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is and at all times herein mentioned has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course of its said business as hereinabove described, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said products, respondent has made many statements concerning the efficacy and effect of its products. Said statements are made by means of advertisements inserted in magazines, by means of statements and picturizations in pamphlets, and by means of radio broadcasting, all circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among many, the following are typical examples of said advertisements:

Marrow's Massage Cream * * * Cleansing, nourishing and slightly stimulating. * * *

Marrow's Tissue Cream * * * Supplies the exact nutrition the skin needs, prevents lines, corrects wrinkles. * * *

Marrow's Acne Cream * * *

A very effective antiseptic cream. Aids in correcting blemishes, pimples and enlarged pores.

Marrow's Muscle Oil * * *

Smooths lines and wrinkles, especially effective in removing the fine lines around eyes and mouth. * * *

Mar-O-Oil Shampoo * * *

All beauty parlors and barber shops give Mar-O-Oil treatments. * * * It revitalizes starved, dry hair and corrects the cause of hair that is too oily.

Trimal for Cuticle * * *

You'll be amazed to see distended, dead cuticle melt away before your eyes, to leave the live cuticle satin soft; while at the same time, "Trimal's" light nutrient oils are absorbed deeply by the nail roots, to promote the healthy growth of flawless finger nails.

Scientists in motion picture studios who have devised definite rules for successful photographic beauty, today invariably specify the use of Trimal in studio make-up departments as the indispensable, speedy way to pictorially perfect finger tips.

All said statements, together with similar statements and picturizations appearing in respondent's advertising literature but not set out herein, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products. In all of its advertising literature and through other means, respondent represents, directly or by inference, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect that Marrow's Massage Cream is cleansing, nourishing and slightly stimulating; that Marrow's Tissue Cream supplies nutrition to the skin and thereby prevents lines and corrects wrinkles; that Marrow's Acne Cream contains astringent properties and is of aid in correcting blemishes, pimples, and enlarged pores; that Marrow's Muscle Oil smooths lines and wrinkles, and is especially effective in removing the fine lines around eyes and mouth; that

Mar-O-Oil Shampoo revitalizes starved, dry hair and corrects the cause of hair that is too oily; that all beauty parlors and barber shops give Mar-O-Oil treatments to their customers; that Trimal contains oils which are absorbed by the nail roots and aid in the healthy growth of finger nails; and that scientist in motion picture studios invariably specify the use of Trimal in order to take better pictures of finger tips.

PAR. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, deceptive, misleading, and false. In truth and in fact Marrow's Massage Cream is not cleansing, nourishing, or stimulating. Respondent's "Creams" and "Oils" do not supply nutrition to the skin or correct lines, wrinkles, blemishes, pimples, and enlarged pores. No product is a nutrient when applied externally to the skin of a human being. Mar-O-Oil Shampoo does not revitalize starved, dry hair nor does it correct the cause of hair that is too oily. All beauty parlors and barber shops do not give Mar-O-Oil treatments. Trimal does not contain any oil whatever. It has no effect upon live cuticle nor any effect upon the growth of the finger nails. Scientists in motion pictures do not specify the use of Trimal as the indispensable way to pictorially perfect finger tips.

The true facts are that the ingredients of respondent's products are not absorbed by or through the skin. The skin is a protective organ and anything placed upon it and massaged into the pores is eventually discharged or removed. The primary function of the skin is to rid itself of foreign matter. Medication for any disease of the skin must come from the inside and all nutriments must be delivered through the blood stream. Wrinkles and lines upon the face are caused by nerve decay. Any benefit to the muscles or nerves is given because of the massage while applying the particular product and not because of the cream or lotion used. Acne is a disturbance of the glands which feed the pores of the skin and occurs in the form of pimples. The cure for acne is by internal medication. The hair is kept in a normal condition by the sebaceous glands. A dry scalp results from a failure of the glands to secrete normally while in the case of an oily scalp the glands secrete too freely. It is impossible for one substance to cause these glands to secrete more freely and at the same time restrict excessive secretions. The ingredients of Trimal are such that if any oil were added to it, it would be destroyed by the alkaline solution. Trimal has no effect upon the cuticle nor upon the finger nails except in so far as the glycerine therein contained tends to soften the skin.

PAR. 5. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell products similar to respondent's who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 6. The exaggerated, deceptive, misleading, and false representations used by the respondent, as herein set forth, in connection with the sale of its products have the capacity to, and do mislead members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct consequence of the exaggerated, deceptive, misleading, and false representations of the respondent and the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced thereby, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial amount of respondent's products from it with the result that trade in said commerce has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors engaged in the business of selling similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the efficacy and effect of their products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 8, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent J. W. Marrow Manufacturing Co. charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Respondent entered an appearance and filed an answer to the complaint, and thereafter, beginning on January 23, 1939, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to said complaint by Carleton M. Tower, attorney for the respondent, before A. F. Thomas, an examiner of the Commission, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral arguments of counsel aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. W. Marrow Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and is engaged in the business of the manufacture, sale, and distribution of face powders, creams, lotions, hair shampoos, and kindred cosmetics. Respondent has caused and causes its products when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. It maintains a course of trade and commerce in said products among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between various States of the United States. There are competitors of respondent who manufacture, sell, and distribute products similar to those of respondent, who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business respondent caused to be circulated throughout various States of the United States, by the insertion of advertisements in magazines having a national circulation, by radio broadcasts, and in circulars, the following statements:

Marrow's Massage Cream * * ***

Cleansing, nourishing and slightly stimulating. * * *

Marrow's Tissue Cream * * ***

Supplies the exact nutrition the skin needs, prevents lines, corrects wrinkles.

Marrow Acne Cream * * ***

A very effective antiseptic cream. Aids in correcting blemishes, pimples and enlarged pores.

Marrow's Muscle Oil * * ***

Smooths lines and wrinkles, especially effective in removing the fine lines around the eyes and mouth. * * *

Mar-O-Oil Shampoo * * ***

All beauty parlors and beauty shops give Mar-O-Oil treatments. * * * It revitalizes starved, dry hair and corrects the cause of hair that is too oily.

Trimal for Cuticle * * ***

Findings

30 F. T. C.

You'll be amazed to see distended, dead cuticle melt away before your eyes, to leave the live cuticle satin soft; while at the same time "Trimal's" light, nutrient oils are absorbed deeply by the nail roots to promote the healthy growth of flawless finger nails.

Scientists in motion picture studios who have devised definite rules for successful photographic beauty, today invariably specify the use of Trimal in the studio make-up departments as the indispensable, speedy way to pictorially perfect finger tips.

PAR. 3. The ingredients contained in respondent's cream and oils do not supply nutrition to the skin or nourish the skin. None of the products are nutrients when applied externally to the skin, and will not smooth out lines and wrinkles from the face, and are not effective in removing fine lines around the eyes and mouth. Acne cream is not an antiseptic and does not correct blemishes, pimples, or enlarged pores, because acne is due to a disturbance of the glands which feed the pores of the skin, and commonly manifests itself in the form of pimples.

Mar-O-Oil Shampoos do not revitalize starved, dry hair, nor correct the cause of hair that is too oily. The cause of dry hair is the failure of the sebaceous glands to secrete enough oil to keep the hair in its normal condition. Respondent's oil has no value for causing the glands in question to cease producing an excessive amount of oil or to start producing more oil. It is impossible to stimulate the flow of oil from the glands, and at the same time to retard it. Trimal contains no oil and none of the ingredients of Trimal have any effect on the nails, nor does it revitalize fingernails, because fingernails are merely a prolongation of the skin, and the only way that they can be revitalized is through action of the blood on the tissues underlying the nails. Not all beauty parlors and barber shops give Mar-O-Oil treatments. Scientists in motion pictures do not specify the use of Trimal as an indispensable way to pictorially perfect the fingertips.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices and each and all of these false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its said products, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had the tendency and capacity to, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. As a result of this erroneous belief, a number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between various States of the United States, products and preparations intended and used for the purposes for which respondent recommends its said products, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST'

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before A. F. Thomas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by R. A. McQuat, counsel for the Commission, and by Carleton M. Tower, attorney for respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. W. Marrow Manufacturing Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its various cosmetic preparations, known as "Marrow's Massage Cream," "Marrow's Tissue Cream," "Marrow Acne Cream," "Marrow's Muscle Oil," "Mar-O-Oil Shampoo," and "Trimal," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names, or under any other name or names, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from—

1. Representing that respondent's preparations, or any of them, will nourish the skin, or prevent, remove, or correct lines or wrinkles.
2. Representing that respondent's preparation "Marrow Acne Cream," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, will correct or remove blemishes, pimples, or enlarged pores, or that said preparation has antiseptic properties.
3. Representing that respondent's preparation "Mar-O-Oil," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, will revitalize dead hair or correct the cause of excessive oiliness of the hair.

4. Representing that respondent's preparation "Trimal," or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, contains oil or has any effect upon live cuticle or upon the growth of finger nails.

5. Falsely representing the extent to which those who professionally treat the hair or skin have adopted and use respondent's preparations.

6. Falsely representing the extent to which scientists or other experts, who supervise and direct make-up in moving picture studios, recommend or specify the use of respondent's cosmetics.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after the service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Subsections (h) to (k), inclusive, of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question in which (1) original order issued on December 24, 1931, 16 F. T. C. 1, and in which (2) the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, on December 14, 1936, in Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Society, et al., 86 F. (2d) 692, 24 F. T. C. 1591, handed down its opinion and decision, reversing, in part, and modifying and affirming in part, Commission's order, and on December 21, 1936 rendered its decree, modifying, as above indicated, Commission's order; (3) Supreme Court of the United States on November 8, 1937, in 302 U. S. 112, 25 F. T. C. 1715, reversed said decree of Circuit Court of Appeals, modifying in certain respects Commission's order to cease and desist, excepting modification of Clause 10 of such order (relating to offer and sale of course as a "Special Introductory Enrollment"), and issued its mandate remanding case to said Court of Appeals for further proceeding in conformity with opinion in question; and in which (4) court of appeals in question on December 10, 1937, ordered that such decision of Supreme Court be made its decision, and on May 20, 1938 in Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Society, et al., 26 F. T. C. 1524<sup>1</sup> resettled its aforesaid order of December 10, 1937, and issued its final decree in conformity with aforesaid mandate of the Supreme Court—

- (a) Requiring respondent corporations and respondents Stanford, Ward and Greener, and each of them, their officers, etc., in connection with offer for sale of any books or set of books or publications in commerce among the several States or in the District of Columbia, to cease and desist from advertising or representing in any manner, when such is not the fact, (1) to purchasers or prospective purchasers, that any books or set of books offered or sold by them will be given free of cost to such purchasers or prospective purchasers; (2) that a certain number of sets or any set offered and sold as aforesaid has been reserved to be given away free of cost to selected persons as means of advertising, or for any other purpose; (3) that purchasers or prospective purchasers of their publications are only buying or paying for loose-leaf supplements to keep books up to date for a period of 10 years; and (4) that their publication is a recently completed, new and up to date encyclopedia; and from (5) selling or offering any set of books of same text and content material under more than one name or title; and from (6) advertising, etc., as above set forth, that usual price at which their publications are sold is higher than that at which they are offered in such advertisements or representations; or advertising or representing (7) any person as contributor to or editor of any set of books or publications who has not performed services in connection therewith as below specified, and consented that he may be held out to public as contributor, editor, or assistant editor; or (8) that any person has given testimonials or recommendations for and concerning their said publications when such is not the fact; and from (9) publishing or causing to be published and circulated such testimonials or recommendations allegedly made by any person when they have not thus been made; and

- (b) Requiring respondent Standard Education Society and respondents Stanford, Ward, and Greener, and each of them, their officers, etc., in connection with the offer for sale of any home study course of instruction in commerce among the several States or in the District of Columbia, to cease and desist from advertising or representing in any manner to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the course of instruction is offered for sale and sold to the purchasers or prospective purchasers at a specially reduced price, when such is not the fact.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on December 24, 1931 the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondents had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on November 8, 1937 the Supreme Court of the United States reversed the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit rendered on December 21, 1936 modifying in certain respects the aforesaid order to cease and desist, except as to the modification of clause ten thereof, and issued its mandate remanding the case to said Circuit Court of Appeals for further proceedings in conformity with said opinion, and it still further appearing that on December 10, 1937 said Circuit Court of Appeals ordered that the aforesaid decision of the Supreme Court be made its decision and that said Circuit Court of Appeals on May 20, 1938 resettled its aforesaid order of December 10, 1937 and issued its final decree in conformity with the aforesaid mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsections (h) to (k), inclusive, of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the aforesaid Court orders.

It is hereby ordered, That the respondents, Standard Education Society, a corporation; Standard Encyclopedia Corporation; H. M. Stanford; W. H. Ward; and A. J. Greener, and each of them, their officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale of any books, set of books, or publications in commerce among the several States of the United States or in the District of Columbia, cease and desist from:

1. Advertising or representing in any manner to purchasers or prospective purchasers that any books or set of books offered for sale and sold by them will be given free of cost to said purchasers or prospective purchasers, when such is not the fact.

2. Advertising or representing in any manner that a certain number of sets or any set of books offered for sale or sold by them has been reserved to be given away free of cost to selected persons as a means of advertising, or for any other purpose, when such is not the fact.

3. Advertising or representing in any manner that purchasers or prospective purchasers of respondents' publications are only buying or paying for loose-leaf supplements intended to keep the set of books up-to-date for a period of ten years, when such is not the fact.

4. Advertising or representing in any manner that respondents' publication is a recently completed, new, and up-to-date encyclopedia, when such is not the fact.

5. Selling or offering for sale any set of books of the same text and content material under more than one name or title.

6. Advertising or representing in any manner that the usual price at which respondents' publications are sold is higher than the price at which they are offered in such advertisements or representations, when such is not the fact.

7. Advertising or representing any person as a contributor to or editor of any set of books or publications who has not performed services in making or preparing contributions to or who has not performed services in the editing of such books or publication and consented that he may be held out to the public as a contributor or as an editor or assistant editor.

8. Advertising or representing that any person has given testimonials or recommendations for and concerning respondents' publications, when such is not the fact.

9. Publishing or causing to be published and circulated testimonials or recommendations of and concerning respondents' publications alleged to have been made by any person when such testimonials or recommendations have not been made by such person.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Standard Education Society, a corporation, H. M. Stanford, W. H. Ward, and A. J. Greener, and each of them, their officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale of any home study

CALIFORNIA RICE INDUSTRY ET AL.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 3090. Order, Mar. 28, 1940

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on March 26, 1938<sup>1</sup> and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for Ninth Circuit on March 17, 1939, in California Rice Industry v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 716, 28 F. T. C. 1912, rendered its opinion and issued its decree modifying said order of Commission in certain particulars and affirming same in other particulars—

Requiring respondent, California Rice Industry, and other respondents as in said order below set forth, their successors, officers, etc., in connection with offer for sale, sale, and distribution of rice and rice products in commerce as defined in section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, to cease and desist from doing and performing by agreement, combination or conspiracy between and among any two or more of them or with others the (1) fixing and maintaining uniform prices; or the (2) compiling, publishing and distributing any joint or uniform list or compilation of prices; or the (3) adopting any joint or uniform price list or other device which fixes prices; or the (4) discussing, through the medium of meetings of the California Rice Industry or its Marketing and Crop Boards, or in any similar manner, uniform prices, terms, discounts, agreements upon prices, by resolution or otherwise, or the employing any similar device which fixes or tends to fix prices, or which is designed to equalize or make uniform the selling prices, terms, discounts, or policies of respondent millers.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on March 26, 1938 the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that respondents had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on March 17, 1939, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit rendered its opinion and issued its decree modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission in certain particulars and affirming said order in other particulars;

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said decree:

<sup>1</sup> 26 F. T. C. 968.

Order

It is ordered, That the respondents, California Rice Industry; Harry M. Creech, George W. Brewer, Florence M. Douglas, J. S. Ritterband, W. T. Welisch, I. Yamakawa, O. F. Zebal, R. A. Renaud, Hugh Baber, Leon Brink, N. F. Dougherty, Ernest Grell, Lewis Manor, and A. E. Scarlett; Charles S. Morse, Allen A. Morse, Nelson B. Morse, Clarence G. OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3355. Complaint, Mar. 11, 1938—Decision, Mar. 28, 1940*

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations for use in treatment of diseases, ailments, and conditions peculiar to women, in substantial competition, in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, with others engaged in sale and distribution of products used and useful in treatment of such diseases, ailments and conditions; in advertising and describing its so-called "Motex" and "Motex Pills" in advertising literature such as booklets, pamphlets, and circulars, and through labels containing statements purporting to be descriptive of products therein named and efficacy thereof in treatment of such diseases, etc., for which they were recommended as effective, and of which more than 400,000 copies monthly were, during periods involved, distributed among prospective purchasers in the various States and in the District of Columbia—

- (a) Represented, directly and by necessary implication, that its said products were safe, competent, and reliable remedies for all delay in fluctuation of the menses, and brought on, in few hours, desired results;
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said products were harmless and safe and generally preventive of ill health, and remedy for various ailments and troublesome conditions associated with or related to menstrual function when due to unnatural causes; and
- (c) Represented, as aforesaid, that they were effective to tone up generative organs and whole system, and acted directly on circulation of uterus, and were effective abortifacients;

Facts being they were not effective as competent and reliable treatments or remedies for aforesaid various ailments and conditions, and had no value in such connection, did not tone up aforesaid organs or whole system, nor act directly on circulation of uterus, and, as aforesaid, were without value in various conditions and ailments indicated and suggested, were not safe or harmless, taken according to directions, which involved dosage in large and dangerous amount of ergotin and aloin, constituents thereof, and were not effective as abortifacients, but might, thus used, cause serious injury;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of its various products by reason of such belief, and of thereby diverting trade in commerce to it from its competitors who do not, in sale and distribution of their products, make use of same or similar misrepresentations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Western Refining Co., Inc., trading as The Motex Co., and Cote Products Co., and other names, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Western Refining Co., Inc. is a Massachusetts corporation. The Motex Co. and Cote Products Co. are trade names used by Western Refining Co., Inc. in the sale and distribution of its products. Respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medical preparations for use in the treatment of diseases, ailments, and conditions peculiar to women. Respondent's office and place of business is located at 16 Robeson St., Lowell, Mass.

The respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from the aforesaid place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof located in various States other than the State of Massachusetts and in the District of Columbia. It maintains a course of trade and commerce in said products so distributed and sold by it between the State of Massachusetts and various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as aforesaid, the respondent has been and is in substantial competition in said commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of products used and useful in the treatment of the diseases, ailments, and conditions peculiar to women, for which the respondent represents and implies that its said preparations are competent and effective treatments.

PAR. 3. The products marketed by respondent are variously known and described as Motex and Motex Pills.

PAR. 4. In the operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products by members of the purchasing public, the respondent has made use of certain advertising literature, such as booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and labels, containing statements purporting to be descriptive of the various products herein named, and statements as to the effectiveness of said products in the treatment of the diseases, ailments and conditions for which they are recommended. This advertising literature is distributed among prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. With reference to the products known as Motex and Motex Pills, such statements as the following are made:

DELAYED?      WOMEN!

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

Each night just before retiring take a hot mustard "Sitz" bath, sitting in the hot water up to the hips until you perspire freely, though not over 20 minutes. Into this hot bath water pour a half cupful of dry, yellow, ground mustard, which you can obtain very cheaply at any drug store. Cover up the upper part of your body with a blanket to keep out the cold air while sitting in the sitz or hip bath. Then get into bed after a quick drying off, being careful not to catch cold. These hot mustard sitz or hip baths just before retiring are said to greatly aid the results from Motex Pills.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out with respect to the products named, respondent, directly and by implication, represents that said products are safe, competent and reliable remedies for all delay in the function of the menses; that menstruation is brought on in a few hours by the use of said products; that said products are harmless and absolutely safe; that they are a general preventative of ill health and that they are recommended by famous doctors; that they are a remedy for unnatural, sluggish, suppressed, irregular and delayed periods including painful, fetid, scanty, absent monthly flow and other similar troublesome conditions of the menstrual function when due to unnatural causes, and that they are effective to tone up the generative organs and the whole system and act directly on the circulation of the uterus, are effective abortifacients, and will prevent conception.

In truth and in fact said products are not effective as competent and reliable treatments or remedies for delay in functioning of the menses. Said products are not effective as remedies for unnatural, sluggish, suppressed, irregular or delayed periods. They are not effective to tone up the generative organs or the whole system, and they do not act directly on the circulation of the uterus. Neither of said products correct irregularities, relieve unnatural suppression or reestablish the monthly flow. They are not effective as reliable or efficient remedies in many of the most stubborn or longstanding causes of unnatural suppression of menstruation. Further, said products do not form absolutely safe or harmless treatments if taken according to directions and are not recommended by famous physicians or generally by physicians, are not always effective as abortifacients, will not prevent conception, and might cause serious injury physically if so used.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors in commerce, as herein set out, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their products and who do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out and similar ones with respect to the therapeutic value of their respective products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondent in offering for sale and selling the various products as herein described in commerce as herein set out, have had, and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

As a result thereof, trade in said commerce is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors who do not in the sale and distribution of their respective products make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The methods, acts and practices of respondent herein set forth are to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of the respondent as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 11th day of March 1938, issued its complaint and caused same to be served upon the respondent, Western Refining Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, the Western Refining Co., Inc., is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Massachusetts. Respondent, Western Refining Co., Inc., uses the trade names "The Motex Company" and "Cote Products Company" under which to do business in the sale and distribution of its products.

Respondent is, and has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medical preparations for use in the treatment of diseases, ailments, and conditions peculiar to women, and has its office and place of business at 16 Robeson Street, Lowell, Mass.

PAR. 2. The respondent causes, and has caused, its products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Massachusetts, to purchasers of same located in various other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has been and is in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships also engaged in the sale and distribution of products used and useful in the treatment of the same diseases, ailments, and conditions peculiar to women.

PAR. 4. The products which have thus been marketed by the respondents are variously known and described as "Motex" and "Motex Pills." The formula for said products is substantially as follows:

	Grain
Aloes -----	1
Ext. Cotton Root Bark -----	1
Ergotin (Bonjean) -----	1
Ferrous sulphate (Exissicated) -----	1
Ext. Black Hellebore -----	1

(2nd Stip. Par. 5)

In some instances, the respondent has used a formula consisting of Apiol, 5 min., Ergot, 2 grains, Oil of Savin, ½ minim, Aloin, ⅓ grain, the amount of Ergot being double the amount used in the ordinary Motex and Cote Pills. The effect of the combination of the drugs in said formula of respondent in some case, is to produce abortions, and in many instances the use of said products has been dangerous to that part of the public taking same. The dosage prescribed on the label of said product, to wit, two tablets before each meal and one before bed-time, making seven tablets per day, which included 7 grains of ergotin, is a very large and dangerous dose; 7 grains of ergotin a day, taken for a number of days, may and often does produce a very serious and dangerous condition known as acute ergotism which is a toxic and poisonous effect of an overdose of ergotin. Another constituent of said formula, to wit, aloin, is a strong purgative, and the dosage as prescribed herein may, and often does, produce very harmful results to the patient.

PAR. 5. In the operation of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products by members of the purchasing public, respondent has made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, pamphlets, circulars and labels containing statements purporting to be descriptive of the various products therein named and statements as to the efficacy of said products in the treatment of the diseases, ailments and conditions for which same are recommended to be effective. This advertising literature, during the periods mentioned in the complaint, has been and is distributed among prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; at times more than 400,000 copies per month of such advertising literature being so distributed, the same containing statements as to the value and effectiveness of respondent's products, as aforesaid.

PAR. 6. With reference to respondent's products known as "Motex" and "Motex Pills," it has made statements in the advertising literature herein above described as follows:

DELAYED WOMEN

In the said advertising literature hereinabove set out, and in other statements of a similar nature appearing in evidence, the respondent, directly and by necessary implication represents that its said products are safe, competent and reliable remedies for all delay in fluctuation of the menses; that menstruation is brought on in a few hours by the use of said products; that said products are harmless and safe; that said products are a general preventive of ill health; that such products are a remedy for unnatural, sluggish, suppressed, irregular and delayed menstrual periods, including painful, fetid, scanty, and absent monthly flow, and other similarly troublesome conditions of the menstrual function when due to unnatural causes; that they are effective to tone up the generative organs and the whole system, and act directly on the circulation of the uterus and are effective abortifacients.

PAR. 7. Said products are not effective as competent and reliable treatments or remedies for delay in functioning of the menses and have no value in this connection. They are not effective as remedies or as competent treatments for unnatural, sluggish, suppressed, irregular or delayed menstrual periods; they do not have the effect of toning up the generative organs, or the whole system, and they do not act directly on the circulation of the uterus. Neither of said products have any therapeutic value so as to correct irregularities, relieve unnatural suppression, or reestablish the monthly flow. They are not effective as reliable or efficient remedies in stubborn or long standing causes of unnatural suppression of menstruation. Said products are not safe or harmless treatments when taken according to directions. Respondent's products are not effective as abortifacients, and may cause serious injury if so used.

PAR. 8. There are, among respondent's competitors in commerce, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective products, and who do not make use of any of the misleading representations as herein found to have been used by the respondent, with respect to the therapeutic value of their respective products.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by respondent in offering for sale and selling the various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's various products on account of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof, trade in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States has been diverted to respondent from its competitors who do not, in the sale and distribution of their products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of competitors of the respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the said complaint, brief in support of the complaint filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Western Refining Co. Inc., a corporation, trading as The Motex Co., Cote Products Co. or trading under any other trade name or names, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with offering for sale, sale and distribution of medical preparations now known as "Motex," "Motex Pills," "Cote Pills," or any other medical preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under these names or under any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from—

Order

30 F. T. C.

1. Representing that respondent's products constitute safe, competent, or scientific remedies or treatments for delayed menstruation or have any value in the treatment thereof, or that their use will have no ill effects upon the human body.

2. Representing that respondent's products are safe, competent or reliable cures or remedies for delayed, sluggish, painful, or suppressed menstruation, or that they constitute competent and effective treatments therefor; or have any value in the treatment thereof.

3. Representing that respondent's products are effective in toning up the generative organs of the system or act directly on the circulation of the uterus.

4. Representing that respondent's products have any therapeutic value so as to correct irregularities, relieve unnatural suppression or reestablish the monthly flow, or that said products are effective in stubborn or long standing cases of unnatural suppression of menstruation.

5. Representing directly or by implication that the use of respondent's products will produce a miscarriage if taken by pregnant women.

6. Representing through the failure to reveal that the use of any of respondent's such products may result in serious or irreparable injury to health, or through any other means or device, or in any other manner that respondent's preparations contain no harmful or dangerous drugs or that the use of said products will have no ill effects upon the human body.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 3513. Complaint, July 27, 1938—Decision, Mar. 28, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Knogray" for gray or streaked or faded hair, to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale, in commerce as aforesaid, of preparations for same general purposes, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their products or properties thereof; in advertising its said preparation in newspapers, circulars, bulletins, and other publications of interstate circulation—

Represented that product in question, applied to scalp and hair, would color roots thereof and affect color of new growth and eliminate necessity for repeated applications to prevent such new growth from showing gray, streaked, or faded above scalp line, and that product in question was not a dye, and that use thereof would cause natural color to be restored to hair, through such statements, among others, as "* * * colors hair roots perfectly," "* * * do not confuse * * * with ordinary hair 'dyes' where you must ask for a specific color * * *" and "You can match the exact natural color of your hair perfectly";

Facts being changed color by application of preparation to gray, streaked or faded hair of user was not color produced by latter's bodily functions, but results of product's dyeing or staining properties, and application thereof to hair had no effect in changing, and could not change, color of new growth hair appearing upon head as such, subsequent to application, unless thereafter repeated, and it did not color roots of hair so as to have substantial effect on color of new growth, and use did not eliminate the necessity for repeated applications in order to prevent such growth from showing gray, streaked or faded above scalp line

With effect of confusing, misleading, and deceiving substantial number of members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations relative to efficacy and effectiveness of product in question were true, and into purchase thereof because of such beliefs, thus engendered, and of thereby diverting unfairly substantial trade in commerce to it from its competitors engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations or products designed and intended for similar usage, and who truthfully advertise extent of value and effectiveness thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Madame Marguerite Turmel, Inc., a corporation, doing business under its own name and under the trade names Madame Marguerite Turmel and Madame Turmel, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect, as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Madame Marguerite Turmel, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its office and principal place of business at 256 West Thirty-first Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, under its own name and also in the trade names of Madame Marguerite Turmel and Madame Turmel, is now and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a preparation designated as "Knogray," purporting to be for the treatment of human hair for the purpose of coloring gray hair or what is referred to as streaked or faded hair. Respondent offers for sale and sells such preparation to members of the public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes such preparation to be transported from its place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. In so carrying on its business, respondent maintains a course of trade in commerce in such preparation among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. During all of the times mentioned herein other corporations and firms, individuals, and partnerships in the various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the business of selling preparations designed and used for the same general purposes for which respondent represents the preparation "Knogray" to be effective, as herein set forth. Such other corporations and such firms, individuals, and partnerships have caused and do cause their said preparations, when sold by them, to be transported from various States of the United States to, into, and through States other than the State of the origin of the shipment thereof, to the respective purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its business of selling and distributing the preparation "Knogray" in commerce, as herein described, the respondent has been, during all of the times mentioned herein, and is now, in competition in said commerce with such other corporations and such firms, individuals, and partnerships.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business of selling the preparation "Knogray" in commerce, as herein described, and in furtherance of the sale thereof, the respondent, during the times mentioned herein, caused statements and representations to appear in newspapers, publications, circulars, and bulletins, having an interstate circulation, purporting to be descriptive of such preparation and of its effectiveness in use. In furtherance of the sale of such preparation, and to create a public demand therefor, the respondent, during the times mentioned herein, made, or caused to be made, the following statements and representations in advertisements inserted in various publications, newspapers, circulars, and bulletins, having interstate circulation:

Knogray colors hair roots perfectly.

Knogray colors the hair so satisfactorily (the roots as well as the tips of the hair).

Knogray will satisfy you as no other hair coloring can. Please do not confuse Knogray with ordinary hair "dyes" where you must ask for a specific color and use that color without any chance of varying it.

You can match the exact natural color of your hair perfectly.

Not alone can you secure a perfect match for your own hair, but any member of your household annoyed with gray hair, can do the same out of your bottle, whatever the color of their hair.

Before hearing of Knogray you never knew that there was a preparation which by a very simple and easy process, would enable you to get a perfect and exact color match of your hair or any natural shade you desire; and

With Knogray you can match exactly the natural shade of your hair before it starts to turn gray.

The aforesaid statements, together with many others similar thereto, not set out herein, but of the same tenor and meaning, serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public: (1) That the preparation "Knogray" when applied to the human scalp and hair will color the roots of the hair and effect the color of new growth hair, and eliminate the necessity for repeated applications of such preparation in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray, streaked, or faded above the scalp line;

Complaint

(2) that such preparation is not a dye; (3) that the use of such preparation causes the natural color to be restored to the hair.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the preparation "Knogray" will not color the roots of the hair when applied to the scalp and hair so as to have any substantial effect on the color of new growth hair, and its use will not eliminate the necessity for repeated applications in order to prevent new growth hair from showing gray, streaked, or faded above the scalp line.

The effect upon the color of the hair of the user of such preparation is that of a stain or dye. It acts upon the hair as a stain or dye in causing the hair of the user thereof, that has become gray, streaked, or faded, to appear of a different color.

The use of such a preparation will not restore or cause the original natural color to be imparted to the hair. The changed color produced by the application of such preparation to the gray, streaked or faded hair of the user is not a color produced by the bodily functions of such user, but is a result of the dyeing or staining properties of such preparation. The application of such preparation to the human hair has no effect in changing, and cannot effect a change in, the color of the hair which appears upon the head of the user as new growth subsequent to such application, unless the application of such preparation is thereafter repeated.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations of respondent relative to the efficacy and of the effectiveness in use of the preparation "Knogray" have a capacity and tendency to and do confuse, mislead, and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of such preparation because of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs so engendered. Substantial trade in said commerce is thereby unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who are engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations, or other preparations, designed and intended for similar use, who truthfully advertise the extent of the value and effectiveness of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been done and is being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 27, 1938, issued, and on July 28, 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Madame Marguerite Turmel, Inc., a corporation doing business under its own name and also in the trade names of Madame Marguerite Turmel and Madame Turmel, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter respondent filed its answer. After hearings had begun, respondent, with the permission of the Commission, withdrew its answer and substituted therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Madame Marguerite Turmel, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its office and principal place of business at 256 West Thirty-first Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, under its own name and also in the trade names of Madame Marguerite Turmel and Madame Turmel, is now and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a preparation designated as "Knogray," purporting to be for the treatment of human hair for the purpose of coloring gray hair or what is referred to as streaked or faded hair. Respondent offers for sale and sells such preparation to members of the public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes such preparation to be transported from its place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to such purchasers. In so carrying on its business, respondent maintains a course of trade in such preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. During all of the times mentioned herein other corporations and firms, individuals, and partnerships in the various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the business of selling preparations designed and used for the same general purposes for which respondent represents the preparation "Knogray" to be effective, as herein set forth. Such other corporations and such firms, individuals, and partnerships have caused and do cause their said preparations, when sold by them, to be transported from various States of the United States to, into, and through States other than the State of the origin of the shipment to the purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its said business in commerce, as herein described, the respondent has been, and is now, in competition in commerce with such other corporations and such firms, individuals, and partnerships, many of whom do not in any manner misrepresent their said products or the properties thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business in commerce, as herein described, and in furtherance of the sale of its said preparation, the respondent has caused statements and representations to appear in newspapers, circulars, bulletins, and other publications having an interstate circulation, concerning and descriptive of such preparation and of its effectiveness in use, as follows:

Knogray colors hair roots perfectly.

Knogray colors the hair so satisfactorily (the roots as well as the tips of the hair).

Knogray will satisfy you as no other hair coloring can. Please do not confuse Knogray with ordinary hair "dyes" where you must ask for a specific color and use that color without any chance of varying it.

You can match the exact natural color of your hair perfectly.

Not alone can you secure a perfect match for your own hair, but any member of your household annoyed with gray hair, can do the same out of your bottle, whatever the color of their hair.

Before hearing of Knogray you never knew that there was a preparation which by a very simple and easy process, would enable you to get a perfect and exact color match of your hair or any natural shade you desire: and

With Knogray you can match exactly the natural shade of your hair before it started to turn gray.

The aforesaid statements, together with many others similar thereto, not set out herein, but of the same tenor and meaning, serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public: (1) That the preparation "Knogray" when applied to the human scalp and hair will color the roots of the hair and affect the color of new growth hair, and eliminate the necessity for repeated applications of such preparation in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray, streaked, or faded above the scalp line; (2) that such preparation is not a dye; (3) that the use of such preparation causes the natural color to be restored to the hair.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the preparation "Knogray" will not color the roots of the hair when applied to the scalp and hair so as to have any substantial effect on the color of new growth hair, and its use will not eliminate the necessity for repeated applications in order to prevent new growth hair from showing gray, streaked, or faded above the scalp line.

The effect upon the color of the hair of the user of such preparation is that of a stain or dye. It acts upon the hair as a stain or dye in causing the hair of the user thereof, that has become gray, streaked, or faded, to appear of a different color.

The use of such preparation will not restore or cause the original natural color to be imparted to the hair. The changed color produced by the application of such preparation to the gray, streaked, or faded hair of the user is not a color produced by the bodily functions of such user, but is a result of the dyeing or staining properties of such preparation. The application of such preparation to the human hair has no effect in changing, and cannot effect a change in, the color of the hair which appears upon the head of the user as new growth subsequent to such application unless the application of such preparation is thereafter repeated.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations of respondent relative to the efficacy and of the effectiveness in use of the preparation "Knogray" have a capacity and tendency to and do confuse, mislead, and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of such preparation because of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs so engendered. Substantial trade in said commerce is thereby unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who are engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations, or other preparations, designed and intended for similar usage, who truthfully advertise the extent of the value and effectiveness of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof, injury has been done and is being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

30 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Madame Marguerite Turmel, Inc., a corporation, trading as Madame Marguerite Turmel and as Madame Turmel, or trading under any other name or names, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its cosmetic preparation designated "Kno-gray," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under that name or any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparation will color the roots of the hair or have any effect thereon or on new hair growth, or will restore the natural or original color to the hair, or will affect the color of the hair in any way other than as a dye.
2. Representing that said preparation is not a dye or is anything other than a dye.
3. Representing that anything less than repeated applications of said preparation will cause the hair to retain the color imparted to it by said preparation.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3930. Complaint, Oct. 18, 1939—Decision, Mar. 28, 1940*

Where an individual engaged, in the city of Washington, in the laundry, dry cleaning, and dyeing business, and in collecting clothes, linens, and other articles from customers in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia, and transporting such clothes, etc., to his place of business in said District, and thereafter delivering from said place such clothes, etc., cleaned, dyed, or laundered, to such various customers, and collecting therefrom his charges for so cleaning, etc., and maintaining, as thus engaged, course of trade and commerce in and between said District and States referred to—

Represented, through statement on laundry boxes or other containers in which were placed many of the clothes, linens, and other articles, "We wash everything with Ivory Soap," that he washed with soap in question all clothes, linens, and other articles submitted for laundering, facts being he had ceased, prior to time concerned, to use such soap exclusively, and did not wash therewith all clothes, etc., thus submitted;

With capacity and tendency to cause members of purchasing public to have erroneous and mistaken belief that he washed with soap in question, well and favorably known over period of years by substantial number of purchasing public and preferred by many for such purpose, all clothes, etc., placed with him for cleaning, and, by reason of such belief, to tender to him substantial quantities of clothes and other articles, as aforesaid, for cleaning and laundering with such soap, and pay him substantial sums therefor:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph T. Gibbons, an individual, trading as Washington Laundry, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Complaint

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Joseph T. Gibbons, is an individual trading as Washington Laundry and having his principal office and place of business at 2627 K Street, NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the laundry, dry cleaning and dyeing business. Respondent collects clothes, linens, and other articles from his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia, and transports or causes to be transported said clothes, linens, and other articles to his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia. Respondent cleans, dyes, and launders said clothes, linens, and other articles at his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia, and thereafter delivers, or causes to be delivered, from his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia, said clothes, linens, and other articles to his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia. Respondent thereafter collects from his aforesaid customers his charges for collecting and delivering, and for cleaning, dyeing, or laundering said clothes, linens, and other articles. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in the District of Columbia and between the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business respondent delivers from his said place of business in the District of Columbia, to his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia, many of the clothes, linens, and other articles, in laundry boxes or other containers upon which respondent places or causes to be placed, the statement and representation as follows: "We wash everything with Ivory Soap."

Through the use of aforesaid statements and representation, respondent represents that he washes with Ivory soap all of the clothes, linens, and other articles which are submitted to him for laundering.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid statement and representation by the respondent is misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact respondent does not wash with Ivory soap all of the clothes, linens, and other articles which are submitted to him for laundering. In fact, respondent washes with Ivory soap very few, if any, of said clothes, linens, and other articles.

Over a period of years Ivory soap has become well and favorably known by a substantial number of the purchasing public to such an extent that many people prefer to have their clothes, linens, and other articles washed or laundered with Ivory soap.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation has the capacity and tendency to, and does, cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation is true, and to tender to respondent substantial quantities of clothes, linens and other articles for laundering, and to pay respondent substantial sums for such laundering, because of the erroneous and mistaken belief that said clothes, linens, and other articles were laundered or washed with Ivory soap.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 18th day of October 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Joseph T. Gibbons, an individual trading as Washington Laundry, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and stating that respondent discontinued the use of laundry boxes or containers printed as described in the complaint on about the 15th of December, A. D., 1938, and that since said date he has not used any boxes or other containers printed as described in the complaint, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Joseph T. Gibbons, is an individual trading as Washington Laundry and having his principal office and place of business at 2627 K Street, NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the laundry, dry cleaning, and dyeing business. Respondent collects clothes, linens, and other articles from his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia and transports, or causes to be transported, said clothes, linens, and other articles to his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia. Respondent cleans, dyes, and launders said clothes, linens, and other articles at his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia and thereafter delivers, or causes to be delivered, from his aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia, said clothes, linens, and other articles to his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia. Respondent thereafter collects from his aforesaid customers his charges for collecting and delivering and for cleaning, dyeing, or laundering said clothes, linens, and other articles. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in the District of Columbia and between the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, for a period of time ending on or about the 15th of December A. D., 1938, respondent delivered from his said place of business in the District of Columbia, to his customers at their respective points of location in the District of Columbia and in the States of Maryland and Virginia, many of the clothes, linens, and other articles in laundry boxes or other containers upon which respondent placed, or caused to be placed, the statement and representation as follows: "We wash everything with Ivory Soap."

Through the use of the aforesaid statement and representation, respondent represented that he washed with Ivory Soap all of the clothes, linens, and other articles which were submitted to him for laundering.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid statement and representation by the respondent was misleading and untrue. Prior to the time respondent ceased to use laundry boxes and containers upon which had been placed the representation, "We wash everything with Ivory Soap," he had ceased to use Ivory Soap exclusively and did not wash with Ivory Soap all of the clothes, linens, and other articles which were submitted to him for laundering.

Over a period of years Ivory Soap has become well and favorably known by a substantial number of the purchasing public to such an extent that many people prefer to have their clothes, linens, and other articles washed or laundered with Ivory Soap.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation had the capacity to, and if continued still would, cause members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent washes with Ivory Soap all of the clothes, linens, and other articles which are placed with him to be cleaned, and because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to tender to respondent substantial quantities of clothes, linens, and other articles for cleaning and laundering with Ivory Soap and to pay respondent substantial sums for such cleaning and laundering.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint except that he is not now using and has not since on or about December 15, 1938, used laundry boxes or containers printed as described in the complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph T. Gibbons, trading as Washington Laundry, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or solicitation of laundry, dry cleaning or dyeing services in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication, that wearing apparel and other articles intrusted or delivered to him for laundering or cleaning will be washed with Ivory Soap, or any other designated cleaning agent, when such wearing apparel and other articles are not washed or cleaned with Ivory Soap or the particular cleaning agent designated.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PATCH PREMEK CORPORATION, AND H. K. PATCH,
TRADING AS H. K. PATCH COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION

Where a corporation and an individual, who was president thereof and controlled and directed its business activities, sales policies, and practices, engaged in sale and distribution of their "PremeK 33," or "C. S. 53," medicinal preparation for various ailments, diseases, and conditions, to purchasers at various points in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce among the various States, of preparations for use in connection with treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which they recommended and claimed their said preparation to be effective and competent treatment, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent the character, nature, and therapeutic properties of their products; in advertisements which they disseminated, in cooperation with one another in acts and things below set forth, through newspapers and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the various States, and through booklets, leaflets, pamphlets, and other printed matter distributed among prospective customers—

- (a) Represented that their said preparation was an amazing new discovery, and the most effective way to end irritations of all kinds, and that it constituted most effective treatment for, and would end, numerous ailments and conditions, including, among others, eczema, athlete's foot, prickly heat, skin irritations and rashes, acne in various forms, and dandruff and eczema; and
- (b) Represented that use thereof would stop perspiration and provided only sure way to prevent noxious body odors, and that it was a bactericide which would prevent reinfection and which penetrated skin pores and deep-seated organisms, and killed parasites responsible for irritation, and that it had been successful in the treatment of chronic irritations where other medications had failed;

Facts being that only ingredient in preparation in question of therapeutic consequence was sulfur in colloidal or finely divided form, which was neither new nor amazing discovery, but had been in use as an adjunct or accessory in medication generally for a long time, most that could properly be claimed for preparation in question, excepting as to scabies, was that under proper direction or medical supervision it might be used as beneficial accessory treatment in case of some of conditions or ailments in question resulting from superficial or external causes, and it was not a quick or effective treatment for, and would not cure, any of conditions, symptoms, or ailments in question, with exception aforesaid, and it was not a bactericide and would not accomplish results claimed therefor as above, and claims as to its therapeutic value and properties greatly exceeded those which might truthfully be made for such a product;

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and that their products possessed properties claimed and represented, and would accomplish such results, and of causing purchase of substantial quantities thereof as consequence of such beliefs, thus induced, and of thereby unfairly diverting to themselves trade from their competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Patch Premek Corporation, a corporation, and H. K. Patch, individually, and trading under the firm name and style, H. K. Patch Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Patch Premek Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California with its principal office and place of business at 1716 East Seventh Street, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent H. K. Patch, who is president of said respondent Patch Premek Corporation, controls and directs the business activities, sales policies, and practices of the respondent Patch Premek Corporation. Said respondents have cooperated each with the other and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now and have been for some time last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain purported medicinal preparation which is recommended for use in the treatment of various ailments, diseases, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body. This product is known as, and sold under the name of "Premek 33," and is similar to a preparation sold by the respondents to the medical profession under the name and designation of "C. S. 53."

PAR. 2. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, cause said product, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of California. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign countries.

Respondents have been and are in substantial competition with corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in said commerce preparations for use in connection with the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondents represent and claim their preparation to be an effective and competent treatment.

There are among the competitors of the respondents in said commerce many who do not in any manner misrepresent the character, nature, and therapeutic properties of the products sold and distributed by them.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said preparation, respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the character, nature, and properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained upon the use thereof to be disseminated in commerce as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act through the use of advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States and through the use of booklets, leaflets, pamphlets, and other printed matter distributed among prospective purchasers. Among others, and typical of the representations and claims contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid, the respondents represent that their said preparation is an amazing new discovery; that it is the most effective way to end irritations of all kinds; that it is the most effective treatment for and that its use will end eczema, athlete's foot, dhobie and jock strap itch, prickly heat, insect bites, dermatitis herpetiformis, skin irritations and rashes, pimples, barber's itch, chafing, shingles, ringworm or epidermophytosis, scabies, impetigo, acne in various forms, pruritus, aching feet, soft corns, dandruff and eczema of the scalp, furnuculosis of the ear canal; that its use will stop perspiration and it provides the only sure way to prevent noxious body odors; that it is a bactericide and will prevent reinfection; that it penetrates the skin pores and deep-seated organisms and kills the parasites which cause irritation; and that it has been successful in the treatment of chronic irritations where other medications have failed.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations and claims used and designated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue, and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact "Premek 33" is by quantitative analysis shown to contain:

	Percent
Colloidal elemental sulfur.....	50.00
Magnesium oxide.....	3.00
Resublimed beta-naphthol.....	.20
Glycerine.....	5.00
Gum arabic.....	5.00

and the only ingredient therein of consequence therapeutically is the colloidal or finely divided sulfur, and sulfur is neither a new nor an amazing discovery but has been in use as an adjunct or accessory in medication generally for a long time. Said preparation is not a quick or effective treatment for nor will it cure any of the conditions, symptoms, or ailments hereinabove mentioned except scabies. Its use in some of such conditions is fraught with possible danger to the public health. Except as to scabies, the most that can be accomplished by, or properly claimed for, respondents' said preparation is that as to some of the conditions or ailments mentioned, which result from superficial or external causes, said preparation may be used under proper direction or medical supervision as a beneficial accessory treatment. Said preparation is not a bactericide, does not prevent reinfection and does not penetrate sufficiently to destroy subcutaneous parasites which cause irritation. Respondents' claims as to the therapeutic value and properties of said preparation greatly exceed those which might truthfully be made for such a preparation.

PAR. 5. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements, disseminated in the manner above described, induces or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a drug.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondents' said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results represented, and causes the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said preparation as a result of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and use of their respective products. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and with foreign countries.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 28th day of June 1938, issued, and on the 5th day of July 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Patch Premek Corporation, a corporation charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Said Patch Premek Corporation filed its answer to said complaint on the 18th day of July 1938. On September 27, 1938, the Commission issued, and subsequently served, its amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding, upon said Patch Premek Corporation, and also upon the respondent H. K. Patch, an individual, trading as H. K. Patch Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, and after certain hearings had been held in this proceeding, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted the request of respondent Patch Premek Corporation for permission to withdraw its answer filed on July 18, 1938, and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended and supplemental complaint, with one exception therein specified. Said substitute answer, which waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts was duly filed in the office of the Commission. The respondent H. K. Patch joined in said substitute answer. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Patch Premek Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business at 1716 East Seventh Street, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent H. K. Patch, an individual, is president of said respondent, Patch Premek Corporation, and controls and directs the business activities, sales policies and practices of respondent, Patch Premek Corporation. Respondent, H. K. Patch also trades under the name of H. K. Patch Co. Said respondents have cooperated each with the other and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things herein-after alleged. Respondents are now and have been for some time last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain medicinal preparation which is recommended for use in the treatment of various ailments, diseases, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body. This product is known as, and sold under the name of "Premek 33" and is also sold by the respondents to the medical profession under the name and designation "C. S. 53."

PAR. 2. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, cause said product, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located at various points in various other States of the United States. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign countries.

Respondents have been and are in substantial competition with corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals also engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States preparations for use in connection with the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondents represent and claim their preparation to be an effective and competent treatment.

There are among the competitors of respondents in said commerce many who do not in any manner misrepresent the character, nature, and therapeutic properties of the products sold and distributed by them.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said preparation, respondents have caused false advertisements containing representations and claims with respect to the character, nature and properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, through the use of advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States, and through the use of booklets, leaflets, pamphlets, and other printed matter distributed among prospective customers. Among others and typical of the representations and claims contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid, the respondents represent that their said preparation is an amazing new discovery; that it is the most effective way to end irritations of all kinds; that it is the most effective treatment for and that its use will end eczema, athlete's foot, dhobie and jock strap itch, chafing, shingles, ringworm or epidermophytosis, prickly heat, insect bites, dermatitis herpetiformis, skin irritations and rashes, pimples, barber's itch, scabies, impetigo, acne in various forms, pruritus, aching feet, soft corns, dandruff and eczema of the scalp, furnuculosis of the ear canal; that its use will stop perspiration and it provides the only sure way to prevent noxious body odors; that it is a bactericide and will prevent reinfection; that it penetrates the skin pores and deep-seated organisms and kills the parasites which cause irritation; and that it has been successful in the treatment of chronic irritations where other medications have failed.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the statements and representations hereinabove set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, and others similar thereto, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondents' product, are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, "Premek 33" is by quantitative analysis shown to contain:

Colloidal elemental sulfur.....	50.00
Magnesium oxide.....	3.00
Resublimed beta-naphthol.....	.20
Glycerine.....	5.00
Gum arabic.....	5.00

and the only ingredient therein of consequence therapeutically is the colloidal or finely divided sulfur, and sulfur is neither a new or an amazing discovery, but has been in use as an adjunct or accessory in medication generally for a long time. Said preparation is not a quick or effective treatment nor will it cure any of the conditions, symptoms, or ailments hereinabove mentioned except scabies. Except as to scabies, the most that can be accomplished by, or properly claimed for respondents' said preparation is that as to some of the conditions or ailments mentioned, which result from superficial or external causes, said preparation may be used under proper direction or medical supervision as a beneficial accessory treatment. Said preparation is not a bactericide, does not prevent reinfection, and does not penetrate sufficiently to destroy subcutaneous parasites which cause irritation. Respondents' claims as to the therapeutic value and properties of said preparation greatly exceed those which might truthfully be made for such a preparation.

PAR. 5. The Commission finds that the aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in the manner above described induce or are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a drug.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said preparation has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results represented, and causes the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said preparation as a result of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors, and in consequence substantial injury has been done and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended and supplemental complaint, with one exception therein specified, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Patch Premek Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, and H. K. Patch, individually and trading as H. K. Patch Co., or trading under any other name or names, their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a medicinal preparation now designated as "Premek 33" and "C. S. 53" or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commerce Act, of said medicinal preparation, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication.

1. That said preparation is a cure, or remedy for eczema, athlete's foot, dhobie or barber's itch, jock strap itch, prickly heat, insect bites, dermatitis herpetiformis, skin irritations or rashes, pimples, chafing, shingles, ringworm or epidermophytosis, impetigo, acne, pruritus, aching feet, soft corns, dandruff, eczema of the scalp or furnuculosis of the ear canal, or that said preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for any of said ailments or conditions other than to serve as an accessory treatment for those which are due to superficial or external causes only.

2. That said preparation is a bactericide or that it will prevent reinfection.

3. That the use of said preparation will stop perspiration or prevent body odors.

4. That said preparation is a "new" or an "amazing" discovery.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
WILLIAM M. IRVINE, TRADING AS CONSOLIDATED SILVER COMPANY OF AMERICA

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3789. Complaint, May 12, 1939—Decision, Mar. 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of sales-promotional plans, including sales-promotion cards, silverware, and other materials used in connection therewith, to retailers and others in the various States and in the District of Columbia;

In selling, through agents supplied with order blanks, contract forms and various other items of advertising literature, plan in question, which contemplated distribution by dealer-purchaser to dealer's customers of cards, purchased of said individual at from $3.50 to $4.50 a thousand (with remaining payment therefor by merchant due upon receipt of cards), for sending in by customer or dealer-purchaser for "redemption" in "William A. Rogers silverware or tableware"—

- (a) Represented, through printed forms prepared by him, and setting forth terms of agreement between him and retailer, and made use of by his agents in taking retailers' orders, that he would supply to retailer, without charge, circulars, posters, and other advertising material and display set of silverware; facts being he failed, in many instances, to supply such circulars and advertising material, failed, in many cases, to supply dealers with particular display set agreed upon, failed, in one instance, to supply any display set until after repeated demands therefor, and, notwithstanding contract reference to "display set," supplied actually, in most instances, as display silverware, three small spoons attached to piece of cardboard;
- (b) Represented, in solicitation of orders through his said agents, that cards and operation of entire plan were without cost to dealer, in that he would refund to dealer entire purchase price of cards as soon as 25 percent thereof had been forwarded to him for redemption by dealer's customers, facts being, under contract provision, no refund was to be made unless and until such proportion had been thus sent in, in which event dealer became entitled only to refund of price of cards actually sent in, and provision in question was couched in such vague and ambiguous language and printed in such inconspicuous type as readily to permit his agents to misconstrue to retailers provision in question, or entirely ignore same, and dealers, in many instances, were unable to obtain from him any refunds, despite fact of sending in 25 percent or more of cards as above set forth;
- (c) Represented, through his agents, permitted readily so to represent, through character of contract forms and other advertising literature put by him into their hands, that he was connected with the manufacturer of William A. Rogers silverware, or Oneida, Ltd., and was putting on, for benefit of such manufacturer, advertising campaign, notwithstanding fact he had no connection whatever with company in question and was not authorized to put on any such campaign therefor, but merely bought, as any other purchaser, silverware used by him in connection with plans in question, from said company or from jobbers or wholesalers of such ware in the open market;

- (d) Represented, through his said agents, that, in addition to supplying circulars and other advertising material, he would, at his own expense, distribute such circulars in trade area served by retailer, and would otherwise assist latter in putting sales-promotional plan into effect, notwithstanding fact, in numerous instances, he failed to make such distribution or render such assistance;
- (e) Presented his entire sales-promotional plan aforesaid, through his agents, to retailers in such a way and under such representations, furthered by order blanks and contract forms furnished by him to his agents, as to lead retailer to believe that latter's customers might obtain silverware merely by sending to him designated number of sales cards, and that such ware would be sent without cost to particular customer sending in said cards for redemption, notwithstanding fact that retailer's customers, in order to obtain such silverware, had to remit to him, along with each card, sum of 1 cent, of which requirement and provision set forth on cards themselves, and not submitted to retailers upon being solicited, latter in many instances had no information until subsequent to their purchase and payment for and receipt of delivery of cards in question; and
- (f) Set forth, featured and displayed, in order form and advertising material by him supplied to his agents and by latter exhibited to retailer, representations to effect that latter's customers were beneficiaries of a "free offer" and were to receive something free, facts being 1 cent remitted with each card by participating customers resulted in payment by latter of substantial amount, representing approximately full value of silverware obtained;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial number of retailers and members of purchasing public, who were buying, as above set forth, their William A. Rogers silverware of him, into mistaken and erroneous belief that they were participating in a bona fide sales-stimulation plan in connection with the advertisement of such silverware, with the manufacturer of which said individual was in no wise connected other than as indirect purchaser therefrom, and with result, as consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief that retailers and members of purchasing public were induced to and did purchase substantial quantities of his said sales cards and merchandise:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Webster Ballinger, trial examiner.

Mr. George Foulkes and Mr. M. C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Harry N. Dell, of Detroit, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William M. Irvine, trading as Consolidated Silver Co. of America, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Complaint

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, William M. Irvine, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Consolidated Silver Co. of America, with his office and principal place of business located at 7338 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling a sales-promotional plan including sales promotion cards, silverware and other materials which are used in carrying the plan into effect, to retailers and others located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said sales-promotional cards and silverware, and other materials used in connection with said sales promotion plan, when sold, to be transported from his office and principal place of business in Detroit, Mich., to purchasers thereof located at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said sales cards, silverware, and other material in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course of the operation of his business, and in order to sell his products, respondent enters into a form of agreement or written contracts with retail merchants who are contacted by respondent's selling agents.

The written form of contract provides for the purchase by the merchant of so-called advertising cards or advertising trade cards, for which the merchant pays $4.50 per thousand, and the distribution of the same to the merchant's customers by the merchant upon the purchase by the customers of a certain specified amount of the merchant's goods.

By the terms of said contract respondent undertakes to redeem advertising cards by sending to a customer, who forwards to respondent a specified number of said advertising cards, various items of merchandise.

Respondent furnishes retail merchants with various display posters and advertisements to be used by said retail merchants in putting the aforesaid plan into effect and operation.

PAR. 4. In the course and operation of his business and for the purpose of inducing retail merchants to purchase his advertising cards and to use the plan above set forth, respondent makes the following representations:

1. That respondent, doing business as Consolidated Silver Co. will redeem the sales cards distributed by merchants to their customers without any additional cost to the customers, by sending all customers who forwarded a specified number of said cards to said company certain designated pieces of silverware or tableware.

2. That said silverware or tableware is sent "free" to customers of retailers who take advantage of and purchase respondent's sales promotion plan.

3. That respondent refunds to merchants the entire purchase price of said sales cards after a designated number of said sales cards have been sent in by customers of said merchants for redemption.

4. That respondent, trading as Consolidated Silver Co. of America, is a representative of, or is connected with, or is putting on an advertising campaign for, the manufacturers of Wm. A. Rogers Silverware Oneida, Ltd., of Oneida, N. Y.

5. That respondent advertises the sales promotional plan locally for merchants who purchase sales cards and assists retail merchants in putting said sales-promotional plan into operation and effect.

6. That the silver spoons sent by respondent to customers in exchange for sales cards are reinforced with additional silver at the point of wear.

7. That the silverware sent to customers by the respondent in exchange for sales cards is superior in quality to Tudor plate.

8. That respondent provides merchants who purchase respondent's plan of sales promotion with display sets of silverware or tableware for use by said merchants in putting respondent's plan into effect.

9. That the customers of merchants can obtain an entire set of silverware or table ware without cost to said customers by securing advertising cards and sending said cards to respondent for redemption.

10. That the purchase and use by merchants of respondent's sales-promotional plan is without cost to said merchants.

PAR. 5. Respondent's representations as above set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent does not redeem the sales cards by sending pieces of silverware or tableware to merchants' customers who forward sales cards to respondent for redemption without any additional cost to said customers. Respondent requires such customers to pay a sum of money in addition to forwarding said sales cards before respondent redeems the sales cards. The silverware sent to customers of merchants is not free to said customers but they are required to pay an amount of money for said silverware, which amount of money is substantial and represents full payment for the same. In truth and in fact, respondent does not refund to merchants the amount of money merchants pay for sales cards after part of the sales cards have been sent to respondent for redemption by the merchants' customers. Respondent is not a representative of or in any manner connected with Oneida, Ltd., except as an indirect purchaser of its merchandise. Respondent is not conducting an advertising campaign for Oneida, Ltd. The silverware sent to customers for redemption of sales cards is not superior in quality to Tudor plate and is not comparable with or of similar quality to Tudor plate but is inexpensive and of low quality. The spoons sent to merchants' customers are not reinforced at the point of wear as represented. Respondent does not advertise the sales promotional plan locally for merchants who purchase sales cards or assist said merchants in putting said sales promotional plan into operation and effect. Respondent does not provide merchants, who purchase respondent's promotional sales plan, with display sets of silverware or tableware for use of said merchants in putting said plan into effect. It is not possible for customers to acquire an entire set of silverware or tableware from respondent by collecting and forwarding sales cards to respondent. Respondent's sales promotion plan is not without cost to the merchants who purchase and use the same in their business.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive retail merchants and members of the purchasing public, situated in various States of the United States, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's sales-promotional plan and silverware or tableware.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 12th day of May 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, William M. Irvine, trading as Consolidated Silver Co. of America, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Harry N. Dell, attorney for the respondent, before Webster Ballinger, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested) and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, William M. Irvine, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Consolidated Silver Co. of America with his office and principal place of business located at 7338 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling a sales-promotional plan, including sales-promotion cards, silverware and other materials which are used in carrying the plan into effect, to retailers and others located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent causes said sales-promotion cards and silverware and other materials used in connection with said sales promotional plan, where sold, to be transported from his office and principal place of business in Detroit, Mich., to purchasers thereof located at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains a course of trade in said sales cards, silverware, and other materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent sells his sales-promotional plan to retailers located in cities throughout the various States of the United States, such sales being made through the medium of agents who travel about the country contacting retailers in various lines of business. Such retailers are solicited by the agents to participate in respondent's sales-promotional plan by giving the agents orders for respondent's sales cards or advertising cards. In making such contacts and solicitations respondent's agents are supplied with order blanks, contract forms, and various other items of advertising literature, which facilitate misrepresentation on the part of such agents with respect to the character of respondent's sales-promotional plan. Such material is furnished to the agents by respondent.

Under the respondent's sales-promotional plan the dealer distributes certain sales cards among his customers as merchandise is purchased by such customers, and the customer may forward such cards to the respondent for "redemption" in "William A. Rogers silverware or tableware." The purchase price of such cards to the retailer ranges from $3.50 per thousand to $4.50 per thousand. A part of the purchase price is payable at the time the order is given and the remainder upon the receipt of the cards by the dealer. On one side such cards bear the name of the dealer together with certain advertising on behalf of such dealer. On the reverse side such cards bear certain language purporting to disclose the manner in which the respondent will redeem such cards by giving merchandise therefor.

PAR. 4. The orders taken by respondent through his agents from retail dealers for such sales cards are on printed forms prepared by respondent which set forth the terms of the agreement between the respondent and the retail dealer. Among such provisions is one to the effect that the respondent will supply to the retailer without charge circulars, posters, and other advertising material and a display set of silverware. The Commission finds, however, that in many instances such circulars and advertising material are not supplied by the respondent as provided in the contract, and the respondent has in many cases failed to supply dealers with the particular display set of silverware agreed upon. In one instance the respondent failed to supply any display set until after repeated demands had been made by the retailer. While the contract refers to a display "set" of silverware, thus implying that a substantial number of pieces of silverware will be supplied, actually the only display silverware supplied in most instances has consisted of but three small spoons attached to a piece of cardboard.

PAR. 5. In soliciting orders for sales cards the respondent's agents represent that the cards and the operation of the entire sales promotional plan are without cost to the dealer, in that the respondent will refund to the dealer the entire purchase price of the cards as soon as 25 percent of the cards have been forwarded to the respondent by the dealer's customers for redemption. The actual provision of the contract is that no refund will be made to the dealer unless and until 25 percent of the cards have been sent in for redemption, and even then the dealer is not entitled to the refund of the entire purchase price of all cards purchased but it is entitled only to a refund of the price of the cards actually sent in for redemption. The Commission finds that this provision of the order is couched in such vague and ambiguous language and is printed in such inconspicuous type as to readily permit respondent's agents to misconstrue to retail dealers such provision of the contract or entirely ignore it.

The Commission further finds that in many instances dealers have been unable to obtain any refunds from the respondent despite the fact that 25 percent or more of the cards had been sent in for redemption.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the contract forms and other advertising literature put into the hands of his agents by the respondent are of such a character as to readily permit representation by such agents to the effect that the respondent is connected with the manufacturer of William A. Rogers silverware, to wit, Oneida, Ltd., or is putting on an advertising campaign for the benefit of such manufacturer. The Commission further finds that respondent's agents have in fact generally made such representations. Actually the respondent has no connection whatever with Oneida, Ltd., and is not authorized to put on any advertising campaign for such company. Respondent merely purchases his silverware used in connection with these plans from Oneida, Ltd., or from jobbers or wholesalers of such silverware in the open market like any other purchaser.

A further representation made by respondent's agents to dealers is that, in addition to supplying circulars and other advertising material, the respondent will, at his own expense, distribute such circulars into trade areas served by the retailer and will otherwise assist the retailer in putting the sales-promotional plan into effect. The Commission finds that in numerous instances the respondent has failed to make such distribution or render such assistance.

PAR. 7. The entire sales-promotional plan is presented by respondent's agents to retailers in such a way and under such representations as to lead the retailer to believe that his customers may obtain silverware merely by sending to respondent a designated number of sales cards, and that such silverware will be sent without cost to the particular customer sending in such cards for redemption. The order blanks and contract forms furnished by respondent to his agents further such representation. The Commission finds, however, that in order to obtain such silverware the retail merchant's customers must remit to respondent along with each card the sum of 1 cent. While the sales cards themselves state that 1 cent must be remitted with each card, such cards are not submitted to the retail dealers at the time the dealers are solicited, and in many instances the retailers have no information with respect to this additional charge until after they have purchased and paid for the sales cards and received delivery thereof.

PAR. 8. The order form and advertising material supplied by the respondent to his agents, and exhibited by the agents to retail dealers, prominently feature and display representations to the effect that the retailer's customers are the beneficiaries of a "free offer" and are to receive something "free." Actually the requirement that 1 cent be remitted with each card sent in by customers of retailers participating in the plan results in the payment by such customers of a substantial amount which represents approximately the full value of the silverware obtained.

PAR. 9. The Commission finds that the respondent's use of the acts and practices herein set forth has had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of retailers and members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that they are participating in a bona fide sales stimulation plan in connection with the advertising of William A. Rogers silverware, whereas such retailers and members of the purchasing public are in fact merely purchasing William A. Rogers silverware from the respondent, who is in no way connected with the manufacturer of William A. Rogers silverware other than as an indirect purchaser therefrom. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief retailers and members of the purchasing public have been induced to and have purchased substantial quantities of respondent's sales cards and merchandise.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Webster Ballinger, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief on behalf of the Commission in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument now having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William M. Irvine, trading as Consolidated Silver Co. of America, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of silverware or of sales promotional plans, including sales cards, gift cards, premium certificates or coupons redeemable in silverware or other articles of merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the respondent is a representative of or has any connection with the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware; provided, however, that this order shall not be construed to prohibit the respondent from dealing in such silverware.

2. Representing that the respondent is conducting any special campaign or advertising campaign to introduce or advertise any article of merchandise on behalf of the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware or on behalf of any other manufacturer or concern.

3. Representing to purchasers of respondent's sales-promotional plans, or to their customers, that sales cards, gift cards, premium certificates, or other similar devices can be redeemed in silverware or other merchandise unless and until all the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer and there is no deception as to the price to be paid in connection with the obtaining of such silverware or other articles of to such conditions.

4. Representing that respondent will refund any sum of money to dealers purchasing said sales cards, gift cards, premium certificates, or other and similar devices on the redemption of a specified number of cards or certificates when such refund is not actually made, and if there are any conditions connected with such refund such conditions must be clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer of refund in such a manner that there is no deception as to such condition.

5. Representing that respondent will give silverware or other merchandise free, when such silverware or other merchandise is not actually given free.

Order

30 F. T. C.

6. Representing that respondent will advertise his sales-promotional plan locally for dealers purchasing such plan or that respondent will assist such dealers in putting such plan into operation, when in fact respondent does not conduct such advertising and render such assistance.

7. Representing that respondent will supply dealers purchasing respondent's sales-promotional plan with display sets of silverware or other merchandise for use in putting such plan into operation, when respondent does not supply such display sets as represented.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

VALLIGNY PRODUCTS, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3602. Complaint, Sept. 23, 1938—Decision, Mar. 30, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of its "Shampoo-Kolor" hair preparation, to members of purchasing public in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of other preparations and products for treatment of conditions of the hair for which it recommended use of its said preparation, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their products or properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with their sale and distribution; in advertisements which it disseminated through newspapers and publications circulating throughout the various States, and through bulletins distributed among prospective purchasers, and through other means—

- (a) Represented that said "Shampoo-Kolor" would color roots of hair and affect color of new growth and eliminate necessity of repeated applications to prevent new hair growth from showing gray, streaked, or faded above scalp line, and would cause natural color to be restored to hair, facts being applications of such preparation did not have any effect on color of new growth and use thereof would not restore natural color or cause original natural color to be imparted to hair, and such product would not color roots of hair, and change in color produced by application thereof to gray, streaked, or faded hair was not produced by user's bodily functions, but was result of product's dyeing or staining properties, change in color of hair appearing after application could not be effected subsequent thereto, unless application was thereafter repeated, and its claims for its said product, as above indicated, were grossly exaggerated, false and deceptive, and greatly exceeded any claims as to efficacy thereof which might truthfully be made; and
- (b) Represented that such preparation was manufactured in France or imported therefrom into the United States, and was uniquely different or entirely revolutionary in methods or results, through such statements as "The uniquely different French hair-coloring preparation," "Entirely revolutionary in method and in results," "No other preparation can make same claim for coloring hair * * *," and "The modern French way * * *," etc., facts being it was not made or compounded in France or imported therefrom into the United States, but was domestically made product, mixture of aniline dyes contained therein was also contained in competitive products, similar results could be obtained from use of other hair dyes of similar nature, and it was not uniquely different or entirely revolutionary, etc., as above claimed; properties claimed and represented and would accomplish results indicated, and with result of causing substantial portion of such public, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its preparation aforesaid, and of thereby diverting trade unfairly to it from its said competitors who truthfully advertise the effectiveness of their respective preparations and products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Valligny Products, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect, as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Valligny Products, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at 254 West Thirty-first Street, New York City, N. Y.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a preparation designated as "Shampoo-Kolor" purporting to be for the treatment of human hair for the purpose of coloring gray hair or streaked or faded hair. Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and causes the said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing other preparations and products designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the conditions of the human hair for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations and products or the properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their said preparations and products.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation, respondent has caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, through the use of advertisements in newspapers and other publications having a circulation throughout the various States of the United States, through bulletins distributed among prospective purchasers of said preparation and through other means. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Entirely revolutionary in method and in results.

Colors roots; leaving hair soft, natural.

Colors roots.

No other preparation can make same claim for coloring hair as Shampoo-Kolor does.

The modern French way, producing even, natural, lasting shades always.

Will color every gray hair at roots near scalp as no other preparation does.

Most natural color ever used.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in the treatment of the human hair for the purpose of coloring gray, streaked, or faded hair, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, among other things: (1) That the preparation "Shampoo-Kolor," when applied to the human scalp and hair, will color the roots of the hair and affect the color of new growth hair and eliminate the necessity for repeated applications of such preparation in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray, streaked or faded above the scalp line; (2) that the use of such preparation causes the natural color to be restored to the hair; (3) that such preparation is manufactured in France or is imported into the United States from France; and (4) that such preparation is uniquely different or entirely revolutionary in methods or results.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, the preparation "Shampoo-Kolor" will not color the roots of the hair when applied to the scalp and hair. Applications of such preparation do not have any effect on the color of new growth hair. The use of such preparation will not restore or cause the original natural color to be imparted to the hair. The change in color produced by the application of such preparation to the gray, streaked, or faded hair of the user is not a color produced by the bodily functions of such user but is a result of the dyeing or staining properties of such preparation. The application of such preparation to the human hair has no effect in changing, and cannot affect a change in, the color of the hair which appears upon the head of the user as new growth, subsequent to such application, unless the application of such preparation is thereafter repeated.

The aforesaid preparation which is sold and distributed in the United States by the respondent is not manufactured or compounded in France and such preparation is not imported into the United States from France. Such preparation is compounded or manufactured by the respondent in the United States. Such preparation contains a mixture of aniline dyes and is not "uniquely different" for the reason that various other hair dyes which are sold and distributed in the United States by competitors of the respondent contain a mixture of aniline dyes. Such preparation is not "entirely revolutionary in methods or results," for similar results can be secured by the use of various other hair dyes of a similar nature.

Respondent's claims as to the efficacy of said preparation are grossly exaggerated, false, and deceptive, and greatly exceed any claims as to the efficacy of said preparation which might truthfully be made.

PAR. 7. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements disseminated in the manner above described, induces, or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a cosmetic.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations and products as described in paragraph 3. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 23, 1938, issued, and on September 26, 1938, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Valligny Products, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, respondent filed its answer. After hearings had begun, respondent, with the permission of the Commission, withdrew its answer and substituted therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Valligny Products, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and has its office and prinprincipal place of business at 254 West Thirty-first Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a preparation designated as "Shampoo-Kolor" purporting to be for the treatment of human hair for the purpose of coloring gray hair or streaked or faded hair. Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes the said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to such purchasers. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing other preparations and products designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the conditions of the human hair for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations and products or the properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their said preparations and products.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, in commerce, as herein described, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation, respondent has caused representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, through the use of advertisements in newspapers and other publications having a circulation throughout the various States of the United States, through bulletins distributed among prospective purchasers of said preparation and through other means. Among and typical of the representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

The uniquely different French hair-coloring preparation.
Entirely revolutionary in method and in results.
Colors roots; leaving hair soft, natural.
Colors roots.

No other preparation can make same claim for coloring hair as Shampoo-Kolor does.

The modern French way, producing even, natural, lasting shades always.

Will color every gray hair at roots near scalp as no other preparation does. Most natural color ever used.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in the treatment of the human hair for the purpose of coloring gray, streaked, or faded hair, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, among other things: (1) That the preparation "Shampoo-Kolor," when applied to the human scalp and hair, will color the roots of the hair and affect the color of new growth hair and eliminate the necessity for repeated applications of such preparation in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray, streaked or faded above the scalp line; (2) that the use of such preparation causes the natural color to be restored to the hair; (3) that such preparation is manufactured in France or is imported into the United States from France; and (4) that such preparation is uniquely different or entirely revolutionary in methods or results.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, the preparation "Shampoo-Kolor" will not color the roots of the hair when applied to the scalp and hair. Applications of such preparation do not have any effect on the color of new growth hair. The use of such preparation will not restore the natural color to hair or cause the original natural color to be imparted to the hair. The change in color produced by the application of such preparation to the gray, streaked or faded hair of the user is not a color produced by the bodily functions of such user but is a result of the dyeing or staining properties of such preparation. The application of such preparation to the human hair cannot effect a change in the color of the hair which appears upon the head of the user as new growth, subsequent to such application, unless the application of such preparation is thereafter repeated.

The aforesaid preparation which is sold and distributed in the United States by the respondent is not manufactured or compounded in France and such preparation is not imported into the United States from France. Such preparation is compounded or manufactured by the respondent in the United States. Such preparation contains a mixture of aniline dyes and is not "uniquely different" for the reason that various other hair dyes which are sold and distributed in the United States by competitors of the respondent contain a mixture of aniline dyes. Such preparation is not "entirely revolutionary in methods or results," for similar results can be secured by the use of various other hair dyes of a similar nature.

Respondent's claims as to the efficacy of said preparation are grossly exaggerated, false, and deceptive, and greatly exceed any claims as to the efficacy of said preparation which might truthfully be made.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements with respect to said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in commerce as herein described who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations and products. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Valligny Products, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its cosmetic preparation designated "Shampoo-Kolor," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under that name or any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from :

1. Representing that said preparation will color the roots of the hair or have any effect thereon or on new hair growth, or will restore the natural or original color to the hair, or will affect the color of the hair in any way other than as a dye.

2. Representing that anything less than repeated applications of said preparation will cause the hair to retain the color imparted to it by said preparation.

3. Representing that said preparation is compounded or manufactured in France or in any country other than the United States.

4. Representing that said preparation is "unique" or "revolutionary" in methods or results.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
JOHN F. JELKE COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3347. Complaint, Mar. 3, 1938—Decision, Apr. 3, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of a certain oleomargarine product composed of vegetable fat added to that portion of milk from which butterfat had been removed, and of added vitamin concentrates, so that emulsion in question contained vitamins A and D, and in sale and distribution of said product for use as a spread for bread, seasoning, cooking, and for same or similar purposes as those for which butter is used, through wholesalers and retailers and by sale directly to consumers, to purchasers in various other States and District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in making and selling oleomargarine and butter and sale and distribution of such products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, including those who make, distribute, and sell former without in any way misrepresenting the content thereof or method by which made; in advertising its said product in magazines and other media having general circulation among purchasers and prospective purchasers at various points throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia—

- (a) Represented and implied that its said oleomargarine product was made in or from whole milk or milk from which no part of the cream or butterfat content had been removed, and that it contained butterfat extracted from whole milk or cream taken therefrom by a process of churning as used in the making of butter, through use of such terms and words as "fresh pasteurized milk," "pasteurized milk," "churn," "churned," and "churnery," and depiction of old-fashioned dasher butter churn in connection with aforesaid words and terms, and term "milk solids" as used in such statements as "made entirely from pure vegetable oils, churned in FRESH, PASTEURIZED MILK," and depiction above referred to, together with such statements as "From a sunlit churnery," etc., and "made from wholesome American vegetable oils churned in a large percentage of pasteurized milk," etc.;

Facts being product in question was not made in or from whole milk, but from skim or skimmed milk from which cream or butterfat content had been removed, and contained no butterfat extracted from whole milk or cream taken therefrom by process of churning, as used in the making of butter, and was not "churned," as used and understood by purchasing public; and

- (b) Represented, imported, and implied that its said product contained an appreciable quantity of milk solids, including butterfat extracted from whole milk, and contained more of such solids than butter, and had more food value than butter, through statement that there were "43.8% more milk solids" in its said margarine "than in expensive spreads for bread," and such statements as "Milk Solids Contain Protein—Milk Sugar—and Minerals * * *";

Facts being that said product did not contain the butterfat solid from milk, the principal, most valuable, and commonly known milk solid, less than 1½

percent of its product was milk solids which, as therein contained and contained in butter to the extent of 1 percent, were of no significance to either product, and its own preparation did not contain the milk solid butterfat which makes up about 80 percent of butter and, in short, contained no appreciable quantity of milk solids and no butterfat, principal and most valuable milk solid in butter, and did not contain more milk solids than butter and was not of more value as food than such product ;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public, through such false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations and aforesaid depiction in connection therewith, into erroneous belief that its said product was made in or from whole milk and contained butterfat extracted therefrom or from the cream taken therefrom through churning, as used in the making of butter, and contained an appreciable quantity of milk solids, including butterfat extracted from whole milk, and more of such solids than butter, and had, therefore, more food value than said product, and to induce number of consuming public, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase its said product, and thereby unfairly to divert trade to it from competitors in commerce :

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the John F. Jelke Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as "respondent" has been, and is now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, John F. Jelke Co., Inc., is an Illinois corporation, which has its principal office and place of business at 759 South Washtenaw Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and has been for some time, engaged in the business of making, and selling, and distributing in commerce as herein set out, a certain product known as "Good Luck Oleo-margarine."

PAR. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said product, when sold, to be transported from its office and place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which said shipments are made. Respondent now maintains a constant current of trade in commerce in said product, distributed and sold by it, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the business of making, and in selling and distributing oleomargarines and butter in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said oleomargarine, respondent has made use of advertisements in newspapers, magazines, and periodicals having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States and has also made use of other types of advertising generally circulated to purchasers and prospective purchasers located in all of the States, containing statements regarding the content of its said product and regarding the methods whereby it is produced or made.

Among such statements so made and used by the respondent as to its said product appear the following representations, and other representations of similar import and meaning:

Made from pure vegetable products churned in fresh, pasteurized milk.

From a sunlit churnery.

* * * made from wholesome American vegetable oils churned in a large percentage of pasteurized milk * * *

There are 43.8% more milk solids in Good Luck Margarine than in expensive spreads for bread.

PAR. 4. By the means and in the manner aforesaid the respondent represents that its said product is made in and from whole milk; that is, milk from which no part of the cream or butterfat content has been removed. Respondent's said product is not made in or from whole milk but from skim or skimmed milk, that is, milk from which the cream or butterfat content has been removed.

The term "fresh pasteurized milk" used by the respondent as aforesaid is understood and interpreted by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to mean whole milk as that term is hereinabove described.

The words "churn," "churned," and "churnery" have long been associated by the general public with the process by which butterfat is extracted from cream taken from whole milk in the process of making butter.

The use of the words "churn" and "churnery" by the respondent, as aforesaid, in connection with the words "fresh pasteurized milk" and "milk solids" imports and implies, and a substantial proportion of the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that respondent's said product is made from whole milk, or cream taken from whole milk, and that it contains butterfat, extracted from whole milk, or the cream taken from whole milk, by "churning" as used in the process of making butter and extracting butterfat from cream.

In truth and fact respondent's said product does not contain butterfat extracted from whole milk or cream by "churning" as "churning" is done in the process of making butter, nor is said product "churned" in the sense that the term "churned" is understood by the public.

The statement to the effect that its said product contains 43.8 percent more milk solids than more expensive spreads, meaning butter, is so used by the respondent as to import and imply that there is a substantial difference in the food value of its said product and butter because of the fact that its said product contains 43.8 percent more milk solids than butter.

In truth and fact the quantity of such milk solids in each product is negligible, to wit: about 1 percent in butter and only about 1.438 percent in respondent's product, and the presence or absence of such milk solids in such quantities has no relation to the food value of either of said products.

PAR. 5. There are among respondent's competitors many who make, distribute, and sell oleomargarine, who do not in any way misrepresent the content of their product, or the methods by which it is made.

PAR. 6. Said representatives so made by the respondent, as hereinbefore set out, in its advertising, in connection with the selling and distributing of its product is false and deceptive and had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representation is true. Further, as a true consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and practices of respondent, as hereinbefore set out, a substantial number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of respondent's product with the result that trade in said commerce has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the business of making, selling, and distributing similar products, including butter, who truthfully advertise their respective products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The above and foregoing acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 3, 1938, issued, and thereafter caused its complaint to be served in this proceeding upon respondent, John F. Jelke Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John M. Russell, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Carroll J. Lord, attorney for the respondent, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral argument of counsel aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John F. Jelke Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. It has its principal office and place of business at 759 South Washtenaw Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of a certain oleomargarine product known as "Good Luck Oleomargarine" and "Good Luck Margarine" and in the sale and distribution of said product in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent distributes its said product through wholesalers and retailers and by sale directly to consumers. This product is used as a spread for bread, for seasoning, cooking, and for the same or similar purposes as butter is used.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes its product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Sales of respondent's product are made in all of the States except Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, and California.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is and has been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the business of making and selling oleomargarine and butter and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said product, respondent has made statements and representations in magazines and other advertising media having a general circulation among purchasers and prospective purchasers located at various points throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia, regarding the content of its product and regarding the methods whereby it is produced or made.

Among the statements and representations so made and used by the respondent with reference to its said product and the methods whereby it is produced or made, are the following:

GOOD LUCK is a pure, nutritious food made from wholesome American vegetable oils churned in a large percentage of pasteurized milk under the most modern and sanitary conditions and is rich in food energy.

PAR. 5. Through said advertisements used by the respondent in the manner aforesaid, the respondent represents and implies, and the purchasing public is led to believe, that respondent's said product is made in or from whole milk; that is, milk from which no part of the cream or butterfat content has been removed. Respondent's said product is not made in or from whole milk, but from skim or skimmed milk, which is that portion of the milk from which the cream or butterfat content has been removed. The terms "fresh pasteurized milk" and "pasteurized milk" used by the respondent in said advertisements as aforesaid are terms to designate, describe, or refer to whole milk; that is, milk from which no part of the cream or butterfat content has been removed, and they are so understood by the purchasing public. The general public has long associated the words "churn," "churned," and "churnery" with the process or the method by which butterfat is extracted from cream taken from whole milk in making butter. The use of the words "churn" and "churnery" and the picturization of an old-fashioned dasher butter churn in said advertisements by the respondent as above set out in connection with the words "fresh pasteurized milk," "pasteurized milk," and "milk solids," import and imply and a substantial portion of the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that respondent's said product is made from whole milk or cream taken from whole milk and it contains butterfat extracted from whole milk or the cream taken from whole milk by the process of "churning," that is used in the making of butter. Respondent's said product does not contain butterfat extracted from whole milk or the cream taken from whole milk, nor is said product "churned" in the sense that the term "churned" is used and understood by the purchasing public.

PAR. 6. Respondent's statement that "there are 43.8 percent more milk solids in Good Luck Margarine than in expensive spreads for bread" imports and implies, and the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that said product contains an appreciable quantity of solids, including butterfat, extracted from whole milk, and that it contains more of such solids than butter and has more food value than butter.

Respondent's said product does not contain the butterfat solid from milk, the principal, most valuable, and commonly known milk solid. Only about 1.438 percent of respondent's product is milk solids. About 1 percent of butter is composed of the milk solids found in respondent's said products, but butter contains approximately 80 percent of milk solid butterfat which is not found in respondent's product. The 1.438 percent of milk solids contained in respondent's product and the 1 percent of these milk solids contained in butter are of no significance in either of said products, and the presence or absence of one-half of 1 percent more or less of such milk solids would make no significant difference in the food value of either product.

Respondent's said product does not contain an appreciable quantity of milk solids and does not contain butterfat, the principal and most valuable milk solid in butter. It does not contain more milk solids than butter, nor is it of more value as a food than butter.

PAR. 7. Milk has been defined as "the whole fresh lacteal secretion obtained by the completed milking of one or more healthy cows." The public understands the word "milk" or any term in which the word "milk" is used without clear and nondeceptive qualification to mean whole milk, which is milk from which no part of the cream or butterfat content has been removed. Skim milk or skimmed milk is that portion of milk which remains after the removal of the cream in whole or in part. The solids of milk include butterfat. Butter is a food product which is made exclusively from milk or cream, or both, either with or without common salt. Butter is constituted by weight of milk solids, all tolerance having been allowed for, approximately as follows:

Butter Fat.....	80. %
Protein.....	1. %
Milk Sugar.....	0.5%
Ash.....	0.1% to 0.2%
Lactic Acid.....	0.1%

PAR. 8. Respondent's said product has been made in several ways. Prior to 1932, animal fat was used. From 1932 to 1935, both animal fat and cottonseed oil were used. In 1935, the animal fat was discontinued and only cottonseed oil is now used. The cottonseed oil used has been refined, deodorized, and hydrogenated, hydrogen being pushed through the cottonseed oil, changing it from a liquid into a solid. Prior to December 1933, respondent used whole milk in its product, but since December 1933 it has used only skim or skimmed milk therein, except for experimental purposes where whole milk has been used to a very limited degree. The product, since December 1933, has been composed of vegetable fat, usually neutralized as to flavor, which, with salt, is added to that portion of milk from which the butterfat has been removed. A vitamin concentrate is added so that the emulsion contains vitamins A and D. Respondent's product is presently made from the following ingredients in approximately the percentages indicated:

Findings

Cottonseed oil.....	80%
Salt.....	3%
Vitamin concentrates.....	1/10 of 1%
Milk from which butterfat has been removed.....	17%

These ingredients are placed in a machine where they are swiftly agitated by a power-operated whipper or beater until a proper emulsion has been made, when the emulsion, in a thin liquid form, is fed from the machine where agitated into a large steel drum, well below zero Fahrenheit in temperature, where the emulsion freezes thinly on the sides of the drum and is removed therefrom as it freezes by a knife which slices the mixture off the drum. This frozen mixture falls on a belt which carries it to a machine known as a worker where it is worked, from whence it is carried into the packaging machinery. Respondent's finished product contains approximately 16 percent moisture and approximately 1 percent of milk solids, both of which come from the skim or skimmed milk placed in the original mixture.

The machine into which respondent's product is placed and agitated is known among dealers in such machines and in the oleomargarine industry as an "emulsion churn" and it is referred to in the industry as a "churn." The respondent has, during all of the time it has manufactured its said product, used some type of emulsion churn to agitate its mixture and obtain a proper emulsion. This emulsion churn or agitator which is, and has been, used by respondent in the process of manufacturing its product in no way resembles a churn that is used in making butter or an old-fashioned dasher butter churn or any apparatus or device that is known to the public generally as a churn. The public generally has no knowledge of the process used in making respondent's said product or other oleomarga-rine products and no knowledge as to the practice in the trade and on the part of the manufacturers of such machines of referring to them as "emulsion churns" or "churns." Members of the public generally who visit respondent's plant do not recognize the machine used as a churn or the process of making respondent's said product as churning, but must have these matters explained to them by the respondent before they understand that the machine is a "churn" or that the product is "churned."

The effect of respondent's so-called churning is directly the opposite to the effect of churning in the process of making butter. Respondent's "churning" blends, mixes, and produces an emulsion, while the churning process used in the making of butter removes, separates, or collects, among other things, butterfat, from an emulsion, namely, cream, in which such fat was suspended. Respondent's so-called churning produces an emulsion, while churning "breaks down" an emulsion.

The machine used by the respondent in agitating its said product in the process of manufacture is not a churn and respondent's said product is not churned, as those terms are understood by the public generally, and the use by the respondent of these words in referring to its said machine and in describing the process by which its said product is made is misleading and deceptive to many members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 9. There are among respondent's competitors who make, distribute, and sell oleomargarine those who do not in any way misrepresent the content of their product or the method by which it is made.

PAR. 10. The acts and practices of the respondent in using the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations and the picturization of an old-fashioned dasher butter churn in connection with the sale and distribution of its said product as hereinabove set forth, have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondent's said product is made in or from whole milk as that term is herein defined; that it contains butterfat extracted from whole milk or the cream taken from whole milk by the process of churning as that process is used in the making of butter; that said product contains an appreciable quantity of milk solids including butterfat extracted from whole milk and that it contains more of such solids than butter and, therefore, has more food value than butter, and to induce a number of the consuming public because of said erroneous belief to purchase respondent's said product and thereby unfairly to divert trade to the respondent from its competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are each and all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before John L. Horner, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by John M. Russell, counsel for the Commission, and by Carroll J. Lord, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, John F. Jelke Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its oleomargarine product, now sold and distributed under the trade name Good Luck Oleomargarine, whether sold under that trade name or any other trade name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "churn," churned," "sunlit churnery," or any derivative of the word "churn," or the picture of an old-fashioned dasher churn, or any word or words or picturization importing or implying that its product has been churned in the manner and through the process by which butter is made from milk or cream, in designating, describing, or referring to its said product or the process by which it is made.

2. Using the terms "fresh pasteurized milk" or "pasteurized milk," or any other terms or words signifying milk which do not clearly reveal that the milk referred to is not whole milk, to designate, describe, or refer to milk used by the respondent in the process of manufacturing its said product when the milk so used is other than whole milk from which no part of the cream or butter-fat content has been removed.

3. Using the word "milk" to designate, describe, or refer to that part of milk remaining after any part of the cream or butterfat has been removed, unless the word "milk" is qualified by a word or words which clearly reveal that the "milk" referred to is not whole milk but "skim" or "skimmed" milk.

4. Representing that said product contains 43.8 percent or any other percentage more "milk solids" than butter or than other spreads for bread; that said product contains any appreciable quantity of "milk solids"; that the food value of said product is attributable to the "milk solid" content thereof; or that the "milk solid" content of said product gives it more food value than butter.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION

Docket 3456. Complaint, June 16, 1938—Decision, Apr. 3, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in operating stores in New York and in the city of Chicago, from which it sold, to purchasers in States involved and to those in other States, in substantial amount, women's dresses, fur coats, and other wearing apparel, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar wearing apparel and like merchandise in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including those who do not misrepresent the kind, value, quality, composition, or conditions of the women's dresses, fur coats, or other like merchandise sold by them—

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Saks & Co., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Saks & Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its main office located at Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, New York City, in said State, and with places of business located at Thirty-fourth and Broadway, at Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, aforesaid, city and State aforesaid, and (Saks Fifth Avenue) in Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of operating department stores from which it sells and has sold merchandise, including women's dresses, fur coats, and other wearing apparel, to its customers located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. It causes and, during the time above mentioned, has caused its said goods, when sold, to be shipped from its places of business in New York City, aforesaid, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the said State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in commerce by said respondent in said articles of wearing apparel and other like merchandise between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of such wearing apparel and like merchandise in commerce between and

SAKS AT 34TH

The statements, and the designation and description of said dresses as, "silk jersey" and "satin" served, and now serve, as representations on the part of the respondent that said dresses were, and are, made from fabrics composed of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and referred to as silk. The representations that these dresses are made of silk are grossly false and misleading. In truth and in fact, said dresses, designated and described as "silk jersey" and "satin" are not made from fabrics composed of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm which is commonly known and referred to as silk.

The statements and descriptions used in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said coats by the respondent, as hereinabove set forth, served, and now serve, as representations and implications on the part of said respondent that all of the coats advertised were (1) of a retail value greatly in excess of $69.50, the price at which they were advertised for sale; (2) that all of said coats were substantially of the retail value or worth, and customarily sold for the particular sum, indicated; and (3) that all of said coats were "brand new" and of the latest styles.

The representations and implications so made and used by the respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said coats as aforesaid, were, and are, grossly false and misleading. In truth and in fact, said fur coats, so designated and described, (1) were and are not of a retail value greatly in excess of $69.50; (2) only a few of said coats, if any, were of the retail value or worth, and customarily sold for the particular sum, indicated in said advertisement; and (3) with the possible exception of several "leaders," said coats were not, and are not, brand new and of the latest styles.

PAR. 4. The words "silk" and "satin" have had for many years past and still have, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence because of their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a variety of distinctive terms has been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving. The designation or description of wearing apparel, or other merchandise, as "silk" or "satin" leads a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such wearing apparel, or other merchandise, is made from a fabric composed of the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent in using the statements, descriptions, and designations, and the representations and implications, hereinabove set out, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said dresses and coats have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications were, and are, true and to cause many members of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase a substantial quantity of respondent's said products. As a consequence thereof, substantial trade in said commerce is diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 16th day of June 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Saks & Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On July 7, 1938, the respondent filed its answer to the complaint. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by James L. Fort, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Horace G. Hitchcock, of the firm of Chadbourne, Wallace, Park and Whiteside, before Edward E. Reardon, Esq., a trial examiner theretofore duly designated by the Commission, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, briefs of counsel, and upon oral arguments of Robert Mathis, Jr., of counsel for the Commission, and Horace G. Hitchcock, of counsel for the respondent; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom :

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Saks & Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at No. 611 Fifth Avenue in the city and State of New York. Respondent also operates stores at Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street and at Thirty-fourth Street and Broadway, in the city and State of New York, and another store in the city of Chicago and State of Illinois, which is operated under the trade name of Saks Fifth Avenue.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale of merchandise including women's dresses, fur coats, and other wearing apparel from its stores above mentioned to purchasers, some of whom are located in New York and others in States other than the State of New York. Of respondent's sales and deliveries of merchandise, a substantial amount is to residents of States other than New York, and of its sales and deliveries of fur coats and other fur articles alone about $15,000 worth out of a total volume of fur sales of $275,000 per annum, or about 5 percent, are made by the respondent to persons resident in States other than New York. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a course of trade by said respondent in said articles of wearing apparel and like merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is, and at all times herein referred to has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar wearing apparel and like merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There are among the competitors of respondent, in such commerce, various corporations, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale of wearing apparel and other like merchandise who do not misrepresent the kind, value, quality, composition or conditions of the women's dresses, fur coats, or other like merchandise, sold by them.

Findings

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, as described herein, respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling certain of its fur coats has caused advertisements to be published in newspapers of general circulation in various States of the United States. In said advertisements said respondent represented and described certain lots of fur coats for sale at $68.50 each, said coats being represented in said advertisements as being (1) worth as much as $200; (2) all "brand new" and of the latest styles; (3) and that several of the coats so advertised were genuine "Black Persian Lamb Fur Coats" and were worth $200 each.

The foregoing statements and representations made by the respondent served as representations to the purchasing public that all of such coats so advertised, offered for sale, and sold (1) were of the value and worth of $200 each; (2) were "brand new," and of the latest styles and (3) were all genuine furs of the kind and type which each was represented to be; and that the "Black Persian Lamb" coats so advertised were worth $200 each in addition to being "brand new" and of the latest styles.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the coat represented by the respondent in its advertisements as a "Black Persian Lamb" coat and which was purchased from respondent as such coat worth $200 was not a black Persian lamb coat but was made from cross-bred caracul lamb peltries of types which are produced in Bagdad, Syria, or Iraq. The coat so sold as a black Persian lamb coat was not a "brand new" coat of the latest style at the time of the sale but was a coat that had been made over from a previously manufactured one, nor was said coat one of a retail value of $200. It was a definitely defective type of garment, the skins of which were in very weak condition and which had not been kept under proper storage conditions for furs. Based on the wholesale cost of all the coats in this group, the wholesale cost of the fur coat so sold by respondent in its then condition was about $45 at the time of its sale. The retail value of the coat as a new coat in good condition at the time of its sale by the respondent was not any amount near the advertised value of $200 but was in fact considerably less than that sum.

In truth and in fact, none of the fur coats which were advertised by respondent were worth an amount near $200 but were of a value considerably less than that amount. All of the coats so advertised, including those designated as black Persian lamb, were purchased in the same lot at a wholesale price of from $42.50 to $44 each. Based on respondent's customary mark-up over cost, the Commission finds that the retail value of said coat did not exceed $100. Coats of similar furs and design, in good condition, sell at wholesale for from $65 to $110 and sell at an average retail price of about $165.

PAR. 6. Further, in the course and conduct of its said business, respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling certain women's dresses has caused advertisements to be published in newspapers of general circulation in various States of the United States other than the State of New York in which advertisements said respondent represented and described as "silk" and "ice smooth satin" a certain group of dresses offered therein.

The foregoing statements and representations made by the respondent serve as representations to the purchasing public that such fabrics so advertised, offered for sale and sold, were and are silk fabrics. The representations as hereinabove set forth are and were false and misleading in that said fabrics so represented, designated and referred to are not and were not composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, but are and were composed entirely of materials other than silk, to wit, acetate rayon.

PAR. 7. Over a period of many years the word "silk" has had and still has, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning as being the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has been woven for a long time into a variety of fabrics. A number of distinctive terms, such as "satin," "taffeta," "crepe de chine," and "crepe," have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the type of weaving of silk fiber. Dress goods and other items of wearing apparel designated, described and referred to as "satin," "taffeta," "crepe de chine," and "crepe" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

"Rayon" is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk, and when so manufactured it has an appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufacturer to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is readily believed and accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of the respondent corporations, partnerships, and firms, engaged in selling and offering for sale of fabrics, women's dresses, wearing apparel, and fur coats, and other allied products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misrepresent in any manner the kind, value, quality, material, composition or conditions of the fur coats and other wearing apparel manufactured, offered for sale and sold by them.

PAR. 9. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein in selling and offering for sale its women's dresses and fur garments has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and to cause them to purchase said garments as a result of such erroneous beliefs induced as above set forth. The use by respondent of the representations and statements aforesaid has unfairly diverted trade to the respondent from its competitors, and thereby substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, Esq., an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Robert Mathis, Jr., Esq., counsel for the Commission and by Horace G. Hitchcock, Esq. of the firm Chadbourne, Wallace, Parks & Whiteside, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Saks & Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its furs or fur products or its textile fabrics, including women's dresses and women's wearing apparel, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using any geographical or zoological terms to describe or designate furs or fur products made in whole or in part of fur other than those which truthfully express the true geographical or zoological origin of the animal from which the peltries have actually been obtained.

2. Representing as the customary or regular worth or value of any furs, or fur products made in whole or in part of fur, prices and values which are in excess of the price at which such products are regularly and customarily sold in the normal and usual course of business.

3. Representing that furs or fur products made in whole or in part of old furs which have been renovated, rebuilt, remanufactured, or restyled are new by failure to affix tags or labels on said products clearly and conspicuously indicating that said products are renovated, rebuilt, remanufactured, or restyled, as the case may be.

4. Representing in any manner that furs or fur products which are composed in whole or in part of renovated, rebuilt, remanufactured, or restyled furs are new or are composed of new material.

5. Using the unqualified descriptive terms "satin," "taffeta," "crepe de chine," or "crepe," or any other descriptive terms indicative of silk, to describe, designate or in any manner refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided, however, that when said words or descriptive terms are used truthfully to designate or describe the type of weave, construction or finish, such words must be qualified by using in connection and conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness a word or words clearly and accurately naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said products are made.

6. Using the term "silk" or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided, that in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such term or similar terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content when immediately accompanied by a word or words accurately describing and designating such other materials in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

GENERAL DISTILLERIES CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2445. Complaint, June 19, 1935—Decision, Apr. 10, 1940

Where a corporation engaged, under rectifier's basic permit, in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other spirituous liquors, and in production of gin by process of redistillation of alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics, and in sale of said various products among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and engaged, for some 2 years last past, under distiller's basic permit, in producing, bottling, and selling brandy produced in distillery leased therefor by it, and, as thus variously engaged, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture by distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from the raw materials and in sale thereof in trade and commerce as aforesaid, and with those engaged in rectifying, blending and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, liqueurs, vermouths, cocktails, and other alcoholic beverages and in sale thereof in commerce as aforesaid, and including among said competitors those who, as distillers from mash, wort, or wash of the whiskies, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages sold by them, truthfully use words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as part of their corporate or trade names, on their stationery and advertising, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products, and those who, engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, and various other alcoholic beverages, do not use such words as aforesaid—

Represented, through use of word "Distilleries" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, invoices, billheads, and order blanks, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sold and shipped its said products, and in various other ways to its customers, and furnished same with means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and ultimate consuming public, that said whiskies and other alcoholic beverages contained in such bottles were by it made through true process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, notwithstanding fact it did not distill said whiskies and other alcoholic beverages, excepting brandy as above set forth, by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and did not own, operate, or control any place or places where such alcoholic beverages, with exception aforesaid noted, are made by process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, as long definitely understood from word "distilleries" when used in connection with industry in question and products thereof by trade and ultimate purchasing public, and it was not a distiller, for the alcoholic bottled beverages of which there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public; With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and purchasing public into the belief that it was a distiller, and that the whiskies and other alcoholic beverages sold by it were by it distilled from mash, wort, or wash, and of inducing dealers and purchasing public, acting in such belief, to buy its said products made and bottled by it, and of thereby diverting trade to it from its competitors who do not, by their corporate or trade name or in any other man-

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that General Distilleries Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized in March 1934, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Hartford in said State. It is now, and since its organization, has been engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages and in the sale thereof in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business, it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business aforesaid into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and since its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by distillation of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and since its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has upon its said premises a still which it uses in the production of gin by a process of rectification, whereby alcohol purchased but not produced by respondent is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics. Such rectification of alcoholic spirits and liqueurs does not make or constitute respondent a distiller as defined by section 3247 of the Revised Statutes regulating Internal Revenue, nor as commonly understood by the public or the liquor industry. For a long period of time the word "distilleries" when used in connection with the liquor industry and the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of the wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, places where such liquors are manufactured by the process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed; and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors prepared and bottled by distillers.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "distilleries" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery and advertising, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, as aforesaid, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and does not own, operate or control any place or places where such beverages are manufactured by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort, or wash, as aforesaid, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery and advertising, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery or advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 5. Representation by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, is calculated to and has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by the respondent are manufactured and distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash, as aforesaid, and is calculated to and has the capacity and tendency to and does induce dealers and the purchasing public acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages bottled and sold by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade names or in any other manner misrepresent that they are manufacturers by distillation from mash, wort, or wash, of such products, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 19, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent General Distilleries Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Joseph W. Ress, attorney for the respondent before John J. Keenan and W. W. Sheppard, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence presented in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid and Briggs G. Simpich, Esq., of Washington, D. C., and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized in 1934, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal place of business at 77-79 Homestead Avenue, Hartford, Conn. Its officers are:

President.....	Abraham Abrahamson,
Treasurer and Manager.....	Julian Shoor,
Secretary.....	David Lyon Abramson.

Since March 9, 1934, it has been and still is engaged in business as a rectifier and wholesaler of distilled spirits and the production of gin by the process of redistillation of alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics pursuant to a rectifier's basic permit No. R-504, issued to it by the Federal Alcohol Administration Division of the Treasury Department. Its present permit authorizes it to engage at the above address in the business of rectifying and blending distilled spirits, gin, wine, and other spirituous beverages, and while so engaged, to sell, offer and deliver for sale in interstate commerce and foreign commerce such spirits, wine, gin, and other spirituous liquors so rectified or blended, conditionally upon its compliance with sections 5 and 6 of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act, and all other provisions thereof; the twenty-first amendment and laws relating to the enforcement thereof; all laws of the United States relating to distilled spirits, wine, gin, and malt beverages, including taxes with respect thereto; and all applicable regulations made pursuant to the law which are now or may hereafter be in force; and the laws of the States in which the permittee engages in business. The permit issued in 1934 was from the former Alcohol Control Administration and on October 17, 1935, the permit respondent is presently operating under was issued by the Federal Alcohol Administration.

While its charter is sufficiently broad to permit it to engage in almost any phase of the liquor business, actually until September 26, 1938, it was engaged solely in the blending of whiskies, wines, gins, and other spirituous beverages, and the selling of same at wholesale. It purchases these spirits which it blends from various distillers and bottles them under its warehousing and bottling basic permit issued at the same time and by the same authority as was its rectifier's permit. On September 26, 1938, it was granted a distiller's basic permit No. D-898, by the Administrator of the Federal Alcohol Administration authorizing it to produce brandy by distillation on the premises of the Earnest C. Alderman Distillery, Barnes Hill Road, Burlington, Conn., said Alderman being the holder of basic distiller's permit M. D.-59.

Of the whiskies purchased by it in bulk from distillers, it bottles some straight without alteration and other whiskies after blending or rectifying. The gin manufactured by it through the process of redistillation of purchased alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics is bottled and sold to the trade and constitutes approximately 15 percent of the volume of its business. The whiskies, both straight and blended, constitute 50 to 60 percent of its trade, and the brandy which it produces, since September 26, 1938, constitutes the balance. The respondent does not now and never has, except since September 26, 1938, produced or manufactured distilled spirits of any kind, from mash, wort, or other raw materials. The rectification of alcoholic spirits by this respondent as aforesaid in the production of gin, does not make or constitute it a distiller or a distilling company as defined by section 3247 of the Revised Statutes of the United States regulating Internal Revenues.

The Commission finds that this respondent is now and has been since 1934 engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies and other spirituous liquors and in the sale thereof in constant course and trade in commerce between and among various States of the United States and the District of Columbia; that since the issuance to it of the distiller's basic permit D-898, on September 26, 1938, it has produced, bottled and sold brandy produced in a distillery which it leases for that purpose in Burlington, Conn.; that approximately 25 percent of its sales and distribution has been in States other than the State of Connecticut.

In the course and conduct of its said business, it causes its products, when sold, to be transported from Hartford, Conn., into and through various other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, who are wholesalers and retailers located in these other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and since March 4, 1934, has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from the raw materials and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been during said period, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of rectifying, blending and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, liqueurs, vermouths, cocktails, and other alcoholic beverages and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. On the premises of respondent are various tanks for storage and blending, bottle fillers, labeling machines, and the equipment usually found in a rectifying plant. There is also distilling apparatus for the production of gin by distilling purchased alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics. The respondent is now and has been since September 26, 1938, producing brandy by distillation from leased premises pursuant to a basic distiller's permit No. D898, issued by the Administrator of the Federal Alcohol Administration. The law permits the use of the name or designation of distiller, or distilleries with respect to brandies produced under said permit.

Rectifying, in the distilled spirits rectifying industry, means the mixing or blending whiskies of different grades or types. A blend of whiskies is a combination of various straight whiskies of different types or ages, and blended whisky is a product with something other than whisky in it, such as neutral spirits (grain alcohol) and sometimes caramel or prune juice, or whatever the rectifier sees fit to put into it.

During such times as a rectifier is either bottling or labeling his products, a gager from the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue is present, solely for the protection of the Government's revenue. A great many distilling companies, in addition to the distilleries, operate a rectifying plant at some little distance from their distilling plant where they perform substantially the same operations as a rectifier. Blown somewhere in the glass of the bottles used, mostly in the bottom of the bottle, there is a symbol consisting of a letter followed by a number identifying the bottler. For instance, there is a "D" for distiller, and an "R" for rectifier, the number following the said letter corresponds with the distiller's rectifier's basic permits, thus "R-504" designated General Distilleries Corporation as a rectifier to those who know and understand such designations. Distillers also bottle liquor from their rectifying plants and label it as "Blended and bottled by," or "bottled by," as the case may be so that by the use of such phrases alone appearing on the label followed by the name of the bottler one cannot tell whether the bottler was a distiller or a rectifier. The designation "D-898" designates the General Distilleries Corporation to those who know and understand such designation as distillers.

Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C. A. Tit. 26, section 1183 (a)), regulating Internal Revenue, defines a "distiller" as follows:

Every person who produces distiller spirits or who brews or makes a mash, wort, or wash fit for distillation or for the production of spirits, or who, by any process of evaporation, separates alcoholic spirits from any substance or who, making or keeping mash, wort, or wash has also in his possession or use a still, shall be regarded as a distiller.

Section 3244 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C. A. Tit. 26, section 1398 (f)), defines a "rectifier" as follows:

Every person who rectifies, purifies, or refines distilled spirits or wine by any process other than by original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous enclosed vessels or pipes, until the manufacture thereof is complete, and every wholesaler and liquor dealer who has in his possession any still or leach tub, or who keeps any other apparatus with the purpose of refining in any manner distilled spirits, and every person who without rectifying, purifying, or refining distilled spirits, shall, by mixing such spirits, wine or other liquor with any materials, manufacture any spurious imitation, or compound liquors for sale under the name of whisky, brandy, gin, rum, wine spirits, cordials, or wine bitters, or any other name, shall be regarded as a rectifier, and that being engaged in the business of rectifying, etc.

PAR. 3. The testimony of those having long experience in both the distilled spirits rectifying industry and distilling industry established that this respondent's plant and operations do not make or constitute this respondent a distiller in the sense commonly understood by the liquor industry. There were also called a large number of witnesses who were lay-members of the purchasing public, and with few exceptions, their testimony was to the effect that by such terms as "distilling," "distillery," and "distiller," when used in the trade or corporate name of a concern handling alcoholic beverages, they understood that concern to be engaged in an initial process of producing spirituous or alcoholic beverages from grain or mash, and that they have a distinct preference for a distillery bottled package over one bottled by a rectifier, for the reason that they would expect to get a much better product which had been distilled under proper supervision and without tampering. And said witnesses indicated definitely that they would prefer and choose liquor carrying the label of a distilling company or a distiller.

The Commission finds that for a long period of time, the word "distilleries" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with products thereof, has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacture of such liquors by the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, and that a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy alcoholic beverages prepared and bottled by distillers.

PAR. 4. All of respondent's products are sold under its corporate name "General Distilleries Corporation." In the sale of whiskies, some of said whiskies are sold without the name of the distiller thereon on the face of said bottle, but only the words "Bottled by General Distilleries Corporation." Other whiskies, straight and blended, are sold with the name of the distilling company or producer who manufactured or blended said whiskey and the label also bears designation "Bottled by General Distilleries Corporation." Its rum is sold without the name of the producer on the front label and with no other information than "Bottled by General Distilleries Corporation." It does not distill rum. Prior to securing its permit to distill brandy, respondent sold brandy with labels bearing the name of the winery and distillery and respondent's own name as the bottler thereof. On its blended whiskies, the respondent, after carrying the name of the whisky, has the designation "Blended and Bottled by General Distilleries Corporation." On its gins, the respondent carries the label "Distilled and Bottled by General Distilleries Corporation." On other of its whiskies which it bottles exclusively for customers, said labels bear the designation "Bottled Exclusively for," then gives the name of the liquor store for whom it is bottled, with no other designation on the face thereof as to who is the distiller or bottler. As to straight whiskies, since about August 1936, under a requirement of the Federal Alcohol Administration, respondent is compelled to place a label on the bottle naming the State in which the liquor was distilled and its age. In the matter of blended whisky, respondent is required to place a back label on the bottle stating the amount of whisky and the amount of neutral spirits therein. The respondent must get the approval of the Federal Alcohol Administration on all labels before using them, and has apparently complied with the rules and regulations of the Federal Alcohol Administration. The respondent's corporate name as it appears on the label is required to correspond with the name as it appears on the basic permit as issued by the Federal Alcohol Administration. The Federal Alcohol Administration never passed upon the propriety or impropriety of the name used by the respondent corporation.

The Commission finds that in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by the use of the word "Distilleries" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, invoices, billheads, order blanks, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that said whiskies and other alcoholic beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through a true process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, and does not distill the said whiskies and other alcoholic beverages, except brandy, by it so bottled, labeled, sold and transported, and does not own, operate, or control any place or places where whiskies and other such alcoholic beverages, except the brandy since September 26, 1938, are manufactured by a process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, and the said beverages are not produced and bottled by respondent as a distiller, in its distilleries, or in its distillery. That the brandy which has been, since September 1938, produced by the respondent is under a special permit whereby it is allowed only as the lessee of a distillery to produce upon its own responsibility brandy from such fruit or materials as brandy is usually produced; that said permit does not permit and respondent does not produce under said permit any whiskies or other alcoholic beverages.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of alcoholic beverages as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals, who distill from mash, wort, or wash, whiskies, brandies and other alcoholic beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as part of their corporate names or trade names on their stationery, advertising, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, cordials, liqueurs, vermouths, cocktails, and other alcoholic beverages who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 6. The representation by the respondent as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof is calculated to and has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the belief that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies and other alcoholic beverages sold by the respondent are distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash, and is calculated to and has the capacity and tendency to and does induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such belief, to purchase the aforesaid products manufactured and bottled by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade name or in any other manner misrepresent that they are distillers, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan and W. W. Sheppard, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by DeWitt T. Puckett, counsel for the Commission, and by Joseph W. Ress and Briggs G. Simpich, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, General Distilleries Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages (except brandies actually distilled by it, and except gins produced by it through a process of rectification whereby alcohol purchased but not produced by respondent is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics) in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from: advertising, or labels attached to the bottles in which its said products are sold and shipped, or in any other way, (a) that the respondent is a distiller of the said whiskies, gins or other spirituous beverages; or (b) that the said whiskies, gins or other spirituous beverages were by it manufactured through a process of distillation; or (c) that respondent owns, operates or controls a place or places where any such products are by it manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed, unless and until respondent shall actually own, operate, or control such a place or places.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
CONSOLIDATED PINNACLE COAL COMPANY AND ELLIS MORRELL

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3234. Complaint, Sept. 30, 1937—Decision, Apr. 10, 1940

Where a corporation had long been engaged in the operation of a mine at Pinnacle in Colorado, and in the sale of coal therefrom under name "Pinnacle" in said and adjacent States, including Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming, and had expended large sum in advertising said coal and, for a number of years, was second largest coal mine operator in county in question and still one of the larger operators, and had built up a good reputation for coal mined by it as product of good grade and quality, and included in trade-mark registered by it word "Pinnacle," together with words that it was mined and shipped only by it, and made use of such trade-mark and words in its business for over 20 years and applied same to coal mined by it and to its freight cars, trucks, wagons, bins, etc., and coal under name "Pinnacle" had come to be generally recognized in the trade and among sellers and purchasers thereof in sales territory concerned as mined by it and exclusively from mine of that name and town; and thereafter corporate competitor, and relatively small operator, engaged in shipping to customers in Nebraska coal produced from mine some 42 miles distant from said Pinnacle mine or mine there located—

Made use of its corporate name, including word "Pinnacle," in connection with offer and sale of coal in question, and featured said corporate name in advertising material and made use of name "Pinnacle" in label under which it sold said coal, together with claims and representations thereon to effect that it was of highest quality, notwithstanding fact product in question was not that from said Pinnacle mine, to which it was generally inferior;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that coal produced and sold by it under such label had been produced from mine at Pinnacle, operated by corporation aforesaid, and was of a grade and quality equal to that of the coal so named and produced by said corporation, and to induce members of purchasing public to buy its said coal by reason of such mistaken and erroneous belief, and with result of diverting trade unfairly to it from competitors, including those who offer and sell in commerce coal produced in mines other than that located at Pinnacle as above set forth, and operated by said corporation, and do not represent their coal as produced from such Pinnacle mine, and those who do not misrepresent in any particular the grade and quality of their product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley and Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., a corporation and Ellis Morrell, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been, and are now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Colorado, having its principal office and place of business in Denver, Colo. Respondent, Ellis Morrell, a resident of Denver, Colo., is president and manager of respondent corporation and at all times herein specified has directed and dictated the sales policies and business activities of said respondent corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondents have been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing coal. Respondents cause said coal when sold to be transported from said place of business in Denver, Colo., to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than Colorado.

Respondents are in competition with individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of coal in interstate commerce.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business aforesaid, have used, and now use, the word "Pinnacle" as a part of the corporate name aforesaid and on stickers, advertisements, letterheads, and various other forms of advertising which forms of advertising were for the purpose of effecting sales of coal vended by them.

PAR. 4. The word "Pinnacle" used in connection with coal, has for more than 25 years signified and meant, and has been understood by the general purchasing public to signify and mean, coal produced from a certain mine known as the "Pinnacle mine" located in the county of Routt, State of Colorado, owned and operated by Victor American Fuel Co., a corporation of Denver, Colo.

The Victor American Fuel Co. aforesaid has for more than 25 years past owned and operated and now owns and operates the "Pinnacle mine" above referred to and at all times produced a large and extensive tonnage of coal. Such coal, so produced and sold, is known and described throughout the mining trade and known to the general purchasing public as "Pinnacle" coal. Such coal has consistently maintained a high reputation on account of its quality, utility and fuel value, and is now widely and favorably known throughout the States wherein the same is sold. It has long had and now has a constant and favorable good will and the name "Pinnacle" as applied to or used in connection with coal has become and is a substantial asset of great value to the many individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the mining, sale and transportation of such coal in interstate commerce.

The coal sold by the respondents in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, is not mined from the Pinnacle mine nor from any mine adjacent thereto, but is mined in a district separate and apart from that wherein the Pinnacle mine is located, separated from said Pinnacle mine by a range of mountains, and is not the same as, nor similar to, the coal known and described as "Pinnacle" coal, but is inferior thereto.

PAR. 5. The purchasing public has long recognized in "Pinnacle" coal certain attributes which make said coal desirable. Among these attributes are the following: (1) Low in ash content, (2) clean, (3) no clinkers, (4) no slacking, (5) high in heat units, which render "Pinnacle" coal a most economical fuel and give it a high fuel rating. The respondents represent that its said coal (1) is low in ash content, (2) has highest fuel rating, (3) is cleanest coal mined, (4) has no clinkers, (5) never slacks, (6) is most economical fuel, and (7) has highest heat units.

Said representations are false, deceptive, and misleading for in truth and in fact as these terms are understood by the purchasing public, respondents' said coal is not low in ash content, does not have the highest fuel rating, is not the cleanest coal mined, is not without clinkers, does slack, is not the most economical fuel, and not the highest in heat units.

PAR. 6. The practice of the respondents in using the word "Pinnacle" in the corporate name of the corporate respondent and in the advertising as aforesaid in selling coal mined in mines other than the Pinnacle mine has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive the members of the purchasing public into the false belief that the coal so offered for sale and sold by them has actually been and is being mined from the Pinnacle mine, and that respondents' said coal is the coal that is commonly known and described as "Pinnacle" coal. Members of the purchasing public, as a result of such erroneous belief have been and are now being induced to purchase respondents' said coal.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of the respondents various individuals, partnerships, and corporations who sell and offer for sale in interstate commerce coal produced in mines other than the Pinnacle mine, who do not falsely represent that the coal so sold and offered for sale by them was mined from the Pinnacle mine and who do not falsely represent the quality and grade of such coal to be of the quality and grade of Pinnacle coal, and who do not in any manner misrepresent their coal or its source.

Such acts and practices of the respondent have the tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in said commerce to respondents from competitors who do not misrepresent the source of the coal vended by them nor the quality and grade thereof.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 30, 1937, issued its complaint and caused same to be served upon the respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., a corporation, charging respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The individual respondent, Ellis Morrell, could not be located and the complaint was never served upon him. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co.'s answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint herein, the aforesaid answer, the testimony and other evidence and the brief of counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the public interest, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The corporate respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., is a Colorado corporation with its principal office and place of business in Denver, Colo. For a number of years said corporation has been engaged in the business of operating coal mines in Routt County, Colo., and in selling to retail dealers the coal produced from such mines. Prior to March 1, 1938, and prior to the date of the issuance of the complaint herein, the corporate respondent sold a portion of its output of coal to retail dealers located in States other than the State of Colorado. In connection with such sales the corporate respondent caused its coal, when sold, to be transported from the mines operated by it in Routt County, Colo., into other States of the United States wherein such purchasers were located. In the course and conduct of its said business the corporate respondent was in active competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States with other corporations and with persons and partnerships also engaged in the sale and shipment of coal to purchasers buying for resale.

The individual respondent, Ellis Morrell, has not been connected with the corporate respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co. since March 1, 1938, and is now engaged in the trucking business in the State of New Mexico.

PAR. 2. In recent years one of the principal competitors of the respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., in the mining of coal in Routt County, Colo., and the sale of such coal in the State of Colorado and States adjacent thereto, has been the Victor American Fuel Co., which company has operated a mine at Pinnacle, in Routt County, Colo. The output of this mine has been sold by said Victor American Fuel Co. in the State of Colorado and in States adjacent thereto, including the States of Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming. In the years 1915 to 1937, both inclusive, said Victor American Fuel Co. produced from the mine operated by it at Pinnacle, Colo., 2,687,809 tons of coal, and in said years it spent more than $200,000 in advertising the coal so produced by it, and the name "Pinnacle" as applied to such coal. For a number of years said Victor American Fuel Co. has been the second largest coal mine operator in Routt County, Colo., and is still one of the larger operators. It has built up a good reputation for coal mined by it and such coal has been known to the trade as a coal of good grade and quality. It is generally recognized in the trade and among the sellers and purchasers of coal in the sales territory in which Pinnacle coal is sold and distributed that Pinnacle coal is mined exclusively from the Pinnacle mine situated in the town of Pinnacle, County of Routt, Colo. On February 22, 1922, the Victor American Fuel Co. caused to be registered in the United States Patent Office a trade-mark which has been used by it in its business since April 22, 1916, which trade-mark included the word "Pinnacle" in combination with the words "mined and shipped only by the Victor American Fuel Co." On May 24, 1922, it caused another trade-mark to be registered in said Patent Office, which latter trade-mark consisted of the single word "Pinnacle," which trade-mark has been continually used by it in its business since April 22, 1916, and has been applied and fixed to the coal mined by it and to the freight cars, trucks, wagons, and bins, and to other carriers, vehicles, and receptacles containing such coal. Also, these trade-marks were filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Colorado, on October 20, 1925.

PAR. 3. The corporate respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., is a relatively small mine operator. The Commission finds that in November and December 1936, the corporate respondent made shipments of a number of cars of coal which it had produced from a mine then operated by it near the town of Hayden in Routt County, Colo., which shipments were delivered by the corporate respondent to its customers in the State of Nebraska. The mine from which such coal was produced is located 42 miles from the mine operated by the Victor American Fuel Co. near the town of Pinnacle in Routt County, Colo. The coal so produced by the corporate respondent was sold by it under a round label about 3 inches in diameter. In the center of such label was a star with seven points. The corporate name of said respondent containing the word "Pinnacle" was printed around the border. On each point of the star there was printed a claim or representation concerning the grade or quality of the coal, which claims and representations were to the effect that such coal was of the highest quality. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the coal produced by the corporate respondent and sold under the representations hereinabove set out was of inferior grade to the coal produced by the Victor American Fuel Co. and sold under the name Pinnacle coal. The corporate respondent's coal mined from the mine located near the town of Hayden had a high moisture content and a high ash content. It disintegrated rapidly in handling and in transportation from the mine to the consumer and was generally inferior to the coal produced by the Victor American Fuel Co. from the mine operated by it at Pinnacle, Colo.

PAR. 4. The use by the corporate respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., of the word "Pinnacle" in its corporate name and the use of the labels and other advertising material which featured its corporate name containing the word "Pinnacle" had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the coal produced and sold by the corporate respondent under such label had been produced from the mine located at Pinnacle, Colo., operated by the Victor American Fuel Co. and that such coal was of a grade and quality equal to that of the Pinnacle coal produced by the Victor American Fuel Co. and had the capacity and tendency to induce such members of the purchasing public to purchase corporate respondent's coal on account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., various persons and partnerships and other corporations who offer for sale and sell coal in commerce between and among several of the States of the United States, which coal is produced in mines other than the mine located at Pinnacle, Colo., and operated by the Victor American Fuel Co., and which competitors do not represent that the coal so offered for sale and sold by them was produced from said mine located at Pinnacle, Colo.; also, there are among the competitors of respondent those who do not misrepresent in any particular the grade and quality of the coal sold by them. As a result trade has been unfairly diverted to the corporate respondent from such competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the corporate respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., as herein found, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co. (respondent Ellis Morrell not having been served), testimony and other evidence taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission (respondent not having filed brief); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of coal, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Pinnacle" in any corporate or trade name, or at all, when the coal sold by respondent has not been mined from the Pinnacle Mine situated at Pinnacle in the County of Routt, State of Colorado.

2. Designating or describing coal which has not been mined from the Pinnacle Mine situated at Pinnacle in the County of Routt, State of Colorado, as being Pinnacle coal; or otherwise representing that such coal is Pinnacle coal.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Consolidated Pinnacle Coal Co., shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the case growing out of the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, closed as to Ellis Morrell, subject to the Commission's right to reopen the case in the event future developments so warrant.

IN THE MATTER OF
FORSON LABORATORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3361. Complaint, Mar. 18, 1938—Decision, Apr. 10, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Nu-Myst" medicament and vaporizer therefor, to drug jobbers and dealers; in advertisements thereof through means of radio broadcasts over stations of extrastate audience and through advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, and trade journals of general circulation throughout the United States, and circulars distributed to customers, and through use of the mail, advertising folders, letters, and literature—

Represented that its said preparation was a cure or remedy for whooping cough, colds, hay fever, rose fever, and asthma, and a competent and effective treatment for such ailments and conditions which would relieve the same, and was more than a relief from local irritation which might be caused by ailments in question, and that said product would destroy bacteria and prevent growth thereof;

Facts being that it was not a cure or remedy or competent or effective treatment for said various ailments and conditions and would not give relief therefor beyond point above noted nor destroy or prevent growth of bacteria, specifically was not a cure for colds generally, causes of which so-called allergies are many-fold, and, lacking anything to control bronchial tube spasms, would not control asthma nor, lacking germicidal quality, relieve whooping cough, and its various representations aforesaid were misleading and untrue;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all of its said representations were true, and with result, as a consequence of such belief, that a number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its product in preference to that of those engaged in substantial competition with it in sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia and in sale and distribution of products intended and used for purposes for which it recommended its said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

Mr. Philip Steinman and Mr. Lawrence H. Sanders, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Forson Laboratories, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Forson Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 353 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past engaged in the business of distributing and selling in commerce as hereinafter set out a certain medical product designated as Nu-Myst.

PAR. 2. Said respondent being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said medical product, when sold, to be transported from its office and principal place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a course of trade in commerce in said product so distributed and sold by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is now and has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling inhalants or similar medicinal products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said medicinal product respondent has made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States and has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals and trade journals with a general circulation throughout the United States; has printed and circulated to customers and prospective customers throughout the several States, through the use of the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, letters, and literature. In all such advertisements and advertising literature, the respondent has made such statements as the following:

This direct, natural treatment strikes at the root of the trouble—the mucous membranes. Nu-Myst brings speedy relief to sufferers from colds, hay fever, rose fever, asthma and other nasal and bronchial infections.

Nu-Myst contains the proper remedies and essential oils to combat colds without absorbing drugs into the system. It contains no drugs that are contra-indicated during the menstrual period.

The "common cold" is one of the most common causes of dysmenorrhea (painful menses). It is possible for the infection to settle in the entire genital tract. The use of many of the drugs contained in some cough and cold medicines is contra-indicated during menstruation.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements, appearing in respondent's advertising literature and radio broadcasts purport to be descriptive of respondent's product and its effectiveness in treating and curing the "common cold" and other diseases and infections of the nasal passages and bronchial tubes. In all of its advertising, respondent represents through statements and representations hereinabove set out and other statements of similar import, nature and effect that its product, Nu-Myst, will prevent and cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which may be present in the nasal passages and bronchial tubes.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by the respondent in said advertising literature and radio broadcasts as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which the use of the above-named product will prevent and cure, or will be beneficial in the treatment of, are the following: Colds, hay fever, rose fever, asthma, and whooping cough.

In its aforesaid advertisements, respondent also unfairly disparages various inhalants and other competitive products designed for use in treating colds and coughs distributed by its competitors through representing that the use of many of the drugs contained in many cough and cold medicines are contra-indicated during menstruation, but that its product, Nu-Myst, contains no drugs which are contra-indicated during the menstrual period.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the nature and effectiveness of its product when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's product will not prevent and cure, nor is it substantially beneficial in the treatment of all or any of the said diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions hereinabove named. Respondent's product will not have any curative value in these conditions, nor materially alter their course, nor will it substantially relieve the various manifestations of these conditions. The drugs generally contained in cough and cold medicines are not contraindicated during menstruation, and there is no justification for respondent's representation that its product should be used during menstruation in preference to other forms of medication.

Respondent's product consists of several essential oils in 87½ percent alcohol. It is essentially a mild contra-irritant mixture.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended, and sold for the use of either treating or curing the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the nasal passages and bronchial tubes hereinabove named and who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used, and who do not unfairly disparage the products of competitors.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made by the respondent in designating or describing its product and the effectiveness of its product in curing, treating, or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions, or conditions of the nasal passages and bronchial tubes hereinabove named and in unfairly disparaging similar products sold by competitors were, and are, calculated to and have a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed without any detrimental effect on the menstrual function, while products of competitors will detrimentally affect menstruation. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of the respondent as hereinabove detailed, a number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of the respondent's product with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors referred to in paragraph 6 hereof. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid and constitute unfair methods of competition within the meaning of section 5 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 18, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint upon the respondent, Forson Laboratories, Inc., a corporation charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent entered its appearance and filed its answer to the complaint, and thereafter, beginning on June 29, 1938, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by W. L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Lawrence H. Sanders, and Philip Steinman, attorneys for the respondent, before Arthur F. Thomas and Randolph Preston, trial examiners of the Commission; the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, brief in support of said complaint, and oral argument, no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts, and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Forson Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its office and principal place of business located in New York City, and is engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicament known as "Nu-Myst," and a vaporizer for the same, to jobbers and dealers in the drug trade. Respondent causes, and has caused said product, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in New York City, to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of New York and others located in various States of the United States. Respondent maintains and during all the times mentioned herein, has maintained a constant current of trade in said product, sold by it in commerce between and among various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and is in substantial competition with other firms, corporations, and individuals also engaged in the business of selling and distributing products similar to that of respondent, in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. "Nu-Myst" is a liquid composed of certain common ingredients generally prescribed by physicians for relieving conditions caused by those afflictions usually termed "colds." The carrying medium for the medicinal oils or drugs is the 87.5 percent alcohol content of the mixture, the formula of which is as follows:

Menthol.....	3.2
Camphor.....	.6
Thymol.....	.2
Oil of pine.....	7.0
Eucalyptol.....	.5
Benzyl benzoate.....	.5
Aromatics.....	.5
Alcohol.....	87.5

The product is sold in a package consisting of a container in which are a bottle of the medicament and an aluminum vaporizer, and a circular of instructions. The vaporizer is a fluid-holding receptacle attached to a device in such a manner that the receptacle may be placed over an electric light bulb. The heat from the bulb vaporizes the liquid.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said medicinal products, respondent has made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into various States of the United States, and has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals, and trade journals with a general circulation throughout the United States; has had printed and circulated to prospective customers throughout the United States, through the use of the United States mail, advertising folders, letters, and literature. In all such advertising matter the respondent has made such statements as the following:

This true, natural treatment strikes at the root of the trouble—the mucous membranes. "Nu-Myst" brings speedy relief to sufferers from colds, hay fever, rose fever, asthma, and other nasal and bronchial afflictions.

Inhibits the growth of bacteria on the mucous membranes.

The new, natural, pleasant relief for colds, coughs, hay fever, rose fever and many nasal and bronchial infections.

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements in the foregoing advertising respondent represents that its product is more than a relief from any local irritation that may be caused by the ailments therein mentioned, but is a competent and beneficial treatment for colds, rose fever, asthma, whooping cough, and other nasal or bronchial afflictions. Such representations are misleading and untrue. The diseases named, except colds, are grouped under the so-called "allergies" and the causes of "allergies" are manifold, running into a hundred or more, and since there are so many causes it is impossible for a formula such as "Nu-Myst" to bring relief from any one of these conditions. Colds may be due to bacterial invasion and there is nothing in the ingredients as disclosed by the formula, the vapor of which will destroy bacteria. While the ingredients of the mixture are commonly used for the relief of local irritations of the mucous membranes of the nose, and may be so used effectively, the mixture has no curative value. It will not cure asthma, which is a spasmodic contraction of the bronchial tubes, because there is nothing in this formula that will relieve these bronchial tube spasms; nor will it relieve whooping cough which is a germ disease, and nothing in this formula will have any effect upon the germ itself.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its product as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. As a result of this erroneous belief a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's product in preference to that of its competitors described in paragraph 1 hereof, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its said competitors, engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, products intended and used for the purposes for which respondent recommends its said product.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas and Randolph Preston, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and in opposition thereto, brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of respondent), and oral arguments by William L. Taggart, counsel for the Commission, and by Philip Steinman, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Forson Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its medicinal preparation designated "Ny-Myst," or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under that name or any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That respondent's preparation is a cure or remedy for colds, whooping cough, hay fever, rose fever, or asthma.

2. That respondent's preparation is a competent or effective treatment for, or that it will relieve, colds, whooping cough, hay fever, rose fever, or asthma, beyond such temporary relief as may be afforded by the temporary allaying of local irritation.

3. That respondent's preparation will destroy bacteria or prevent the growth of bacteria.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
MICHIGAN BEAN SHIPPERS ASSOCIATION ET AL

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3937. Complaint, Oct. 27, 1939—Decision, Apr. 11, 1940

Where a trade organization and members thereof concerned with or engaged in the growing and handling of Michigan beans, as hereinafter set forth, namely—

I. A nonprofit corporation which (1) was organized to and did perform the function of promoting general and special interests of its members and those engaged in the growing and handling of Michigan beans throughout said State, (2) constituted an instrumentality for furthering and making effective purposes and objectives of the individual members and others, (3) was successor to trade association first organized some 40 years theretofore, and (4) elevator operator and jobber members of which, and of its predecessor, had performed essential function in providing ready cash market for farmers' beans and numerous other farm commodities and in developing additional market demand and outlets for the large amount of beans grown in State in question, in which were produced 80 percent of the white pea, or "navy," beans, comprising one-third of bulk of bean crop moving in interstate commerce, and had been instrumental in keeping local growers in contact with distant buyers and consumers widely located throughout the eastern half of the United States, and, together with their association, in securing and establishing maintenance of uniform grades of Michigan beans and securing adoption thereof in the country's market, leading, substantially through such and certain other activity, to universal recognition and acceptance of such product as of highest standard and quality, and to insuring maintenance thereof on the part of growers and the trade generally, and (5) elevator operator members of which, with property investments aggregating several million dollars, furnished employment to several thousand individuals in State in question in course of performing functions necessary to prepare farmers' crop for market; and

II. Nine member concerns engaged as jobbers, or as jobbers and elevator operators, as case might be, in business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, and which, for a number of years theretofore and during period concerned, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, (1) bought beans and other farm commodities from producers and others in State in question for resale therein and in other States and Territories of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations, and, pursuant to sales thereof, shipped or caused to be shipped such commodities from various points in said State to purchasers at their respective locations within or without such State, as above indicated, and (2) bought and sold quantities of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in such State for shipment, in part, into the stream of commerce between and among the various States, etc., as above set forth, (3) individually and collectively purchased and sold, and shipped or caused to be shipped, from year to year, 80 percent of the annual crop of "navy" beans and a major portion of the barley, wheat, and other farm commodities grown therein, and shipped greater portion of such crops to purchasers without such State, and (4) prior to adoption of practices below set forth, were in active and substantial competition with one another and with other elevator men and jobbers in such State in making and seeking to make purchases and sales of such various products and commodities, and, except as below set forth, continued in such competition with each other and with other members of the industries concerned, and (5) constituted majority of elevator men and jobbers buying and selling beans in the State of Michigan—

- (a) Made up and computed daily, through offices of association in question, price for choice hand-picked white pea beans in bulk to country shippers, which, designated as an "association close," they disseminated and distributed among themselves and to the industry, press and public generally, and used as a basis or guide for making quotations and consummating sales and purchases to producers and to the "trade," i. e., vendee consumers and processors of beans, including major canning companies, chain stores and others of the United States and foreign importers, and which "association close," purportedly representing average price in bulk at which beans were being bought by jobbers from shippers in State at time "close" was issued, (1) was based in fact on bids received by association only from approved or limited number of members engaged in buying or selling, (2) did not always reflect range of prices being offered by such purchasing members over any given period of time, but only prices being paid at time of making of the report, and (3) did not always supply accurate arithmetical average of prices in question, and did not in fact represent such an average or accurately reflect such prices;
- (b) Fixed and maintained (1) differentials, margin, or spread, to be received by elevator men for function performed by them in buying beans and barley from producers and reselling same to producers and others, and (2) differentials to be received by jobbers for beans and barley, between prices paid by them to elevator men and that at which they sold said products to trade, from time to time, and (3) schedules of charges for "picking" beans or determining percent of foreign materials, culls, and other demerits in threshed beans brought to elevators by producers, and separation and removal thereof from quantities as tendered by them, and established and used uniform contract embodying terms and conditions of sale for buying and selling said product;
- (c) Adopted and maintained "scoop-shovel" rule by which they agreed to refuse to buy and sell or trade in beans or other farm commodities which had been "scoop-shoveled," and defined as "scoop-shoveler" one not equipped with proper buildings and machinery to clean beans and grains as they come from farmers' vehicles before being weighed, and who does not in every instance use such facilities before making purchases of farmers' said products, and does not maintain permanent location 8 months a year in territory in which there is regular buyer equipped with necessary machinery properly to clean, weigh, and store such products, and employed such rule to discourage use of method of processing beans to grade, through use by farmers and growers at their places of business, of portable bean picker which, invented and placed on the market, made possible machine grading to a limited degree at such places of business and, while not eliminating necessity of hand picking at the elevators where were maintained and operated necessary equipment and labor required for grading and picking beans in substantial quantities, with a not inconsiderable concentration of labor along with expensive machinery and equipment of stationary type, would, in some years, have tendency to curtail volume of business done by local elevators; and

(d) Made use of their said association as an instrumentality for establishing and maintaining rules, regulations, practices, and policies as aforesaid, and to secure adherence thereto by the members and by nonmember competitors; and

(e) Held meetings furthering such collective and cooperative activities;

With effect of restricting, restraining, and lessening competition by, between, and among themselves, and other members of bean industry in State of Michigan in interstate trade and commerce in beans, and with capacity and tendency to lower prices to producing public, farmers, and growers of beans and barley, and to prevent use of machines and of methods of marketing whereby "picking" can be done at farms and places where beans are grown:

Held, That such acts, methods, and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and had a dangerous tendency to and did hinder and prevent price competition between and among themselves in purchase and sale of said product in commerce, and tended to place in themselves power to control prices therefor in State of Michigan, and to create in them a monopoly in the sale in commerce of beans grown in such State, and unreasonably restrain commerce therein, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Lynn C. Paulson for the Commission.

Mr. William P. Smith, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Michigan Bean Shippers Association, its officers, L. W. Todd, president, R. C. Smith, vice president, L. L. Green, vice president, Asa E. Walcott, secretary-treasurer; its directors, E. H. Bueschlen, William R. Neumann, A. L. Ward; and its members, Charles Wolohan, Inc., J. P. Burroughs & Son, Hammerslag & Tinkham, Inc., Minor Walton Bean Co., Michigan Elevator Exchange, Ryon Grain Co., Stickle-Swift, Inc., Hart Brothers, Michigan Bean Co., individually and as representative members of the said Association, all hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act; and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Michigan Bean Shippers Association is a nonprofit corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Michigan (pursuant to the provisions of Act, No. 327, of the Public Acts of 1921 of the State of Michigan, known as the Michigan General Corporation Act), with its office at 401 Eddy Building, Saginaw, Mich. It was incorporated in the year 1934 by the members of the Michigan Bean Jobbers Association, its predecessor (a trade association that was first organized in 1892 and which was subsequently reorganized and incorporated in 1912). Said Michigan Bean Shippers Association has approximately 161 members of which those named herein are representative, and certain associate members not herein named. Its officers are: L. W. Todd, president; R. C. Smith, vice president; L. L. Green, vice president; and Asa E. Walcott, secretary-treasurer. Its directors are: R. C. Smith, L. L. Green, L. W. Todd, Claude H. Estee, E. H. Bueschlen, William R. Neumann, and A. L. Ward. Said association is organized for the purpose and performs the function of promoting general and special interests of its members, and constitutes an instrumentality for the furthering and making effective of the purposes and objectives of the individual members, jointly and severally.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Charles Wolohan, Inc., is a Michigan corporation with its general offices at Birch Run, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, J. P. Burroughs & Son is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at Holman & Grand Traverse, Flint, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, Hammerslag & Tinkham, Inc., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 35 Pearl Street NW., Grand Rapids, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, Minor Walton Bean Co. is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 240 Logan Street SW., Grand Rapids, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, Michigan Elevator Exchange is a Michigan corporation operating under the Michigan cooperative laws, with its principal office located at 221 North Cedar Street, East Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

Respondent, Ryon Grain Co., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 428 Mutual Building, Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, Stickle-Swift, Inc., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 1804 Olds Tower, Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

Respondent, Hart Bros. is a partnership, of which M. J. Hart is the senior partner and operating manager. Its principal office is located at 1418 S. Hamilton Street, Saginaw, Mich. Respondent, Hart Bros. is engaged in buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

Respondent Michigan Bean Co. is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 1741 North Niagara Street, Saginaw, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

The above-named respondents do not constitute the entire membership of the respondent Michigan Bean Shippers Association, but are representative members thereof. All members of the respondent Michigan Bean Shippers Association are made parties respondent herein as a class, of which those specifically named are representative of the whole. For convenience the above-named respondents and the other members of the Association of whom those named are representative will hereinafter be referred to as member respondents.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses the member respondents: (a) buy beans and other farm commodities from producers and others in the State of Michigan for resale in other States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations, and when such sales are made, ship or cause to be shipped said commodities from various points in the State of Michigan, to the purchasers thereof at their respective locations in the other States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations; (b) buy and sell quantities of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in the State of Michigan, destined to enter and flow in continuous streams of commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations.

Beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities are familiar articles of commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations, and the streams of commerce in beans, barley, wheat, and said other farm commodities between the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia and with foreign nations, are made up in substantial part from quantities of the said commodities grown in the State of Michigan.

White pea beans, commonly known as "navy" beans, make up the bulk of the bean crop flowing in interstate commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Eighty percent of the white pea beans grown in the United States are grown in the State of Michigan. In the course and conduct of their businesses the members respondents, individually and collectively, buy and sell and ship, or cause to be shipped, from year to year, 80 percent of the annual crop of this variety of beans grown in the State of Michigan and a major portion of the barley, wheat, and other farm commodities grown in that State. The greater portion of the crops of these commodities, grown from year to year in the State of Michigan, bought and sold by the member respondents, is sold and shipped or caused to be sold and shipped by them to purchasers located in ther States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations, and form part of the streams of commerce of these commodities between and among the States of the United States, its Territories, and with foreign nations.

In the aforesaid manner the member respondents are at all times engaged in commerce in beans and other farm commodities.

PAR. 4. Prior to the adoption of the practices hereinafter alleged, the member respondents were in active and substantial competition with one another and with other elevator men and jobbers located and doing business in the State of Michigan not named as respondents herein (some of whom have been members of the respondent association and others of whom have not been members of the respondent association) in making and seeking to make purchases and sales of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in such commerce, and, but for the facts hereinafter alleged, such active and substantial competition would have continued to the present time, and the said member respondents would now be in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the elevator and jobber industries.

The said respondents now constitute, and have during all of the times mentioned herein constituted, a majority of the elevator men and jobbers buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in the State of Michigan. The greater portion of the beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities grown in the State of Michigan are processed and consumed in other States of the United States in competition with beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities produced in other States of the United States and said member respondents, prior to the adoption of the practices herein alleged and referred to were in active and substantial competition with elevator men and jobbers located in other States of the United States who trade in beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities and but for the facts hereinafter alleged such competition between said member respondents and said elevator men and jobbers located in other States of the United States would have continued to be active and substantial, whereas, due to the acts and things that have been done and are being done by said member respondents, such competition is greatly diminished.

PAR. 5. Respondents, named or referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 herein, for more than 4 years last past, have cooperated, combined, conspired, and agreed, and now cooperate, combine, conspire, and agree to do many acts and things for the purpose and with the effect of suppressing, restraining, and eliminating competition in trade and commerce, described in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 herein, in beans and other farm commodities between and amongst themselves and other members of the industry in the State of Michigan and between and amongst themselves and other members of the industry in other States of the United States. Among the acts and things they have done and do through cooperation, combination, conspiracy, and agreement are the following :

1. They daily make up and compute or cause to be made up and computed, through the offices of the respondent Michigan Bean Shippers Association, a price for choice hand-picked white pea beans in bulk to country shippers, and disseminate and distribute or cause to be disseminated and distributed, among and between themselves, and to the industry generally, said price as an "association close."

From time to time the procedure for making up and computing such daily "Association closes" changes, but in the main and generally the practice is as follows: Certain of the member respondents, at an appointed time each day, report to the said respondent Association bids made by them on the basis of "paying prices for choice hand-picked white pea beans in bulk, to country shippers," and when these bids are received by the Association, said Association makes up and computes a figure or price which then becomes the "association close" for the remainder of the day during which the bids are reported and for that portion of the next day up to the time bids are similarly reported. Said made up or computed price is not a true average of the bids reported to and received by the said Association. Bids are reported to the Association only by those of its members agreed upon by the Association for such reporting. Individual bids are revealed by the Association to any regular member thereof in good standing. Each such bidder is obligated to take at least one carload of the commodity for which he has submitted a bid and bids are good for acceptance for a fixed period of time, usually until 9 a. m. of the next business day.

Member respondents use each "association close" as a basis for making quotations and consummating sales and purchases to producers and to the trade. The "trade" as used herein, and as commonly understood by respondents, is comprised of the consumers and processors of beans and other farm commodities to whom the member respondents sell and ship the beans and other farm commodities, the important classes of such "trade" being the major canning companies, the major chain stores, and others of the United States, and foreign importers.

The daily making up and computation and dissemination of an "association close" by respondents in concert, through combination, as aforesaid, has the capacity, tendency, and effect to cause, and does cause, prices for beans and other farm commodities to become established and maintained at levels favorable to the respondents and unfavorable to those from whom they buy and to whom they sell, and thereby unduly suppresses competition and restrains trade in such commodities in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

2. They have from time to time fixed and maintained differentials to be received by elevator men for the function they perform in buying beans from producers and reselling them to jobbers. They have also fixed and maintained differentials for elevator men for the function they perform in buying and reselling barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in like and similar manner.

An elevator man buys beans from producers and resells them to jobbers. The spread between the price at which he buys and the price at which he sells is known to the industry and to the respondents as a "margin" and is herein referred to as a "differential." Respondents have from time to time fixed the "margin" or "differential" by agreement, and do now fix and maintain "margins" or "differentials" in a like and similar manner.

The fixing and maintaining of "margins" and "differentials" for elevator men in the manner described herein in conjunction with the establishment and maintenance of "Association closes," forecloses all opportunity for price competition by the elevator men, and thereby tends unduly to suppress competition and create monopoly and to deprive producers of these commodities of the benefits of competition.

3. They fix and maintain from time to time, for beans and other farm commodities, "differentials" to be received by jobbers between the price paid by them, the jobbers, to elevator men, and the price they, the jobbers, sell such beans and other farm commodities to the "trade."

4. They fix and maintain schedules of charges for "picking" beans and for "docking" barley, wheat, and other farm commodities. As a part of the charges fixed and maintained, respondents keep the "pick" and the "dockage" extracted in the "picking" and "docking" processes.

"Picking" and "docking" are terms applied to the process of determining the percent of foreign materials, culls, and defective kernels in threshed beans and grains brought to elevators by producers, and the separation and removal of same from the quantities as tendered by them. They are terms having a common and recognized meaning to the respondents.

5. They have agreed to refrain from transporting beans and other farm commodities free of charge from the producers at their respective points of production to the elevator or shipping point at which the member respondents have their respective elevators and places of business.

6. They have fixed and maintained uniform storage charges for the storing of beans and other farm commodities in their respective elevators and warehouses.

The principal business of elevator operators is to buy beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities from the farmers and producers and resell them to jobbers and to the "trade," but in conjunction with this function, storage services are also performed by them for hire. It so happens that beans, barley, wheat, and some other farm commodities are not perishable and accordingly the farmers and growers often store their crops of these commodities with the elevator.

7. They have fixed and maintained uniform schedules of "drying" charges.

Member respondents through respondent Association have fixed a schedule of "drying" charges for beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities and have established and maintained a moisture and test weight table providing for uniform discounts on wheat if the grain is damaged, as smut or various foreign materials.

8. They have established and agreed to use and have used uniform contracts and terms and conditions of sale for buying and selling beans and other farm commodities. They have agreed to refrain from deviating from such terms and conditions of sale as are established by them from time to time, and they have attempted to coerce nonrespondent members to use and maintain the contracts, terms, and conditions of sale which they (the respondents) through combination, have arrived at and established and do maintain.

9. They have adopted and maintained a rule of practice known to them and referred to by them as the "scoop-shovel" rule by which they have agreed to refuse to buy and sell or trade in beans and other farm commodities which have been "scoop-shoveled." They have defined a "scoop shoveler" "as being one who is not equipped with the proper buildings and machinery for cleaning the beans and grain as they come from farmers' vehicles before they are weighed, and one who does not use such facilities in every instance before making purchase of farmers' beans and grain, and who does not maintain a permanent location at least 8 months a year in a territory in which there is a regular buyer, equipped with the necessary machinery to properly clean, weigh, and store beans and grains." They have provided by agreement that "scoop-shovelers" or firms or individuals governed in any sense by "scoop-shoveling" are not entitled to membership in the respondent Michigan Bean Shippers Association.

It has been the long-established practice in the State of Michigan for farmers and growers to haul their beans and other farm commodities to local elevators for sale. This practice is in part a result of the fact that beans must be graded and "picked" and elevators, until recently, maintained the only equipment for grading and "picking." Grading and "picking" machinery was of a stationary type which necessitated the bringing of beans to the elevators. About 1931 a portable bean picker was invented and placed upon the market by the use of which beans could be graded and "picked" at the farmers' and growers' places of business. The use of the portable bean picker obviated the necessity of bringing the beans to the local elevators for grading and "picking" and has a tendency to curtail the volume of business done by the local elevators. The "scoop-shovel" rule referred to above was designed and adopted for the purpose of discouraging the use of the portable picker and of preventing the trade of the respondent members from being diverted into other channels.

10. They have established and maintained the practice of making price quotations to the "trade" for beans uniformly, using Alma, Mich., as a base point for all price quotations.

11. They have established and maintained other rules, regulations, practices, and policies of a like and similar character.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

The effect of the establishment and maintenance of the rules, regulations, practices, and policies described in paragraph 5, subsections (1) to (11), inclusive, of this complaint, pursuant to combination, conspiracy, and agreement as hereinabove alleged has been and is to suppress, eliminate, and restrain competition between and amongst the respondents in their respective businesses.

Said member respondents use the Michigan Bean Shippers Association as an instrumentality for establishing and maintaining the rules, regulations, practices, and policies aforesaid and also hold meetings and engage in other collective and cooperative activities to the same end, and collectively and collusively at all times referred to herein have sought to induce, persuade, and coerce, and have induced, persuaded, and coerced all those engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in the State of Michigan to adhere to the said rules, regulations, and practices.

PAR. 6. Said cooperation, agreement, combination, and conspiracy and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as hereinabove alleged, have had and do have the effect of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining the sale of said beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in trade and commerce between, among, in and with the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, foreign nations, and Territories of the United States; of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining trade and commerce in said beans and other farm commodities in said commerce; of substantially enhancing prices to the consuming public and maintaining prices at artificial levels and otherwise depriving the public of the benefits that would flow from normal competition among and between the member respondents in said commerce; of substantially lowering prices to the producing public, the farmers and growers, of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities and particularly those who are obliged to sell their crops of these commodities to the said member respondents; of preventing the growth and development of new methods of marketing beans and of the use of marketing machinery and new methods of marketing whereby "picking" can be done at the farms and places where beans are grown; of eliminating competition, with the tendency and capacity of creating a monopoly in the marketing of said beans and other farm commodities in said commerce.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of October 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 18, 1939, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by respondents by their attorney, William P. Smith, and William T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Michigan Bean Shippers Association is a nonprofit corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Michigan (pursuant to the provisions of Act, No. 327, of the Public Acts of 1931 of the State of Michigan, known as the Michigan General Corporation Act), with its office at 401 Eddy Building, Saginaw, Mich. It was incorporated in the year 1934 by the members of the Michigan Bean Jobbers Association, its predecessor (a trade association that was first organized in 1892 and which was subsequently reorganized and incorporated in 1913). At the time of the issuance of the complaint, October 27, 1939, said Michigan Bean Shippers Association had approximately 161 members of which those named herein are representative, and certain associate members not herein named. Its officers then were: L. W. Todd, president; E. H. Bueschlen, vice president; C. H. Estee, vice president; and Asa E. Walcott, secretary-treasurer. Its directors then were: L. D. Cline, L. W. Tinkham, L. W. Todd, Claude H. Estee, E. H. Bueschlen, William R. Neumann, and J. G. Glaser. Said Association was organized for the purpose and has performed the function of promoting general and special interests of its members and, as hereinafter set forth those engaged in the growing and handling of Michigan beans throughout the State of Michigan. During all times referred to in the complaint, it constituted an instrumentality for the furthering and making effective of the purposes and objectives of the individual members and others, jointly and severally.

PAR. 2. Since 1892, and during all times referred to in the complaint (for more than 4 years prior to October 27, 1939), the elevator operator and jobber members of the Michigan Bean Shippers Association, and of its predecessor, the Michigan Bean Jobbers Association, have performed an essential function in providing a ready cash market for the farmers' beans and numerous other farm commodities, and have particularly sought to develop additional market demand and outlets for the large amount of beans grown in the State of Michigan. They have been instrumental in keeping the local growers in contact with the distant buyers and consumers who are widely located throughout the eastern half of the United States. The said elevator operators have a substantial business property investment aggregating several million dollars, and furnish employment to several thousand individuals in Michigan in the course of performing the functions necessary to prepare the farmers' crop for marketing. The Association and its members have been active and instrumental in securing the establishment and maintenance of uniform grades of Michigan beans and securing their adoption in the markets of the country. By this activity over many years, they have done much to secure universal recognition and acceptance of Michigan beans as being of the highest standard and quality. Compulsory inspection of the Michigan "navy" beans, instituted in 1938, which was effectuated through the active assistance and cooperation of the said Association with the Michigan State Department of Agriculture, has tended to insure the maintenance of this high quality both on the part of the growers and the "trade" generally.

PAR. 3. (a) Respondent, Charles Wolohan, Inc., is a Michigan corporation with its general offices at Birch Run, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(b) Respondent, J. P. Burroughs & Son, is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at Holman and Grand Traverse, Flint, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(c) Respondent Hammerslag & Tinkham, Inc., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 35 Pearl Street NW., Grand Rapids, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(d) Respondent, Minor Walton Bean Co., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 240 Logan Street SW., Grand Rapids, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(e) Respondent, Michigan Elevator Exchange, is a Michigan corporation operating under the Michigan Cooperative Laws, with its principal office located at 221 North Cedar Street, East Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

(f) Respondent, Ryon Grain Co., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 428 Mutual Building, Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(g) Respondent, Stickle-Swift, Inc., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 1804 Olds Tower, Lansing, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber.

(h) Respondent, Hart Bros., is a partnership, of which M. J. Hart is the senior partner and operating manager. Its principal office is located at 1418 South Hamilton Street, Saginaw, Mich. Respondent, Hart Bros., is engaged in buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

(i) Respondent, Michigan Bean Co., is a Michigan corporation, with its principal office located at 1741 North Niagara Street, Saginaw, Mich. It is, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and selling beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities, as a jobber and elevator operator.

PAR. 4. (a) In the course and conduct of their respective businesses during more than 4 years prior to the issuance of the complaint (that is, for more than 4 years prior to October 27, 1939), the member respondents (1) bought beans and other farm commodities from producers and others in the State of Michigan for resale in that State, in other States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations, and when such sales were made, shipped, or caused to be shipped said commodities from various points in the State of Michigan to the purchasers thereof at their respective locations in that State or in the other States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations; (2) bought and sold quantities of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in the State of Michigan, some of which were destined to enter and flow in continuous streams of commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and foreign nations.

(b) Barley, wheat, and other farm commodities are familiar articles of commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations, and the streams of commerce in barley, wheat, and said other farm commodities between the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations, are and were during all times referred to in the complaint made up in part from quantities of the said commodities grown in the State of Michigan.

(c) White pea beans, commonly known as "navy" beans, make up approximately one-third of the bulk of the bean crop flowing in the interstate commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Eighty percent of the white pea beans grown in the United States are grown in the State of Michigan. In the course and conduct of their businesses the member respondents, individually and collectively, buy and sell and ship, or cause to be shipped, from year to year, 80 percent of the annual crop of this variety of beans grown in the State of Michigan and a major portion of the barley, wheat, and other farm commodities grown in that State. The greater portion of the crops of these commodities, grown from year to year in the State of Michigan, bought and sold by the member respondents, is sold and shipped or caused to be sold and shipped by them to purchasers located in other States of the United States, the Territories thereof, the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations, and form part of the streams of commerce of these commodities between and among the States of the United States, its Territories, and with foreign nations.

(d) In the aforesaid manner the member respondents are and were at all times referred to in the complaint (that is, for more than 4 years prior to October 27, 1939), engaged in interstate commerce in beans and other farm commodities.

(e) Beans purchased by elevator operator member respondents from growers cannot enter into commerce or into the consumer market until they have been processed to the grades established by the Michigan State Department of Agriculture, and inspected in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by said department.

PAR. 5. (a) Prior to the adoption of the practices hereinafter found, the member respondents were in active and substantial competition with one another and with other elevator men and jobbers located and doing business in the State of Michigan not named as respondents herein (some of whom have been members of the respondent Association and others of whom have not been members of the respondent Association) in making and seeking to make purchases and sales of beans, barley, wheat, and other farm commodities in such commerce, and, except as hereinafter found, such active and substantial competition has continued to the present time, and the said member respondents are now in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the elevator and jobber industries.

(b) The said respondents now constitute, and during all of the times mentioned in the complaint have constituted, a majority of the elevator men and jobbers buying and selling beans in the State of Michigan.

PAR. 6. Respondents, named or referred to herein, for more than four years immediately prior to the issuance of the complaint (October 27, 1939) have concertedly through cooperation and agreement:

(a) Daily made up and computed or caused to be made up and computed, through the offices of the respondent Michigan Bean Shippers Association, a price for choice hand-picked white pea beans in bulk to country shippers, and disseminated and distributed or caused to be disseminated and distributed, among and between themselves, and to the industry, the press, and public, generally, said price as an "association close."

Said "association closes" purported to be the average price in bulk at which beans were being bought by jobbers from shippers in the State of Michigan at the time the "association close" was issued. They were not the average of such prices, nor did they accurately reflect such prices, for at least three reasons, to wit, one, under the method used in computing the said "association closes" bids were received by the Association only from those of its members approved by the Board of Directors of the Association for such reporting with the result that only a limited number of the individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in buying and selling beans in the State of Michigan reported to the Association; two, the reports submitted to the Association by the members who did report did not always reflect the range of prices being paid by them over any given period of time, but did only reflect the price they were paying at the time of the making of the report; three, the "association close" was determined from the prices reported but was not always an accurate arithmetic average of such prices.

Member respondents used each "association close" as a basis or guide for making quotations and consummating sales and purchases to producers and to the "trade." The "trade" as used herein, and as commonly understood by respondents, is comprised of the consumers and processors of beans to whom the member respondents sell and ship the beans, the important classes of such "trade" being the major canning companies, the major chain stores, and others of the United States, and foreign importers.

(b) From time to time fixed and maintained differentials to be received by elevator men for the function they perform in buying beans and barley from producers and reselling them to jobbers and others.

An elevator man buys beans from producers and resells them to jobbers and others. The spread between the price at which he buys and the price at which he sells is known to the industry and to the respondents as a "margin" and is herein referred to as a "differential."

(c) Fixed and maintained from time to time, for beans and barley "differentials" to be received by jobbers between the price paid by them, the jobbers, to elevator men, and the price they, the jobbers, sell such beans and barley to the "trade."

(d) Fixed and maintained schedules of charges for "picking" beans.

"Picking" is a term applied to the process of determining the percent of foreign materials, culls, and other demerits in threshed beans brought to elevators by producers, and the separation and removal of same from the quantities as tendered by them. It is recognized by respondents as a term having this meaning.

(e) Established and used a uniform contract embodying terms and conditions of sale for buying and selling beans.

(f) Adopted and maintained a rule of practice known to them and referred to by them as the "scoop-shovel" rule by which they agreed to refuse to buy and sell or trade in beans and other farm commodities which had been "scoop-shoveled." They defined a "scoop shoveler" "as being one who is not equipped with the proper buildings and machinery for cleaning the beans and grain as they come from farmers' vehicles before they are weighed, and one who does not use such facilities in every instance before making purchases of farmers' beans and grain, and who does not maintain a permanent location at least eight months a year in a territory in which there is a regular buyer, equipped with the necessary machinery to properly clean, weigh and store beans and grains." The bylaws of the Michigan Bean Shippers Association provided that "scoop-shovelers" or firms or individuals governed in any sense by "scoop-shoveling" were not entitled to membership in the respondent Association.

It has been the long-established practice for farmers and growers to haul their beans and other farm commodities to the local elevators for sale. In the State of Michigan, this practice as applied to beans is in part a result of the fact that they must be graded and "picked" and elevators maintain and operate the necessary equipment and labor required for grading and "picking" beans in substantial quantities.

These operations by the elevators furnish a not-inconsiderable amount of employment, and this concentration of available labor together with the expensive machinery and equipment which was of a stationary type, necessitated the bringing of the beans to the elevators.

Some years ago a portable bean picker was invented and placed on the market, by the use of which beans could be machine graded to a limited degree at the farmers' and growers' place of business. The use of this device, while not eliminating the necessity of hand-picking, did in some years have a tendency to curtail the volume of business done by the local elevators, and the "scoop-shovel" rule referred to above was applied to discourage the use of that method of processing the beans to grade.

(g) Said member respondents used the Michigan Bean Shippers Association as an instrumentality for establishing and maintaining the rules, regulations, practices, and policies as aforesaid and to secure adherence thereto by the said member respondents and by non-member competitors, and have also held meetings furthering such collective and cooperative activities.

PAR. 7. The doing and performing of the acts, practices, and methods as set forth in paragraph 6, (a) to (g) inclusive, hereof, had the capacity and tendency unduly to suppress, restrain, and lessen competition, and has restricted, restrained, and lessened competition, by, between and among the said respondents, and between and among the said respondents and other members of the bean industry in the State of Michigan, in interstate trade and commerce in beans; and have had the capacity and tendency to lower prices to the producing public, the farmers and growers of beans and barley, and have tended to prevent the use of machines and of methods of marketing whereby "picking" can be done at the farms and places where beans are grown.

PAR. 8. Neither at the present time nor at the issuance of the complaint herein were R. C. Smith, L. L. Green, or A. L. Ward, either officers or directors of the Michigan Bean Shippers Association, but these individuals were, at both of such times, officers of respondent members which are either named in the complaint or referred to as the class of which those named are representative.

CONCLUSION

The acts, methods, and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented, price competition between and among respondents in the purchase and sale of beans and barley in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have tended to place in respondents the power to control prices for beans and barley grown in the State of Michigan; have tended to create in the respondents a monopoly in the sale in commerce of beans grown in the State of Michigan; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in beans, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein by their attorney, W. P. Smith, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceedings, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Michigan Bean Shippers' Association, a nonprofit corporation, its officers, L. W. Todd, president, Asa E. Walcott, secretary-treasurer; its directors, Claude H. Estee, E. H. Bueschlen, William R. Neumann, and its members, Charles Wolohan, Inc., J. P. Burroughs & Son, Hammerslag & Tinkham, Inc., Minor Walton Bean Co., Michigan Elevator Exchange, Ryon Grain Co., Stickle-Swift, Inc., Hart Brothers, Michigan Bean Co., individually and as representative members of said Association, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of beans or barely in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from concertedly, through cooperation and agreement:

1. Establishing, making up or computing, or causing to be established, made up or computed, or publishing or disseminating, or causing to be published or disseminated, from time to time or at any time, through the offices of the Michigan Bean Shippers' Association, or any other central agency, or otherwise, a price, bid, quotation or "close" for beans: Provided, That this shall not prohibit collection and dissemination of prices paid or bids or quotations made in past and closed transactions, nor the publishing and disseminating of accurate and correct reports showing the range of prices paid or received in past and closed transactions.

2. Making any report or reports, or representation to the Michigan Bean Shippers' Association, or any other central agency, of price or prices, bid or bids, paid or made for beans grown in the State of Michigan, which is or are not accurate, true, and correct.

3. Fixing and maintaining the differential, charge or spread, or differentials, charges or spreads to be made or received for the function or functions performed by elevator men and/or jobbers in buying and selling beans or barley in commerce.

4. Fixing and maintaining schedules of charges, and charges for separating and removing foreign materials, culls, and other demerits from beans.

5. Adopting and maintaining any rule or rules of practice, regulation or measure, which tends to prevent the use of any machine, device or method for cleaning, grading, and processing beans, unless said machine, device or method is injurious and detrimental to the welfare of the bean industry of the State of Michigan.

6. Establishing and using a uniform contract embodying terms and conditions of sale for buying and selling beans.

Order

30 F. T. C.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to R. C. Smith, L. L. Green, and A. L. Ward, as officers and/or directors of the respondent, Michigan Bean Shippers Association.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3910. Complaint, Oct. 5, 1939—Decision, Apr. 12, 1940

Where a corporation and four individuals who were officers thereof and formulated, directed, dictated, and controlled all of its acts, policies, and practices, as below set forth, engaged in sale and distribution of cosmetics, shaving and dental creams, drug and household sundries, pen and pencil sets, and various other articles of merchandise, and of push cards and punchboards to purchasers in various of the States and in the District of Columbia—

(a) Sold and distributed certain assortments of their merchandise together with push cards and punchboards which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which such merchandise might be distributed to ultimate consumers or purchasers thereof wholly by lot or chance under variety of plans and including schemes by which customer received for 5 cents paid specified articles of merchandise or nothing other than privilege of making push or punch in accordance with success or failure in securing from card or board certain specified numbers, or under similar schemes dependent upon explanatory legends placed on cards or boards by dealer purchasers thereof in case of devices arranged for such purpose; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale and distribution of such merchandise as exposed, offered and sold by retail dealer purchasers thereof in accordance with such sales plan or method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure such articles at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any sales plan or method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of such merchandise were attracted by their sales plan or method because of the element of chance involved therein and above described, and were thereby induced to purchase their merchandise in preference to like and similar products offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or similar sales plan or method and with capacity and tendency to divert unfairly to them trade from their competitors aforesaid and deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in merchandise in question;

Syllabus

- (b) Sold and distributed to dealers many kinds of push cards and punchboards involving chance or lottery feature in sale and distribution of various specified articles of merchandise by dealer purchasers of said cards and boards, who sold and distributed candy, cigarettes, clocks, and various other articles through use of such devices, packed and assembled therewith and in accordance with explanatory legends set forth on devices in question as bought by them and under or pursuant to which legend and plan purchasers securing lucky or winning numbers received articles, the prices of which were much less than normal retail prices thereof, and purchasers obtaining numbers not so specified received nothing other than privilege of making push or punch from card or board, or in accordance with such legend or plan as dealer purchasers placed on said devices and involving chance or lottery feature as hereinabove described; and in accordance with which legends and schemes, retail dealers as direct or indirect purchasers of said assortments as arranged as aforesaid set forth, exposed same to purchasing public and sold and distributed articles in question by means of such push cards or punchboards and in accordance with particular sales plan thereon displayed involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of such merchandise were induced to deal, use or purchase same from dealers selling or distributing such products by means of their aforesaid push cards and punchboards and because of lottery features involved therewith and inherent therein, in competition with many who, under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with sale or distribution of their merchandise such devices, and faced with alternative of consenting to use thereof or suffering loss of substantial trade, do not sell and distribute their products by means of such push cards, punchboards, or similar devices because of element of chance or lottery features involved therein, and as involving practices are contrary to public policy of the United States Government, and refrain from supplying to or placing in the hands of others such or similar devices for use in connection with sale and distribution of their merchandise to general public by lot or chance, and with result further of teaching and encouraging gambling among members of public and supplying to and placing in hands of others means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale and distribution of their merchandise; all to the injury of the public:

- Held*, (1) That such acts and practices of said corporation and individuals in selling and distributing their assortments of merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein; and
- (2) That such acts and practices in selling and distributing said devices, separate and apart from other merchandise, to dealers for use in sale and distribution of said dealers' products, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair acts and practices in commerce.

Complaint

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Nathan Gross, of New York City, for respondents.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., a corporation, and David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger, and Walter Jacoby, individually and as officers of Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 901 Broadway, New York, N. Y., and a branch store located at 87 Orchard Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents, David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger, and Walter Jacoby are the president, vice president, treasurer, secretary, and assistant secretary, respectively, of corporate respondent Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc. The individual respondents have their principal place of business at the same address as the corporate respondent, and said respondents formulate, direct, dictate, and control all of the acts, policies and practices of the corporate respondent, as hereinafter described. The aforesaid corporation is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics, shaving and dental creams, drug and household sundries, perfumes, notions, pen and pencil sets, comb and brush sets, billfolds, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are now and for some time last past have been in competition with other individuals and corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to dealers certain assortments of their merchandise, together with push cards and punchboards, which said push cards and punchboards involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is, or may be, distributed to the ultimate consumers or purchasers thereof wholly by lot or chance.

Some of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the upper portions of the faces thereof instructions or legends showing the sales plan or method by which said articles of merchandise are to be sold or distributed to the purchasing public. Others of said push cards and punchboards have blank spaces at the tops of the faces thereof upon which blank spaces the purchasers of said cards and boards place instructions or legends of similar import and meaning. Sales are generally 5 cents each and said push cards and punchboards have a number of partially perforated disks or holes, and each purchaser is entitled to a push or punch from said push card or punchboard, and when a push or punch is made, a disk or printed slip is separated and a number disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to specified articles of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondents' said assortments of said merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices, either directly or indirectly, from respondents, expose the same to the purchasing public and sell or distribute said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method described in paragraph 2 hereof. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale or distribution of said merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above described, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their said merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of such sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute like or similar merchandise in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or sales plan, or any sales plan or method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise are attracted by respondents' said sales plan or method because of the element of chance involved therein, as hereinabove alleged, and are thereby induced to purchase respondents' said merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondents' said competitors who do not use the same or a similar sales plan or method. The use of said sales plan or method by respondents has the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to respondents trade from their competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar sales plan or method and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said merchandise.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 901 Broadway, New York, N. Y., and a branch store located at 87 Orchard Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents, David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger and Walter Jacoby are the president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary, and assistant secretary, respectively, of corporate respondent, Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc. The individual respondents have their principal place of business at the same address as the corporate respondent, and said respondents formulate, direct, dictate, and control all of the acts, policies, and practices of the corporate respondent, as hereinafter described. The aforesaid corporation is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such push card and punchboard devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents have sold and distributed to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by said dealers in making sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. Respondents have sold and distributed many kinds of said push cards and punchboards, but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise, and vary only in detail. The majority of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sales on said push card and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device, but each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, and when a push or punch is made a disc or printed slip is separated and a number disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to articles of merchandise. Persons securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise at prices which are much less than the normal retail prices of said articles of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Dealers purchasing said punchboards or push cards without said printed instructions or legends thereon place printed instructions or legends of similar import and meaning on the faces of said push cards or punchboards on the blank space provided therefor. The said legends or instructions placed on the faces of said devices by said dealers involve the same chance or lottery features as those legends or instructions placed or printed on the faces of the others of said devices by respondents.

PAR. 3. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy, cigarettes, clocks, razors, clothing, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia have purchased respondents' said push card and punchboard devices, and have packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of said merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased such assortments, either directly or indirectly, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of merchandise by means of said push cards or punchboards in accordance with the sales plan as described in paragraph 2 hereof. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise have been induced to deal with or purchase said merchandise from dealers selling or distributing the same by means of respondents' said push cards and punchboards because of the lottery features involved therewith and inherent thereto. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices or other similar devices which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise, or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell and distribute their said merchandise by means of push card or punchboard devices or similar devices because of the element of chance or lottery features involved therein and because such practices are contrary to public policy of the Government of the United States and such competitors refrain from supplying to or placing in the hands of others such push card or punchboard devices or any other similar devices to be used in connection with the sale and distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by said dealers of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of their merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

The sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards by respondents as hereinabove alleged teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public and supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of their said merchandise, all to the injury of the public.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 5, 1939, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., a corporation, and David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger and Walter Jacoby, individually and as officers of Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 901 Broadway, New York, N. Y., and a branch store located at 87 Orchard Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents, David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger and Walter Jacoby, are the president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary, and assistant secretary, respectively, of corporate respondent Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc. The individual respondents have their principal place of business at the same address as the corporate respondent, and said respondents formulate, direct, dictate, and control all of the acts, policies and practices of the corporate respondent as hereinafter described. The aforesaid corporation is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics, shaving and dental creams, drug and household sundries, perfumes, notions, pen and pencil sets, comb and brush sets, billfolds, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are now and for some time last past have been in competition with other individuals and corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to dealers certain assortments of their merchandise, together with push cards and punchboards, which said push cards and punchboards involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is, or may be, distributed to the ultimate consumers or purchasers thereof wholly by lot or chance.

Some of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the upper portions of the faces thereof instructions or legends showing the sales plan or method by which said articles of merchandise are to be sold or distributed to the purchasing public. Others of said push cards and punchboards have blank spaces at the tops of the faces thereof upon which blank spaces the purchasers of said cards and boards place instructions or legends of similar import and meaning. Sales are generally 5 cents each and said push cards and punchboards have a number of partially perforated discs or holes, and each purchaser is entitled to a push or punch from said card or punchboard, and when a push or punch is made, a disc or printed slip is separated and a number disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to specified articles of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondents' said assortments of said merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices, either directly or indirectly, from respondents, expose the same to the purchasing public and sell or distribute said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method described in paragraph 2 hereof. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale or distribution of said merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above described, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their said merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of such sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute like or similar merchandise in competition with respondents, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or sales plan, or any sales plan or method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise are attracted by respondents' said sales plan or method because of the element of chance involved therein, as hereinabove described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondents' said merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondents' said competitors who do not use the same or a similar sales plan or method. The use of said sales plan or method by respondents has the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to respondents trade from their competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar sales plan or method and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said merchandise.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, the aforesaid corporation is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards separate and apart from any other merchandise to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such push card and punchboard devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 6 hereof, respondents have sold and distributed to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by said dealers in making sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. Respondents have sold and distributed many kinds of said push cards and punchboards, but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise, and vary only in detail. The majority of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sale on said push cards and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device, but each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, and when a push or punch is made a disc or printed slip is separated and a number disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to articles of merchandise. Persons securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise at prices which are much less than the normal retail pricess of said articles of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Dealers purchasing said punchboards or push cards without said printed instructions or legends thereon place printed instructions or legends of similar import and meaning on the faces of said push cards or punchboards on the blank space provided therefor. The said legends or instructions placed on the faces of said devices by said dealers involve the same chance or lottery features as those legends or instructions placed or printed on the faces of the others of said devices by respondents.

PAR. 8. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy, cigarettes, clocks, razors, clothing, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia have purchased respondents' said push card and punchboard devices and have packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of said merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased such assortments, either directly or indirectly, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of merchandise by means of said push cards or punchboards in accordance with the sales plan as described in paragraph 7 hereof. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise have been induced to deal with or purchase said merchandise from dealers selling or distributing the same by means of respondents' said push cards and punchboards because of the lottery features involved therewith and inherent thereto. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices or other similar devices which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise, or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell and distribute their said merchandise by means of push card or punchboard devices or similar devices because of the element of chance or lottery features involved therein and because such practices are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States and such competitors refrain from supplying to or placing in the hands of others such push card or punchboard devices or any other similar devices to be used in connection with the sale and distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by lot or chance.

PAR. 9. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner described in paragraphs 7 and 8 hereof involve a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by said dealers of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of their merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

The sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards by respondents as hereinabove described teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public and supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of their said merchandise, all to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents in selling and distributing their said assortments of merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and, the aforesaid acts and practices of respondents in selling and distributing said push card and punchboard devices, separate and apart from any other merchandise, to dealers for use in the sale and distribution of said dealers' merchandise, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Mills Sales Co., of New York, Inc. a corporation, its officers, and David Jacoby, Evelyn Jacoby, Joseph Jacoby, Estelle J. Kruger, and Walter Jacoby, individually and as officers of said Mills Sales Co. of New York, Inc., its and their respective representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cosmetics, shaving and dental creams, drug and household sundries, perfumes, notions, pen and pencil sets, comb and brush sets, billfolds, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, which are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

CURTICE BROTHERS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSECS. (a) and (d) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY SEC. 1 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3381. Complaint, Apr. 16, 1938—Decision, Apr. 15, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in packing, offering, selling, and distributing fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products to various types of food distributors, and, as thus engaged, in using, for future orders for goods to be shipped when harvested and packed, price lists R, A, and S, use of which, in selling at various prices therein listed, it did not make known to all customers, and which were respectively designated for customers who placed orders for less than 300 cases of its products, for those who placed minimum orders for 300 cases thereof for shipment in quantities of not less than 50, and for those who placed minimum orders for 1,000 cases for shipment in quantities of not less than 250, with A prices ranging from 2.5 percent to 8.3 percent, and with S prices ranging from 5.1 percent to 16.6 percent, lower than the prices at which its said products were sold through use of R list—

- (a) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers of products of like grade and quality sold by it in interstate commerce for use, consumption and resale, through selling its products to some of its customers at price fixed or determined by use of R, A, or S price lists, while selling products of like grade and quality to other customers competitively engaged therewith in use, consumption or resale of such products at prices fixed or determined by use of either of the other said lists; and
- (b) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers of its products of like grade and quality sold by it as above set forth, through selling its products at prices specified by said S list to customers who did not take required 1,000 minimum cases;

With the result that the effect of such discriminations in prices made by it as above set forth might be substantially to lessen competition and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition (1) between it and its competitors in the packing, sale and distribution of fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products; and (2) in the use, consumption, and resale of such products, between some of customers receiving the lower prices and some of the customers competitively engaged with former receiving such lower prices, and who deal in products in question and do not receive said prices, and with result that effect of such discriminations might also tend to create a monopoly in it in said line of commerce:

Held, That such corporation, under facts and circumstances set forth, discriminated in price in sale of its products between different purchasers in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

30 F. T. C.

Where such corporation, engaged as aforesaid—

Discriminated between different purchasers of its canned fruits, vegetables and vegetable products by paying, granting, and contracting to pay certain sums of money to and for the benefit of some of its customers, in consideration for advertising services furnished by them in connection with sale or offer of its said products, without making such payments or advertising allowances available on proportionally equal terms to all of its customers competing in sale and distribution thereof:

Held, That the granting to favored customers of advertising allowances without making same available to competing customers on proportionally equal terms, constituted violation by corporation of subsection (d) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John T. Haslett for the Commission.

Goodwin, Nixon, Hargrave, Middleton & Devany, of Rochester, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended by an act approved June 19, 1936, entitled, "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes" (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Curtice Brothers Co., a corporation, is violating and has been violating the provisions of the said Clayton Act as amended, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Curtice Brothers Co. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 20 Curtice Street, Rochester, N. Y. Said respondent operates and maintains packing plants at Rochester, Bergen, Mount Morris, and Wilson, all in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent corporation is now, and has been since prior to June 19, 1936, engaged in the business of packing and offering for sale, selling, and distributing fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products. Respondent sells said products to every type of food distributor, jobber, corporate chain, voluntary chain, and independent retailer. Respondent sells and distributes said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and, preliminary to or as a result of such sales, causes such products to be shipped and transported from the places of origin of shipment to the purchasers thereof who are located in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment, and there is, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a continuous current of trade and commerce in said products across State lines between respondent's plants or factories and the purchasers of such commodities. Said products are sold and distributed for use, consumption, and resale within the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and during the time herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of packing, selling, and distributing fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid since June 19, 1936, respondent has been, and is now, discriminating in price between different purchasers buying such products of like grades and qualities so sold by the respondent in interstate commerce for use, consumption and resale, by giving and allowing some of its said purchasers of such products lower prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other in the resale of said products within the United States. Said discriminations in price are brought about by the following practice and policy pursued by respondent to wit:

Respondent sells its products under three different price lists which price lists are designated by the following letters: R, A, and S. Customers in order to purchase respondent's products at the prices under the S classification must place a minimum order for 1,000 cases for shipment in quantities of not less than 250 cases. Customers in order to purchase respondent's products at the prices under the A classification are required to place a minimum order for 300 cases for shipment in quantities of not less than 50 cases. All other customers purchase respondent's products under the R classification. The prices at which respondent's products are sold under the A classification are lower by from 2.5 percent to 8.3 percent than the prices at which said products are sold under the R classification; and the prices at which said products are sold under the S classification are lower by from 5.1 percent to 16.6 percent than the prices at which said products are sold under the R classification. The differentials in price at which said products are sold are not constant and not only vary between different commodities, but also as between different sizes of the same commodity.

Said respondent has in some instances sold its products at prices under the S classification to customers who do not take the required shipments as designated for said classification.

Respondent does not make known to all its customers that it sells its products at the prices set forth in the various classifications, and, as a result thereof, many customers purchase respondent's products either under the A or R classification, whereas if they had known of other or more favorable prices they would have purchased sufficient quantities to entitle them to said favorable prices.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, respondent, contrary to the provisions of subsection 2 (d) of section 1 of said act of Congress, Public, 692, is now, and since June 19, 1936, has been, discriminating between different purchasers of the said products, by paying, or contracting to pay, certain sums of money to, or for the benefit of, certain of its customers, in consideration for advertising services furnished by said customers in connection with the sale, or offering for sale, of respondent's said products, without making such payments or advertising allowances available on proportionately equal terms to all of their said customers competing in the sale and distribution of their said products.

PAR. 6. The general effect of said discriminations in price so made by respondent as above set forth has been, or may be, substantially to lessen competition and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between the respondent and its competitors in the packing, sale, and distribution of fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products and also has been or may be substantially to lessen competition and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the resale of such products between some of the favored purchasers of such products and some of the competitive customers dealing in said products not receiving such favorable prices. The effect of said discriminations in price also has been, or may be, to tend to create a monopoly in respondent in said line of commerce and to tend to create a monopoly in the said favored purchasers receiving such discriminatory prices in the resale of said products in the various localities or trade territories in the United States in which such purchasers respectively are engaged in business.

PAR. 7. The foregoing alleged acts and practices of said respondent are violations of subsection 2 (a) and 2 (d) of section 1 of said act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes" approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission, on April 16, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the party respondent named in the caption hereof charging respondent with violating the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of said act as amended.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, a stipulation was entered into between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and counsel for the respondent, containing a statement of certain facts in this proceeding. Thereafter the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the stipulation and the substitute answer, brief and oral argument of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Curtice Brothers Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 20 Curtice Street, Rochester, N. Y. The respondent operates and maintains packing plants at Rochester, Bergen, Mount Morris, and Wilson, all in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and has been since June 19, 1936, engaged in the business of packing, offering for sale, selling, and distributing fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products. Said products are sold to the various types of food distributors. The respondent sells and distributes such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and, preliminary to or as a result of such sales, causes such products to be shipped and transported from the State of origin of shipment to the purchasers thereof who are located in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment, and there is, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a continuous current of trade and commerce in fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products across State lines between respondent's plants or factories and purchasers of such products. Said products are sold and distributed by the respondent for use, consumption, and resale within the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent is now, and has been at all times since June 19, 1936, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of packing, selling, and distributing fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of the business engaged in by the respondent, the respondent has used three different price lists, which price lists were and are designated by the letters R, A, and S. The S price list is designated for those customers who place a minimum order for 1,000 cases of the respondent's products for shipment in quantities of not less than 250 cases. The A price list is designated for those customers who place a minimum order for 300 cases of the respondent's products for shipment in quantities of not less than 50 cases. The R price list is designated for customers who place orders for less than 300 cases of the respondent's products. The prices at which respondent's products were and are sold by use of the A price list were and are lower by from 2.5 percent to 8.3 percent than the prices at which said products were and are sold by the use of the R price list, and the prices at which said products were and are sold by the use of the S price list were and are lower by from 5.1 percent to 16.6 percent than the prices at which said products were and are sold by the use of the R price list.

The respondent sold its products to some of its customers at a price fixed by or determined by the use of one of the price lists designated by the letters R, A, or S, while selling products of like grade and quantity to other customers competitively engaged with such customers in the use, consumption or resale of such products at a price fixed by or determined by the use of either of the other price lists.

The respondent sold its products at prices specified by the S price list to some customers who did not take the required minimum number of 1,000 cases of respondent's products.

The sales, as set forth above, so made by the respondent have resulted and do result in discriminations in price between competing purchasers of products of like grade and quality sold by the respondent in interstate commerce for use, consumption, and resale.

PAR. 5. In practice the respondent has confined its sales made by the use of the price lists referred to as R, A, and S, and set out more particularly in paragraph 4 hereof, to "future orders" for goods to be shipped when harvested and packed.

PAR. 6. Said respondent does not make known to all customers that it sells its products at the various prices set forth in the several price lists.

PAR. 7. The effect of said discriminations in prices so made by respondent as above set forth may be substantially to lessen competition and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition between the respondent and its competitors in the packing, sale, and distribution of fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products, and also may be substantially to lessen competition and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the use, consumption, and resale of such products between some of the customers receiving the lower prices and some of the customers competitively engaged with those customers receiving such lower prices and who deal in said products and who do not receive such lower prices. The effect of said discriminations in price also may tend to create a monopoly in respondent in said line of commerce.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of its business as heretofore described respondent is now, and since June 19, 1936, has been discriminating between different purchasers of its canned fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products by paying, granting, and contracting to pay certain sums of money to and for the benefit of some of its customers in consideration for advertising services furnished by said customers in connection with the sale or offering for sale of respondent's said products without making such payments or advertising allowances available on proportionally equal terms to all of its customers competing in the sale and distribution of its products.

CONCLUSION

Under the facts and circumstances as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, the Commission concludes that the respondent, Curtice Brothers Co., has discriminated in price in the sale of its products between different purchasers in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

30 F. T. C.

The Commission further concludes that the respondent, Curtice Brothers Co., has granted to favored customers advertising allowances without making such allowances available to competing customers on proportionally equal terms in violation of subsection (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the stipulation as to certain facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and the substitute answer filed herein on April 8, 1940, by the respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusions herein, which findings and conclusions are hereby made a part hereof, and the Commission having concluded that said respondent has violated the provisions of "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Curtice Brothers Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale of canned fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products sold for use, consumption, or resale within the United States or any Territory thereof or the District of Columbia or any insular possession or other place under the jurisdiction of the United States where either or any of the sales thereof are in commerce, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From selling canned fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products to some customers at a price fixed by or determined by the use of, one of the price lists designated by the letter R, A, or S, referred to in paragraph 4 of the findings as to the facts herein, while selling products of like grade and quality to other customers competitively engaged with such customers in the use, consumption or resale of such products at a price fixed by or determined by the use of either of the other of said price lists.
2. From continuing or resuming the discriminations in price referred to and described in paragraph 4 of the Commission's findings as to the facts herein.
3. From otherwise discriminating in price between purchasers of canned fruits, vegetables, and vegetable products of like grade and quality in a manner and degree substantially similar to the manner and degree of the discriminations referred to in paragraph 4 of the Commission's findings as to the facts herein, and in any other manner resulting in price discriminations, substantially equal in amount to such discriminations, except as permitted by section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Order

4. From paying, giving, allowing, or contracting to pay, give or allow anything of value to or for the benefit of some of its customers for advertising services furnished by such customers without making such payments or allowances available to all competing customers on proportionally equal terms.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent Curtice Brothers Co., within 60 days after service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying, and has complied, with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

ROSE HEIFLER AND FRED JACKSON DOING BUSINESS
UNDER THE FIRM NAME OF HEIFLER & JACKSONCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3893. Complaint, Sept. 14, 1939—Decision, Apr. 15, 1940*

Where two individuals engaged in sale and distribution of their "Morgan's Pomade" for scalp and hair, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of similar treatments and devices designed for and useful in treatment of scalp and hair, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their treatment and devices; in advertisements of their said product in circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising matter which they distributed and caused to be distributed to members of the purchasing public—

- (a) Represented, directly or by implication, that product in question was not a tint or dye, and that when applied to gray hair it caused hair to change its color without dyeing, and that use thereof would restore original natural color to gray hair; and
- (b) Represented that use of such product supplied the hair shaft with materials in which gray hair was deficient and that use thereof would prevent hair from falling out and that preparation penetrated to the roots of and nourished the hair and was a competent and effective cure and remedy for and preventive of dandruff—

Facts being that product in question was a lead and sulphur dye, dyed exterior of hair shaft when applied to gray hair and did not produce natural but artificial color, did not restore original natural color to gray hair, had no effect on pigment cells of hair shaft, and did not supply thereto color pigments, deficiency of which causes such hair, it would not prevent hair falling out and was not a cure or remedy for or preventive of dandruff and would not penetrate to roots of hair nor nourish same, but might be injurious to tender skin or that on which there were lesions which had broken continuity of integument; and

- (c) Failed to reveal in its said advertisements that application of its said preparation as above set forth might be injurious and represented thereby that preparation in question, when thus applied, was harmless and would produce no injurious effect;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true and of causing portion thereof, because of such belief, to buy said product, and with result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from their competitors engaged in sale and distribution in commerce, as aforesaid, of preparations, treatments, and devices for use in treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which they recommend their said product, and who truthfully advertise effectiveness and therapeutic value thereof; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Mr. Philip Cooper, of New York City, for respondents

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, individuals, doing business under the firm name of Heifler & Jackson, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, are individuals doing business under the firm name of Heifler & Jackson and having their office and principal place of business at 740 Bergen Street in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York. The respondents are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the business of the sale and distribution of a preparation designated "Morgan's Pomade," which respondents represent as a treatment for the hair and scalp. Respondents cause said preparation, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade in said preparation by respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents are now, and have been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of preparations, treatments and devices designed for use in the treatment of the ailments and conditions for which respondents recommend the use of their said preparation.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and to induce the purchase of their said preparation, the respondents have distributed and have caused to be distributed and are now distributing and causing to be distributed to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising material containing statements and representations relative to the nature of said preparation and its effectiveness in use. Among and typical of the statements and representations by respondents, disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

It beautifies the hair, it restores it to its original colour, prevents it from falling out, * * * and makes it strong again by the right process through the roots of the hair.

You don't have to state the colour of your hair, as it brings it to its original colour, no matter what colour it was before. This is done by a scientific process.

There is one sure way to destroy dandruff completely. Use Morgan's Pomade * * * After a few treatments most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and with its occasional use every single sign and trace will be completely destroyed. * * * It will have that youthful appearance you have been longing for.

And wonder of wonders, it is not a dye.

Prevents hair from falling. Not a Tint or Dye.

Undoubtedly the finest remedy for Grey or Faded Hair is Morgan's Pomade. This is not a dye, but a special compound which when massaged into the roots of the hair, nourishes it back to its original colour and luster * * *. Scurl is removed by its use and its recurrence prevented.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, the respondents represent directly or by implication that said preparation is not a tint or dye; that said preparation, when applied to gray hair, causes the hair to change its color without dyeing the hair; that the use of the said preparation will restore the original natural color to gray hair; that the use of said preparation supplies to the hair shaft the materials in which gray hair is deficient; that the use of said preparation will prevent the hair from falling out; that said preparation penetrates to the roots of the hair and nourishes the hair; and that said preparation is a competent and effective cure or remedy for, and will prevent, dandruff.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations, used and disseminated by respondents in the manner above described, are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact said preparation, "Morgan's Pomade," contains lead and sulphur and is a lead and sulphur dye. Said preparation, when applied to gray hair, dyes the exterior of the hair shaft and the color produced by its use is not a natural color, but is artificial and produced through the use of a dye. The use of said preparation will not restore the original natural color to gray hair and has no effect on the pigment cells of the hair shaft. The use of said preparation does not supply to the hair shaft the color pigments, a deficiency of which materials causes gray hair. The use of said preparation will not prevent the hair from falling out. Said preparation is not a cure or remedy for, and will not prevent, dandruff. Said preparation will not penetrate to the roots of the hair and it will not nourish the hair.

Applications of said preparation to the scalp may be injurious to the health of the user thereof, particularly in the event that said preparation is applied to skin on which there are lesions which have broken the continuity of the integument. The aforesaid advertisements by respondents contain no statement or statements to the effect that said preparation when applied to the scalp may be injurious. Such unqualified advertisements serve as a representation by respondents that such preparation is harmless and will produce no injurious effect when applied to the scalp. The aforesaid advertisements by respondents are therefore misleading and deceptive in that they fail to reveal that said preparation may be injurious to health when applied to the scalp.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, with respect to the therapeutic value and effectiveness of their preparation sold and distributed under the trade name of Morgan's Pomade, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and has caused, and now causes, a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' preparation. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce, between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of preparations, treatments and devices for use in the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which respondents recommend their said product, and who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and therapeutic value of their respective preparations, treatments, and devices. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 14, 1939, issued, and on September 14, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, are individuals doing business under the firm name of Heifler & Jackson and their business address is 740 Bergen Street, in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y. The respondents are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a preparation under the trade name of "Morgan's Pomade," which is represented by the makers thereof and by the respondents as a treatment for the scalp and hair.

PAR. 2. The respondents, in the course and conduct of said business, have caused such preparation, when sold, to be mailed or shipped to the purchasers thereof, located at various points in the several States of the United States, other than the State from which said shipments are made, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of such business, the respondents are, and have been, during all the time mentioned in the complaint, in substantial competition with other persons, and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of similar treatments and devices, designed for, and useful in the treatment of, the scalp and hair. Among said competitors are many who do not, in any manner, misrepresent their treatments or devices.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and to induce the purchase of their said preparation, the respondents have distributed, and are now distributing, and are causing to be distributed to members of the purchasing public, circulars, pamphlets and other advertising material, containing statements and representations relative to said preparation and its effectiveness in use. Among and typical of such statements and representations are the following:

It beautifies the hair, it restores it to its original colour, prevents it from falling out, * * * and makes it strong again by the right process through the roots of the hair.

You don't have to state the colour of your hair, as it brings it to its original colour, no matter what colour it was before. This is done by a scientific process.

There is one sure way to destroy dandruff completely. USE MORGAN'S POMADE. * * * After a few treatments, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and with its occasional use every single sign and trace will be completely destroyed. * * * It will have that youthful appearance you have been longing for.

And wonder of wonders, it is not a dye.

Prevents hair from falling. NOT A TINT OR DYE.

Undoubtedly the finest remedy for GREY or FADED HAIR is MORGAN'S POMADE. This is not a dye, but a special compound which when massaged into the roots of the hair, nourishes it back to its original colour and luster * * *. SCURF is removed by its use and its recurrence prevented.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, the respondents represent, directly, or by implication, that said preparation is not a tint or dye; that said preparation, when applied to gray hair, causes the hair to change its color without dyeing the hair; that the use of said preparation will restore the original natural color to gray hair; that the use of said preparation supplies to the hair shaft the materials in which gray hair is deficient; that the use of said preparation will prevent the hair from falling out; that said preparation penetrates to the roots of the hair and nourishes the hair; that said preparation is a competent and effective cure or remedy for, and will prevent dandruff.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations, used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described, are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact, said preparation, "Morgan's Pomade," contains lead and sulphur and is a lead and sulphur dye. Said preparation, when applied to gray hair, dyes the exterior of the hair shaft and the color produced by its use is not a natural color, but is artificial and produced through the use of a dye. The use of said preparation will not restore the original natural color to gray hair, and has no effect on the pigment cells of the hair shaft. The use of said preparation does not supply to the hair shaft the color pigments, a deficiency of which material causes gray hair. The use of said preparation will not prevent the hair from falling out. Said preparation is not a cure or remedy for, and will not prevent, dandruff. Said preparation will not penetrate to the roots of the hair and it will not nourish the hair.

Applications of said preparation to the scalp may be injurious to tender skin or skin on which there are lesions which have broken the continuity of the integument. The aforesaid advertisements contain no statements to the effect that application of the preparation to a tender skin or to a skin on which there are lesions which have broken the continuity of the integument, may be injurious. Such unqualified advertisements serve as a representation that such preparation, when applied to the aforementioned skin, is harmless and will produce no injurious effect when applied to such tender skin or skin broken by lesions.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, with respect to the therapeutic value and effectiveness of their preparation sold and distributed under the trade name of Morgan's Pomade, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and has caused, and now causes, a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' preparation. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce, between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of preparations, treatments and devices for the use in the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which respondents recommend their said product, and who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and therapeutic value of their respective preparations, treatments and devices. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, trading as Heifler & Jackson, are all to the prejudice of the public and of the respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of the complaint set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Rose Heifler and Fred Jackson, or either of them, their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements by means of the United States Mails or in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a preparation containing drugs now designated by the name "Morgan's Pomade," or any other preparation, composed of substantially similar ingredients, or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, or disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisements by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication, that said preparation is not a tint or dye; that its application causes the hair to change its color without dyeing; that the use of said preparation will restore the original color to gray hair; that its application supplies to the hair shaft the materials in which gray hair is deficient; that the use of said preparation prevents the hair from falling out; that said preparation when applied to the hair and scalp, penetrates into the roots of the hair and enriches the hair; that said preparation is a competent and effective cure or remedy for

BLANCHE KAPLAN, TRADING AS PROGRESSIVE MEDICAL COMPANY AND LADIES AID COMPANY

Docket 4002. Complaint, Jan. 30, 1940—Decision, Apr. 15, 1940

Where an individual engaged, as Progressive Medical Co. and as Ladies Aid Co., in sale and distribution of her Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength medicinal preparations; in advertisements thereof which she disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and through booklets, circulars, and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States, and by other means in commerce, and otherwise and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of her said products—

- (a) Represented that her said preparations were cures or remedies for delayed menstruation, and nonirritating, mild, efficient, and specific treatments thereof, and would quickly stimulate the menstrual flow, facts being they were not a cure or remedy for said condition and did not constitute nonirritating, mild, efficient, and specific treatments therefor, and would not accomplish results which she claimed, and were not safe and harmless, in that they contained powdered aloes, ergotin, and a number of other drugs in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and might result in gastrointestinal disturbances leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage in nonpregnant women, and in cases where said preparations were used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, might result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream, causing condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and lead to other serious conditions and serious or irreparable loss or injury to health; and
- (b) Failed to reveal, in said advertisements of such preparations, that use thereof under conditions prescribed therein or under such conditions as are customary or usual, might result in serious or irreparable injury to health;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations and advertisements were true, and of inducing portion of such public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Blanche Kaplan, trading as the Progressive Medical Co. and as the Ladies Aid Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Blanche Kaplan, is an individual trading as the Progressive Medical Co. and as the Ladies Aid Co., with her office and principal place of business at 3944 Pine Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill., from which address she transacts business under the above trade names.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations consisting of two formulae known as Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength.

In the course and conduct of her business the respondent causes said medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from her place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by her in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said medicinal preparations by United States mails and by booklets or circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various states of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said medicinal preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false rep-representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Ladies Aid No. 2—Ordinary Strength—is a world famous remedy, compounded of standard drugs especially for the relief and regulation of that most important female function—the monthly menstruation. It is equally as efficient in the relief of menstrual pains, which in so many thousands of cases tend to make woman's life so miserable.

Delays, irregularities, scanty flow or distress indicate a condition requiring immediate correction. To hesitate is dangerous. Do not delay and risk a more serious condition.

Use Ladies Aid No. 2 immediately and secure peace of mind, good health and freedom from worry. This remedy is used and recommended by physicians and thousands of women everywhere. While one box is usually sufficient, it is advisable to have an ample supply on hand at all times. They do not spoil. Order a supply today.

Ladies Aid No. 3—Extra Strength—is recommended for extremely stubborn, abnormal, discouraging and unyielding cases of menstrual delay or menstrual pain. It is compounded particularly for you women whose case is of long duration and who feel the need of a stronger and more powerful specific. It is non-irritating to the most delicate system yet it quickly stimulates the menstrual flow. Its action is so mild that it offers no interference with home or social duties. While all women are not alike in their response to medical treatment, the average woman usually finds that one or two boxes are sufficient when supplemented with hot mustard baths.

Persistent treatment succeeds in almost all cases. All that we ask is that our directions be followed out carefully. When you consider that a woman's very happiness as well as her health depends on the normal working of her female functions, it is certainly good advice when we urge you so strongly to use Ladies Aid No. 3 immediately and regularly.

Often, even the continued love of a mate is at stake. So many thousands of women have been helped by us that it appears to be nothing but sheer nonsense for suffering or worried women to suffer or to worry any longer. Our advice is that you order an ample supply of Ladies Aid No. 3 today.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that her medicinal preparations, known and designated as Ladies Aid No. 2—Ordinary Strength—and Ladies Aid No. 3—Extra Strength, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation, and nonirritating, mild, efficient and specific treatments therefor and will quickly stimulate the menstrual flow.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as Ladies Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, are not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation and do not constitute nonirritating, mild, efficient, and specific treatments therefor. Said preparations will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless in that said preparations contain powdered aloes, powdered extract cotton root bark, iron sulphate dried, powdered extract black hellebore, ergotin, and oil Savin.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparations may result in gastrointestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage in nonpregnant women, and in those cases where said medicinal preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, their use may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparations as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition of the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of Ladies Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to her preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 30, 1940, issued, and on February 1, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Blanche Kaplan, an individual trading as Progressive Medical Co., and as Ladies Aid Co., charging her with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent filed her answer dated February 17, 1940, in which answer she admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Blanche Kaplan, is an individual trading as the Progressive Medical Co. and as the Ladies Aid Co., with her office and principal place of business at 3944 Pine Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill., from which address she transacts business under the above trade names.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations, consisting of two formulae known as Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength.

In the course and conduct of her business the respondent causes said medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from her place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by her in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said medicinal preparations by United States mails and by booklets or circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said medicinal preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Ladies Aid No. 2—Ordinary Strength—is a world famous remedy, compounded of standard drugs especially for the relief and regulation of that most important female function—the monthly menstruation. It is equally as efficient in the relief of menstrual pains, which in so many thousands of cases tend to make woman's life so miserable.

Delays, irregularities, scanty flow or distress indicate a condition requiring immediate correction. To hesitate is dangerous. Do not delay and risk a more serious condition.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that her medicinal preparations, known and designated as Ladies Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength, and Ladies Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation, and nonirritating, mild, efficient, and specific treatments therefor and will quickly stimulate the menstrual flow.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as Ladies Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength, and Ladies Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, are not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation and do not constitute nonirritating, mild, efficient, and specific treatments therefor. Said preparations will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless in that said preparations contain powdered aloes, powdered extract cotton root bark, iron sulphate dried, powdered extract black hellebore, ergotin, and oil Savin.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparations may result in gastrointestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage in nonpregnant women, and in those cases where said medicinal preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, their use may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparations as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition of the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of Ladies Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to her preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that she waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Blanche Kaplan, an individual trading as Progressive Medical Co. and as Ladies Aid Co., or trading under any other name or names, her agents, servants, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from: or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that said preparations constitute safe, competent, efficient, or specific treatments for delayed menstruation or that their use will have no ill effect upon the human body, and which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparations, when taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after the service upon her of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether she intends to comply with this order, and if so, the manner and form in which she intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon her of this order said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
JOHN B. CANEPA COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3744. Complaint, Mar. 24, 1939—Decision, Apr. 16, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of macaroni and spaghetti products which it packed, sold, and distributed in long containers—

Represented directly or by implication through advertisements, booklets, and labels attached to its products and disseminated in interstate commerce that its macaroni and spaghetti products were of the finest quality because they were made in long lengths and that such products of other manufacturers which were not made in such lengths were not genuine and not of finest quality and that true criterion of genuineness and quality of such products was length in which made, through such typical statements as "I hate to brag but only the finest macaroni (or spaghetti) is made long," or "I hate to brag but genuine macaroni (or spaghetti) is made long," and through depictions in booklets and other advertising matter containing such statements, and representations of the long containers in which the company sold and distributed its said products;

The facts being such statements and representations used and disseminated as aforesaid by it were misleading and unfair, genuine macaroni and spaghetti of finest quality are made both in long and short lengths and offered for sale in both forms, and said products of finest quality are in some instances first made in long lengths and then cut into short lengths and thus offered for sale and sold, and length in which products aforesaid are offered is no criterion of quality and genuineness thereof;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of its said products because of such mistaken and erroneous opinion or belief thus created:

Held, That such acts and practices under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. L. E. Creel, Jr. and Mr. Curtis C. Shears for the Commission.

Mr. John Harrington of Fyffe & Clark, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John B. Canepa Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, John B. Canepa Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its principal office and place of business at 310 West Grand Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of macaroni and spaghetti products. In the course and conduct of its business respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said products, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said products in booklets, on labels attached to its products in elongated packages, and on other written or printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said products by various means, for the purpose of inducing, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

I hate to brag, but only the finest macaroni is made long;

I hate to brag, but only the finest spaghetti is made long;

I hate to brag, but genuine macaroni is made long;

I hate to brag, but genuine spaghetti is made long;

* * * Insist on Red Cross products packed in The Original Full Length Packages. This is your guarantee against inferior substitutes. You may have wondered at times why Red Cross Macaroni and Spaghetti by comparison appear unusually long. * * * So be sure that you get Red Cross Macaroni and Spaghetti because only the finest can be made long.

The respondent packs, sells, and distributes its spaghetti and macaroni products in long containers. Booklets and other advertising matter of the respondent, containing the aforesaid statements and representations, also contain in direct connection therewith pictorial representations of the long containers in which respondent sells and distributes its said products.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid, together with other statements, not herein set out, of similar import and meaning and disseminated as aforesaid, respondent represents to prospective purchasers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia that respondent's macaroni and spaghetti products are genuine and are of the finest quality because they are made in long lengths, that macaroni and spaghetti products which are not made in long lengths are not genuine and are not of the finest quality, that macaroni and spaghetti products which are not offered for sale in long lengths are not genuine and are not of the finest quality and that the length in which spaghetti and macaroni products are offered for sale is a true criterion of the genuineness and quality of such products and of the length in which such products were made.

PAR. 3. The said statements and representations of the respondent, used and disseminated as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, genuine macaroni and spaghetti products containing the finest quality ingredients are made in long lengths and in short lengths and are offered for sale and sold in such forms. Genuine macaroni and spaghetti products containing the finest quality ingredients are made in long lengths and are thereafter cut into short lengths and are offered for sale and sold in short lengths. The length in which macaroni and spaghetti products are offered for sale is not a true criterion of the quality or genuineness of such products or of the length in which such products were made.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said products, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, and did mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and into purchasing substantial amounts of said products of respondent because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 24th day of March 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent John B. Canepa Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Curtis C. Shears, Esq., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John Harrington, Esq., attorney for the respondent before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, oral arguments not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, John B. Canepa Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its principal office and place of business at 30 West Grand Avenue, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois. It is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of macaroni and spaghetti products, maintaining a course of trade in said products among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business during the period hereinbefore mentioned, the respondent has disseminated or caused to be disseminated in interstate commerce advertisements, booklets, and labels attached to its products, for the purpose of inducing increased sales of same. Among and typical of said advertisements and other aforesaid representations are the following:

I hate to brag, but only the finest macaroni is made long—

and

I hate to brag, but genuine Spaghetti is made long.

Since 1860, Red Cross Macaroni products have borne the reputation of being the finest quality possible to manufacture. Insist on Red Cross products, packed in the original full length packages. This is your guarantee against inferior substitutes. You may have wondered at times why Red Cross Macaroni and Spaghetti by comparison appear unusually long. There is a very definite reason for this.

On or about July 12, 1938, the respondent changed its advertisements and the representations on its packages as aforesaid from the language above quoted, and in lieu thereof made use of the following:

I hate to brag, but genuine Macaroni is made long.

and

I hate to brag, but genuine Spaghetti is made long.

PAR. 3. Respondent has packed and packs, sold and sells, distributed and distributes its spaghetti and macaroni in long containers. Booklets and other advertising matter containing the aforesaid statements and representations also contain, in direct connection therewith, pictorial representations of the long containers in which respondent sells and distributes its products. By the means and in the manner aforesaid, together with other statements of similar import disseminated as aforesaid, respondent has represented and represents to prospective and potential purchasers in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia that its macaroni and spaghetti products are of the finest quality because they are made in long lengths, and that the macaroni and spaghetti products of other manufacturers which are not made in long lengths are not genuine and not of the finest quality, and that the length in which macaroni and spaghetti products are offered for sale is the true criterion of the genuineness and quality of such products.

PAR. 4. Said statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as aforesaid, are misleading and unfair. In truth and in fact, genuine macaroni and spaghetti products of the finest quality are made both in long lengths and in short lengths, and are offered for sale in both such forms. Genuine macaroni and spaghetti of the finest quality are in some instances first made in long lengths and thereafter cut into short lengths, and in this latter form are offered for sale and sold. The length in which macaroni and spaghetti products are offered for sale is not a criterion of the quality and genuineness of the product.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with reference to its products and, by comparison, to the products of other manufacturers, have had and now have the capacity and tendency to, and did and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and into purchasing substantial quantities of said products of respondent because of such mistaken and erroneous opinion or belief, thus created.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, John B. ## COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Indian River Medicine Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Indian River Medicine Co. is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee and having its office and principal place of business in La Follette, State of Tennessee. Respondent is now, and has been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a medicinal or pharmaceutical preparation designated as "Scalf's Indian River Tonic."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Tennessee to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia preparations for use in connection with the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body for which respondent represents and claims its preparation to be a treatment.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent, has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which said broadcasts originate, and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

PAR. 5. Through the use of the representations hereinbefore set forth and others similar thereto not specifically herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's product, respondent has represented, and does now represent, directly or indirectly, that its said product will prevent and cure colds and build up resistance to other minor ailments; that it is a competent and effective remedy or cure for rheumatism; that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for removing or overcoming the causes of such symptomatic conditions as sleeplessness, nervousness, indigestion and gas pressure, aches and pains in the head and joints; that it is a cure or remedy for ailments of the liver, kidneys, and stomach; that it will improve the appetite, increase the weight, restore the strength and build up the general health of the user; that said product is composed of natural vegetable ingredients; that it is a competent cure or remedy for asthma and has substantial value in the treatment thereof; that it affords positive or certain relief from chronic ailments.

Findings

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation will not prevent or cure colds, nor will it serve to build up resistance to other ailments. It is not a competent or effective cure or remedy for rheumatism. It has no value as a competent or effective treatment for removing or overcoming the causes of sleeplessness, nervousness, indigestion, or gas pressure. It is not a cure or remedy for, nor has it any therapeutic value in the treatment of, ailments of the liver, kidneys, or stomach. It will not improve the appetite or increase the weight or restore the strength or build up the health of the user. Said preparation is not composed of natural vegetable ingredients. It will not remove the cause of aches or pains in the head or joints. It is not a cure or remedy for, nor has it any therapeutic value in the treatment of, asthma. It will not afford positive or certain relief for any ailment.

PAR. 7. Among the competitors of respondent as referred to in paragraph 3 herein are many who do not falsely represent their products or the benefits to be derived from the use thereof.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing, false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and claims with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and claims are true, and causes, and has caused, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's product. In consequence thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors and substantial injury has been done and is being done to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 3, 1939, issued and on November 6, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Indian River Medicine Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequent to the filing of the original answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw its answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, with two exceptions therein specified, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Indian River Medicine Company, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its office and place of business located at La Follette, Tenn.

Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a medicinal or pharmaceutical preparation designated "Scalf's Indian River Tonic."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Tennessee to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now and has been for some time last past engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia a preparation for use in connection with the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body for which respondent represents and claims its preparation to be a treatment.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Morris Scharf whose address is Forest Hills, New York, and Henry Dudkin of 115 West One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Street, in the city and State of New York, were members of a copartnership for several years prior to December 24, 1938, known as Eileen-Joy Fashions. Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., is a corporation which was organized under the laws of the State of New York on the 22d day of July 1938, and has its office and principal place of business at 1375 Broadway in the city and State of New York. Teen Frocks, Inc., is a corporation which was organized under the laws of the State of New York in the year 1933, and has its office and principal place of business at 520 Eighth Avenue in the city of New York and State of New York. The respondent Morris Scharf is the president of Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., and at various times between the years 1933 and 1938 served as president of respondent Teen Frocks, Inc. The respondent Henry Dudkin is president of Teen Frocks, Inc., and at various times between the years 1933 and 1938 served as secretary and treasurer of respondent Teen Frocks, Inc.

The two corporate respondents herein have been at all times since their organization dominated and controlled in their corporate affairs and activities by either one or both of the two respondents Morris Scharf and Henry Dudkin.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing various grades and types of dresses and other wearing apparel for women.

Respondents cause said products when sold to be transported from their places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing dresses and other articles of wearing apparel for women.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business the respondents have engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which the dresses and other articles of wearing apparel for women sold and distributed by them are made by means of false representations on tags, labels, price lists, and in various advertising material and by the failure to disclose the rayon content of certain of their products. In furtherance of this practice and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their products and endeavoring to aid jobbers, retailers, and other purchasers of their products to procure customers' orders therefor, respondents have caused false statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of their products and the constituent fibers or materials thereof to be inserted in circulars, price lists, newspapers, and other publications distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers of said products.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the acts and practices above described, the respondents represent certain of their fabrics as being composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. As an example of this practice, respondents place on tags, labels, price lists, and in various advertising circulars and other printed matter the following terms or similar terms: "Taffeta," and "Pure Dye" as descriptive of the material from which their products are made. By these means respondents represent that the fabrics so described are composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, when in truth and in fact said fabrics are composed entirely of rayon.

PAR. 6. Over a period of many years the word "silk" has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning as being the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving of silk fiber. Among such terms is the term "Taffeta." Dress goods and other items of women's wearing apparel designated, described and referred to as "Taffeta" have been for a long time and at the present time still are associated in the public mind with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Whenever the term "Taffeta" is used to describe or refer to dress goods or other items of women's apparel and such term is not immediately accompanied by other terms or words adequately and accurately naming the fibers of which such materials are made, such term is understood by members of the purchasing public as designating, describing, and referring to materials made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The words "Pure Dye" have been for a long time and still are associated in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public with, and as designating or meaning, unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, which has not been subjected to a metallic bath, and which contains no other materials except necessary dyeing and finishing materials.

PAR. 7. Another and typical act and practice engaged in by the respondents in falsely representing their products and fabrics, is placing on tags, labels, price lists and in various advertising circulars and other printed matter the following terms: "Celanese" and "Celanese Clairanese Taffeta," to designate or describe products composed entirely of rayon. In other cases, the labels and tags used by the respondents as well as representations contained in the various advertising do not indicate or disclose the constituent fibers or material of said products, which are in fact composed entirely of rayon.

PAR. 8. "Rayon" is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk and when so manufactured it has the appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is readily believed and accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The words "Celanese" and "Celanese Clairanese," when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the word "Taffeta," or any other word or phrase of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe rayon, are not sufficiently well-known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to indicate to or inform them that the merchandise so described, designated, or referred to is made of a material other than silk, to wit, rayon.

PAR. 9. By the use of the practice of furnishing false and misleading labels, tags and other advertising material to jobbers, retailers, and other customers, and causing them to be placed upon the products which they purchase from respondents, and also by the use of labels, tags, and representations in various advertising which do not indicate or disclose the rayon content of its products, the respondents place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous jobbers and retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers may and do deceive or mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are purchasing garments or material manufactured from silk, which are in fact manufactured and composed entirely of rayon.

PAR. 10. The use by respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices including the failure to disclose that their products are made of rayon has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. On account of this erroneous belief a number of the consuming and purchasing public purchase a substantial volume of respondents' products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors who are also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of various kinds and grades of dresses and wearing apparel for women, and who truthfully represent the constituent fibers or material of their products. As a consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 23d day of February 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., a corporation; Teen Frocks, Inc., a corporation; and Morris Scharf and Henry Dudkin, individually and as officers of Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc. and Teen Frocks, Inc., and formerly copartners trading as Eileen-Joy Fashions, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 29, 1940, the respondents filed an answer, and on March 18, 1940, respondents filed their supplemental answer in which supplemental answer respondents admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly come on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the supplemental answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Morris Scharf whose address is Forest Hills, N. Y., and Henry Dudkin of 115 West One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Street, in the city and State of New York, were members of a copartnership for several years prior to December 24, 1938, known as Eileen-Joy Fashions. Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., is a corporation which was organized under the laws of the State of New York on the 22d day of July 1938, and has its office and principal place of business at 1375 Broadway in the city and State of New York. Teen Frocks, Inc., is a corporation which was organized under the laws of the State of New York in the year 1933, and has its office and principal place of business at 520 Eighth Avenue in the city of New York and State of New York. The respondent Morris Scharf is the president of Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., and at various times between the years 1933 and 1938 served as president of respondent Teen Frocks, Inc. The respondent Henry Dudkin is president of Teen Frocks, Inc., and at various times between the years 1933 and 1938 served as secretary and treasurer of respondent Teen Frocks, Inc. The former partnership of Eileen-Joy Fashions, composed of Henry Dudkin and Morris Scharf, was dissolved and discontinued on or about July 22, 1938, and at that time was succeeded by the corporate respondent, Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc.

The two corporate respondents herein have been at all times since their organization dominated and controlled in their corporate affairs and activities by either one or both of the two respondents Morris Scharf and Henry Dudkin.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing various grades and types of dresses and other wearing apparel for women.

Respondents cause said products when sold to be transported from their places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing dresses and other articles of wearing apparel for women.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business the respondents have engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which the dresses and other articles of wearing apparel for women sold and distributed by them are made by means of false representations on tags, labels, price lists, and in various advertising material and by the failure to disclose the rayon content of certain of their products. In furtherance of this practice and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their products and endeavoring to aid jobbers, retailers, and other purchasers of their products to procure customers' orders therefor, respondents have caused false statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of their products and the constituent fibers or materials thereof to be inserted in circulars, price lists, newspapers, and other publications distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers of said products.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the acts and practices above described, the respondents represent certain of their fabrics as being composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. As an example of this practice, respondents place on tags, labels, price lists, and in various advertising circulars and other printed matter the following terms or similar terms: "Taffeta," and "Pure Dye" as descriptive of the material from which their products are made. By these means respondents represent that the fabrics so described are composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, when in truth and in fact said fabrics are composed entirely of rayon.

PAR. 6. Over a period of many years the word "silk" has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning as being the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving of silk fiber. Among such terms is the term "Taffeta." Dress goods and other items of women's wearing apparel designated, described and referred to as "Taffeta" have been for a long time and at the present time still are associated in the public mind with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Whenever the term "Taffeta" is used to describe or refer to dress goods or other items of women's apparel and such term is not immediately accompanied by other terms or words adequately and accurately naming the fibers of which such materials are made, such term is understood by members of the purchasing public as designating, describing, and referring to materials made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The words "Pure Dye" have been for a long time and still are associated in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public with, and as designating or meaning, unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, which has not been subjected to a metallic bath, and which contains no other materials except necessary dyeing and finishing materials.

PAR. 7. Another and typical act and practice engaged in by the respondents in falsely representing their products and fabrics, is placing on tags, labels, price lists and in various advertising circulars and other printed matter the following terms: "Celanese" and "Celanese Clairanese Taffeta," to designate or describe products composed entirely of rayon. In other cases, the labels and tags used by the respondents as well as representations contained in the various advertising do not indicate or disclose the constituent fibers or material of said products, which are in fact composed entirely of rayon.

PAR. 8. "Rayon" is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk and when so manufactured it has the appearance and feel of silk and is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is readily believed and accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The words "Celanese" and "Celanese Clairanese," when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the word "Taffeta," or any other word or phrase of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe rayon, are not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to indicate to or inform them that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made of a material other than silk, to wit, rayon.

PAR. 9. By the use of the practice of furnishing false and misleading labels, tags, and other advertising material to jobbers, retailers, and other customers, and causing them to be placed upon the products which they purchase from respondents, and also by the use of labels, tags, and representations in various advertising which do not indicate or disclose the rayon content of its products, the respondents place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous jobbers and retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers may and do deceive or mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are purchasing garments or material manufactured from silk, which are in fact manufactured and composed entirely of rayon.

Order

PAR. 10. The use by respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices including the failure to disclose that their products are made of rayon has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. On account of this erroneous belief a number of the consuming and purchasing public purchase a substantial volume of respondents' products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors who are also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of various kinds and grades of dresses and wearing apparel for women, and who truthfully represent the constituent fibers or material of their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the original and supplemental answer of respondents, in which supplemental answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., a corporation, and Teen Frocks, Inc., a corporation, and their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Morris Scharf and Henry Dudkin, individually and as officers of Eileen-Joy Fashions, Inc., and Teen Frocks, Inc., and their agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of dresses and other wearing apparel for women in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the unqualified terms "satin," "taffeta," "crepe de chine," "crepe," or any other descriptive terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk to describe, designate or in any manner refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided, however, that when said words or descriptive terms are used truthfully to designate or describe the type of weave, construction or finish, such words must be qualified by using in connection and conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness a word or words clearly and accurately naming or describing the fibers or materials from which said products are made.

2. Using the unqualified term "silk," or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided that in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such term or similar terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content when immediately accompanied by a word or words of equal conspicuousness accurately describing and designating such other materials in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

3. Using words "pure dye" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning to designate or describe fabrics which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, provided that in the case of a fabric or material composed in part of unweighted silk and in part of materials other than unweighted silk, such words may be used as descriptive of the unweighted silk content if there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of equal size and conspicuousness, a word or words accurately describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

4. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling fabrics, garments, or other products, composed in whole or in part of rayon, without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials including the rayon shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

LENOIR WOODFINISHING COMPANY, INC., AND ARTHUR
G. SPENCER, TRADING AS LENOIR SOLVENT COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 23, 1914*Docket 4048. Complaint, Mar. 5, 1940—Decision, Apr. 17, 1940*

Where a corporation and an individual, who was president and sales manager thereof and formulated and controlled its sales methods, engaged in manufacture of paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers, and other woodfinishing products, and in sale and distribution thereof to various woodfinishing concerns and furniture manufacturers at various points in the several States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale of woodfinishing materials in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Gave substantial sums of money and other things of value to officials and employees of customers or prospective customers, without said customers' knowledge or consent, for the purpose of inducing such officials or employees to purchase their woodfinishing materials for said customers' use or recommend purchase thereof, or as payments to said officials and employees for having induced such purchase or recommended such use, and thus offered to pay and paid or gave, without knowledge or consent of employer-customers involved, to finishing room foremen of customers or prospective customers, fixed fee of certain amount per drum for every drum of such materials purchased from them by said foremen's customer employers, and in other instances gave customer employees fixed percentages of purchase price of all materials thus bought by such customer employers;

With effect of diverting trade unfairly to them from their competitors engaged also in sale of woodfinishing materials, and who do not indulge in such acts and practices and with tendency and capacity so to do; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Don A. Walser, of Lexington, N. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., a corporation, and Arthur G. Spencer, individually and trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of North Carolina, with its principal place of business located at Lenoir, N. C. Said respondent is now and since its incorporation in 1938 has been in the business of manufacturing paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers, and other woodfinishing products and in the sale thereof to various woodfinishing concerns and furniture manufacturers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondent Arthur G. Spencer is an individual and is president and sales manager of respondent corporation, and as such formulates and controls its methods of selling its products. Prior to the incorporation of respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., respondent Arthur G. Spencer was in the business of manufacturing woodfinishing materials under the trade name of Lenoir Solvent Co. with his principal place of business located in Lenoir, N. C., and of selling said products to various woodfinishing concerns and furniture manufacturers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., causes said woodfinishing materials when sold to be transported from its place of business in North Carolina to its customers located in various other States of the United States. Said respondent maintains a course of trade in said woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

For several years prior to the date of incorporation of Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., Arthur G. Spencer, trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., caused the woodfinishing materials manufactured by him when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of North Carolina to his customers located in various other States of the United States and maintained a course of trade in said woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., since the date of its incorporation in the course and conduct of its said business and prior to that date respondent Arthur G. Spencer, trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., have been in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale of woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said businesses, respondents have given substantial sums of money and other things of value to certain officials and employees of respondents' customers or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of said customers, for the purpose of inducing said officials and employees to purchase respondents' woodfinishing materials for use by their employers or to recommend the purchase of the same by their employers, or as payments to said officials and employees for having induced the purchase or recommended the use of respondents' products by their employers.

In some instances respondents have offered to pay and have paid to finishing room foremen employed by respondents' customers or prospective customers a fixed fee of $5 per drum for every drum of woodfinishing materials purchased by their employers from respondents. In other instances, respondents have given some employees of respondents' customers 7 percent or 10 percent of the purchase price of all materials purchased from respondents by said customers. All of said payments and offers of payment have been made without the knowledge and consent of respondents' customers whose employees are so paid.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the acts and practices hereinabove set forth were and are calculated to have, and have, a tendency and capacity to, and do, divert trade unfairly to respondents from their competitors also engaged in the business of selling woodfinishing materials, who do not indulge in said acts and practices.

As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 5th day of March 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., and Arthur G. Spencer, individually and trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 29, 1940, the respondents filed their answer to said complaint, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of North Carolina, with its principal place of business located at Lenoir, N. C. Said respondent was organized in the year 1938, and is now, and since the date of its organization has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers, and other woodfinishing products and in the sale and distribution thereof to various woodfinishing concerns and furniture manufacturers located at various points in the several States of the United States.

Respondent Arthur G. Spencer is an individual and is president and sales manager of respondent corporation, and as such formulates and controls its methods of selling its products. Prior to the date of the incorporation of respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., respondent Arthur G. Spencer was engaged in the business of manufacturing such woodfinishing materials under the trade name Lenoir Solvent Co. with his principal place of business located at Lenoir, N. C., and in the sale and distribution of said products to various woodfinishing concerns and furniture manufacturers located at various points in the several States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., causes said woodfinishing materials when sold to be transported from its place of business in North Carolina to its customers located in various other States of the United States. Said respondent maintains a course of trade in said woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

For several years prior to the date of incorporation of Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., Arthur G. Spencer trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., caused the woodfinishing materials manufactured by him when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of North Carolina to his customers located in various other States of the United States, and maintained a course of trade in said woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., since the date of its incorporation, in the course and conduct of its said business, and prior to that date, respondent Arthur G. Spencer, trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., have been in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale of woodfinishing materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that in the course and conduct of their said businesses, respondents have given substantial sums of money and other things of value to certain officials and employees of respondents' customers or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of said customers, for the purpose of inducing said officials or employees to purchase respondents' woodfinishing materials for use by their employers, or to recommend the purchase of the same by their employers, or as payments to said officials and employees for having induced the purchase or recommended the use of respondents' products by their employers.

In some instances respondents have offered to pay and have paid to finishing room foremen employed by respondents' customers or prospective customers, a fixed fee of $5 per drum for every drum of woodfinishing materials purchased by their employers from respondents. In other instances respondents have given some employees of respondents' customers 7 percent or 10 percent of the purchase price of all materials purchased from said respondents by said customers. All of said payments and offers of payment have been made without the knowledge or consent of respondents' customers whose employees were so paid.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the acts and practices hereinabove set forth were, and are, calculated to have and have a tendency and capacity to and do divert trade unfairly to respondents from their competitors also engaged in the business of selling woodfinishing materials, who do not indulge in said acts and practices.

As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST<sup>1</sup>

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., its officers, and Arthur G. Spencer, individually and trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., and their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers, and other woodfinishing products, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do cease and desist from giving sums of money and other things of value, to officials and employees of respondents' customers or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of said cus-

"This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the motion of the Commission's chief counsel that the order to cease and desist issued herein on April 17, 1940, be modified in certain respects specifically detailed in said motion, and it appearing that on May 23, 1940, the Commission ordered the respondents herein, within 10 days from the service upon them of a copy of said motion, to show cause why the order to cease and desist heretofore entered should not be modified as specified in said motion, and it further appearing that a copy of said order to show cause and said motion was served on the respondents herein on May 25 and 27, 1940, respectively, and it further appearing that respondents have failed to show cause within the 10-day period provided for why the motion of the Commission's chief counsel should not be granted, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises;

"It is ordered, That the respondents, Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., its officers, and Arthur G. Spencer, individually and trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., and their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers and other wood finishing products, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do cease and desist from giving, or offering to give, sums of money or other things of value to officials or employees of respondents' customers or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of said customers, for the purpose of inducing said officials or employees to purchase respondents' wood finishing materials for use by their employers or to recommend the purchase of the same by their employers, or as payments to said officials or employees for having induced the purchase or recommended the use of respondents' products by their employers.

"It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this modified order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this modified order."

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
KAUFMANN BROS. & BONDY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3881. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1939—Decision, Apr. 22, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise to purchasers in the various other States and in the District of Columbia; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise—

Furnish various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery scheme, through which said merchandise was sold and distributed to ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance, and distribution of various push cards and punchboards for use in sale and distribution thereof by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, in accordance with various plans and including as typical (1) scheme by which persons succeeding in selecting from list of 50 girls' names that corresponding to name concealed under card's master seal as disclosed after sale of chances thereon, received pipe being thus disposed of, and customer paid for chance amount dependent upon number secured from disc accompanying name of girl selected, so that fact as to whether purchaser received said article or nothing for amount of money paid was determined by lot or chance; (2) scheme under which number of pipes being thus disposed of were secured by certain purchasers securing particular numbers, and purchasers who did not secure one of numbers in question or punch last number in one of four sections into which boards were divided received nothing further for their nickels; and (3) various other assortments of pipes and punchboards involving lot or chance feature and similar to those above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to, and placed in the hands of, others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products, in accordance with sales plans above set forth, by retail dealer purchasers, whether as direct or indirect buyers of products in question, who exposed and sold same to purchasing public in accordance with such plans involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by it in sale and distribution of its merchandise and by element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell such merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods and with result, through use of such methods and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade to it from its competitors aforesaid; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Complaint

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.

Abberley, Bryde, MacFall & Amon, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Kaufmann Bros. & Bondy, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH. 1. Respondent, Kaufman Bros. & Bondy, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 740 Broadway, West New York, N. J. Respondent is now, and for sometime last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in New Jersey to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for sometime last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Respondent distributes, and has distributed, various push cards and punchboards for use, or which are used, in the sale and distribution of its pipes and other merchandise to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but this list is not all inclusive of the various assortments, nor does it include all of the details of the several plans which respondent has been or is using in the distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise by lot or chance:

(a) One assortment consists of a pipe, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains 50 partially perforated discs, and on the face of each disc is printed the word "Push." Beneath each disc is a feminine name and a space is provided on the face of said card for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the feminine name selected. Concealed within each of said discs is a number which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the said card. The purchaser selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives the pipe. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

and Receive a $10.00
(picturization of a pipe)
Flame Grain Kay Woodie.
Numbers 1 to 35 pay what you draw
Numbers 36 to 50 pay only 25¢
No higher.

The sale of respondent's pipe by means of said push card is made in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. Said pipe is allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives the pipe or nothing for the amount of money paid is thus determined by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of pipes along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one above described and vary only in detail.

(b) Another assortment consists of a number of pipes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pipes are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

The sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers as to which numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a pipe. The punches on the board are arranged in four sections, and the purchaser of the last punch in each section receives a pipe. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes or by punching the last number in one of the sections, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each, and a purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for a pipe or makes the last punch in one of the sections receives a pipe for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the number punched or separated from the board. The pipes are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of pipes along with punch boards, involving a lot or chance feature. Such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in common between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 28, 1939 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Kaufmann Bros. & Bondy, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 24, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Repondent, Kaufmann Bros. & Bondy, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 740 Broadway, West New York, N. J. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in New Jersey to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. Respondent has distributed various push cards and punchboards for use, or which are used, in the sale and distribution of its pipes and other merchandise to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but this list is not all inclusive of the various assortments, nor does it include all of the details of the several plans which respondent has used in the distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise:

(a) One assortment consists of a pipe, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains 50 partially perforated discs, and on the face of each disc is printed the word "Push." Beneath each disc is a feminine name and a space is provided on the face of said card for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the feminine name selected. Concealed within each of said discs is a number which is disclosed when the disc is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the said card. The purchaser selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives the pipe. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

and Receive a $10.00
(picturization of a pipe)
Flame Grain Kay Woodie
Numbers 1 to 35 pay what you draw
Numbers 36 to 50 pay only 25¢
No higher

The sale of respondent's pipe by means of said push card is made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said pipe is allotted to the customer or purchaser in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives the pipe or nothing for the amount of money paid is thus determined by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of pipes along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one above described and vary only in detail.

(b) Another assortment consists of a number of pipes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pipes are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

The sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers as to which numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a pipe. The punches on the board are arranged in four sections, and the purchaser of the last punch in each section receives a pipe. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes or by punching the last number in one of the sections, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each, and a purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for a pipe or makes the last punch in one of the sections receives a pipe for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the number punched or separated from the board. The pipes are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of pipes along with punch boards, involving a lot or chance feature. Such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and the conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Kaufmann Bros. & Bondy, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pipes or other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

30 F. T. C.

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices either with assortments of any merchandise, or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

4. Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
DANIEL A. BRENNAN AND ACCO PRODUCTS, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3196. Complaint, Aug. 5, 1937—Decision, Apr. 23, 1940

Where an individual and a corporation, respectively interested and engaged in manufacture and sale of paper fasteners, as more specifically set forth as follows, namely:

I. Individual who was inventor and to whom letters patent had been issued on a number of paper fasteners, which, however, up to time herein concerned, had not been manufactured or sold under such patents, and who, for some 10 years last past, had pursued practice of coercing and intimidating manufacturers of such fasteners and retail stores throughout the country, and dealing therein, by means of threats of infringement suits in letters to former, and in circular letters to latter, not in good faith with any actual intention of bringing such infringement suits, but for purpose of obstructing, lessening, and destroying competition of persons threatened with corporation first referred to, and the competition of the paper fasteners made and sold by them with those made and sold by such corporation, with which, during course of said period, he had entered into contract to make and sell paper fasteners under all of his existing patents and all patents for such products to be acquired by him in the future; and

II. Corporation which, as above referred to, was engaged in manufacture and sale of paper fasteners and in distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in said District of Columbia in substantial competition in commerce, as aforesaid, with others similarly engaged in manufacture and sale in interstate commerce of such products, and which for many years had been principal manufacturer of such products in the United States and which it sold under trade name "Acco"—

- (a) Entered into a conspiracy to restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in manufacture, sale, and distribution of paper fasteners to customers located throughout the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, by agreeing between themselves to circularize the manufacturers of and retail dealers in such products with letters threatening suit for infringement of patents owned by said individual, and to cooperate with each other in such conspiracy by exchanging information concerning the manufacturers, dealers in, and users of said product; and

Where said individual, pursuant to said conspiracy and in furtherance thereof—

- (b) Sent, on his letterhead and over his signature, not writing in good faith, and without ever bringing any infringement suit against any manufacturer, dealer in or user of paper fasteners, to certain stationers, list of which, as customers of certain competitors, he had requested of and received from said corporation, a letter purporting to be an infringement notice and purporting to recite unfavorable legal position, as regards patent infringements of patents owned by said individual, occupied by the various manufacturers of paper fasteners mentioned in letter in question, and to put recipients of such letters on notice that he intended to assert his rights by means of infringement suits;

- (c) Circularized and mailed to dealers in paper fasteners, somewhat later letter, over his signature, and not in good faith and with no intention of bringing any infringement suits and without ever, up to time of his death, bringing any suit against concern particularly referred to or any dealer in or user of the "Favorite Fastener" made by said concern, but for the purpose of enhancing sales of products made by corporation herein involved and of hindering and harrassing competitors therewith, which letter purported to be infringement notice relative to "Favorite Fastener" made and sold by said concern and threatened infringement suit, and which letter was not confined to customers of said concern, but sent to all known office supply dealers in the United States; and
- (d) Advised such persons as made inquiries as the result of said letters as sent out by him in May and June of year in question, that the only paper fastener on the market that could be safely bought without likelihood of patent litigation was the "Acco" fastener made by aforesaid corporation;

With the effect that the result of the acts and conduct of said individual and said corporation pursuant to such conspiracy, up to the time of the recent death of said individual, was to tend to substantially lessen, restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in interstate sale of paper fasteners throughout the several States and, during period in question, to hinder and prevent competitors of said corporation from selling their products to stationers and other retailers of paper fasteners throughout the United States and, during said period, to create a monopoly in said corporation in manufacture and sale in commerce aforesaid of such products:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were, up to the time of said individual's death as above set forth, all to the prejudice of competitors of said corporation and of the public, and had a dangerous tendency to and did actually hinder and prevent competition in sale of paper fasteners in commerce, and unreasonably restrained interstate commerce therein, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Daniel A. Brennan, an individual, and Acco Products, Inc., a corporation, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest,

1043

hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, is an individual engaged in the practice of patent law, and maintains his office in Room 1452, 10 South La Salle Street in the city of Chicago, within the State of Illinois. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, is an inventor and letters patent have issued to him on a number of paper fasteners. Said respondent does not manufacture or sell any of the products for which he has received patents, and at the present time none of such products are being manufactured and sold under said patents.

PAR. 2. Said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business located at Thirty-ninth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, Long Island City, within said State of New York. Said respondent is now, and for a long period of time, to wit: For more than 5 years last past, has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of paper fasteners and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent Acco Products, Inc., causes said paper fasteners when sold by it to be transported to the purchasers thereof located in the State of New York, in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 5 years last past has been, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondent in said paper fasteners between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business the said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., is now, and for more than 5 years last past has been in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with sundry other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale of paper fasteners. Said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., sells its paper fasteners under the trade name "Acco" and has for many years been the principal manufacturer of paper fasteners in the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, obtained his first patent on paper fasteners in the year 1930, and since that time has obtained five additional patents for paper fasteners. In the spring of 1936, said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, entered into an agreement with respondent Acco Products, Inc., by which he licensed said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., to manufacture and sell paper fasteners under all of his existing patents and under all patents for paper fasteners to be acquired by him, the said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, in the future, but to the present date respondent, Acco Products, Inc., has not manufactured or sold any paper fastener under any patent issued to or owned by said respondent Daniel A. Brennan.

PAR. 4. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, since the year 1930, has pursued a practice of coercing and intimidating manufacturers of paper fasteners and retail stores throughout the country dealing in paper fasteners by means of threats of infringement suits, which said threats were contained in letters to manufacturers of paper fasteners and in circular letters mailed to retail dealers in paper fasteners generally. None of said threats of infringement were made in good faith or with any actual intention of bringing any such said infringement suits, but they were made for the purpose of obstructing, lessening, and destroying the competition of said persons threatened, with respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and the competition of the paper fasteners manufactured and sold by them with the paper fasteners manufactured and sold by respondent Acco Products, Inc.

PAR. 5. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan and said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., acting in cooperation with each other for more than 1 year last past and particularly since June 9, 1936, have entered into an understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy among and between themselves to restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of paper fasteners to customers located throughout the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia as aforesaid, by agreeing to circularize the manufacturers of and retail dealers in paper fasteners by means of letters threatening suit for infringement of patents owned by said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, and to cooperate with each other by exchanging information concerning the manufacturers, dealers in, and users of paper fasteners.

PAR. 6. Said individual respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, and said corporate respondent, Acco Products, Inc., in furtherance of their aforesaid understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy, prepared and sent to all manufacturers of paper fasteners and to all known dealers in paper fasteners, a letter dated May 5, 1936, on the stationery and over the signature of said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, which said letter purported to be an infringement notice and which purported to recite the position as regards infringements occupied by the various manufacturers of paper fasteners and to put the recipient on notice that said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, intended to assert his rights by means of infringement suits. Thereafter, and subsequent to the making of the agreement between said respondents whereby said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., was licensed to manufacture paper fasteners under patents held or to be acquired by said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, said respondents, acting in cooperation with each other, circularized the dealers in paper fasteners by means of a letter dated June 10, 1936, over the signature of said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, which said letter purported to be an infringement notice relative to "Favorite Fastener" manufactured and sold by Cook and Cobb and threatened to bring suit for infringement. The said infringement notices were not confined to customers of Cook and Cobb but were sent to all known office-supply dealers in the United States. Said letters were not mailed in good faith by respondent who had no intention of bringing any infringement suits but were mailed for the purpose of enhancing the sales of the products manufactured by respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and of hindering and harassing the competitors of said Acco Products, Inc. In truth and in fact, no infringement suits against any manufacturer, dealer, or user of paper fasteners has ever been brought by said respondent Daniel A. Brennan.

PAR. 7. The result of the acts and conduct of said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, and of the said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., as hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6, has been and now is to unnaturally tend to substantially lessen, restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in the interstate sale of paper fasteners throughout the several States of the United States, and to enhance the prices of said paper fasteners above the prices which have theretofore prevailed and which would prevail in normal, natural, and open competition between said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and other manufacturers of paper fasteners, and also to tend to create a monopoly in said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., in the manufacture and sale of paper fasteners in interstate commerce.

PAR. 8. The foregoing alleged acts and practices of the said respondents, Daniel A. Brennan and Acco Products, Inc., have been and still are to the prejudice of the buying public generally and to purchasers of paper fasteners in particular and of their competitors as aforesaid and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER DISMISSING COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 5, 1937, issued, and on August 6, 1937, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent

Findings

ents, Daniel A. Brennan and Acco Products, Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Reuben J. Martin, attorney for the Commission. Thereafter the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motions for permission to withdraw said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, said substitute answers and the testimony and other evidence, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, was prior to his death on February 15, 1940, engaged in the practice of patent law and maintained his office at 10 South La Salle Street in the city of Chicago within the State of Illinois. Said respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, was an inventor and letters patent were issued to him on a number of paper fasteners. The said respondent, Brennan, did not manufacture or sell any of the products on which letters patent were issued to him and at the present time none of such products are being manufactured and sold under said patents.

PAR. 2. The respondent, Acco Products, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York. It maintains its office and principal place of business at Thirty-ninth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, Long Island City, N. Y. The said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., for more than 5 years has been, and is now, engaged in the manufacture and sale of paper fasteners and in the distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., when said paper fasteners are sold by it, causes them to be transported to the purchasers thereof, located in the State of New York, in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 5 years last past has been, a constant current of trade in commerce, by said respondent in said paper fasteners, between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., in the course and conduct of its said business, is now, and for more than 5 years last past has been, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations who are similarly engaged in the manufacture and sale in interstate commerce of paper fasteners. Said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., sells its paper fasteners under the trade name "Acco" and said respondent has for many years been the principal manufacturer of paper fasteners in the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent, Brennan, from the year 1930 up to the time of his death on February 15, 1940, pursued a practice of coercing and intimidating manufacturers of paper fasteners and retail stores throughout the country dealing in paper fasteners by means of threats of infringement suits, which said threats were contained in letters to manufacturers of paper fasteners and in circular letters mailed to retail dealers in paper fasteners generally. None of said threats of infringement were made in good faith or with any actual intention of bringing any such said infringement suits, but they were made for the purpose of obstructing, lessening, and destroying the competition of said persons threatened with respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and the competition of the paper fasteners manufactured and sold by them with the paper fasteners manufactured and sold by respondent Acco Products, Inc.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Brennan, entered into a contract effective March 21, 1936, with the respondent, Acco Products, Inc., by which he licensed said Acco Products, Inc., to manufacture and sell paper fasteners under all of his existing patents and all patents for paper fasteners to be acquired by said respondent, Brennan, in the future. Thereafter, the said respondent, Brennan, and the said respondent, Acco Products, Inc., entered into a conspiracy to restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of paper fasteners to customers located throughout the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia by agreeing between themselves to circularize the manufacturers of and retail dealers in paper fasteners with letters threatening suit for infringement of patents owned by said respondent Brennan; and to cooperate with each other in this conspiracy by exchanging information concerning the manufacturers, dealers in, and users of paper fasteners. Pursuant to said conspiracy and in furtherance thereof, respondent, Brennan, requested of and received from respondent, Acco Products, Inc., a list of stationers who were customers of certain competitors and under date of May 5, 1936, said respondent, Brennan, sent out to said stationers on his letterhead and over his signature a letter purporting to be an infringement notice and purporting to recite the unfavorable legal position as regards patent infringements of said patents owned by respondent, Brennan, occupied by the various manufacturers of paper fasteners mentioned in said letter and purporting to put the recipients of said letters on notice that said respondent, Brennan, intended to assert his rights by means of infringement suits. Said letter was not written in good faith and no infringement suit was ever brought by said respondent, Brennan, against any manufacturer, dealer in, or user of paper fasteners.

PAR. 5. Pursuant to the conspiracy set out in paragraph 4 hereof, the respondent, Brennan, using the list furnished him by the respondent, Acco Products, Inc., circularized the dealers in paper fasteners by means of a letter dated June 10, 1936, over his signature which said letter purported to be an infringement notice relative to "Favorite Fastener" manufactured and sold by Cooke & Cobb and threatened to bring suit for infringement. Said letters were not confined to customers of Cooke & Cobb but were sent to all known office supply dealers in the United States. Said letters were not mailed in good faith by the respondent, Brennan, who had no intention of bringing any infringement suits and who up to the time of his death on February 15, 1940, never brought any suit against Cooke & Cobb or against any dealer in or user of the "Favorite Fastener" but were mailed for the purpose of enhancing the sales of the products manufactured by respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and of hindering and harassing the competitors of said respondent Acco Products, Inc.

PAR. 6. The respondent, Brennan, advised such persons as made inquiries, as the result of his letters of May 5, 1936, and June 10, 1936, that the only paper fastener on the market that could be safely bought without the likelihood of patent litigation was the Acco fastener manufactured by the respondent Acco Products, Inc.

PAR. 7. The result of the acts and conduct of the respondent, Brennan, and of the respondent, Acco Products, Inc., pursuant to the conspiracy hereinbefore set-out up to the time of the death of said respondent, Brennan, on February 15, 1940, was to tend to substantially lessen, restrict, restrain, and suppress competition in the interstate sale of paper fasteners throughout the several States of the United States and during said period to hinder and prevent said competitors of Acco Products, Inc., from selling their products to stationers and other retailers of paper fasteners throughout the United States. Said acts also tended during said period to create a monopoly in the respondent, Acco Products, Inc., in the manufacture and sale of paper fasteners in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein set forth were up to the time of the death of the respondent, Brennan, on February 15, 1940, all to the prejudice of competitors of respondent, Acco Products, Inc., and of the public; had a dangerous tendency to and did actually hinder and prevent competition in the sale of paper fasteners in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; did unreasonably restrain interstate commerce in paper fasteners and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

In view of the foregoing findings as to the facts and conclusion, It is ordered, That said complaint be, and the same hereby is, dismissed.

ORDER DISMISSING COMPLAINT

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission upon the record, and it appearing that respondent, Daniel A. Brennan, died on February 15, 1940, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being fully advised in the premises;

It is ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3571. Complaint, Aug. 31, 1938—Decision, Apr. 23, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale of courses of home study instruction in various subjects, including education, writing, psychology, theology, chemistry, business and commerce, law, agriculture, engineering, accounting, advertising, sales management, and many other subjects, and in sending lesson material and text books in the respective courses sold by it to the purchasers thereof in various other States, from the apartment in which was carried on the entire business of the school and which was occupied as a residence by the individual and his wife who were president and secretary-treasurer thereof—

- (a) Made use of words "College" and "University" as respectively included in corporate and former corporate name under which it did business, and displayed said names, as case might be, on catalogs descriptive of the various courses and subjects taught by it, and on letterheads and other printed matter, and in advertisements in periodicals of general circulation in various States set forth, and represented thereby that it offered home study courses of instruction leading to degrees in art, sciences, philosophy, education, and a large number of other branches of learning, at low cost and on easy terms; Facts being school conducted by it as aforesaid lacked all the requirements with respect to equipment and educational facilities which would entitle it to be classified as a college or university, and, while it might be possible for a student to take by correspondence one-half of required work leading to a degree, all accredited educational institutions of higher learning require that at least 2 years of study of the full 4-year course leading to a degree be by actual attendance in classes, and degrees conferred by it were not recognized by such institutions;

With result that, through such false and misleading use of words "College" and "University," there was created in minds of members of public desiring to obtain an education by correspondence, erroneous impression that it was in fact conducting a college or university, as generally accepted and understood as meaning educational institutions of higher learning, with power to confer degrees, resident students, and resident faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of learning, including the liberal arts and sciences, and, in case of universities, one or more special branches of learning such as theology, law and medicine; and

- (b) Set forth in its catalogs names of the officers of administration and faculty members, followed respectively by a series of letters indicative of and representing various academic degrees, such as those conferred in recognition of academic work or scholastic attainment by recognized colleges and universities, and thereby represented to prospective purchasers of its courses of study that persons thus named and referred to therein as members of its faculty possessed degrees which had been granted them by recognized colleges or universities, and that such persons were all educators of high scholastic attainment and fully qualified to give instruction in the respective subjects listed in said catalog, and that they were full-time resident members of the faculty of the school;

Facts being degrees referred to were conferred by said corporation or business while being carried on under corporate name including word "University," and were so conferred, in many instances, without having respective persons concerned complete the course or courses of instruction by correspondence or otherwise, or make any showing as a basis for the conferring of such degrees, which, in some instances, were conferred upon faculty members without their knowledge, and which, as aforesaid, were listed in its catalogs distributed widely in the various States and the conferring of which was beyond the authority of such business or corporation, with no faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of higher learning, including the liberal arts and sciences and one or more special branches of learning, such as theology, law or medicine;

With tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead and deceive members of the public into the erroneous belief that its said claims and representations were true, and that the school conducted by it was a college, university, or graduate school with authority to confer degrees, and with resident student body and resident faculty of learned persons, with academic degrees granted by recognized institutions of higher learning, and to induce members of public, including prospective students, to purchase its courses because of erroneous belief engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to it from competitors engaged in sale in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia of similar home-study correspondence courses, and with effect of diverting business to it from competitors who do not make the same or similar misleading representations and do not misrepresent the nature of their schools, the qualifications of their instructors or the academic degrees earned or awarded to them, but truthfully and accurately state the facts in respect thereto; to their substantial injury and prejudice:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 4240 Clarendon Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said respondent is now, and has been since on or about the 1st day of December 1936, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction in various subjects such as arts and sciences, home economics, engineering, agriculture, psychology, education, chemistry, business, theology, letters, speech, and law, all of which are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business, during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause its said courses of study and instruction to be transported from its said place of business in Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. For more than 2 years prior to the said 1st day of December 1936, said business was conducted by the same corporation under the then corporate name of McKinley-Roosevelt University. On the date above given, the corporate name was changed to McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences.

PAR. 2. There is now, and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned, a course of trade in said courses of instructions so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar correspondence courses of instruction in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent distributes to purchasers and prospective purchasers of its said courses of study catalogues descriptive of the various courses and subjects taught by it. Said catalogue bears on its outside cover the title

College of Arts and Sciences

and on the title page the inscription

McKinley-Roosevelt
University
Founded 1908
Charter in 1913 by the State of Illinois
As an Educational Institution
Not for Profit

Page 3 of said catalog contains the names of the officers of administration and faculty members. Each of said names is followed by a series of letters, indicative of and representing various degrees or titles conferred in recognition of academic work, a number of names carrying four different degrees.

On its letterheads and other printed matter appear the words "McKinley-Roosevelt University."

PAR. 5. The use of the words "College" and "University" in respondent's corporate name, catalogs, and other printed matter as aforesaid serves as a representation to prospective purchasers of respondent's courses and to students who enroll that said McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences is in fact a college or a university. The use of the words "College" and "University" to describe or refer to respondent's correspondence school is false and misleading in that it creates in the minds of a part of the public, and especially those members of the public who are interested in obtaining an education by correspondence, the impression that the respondent is operating and conducting a college or a university, which terms are generally accepted and understood to mean an educational institution of higher learning with the power to confer degrees and with a resident faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of learning which include the liberal arts and sciences and one or more special branches of learning, such as theology, law, and medicine.

In setting forth said various academic degrees after the names of its said administrative officers and faculty members, respondent represents to prospective purchasers of its said courses and to students enrolling in its said correspondence school that the persons possessing said respective degrees are all teachers of high scholastic attainments, especially well qualified to teach the several subjects offered by said school, and implies that said members of its faculty are full-time resident teachers and professors.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact said McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences is not an educational institution of higher learning consisting of resident colleges but is a correspondence school conducted by the president of respondent from an apartment in the city of Chicago; it has no power to confer degrees which are recognized by colleges and universities having a reputable character as institutions of learning; it has no faculty of learned persons as instructors in various higher branches of learning including the liberal arts and sciences and one or more special branches of learning such as theology, law, or medicine. The faculty listed in respondent's said catalog consists of individuals residing in various States of the United States who are engaged in professions and avocations other than teaching. Lessons and papers which are received in respondent's place of business in Chicago from its students for review and correction are forwarded by respondent to said various faculty members, who grade or correct the lessons and return them to respondent's office in Chicago, whence they are again sent to its said students. Final examinations of said students are conducted in the same manner.

In truth and in fact, a number of the degrees appearing after the names of said faculty members are not degrees conferred by a duly recognized institution of higher learning in recognition of scholastic attainment but are conferred upon said persons by respondent, and in some instances without their knowledge.

PAR. 7. The false, misleading, and deceptive practices as hereinabove described, in using the words "College" and "University" in its corporate name and the words "College" and "University" in its catalogs, stationery, and otherwise; in representing by the use of said corporate name and through advertisements, catalogs, circulars, and otherwise that it is an institution of higher learning with power to confer degrees in the arts and sciences; in representing that the members of its faculty are all individuals possessing many degrees conferred upon them by institutions of higher learning for study and scholastic attainment and as well qualified to teach the respective subjects described in respondent's literature, all have a tendency to and do induce prospective purchasers to subscribe to respondent's courses of study and to enroll in its said extension school, in the erroneous and mistaken belief that the representations and statements made by respondent as hereinabove set forth are true.

PAR. 8. There are among competitors of respondent many who truthfully represent the character of their schools and the accomplishments and attainments of their teaching personnel and who do not in any other manner unfairly and untruthfully represent their method of doing business.

PAR. 9. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent, as hereinabove set out, are calculated to and do have a tendency and capacity to lead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the aforesaid acts and representations of respondent, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased respondent's courses of instruction, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from other corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged in the business of selling similar correspondence courses of instruction who truthfully advertise and represent their schools and who do not hold themselves out to be universities. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 31, 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused the same to be served upon respondent, McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. No testimony was tendered by or on behalf of respondent in opposition to the allegations of said complaint, but counsel for said respondent tendered three pieces of documentary evidence which were received as exhibits. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at 4240 Clarendon Avenue, in Chicago, in said State. Since on or about December 1, 1936, respondent has been engaged in the business of selling courses of home-study instruction in various subjects, including education, writing, psychology, theology, chemistry, business and commerce, law, agriculture, engineering, accounting, advertising, sales management, and many other subjects. It has caused the lesson material and textbooks in the respective courses of instruction sold by it to be sent by the United States mail from its place of business in Chicago, in the State of Illinois, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof. In the conduct of its said business respondent has been, and is now, in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the sale of courses of instruction of the same general nature as those sold by respondent, as well as in other lines of study, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, is the successor of a number of correspondence schools operated under various corporate names by Walter Raleigh Taylor. Respondent's immediate predecessor was McKinley-Roosevelt University, a corporation, which by change of name became McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, the designated respondent herein. The said Walter Raleigh Taylor is the president of respondent corporation, and his wife, Jessie M. Taylor, is its secretary-treasurer. Respondent corporation was originally incorporated in 1913 as Washington University and has operated under the charter then granted after several changes of the corporate name. Respondent has also made use of the name McKinley-Roosevelt Graduate College to designate its school and courses of instruction offered.

PAR. 3. The respondent since its organization has not conducted a residence school, and neither did it when operating under the name McKinley-Roosevelt University. The entire business of the school conducted by respondent is carried on in an apartment of a building located in one of the residential districts of Chicago, Ill., which apartment is occupied as a residence by the said Walter Raleigh Taylor and his wife, Jessie M. Taylor. The school so conducted by respondent lacks all of the requirements with respect to equipment and educational facilities which would entitle it to be classified as a college or university. It has set up courses of study to be given entirely by correspondence. Respondent has caused and is causing advertisements to be published in magazines and other periodicals having a general circulation in various States of the United States, in which advertisements the announcement is made that the respondent offers home-study courses of instruction leading to degrees in art, sciences, philosophy, education, and a large number of other branches of learning at low cost and on easy terms. One type of such advertisements was headed:

Earn a Degree at Home.
Home Study Courses Leading to Degrees in Arts, Sciences * * *

It may be possible for a student to take by correspondence one-half of the required work leading to a degree. However, all accredited educational institutions of higher learning require that at least 2 years of study of the full 4-year course leading to a degree be by actual attendance at classes. Degrees conferred by respondent are not recognized by accredited institutions of higher learning.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent distributed to purchasers and prospective purchasers of its said courses of study catalogs descriptive of the various courses and subjects taught by it. Said catalogs had on their outside cover the title

College of Arts and Sciences
College of Engineering Annual Catalogue

and on the title page the inscription

McKinley-Roosevelt
University
Founded 1908

Chartered in 1913 by the State of Illinois
As an Educational Institution
Not For Profit

Said catalogs contained the names of the officers of administration and faculty members. Each of said names is followed by a series of letters indicative of and representing various academic degrees such as those conferred in recognition of academic work or scholastic attainment by recognized colleges and universities.

On its letterheads and other printed matter appear the words "McKinley-Roosevelt University."

PAR. 5. The use by respondent in its corporate name of the word "College" and the word "University" and the reference in its catalogs, advertisements, and advertising matter to the correspondence school conducted by it as a college or university serve as representations to prospective purchasers of the courses of instruction offered for sale by it that such school is in fact a college or university. The use by respondent of the words "College" and "University," as stated, is false and misleading and is calculated to, and does, create in the minds of members of the public who desire to obtain an education by correspondence the erroneous impression that respondent is in fact conducting a college or university, which terms are generally accepted and understood to mean educational institutions of higher learning with power to confer degrees, having resident students and a resident faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of learning, including the liberal arts and sciences, and in reference to universities one or more special branches of learning such as theology, law, and medicine.

PAR. 6. While the business conducted by respondent was being conducted as McKinley-Roosevelt University, numerous degrees were conferred upon numerous persons described in its catalogs as members of the faculty of the school conducted by it, which catalogs were given wide distribution in various States of the United States. These degrees were conferred upon the respective persons in many instances without having them complete the course or courses of instruction by correspondence or otherwise, or make any showing as a basis for conferring such degrees, and, in some instances, such degrees were conferred upon faculty members without their knowledge. The letters indicative of the degrees so conferred appeared after the respective names of the persons described in such catalogs as members of the faculty and thereby said McKinley-Roosevelt represented to prospective purchasers of the courses of study for sale by it that the persons possessing said degrees had been granted the same by recognized colleges or universities, that they were all educators of high scholastic attainments and fully qualified to give instruction in the respective subjects listed in said catalogs, and that such persons were full-time resident members of the faculty of said school.

PAR. 7. While the school now conducted by respondent was being conducted as McKinley-Roosevelt University, a stipulation was made and entered into on November 17, 1936, by and between the Commission and said McKinley-Roosevelt University, in which stipulation it agreed and the Commission now finds that said McKinley-Roosevelt University was not an educational institution of higher learning; that it did not have authority to confer degrees; that it did not have a faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of higher learning including the liberal arts and sciences and one or more special branches of learning such as theology, law, or medicine; and that it had conferred a large number of degrees upon a number of persons, including persons described by it as members of the faculty of the school conducted by it. In said stipulation said McKinley-Roosevelt University further agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "University" as a part of its corporate name and from the use of a corporate or trade name containing the word "University," in any way that would import or imply that said school was in fact a "University" as commonly understood and generally accepted by the public. It was further stipulated that said school should cease and desist from using symbols representing academic degrees after the names of members of its faculty when such degrees were conferred by it and did not represent degrees conferred by institutions of higher learning in recognition of study and attainment. Thereafter, the name of the corporation was changed as heretofore stated. Since said change of name, respondent has made use of catalogs, office, and business stationery and advertising matter which it has given wide distribution in various States of the United States in which the school so conducted by respondent is described and referred to as the McKinley-Roosevelt University founded in 1908. Catalogs so distributed also contain a list of names of persons described as members of the faculty of such school, and after each of said names are combinations of letters indicative of college or university degrees, many of which were conferred upon the respective persons by said McKinley-Roosevelt University and did not represent degrees conferred by institutions of higher learning in recognition of study and attainment.

PAR. 8. The representations of respondent as aforesaid are false and misleading and have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the erroneous belief that such claims and representations are true and that the school conducted by respondent is a college, university, or graduate school, with authority to confer degrees and with a resident student body and a resident faculty of learned persons with academic degrees granted by recognized institutions of higher learning. Said representations of respondent have had the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public, including prospective students, to purchase respondent's courses of instruction because of the erroneous belief engendered as above set forth and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of similar home-study courses pursued by correspondence. There were and are among the competitors of respondent those who do not make the same or similar misleading representations as made by respondent, as herein set out, and who do not misrepresent the nature of the schools conducted by them, the qualifications of their instructors or the academic degrees earned or awarded to them, but who truthfully and accurately state the facts in such respects. Respondent's said acts and practices have tended to and have in fact diverted business to respondent from its said competitors to the substantial injury and prejudice of such competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and to competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of, and in opposition to, the allegations of said complaint, and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, McKinley-Roosevelt College of Arts and Sciences, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of correspondence courses of study and instruction in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From using the word "college" or the word "university" in the corporate or trade name used in the conduct of such business or as descriptive thereof.
2. From representing, through the use of the word "college" or "university" in any corporate or trade name or in catalogs, advertising literature, or otherwise, or by any other means, that the business conducted by respondent is a university or college or institution of higher learning.

3. From representing, through the use of the symbols indicating academic degrees after the names of members of its faculty, or by any other means, that members of its faculty are educators duly qualified by a higher education, when the degrees so indicated are not the result of study pursued in residence at recognized colleges or universities duly authorized to grant the respective degrees indicated, or when the symbols of academic degrees used do not represent degrees actually granted by such institutions to such members of its faculty for attainment in the field of knowledge, and when the persons to whom the degrees represented by the symbols used are attributed are not teachers, educators, or persons of high educational attainment.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Docket 3816. Complaint, June 9, 1939—Decision, Apr. 29, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of medicinal preparation for use as local anesthetic, under name "Guild Procaine Epinephrine Anesthetic," and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers, such as practicing dentists, physicians and dental colleges, in other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements which it disseminated concerning its said product through the mails, in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce between the various States, and through other means, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of its said preparation—

- (a) Represented that it was a guild or association of persons operating for the benefit, education, and enlightenment of the dental and medical professions, without profit, and that its purpose was the advancement of the science of anesthesia, through use of its corporate or trade name "Anesthetic Advancement and Research Guild, Inc.," and statements displaying the same, and such matter or legends as "Organized in the Interests of the Medical and Dental Professions" and "* * * has made a most thorough study and analysis of local anesthetics and finds that there is absolutely no reason nor foundation for present high prices," and "In its serious efforts to help the Dental Profession the Guild feels that its policy of education and enlightenment should include, wherever an item is not equitably priced, the production in its own fully equipped laboratory of the Equivalent or Better of the item involved that it may thus offer to the dentist at the lowest possible price," and "The success of the Guild is your success. * * *," etc.; and
- (b) Made use also of trade or corporate name "Guild Anesthetic Laboratories" in various advertising matter, circulars, letterheads, and other printed matter disseminated as aforesaid, and featured in certain of such matter word "guild" in such corporate or trade name, and thereby represented that its organization was that of a guild or association of persons engaged in kindred pursuits for mutual protection, aid and cooperation, and not a commercial corporation organized for profit;

Facts being it was not a guild or association of persons engaged in such pursuits, but commercial business organized, existing, and operated for profit, was not impartially engaged in research for purpose of advancement of science of anesthesia for benefit of dental or medical professions, and did not operate solely for benefit, education, and enlightenment of such professions;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and of inducing portion of such public,

Mr. Robert L. Kahn, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Guild Anesthetic Laboratories, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Guild Anesthetic Laboratories, is now and has been at all times mentioned herein, a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2457-2459 South Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, and State of Illinois. Said respondent corporation was originally incorporated in 1937 under the name of Anesthetic Advancement and Research Guild, Inc., an Illinois corporation, and within the year last past, changed its name to the one presently used, to wit: Guild Anesthetic Laboratories.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a medicinal preparation known as "Guild Procaine Epinephrine Anesthetic," for use as a local anesthetic. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof, such as practicing dentists, physicians and dental colleges, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. At all times respondent has maintained a course of trade in said preparation sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its medicinal preparation, by United States mails and in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false and misleading advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

ANESTHETIC ADVANCEMENT AND RESEARCH GUILD, INC.
ORGANIZED IN THE INTERESTS OF THE MEDICAL AND DENTAL PROFESSIONS

The Anesthetic Advancement and Research Guild has made a most thorough study and analysis of local anesthetics and finds that there is absolutely no reason nor foundation for present high prices.

In its serious efforts to help the Dental Profession the GUILD feels that its policy of education and enlightenment should include, wherever an item is not equitably priced, the production in its own fully equipped laboratory of the EQUIVALENT OR BETTER of the item involved that it may thus offer to the dentist at the lowest possible price.

The success of the Guild is your success. You are invited to join the ranks of our countless friends throughout the country, Dentists like yourself who are anxious to help usher in a new era for the Dental trade.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, and also through the use of the corporate or trade name of "Anesthetic Advancement and Research Guild, Inc.," the respondent represents that it is a guild or association of persons operated for the benefit, education and enlightenment of the dental and medical professions without profit and that its purpose is the advancement of the science of anesthesia.

PAR. 4. In addition to the above statements and representations, the respondent also uses the trade or corporate name of "Guild Anesthetic Laboratories," in various advertising matter, circulars, letterheads, and other printed matter disseminated as aforesaid. In certain of this printed matter the word "guild," when used in the corporate or trade name, is set out in a different type of lettering with the effect of stressing, emphasizing, and directing the attention of the reader to the word "guild."

By this means the respondent represents that this organization is that of a guild or an association of persons engaged in kindred pursuits for mutual protection, aid and cooperation, and not a commercial corporation organized for profit.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact the respondent is not a guild or association of persons engaged in kindred pursuits for protection and cooperation, but instead is a commercial business organized, existing, and operated for profit. Respondent is not impartially engaged in research for the purpose of advancement of the science of anesthesia, in the interest of the dental or medical profession. It does not operate solely for the benefit, education, and enlightenment of the dental and medical profession.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, and representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said preparation, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations containing drugs.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS AND ORDER <sup>1</sup>

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and stated that it waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion herein on the 14th day of March 1940, that respondent had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and it appearing that said findings as to the facts should be modified in certain respects, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its modified findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Anesthetic Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located at 2457-2459 South Michigan Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. This corporation was originally incorporated in 1937 under the name Anesthetic Advancement and Research Guild, Inc., an Illinois corporation. Within the last year or two the corporate name was changed to Guild Anesthetic Laboratories. This corporate name has been used until very recently, the corporate name now having been changed to Anesthetic Laboratories, Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a medicinal preparation known as "Guild Procaine Epinephrine Anesthetic," for use as a local anesthetic. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof, such as practicing dentists, physicians and dental colleges, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. At all times respondent has maintained a course of trade in said preparation sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its medicinal preparation, by United States mails and in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which have been distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation; and has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of, false and misleading advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said preparation, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and stated that it waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the Commission having issued its order to cease and desist herein on the 14th day of March 1940, and it appearing that said findings as to the facts and order to cease and desist should be modified in certain respects, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its modified order to cease and desist.

It is ordered, That the respondent Anesthetic Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its medicinal products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner that respondent is a guild or an association of persons engaged in kindred pursuits for mutual protection, aid and cooperation, or that respondent is anything other than a commercial business existing or operating for profit.

2. Representing that respondent is impartially engaged in research for the purpose of advancement of the science of anesthesia or that

ROXANNA CANNING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3904. Complaint, Sept. 30, 1939—Decision, Apr. 29, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of dog food and in sale and distribution under various trade names of various brands thereof, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such foods in commerce as aforesaid—

Represented that its said various brands contained beef byproducts, ground beef bone or beef, and that its dog food was a scientifically balanced ration and scientifically balanced beef ration for dogs, through such statements and representations, with respect to ingredients and efficacy of said dog foods, as "Blackspot Brand. A Scientifically Balanced Beef Ration," "Dog Food. Contains Beef By-Products * * * Ground Beef Bone * * *," and "Harty Brand. A Scientifically Balanced Ration," "Contains Beef By-Products * * * Ground Beef Bone * * *," facts being its said products did not contain such ingredients and were neither scientific nor balanced rations, or scientifically balanced beef rations;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial part of purchasing and consuming public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations were true, and with consequence, as result of such mistaken and erroneous belief, that such public purchased substantial amount of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors engaged in manufacture, sale, and distribution of similar products and who truthfully represent character and ingredients thereof; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. S. Brogdyne Teu, II for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Roxanna Canning Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Roxanna Canning Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio and having its principal office and place of business in the city of Lebanon, State of Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various brands of dog food, which it sells under the trade names of Harty Dog Food Co. and Dodds Packing Co. For this purpose the respondent maintains a factory and place of business in the city of Dodds, State of Ohio. Respondent causes said dog food, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said dog food in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and during all the times mentioned herein, has been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships selling and distributing dog foods in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has made false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with reference to the ingredients of its various brands of dog food and their efficacy as a ration for dogs. Among and typical of such false, deceptive, and misleading representations made by the respondent are statements concerning its said products appearing on labels attached to the containers and cartons in which said products are packed and sold, as follows:

BLACKSPOT Brand A Scientifically Balanced BEEF RATION	DOG FOOD Contains Beef By-Products Cereal Composed of Wheat, Corn, Oats, and Soy Bean Products, Ground Beef Bone, Beef, Carrots, Salt and Cod Liver Oil Prepared in Broth. Distributed by DODDS PACKING CO. Waynesville, Ohio.	HARTY Wholesome—Nutritious  A Scientifically Balanced Ration  Net Weight One Pound

Through the use of the aforesaid representations, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented and does now represent that its aforesaid Harty Brand and Blackspot Brand dog foods contain beef byproducts, ground beef bone and beef, and that its dog foods are scientifically balanced rations, and scientifically balanced beef rations.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent relative to said dog foods are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the respondent's dog foods do not contain beef byproducts, ground beef bone, or beef, and are not scientifically balanced rations or scientifically balanced beef rations.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has had and now has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's dog food because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of dog foods in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and who do not falsely represent the ingredients of their products. As a consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 30, 1939, issued and on October 1, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Roxanna Canning Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio. Its principal office and place of business is located in the city of Lebanon, State of Ohio.

Respondent is now and for some time past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various brands of dog food which it sells under various trade names. For the purpose of manufacturing its dog food respondent operates and maintains a plant located in the city of Dodds, State of Ohio. Respondent causes said dog food, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to the respective purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia. The respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said dog food in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

30 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and during all the times mentioned herein has been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships selling and distributing dog foods in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, as aforesaid, respondent has made false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations concerning the ingredients of which its various brands of dog food are made and with regard to the efficacy of said dog foods as a ration for dogs. Typical of the false, deceptive, and misleading representations so made by the respondent concerning its dog food are the following:

BLACKSPOT Brand A Scientifically Balanced BEEF RATION	DOG FOOD Contains Beef By-Prod- ucts Cereal Composed of Wheat, Corn, Oats and Soy Bean Products, Ground Beef Bone, Beef, Carrots, Salt and Cod Liver Oil Prepared in Broth. Guaranteed to contain not less than 8 percent Protein, 2 per- cent fat and not over 2 percent Fiber. Distributed by DODDS PACKING CO. Lebanon, Ohio.	BLACKSPOT Brand A Scientifically Balanced BEEF RATION
DOG FOOD  Net Weight 1 lb. WHOLESAME AND NUTRITIOUS		DOG FOOD  Net Weight 1 lb. WHOLESAME AND NUTRITIOUS
HARTY Brand  Keeps your Dog Healthy and Hearty	DOG FOOD Contains Beef By-Prod- ucts Cereal Composed of Wheat, Corn, Oats and Soy Bean Products, Ground Beef Bone, Beef, Carrots, Salt and Cod Liver Oil Prepared in Broth and added water sufficient to process the product properly, guaran- teed to contain not less than 10% protein, 2% fat and not over 1½% fiber or 74% water. Distributed by DODDS PACKING CO. Waynesville, Ohio.	HARTY Wholesome—Nutritious  A Scientifically Balanced Ration

Through the use by the respondent of the above set out representations and others not herein set out respondent has represented and now represents that its various brands of dog foods contain beef byproducts, ground beef bone, and beef, and that its dog food is a scientifically balanced ration, and scientifically balanced beef ration for dogs.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact the representations and statements made by the respondent with regard to its dog foods are false and misleading. Respondent's dog foods do not contain beef byproducts, ground beef bone, or beef, and are not scientifically balanced rations or scientifically balanced beef rations.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and statements in connection with the sale and distribution of its Black Spot and Harty dog food products has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true. As a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief the purchasing and consuming public have purchased a substantial amount of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of similar products, which competitors truthfully represent the character and ingredients of their respective products. As a consequence thereof substantial injury has been and is being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

It is ordered, That the respondent, Roxanna Canning Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its food for dogs known as Black Spot and Harty dog foods, or any other product containing substantially similar ingredients, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the terms "beef byproducts" or "ground beef bone" or "beef" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate or describe any ingredients of such products which ingredients are not in fact, respectively, beef byproducts, ground beef bone, or beef.

2. Representing that such products are scientifically balanced rations or scientifically balanced beef rations.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

HERBERT S. ERWIN AND MABEL T. ERWIN, TRADING AS ERWIN FEATHER QUILT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4011. Complaint, Feb. 2, 1940—Decision, Apr. 29, 1940

Where two individuals engaged, under trade name, in manufacture, sale and distribution of quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and like products, by agents and through various advertising media, to purchasers in various other States and in District of Columbia—

Represented to members of purchasing public that their said products were offered at special prices and for a limited time only, and that prices quoted were reduced or special prices which did not prevail at any and all times, through circulating to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States by mail advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, and other literature, and through agents who personally solicited orders, such false and misleading statements and representations concerning their said products as "Return this card at once for our Special Offer for This Week Only," "Mail this card today for complete information on this outstanding Summer Purchase Plan. One week only * * *," and through statements and invitations of similar tenor with respect to their so-called "Fall and Pre-Holiday Purchase Plan," and through selling to prospective purchasers thus contacted their products at prices quoted, and represented as special prices or those reduced from the usual, customary and regular selling prices and as limited as to time;

Facts being their said quilts, comforts, pillows, and various other products, as above indicated, never had a usual, regular and customary retail price greater or other than that quoted pursuant to said offer, said quoted special or reduced prices at which such products were sold pursuant to said offer were not, in fact, reduced special prices for limited time only, but were in fact the usual, regular and customary retail selling prices of products in question at which they had regularly sold said products to all purchasers at all times for period of more than 1 year last past;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken beliefs that such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations were true, and of inducing portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, to purchase their said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. Malcolm H. Lindsey and Mr. Brough Richey, Jr., of Columbus, Ohio, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Herbert S. Erwin and Mabel T. Erwin, individually, and trading as Edwin Feather Quilt Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issue its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Herbert S. Erwin and Mabel T. Erwin are individuals operating and doing business under the trade name of Erwin Feather Quilt Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 1598 East Livingston Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and like products under the trade name of Erwin Feather Quilt Co. Said respondents now cause, and for more than 1 year last past have caused, their said products to be sold by agents and through various advertising mediums, and have caused the same, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in Columbus, Ohio, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the aforesaid State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the business set out and described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondents, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the commodities offered for sale by them, have circulated to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States by mail, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and through agents personally soliciting orders, false and misleading statements and representations concerning the value and price of the quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and various products sold by them. Among such statements and representations the following are typical examples:

Upon inquiry received from prospective purchasers procured through advertisements containing said representations, respondents, in person and through agents, contact the prospective purchasers and sell them said products at prices quoted, which quoted prices are represented to be reduced prices or special prices limited as to time and one-half the usual, customary and regular selling prices therefor.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with similar statements and representations not herein set out in full, purport to be descriptive of respondents' quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and various products and also serve as representations on the part of the respondents to members of the purchasing public that the said products are offered at special prices for a limited time only and that the prices quoted are reduced prices or special prices that do not prevail at any and all times.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations and prices quoted pursuant thereto, as hereinabove set out are deceptive, false, and misleading. Respondents' said quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes and like products have never had a usual, regular and customary retail sales price greater or other than the price quoted pursuant to said offers. The quoted special or reduced prices at which said products are sold pursuant to said offers are not in fact reduced special prices for a limited period of time. The said special prices quoted pursuant to the so-called special Pre-holiday or other offer and represented as existing for a limited period of time are in fact the usual, regular and customary retail selling prices of said products and respondents have regularly and customarily sold said products to all purchasers at all times for a period of more than 1 year last past at said prices.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their products, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs to purchase respondents' quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and other similar products.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 2, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Herbert S. Erwin and Mabel T. Erwin, individually and trading as Erwin Feather Quilt Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 18, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to the said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Herbert S. Erwin and Mabel T. Erwin are individuals operating and doing business under the trade name Erwin Feather Quilt Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 1598 East Livingston Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and like products under the trade name Erwin Feather Quilt Co. Said respondents now cause, and for more than 1 year past have caused, their said products to be sold by agents and through various advertising mediums, and have caused the same, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in Columbus, Ohio, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the aforesaid State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been for more than 1 year past, a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the business set out and described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondents, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the commodities offered for sale by them, have circulated to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States by mail, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and through agents personally soliciting orders, false and misleading statements and representations concerning the value and price of the quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and various products sold by them. Among such statements and representations the following are typical examples:

and customary retail sales price greater or other than the price quoted pursuant to said offers. The quoted special or reduced prices at which said products are sold pursuant to said offers are not in fact reduced special prices for a limited period of time. The said special prices quoted pursuant to the so-called special preholiday or other offer and represented as existing for a limited period of time are in fact the usual, regular and customary retail selling prices of said products and respondents have regularly and customarily sold said products to all purchasers at all times for a period of more than one year last past at said prices.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their products, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that such statements and representations are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs to purchase respondents' quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bedspreads, drapes, and other similar products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Herbert S. Erwin and Mabel T. Erwin, individually and trading as Erwin Feather Quilt Co., or trading under any other name or names, their agents, representatives, and employees directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of quilts, comforts, pillows, pads, bed spreads, drapes, or other like products

LELAND F. BENHAM, TRADING AS LE FLOR COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4031. Complaint, Feb. 14, 1940—Decision, Apr. 29, 1940*

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of his "Le Flor Weight Reduction Tablets," together with so-called "deficient element" diet supplied therewith by him to purchasers of said tablets in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said preparation which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, through insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and through circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States, and by other means in commerce and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of his said product—

- (a) Represented that his so-called "Le Flor Method" treatment for obesity, consisting of said tablets and so-called "deficient element" diet, constituted a cure or remedy for said condition and a competent and scientific treatment therefor, containing no dehydration drugs, facts being said tablets did not constitute either a cure or remedy or competent or scientific treatment for said condition, and was of no value in treatment thereof, and, in presence therein of phenophthalein, contained in effect dehydration drug, only therapeutic value of tablets in question was as a laxative or cathartic, and neither diet supplied by him as aforesaid, nor combination of tablets and diet, constituted cure or remedy or competent and scientific treatment for condition in question; and
- (b) Represented that price of $1 per box, or 6 for $5, at which product was being offered for sale, was a special price and that regular and customary one therefor was $2 per box, facts being price at which he was offering and selling said tablets was the regular, customary, and usual one at which he offered and sold same, and was neither special reduced nor introductory;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and of inducing portion of such public because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase his said medicinal preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive chase his said medicinal preparation:

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. Edward T. Morris, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Leland F. Benham, an individual trading as Le Flor Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Leland F. Benham, is an individual with his principal office and place of business located at 620 North Orleans Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation for the treatment of obesity. Respondent supplies to purchasers of said medicinal preparation a so-called "deficient element" diet. The medicinal preparation is described as "Le Flor Weight Reduction Tablets" and is sold under the name "Le Flor Method." Prior to August 1937, respondent conducted his business under the trade name Dixie Products Co. and subsequent to that time under the name Le Flor Co.

Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning this said preparation, by the United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Announcing an amazing, new, safe, different reducing method!

* * * No Dehydration Drugs! * * *

Here is good news for you—if you wish to reduce without starvation diet, strenuous exercise or harmful drugs. Do you want to know how modern women Lose Fat quickly and regain their stunning figures—at the same time feeling younger, enjoying better health and increased physical charm?

We do not ask you to believe, we merely ask you to try the Le Flor Method and judge for yourself. You may have become skeptical after trying other highly advertised methods that were not suited to you, but we ask that you do yourself the favor of trying the Le Flor Method with the certain knowledge that if you are not entirely satisfied with the results you obtain, your money will be refunded.

Words cannot describe the wonderful feeling you will have when, after a short time with the Le Flor Method, you step upon your scales and discover to your unbounded delight that you are at least on the road back to having again your slender girlish figures, such a figure that men always admire and women everywhere desire.

Our guarantee is positive—there are no strings attached. The Le Flor Method must satisfy you or you pay nothing.

Why be fat any longer? Lose that dangerous, disfiguring, excess weight! Look like the girl you used to be, with no danger to your health. * * * Read about the new, different Le Flor Method of fat reduction! Now you, too, may have a slender youthful figure! * * *

The usual price is $2.00 per box. As an introductory feature we are offering the LE FLOR method as a six weeks' treatment at the price of 6 boxes for $5.00. If you are skeptical, we offer a one week's supply of 84 tablets (one box) at the astoundingly low price of only $1.00.

PAR. 3. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set-out herein, respondent represents that his treatment for obesity, described as the Le Flor Method, consisting of Le Flor Weight Reduction Tablets and a so-called "deficient element" diet, is a cure or remedy for obesity and a competent and scientific treatment therefor, which does not contain any dehydration drugs, and that the price of $1 per box or six boxes for $5, at which the product is being offered for sale, is a special price, and that the regular and customary price therefor is $2 per box.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondent, as aforesaid, designated Le Flor Weight Reduction Tablets, is not a cure or remedy for obesity and does not constitute a competent or scientific treatment therefor, and is of no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof. These tablets contain dextrose, phenophthalein, powdered extract of bladderwrack and talc. The drug phenophthalein, contained in said tablets, is a dehy-dration drug and respondent's representation that the tablets contain no dehydration drugs is false. The quantity of bladderwrack contained in said tablets in the dosage prescribed by the respondent is insufficient to have any effect on the body, and if taken in sufficient doses to have any effect in the treatment of obesity, its use would so interfere with digestion as to injure the health of the user. The only therapeutic value in the tablets offered for sale and sold by respondent as a cure or remedy for obesity and as a competent and scientific treatment therefor, is as a laxative or cathartic.

The diet supplied by the respondent to purchasers of said medicinal preparation is not a cure or remedy for obesity or a competent or scientific treatment therefor, nor is the combination of the tablets and the diet a cure or remedy for obesity or a competent or scientific treatment therefor.

In truth and in fact, the price of $1 per box or six boxes for $5 at which respondent offers for sale and sells said tablets is the regular, customary and usual price at which said tablets are offered for sale and sold by the respondent. The price of $1 per box or six boxes for $5 is not a special, reduced, or introductory price.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 14, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Leland F. Benham, an individual, trading as Le Flor Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 14, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Leland F. Benham, is an individual with his principal office and place of business located at 620 North Orleans Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation for the treatment of obesity. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said preparation, by the United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said preparation in commerce, as is of no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof. These tablets contain dextrose, phenolphthalein, powdered extract of bladderwrack and talc. The drug phenolphthalein, contained in said tablets, is a dehydration drug and respondent's representation that the tablets contain no dehydration drugs is false. The quantity of bladderwrack contained in said tablets in the dosage prescribed by the respondent is insufficient to have any effect on the body, and if taken in sufficient doses to have any effect in the treatment of obesity, its use would so interfere with digestion as to injure the health of the user. The only therapeutic value in the tablets offered for sale and sold by respondent as a cure or remedy for obesity and as a competent and scientific treatment therefor, is as a laxative or cathartic.

The diet supplied by the respondent to purchasers of said medicinal preparation is not a cure or remedy for obesity or a competent or scientific treatment therefor, nor is the combination of the tablets and the diet a cure or remedy for obesity or a competent or scientific treatment therefor.

In truth and in fact, the price of $1 per box or six boxes for $5 at which respondent offers for sale and sells said tablets is the regular, customary, and usual price at which said tablets are offered for sale and sold by the respondent. The price of $1 per box or six boxes for $5 is not a special, reduced, or introductory price.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing, false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Leland F. Benham, an individual trading as Le Flor Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the medicinal preparation now designated "Le Flor Weight Reduction Tablets," or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication:

1. That respondent's preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for obesity or overweight.

2. That the diet supplied by respondent in connection or conjunction with his said preparation constitutes a competent or effective or scientific treatment for obesity or overweight.

3. That the combination of respondent's preparation and the diet supplied by respondent constitutes a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for obesity or overweight.

4. That respondent's preparation possesses any therapeutic value beyond that of a cathartic or laxative.

5. That respondent's preparation contains no dehydration drugs.

6. That the price at which respondent offers for sale and sells his preparation constitutes a discount to the purchaser, or that such price is a special or reduced or introductory price, or that such price is applicable for a limited time only, when in fact such price is the usual and customary price at which respondent sells said preparation in the normal and usual course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

FASCINATION CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3321. Complaint, Feb. 1, 1938—Decision, Apr. 30, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of packaged chocolate candy, including assortments which were suitable for distribution by use of punchboards and push cards packed by it in the containers of such candy and assortments in connection with which, on request, it had shipped to the customer by the manufacturer of said devices such boards or cards designed and intended for use in distribution of candies in question wholly by lot or chance, and which included, among others, card and plan by which ultimate purchaser or consumer received package of assorted chocolates in accordance with success or failure in selecting from list of 30 girls' names that corresponding with name concealed under card's large disk as disclosed after sale of all chances, and paid for chance from 1 to 5 cents in accordance with girls' names and accompanying disk selected, and included various other cards and boards designed and intended for use in distribution of products involved, wholly by lot or chance, and of same general nature and operated in substantially same manner as cards above described—

Sold to jobbers its said candies and articles of merchandise for use as special prizes in operation of said push cards and punchboards through resale by retail dealer purchasers of said jobbers of such candy and articles by use of said devices and in accordance with sales plans as above set forth, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means by which games of chance, gift enterprises, and lotteries involving game of chance or sale of a chance in resale of candies and articles in question were conducted, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the laws of several of the States, and in competition with many who were unwilling to employ in sale and distribution of their candies and articles of merchandise dealt in by them, any method or sales plan involving games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, and refrained from the use thereof, to their competitive disadvantage;

With the result that many purchasers of candy and articles of merchandise from it were attracted by element of chance involved in sale and distribution of such products through use of push cards and punchboards furnished by it and were thereby induced to purchase such candies and merchandise offered by it, in preference to similar candies and articles offered by its competitors who do not furnish therewith such or similar devices, and with result that jobbers purchased substantial amount of such candies and articles from it, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Fascination Candy Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Fascination Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 1137 North Wood Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers. Respondent causes and has caused its products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in the State of Illinois and in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and candy products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of respondent's assortments illustrates the sales plan or method used in the sale and distribution of its products to the purchasing public, and is as follows:

Complaint

This assortment consists of a 1-pound basket of assorted candy and a device commonly called a push card. The card contains a number of partially perforated disks and a master seal. On each disk is printed a girl's name, and concealed within each disk is printed a number. Concealed within the master seal there is a name corresponding to the name on one of the disks. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of pushes there are on the card, but are not arranged in numerical sequence. Persons selecting numbers 1 to 5 pay in cents the amount of such numbers, and for all numbers over five pay 5 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names. Space is provided on the card for recording the name of each purchaser opposite the name selected. The person selecting the name which corresponds to the name under the master seal receives the basket of candy. The basket of candy is worth more than the amount paid for the lucky push. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk removed or separated from the card. The name under the master seal is concealed until all the sales have been made and the said master seal has been removed from the card. Thus the amount to be paid by the customer is determined wholly by lot or chance, and the said basket of candy is distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures, sells, and distributes various assortments of candy involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described, and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth; and said sales plan has a capacity and tendency to induce purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy and similar products offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a basket of candy of far greater value than the amount to be paid therefor. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy and candy products trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy and candy products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their said products so packed and assembled as above alleged or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy and candy products offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method, to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method because the same is unlawful, to lessen competition in said trade, to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondent and in such other distributors as use the same or an equivalent or similar method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade. The use of said method by the respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from the said trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent or similar method.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, as above alleged, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 1, 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused same to be served upon the respondent, Fascination Candy Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by said respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank, D. C. Daniel, George F. Foulkes, and L. P. Allen, Jr., and testimony on behalf of said respondent was introduced by Harry M. Kroon, its attorney, before William C. Reeves, Arthur F. Thomas, and Miles J. Furnas, examiners for said Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony, and other evidence and briefs in support of the complaint; no briefs were filed by on on behalf of said respondent and oral argument was waived by it, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Fascination Candy Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at Chicago in said State; it is engaged in the business of the manufacture and sale of candy; it causes quantities of the candy manufactured by it to be transported, when sold, from its place of business in Chicago, in the State of Illinois, through and into, or into, other States of the United States to respective purchasers thereof, and in the course and conduct of its said business said respondent has been, and is now, in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the manufacture and sale, or the sale, of candy in commerce among several of the States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondent, Fascination Candy Co., manufactures packaged chocolate candy exclusively; its annual sales aggregate between $260,000 and $300,000; approximately one-half of such sales have been made to jobbers in States other than the State of Illinois; in 1936 and

Findings

1937 it sold assortments of candy suitable for distribution by the use of a device sometimes described as punch boards and push cards; with some of these assortments, push cards were packed by respondent in the containers along with the candy and with other such assortments the candy was sold by respondent without the cards, but when requested by the customer respondent had the cards or punchboards sent direct to the customer from the manufacturer of such cards and boards; the sales by respondent with which such cards or boards were furnished aggregated between $2,000 and $3,000 annually. One of the cards so furnished by respondent had printed thereon 30 girls' names, each immediately above a disk which concealed a number and in the upper right-hand corner was a larger disk in the form of a seal which concealed a name which was the same as the name above 1 of the smaller disks, with the following printed matter on each of said cards:

Take home this fancy package of delicious assorted chocolates; name under seal wins; 1¢ to 5¢; no higher

These cards were used by retail dealers in the distribution of such assortments of candy as follows: Members of the public were solicited to select one or more of the names on one of the cards and to pay the number of cents indicated by the number concealed by each of the disks below each of the names selected, except that persons who obtained numbers higher than five paid only 5 cents. When all names on one of the cards were selected and collections made, the larger disk was then opened and the name concealed thereby disclosed, and the prize, which consisted of a basket filled with candy, was then given to the person who had selected the name which was the same as that concealed by the seal. In the use of one of these cards, as stated, the selection of a name which would entitle the selector to a basket of candy or whether the charge for each selection made was 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents was wholly a matter of chance. With other assortments of candies sold by it, respondent has furnished push cards of various types and designs and with still other such assortments respondent has furnished devices sometimes known as punchboards with various articles of merchandise given as prizes, but all such cards and boards so furnished by respondent were designed and intended for use in the distribution of candies wholly by lot or chance and were of the same general nature and operated in substantially the same manner as were the push cards described herein.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the candies and articles of merchandise intended for use as special prizes in the operation of the push cards and punchboards as described in paragraph 2 hereof, were sold by respondent to jobbers and with such sales it furnished push cards or punchboards, or both, and such candies and articles of merchandise so sold to jobbers were resold by them with the accompanying push cards or punchboards to retail dealers, and such candies and articles of merchandise were resold by the retail dealers to the purchasing public by the use of one or the other of the devices and in the manner and by the sales plan described in paragraph 2 hereof. The Commission further finds that respondent by furnishing such cards and boards, or either type of said devices, with the candies and articles of merchandise sold by it, thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means by which games of chance, gift enterprises, and lotteries have been conducted. The Commission further finds that the use of such cards and boards, or either of such devices, in the resale and distribution by retail dealers of the candies and articles of merchandise sold by respondent, involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance and that the use of such methods in the sale and distribution of such candies and articles of merchandise was a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the laws of several of the States of the United States.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent persons, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale, or the sale, of candies and articles of merchandise of the same general nature as those sold by respondent and in commerce between and among various States of the United States, which competitors were unwilling to employ in the sale and distribution of candies and articles of merchandise dealt in by them, any method or sales plan which involved games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, and refrained from the use of such practices, and as a result were placed at a disadvantage in competition. Many purchasers of candies and articles of merchandise from respondent were attracted by the element of chance involved in the sale and distribution of such candies and articles of merchandise by the use of push cards and punchboards furnished by respondent, and were thereby induced to purchase such candies and articles of merchandise offered for sale by respondent, in preference to similar candies and articles of merchandise offered for sale by competitors of respondent who did not furnish with candies and articles of merchandise sold by them similar push cards and punch cards or similar devices, and as a result jobbers purchased a substantial amount of candies and articles of merchandise from respondent with the result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to respondent from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas, William C. Reeves, and Miles J. Furnas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, brief of counsel for the Commission filed herein (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Fascination Candy Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy, or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, packages or assortments of candy or other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or any other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the general public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or any other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the general public:

Order

30 F. T. C.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

CONRAD SCHICKERLING, TRADING AS CONRAD
SCHICKERLING RESEARCH LABORATORY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4042. Complaint, Feb. 28, 1940—Decision, Apr. 30, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of various types of incandescent lamps for use with photography, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce as aforesaid, of such lamps adapted to and used for same general purposes—

- (a) Represented, in advertisements of said products in newspapers, periodicals and other publications in general circulation among the various States, and in circulars, price lists and other printed or written matter distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers, that his "Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp," or "Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp," was 8 amperes and had output of 38,000 lumens, and contained a coil filament or cooling coil between wire and filament peculiar to said particular device and not found in the ordinary lamp, facts being said lamp was not 8 amperes, but substantially less, had a lumen output substantially less than that set forth, and did not contain coil filament or cooling coil between wire and filament, peculiar to device in question, but only such a coil as is used in practically all lamps of said general nature;
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that said lamp was more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, and had a 10-hour peak performance, was covered by United States patent rights belonging to him and contained rare gases not ordinarily contained in other lamps of same type, and that said lamp contained krypton gas and had average life of 20 hours at 115 volts, and contained, or had, or brought about, color balance, facts being it did not have an improved color balance, or color balance of any kind whatsoever, was not more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for said purpose, had a peak performance of substantially less than 10 hours, was not covered by patent as aforesaid, contained no rare gases not ordinarily used in such devices of same type, but contained ordinary argon nitrogen gases used in majority of other lamps of same kind or type, did not contain krypton gas, except for small amount found in all argon gas, and average life of said bulb was substantially less than 20 hours at 115 volts;
- (c) Represented that his said "Photo Enlarging Lamp" contained coil filament or cooling coil between wire and filament, and that such a device or arrangement was peculiar to his lamp and not be found in ordinary lamp, and that his said lamp contained krypton gas, facts being it did not contain such a coil or cooling coil, which, found in practically all lamps of such general nature, would not be peculiar to his said device, and it did not contain krypton gas except for small amount found in all argon gas, used in most other lamps of same type;
- (d) Represented that his "'1,000 Flash' Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp" had Dufay color correction, and that he might rightfully use such correction with or in said lamps, and that it was a flash bulb or flashed instantaneously, and that for a split second it produced flash or light more intense than at any other time, facts being it did not have such correction and he had no right to use same with or in said device, which was not a flash bulb, but a flood lamp, and it did not flash instantaneously as do flash bulbs, nor have a split second, or any other period of time, producing flash or light more intense than that produced at any other time;

- (e) Represented that his "200 Flash' Photo Lamp" was a flash lamp which worked automatically, and would flash 200 times and replace 200 ordinary flashlight bulbs, and that it was made under his United States patent rights, facts being it was not a flash lamp, but primarily a flood lamp, did not work automatically since it was necessary to shut off current or remove lamp from socket after each flash, failing which it would not light up accurately when next used, and it would not replace 200 flashlight bulbs or any other number of ordinary flashlight bulbs, and was not covered by a United States patent; and
- (f) Made use of trade name including words "Research Laboratory," for the conduct of his said business, and displayed such name in his aforesaid advertisements, and thereby represented that, as part of business in question, he owned, controlled, and directed a research laboratory where such work was conducted in connection with the production of his said lamps, facts being he neither owned, controlled, nor directed any such laboratory, and at no time concerned engaged in direction, control, or conduct of any such research work;

With tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into erroneous and mistaken belief that his said representations, as above set forth, were true, and to induce them to purchase said lamps on account thereof, and thereby to divert trade unfairly to him from competitors engaged in sale in commerce of incandescent lamps used in photography, and including those who, in the sale of their said products, do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Donovan R. Divet for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Conrad Schickerling, an individual trading as Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Conrad Schickerling is an individual trading as Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory, with his office and principal place of business at 589 Central Avenue, in the city of Orange, State of New Jersey.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of various types of incandescent lamps, including incandescent lamps known as Schickerling Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamps, sometimes known as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamps, Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamps, Schickerling "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamps, and Schickerling "200 Flash" Photo Lamps, all of which said lamps are sold and distributed by respondent for use in connection with photography. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause his said lamps, when sold, to be transported from his said place of business in New Jersey, to, into, and through States of the United States other than New Jersey and into the District of Columbia to the purchasers thereof.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, and firms and corporations, in various States of the United States have been and are now engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of incandescent lamps adapted to and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said lamps. Respondent has been, during the time aforesaid, and now is in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in the sale of his said incandescent lamps with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and in furtherance of the sale of his products, respondent has caused various statements and representations relative to said products to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals and other publications having a general circulation among and between the various States of the United States, and in circulars, price lists, and other printed and written matter distributed among purchasers, and prospective purchasers. Among and typical of the statements and representations made by respondent concerning the said Schickerling Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp, sometimes described as Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, are the following:

- 8 amperes
- 38,000 lumens
- Concentrated cool coil filament
- Improved color balance
- Much higher actinic value
- 10 hour peak performance

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

Made under license of United States patent rights of Conrad Schickerling
Rare inert gases
"Krypton" Lamp
Rated average laboratory life at 115 volts is 20 hours

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated concerning respondent's said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp is that it is a "Koolcoil Krypton" lamp.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, concerning respondent's said Schickerling "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp, are the following:

Dufay Color Correction Lamps and
Dufay-Flash Color Correction Lamps

Automatic controlled—each extra ordinary instantaneous flash of approximately 52,000 lumens of a few seconds durations, producing artificial sunlight illumination at split second peak of light.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated concerning respondent's said Schickerling "200 Flash" Photo Lamp, are the following:

This new bulb replaces 200 ordinary flash light bulbs

Made under license of United States patent rights of Conrad Schickerling.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the above and foregoing statements and representations, as well as others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents and implies:

That respondent's said Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp, sometimes described as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, is 8 amperes and has a lumen output of 38,000 lumens; contains a coil filament; or that it contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament and that such device or arrangement is peculiar to respondent's lamp or is not to be found in the ordinary lamp; is more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, and has a 10-hour peak performance; is covered by United States patent rights belonging to respondent, and contains rare gases not ordinarily contained in other lamps of the same type; contains krypton gas and has an average life of 20 hours at 115 volts; and contains, or has, or brings about, color balance.

That respondent's said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp contains a coil filament; or that it contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament and that such device or arrangement is peculiar to respondent's lamp or is not to be found in the ordinary lamp; and that said lamp contains krypton gas.

That respondent's said "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp has Dufay color correction, and that respondent may rightfully use Dufay color correction with or in said lamp; and that it is a flash bulb or flashes instantaneously, and for a split second produces a flash or a light more intense than at any other time.

That respondent's said "200 Flash" Photo Lamp is a flash lamp which works automatically; that it will flash 200 times and replace 200 ordinary flashlight bulbs; and is made under United States patent rights of respondent.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading and deceptive for, in truth and in fact, respondent's said Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp sometimes described as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, is not 8 amperes but is substantially less, and it has a lumen output of substantially less than 38,000 lumens. It does not contain a coil filament and a cooling coil between the wire and filament which is peculiar to respondent's lamp but only such a coil as is used in practically all lamps of this general nature, nor does it have an improved color balance or a color balance of any kind whatsoever. It is not more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, and it has a peak performance of substantially less than 10 hours, and it is not covered by a United States patent. It does not contain rare gases not ordinarily used in incandescent lamps of the same type, but, on the contrary, contains the ordinary argon nitrogen gases used in the majority of other incandescent lamps of this kind or type. It does not contain crypton gas except for the small amount found in all argon gas. The average life of this bulb is substantially less than 20 hours at 115 volts.

Said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp does not contain a cool coil or a cooling coil between the wire and filament. A cooling coil between the wire and filament would not be peculiar to respondent's said lamp, for such cooling coils are found in practically all lamps of this general nature. Said bulb does not contain crypton gas except for the small amount found in all argon gas which argon gas is used in most other lamps of this same type.

Respondent's said "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp does not have Dufay color correction and respondent does not have and never has had the right to use Dufay color correction with or in said lamp. It is not a flash bulb but is a flood lamp. It does not flash instantaneously as do flash bulbs and it does not for a split second or for any period of time produce a flash or a light more intense than that produced at any other time. In truth and in fact, the bulb known in photography as a flash bulb can be used but once as it burns out in one lighting. Respondent's said "200 Flash"

Photo Lamp is not a flash lamp but is primarily a flood lamp. It does not work automatically because it is necessary to shut off the electric current or to remove the lamp from the socket after each flash, for without such shutting off or removal the said lamp will not light up accurately the next time it is used. Said globe will not replace 200 flashlight bulbs or any other number of ordinary flashlight bulbs and it is not covered by a United States patent.

PAR. 7. Respondent at all times herein mentioned has conducted and now does conduct his said business under the name of Conrad Shickerling Research Laboratory, and on the said advertisements heretofore mentioned has printed and does print or cause to be printed the words "Conrad Shickerling Research Laboratory." By the use of said name and said words respondent represents that as a part of said business he owns, controls, and directs a laboratory where research work is conducted in connection with the production of his said lamps. In truth and in fact, respondent does not own, control, or direct and never at any time herein mentioned has owned, controlled, or directed a laboratory where such research work is conducted, and respondent is not now and at no time herein mentioned has been engaged in the direction, control, or conduct of any such research work.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices, used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of his said incandescent lamps, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations as herein alleged are true and to induce them to purchase said lamps on account thereof, and thereby to divert trade unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of incandescent lamps used in photography. There are among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof of those who in the sale of their incandescent lamps do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 28th day of February 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Conrad Schickerling, an individual, trading as Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 15th day of March 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Conrad Schickerling is an individual trading as Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory, with his office and principal place of business at 589 Central Avenue, in the city of Orange, State of New Jersey.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, of various types of incandescent lamps, including incandescent lamps known as Schickerling Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamps, sometimes known as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamps, Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamps, Schickerling "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamps, and Schickerling "200 Flash" Photo Lamps, all of which said lamps are sold and distributed by respondent for use in connection with photography. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause his said lamps, when sold, to be transported from his said place of business in New Jersey to, into, and through States of the United States other than New Jersey and into the District of Columbia, to the purchasers thereof.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, and firms and corporations, in various States of the United States have been and are now engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of incandescent lamps adapted to and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said lamps. Respondent has been, during the time aforesaid, and now is in substantial competition, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the sale of his said incandescent lamps with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and in furtherance of the sale of his products, respondent has caused various statements and representations relative to said products to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals, and other publications having a general circulation among and between the various States of the United States, and in circulars, price lists, and other printed and written matter distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers. Among and typical of the statements and representations made by respondent concerning the said Schickerling Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp, sometimes described as Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, are the following:

- 8 amperes
- 38,000 lumens
- Concentrated cool coil filament
- Improved color balance
- Much higher actinic value
- 10-hour peak performance
- Made under license of U. S. Patent rights of Conrad Schickerling.
- Rare inert gases
- "Krypton" Lamp
- Rated average laboratory life at 115 volts is 20 hours.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated concerning respondent's said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp is that it is a "Koolkoil Krypton" lamp.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, concerning respondent's said Schickerling "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp, are the following:

- Dufay Color Correction Lamps and
- Dufay-Flash Color Correction Lamps.

Automatic controlled—each extra ordinary instantaneous flash of approx. 52,000 lumens of a few seconds durations, producing artificial sunlight illumination at split second peak of light.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated concerning respondent's said Schickerling "200 Flash" Photo Lamp, are the following:

Findings

This new bulb replaces 200 ordinary flashlight bulbs.

Made under license of U. S. Patent rights of Conrad Schickerling.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the above and foregoing statements and representations, as well as others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents and implies:

That respondent's said Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp, sometimes described as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp is 8 amperes and has a lumen output of 38,000 lumens; contains a coil filament; or that it contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament and that such device or arrangement is peculiar to respondent's lamp or is not to be found in the ordinary lamp; is more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, and has a 10-hour peak performance; is covered by United States patent rights belonging to respondent, and contains rare gases not ordinarily contained in other lamps of the same type; contains crypton gas and has an average life of 20 hours at 115 volts; and contains, or has, or brings about, color balance.

That respondent's said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp contains a coil filament; or that it contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament and that such a device or arrangement is peculiar to respondent's lamp or is not to be found in the ordinary lamp; and that said lamp contains crypton gas.

That respondent's said "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp has Dufay color correction, and that respondent may rightfully use Dufay color correction with or in said lamp; and that it is a flash bulb or flashes instantaneously, and for a split second produces a flash or a light more intense than at any other time.

That respondent's said "200 Flash" Photo Lamp is a flash lamp which works automatically; that it will flash 200 times and replace 200 ordinary flashlight bulbs; and is made under United States patent rights of respondent.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading, and deceptive for, in truth and in fact, respondent's said Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp sometimes described as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, is not 8 amperes but is substantially less, and it has a lumen output of substantially less than 38,000 lumens. It does not contain a coil filament, or a cooling coil between the wire and filament which is peculiar to respondent's lamp but only such a coil as is used in practically all lamps of this general nature, nor does it have an improved color balance or a color balance of any kind whatsoever. It is not more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, and it has a peak performance of substantially less than 10 hours, and it is not covered by a United States Patent.

It does not contain rare gases not ordinarily used in incandescent lamps of the same type, but, on the contrary, contains the ordinary argon nitrogen gases used in the majority of other incandescent lamps of this kind or type. It does not contain crypton gas except for the small amount found in all argon gas. The average life of this bulb is substantially less than 20 hours at 115 volts.

Said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp does not contain a cool coil or a cooling coil between the wire and filament. A cooling coil between the wire and filament would not be peculiar to respondent's said lamp, for such cooling coils are found in practically all lamps of this general nature. Said bulb does not contain crypton gas except for the small amount found in all argon gas which argon gas is used in most other lamps of this same type.

Respondent's said "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamp does not have Dufay color correction and respondent does not have and never has had the right to use Dufay color correction with or in said lamp. It is not a flash bulb but is a flood lamp. It does not flash instantaneously as do flash bulbs and it does not for a split second or for any period of time produce a flash or a light more intense than that produced at any other time. In truth and in fact, the bulb known in photography as a flash bulb can be used but once as it burns out in one lighting. Respondent's said "200 Flash" Photo Lamp is not a flash lamp but is primarily a flood lamp. It does not work automatically because it is necessary to shut off the electric current or to remove the lamp from the socket after each flash, for without such shutting off or removal the said lamp will not light up accurately the next time it is used. Said globe will not replace 200 flashlight bulbs or any other number of ordinary flashlight bulbs and it is not covered by a United States patent.

PAR. 7. Respondent at all times herein mentioned has conducted and now does conduct his said business under the name Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory, and on the said advertisements heretofore mentioned has printed and does print or cause to be printed the words "Conrad Schickerling Research Laboratory." By the use of said name and said words respondent represents that as a part of said business he owns, controls and directs a laboratory where research work is conducted in connection with the production of his said lamps. In truth and in fact, respondent does not own, control, or direct and never at any time herein mentioned has owned, controlled, or directed a laboratory where such research work is conducted, and respondent is not now and at no time herein mentioned has been engaged in the direction, control, or conduct of any such research work.

Order

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices, used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of his said incandescent lamps, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations as herein alleged are true and to induce them to purchase said lamps on account thereof, and thereby to divert trade unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of incandescent lamps used in photography. There are among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof those who in the sale of their incandescent lamps do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard and considered by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Conrad Schickerling, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of the incandescent lamps now known as Schickerling Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamps, sometimes known as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamps, and of the incandescent lamps now known as Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamps, and of the incandescent lamps now known as "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood-Lamps, and of the incandescent lamps now known as "200 Flash" Photo Lamps, whether sold under these names or under any other names in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the amperage of respondent's said Mushroom Bulb Photo Flood Lamp, sometimes described as Schickerling Full Sun Spectrum Photo Flood Krypton Lamp, is 8 amperes or any number of amperes in excess of that actually present, or that the lumen output is 38,000 lumens or any other number of lumens in excess of the lumens actually produced; or that said lamp contains a coil filament, or contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament; that said lamp is more effective in blackening a negative than other lamps used for the same purpose, or has a 10-hour peak performance or is covered by United States patent rights; that it contains rare gases not ordinarily contained in lamps of the same type, or that it contains krypton gas; that it contains or has or brings about color balance, when such is not the fact; that such a device or arrangement as a coil filament, or cooling coil between wire and filament, is peculiar to respondent's said lamp or is not to be found in the ordinary lamps used for the same purpose; or that the average life of its said lamp is 20 hours on a 115-volt circuit.

2. Representing that respondent's said Schickerling Photo Enlarging Lamp contains a coil filament, or that it contains a cooling coil between the wire and filament; or that such a device or arrangement is peculiar to respondent's said lamp, or is not to be found in the ordinary lamp, or that said lamp contains krypton gas.

3. Representing that respondent's said "1,000 Flash" Photo-Flash-Flood Lamp has Dufay color correction, or that respondent may rightfully use Dufay color correction with or in said lamp, or in any lamp, or that said lamp is a flash bulb, or flashes instantaneously, or for a split second produces a flash or a light more intense than at any other time.

4. Representing that respondent's said "200 Flash" Photo Lamp is a flash lamp which works automatically, or that it is made under United States patent rights of the respondent, or in any way misrepresenting the number of times it will flash.

5. Using the words "research laboratory" or the word "laboratory" or any other similar word, words, or phrases in his trade name or in connection with his business, when respondent does not own and operate or directly and absolutely control an appropriately equipped laboratory where research work in connection with said business is conducted by trained technicians.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (a) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED

Docket 2986. Complaint, Nov. 21, 1936—Decision, May 1, 1940

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (a)—WHETHER DUE ALLOWANCE ONLY FOR DIFFERENCES IN COST OF MANUFACTURE, SALE OR DELIVERY RESULTING FROM DIFFERING METHODS, ETC.—COST ASCERTAINMENT—ESTIMATES—COSTS—ITEMS, UNITS AND ALLOCATIONS.

In proceeding in which corporation and its subsidiary, engaged on national scale in manufacture and sale of bakers' yeast, chiefly, to some 25,000 customers, under schedule of price differentials and practices in application thereof, challenged as constituting discrimination in price in violation of aforesaid section, offered cost studies, computations, and allocations based upon lump sum estimates demonstrated by their own tabulations as erroneous, distributed results of such error throughout their cost study on basis of re-assumed correctness of demonstrated errors, applied repeatedly such lump sum estimates directly and indirectly throughout their allocations of costs, and augmented "by difference" partial cost data obtained by actual survey in order to adjust final and vital results to coincide with lump sum estimates made at outset, resorted to use of such lump sum estimates in allocations of all costs, and included in costs allocated to bakers' yeast many items of cost not incurred in manufacture, sale, and delivery of such product, and many items of cost which should be allocated equally to each pound of such yeast: Held, (1) That their lump sum estimates cannot be made the basis for price differentials; and (2) that costs which are not incurred in the manufacture, sale, or delivery of a product, and costs which should be allocated equally per unit to the product, cannot be made the basis for price differentials; and (3) that only such costs may be used to justify a price differential between different purchasers of a product of like grade and quality as those which reflect no more than the savings made in the functions and activities which are essential in the manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such customers sold or delivered.

<sup>1</sup> The original findings and order are published in 29 F. T. C. 121. The effect of Commission order of May 1, modifying such original findings and order, is to include, as set forth in the new paragraph 15 of the findings, in lieu of the old paragraph 15 of the original findings, respondents' theretofore methods in sale of foll yeast as discriminatory in violation of the statute involved, and to include such methods of selling said foll yeast within the prohibitions of the order, as set forth in the paragraph thereof relating thereto, on page 1157, infra.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (a)—QUANTITY DISCOUNTS AND DIFFERENTIALS—WHERE NOT JUSTIFIED BY DIFFERENCES IN COST, ETC.; BASED ON MONTHLY PURCHASE OR REQUIREMENT; APPLICABLE EQUALLY TO MULTI-UNIT-DELIVERY BUYERS; AND SPECIAL OFF-SCALE CONCESSIONS.

Where a corporation and its Pacific coast subsidiary, which were engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of foil yeast, and, chiefly, of bakers' yeast of uniform grade and quality; and which—

(1) Constituted largest manufacturers of yeast in the United States, enjoyed between 55 and 65 percent of the total business, had 6 factories from the Atlantic to the Pacific, had 444 agencies and subagencies so geographically located throughout the country that the yeast would reach such agencies by common carrier within 24 hours after its manufacture and be delivered within 24 hours from such time of arrival from the refrigerated warehouses maintained exclusively for its storage, and served 25,000 customers in practically every city, town, village, and community in the United States, ranging from chain food organizations of national scope with 33 bakeries east of the Rockies and many thousands of retail stores, and baking companies of both national and sectional scope, with bakeries running into the scores, to smallest local concerns, in direct competition with the house-to-house and other selling by the larger enterprises; and

(2) Gave its customers the benefit of extensive free research and merchandising service, through advising them as to results from research activities carried on in their research laboratories and experiments made in effort to improve products made from yeast, and through experts employed to visit bakeries and render such assistance as they could to customers in overcoming difficulties encountered by said customers in manufacture of bread and allied products, through the sending of merchandising experts to instruct and advise customers as to how best to display their goods and secure business, through national advertising campaigns in periodicals and by radio, and through the furnishing of advertising material at cost, and at lower prices than otherwise comparably obtainable, to enable local bakers to tie in locally with national advertising campaigns, and through maintenance of free school for bakers, with the result that they were thereby enabled, through such services and their prestige and good will, to secure more favorable prices for their products than were competitors—

In selling their bakers' yeast under price lists and schedules which they did not publish and with contents of which no customer was acquainted, and under which, as involved in instant case and applicable to large part of country and worked out in 11 steps, purchasers of 50,000 pounds and more of bakers' yeast received price of 14 cents a pound, purchasers of 10,000 to 50,000 pounds received price of 14½ cents a pound, those purchasing from 7,500 to 10,000 pounds received price of 16 cents, and prices in remaining 8 steps ranged upward from 17 cents for monthly purchases or requirements of buyer ranging from 5,000 to 7,500 pounds, to 25 cents for those purchasing from 1 to 150 pounds—

(a) Discriminated in price between customer competitors through said scale and price differentials, which were not justified by reason of differences in costs of delivering respective quantities therein set forth, and were not shown to be such as make only due allowances for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such yeast was to such purchasers sold or delivered, and under which (1)

Nation-wide food chain, enjoying said 14-cent price on basis of purchases in aggregate for its large number of bakeries, requirements of no single one of which was such as to entitle it thereto, benefited by a saving of $25,000 over amounts payable for corresponding quantity purchased by 14½-cent customers, by $100,000 over 16-cent customers, and by increasing amounts up to $550,000 over 25-cent customers; (2) customers paying highest price were discriminated against with respect to all other customers; (3) customers paying lowest prices, including Nation-wide chains, were given benefit of discrimination as against all other customers; (4) medium-sized independent baker was discriminated against with respect to his larger competitors and given benefit of discrimination as against his smaller competitors, with greatest discrimination in all instances in favor of most powerful competitor, and customer using approximately 10,000 pounds of yeast, and receiving either 16-cent or 14½-cent price, would need to increase monthly consumption of yeast by 40,000 pounds, at least, or monthly output of bread by 4,000,000 pounds to secure 14-cent price, to which, on basis alone of delivery to separate factory or bakery of any customer, no customer was entitled, and (5) under which the effect of the disparity involved, greater per unit as between extreme price brackets, was increased in total volume as between medium and lower price brackets, so that baker taking 1,499 pounds of yeast per month and paying scale price of 20 cents per pound would be discriminated against in sum of approximately $1,080 per year, as compared with baker paying 14 cents per pound;

With result, through such scale of prices and differentials involved therein, under which cost of producing pound of bread was increased by one-seventh of a cent as between baker paying 14 cents and one paying 25 cents, of enabling large bakeries and chains to make large and substantial savings which they might employ in the keen competition shown to exist between them and the smaller bakeries, and of conferring, through aforesaid and various other important cost differentials brought about under said scale in bakery business, with its large sales and close margins, constituting substantial, material, and vital factors of competition, an advantage on purchasers of yeast at lower prices which might be reflected in many different ways in lessening or injuring of competition through use for periodical reductions in price or increase in service, sales effort, and sales appeal, to the disadvantage of the bakers against whom such discriminations are employed; and

With result that effect of such discriminations in price was and might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which they and their customers were engaged, and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with customers receiving benefit of such discrimination; and

(b) Discriminated in price by deviating from said schedule and not selling at prices based upon actual quantity or volume delivered to respective purchasers, through practice of applying such schedule on basis of respective customers' monthly requirements, irrespective of whether or not such requirements were purchased of them, (1) between customers, on the one hand, who purchased all of their requirements of yeast from them, and customers who thus purchased only a part of their requirements, so that, under certain circumstances, purchaser buying his entire requirement would pay more than other customer buying similar quantity of them, but with larger monthly

requirement, and would pay, also, same amount as still other customer purchasing less, but with same monthly requirement, and (2) between customer, on the one hand, who purchased some but not all of his requirement from them, and other customer who also purchased some but not all of his requirement, so that, under certain circumstances, customer purchasing given quantity, but with larger requirement, might pay less than customer purchasing of them similar quantity, but with smaller requirement;

- (c) Discriminated in price between different purchasers of their said yeast by deviating from said schedule, and not selling at prices based upon actual quantity or volume delivered to respective purchasers, through practice of selling to purchasers based upon their total monthly requirements or purchases instead of upon the definite quantity or volume delivered monthly to the separate plants, bakeries, factories, or warehouses of such respective customers, and under which practice food and bakery chains with numerous, widely scattered, separate bakeries or factories, deliveries to no one of which were such, as case might be, as to secure purchaser 14 cent, 14½ cent, or other more favorable price bracket, but would have fallen in price brackets ranging from 14½ cents to 19 cents and as high as 23 cents, received, through such aggregating practice, benefit of 14-cent, 14½-cent, or 15-cent price, and benefited thereby through savings secured through such discriminations in their favor and against those paying scale prices, in amounts aggregating many thousands of dollars; and
- (d) Discriminated in price between different purchasers of their said yeast by deviating from said schedule and not selling at prices based upon actual quantity or volume delivered to respective purchasers, through selling the same quantity or volume monthly to different purchasers at different prices, under practice of selling to some customers, including larger customers and certain baking companies purchasing their yeast at 14-cent price, but who consumed less than required quantity to entitle them thereto, and to others similarly securing more favorable price than that to which thus entitled, at so-called off-scale prices or concessions granted by central office, and not by division managers, extent of whose authority with smaller customers did not exceed more than two or three cent off-scale allowance, and not in good faith to meet competition, but under general price policy pursued to outstrip competitors;

With result that the effect of such price discriminations, as above set forth, was and might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create monopoly in sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which they and their customers receiving benefit of such discriminatory prices were engaged, and to injure, destroy or prevent competition with customers receiving benefit of such discrimination; and

Where said corporations, in selling their foil yeast according to price scale of 27 cents a dozen for 300 pieces and up, per month, and 30 cents a dozen for under 300 pieces—

- (e) Discriminated in price between customer competitor purchasers of their said foil yeast through selling said product to independent retailers taking more than 300 pieces per month at price aforesaid of 27 cents, and selling at said price such foil yeast also to units of corporate, voluntary and cooperative groups, regardless of quantity delivered during any one month to any one unit of such groups, members of which were competitively engaged under like circumstances and conditions with independent retailers who purchased comparable quantities and did not receive benefit of such lower price and differential, which did not make only due allowance for differences in cost of sale and delivery resulting from differing quantities in which such foil yeast was to such purchasers sold and delivered, and under which differential, amounting annually to substantial sum, some preferred purchasers realized substantial savings annually over other purchasers who did not receive benefit thereof;

With the result that the effect of such price discrimination by said corporations might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of foil yeast in respective lines of commerce in which they and their customers receiving benefits of such discriminatory prices were engaged, and to injure or prevent competition with customers receiving such benefit:

Held, That, through use of discriminatory prices as set forth in schedule in question, and otherwise as above set out and indicated, said corporation and subsidiary violated and were violating section 2 (a) of Clayton Act.

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved June 19, 1936, Public 692 (the Robinson-Patman Act), amending section 2 of an act approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), the Federal Trade Commission hereby issues its complaint against Standard Brands Inc. and Standard Brands of California, stating the charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Standard Brands Inc. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware with its office and principal place of business at 595 Madison Avenue in New York, N. Y.

Respondent Standard Brands of California is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and is a wholly owned subsidiary of the respondent Standard Brands Inc., and its offices are the same as those of respondent Standard Brands Inc.

Respondents manufacture, sell, and distribute yeast in commerce to their customers located in the several States of the United States, causing said yeast, when sold, to be shipped from their respective factories in various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the States of origin of the shipments.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents are now, and for many years have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing yeast in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondents, since June 19, 1936, have been, and are now, discriminating in price between different purchasers of their said product of like grade and quality by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast, used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of their said purchasers competitively engaged, one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the United States.

The discrimination in price herein referred to, insofar as it applies to bakers' yeast, is brought about by the respondents selling said bakers' yeast to their customers upon the following terms:

	Cents per pound
50,000 pounds up per month.....	14
10,000 to 50,000 pounds per month.....	14½
7,500 to 10,000 pounds per month.....	16
5,000 to 7,500 pounds per month.....	17
3,000 to 5,000 pounds per month.....	18
1,500 to 3,000 pounds per month.....	19
1,000 to 1,500 pounds per month.....	20
500 to 1,000 pounds per month.....	21
300 to 500 pounds per month.....	22
150 to 300 pounds per month.....	23
1 to 150 pounds per month.....	25

PAR. 3-A. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, the respondents, since June 19, 1936, have been and are now discriminating in price between their purchasers of their product of like grade and quality by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products different prices than given or allowed other of their said purchasers competitively engaged, one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the United States. The discrimination in price herein referred to, insofar as it applies to bakers' yeast, is brought about by the respondents selling bakers' yeast to their customers within a given bracket as set forth in said schedule in paragraph 3 hereof at prices different from those charged other customers in the same bracket.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondents, since June 19, 1936, have been, and are now, discriminating in price between different purchasers of their foil yeast of like grade and quality by giving and allowing certain purchasers of foil yeast different prices than given or allowed other of their said purchasers competitively engaged, one with the other, in the resale of their foil yeast within the United States.

The discrimination in price herein referred to, insofar as the same applies to the sale of their foil yeast, is brought about by the respondents selling foil yeast to their customers upon the following terms:

	Cents per dozen
300 pieces or more per month.....	27
Less than 300 pieces per month.....	30

PAR. 5. The effect of said discrimination in price made by respondents, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 3-A hereof, has been, or may be, substantially to lessen competition, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bread and allied products; and the effect of said discrimination has been, or may be, to tend to create a monopoly in said favored customers receiving said discriminatory prices from said respondents in the distribution of said products in the United States.

PAR. 6. The effect of said discrimination in price made by respondents, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, has been, or may be substantially to lessen competition, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of foil yeast; and the effect of said discrimination has been or may be, to tend to create a monopoly in said favored customers receiving said discriminatory prices from said respondents in the distribution of foil yeast in the United States.

PAR. 7. The foregoing alleged acts of said respondents are a violation of subsection 2 (a) of section 1 of said act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended, by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes", the Federal Trade Commission, on November 21, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named herein, charging that said respondents were and had been discriminating in price between different purchasers from them of commodities of like grade and quality in commerce in violation of the provisions of section 2 (a) of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by James I. Rooney, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Norwood, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Theodore Kiendl and Edwin F. Blair of the firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed, attorneys for the above-named respondents. On June 15, 1937, said complaint was amended as of the date of its issuance, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint as amended, the answers thereto as amended, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of counsel as aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that the respondents have been and are violating the provisions of section 2 (a) of said Clayton Act, now makes these its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Standard Brands Inc. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its offices and principal place of business at 595 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondent Standard Brands of California is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California with its office and principal place of business at San Francisco, Calif., and it is a wholly owned subsidiary and under the immediate direction and control of the respondent Standard Brands Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondents are engaged, among other things, in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast and foil yeast, producing approximately 120,000,000 pounds yearly, of which 10 percent to 12 percent is foil yeast and the remaining is bakers' yeast. Respondents are the largest manufacturers of yeast in the United States and enjoy between 55 percent and 65 percent of the total yeast business.

METHOD OF DOING BUSINESS

PAR. 3. The yeast is manufactured by the respondents at its six factories located respectively at Peekskill, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Pekin, Ill.; San Francisco, Calif.; Sumner, Wash.; and the District of Columbia.

The yeast, all of which is of like grade and quality, is manufactured daily at these factories after which "makers' yeast" is molded into 1-pound and one-half pound cakes, wrapped, and then packed in 50-pound cartons. Because of the perishable nature of the product, prompt delivery is essential, and, to accomplish this, the respondents maintain 444 agencies and subagencies so geographically located throughout the country that the yeast will reach these agencies by common carrier within 24 hours after its manufacture and from which the yeast will be delivered to respondents' customers within 24 hours from the time it arrives there. At the agencies there are refrigerated warehouses maintained exclusively for the storage of the yeast.

At the agencies the yeast, still in the 50-pound cartons, is placed upon trucks owned and operated by the respondents, from which it is delivered to some 25,000 customers located in practically every city, town, village, and community in the United States. The original cartons are broken by the driver-salesmen where the quantity to be delivered to a customer is less than 50 pounds.

PAR. 4. The daily production of yeast at the factories is based upon requisitions from the respective agencies, which in turn are based upon sales of the preceding month, standing orders, and other anticipated requirements from customers who are for the most part regular customers and whose daily requirements of yeast can be anticipated.

Respondents require no written contracts with their customers and there are no commitments that cannot be terminated by either respondents or their customers at will. However, as a general practice and except as otherwise shown hereafter, customers paying less than 25 cents per pound for yeast and who purchase all of their requirements from the respondents are obligated to purchase definite quantities monthly, in order to secure the yeast at the more favorable prices, as shown by the price schedules hereinafter referred to.

With the exception of a few wholesale routes yeast is delivered from the same trucks to both large and small customers.

PAR. 5. In the delivery of the yeast the driver-salesman takes daily route sheets made up at the agency headquarters, calls on the customers named therein, leaves the amount of yeast they require and either collects the cash or takes the customer's receipt according to his instructions. Charge customers who receipt for the yeast are billed directly by the agency at the end of the month. Driver-salesmen solicit business from new and reclaimed prospects, but other salesmen or solicitors are employed by the respondents to sell respondents' products. Many of the routes operated from the respective agencies are exclusively bakery routes, while others are so-called mixed routes delivering yeast and other products sold by the respondents.

PAR. 6. Respondents sell their yeast under the direct supervision of the central office through its bakery merchandising department. This department operates through 16 sales divisions located respectively at Cambridge, Mass.; Albany, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; New York, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Washington, D. C.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Chicago, Ill.; Kansas City, Mo.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; and Birmingham, Ala. Through these divisions respondents control and direct the sales of the 444 agencies and subagencies previously referred to.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their business respondents maintain a research laboratory where experiments are made in an effort to improve products made from its yeast and the results obtained are furnished respondents' customers. A force of experts is also maintained for the purpose of visiting bakeries and rendering such assistance as they can to respondents' customers in overcoming difficulties encountered by said customers in the manufacture of bread and allied products. Other promotional activities of the respondents consist in the sending of merchandising experts to their customers and instructing them how best to display their goods and attract customers. Respondents also conduct national advertising campaigns in periodicals and by radio to promote the increased consumption of bakers' bread; and, they also furnish advertising material to local bakers at actual cost which enables them to tie-in locally with the national advertising campaigns. Advertising ideas and suggestions are not charged for and the cuts and folders for which charges are made are based on purchases of large quantities by the respondents and the costs to the customers are much less than if produced locally. Respondents have maintained a school for bakers, giving free instruction to all customers interested. The services maintained by the respondents and previously referred to in this paragraph are offered as being free and at no extra charge to their customers.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of their business the aforesaid respondents are in competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals which manufacture and sell yeast for use in the manufacture of bread and allied products and which sell and ship their products from the States of origin of the shipment to various points in the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment. Among the larger competitors of the respondents are Anheuser-Busch Co., St. Louis, Mo.; National Grain Yeast Co., New York, N. Y.; Red Star Yeast Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Consumers' Yeast Co., San Francisco, Calif.; and The Federal Yeast Co., Baltimore, Md.

COMPETITION OF CUSTOMERS

PAR. 9. The customers of the respondents are both large and small and manufacture and sell bread and allied products throughout the United States and these customers are competitively engaged with one another in the sale of said products, such competition extending to practically every city, town, village, and community in the United States. Among the customers of the respondents whose activities in the sale of bread and allied products are national in scope are The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., with 38 bakeries located east of the Rocky Mountains and with 14,000 retail stores located in practically all communities east of the Rocky Mountains and whose annual output of bread amounts to 446,000,000 pounds and whose yeast consumption approximates 5,000,000 pounds per year; the Continental Baking Co., with 78 bakeries located throughout the United States and with both wholesale and retail distribution of its products throughout the United States, the retail distribution being principally by house-to-house deliveries, and whose requirements of yeast approximate 5,000,000 pounds per year; the General Baking Corporation, with 77 bakeries throughout the United States and with a distribution system for its products similar to that of the Continental Baking Co., and whose requirements of yeast approximate 4,000,000 pounds per year. Among the customers of respondents whose activities in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products are sectional in scope are Hathaway Bakeries, Inc., with distribution of its products, both wholesale and retail, throughout the New England area; the First National Stores with retail distribution through some 2,400 stores located throughout the New England area. Among other customers of the respondents there are thousands of customers whose distribution of their products are purely local.

Findings

30 F. T. C.

There are approximately 28,000 bakery concerns in the United States, each competing in the sale of its products both with competitors operating on a national scale, sectional scale, or purely locally. The smallest bakeries were thus in direct competition with the house-to-house and other selling by the larger concerns.

A pound of yeast is required in the manufacture of from 75 to 125 pounds of bread, depending upon the particular type of dough.

PRICE SCALES

PAR. 10. For many years prior to and since June 19, 1936, respondents, as a general practice and except as otherwise shown hereafter, have been and now are selling bakers' yeast as aforesaid to their customers at different prices, as set forth in the following schedules:

Schedule A

The above schedule applies to all customers in the State of Arizona.

The findings herein are confined to the sales of bakers' yeast as set forth in schedule A; however, reference is made to the schedule of prices, as set forth in schedules B, C, D, and E, because the respondents, in submitting their justification for the price differentials as shown in schedule A, took into consideration the costs in those areas where the prices set forth in said schedules B, C, D, and E were in effect, to which, reference will be made hereinafter.

Respondents do not publish any of the foregoing price lists and no customer is acquainted with their contents by the respondents. Before any price is quoted at which a customer may purchase bakers' yeast from the respondents, the customer must first indicate to the respondents what his monthly requirements will be. In most cases respondents know the monthly requirements of a prospective customer.

Findings

30 F. T. C.

The prices at which respondents sell bakers' yeast according to the foregoing schedules of prices do not necessarily depend upon the quantities actually purchased but upon the monthly requirements of yeast of the respective customers; that is, a customer whose monthly requirements of yeast might be 1,400 pounds and who purchases all of such requirements from respondents would pay, according to scale, 20 cents per pound; however, if the customer purchased only part of his requirements from the respondents he would still pay 20 cents per pound regardless of what portion of his requirements he so purchased.

DISCRIMINATIONS

PAR. 11. All further reference to price scales or price schedules, unless otherwise mentioned, will refer to schedule A of paragraph 10.

According to the scale of prices at which respondents sell their bakers' yeast, using 25 cents per pound as a base price, the graduating discounts off base price, as represented by the separate price brackets are shown in the following table:

Monthly quantity brackets (pounds)	Price scale	Discount equivalent off base price of 25 cents per pound	Monthly quantity brackets (pounds)	Price scale	Discount equivalent off base price of 25 cents per pound
	Cents per pound	Percentage		Cents per pound	Percentage
1-149	25		3,000-4,999	18	28
150-299	23	8	5,000-7,499	17	32
300-499	22	12	7,500-9,999	16	36
500-999	21	16	10,000-49,999	14½	42
1,000-1,499	20	20	50,000 and up	14	44

If 14 cents per pound were taken as the base price, the increase in price between the next quantity brackets ranges from approximately 3 percent between the 14-cent and the 14½-cent customers to 78.5 percent between the 14-cent and 25-cent customers.

As a result of selling bakers' yeast, according to this price scale, customers purchasing at the most favorable price of 14 cents per pound, such as the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. which purchases 5 million pounds in 1 year, in the course of that time they pay the following amounts less for the quantities purchased by them than is paid for the same quantity purchased and delivered to customers in the other quantity brackets.

1117

Findings

$200,000 less than 18-cent customers.
$250,000 less than 19-cent customers.
$300,000 less than 20-cent customers.
$350,000 less than 21-cent customers.
$400,000 less than 22-cent customers.
$450,000 less than 23-cent customers.

By this method of selling bakers' yeast, customers paying the highest price are discriminated against with respect to all other customers, while those customers paying the lowest prices, such as the chains operated on a national scale, are given the benefit of the discrimination as against all other customers of the respondents.

Furthermore, by selling according to this graduated scale of prices the medium-sized independent baker is discriminated against with respect to his larger competitors and is given the benefit of the discrimination as against his smaller competitors. In all instances the greatest discrimination is in favor of the most powerful competitor.

In addition, the graduated scale of prices is so fixed by respondents that a customer using approximately 10,000 pounds of yeast per month and paying therefor either 16 cents or 14½ cents per pound must increase his monthly consumption of yeast at least by 40,000 pounds, or his monthly output of bread by 4 million pounds, in order to secure the 14-cent price, yet the respondents, according to their own report showing the costs of sale and delivery of bakers' yeast (to which reference will be made hereinafter), show that they do not deliver 50,000 pounds in any 1 month to any separate factory or bakery of any respective customer.

PAR. 12. By selling bakers' yeast as the respondents do, even assuming that the differentials in price as set forth in said schedule A could be justified by reason of the differences in the costs of delivering the respective quantities as set forth in said schedule, they are discriminating in price between different purchasers by deviating from this schedule. Such discriminations in price are as follows:

(a) Between customers who purchase all of their requirements of yeast from the respondents and those who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondents.

(b) Between customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from respondents and other customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondents.

(c) Between customers who purchase any or all of their requirements of yeast from respondents and others who also purchase any or all of their requirements of yeast from respondents, both of whom are

Findings

in the same quantity bracket, or in other words, those who purchase "off scale"; and,

(d) By selling at prices based on total consumption irrespective of the number or quantity of the individual deliveries.

As to (a), that is, discrimination in price between customers who purchase all of their requirements of yeast from the respondents and those who purchase part of their requirements of yeast from the respondents, for example, a customer whose requirement of yeast is 4,500 pounds a month and who purchased this entire amount from respondents pays, according to scale, 18 cents per pound, whereas, another customer whose requirements of yeast are 7,500 pounds per month and who purchased only 4,500 pounds from the respondents pays only 16 cents per pound for the 4,500 pounds purchased from the respondents. Likewise, this same customer would be discriminated against with respect to another customer having the same monthly requirements of 4,500 pounds but who only purchase 500 pounds from the respondents. Such a customer, because his monthly requirements of yeast were 4,500 pounds, would pay the respondents only 18 cents per pound for the 500 pounds purchased from them.

As to (b), that is, between customers who purchase some, but not all, of their requirements of yeast from the respondents, and other customers who also purchase some, but not all, of their requirements of yeast from the respondents, discriminations are brought about in the following manner: The customer whose requirements are 4,500 pounds per month and who purchases 500 pounds of this from the respondents, pays according to scale for that 500 pounds 18 cents per pound, while another customer whose requirements are 1,000 pounds per month and who purchases from the respondents only 500 pounds pays the respondents 20 cents per pound for that 500 pounds because his requirements are only 1,000 pounds per month.

As to (c), respondents discriminate between certain customers within a definite quantity bracket by selling to some customers at so-called off-scale prices. The larger customers purchasing their yeast at the 14-cent price, by consuming less than the required quantity to entitle them to this price, are granted this concession only by the central office. Division managers may sell below scale with smaller customers but never more than 2 cents to 3 cents off scale. The larger customers of the respondents purchasing at off-scale prices are Grocers Baking Co., Louisville, Ky.; Hathaway Bakeries, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.; National Baking Co. and Peterson Baking Co. of Omaha, Nebr.; Pechter Baking Co., New York, N. Y.; and M & M Baking Co., Dover, N. H. About 16 percent of the customers served by the respondents' agency at Minneapolis, Minn., purchase at off-scale prices, while in the New York City area about 35 percent of the customers in the 3,000- to 5,000-pound class pay less than the price scale of 18 cents per pound.

As to (d), discrimination is brought about by respondents selling to their customers on the basis of total consumption or purchases irrespective of the number or quantity of the individual deliveries. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. had a total national consumption per month of respondents' yeast ranging from 451,550 pounds for July 1936, to 403,625 pounds for January 1937. These amounts were delivered from the respondents' various agencies to 37 bakeries in as many locations from Louisiana to Iowa and Maine, in quantities ranging from 30,400 pounds delivered at Pittsburgh, Pa., in July, 1936, to 2,200 pounds delivered at New Orleans, La., in September 1936. At no individual bakery of this customer is 50,000 pounds delivered in 1 month. In proportion to the quantities delivered to the respective bakeries, according to the scale of prices as set forth in schedule A, the quantities delivered to 23 of the bakeries should be in the 14½ cents price bracket, to 8 in the 16 cents price bracket, to 4 in the 17 cents price bracket, to 1 in the 18 cents price bracket and to 1 in the 19 cents price bracket. However, this customer pays 14 cents per pound for all of its yeast.

The Continental Baking Corporation had a total national consumption per month of respondents' yeast in quantities ranging from 613,885 pounds for December 1936, to 565,694 for August 1936. This was delivered from respondents' various agencies monthly from July 1936 to January 1937, to 71 bakeries of this customer in as many different locations from Massachusetts to California and Texas in quantities ranging from 45,700 pounds delivered at Detroit, Mich., during December 1936, to 2,515 pounds delivered at Waterbury, Conn., in November 1936. At no one of these bakeries was 50,000 pounds delivered in 1 month. Based upon the quantities delivered at the respective 71 bakeries, according to price scale as set forth in schedule A, the quantities delivered to 21 of the bakeries should be in the 14½ cents price bracket, to 9 in the 16 cents price bracket, to 20 in the 17 cents price bracket, to 18 in the 18 cents price bracket, and to 3 in the 19 cents price bracket. However, this customer purchases its yeast at 14 cents per pound.

The Federal Bakeries, Inc., with 78 branches located over the entire country have purchased their yeast at a price of 15 cents per pound although the monthly deliveries to the respective branches do not exceed 200 pounds.

By this method of selling yeast, independent dealers operating a single plant are obligated to pay a great deal more for yeast than large chains operating several bakeries and who, with a single plant in the same area as the independent, may receive the same quantities of yeast at that particular branch as the independent dealer receives. The extent to which such a discrimination reaches is indicated in the case of Federal Bakeries, Inc., who, because it has 78 bakeries located over the entire country, and its total national consumption is in excess of 10,000 pounds, purchases its yeast at 15 cents a pound, although the quantity delivered to the respective branches does not exceed 200 pounds per month, whereas individual customers purchasing only 200 pounds per month are obligated to pay, according to scale, 23 cents per pound. Likewise, the Continental Baking Co. with 71 bakeries located over the entire country, under this method, in the course of one year made a saving in excess of $116,000. That is, assuming that this customer paid the prices set out on the price scale for the quantities delivered at its respective branches, it would have paid for its yeast $116,000 more than it did pay in the course of a year. There was in this case a discrimination in favor of Continental Baking Co. of $116,000 as against customers paying the scale prices. The same advantages were extended by respondents to those chains whose operations are sectional in scope, such as Hathaway Bakeries, Inc., and the First National Stores.

EFFECTS OF DISCRIMINATION

PAR. 13. Respondents' scale prices had the effect of enabling large bakeries and chains to make large and substantial savings which they may employ in the keen competition shown to exist between them and the smaller bakeries. The differential in the prices charged for yeast results in increasing the cost of producing a single pound of bread by one-seventh of a cent as between the baker paying 14 cents per pound for yeast and the one paying 25 cents per pound. This difference was shown to be substantial since the average margin of profit even for a large producer is only three-tenths of a cent per pound, that is, the effect of the price differential is to increase the profit of the large bakery approximately one-third and produce a competitive disadvantage to the bakery equal to, if not in excess of, this proportion. While this disparity appears greater per unit as between the extreme price brackets, its effect is increased in total volume as between the medium and lower price brackets, and the baker taking 1,499 pounds of yeast per month and paying the scale price of 20 cents per pound would be discriminated against in sum of approximately $1,080 per year as compared with the baker who pays 14 cents per pound for yeast. In this case, there is a smaller per-loaf cost differential but a larger total amount is involved.

The advantage to the purchasers of yeast at lower prices may be reflected in many different ways in the lessening or injuring of competition, inasmuch as it can be used for periodical reductions in price or increase in service, sales effort, and sales appeal, all of which operate to the disadvantage of the bakers against whom these discriminations are employed. While the one-seventh of a cent cost differential was shown to be a maximum between customers paying the highest and the lowest prices, the evidence shows, and we find, that this maximum differential obtained between a substantial number of large and small bakers and that a smaller but still substantial cost differential obtained between a large number of other competing bakeries. In view of the fact that bread is sold in large quantities and on close margins of profit, as shown abundantly in the record and elsewhere in these findings, such margins are substantial and are material and vital factors of competition.

Findings

The respondents do not deny selling bakers' yeast at the differentials in price charged in the complaint, and the evidence shows, and we find, that the effect of such discriminations in price is and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which respondents and their customers, receiving the benefit of such discriminatory prices, are engaged, and to injure, destroy or prevent competition with customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination. We find that the differentials in price at which respondents sell their bakers' yeast are not shown to be such as make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered.

Respondents, by selling bakers' yeast as they do, even assuming that such a price scale as set forth in schedule A could be justified by reason of the differences in the costs of delivering the differing quantities to different purchasers, are discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast because respondents are not selling at prices based upon the actual quantity or volume delivered to the respective purchasers according to said price scale but are deviating therefrom (1) by selling at prices (a) based upon the monthly requirements of the individual purchaser rather than upon the actual quantity or volume purchased monthly from the respondents, (b) based upon the total monthly requirements or purchases of the respective customers instead of upon the definite quantity or volume delivered monthly to the separate plants, bakeries, factories or warehouses of the respective customers, and (2) by selling the same quantity or volume monthly to different purchasers at different prices; and we find that the effect of such price discrimination by the respondents is, and may be, substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which respondents and their customers, receiving the benefit of such discriminatory prices, are engaged, and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination.

PAR. 14. The defense of meeting competition raised by the respondents applies only to those cases where the respondents sell at the so-called "off-scale" prices or to discrimination referred to in subsection (c) of paragraph 12 hereof. While it is true that in some instances respondents did sell at off-scale prices where there was keen competition and where prices lower than their scale were reported by customers to have been offered by competitors, it was not shown that these were particular prices made by respondents in good faith to meet similar quotations theretofore made by competitors. Evidence offered by respondents to rebut the prima facie case of discrimination shows clearly that competitive and other considerations were the bases of its general price policy pursued in a process of outstripping competitors, and it was not shown that the price situations in which respondents found themselves were not of their own making. Respondents, by reason of their service and goodwill, were able to secure more for their yeast than could most of their competitors. They are the largest manufacturers of bakers' yeast in the United States and do from 55 to 65 percent of the total business therein, and the evidence shows that their off-scale, as well as scale, prices conform to a general policy of price discrimination whereby subordinates were permitted to sell below scale within fixed limits, and it does not appear that such officials were limited to no more than the competitive price. The evidence shows numerous instances of off-scale selling at prices which do not appear to have been made to meet the quotations of competitors. Good faith in these scale departures does not affirmatively appear and in the circumstances shown, involving the employment of an unjustified price scale, it can not be presumed.

PAR. 15. Respondents sold in commerce immediately prior to April 1, 1940, foil yeast according to the following price scale: 300 pieces and up per month, 27 cents a dozen; under 300 pieces per month, 30 cents a dozen.

Respondents sold said foil yeast to units of corporate, voluntary and cooperative groups, at 27 cents a dozen regardless of the quantity delivered during any 1 month to any 1 unit of such groups, and to independent retailers taking more than 300 pieces per month. The members of the said groups were and are competitively engaged under like circumstances and conditions with independent retailers who did not and do not receive such lower prices and who purchase comparable quantities. Said differentials in price do not make only due allowance for differences in the cost of sale and delivery resulting from the differing quantities in which such foil yeast is to such purchasers sold and delivered. The said differential in price amounts annually to substantial sums, so that some preferred purchasers realized substantial savings annually over other purchasers that did not receive the benefit of said differential. The Commission finds that the effect of such price discrimination by the respondents may be, substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of foil yeast in respective lines of commerce in which respondents and their customers, receiving the benefits of such discriminatory prices, are engaged and to injure or prevent competition with customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination.

Subsequent to March 31, 1940, respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, in commerce, have sold and do sell to the aforementioned groups foil yeast at 28½ cents per dozen and sell to competing independent retailers, taking less than 300 pieces per month at 30 cents per dozen, and to those competing independent retailers, taking more than 300 pieces per month, at 28½ cents per dozen. Said differential in prices makes only due allowance for the differences in the cost of sale and delivery resulting from the differing quantities in which such foil yeast is to such purchasers sold and delivered.

PAR. 16. On June 14, 1937, after the Commission had denied a petition filed by the respondents requesting that the Commission make an interlocutory finding upon the evidence submitted up to that time, the respondents elected not to offer any evidence of the justification of the price differentials as set forth in schedule A heretofore referred to in paragraph 10 hereof.

Pursuant to the rules of the Commission, hearings were then closed and the trial examiner's report upon the evidence was duly filed and brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the allegations of the complaint was duly filed.

Immediately prior to the expiration of the time within which brief on behalf of the respondents was due, the respondents, on September 17, 1937, filed with the Commission a petition requesting that the proceeding be reopened and that they be permitted to offer testimony and other evidence to the effect that the differentials in price at which bakers' yeast was sold were justified by differences in cost. Respondents' petition was allowed by the Commission, and, on October 4, 1937, proceedings were reopened to permit the reception of such additional testimony and other evidence. Whereupon, the respondents offered in evidence a "Report on Examination of Costs of Sale and Delivery Applicable to Bakers' Yeast" (Res. Ex. 33).

PAR. 17. The cost of sale and delivery applicable to bakers' yeast, as shown in said report, referred to in paragraph 16 hereof, include:

I. Costs of sale and delivery incurred at Divisions and Agencies throughout the United States, including—

- (a) Route Selling and Delivery Costs;
- (b) Solicitation Costs; and,
- (c) Service Costs.

(hereinafter referred to as Direct Costs).

II. General Administration Costs incurred at Divisions and Agencies throughout the United States (hereinafter referred to as Indirect Costs).

In addition to the above items of cost, respondents include a small item of home-office expense, representing salaries of bakery consultants. However, they do not include manufacturing costs, transportation costs, and home-office general administrative costs (including cost of advertising) except the small item representing bakery consultants' salaries.

The months of January, February, and March, 1937, were selected by respondents as a test period, as shown in their report. Sales and costs, as shown therein and referred to hereinafter, represent average figures for 1 month based upon the 3 months' operations. In addition, certain time studies and cost studies were made by the respondents for periods other than the 3-months' period, but the underlying data thus obtained were used as a basis for making certain allocations of said average monthly costs, as described later herein.

The costs, as computed by respondents and shown in their report, applicable to serving customers whose monthly purchases of yeast fall into the separate quantity-price brackets, are shown below in comparison with the prices applicable to the respective quantities:

Bracket	Quantity (pounds)	Cost per pound	Sales price
		Cents per pound	Cents per pound
1.....	1 to 149.....	11.7854	25
2.....	150 to 299.....	10.0250	23
3.....	300 to 499.....	7.7134	22
4.....	500 to 999.....	5.7144	21
5.....	1,000 to 1,499.....	4.8942	20
6.....	1,500 to 2,999.....	2.5416	19
7.....	3,000 to 4,999.....	2.0829	18
8.....	5,000 to 7,499.....	1.4568	17
9.....	7,500 to 9,999.....	1.4735	16
10.....	10,000 to 49,999.....	.9214	14½
11.....	50,000 and up.....	(1)	14

<sup>1</sup> As the costs shown above for each bracket were computed on the basis of sales to individual bakeries, no costs appear in bracket 11 "50,000 pounds and up" because no individual bakery establishment purchases from the company as much as 50,000 pounds of yeast in 1 month.

Findings

In addition to bakers' yeast the respondents sell many other products, including foil yeast, coffee, tea, gelatin, frozen eggs, diamalt, baking powder, and other products. Therefore, in making their cost study they group all products into two principal classes which they define as "Bakery Products" and "Grocery Products." The respective divisions and subdivisions of the two groups of products as classified by the respondents are shown in tabular form as follows:

Bakery Products	Grocery Products
Pound yeast:	Foil yeast.
Personal delivery.	Bulk products—Tea.
Shipping sales.	Package products (including Royal
Sales to grocers.	baking powder, Dr. Price baking pow-
Bulk products (including Arkady, Dia-	der, desserts, coffee and tea).
malt, frozen eggs and fermaloid).
Package products (including Fleischman baking powder and other leaveners).

The term "Bakers' Yeast," as used by respondents, means "Pound Yeast" as distinguished from "Foil Yeast." Respondents sell "Bakers' Yeast" principally through their personal-delivery service, but other minor sales are made which respondents style "Shipping Sales" and "Sales to Grocers." However, the term "Bakers' Yeast" is used herein to mean that portion of pound yeast which is sold through the personal-delivery service.

Total Costs of Sale and Delivery and its Allocation by Respondents between (a) Bakery Products and (b) Grocery Products

The total average monthly costs of sale and delivery, based on 3 months' operations, amounted to $978,793.38 (in the aggregate).

Records are not kept by respondents which show all of the costs of sale and delivery of each of the two general classes of products, nor of each of the separate products, shown in the foregoing tabulation; but respondents' records do show the total sales of each of the separate products. Therefore, for the purpose of allocating the total costs to the various products, respondents have applied certain predetermined percentages (estimated percentages) to average monthly dollar sales. The percentages thus applied are as follows:

	Percent
Yeast.....	23
Bulk products.....	7.25
Package products.....	11.3

The total average monthly sales, based on three months' operations, amounted to $6,518,015.44, the detail of which is shown in the following tabulation:

This difference between the total known costs and the total estimated costs was made up by increasing

Following the estimated allocations of the total average monthly costs to the separate products (Second Step of Respondents' Cost Allocations), respondents made an independent study and analysis (independent of the predetermined percentages) of the respective costs applicable to the two general classes of products, to wit, bakery products and grocery products. As a result of this independent study and analysis, respondents earmarked $634,062.95 of the total average monthly costs ($978,793.38), and applied the same directly to the two classes of products. This direct allocation of $634,062.95 of the total average monthly cost is referred to hereinafter as "Third Step in Respondents' Cost Allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation:

After the allocation of $634,062.95 to bakery products and grocery products as a result of the independent study and analysis by respondents (Third Step of Respondents' Cost Allocations), there remained an unallocated amount of $344,730.43 as shown in the third column of the following tabulation. The tabulation will be referred to hereinafter as "Fourth Step in Respondents' Cost Allocations":

In order to allocate the total indirect costs, to wit, $344,730.43 between the two general classes of products, respondents, having already allocated, by applying the percentages, $408,397.08 as the costs of sale and delivery of all bakery products and $570,396.30 as the costs of sale and delivery of all grocery products, simply deducted from these respective amounts the $228,673.07 and $405,389.88 (the amounts they found to be applicable to these two classes of products, respectively, by an independent study and analysis). Thus the allocations of this $344,730.43 resulted in $179,724.01 of it being applied to bakery products and $165,006.42 to grocery products. This procedure is referred to hereinafter as "Fifth Step in Respondents' Cost Allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation:

Allocation of Costs to Bakers' Yeast

Respondents made no independent study and analysis for the purpose of allocating costs to bakers' yeast, which is only one of the several products included in the bakery-product classification. The allocation of costs to this one product, bakers' yeast, was made only by applying said predetermined percentages to dollar sales, whereby respondents allocated $330,792.22 of the total costs of sale and delivery to bakers' yeast (first and second steps in respondents' cost allocations).

This item of $330,792.22 was subdivided by respondents into "Direct costs," $192,457.95, and "Other costs" (indirect costs), $138,334.27.

In order to apply direct costs of $192,457.95 to personal-delivery bakers' yeast, respondents made a segregation of that portion of the total direct costs ($228,673.07) applicable to the bakery-product classification as determined by their independent study and analysis (third step in respondents' cost allocations). To such costs ($228,673.07), respondents applied a percentage, with slight variations, which the total amount allocated to bakers' yeast (aggregating $345,222.92)<sup>1</sup> bore to the total amount (aggregating $408,397.08) allocated to the bakery-product classification; such amounts having been previously determined by applying predetermined percentages to dollar sales (first and second steps in respondents' cost allocations). This procedure is referred to hereinafter as "Sixth step in respondents' cost allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation:

Sixth step in respondents' cost allocations

	Total direct costs applicable to bakery products	Percentages applied to direct costs of bakery products	Portion of direct costs of bakery products allocated to personal-delivery bakers' yeast
Route selling and delivery costs.....	$93,434.02	83.63	$78,140.38
Solicitation costs.....	122,283.67	84.53	103,366.39
Service costs.....	12,955.38	84.53	10,951.18
Total.....	228,673.07	84.16	192,457.95

After allocating $192,457.95 of direct costs to bakers' yeast there remained a difference of $138,334.27 between such direct costs so applied and the estimated total cost of $330,792.22 applied to bakers' yeast by the use of the predetermined percentages at the outset of respondents' study. Therefore, this amount ($138,334.27) was assigned by respondents as such part of their unallocated costs (indirect costs) to bakers' yeast. In other words, this amount was arrived at by difference in the same manner as the total "Indirect costs" had been previously allocated to the two general classifications of products, bakery products and grocery products, as previously described herein.

This procedure is referred to hereinafter as "Seventh step in respondents' cost allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation:

Seventh step in respondents' cost allocations

Total costs of sale and delivery as allocated to personal-delivery bakers' yeast by applying predetermined percentages to dollar sales (first and second steps)-----	$330,792.22
Portion of direct costs which respondents have allocated to personal-delivery bakers' yeast (sixth step)-----	192,457.95
Balance determined by difference, styled by respondents as other costs (indirect costs)-----	138,334.27

Allocation of the various elements of costs to the quantity-price brackets

As previously set forth herein, a cost of $330,792.22 was applied by respondents to sale and delivery of bakers' yeast at the outset by the use of predetermined percentages. Likewise, by the use of predetermined percentages (used directly and indirectly), respondents separated this allocated portion of $330,792.22 into component parts as follows:

I. Direct costs:
(a) Route selling and delivery costs-----	$78,140.38
(b) Solicitation costs-----	103,366.39
(c) Service costs-----	10,951.18
Total direct costs-----	192,457.95
II. Other costs (indirect costs)-----	138,334.27

Total costs applied to sale and delivery of bakers' yeast----- 330,792.22

Respondents' next step was to allocate the above costs to the groups of customers whose monthly purchases of bakers' yeast fell in the respective quantity-price brackets.

The items of direct costs making up the total of $192,457.95 applied to bakers' yeast, as shown above, were allocated and applied to the respective quantity-price brackets by time studies and call studies as follows:

Item I (a) $78,140.38, route selling and delivery costs, applied to bakers' yeast, was apportioned according to time of stops of the driver-salesmen and trucks at customers' premises as determined by stop-watch studies and collected data for six days. These data showed the aggregate and proportions of time as between the purchasers of the various bracket quantities of yeast. The apportionment of this item will be shown later in tabular form.

Item I (b) $103,366.39, Solicitation costs, applied to bakers' yeast, was apportioned according to number of calls on customers by solicitors, foremen, and managers. The apportionment of this item will be shown later in tabular form.

Item I (c) $10,951.18, Service costs, applied to bakers' yeast, was apportioned according to a study of actual time spent on calling on customers by service men. The apportionment of this item will be shown later in tabular form.

Following the allocations of Item I, Item II other costs (indirect costs), $138,334.27, was allocated to the quantity-price brackets in the same proportions in which the total direct costs, I (a), I (b) and I (c) combined, had been allocated as described above. The apportionment of this item will be shown later in tabular form.

Before transforming the total so-called direct and indirect costs into costs per pound, respondents apportioned $3,316.26, representing bakery consultants' salaries and expenses, to the quantity-price brackets on the basis of a time study.

The apportionments to quantity-price brackets of all items of cost applied to bakers' yeast by respondents are referred to hereinafter as "Eighth step in respondents' cost allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation:

For the next step of respondents' cost allocations, they tabulated all sales of bakers' yeast (sold through personal-delivery service) throughout the United States during the month of January 1937, whereby the quantity (number of pounds) of yeast sold and delivered to each and every single bakery establishment were grouped into the separate quantity-brackets. The number of pounds assigned to each quantity-bracket was then applied to the costs already allocated to the separate brackets in order to determine the cost per pound applicable to each bracket. This procedure is referred to hereinafter as "Ninth step in respondents' cost allocations," the details of which are shown in the following tabulation.

The costs per pound, applicable to the respective brackets as determined by respondents and shown in the preceding tabulation, are compared with respondents' price scale near the beginning of this paragraph.

PAR. 18. In compiling the cost data as shown in respondents' report, referred to in paragraph 16 hereof, two known factors were immediately available at the outset, namely:

(a) Amount of dollar sales throughout the United States of each of respondents' separate products making up an average monthly total of $6,518,015.44; and,

(b) Costs of sale and delivery throughout the United States of all products combined, amounting to a total monthly average of $978,793.38 (the portions of cost applicable to each of the separate products being "unknown factors").

Respondents' methods of compiling and allocating the costs of sale and delivery revolved themselves into two principal points of procedure, namely:

- (1) Allocation of costs to the separate products; and,
- (2) Allocation of the various elements of cost, apportioned to bakers' yeast, to the separate quantity-price brackets.

The methods employed by respondents in making their allocations of costs have been outlined, step-by-step, in detail in paragraph 17 hereof.

(1) Allocation of costs to the separate products

A review and study of the step-by-step process, set forth in paragraph 17, will show that the respondents represent the actual costs of sale and delivery of bakers' yeast and all other products to be the amounts of the lump-sum estimates set against each product as shown in the "Second Step." This is not a fact as these amounts are not actual individual product costs. The only actual cost factor that has been determined is the total of $978,793.38 representing average monthly costs of sale and delivery of all products combined throughout the United States. Respondents' records do not show the actual portions of this total which are properly applicable to any one of the several separate products.

Respondents determined by a factual cost study and analysis that, of the total average cost of $978,793.38, an amount of $634,062.95 (64.78 percent) might be allocated directly to the two general classes of products, that is, $228,673.07 to bakery products and $405,389.88 to grocery products. All other allocations of cost depend directly or indirectly upon the application of the respective percentages to the dollar sales of the respective products as shown in the "First and Second Steps."

Nowhere in the respondents' cost study does it appear that any factual study has been made to determine the correctness of the percentages that have been applied to the dollar sales of the respective products whereby the costs of sale and delivery of these products have been determined in the form of lump-sum estimates. The cost study submitted by the respondents, referring to these percentages, states that they "are based, in part, on the companies' experience and, in part, on generally recognized costs of distribution of grocery and other products and, in the opinion of its financial officers, they provide for a fair and reasonable allocation of such costs." In addition, from all the evidence, it appears that the correctness of the percentages, or the results to be obtained by the use of them, have never been determined through any factual study, but that they represent judgment and opinion only.

The factual cost study and analysis made by respondents was not made for the purpose of determining the accuracy of the percentages or the accuracy of the results to be obtained by the use of them but it was made upon the major premise that the percentages were correct and that the lump-sum estimated costs arrived at by applying the percentages were actual costs.

A review and study of the step-by-step process shows conclusively that the correctness of the percentages and the accuracy of results to be obtained by the use of them is assumed by the respondents. For example, by the factual cost study and analysis to determine the allocation of costs without the application of the percentages, the respondents accounted for only $634,062.95 (64.78 percent) of the total known costs of all products. This left $344,730.43 unaccounted for, which was allocated by difference as shown in the fifth step. For clarity, this procedure is reproduced below in tabular form.

Respondents' allocations of costs to the two general classes of products

	Bakery products	Grocery products	Total
Total costs of sale and delivery as allocated to the 2 classes of products by applying predetermined percentages to dollar sales (first and second steps).....	$408,397.08 (41.72%)	$570,396.30 (58.28%)	$978,793.38 (100.00%)
Portion of said costs applicable to the 2 classes of products as determined by respondents' factual cost study and analysis (third step).....	$228,673.07 (36.06%)	$405,389.88 (63.94%)	$634,062.95 (100.00%)
Balance of said costs, allocated to the 2 classes of products by difference.....	$179,724.01 (52.13%)	$165,006.42 (47.87%)	$344,730.43 (100.00%)

A review of the above tabulation shows conclusively that, at the very outset, lump-sum estimates were made of the portions of costs applicable to each of the separate products; such amounts, when added, gave the lump-sum estimates which respondents applied to the two general classes of products, bakery products and grocery products. From these lump-sum estimates applied to the two general classes of products, respondents deducted that portion of costs which they applied directly as the result of a factual cost study and analysis; the difference in each instance they regarded as "indirect costs." In other words, molds were established in the beginning in the form of lump-sum estimated amounts. Following this, a factual cost study and analysis was made whereby certain direct costs were earmarked and placed into the respective molds, and the remaining amounts required to fill-out the molds in each instance were provided by respondents in the form of "other costs" or "indirect costs" on which no factual studies and analyses had been made.

In the case of bakery products, respondents applied a lump-sum estimated cost of $408,397.08 (41.72 percent) of the total known costs.

Findings

However, of the total direct costs, $634,062.95, determined by a factual cost study and analysis, respondents applied only $228,673.07 (36.06 percent) to bakery products; while, of the total $344,730.43 indirect costs, respondents applied $179,724.01 (52.13 percent) to bakery products.

If the factual study had been made for the purpose of determining the accuracy of the percentages, rather than taking their accuracy for granted, it is doubtful that 52.13 percent of the indirect costs, on which no factual cost study and analysis had been made, should be applied to bakery products, while only 36.06 percent of the direct costs, on which a factual cost study and analysis had been made, was thus applied.

Indirect Costs

As the result of a factual cost study and analysis of the total average monthly costs of $978,793.38, an amount of $634,062.95 was earmarked as coming within either the bakery-product classification or the grocery-product classification, leaving a balance of $344,730.43 unallocated. This item of the $344,730.43 of unallocated costs is referred to herein as "indirect costs." The elements of cost included in this item of $344,730.43 are as follows:

Findings

This total item of indirect costs was allocated to the two general classes of products as follows:

Bakery products-----	$179,724.01
Grocery products-----	165,006.42
Total-----	344,730.43

Of the total amount of $179,724.01 of the indirect costs which was applied to bakery products, an amount of $138,334.27 (76.97 percent) was applied to bakers' yeast. Of course, these allocations of the indirect costs were applied to the two general classes of products and thence to bakers' yeast by difference wholly and entirely upon respondents' assumption that their lump-sum estimates, applied to each product at the outset, were accurate and correct. Therefore, after deducting those costs which were earmarked as direct costs from the original lump-sum estimates, the difference was assumed to be indirect costs.

A review of the separate items and elements of cost as listed above will show immediately that many of such items could have been allocated directly to the two general classes of products and thence to the separate products to which they applied. For example, "Charges on shipments to shipping customers, $14,686.01" could have been allocated directly. Likewise, "Warehouse charges—Diamalt, $1,182.10" and "Warehouse charges—Frozen eggs, $5,168.93", together with several other items of cost as shown in the above list could have been allocated directly to the respective products to which they applied. No part of these particular items of cost could have possibly been incurred in connection with the sales of bakers' yeast. Nevertheless, under respondents' method of calculating costs, 40.13 percent (ratio of $138,334.27 to $344,730.43) of these costs were applied to bakers' yeast.

Reference is made also to the item of "Taxes—Social Security—$18,321.72" of which according to respondents' method of allocation, $7,352.50 (40.13 percent) was applied to bakers' yeast. Nowhere in the record is there any evidence which would show what portions of the total amount of $18,321.72 applied to persons engaged in the sale and delivery of bakers' yeast.

In arriving at their cost differentials, these so-called indirect costs were applied by respondents at a ratio of 13 times as much per pound on sales to those customers who pay 25 cents per pound for bakers' yeast as was allocated to sales to the customers who pay 14½ cents per pound for their yeast.

For a further example of respondents' methods of apportioning individual costs, reference is made to the items of stockroom costs; "agency stockrooms, $34,294.63" and "division stockrooms, $17,404.33", a portion of which could have been allocated directly to frozen eggs and other products as outlined heretofore. Under respondents' method of allocation, a total amount of $20,746.80 (40.13 percent) of the stockroom costs was allocated to bakers' yeast and this amount was then allocated to the quantity-price brackets, in the calculation of respondents' cost differentials, at the ratio of 13 to 1, that is, thirteen times as much of this cost was allocated to each pound of yeast sold to customers paying the 25-cent price as was allocated to each pound of yeast sold to customers paying the 14½-cent price. It will be noted in connection with the stockroom costs that bakers' yeast is packed in cartons at the factory, shipped to the divisions and agencies in such cartons, placed in the respective stockrooms in such cartons, removed from the stockrooms while still in the cartons, and such cartons remain unbroken when delivered to the customers. Or, in the event that a customer should take less than a carton, then the cartons are generally broken immediately prior to such delivery. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it would appear that there could be little or no cost difference per pound in the stockroom costs applicable to bakers' yeast.

The small item of "Foreign Commissions—$297.67" is not applicable to sales within the United States. Nevertheless, respondents have included an amount of $119.45 (40.13 percent) of this item in the cost applied to bakers' yeast. This small item of cost is trivial and would make little difference in the calculation of respondents' cost differentials. But, it is cited to show the methods employed by respondents in their calculation of costs.

(2) Allocation of the various elements of costs, apportioned to bakers' yeast, to the separate quantity-price brackets

The methods by which the $330,792.22 of costs of sale and delivery applied to bakers' yeast have been allocated to the respective quantity-price brackets, have previously been set forth in the "Eighth Step of respondents' cost allocations." To summarize: The respective items making up this total—to wit, $78,140.38, route selling and delivery costs; $103,366.39, solicitation costs; $10,951.18, service costs; and $138,334.27, indirect costs—were allocated to the respective quantity-price brackets as follows: Route selling and delivery costs on the basis of a time study; solicitation costs, on the basis of the number of calls on customers; service costs, on the basis of a time study; and, indirect costs, on the basis of total direct costs previously allocated to the respective brackets.

The correctness of each of the foregoing amounts cannot be determined conclusively since they were arrived at on the assumption that the lump-sum estimate of costs allocated to bakers' yeast is the actual total costs of sale and delivery of this product.

The allocation of the solicitation costs to the quantity-price brackets, having been made on the basis of calls, has not been shown to be accurate and correct, since the time spent on the separate calls varies materially; and, in addition, the evidence shows that a portion of this item represents promotional costs which have not been segregated and treated separately in respondents' computations.

The service, represented in the item of service cost, while available to all customers, the cost of it has been charged to all customers regardless of whether they have availed themselves of the service or not. The type of service represented in this item of cost together with the type of service represented in the item of bakery consultants cost, has been previously referred to in paragraph 7 hereof; and when the evidence describing these types of service was introduced by the respondents, which was prior to the time that the respondents petitioned to reopen the case in order to introduce evidence with respect to costs, it was represented as being available to all customers free of charge.

RESPONDENTS' USE OF NATION-WIDE COSTS

The complaint, as amended, alleges discrimination in price in the sale of bakers' yeast by the respondents, only according to the prices set forth in schedule A of paragraph 10 hereof. The report on the examination of costs of sale and delivery applicable to bakers' yeast (Res. Ex. 33), offered in evidence by the respondents to show the justification for the price differentials as set forth in said schedule A, made no disclosure of the fact that bakers' yeast is sold by the respondents according to any scale of prices other than that set forth in said schedule A. However, the evidence shows that the respondents do sell bakers' yeast at scales of prices other than those set forth in schedule A; namely, at prices as set forth in schedules B, C, D, and E of paragraph 10 hereof.

Respondents included the costs in those areas where bakers' yeast is sold according to the scale of prices set forth in said schedules B, C, D, and E in order to justify the price differentials set forth in schedule A.

After a thorough study of the report on examination of costs of sale and delivery applicable to bakers' yeast (Res. Ex. 33), and a review of the evidence in relation thereto, and for the numerous reasons set forth herein, the Commission rejects the costs of sale and delivery applicable to bakers' yeast, submitted by respondents, as a justification for the price differentials set forth in schedule A of paragraph 10 hereof.

CONCLUSION

Respondents, in the sale and distribution of yeast, as above described, are engaged in interstate commerce. There is a constant daily current of commerce in respondents' products throughout the country. As heretofore found, after the yeast is manufactured by the respondents at its 6 factories, it is packed and immediately placed in the channels of commerce so that it will reach some 25,000 customers of the respondents located over the entire country within 48 hours with but a temporary storage at the respective warehouses, which is for the purpose of expediting its delivery. The yeast remains in the original cartons until such time as it is delivered from the respondents' trucks to their customers to meet the constant demand for such use existing on the part of said customers. The prices fixed and charged by respondents for such yeast are fixed and charged by them in the course of commerce, and such sales are sales in commerce within the meaning of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

Respondents have not shown cost differences between selling and delivering the respective quantities of bakers' yeast as set forth in schedule A of paragraph 10 hereof, which are sufficient to rebut the evidence of unlawful discrimination. In their attempt to show justification for the price differentials, respondents have offered cost studies, computations and allocations based upon lump-sum estimates which were demonstrated by their own tabulations to be erroneous, and they have distributed the results of this error throughout their cost study on the basis of the reassumed correctness of the demonstrated errors. These lump-sum estimates were applied repeatedly, directly and indirectly, throughout respondents' allocations of costs and the partial cost data obtained by an actual survey were augmented "by difference" in order to adjust the final and vital results to coincide with the lump-sum estimates made at the outset.

Respondents have resorted to the use of lump-sum estimates in the allocation of all costs; they have included in the costs allocated to bakers' yeast many items of cost which were not incurred in the manufacture, sale, and delivery of bakers' yeast; and they have included many items of cost which should be allocated equally to each pound of bakers' yeast. While it may be good practice to use lump-sum estimates for internal managerial purposes, and while respondents may include any and all costs to determine the selling price, we are of the opinion: (1) That respondents' lump-sum estimates cannot be made the basis for price differentials; and (2) that costs which are not incurred in the manufacture, sale, or delivery of a product, and costs which should be allocated equally per unit to the product, cannot be made the basis for price differentials; and (3) that only such costs may be used to justify a price differential between different purchasers of a product of like grade and quality as those which reflect no more than the savings made in the functions and activities which are essential in the manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such products are to such customers sold or delivered.

Respondents' arbitrary and erroneous allocations of cost are further demonstrated by their use of costs of sale and delivery in those areas where yeast is sold at the prices set forth in schedules B, C, D, and E, in order to justify the price differentials as set forth in schedule A. This is particularly true since the prices set forth in schedules B, C, D, and E are higher and show a greater spread in some instances than the prices set forth in schedule A.

The evidence shows that there is no differing method of sale or delivery of the respondents' personal-delivery pound yeast (bakers' yeast), as distinguished from other minor sales of yeast which respondents style "shipping sales" and "sales to grocers."

We conclude that through the use of the discriminatory prices as set forth in schedule A, and as otherwise shown herein, respondents have violated and are violating, section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, as amended, the answers of the respondents, as amended, testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Norwood, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, as amended, and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by James I. Rooney, counsel for the Commission, and by Theodore Kiendl and Edwin F. Blair, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (a) of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended, and having made its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusions.

30 F. T. C.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Standard Brands Incorporated, and Standards Brands of California, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bakers' yeast in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast of like grade and quality, either directly or indirectly:

1. By selling said bakers' yeast at different prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased or required monthly by the respective purchasers, as set forth in schedule A of paragraph 10 of said findings of fact.

2. By selling said bakers' yeast at different prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased (whether from the respondents or from any other source) over a period of time by the respective purchasers, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce in which respondents or any of their customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondents or any of their customers, except where said differentials in price, based upon the quantities or volume purchased from the respondents during such period of time by said respective purchasers, make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered during the period of time for which such differentials are allowed.

3. By means of price differences resulting from selling said bakers' yeast to a single purchaser at prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased (whether from the respondents or from any other source) during a period of time by such purchaser, irrespective of the quantities or volume delivered by the respondents to the separate plants, factories, bakeries, or warehouses of such purchaser, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce in which respondents or any of their customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondents or any of their customers, except where said differentials in price make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered.

4. By selling said bakers' yeast to certain of such purchasers at so-called "off-scale" prices as described in paragraph 12 of said findings of fact, even though the differentials in price of any given price scale make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered during the period of time for which such differentials in price are allowed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Standard Brands, Incorporated, and Standard Brands of California, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of foil yeast in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating in price between different purchasers of foil yeast of like grade and quality, either directly or indirectly, by selling said foil yeast at different prices, to wit: 300 pieces per month and up, 27 cents per dozen; under 300 pieces per month, 30 cents per dozen, as set forth in paragraph 15 of said findings of fact as modified.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall on or before May 1, 1940, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order, as modified.

WILLIAM S. McCLYMONDS, TRADING AS OXOL LABORATORIES AND WESTERN RESEARCH LABORATORIES

Docket 4035. Complaint, Feb. 17, 1940—Decision, May 1, 1940

Where an individual engaged in compounding, selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Quinox Capsules" and intended for use by women suffering from delayed menstruation, to purchasers located in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said "Quinox Capsules" which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among and between the various States and by other means in commerce, and which were intended or likely to induce purchase of his said product—

Represented that his said preparation was a cure or remedy for and constituted competent and effective treatment in cases of delayed menstruation, and that it possessed therapeutic value in treatment of, and would relieve, such condition, facts being it did not constitute such a cure or remedy, irrespective of cause of said condition, and was not a competent or effective treatment therefor, and was without any substantial therapeutic value aside from its effect as an ordinary laxative, and would not relieve such condition or have any beneficial effect thereon;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and claims were true, and of causing substantial portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of his said medicinal preparation:

Held, that such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William S. McClymonds, an individual trading as Oxol Laboratories and Western Research Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. William S. McClymonds is an individual trading and doing business under the names of Oxol Laboratories and Western Research Laboratories, with his principal place of business located at 1046 Santa Fe Street, Denver, Colo.

Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of compounding, selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Quinox Capsules," intended for use by women suffering from delayed menstruation.

Respondent causes his said preparation when sold by him to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the state of Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination, of false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of his said product, and has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of his said product in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Smart women need not suffer monthly pain or delay caused by nervous strain, exposure, etc. The harmless palliative action of Quinox Capsules brings Quick Relief. See your local druggist.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and others not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative and therapeutic properties of respondent's product, the respondent has represented and does now represent, that his said product is a cure or remedy for, and constitutes a competent and effective treatment in cases of delayed menstruation and that said product possesses therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed menstruation and relieves such condition.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation does not constitute a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation irrespective of the cause thereof, or a competent or effective treatment therefor. Said preparation is without any substantial therapeutic value aside from its effect as an ordinary laxative and will not relieve such condition or have any beneficial effect thereon.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations, and claims with respect to his said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and claims are true, and causes, and has caused, a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's medicinal preparation.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 17, 1940, issued and on February 19, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, William S. McClymonds, an individual, trading as Oxol Laboratories and Western Research Laboratories, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. On March 11, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, William S. McClymonds, is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Oxol Laboratories and Western Research Laboratories, with his principal office and place of business at 1046 Santa Fe Drive, in the city of Denver, State of Colorado.

Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Quinox Capsules" intended for use by women suffering from delayed menstruation.

Respondent causes his said preparation when sold by him to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product, and has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Smart women need not suffer monthly pain or delay caused by nervous strain, exposure, etc. The harmless palliative action of Quinox Capsules brings Quick Relief. See your local druggist.

Order

30 F. T. C.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and others not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, and therapeutic properties of respondent's product, the respondent has represented and does now represent, that his said product is a cure or remedy for, and constitutes a competent and effective treatment in cases of delayed menstruation and that said product possesses therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed menstruation and relieves such condition.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation does not constitute a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation irrespective of the cause thereof, or a competent or effective treatment therefor. Said preparation is without any substantial therapeutic value aside from its effect as an ordinary laxative and will not relieve such condition or have any beneficial effect thereon.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations, and claims with respect to his said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and claims are true and causes, and has caused, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's medicinal preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William S. McClymonds, individually and trading as Oxol Laboratories or as Western Research Laboratories, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's medicinal preparation now designated by the name "Quinox Capsules" or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names; or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparation, which advertisements represent directly or by implication:

1. That respondent's preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation, or that said preparation will relieve delayed menstruation or have any beneficial effect thereon.

2. That respondent's preparation possesses any substantial therapeutic value aside from its effect as an ordinary laxative.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
MAX LEVIN, TRADING AS WESTERN NOVELTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4055. Complaint, Mar. 11, 1940—Decision, May 1, 1940

Where an individual engaged in the sale and distribution of knives, cameras, razors, and various other articles of merchandise to dealer purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia—

Sold and distributed certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, when sold and distributed to consumers thereof and included (1) in the case of one such assortment, along with other articles of merchandise involved, a punchboard for use in sale and distribution of such articles under a plan and in accordance with said board's explanatory legend, by which those securing for the 5 cents paid certain numbers became entitled to $2.50 in cash, others became thus entitled to $1.00, still others became thus entitled to 25 cents in trade, while holders of certain other specified numbers were entitled to receive articles of merchandise attached to board, and purchasers who did not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers thus specified received nothing for their money, and (2) various other assortments, together with various push cards and punchboard devices for use in sale and distribution of merchandise concerned to the purchasing public by means of game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme, and involving sales plans or methods substantially the same as those above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise to purchasing public by dealer purchasers thereof who used such punchboard and push card devices in sale and distribution of its said product in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or methods involving games of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise, a sum of money or a credit in trade of much greater value than price to be paid therefor, contrary to an established policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt said or any method involving use of game of chance or sale of chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said method and by element of chance involved in sale of said merchandise as above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said goods in preference to those offered and sold by said competitors who did not use same and equivalent methods, and with effect through use of such method and because of said game of chance of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to him from his competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent method, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Samuel D. Menin, of Denver, Colo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said Act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Max Levin, individually and trading under the name of Western Novelty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Max Levin, is an individual doing business under the name of Western Novelty Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1729 Lawrence Street, Denver, Colo. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of knives, cameras, razors, pens, pencils, cigarette lighters, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers. He causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Colorado to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a device commonly known as a punchboard, with a number of articles of merchandise attached thereto. Said punchboard contains a number of small sealed tubes, each of which tubes contains a small slip of paper with a number printed thereon. Sales are 5 cents each. The board bears statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the holders of certain specified numbers are entitled to and receive $2.50 in cash; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive $1 in cash; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive 25 cents "in trade"; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive the said articles of merchandise attached to said board. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers receives nothing for his money. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch has been made and the number punched separated or removed from said board. The said sums of money, the amounts "in trade" and the said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of his merchandise and sells and furnishes various push card and punchboard devices for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments are substantially the same as the sales plans or methods hereinabove described varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sells and furnishes said punchboard and push card devices, use the same in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of such merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise, a sum of money or a credit "in trade" of much greater value than the price to be paid therefor. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving the use of a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above alleged and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 11th day of March 1940, issued and on the 13th day of March 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Max Levin, individually and trading under the name of Western Novelty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 18, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Max Levin, is an individual who for some time last past did business under the name of Western Novelty Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1729 Lawrence Street, Denver, Colo. Respondent was engaged in the sale and distribution of knives, cameras, razors, pens, pencils, cigarette lighters, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers. He caused said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Colorado to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There was a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent was in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sold and distributed certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, when said merchandise was sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments was sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consisted of a device commonly known as a punchboard, with a number of articles of merchandise attached thereto. Said punchboard contained a number of small sealed tubes, each of which tubes contained a small slip of paper with a number printed thereon. Sales were 5 cents each. The board bears statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the holders of certain specified numbers are entitled to and receive $2.50 in cash; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive $1 in cash; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive 25 cents "in trade"; that the holders of certain other specified numbers are entitled to and receive the said articles of merchandise attached to said board. A purchaser who did not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers received nothing for his money. The numbers were effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch had been made and the number punched separated or removed from said board. The said sums of money, the amounts "in trade" and the said articles of merchandise were thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sold and distributed various assortments of his merchandise and furnished various push card and punchboard devices for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments were substantially the same as the sales plans or methods hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondent sold and furnished said punchboard and push card devices, used the same in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of such merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which was and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise, a sum of money or a credit "in trade" of much greater value than the price to be paid therefor. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute and have sold and distributed merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, were and are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving the use of a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors did and do refrain therefrom. Many persons were attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, had a tendency and capacity to, and did, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who did not and do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury was done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission, having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Max Levin, individually and trading under the name of Western Novelty Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of knives, cameras, razors, pens, pencils, cigarette lighters, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise or any other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, said merchandise or any other merchandise, together with push cards, punchboards, or any other lottery devices, which said push cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise to the general public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push cards, punchboards, or any other lottery devices, either with assortments of said merchandise or any other merchandise, or separately, which said push cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise to the general public.

Order

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF EHRHART CONRAD COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 4068. Complaint, Mar. 20, 1940—Decision, May 1, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of food products to retail dealer purchaser in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce as aforesaid—

Sold and distributed its food products under various plans or methods involving lot or chance in such sale and distribution and including (1) plan under which it thus sold and distributed under label "Plee-zing" its products, together with Plee-zing Treasure Chest devices or cards or booklets for use in sale and distribution of such products to consuming public, in accordance with which plan and explanatory legend displayed on card customers of its retail dealer to whom were distributed such cards or devices became entitled, upon the filling of their respective cards with 100 of the treasure-chest receipts, given with each 25-cent purchase of its said products, to cash awards ranging from 50 cents to $5, and in exchange for the 15-cent cash redemption value assigned to card or booklet, as determined and disclosed by statement revealed through breaking of card's seal, when filled with the 100 receipts, and returned for said purpose to dealer, whom it compensated for rewards or prizes thus paid; and (2) various other plans or methods of distributing or selling its said food products by lot or chance similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in sale of such products to consuming public, in accordance with said sales plans or methods involving game of chance or sale of a chance, to procure articles or products or sums of money of much greater value than amounts to be paid therefor, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving games of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With effect of inducing consuming or purchasing public to buy its said product in preference to like or similar products offered or sold by its competitors, and with result that many dealers and ultimate purchasers of products similar to those distributed by it were attracted by its said sales plans and methods and by element of chance in sale thereof as above described, and were thereby induced to purchase such products from it in preference to similar goods sold by competitors who do not use same or similar methods, and with capacity and tendency, because of game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, to divert trade to it unfairly from said competitors who do not use same or equivalent or similar methods:

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Ehrhart Conrad Co., a corporation, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Ehrhart Conrad Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with its principal office and place of business located at 106 Carlisle Street, Hanover, Pa. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to retail dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as alleged in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed food products labeled "Plee-zing" to retail dealers. Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed to said dealers a so-called "Plee-zing Treasure Chest" device for use in the sale and distribution of said food products to the consuming public in a manner involving the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method employed in selling and distributing said food products to the consuming public by means of said device is substantially as follows: The "Plee-zing Treasure Chest" device consists of a card referred to by respondent as a booklet, with a gold seal thereon together with 100 small trade "receipts." The said card has provided on the front and reverse sides thereof blank spaces on which said receipts are to be pasted. On the front side or face of said card appear the following instructions or legends:

"Plee-zing" Treasure Chest
Plan and Governing Rules
You will be given one

"Plee-zing" Treasure Chest receipt with each 25¢ spent with us. Be sure and paste receipts in this booklet. Under the Seals of some "Plee-zing" Treasure Chest booklets are listed valuable PLEE-ZING products.

The food products or cash awards so designated or described under said gold seals vary in value in accordance with each individual card and such designations or descriptions of said awards or prizes are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said receipts have been pasted on said cards and the gold seals thereon broken and removed therefrom. The said prizes or awards are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent supplies and furnishes its customers with various plans or methods of selling and distributing said food products by lot or chance, but such sales plans or methods are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail. Respondent refunds to said dealers said awards or prizes so distributed by such dealers.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said food products and devices expose the same to the purchasing public and sell and distribute such products in accordance with the above-described sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Such sales plans or methods have the tendency and capacity to, and do, induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondent's said products in preference to like or similar products offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of such products to the consuming public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of said products or sums of money of much greater values than the amounts to be paid therefor. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its products and the sale of such products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal law. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods has the tendency to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, products similar to those distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said sales plans or methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said products in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said products from respondent in preference to similar products offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or similar methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent or similar methods.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 20, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Ehrhart Conrad Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 27, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint. The respondent also waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Ehrhart Conrad Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located at 106 Carlisle Street, Hanover, Pa. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to retail dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed food products labeled "Plee-zing" to retail dealers. Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed to said dealers a so-called "Plee-zing Treasure Chest" device for use in the sale and distribution of said food products to the consuming public in a manner involving the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plans or methods employed in selling and distributing said food products to the consuming public by means of said device is substantially as follows: The "Plee-zing Treasure Chest" device consists of a card referred to by respondent as a booklet, with a gold seal thereon, together with 100 small trade "receipts." The said card has provided on the front and reverse sides thereof blank spaces on which said receipts are to be pasted. On the front side or face of said card appear the following instructions or legends:

The food products or cash awards so designated or described under said gold seals vary in value in accordance with each individual card and such designations or descriptions of said awards or prizes are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said receipts have been pasted on said cards and the gold seals thereon broken and removed therefrom. The said prizes or awards are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent supplies and furnishes its customers with various plans or methods of selling and distributing said food products by lot or chance, but such sales plans or methods are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail. Respondent refunds to said dealers said awards or prizes so distributed by such dealers.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said food products and devices expose the same to the purchasing public and sell and distribute such products in accordance with the above-described sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. Such sales plans or methods have the tendency and capacity to, and do, induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondent's said products in preference to like or similar products offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of such products to the consuming public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of said products or sums of money of much greater values than the amounts to be paid therefor. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its products and the sale of such products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal law. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods has the tendency to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, products similar to those distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said sales plans or methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said products in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said products from respondent in preference to similar products offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or similar methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent or similar methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and respondent having waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ehrhart Conrad Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of food products or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing said products or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said products or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, sales promotion cards, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices, together with said food products or other merchandise, which said promotion cards, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in the sale and distribution of said products, or any other merchandise, to the general public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, sales promotion cards, or sales promotion plans or schemes, or any other devices, either with assortments of said products or other merchandise, or separately, which said sales promotion cards, sales promotion plans or schemes, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such products or other merchandise to the general public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
PRUDENTIAL SALES CORPORATIONCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3839. Complaint, June 29, 1939—Decision, May 2, 1940*

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of electric dry shavers, wrist watches, electric roasters, pen and pencil sets, blankets, and various other articles of merchandise to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar articles in commerce as aforesaid; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing its said merchandise—

- (a) Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which such merchandise was sold and distributed to ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance and which involved distribution to purchasing public of certain literature and instructions, including among other things, (1) push cards, order blanks, illustrations of merchandise involved and circulars explaining his plan of selling such merchandise and allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards under plan, among others, by which person selecting from a list of 25 feminine names displayed on card, name corresponding to that concealed under card's large master seal, after sale of all chances, received electric dry shaver or article of merchandise being thus disposed of, and person securing certain number as disclosed by disk pushed received combination pen or pencil, and under which amount paid for chance was dependent upon number secured in accordance with card's explanatory legend, and (2) various push cards accompanied by such order blanks, etc., for use in sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and in accordance with sales plans similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to, and placed in the hands of others, means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said products by persons to whom it furnished said push cards, and who used same in purchasing, selling, and distributing its merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan, under which fact as to whether purchaser received an article of merchandise or nothing for amount of money paid, and which of said articles purchaser was to receive, if any, were determined wholly by lot or chance, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan or method in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and by elements of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its products in preference to those of said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect of unfairly diverting substantial trade in commerce as above set forth to its competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods; and Where said corporation engaged as aforesaid—

- (b) Represented through various false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations on the said push cards and in its advertising matter circulated in commerce that its electric dry shaver had a retail value of $15, facts being that said products had no such value, but were of inferior quality and workmanship, and had a retail value of substantially less than such amount;
- (c) Made use of trade name "Packard," in bold type, on its said push cards, disseminated as aforesaid, together with the picture of an electric dry shaver, and beneath or to the side of said trade name, thus printed, and in small letters words, "Combination Pen and Pencil" so set-out as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible to purchasers and prospective purchasers, notwithstanding fact product in question was not Packard Electro Shaver, but product of inferior quality and workmanship, and of substantially smaller value;

With result of causing members of purchasing public through arrangement of such depiction and word Packard as aforesaid, to have an erroneous and mistaken belief that electric shaver there referred to was genuine Packard Electro Shaver, retailing for $15, and preferred on part of purchasers and prospective purchasers because of quality and workmanship thereof; and

- (d) Made use of word, unqualified, "wool", in bold type in its advertisements relating to blankets so sold by it in the course and conduct of its business as hereinbefore described, together with words in much smaller type and in another portion of advertising "Guardsman Has Over 80 Percent Wool Content Guaranteed", with word "wool" so arranged and set-out as readily to attract the attention of purchasers or prospective purchasers while other matter last referred to was so arranged and set out as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible by purchasers and prospective purchasers, notwithstanding fact said product was not composed entirely of wool as below set forth, or of any type or kind of wool;

With effect of causing members of purchasing public to have a mistaken and erroneous belief that said blankets, thus advertised, were composed entirely of wool as understood in wool trade, and by purchasing public, when used alone or without appropriate or adequate qualifications, as meaning new and unused fiber from the fleece or hair of the sheep or lamb, or of the Angora or Cashmere goat, or of the Camel, Alpaca, Llama, or Vicuna, and as such highly prized by purchasing and consuming public for its qualities of warmth and durability;

- (e) Represented in its advertising matter disseminated among various States as before set out, and in the course and conduct of its said business as above described, certain sports jackets which it thus offered, as actually made from Elkskin, chrome tanned skin of the Elk, and possessing the desirable and preferable qualities of said product, through use of such statements as "Genuine Elkskein," "Feel its soft, pliable Elkskein," and "Only Sportster uses genuine Elkskein," notwithstanding fact said sports jackets were not made from Elkskin and did not possess desirable and preferable qualities and characteristics thereof, but had only a fraction of value of sports jackets made from the genuine, which was soft, pliable, light in weight, washable and exceedingly durable, was highly prized for its desirable qual-

- (f) Made such false, deceptive and misleading statements, and representations in its circulars, concerning the awarding of gifts, prizes, and premiums to its agents and distributors as "A free gift for you," "Get busy immediately and see just how simple it is to own these valuable articles absolutely free of cost," "You will receive absolutely free an electric dry shaver," "For disposing of this sales card you receive for yourself an electric dry shaver without cost to you," notwithstanding fact its so-called gifts, prizes or premiums were not given away "free" or "without cost" to its agents or distributors, but constituted regular compensation paid by it to them for selling its merchandise, and ordinary and usual method employed by it in so compensating its said agents and distributors, and cost of such gifts was included in that of other articles of merchandise sold by them, and sale of which they were required to procure before receiving from it said so-called gifts, prizes or premiums;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public and prospective agents and distributors of its said merchandise into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations were true, and of causing such members to buy substantial amounts of its said products, because of such belief, and causing prospective agents or distributors to sell or distribute its merchandise in preference to that of competitors, including sellers and distributors of like or similar products who do not make such false and misleading statements and representations concerning their products, nor hold out certain gifts, prizes or premiums as free or without cost when such is not the fact, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to it from competitors aforesaid, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair method of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Prudential Sales Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Prudential Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 230 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric dry shavers, wrist watches, electric roasters, smoking ensembles, blankets, clocks, radios, silverware, electric mixers, vacuum cleaners, sports jackets, pen and pencil sets, flashlights, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of its said merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 25 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 25 small, partially perforated disks on the face of each of which is printed the word "push," and immediately below each of said disks is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Complaint

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove related, respondent causes and has caused various false, deceptive and misleading statements, and representations to appear on its said push cards and in its advertising matter circulated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, concerning its electric dry shavers, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

(a) The respondent represents and has represented its electric dry shavers to have a retail value of $15. In truth and in fact they do not have such value. The said electric dry shavers are of inferior quality and workmanship and have a retail value of substantially less than $15.

(b) The respondent further misleads and deceives, and has misled and deceived, a large and substantial portion of the purchasing public by placing or causing to be placed on the face of its push cards, which are disseminated as aforesaid, the picture of an electric dry shaver and beneath or to the side of the said picture in bold type the word "Packard." Beneath the aforesaid word "Packard," in small letters, are the words "Combination Pen and Pencil." The word "Packard" is in bold type and is so arranged and set out by respondent on said push cards as to readily attract the attention of purchasers or prospective purchasers thereto, while the words "Combination Pen and Pencil" are in small type and are so set-out as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible by purchasers and prospective purchasers. By so placing, or causing to be placed, the picture of an electric dry shaver and the word "Packard" in bold type on said push cards in the manner aforesaid, the respondent causes members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the electric shaver referred to on said push cards is a genuine Packard Lectro Shaver which regularly retails for $15 each. In truth and in fact the electric dry shavers offered for sale and sold by respondent pursuant to such sales plan are not Packard Lectro Shavers but are electric dry shavers of inferior quality and workmanship and have a value of substantially less than the value of a genuine Packard Lectro Shaver.

There is a preference on the part of certain purchasers and prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, for buying Packard Lectro Shavers and shavers of a value of $15, because of their quality and workmanship.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling said blankets, places, or causes to be placed, the unqualified word "wool," in bold type, in its advertisements relative to such blankets. In much smaller type than is used for the word "wool" and in another portion of said advertising matter, there appears the statement "Guardsmen Has Over 80 percent Wool Content Guaranteed." The word "wool" in bold type is so arranged and set-out in said advertisements as to readily attract the attention of purchasers or prospective purchasers thereto, while the statement "Guardsmen Has Over 80 Percent Wool Content Guaranteed" is in small type and is so arranged and set-out in the said advertisements as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible by purchasers and prospective purchasers.

The placing by respondent of the unqualified word "wool" in bold type, as above described, and the statement "Guardsmen Has Over 80 Percent Wool Content Guaranteed" in small type, as above described, causes members of the purchasing public to have the mistaken and erroneous belief that the blankets advertised, as above alleged, are composed entirely of wool, as the word "wool" is defined herein. The word "wool" when used alone or without appropriate and adequate qualification, is understood in the wool trade and by members of the purchasing public to mean the new and unused fiber from the fleece or hair of the sheep or lamb, or of the Angora or Cashmere goat, or of the Camel, Alpaca, Llama, or Vicuna, and as such is highly prized by the purchasing and consuming public for its qualities of warmth and durability.

In truth and in fact said blankets of the respondent are not composed entirely of wool as the word "wool" is hereinabove defined. Said blankets are not composed entirely of any type or kind of wool.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove described, the respondent makes and has made various false, deceptive

Complaint

and misleading statements, and representations in its advertising matter disseminated among and between the various States of the United States, concerning the sports jackets which it sells, and has sold, as hereinabove described. Among such statements and representations, but not including all such statements and representations, are the following:

Genuine Elkskein
Feel its soft, pliable Elkskein
Only Sportster uses genuine Elkskein

Elkskin is the skin of an elk which has been tanned by what is known as the chrome process. It is exceedingly durable and possesses qualities greatly desired by the purchasing and consuming public. It is soft, pliable, light in weight, and may be washed. It is highly prized for these desirable qualities by the purchasing and consuming public, especially by sportsmen, and is preferred by many such users to any other material for use in garments for sport or outdoor wear. The respondent's sports jackets are not made from the skin of elk and have only a fraction of the value of sports jackets made from genuine elkskin.

The term "Elkskein" is a slightly distorted spelling of the word "elkskin" and is a misleading simulation thereof. The respondent's use in its advertising matter of the term "Elkskein" to describe, designate or refer to its sports jackets serves as representation that said sports jackets so described or designated are actually made from elkskin, the chrome tanned skin of the elk, and possess the desirable and preferable qualities and characteristics of elkskin. The sports jackets sold and distributed by respondent, as hereinabove described, are not made from elkskin and do not possess the desirable and preferable qualities and characteristics of elkskin.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, respondent causes, and has caused, various false, deceptive and misleading statements, and representations to appear in its sales circulars concerning the awarding of gifts, prizes, and premiums to its agents or distributors. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

A free gift for you
Get busy immediately and see just how simple it is to own these valuable articles absolutely free of cost
You will receive absolutely free an electric dry shaver
For disposing of this sales card you receive for yourself an electric dry shaver without cost to you

In truth and in fact, the aforesaid so-called gifts, prizes, or premiums are not given away "free" or "without cost" by respondent to its agents or distributors. The so-called gifts are not free but are the regular compensation paid by respondent to its agents or distributors for selling respondent's merchandise, and such method is the ordinary and usual method used by respondent in compensating said agents or distributors for selling its merchandise. The cost of said so-called gifts is included in the cost of other articles of respondent's merchandise sold by the said agents or distributors. The respondent requires its agents or distributors to procure the sale of or sell said articles of merchandise for respondent before they receive the so-called gifts, prizes, or premiums from respondent.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the statements and representations described in paragraphs 5, 6, 7, and 8 hereof has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public and prospective agents or distributors of respondent's merchandise into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and causes said members of the purchasing public to purchase substantial amounts of respondent's merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief and causes said prospective agents or distributors to sell and distribute respondent's merchandise in preference to selling and distributing merchandise of competitors of the respondent. There are among the competitors of respondent described in paragraph 1 hereof sellers and distributors of like or similar products who do not make such false and misleading statements and representations concerning their products, nor do they hold out certain gifts, prizes, or premiums to be free or without cost when such is not the fact.

PAR. 10. The acts and practices of respondent, hereinabove set forth, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, unfairly divert trade to respondent from said competitors. As a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 29, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Prudential

Sales Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 12, 1939, the respondent filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Prudential Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 230 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric dry shavers, wrist watches, electric roasters, smoking ensembles, blankets, clocks, radios, silverware, electric mixers, vacuum cleaners, sports jackets, pen and pencil sets, flashlights, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in Illinois to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing its merchandise furnishes, and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of its said merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 25 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 25 small, partially perforated disks on the face of each of which is printed the word "push," and immediately below each of said disks is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically elsewhere on the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Name under Seal Receives a

ELECTRIC DRY SHAVER

Shave the Modern Way

No. 29

Receives a

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove related, respondent causes and has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements, and representations to appear on its said push cards and in its advertising matter circulated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, concerning its electric dry shavers, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

(a) The respondent represents and has represented its electric dry shavers to have a retail value of $15. In truth and in fact they do not have such value. The said electric dry shavers are of inferior quality and workmanship and have a retail value of substantially less than $15.

(b) The respondent further misleads and deceives, and has misled and deceived, a large and substantial portion of the purchasing public by placing or causing to be placed on the face of its push cards, which are disseminated as aforesaid, the picture of an electric dry shaver and beneath or to the side of the said picture in bold type the word "Packard." Beneath the aforesaid word "Packard," in small letters, are the words "Combination Pen and Pencil." The word "Packard" is in bold type and is so arranged and set-out by respondent on said push cards as to readily attract the attention of purchasers or prospective purchasers thereto, while the words "Combination Pen and Pencil" are in small type and are so set-out as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible by purchasers and prospective purchasers. By so placing, or causing to be placed, the picture of an electric dry shaver and the word "Packard" in bold type on said push cards in the manner aforesaid, the respondent causes members of the purchasing public to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the electric shaver referred to on said push cards is a genuine Packard Lectro Shaver which regularly retails for $15 each. In truth and in fact the electric dry shavers offered for sale and sold by respondent pursuant to such sales plan are not Packard Lectro Shavers but are electric dry shavers of inferior quality and workmanship and have a value of substantially less than the value of a genuine Packard Lectro Shaver.

There is a preference on the part of certain purchasers and prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, for buying Packard Lectro Shavers and shavers of a value of $15, because of their quality and workmanship.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, as hereinabove described, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling said blankets, places, or causes to be placed, the unqualified word "wool," in bold type, in its advertisements relative to such blankets. In much smaller type than is used for the word "wool" and in another portion of said advertising matter, there appears the statement "Guardsman Has Over 80 Percent Wool Content Guaranteed." The word "wool" in bold type is so arranged and set-out in said advertisements as to readily attract the attention of purchasers or prospective purchasers thereto, while the statement "Guardsman Has Over 80 Percent Wool Content Guaranteed" is in small type and is so arranged and set-out in the said advertisements as to be inconspicuous and not readily discernible by purchasers and prospective purchasers.

The placing by respondent of the unqualified word "wool" in bold type, as above described, and the statement "Guardsman Has Over 80 percent Wool Content Guaranteed" in small type, as above described, causes members of the purchasing public to have the mistaken and erroneous belief that the blankets advertised, as above found, are composed entirely of wool, as the word "wool" is defined herein. The word "wool" when used alone or without appropriate and adequate qualification, is understood in the wool trade and by members of the purchasing public to mean the new and unused fiber from the fleece or hair of the sheep or lamb, or of the Angora or Cashmere goat, or of the Camel, Alpaca, Llama, or Vicuna, and as such is highly prized by the purchasing and consuming public for its qualities of warmth and durability.

In truth and in fact said blankets of the respondent are not composed entirely of wool as the word "wool" is hereinabove defined. Said blankets are not composed entirely of any type or kind of wool.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove described, the respondent makes and has made various false, deceptive and misleading statements, and representations in its advertising matter disseminated among and between the various States of the United States, concerning the sports jackets which it sells, and has sold, as hereinabove described. Among such statements and representations, but not including all such statements and representations, are the following:

Genuine Elkskein
Feel its soft, pliable Elkskein
Only Sportster uses genuine Elkskein

Elkskin is the skin of an elk which has been tanned by what is known as the chrome process. It is exceedingly durable and possesses qualities greatly desired by the purchasing and consuming public. It is soft, pliable, light in weight, and may be washed. It is highly prized for these desirable qualities by the purchasing and consuming public, especially by sportsmen, and is preferred by many such users to any other material for use in garments for sport or outdoor wear. The respondent's sports jackets are not made from the skin of elk and have only a fraction of the value of sports jackets made from genuine elkskin.

The term "Elkskein" is a slightly distorted spelling of the word "elkskin" and is a misleading simulation thereof. The respondent's use in its advertising matter of the term "Elkskein" to describe, designate or refer to its sports jackets serves as representation that said sports jackets so described or designated are actually made from elkskin, the chrome tanned skin of the elk, and possess the desirable and preferable qualities and characteristics of elkskin. The sports jackets sold and distributed by respondent, as hereinabove described, are not made from elkskin and do not possess the desirable and preferable qualities and characteristics of elkskin.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinabove described, respondent causes, and has caused, various false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations to appear in its sales circulars concerning the awarding of gifts, prizes, and premiums to its agents or distributors. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

A free gift for you

Get busy immediately and see just how simple it is to own these valuable articles absolutely free of cost

You will receive absolutely free an electric dry shaver

For disposing of this sales card you receive for yourself an electric dry shaver without cost to you

In truth and in fact, the aforesaid so-called gifts, prizes, or premiums are not given away "free" or "without cost" by respondent to its agents or distributors. The so-called gifts are not free but are the regular compensation paid by respondent to its agents or distributors for selling respondent's merchandise, and such method is the ordinary and usual method used by respondent in compensating said agents or distributors for selling its merchandise. The cost of said so-called gifts is included in the cost of other articles of respondent's merchandise sold by the said agents or distributors. The respondent requires its agents or distributors to procure the sale of or sell said articles of merchandise for respondent before they receive the so-called gifts, prizes or premiums from respondent.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the statements and representations described in paragraphs 5, 6, 7, and 8 hereof has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public and prospective agents or distributors of respondent's merchandise into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and cause said members of the purchasing public to purchase substantial amounts of respondent's merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief and causes said prospective agents or distributors to sell and distribute respondents merchandise in preference to selling and distributing merchandise of competitors of the respondent. There are among the competitors of respondent described in paragraph 1 hereof sellers and distributors of like or similar products who do not make such false and misleading statements and representations concerning their products, nor do they hold out certain gifts, prizes or premiums to be free or without cost when such is not the fact.

PAR. 10. The acts and practices of the respondent, hereinabove set forth, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, unfairly divert trade to respondent from said competitors. As a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Prudential Sales Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of electric shavers, wrist watches, electric roasters, smoking ensembles, blankets, clocks, radios, silverware, electric mixers, vacuum cleaners, sports jackets, pen and pencil sets, flashlights or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise, or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices.

4. Representing as the customary or regular prices or values of respondent's electric shavers prices and values which are in fact fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which such electric shavers are customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal course of business.

5. Using the trade name "Packard" or the trade name of any other electric shaver in connection with a picture of an electric shaver, or separately, in such manner as to indicate that respondent is offering an electric shaver bearing such trade name when in fact the respondent uses such trade name to refer to an article of merchandise other than an electric shaver.

6. Using a trade name usually associated with a particular article of merchandise in connection with a picture of such article or separately in such a manner as to indicate that the merchandise offered by the respondent is the same as that usually associated with such trade name when the respondent is actually offering merchandise other than that usually associated with such trade name.

7. Using the word "wool" or any other word or term descriptive of wool to describe, designate or in any way refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of wool, provided, however, that in the case of fabrics or products composed in part of wool and in part of other fabrics, such words may be used as descriptive of the wool content if there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent.

30 F. T. C.

8. Using the word "Elkskein" or any other simulation of the word "elkskin" to describe or refer to sports jackets or other articles of merchandise which are not made from the skin of an elk tanned by the chrome process.

9. Using the term "free" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to goods, wares or merchandise regularly included in a combination offer with other articles of merchandise or which are given as compensation for services.

It is further ordered That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

THE CHAPMAN HEALTH PRODUCTS COMPANY, JOHN W. CHAPMAN, AND NELLIE C. CHAPMAN, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICERS OF THE CHAPMAN HEALTH PRODUCTS COMPANY

Docket 4004. Complaint, Jan. 31, 1940—Decision, May 2, 1940

Where a corporation and two individuals who were officers thereof and formulated, controlled and directed its policies, acts, and practices, engaged in sale and distribution of their N. A. R. Tablets for rheumatism, neuritis, and arthritis, and of their Faid or Daintee preparation for obesity, and acting together and in cooperation with each other, in performing acts and practices below set forth; in advertisements of their said products which they disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, through insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation and through circular and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce, and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of their said preparations—

(a) Represented that their said N. A. R. Tablets constituted a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis, and arthritis, and possessed a therapeutic value for treatment thereof;

Facts being that preparation in question does not effect a cure or a remedy for said ailments and possesses no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof, except insofar as preparation's analgesic properties might afford temporary relief from the pains caused thereby; and

(b) Represented that their said Faid or Daintee constituted a cure or remedy for obesity and a competent, safe and scientific treatment therefor, and that its use would have no ill effect upon the body;

Facts being said medicinal preparation is not a cure or remedy for said condition, does not constitute a competent, safe or scientific treatment therefor, and would not accomplish results claimed by them, and is not safe and harmless in that it contains desiccated thyroid and certain other drugs in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary and usual, and might produce nausea, muscular debility, gastrointestinal irritation, and various other conditions and also result, among other things, in chronic poisoning, permanent injury to tissues and organic functions and body mechanism and irreparable injury to the heart; and

(c) Failed to reveal in its said advertisements that use of said preparation last referred to under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health; .

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements were true, and of inducing a portion of said public, because of such relief, to purchase its said medicinal preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Chapman Health Products Co., a corporation, John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, as individuals and as officers of The Chapman Health Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The Chapman Health Products Co. is a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its office and principal place of business at 4618 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman are individuals and are, respectively, president and treasurer, and vice president and secretary, of The Chapman Health Products Co., with their office and principal place of business at the same address as said corporate respondent.

Respondents, John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, as individuals and as officers of said corporate respondent, formulate, control, and direct the policies, acts and practices thereof. All of the respondents have acted together and in cooperation with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations, including two formulæ designated as N. A. R. Tablets, recommended as a treatment for rheumatism, neuritis, and arthritis, and Faïd otherwise known as Daintee, recommended as a treatment for obesity.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents cause said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Complaint

At all times mentioned herein, respondents have maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparations by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations; and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements of N. A. R. Tablets disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Rheumatism!
Neuritis!
Arthritis!

The torturing pangs from any of these ailments not only may be quickly relieved by taking a few N. A. R. Tablets, but continued use should eliminate the acids causing these troubles.

N. A. R. TABLETS

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements of Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Don't worry about fat, take Faid reducing tablets.

In order to get the best results, Faid must be taken at regular intervals.

For ordinary cases, take one tablet after each meal and one at bedtime. While this is not intended to bring about rapid effects, it should under ordinary conditions show results. Should more rapid action be desired, take two tablets after each meal omitting the one at bedtime.

No set dosage can be made for all users for this is governed a great deal by individuals and their habits. However, the dosage described will, we believe fit the average individual.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

You are taking Faid to obtain certain results so be very careful not to miss a single dose or the accumulative effect started may be lost which would necessitate starting all over again.

As to how long the Faid tablets should be taken, no definite period can be fixed in advance of their actual use and the reaction of the particular individual to them. Much will depend upon the circumstances of each case and the response of each individual to the treatment. It therefore is expected that each person will use his or her own sound judgment as to when and how long to use the tablets * * * in privacy under your own control.

The Faid Method, used according to directions, should do all that is claimed for it. The directions are important and should be followed carefully if best results are to be obtained.

Faid is a scientific prescription to assist in taking off surplus fat. Should they fear the thyroid ingredient it can be said that an inactive thyroid gland is usually the cause of fat accumulation. One half grain is only sufficient to stimulate thyroid activity. Many doctors prescribe this drug in doses several times this amount.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their medicinal preparation, known and designated as N. A. R. Tablets, is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis and arthritis and possesses therapeutic value in the treatment therefor.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, known as N. A. R. Tablets, is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis or arthritis. Said preparation does not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of any of said ailments, except in so far as the analgesic properties of said preparation may afford temporary relief from the pains caused by said ailments.

PAR. 6. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents also represent that their medicinal preparation designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee is a cure or remedy for obesity and a competent, safe and scientific treatment therefor, and that its use will have no ill effect upon the human body.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, is not a cure or remedy for obesity and does not constitute a competent, safe or scientific treatment therefor. Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondents. Furthermore said preparation is not safe and harmless in that said preparation contains powdered extract phytolacca berries, sodium baborate, berberine hydrochloride, apocynoid, and desiccated thyroid.

Findings

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparation may produce nausea, severe vomiting, muscular debility, gastrointestinal irritation, diarrhea, serious bowel trouble, raised temperature, irregular pulse, collapse, headaches, muscular and articular pains, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor, and tachycardia.

The use of said preparation, as aforesaid may also result in chronic poisoning, thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, and irreparable injury to the heart muscle and auricular fibrillation.

PAR. 8. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth the respondents have also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of said preparation Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparations.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 31, 1940, issued and on February 1, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, The Chapman Health Products Co., a corporation, and John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, individually and as officers of The Chapman Health Products Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 1, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. The Chapman Health Products Co. is a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its office and principal place of business at 4618 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman are individuals and are, respectively, president and treasurer, and vice president and secretary, of The Chapman Health Products Co., with their office and principal place of business at the same address as said corporate respondent.

Respondents, John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, as individuals and as officers of said corporate respondent, formulate, control and direct the policies, acts, and practices thereof. All of the respondents have acted together and in cooperation with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations, including two formulae designated as N. A. R. Tablets, recommended as a treatment for rheumatism, neuritis and arthritis, and Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, recommended as a treatment for obesity.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents cause said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondents have maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparations by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations; and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements of N. A. R. Tablets disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Rheumatism!
Neuritis!
Arthritis!

The torturing pangs from any of these ailments not only may be quickly relieved by taking a few N. A. R. Tablets, but continued use should eliminate the acids causing these troubles.

N. A. R. TABLETS

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements of Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Don't worry about fat, take Faid reducing tablets.

In order to get best results, Faid must be taken at regular intervals.

For ordinary cases, take one tablet after each meal and one at bedtime. While this is not intended to bring about rapid effects, it should under ordinary conditions show results. Should more rapid action be desired, take two tablets after each meal omitting the one at bedtime.

No set dosage can be made for all users for this is governed a great deal by individuals and their habits. However, the dosage described will, we believe, fit the average individual.

You are taking Faid to obtain certain results so be very careful not to miss a single dose or the accumulative effect started may be lost which would necessitate starting all over again.

As to how long the Faid tablets should be taken, no definite period can be fixed in advance of their actual use and the reaction of the particular individual to them. Much will depend upon the circumstances of each case and the response of each individual to the treatment. It therefore is expected that each person will use his or her own sound judgment as to when and how long to use the tablets * * * in privacy under your own control.

The Faid Method, used according to directions, should do all that is claimed for it. The directions are important and should be followed carefully if best results are to be obtained.

Faid is a scientific prescription to assist in taking off surplus fat. Should they fear the thyroid ingredient it can be said that an inactive thyroid gland is usually the cause of fat accumulation. One half grain is only sufficient to stimulate thyroid activity. Many doctors prescribe this drug in doses several times this amount.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their medicinal preparation, known and designated as N. A. R. Tablets, is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis and arthritis and possesses therapeutic value in the treatment therefor.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, known as N. A. R. Tablets, is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis or arthritis. Said preparation does not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of any of said ailments, except in so far as the analgesic properties of said preparation may afford temporary relief from the pains caused by said ailments.

PAR. 6. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents also represent that their medicinal preparation designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee is a cure or remedy for obesity and a competent, safe and scientific treatment therefor, and that its use will have no ill effect upon the human body.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, is not a cure or remedy for obesity and does not constitute a competent, safe or scientific treatment therefor. Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondents. Furthermore, said preparation is not safe and harmless in that said preparation contains powdered extract phytolacca berries, sodium bitorate, berberine hydrochloride, apocynoid, and desiccated thyroid.

Order

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparation may produce nausea, severe vomiting, muscular debility, gastrointestinal irritation, diarrhea, serious bowel trouble, raised temperature, irregular pulse, collapse, headaches, muscular and articular pains, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor, and tachycardia.

The use of said preparation, as aforesaid may also result in chronic poisoning, thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, and irreparable injury to the heart muscle and auricular fibrillation.

PAR. 8. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth the respondents have also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of said preparation Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, The Chapman Health Products Co., a corporation, and its officers, and John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, individually and as officers of The Chapman Health Products Co., and their respective agents, representatives, and employees directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the medicinal preparations designated as "N. A. R. Tablets" and as "Faid" (otherwise known as "Daintee"), or any other medicinal preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of said medicinal preparations, which advertisements, when referring to the product "Faid," fail to reveal that the use of said preparation "Faid" may result in serious and irreparable injury to health, or which advertisements represent, directly or through implication:

1. That said preparation designated as "N. A. R. Tablets," is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, neuritis or arthritis, or that said preparation possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of any of said ailments, other than to afford temporary relief from the pains caused by said ailments.

2. That said preparation designated as "Faid," otherwise known as "Daintee," is a cure or remedy for obesity or is a competent, safe or scientific treatment for obesity.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY SEC. 1 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 2987. Complaint, Nov. 21, 1936—Decision, May 11, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution of yeast in commerce to its customers in the several States other than States of origin and shipment, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of yeast in commerce between and among the various States;

In selling its bakers' yeast under price lists and schedules pursuant to which purchasers of 50,000 pounds and more of such yeast received price of 14 cents a pound, purchasers of 10,000 to 50,000 pounds received price of 14½ cents a pound, those purchasing from 7,500 to 10,000 pounds received price of 16 cents, and prices in remaining 8 steps ranged upward from 17 cents for monthly purchases or requirements of buyer ranging from 5,000 to 7,500 pounds, to 25 cents for those purchasing from 1 to 150 pounds—

- (a) Discriminated thereby in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality, through giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast, when used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices, as aforesaid, than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the United States;
- (b) Discriminated in price between different purchasers by deviating from schedule aforesaid, through practice of applying such schedule on basis of respective customers' monthly requirements, irrespective of whether or not such requirements were purchased of it, (1) between customers, on the one hand, who purchased all of their requirements of yeast from it, and those who purchased only a part of their requirements, so that, under certain circumstances, purchaser buying his entire requirement would pay more than other customer buying similar quantity of it, but with larger monthly requirement, and would pay, also, same amount as still other customer with same requirement, but purchasing less, and (2) between customers, on the one hand, who purchased some, but not all, of their requirements from it, and other customers who also purchased some, but not all, of their requirements, so that, under given circumstances, customer purchasing given quantity, but with larger requirement, might pay less than customer purchasing of its similar quantity, but with smaller requirement;
- (c) Discriminated in price between different purchasers of its said yeast by deviating from said schedule, through selling at prices based on respective purchasers' total consumption or purchases, irrespective of the number or quantity of the individual deliveries, so that independent dealers operating single plant were obligated to pay a great deal more for yeast than large chains operating several bakeries which, with plant in same area as independent, might receive same quantity at particular branch as received by independent, by reason of method aforesaid of basing price not upon particular quantity delivered, but upon total delivered to all of large customer's branches; and

- (d) Discriminated in price between different purchasers of its said yeast by deviating from said schedule, through selling to some of certain customers, within definite quantity bracket, its said product at so-called "off-scale" prices, or prices lower than those favored customer should pay for quantity involved according to scale, in event of his purchasing of it his entire requirements;

With result that, through sale of its bakers' yeast as aforesaid set forth, according to said price scale, and through deviating therefrom as above described, large bakeries and chains made large and substantial savings which might be reflected in many different ways in lessening or injuring competition, and were available for periodic reductions in price and increase of sales effort and sales appeal, to the disadvantage of customers against whom discriminations aforesaid were employed, and effect thereof was and might be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which it and its favored customers, receiving benefit of such discriminatory prices, were engaged, and to injure, destroy and prevent competition with such customers thus benefited:

Held, That acts and practices aforesaid of such corporation, under the circumstances set forth, were in violation of Sec. 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. James I. Rooney for the Commission.

Nagel, Kirby, Orrick & Shepley, of St. Louis, Mo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved June 19, 1936, Public 692 (the Robinson-Patman Act), amending section 2 of an act approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), the Federal Trade Commission hereby issues its complaint against Anheuser-Busch, Inc., stating the charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Anheuser-Busch, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri with its office and principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri.

Respondent manufactures, sells and distributes yeast in commerce to its customers located in the several States of the United States, causing said yeast, when sold, to be shipped from its respective factories in various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the States of origin of the shipments.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for many years has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing yeast in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been, and is now, discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast, used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged, one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the United States.

The discrimination in price herein referred to is brought about by the respondent selling said bakers' yeast to its customers upon the following terms:

	Cents per pound
50,000 pounds up per month.....	14
10,000 to 50,000 pounds per month.....	14½
7,500 to 10,000 pounds per month.....	16
5,000 to 7,500 pounds per month.....	17
3,000 to 5,000 pounds per month.....	18
1,500 to 3,000 pounds per month.....	19
1,000 to 1,500 pounds per month.....	20
500 to 1,000 pounds per month.....	21
300 to 500 pounds per month.....	22
150 to 300 pounds per month.....	23
1 to 150 pounds per month.....	25

PAR. 4. The effect of said discrimination in price made by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, has been, or may be, substantially to lessen competition or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the manufacture, sale and distribution of bread and allied products; and the effect of said discrimination has been, or may be, to tend to create a monopoly in said favored customers receiving said discriminatory prices from said respondent in the distribution of said products in the United States.

PAR. 5. The foregoing alleged acts of said respondent are a violation of subsection 2 (a) of section 1 of said act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

olies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of an act entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. Title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes" approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on November 21, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Anheuser-Busch, Inc., a corporation, charging it with discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of said act as amended.

After the issuance and service of said complaint an answer was filed by the respondent Anheuser-Busch, Inc. Respondent made motion for leave to withdraw the answer filed and file with the Commission in lieu thereof an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact as set forth in said complaint to be true and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing, all of which appears in the record herein. Subsequently the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for leave to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearings before the Commission on said complaint, substitute answer and a stipulation wherein it was agreed that certain testimony and other evidence taken in the proceeding before the Commission styled in the matter of Standard Brands, Incorporated, et al, Docket No. 2986, was thereby made additional testimony and evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint in this proceeding; briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Anheuser-Busch, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri, with its office and principal place of business in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri.

Respondent manufactures, sells and distributes yeast in commerce to its customers located in the several States of the United States, causing said yeast, when sold, to be shipped from its respective factories in various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the States of origin of the shipments. There has been at all times a continuous current of trade in commerce in said product across State lines between respondent's manufacturing plants and the purchasers of said product.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for many years has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing yeast in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been, and is now, discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast, when used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged, one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the United States.

PAR. 4. For many years prior to and since June 19, 1936, respondent, as a general practice and except as otherwise shown hereafter, has been and is now selling bakers' yeast as aforesaid to its customers at different prices as set forth in the following schedule:

	Cents per pound
50,000 pounds up per month.....	14
10,000 to 50,000 pounds per month.....	14½
7,500 to 10,000 pounds per month.....	16
5,000 to 7,500 pounds per month.....	17
3,000 to 5,000 pounds per month.....	18
1,500 to 3,000 pounds per month.....	19
1,000 to 1,500 pounds per month.....	20
500 to 1,000 pounds per month.....	21
300 to 500 pounds per month.....	22
150 to 300 pounds per month.....	23
1 to 150 pounds per month.....	25

The prices at which respondent sells bakers' yeast according to the foregoing schedule are prices which do not necessarily depend upon the quantities actually purchased from the respondent but upon the monthly requirements of yeast of the respective customers; that is, a customer whose monthly requirements of yeast might be 1,400 pounds and who purchases all of such requirements from respondent, would pay, according to scale, 20 cents per pound; however, if the customer purchased only part of his requirements from the respondent he would still pay 20 cents per pound, regardless of what portion of his requirements he so purchased.

PAR. 5. By selling bakers' yeast, as the respondent does, it is discriminating in prices between different purchasers by deviating from this schedule. Such discriminations in price are as follows:

(a) Between customers who purchase all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent and those who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent.

(b) Between customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from respondent and other customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent.

(c) Between customers who purchase any or all of their requirements of yeast from respondent and others who also purchase any or all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent, both of whom are in the same quantity bracket, or in other words, those who purchase "off-scale"; and

(d) By selling at prices based on total consumption irrespective of the number or quantity of the individual deliveries.

As to (a), that is, discrimination in price between customers who purchase all of their requirements of yeast from respondent and those who purchase part of their requirements of yeast from the respondent, for example, a customer whose requirement of yeast is 4,500 pounds a month and who purchase this entire amount from respondent, pays, according to scale, 18 cents per pound, whereas, another customer whose requirements of yeast are 7,500 pounds per month and purchases 4,500 pounds from the respondent pays only 16 cents per pound for the 4,500 pounds purchased from the respondent. Likewise, this same customer would be discriminated against with respect to another customer having the same monthly requirements of 4,500 pounds but who only purchased 500 pounds from the respondent. Such customer, because of monthly requirements of yeast of 4,500 pounds, would pay the respondent only 18 cents per pound for the 500 pounds purchased from it.

As to (b), that is, between customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent and other customers who purchase some but not all of their requirements of yeast from the respondent discriminations are brought about in the following manner: The customer whose requirements are 4,500 pounds per month and who purchases 500 pounds of this from the respondent, pays, according to the scale, for that 500 pounds 18 cents a pound; another customer whose requirements are 1,000 pounds per month and who purchases from the respondent only 500 pounds pays the respondent 20 cents per pound for the 500 pounds because his requirements are only 1,000 pounds per month.

As to (c), respondent discriminates between certain customers within a definite quantity bracket by selling to some customers at so-called "off-scale" prices, that is, if the customer took all his requirements of yeast from the respondent and should pay, according to said scale, a certain price, respondent sells him that quantity at a lower price.

As to (d), discrimination is brought about by respondent selling its customers on the basis of total consumption or purchases irrespective of the number or quantity of the individual deliveries. By this method of selling yeast, independent dealers operating a single plant are obligated to pay a great deal more for yeast than large chains operating several bakeries and who, with a plant in the same area as the independent, may receive the same quantity of yeast at that particular branch as the independent dealer receives. Different prices for the same quantities of yeast are paid by the respective customers in this instance because the price is not based upon the quantity delivered to the particular branch of the large customer but upon the total quantity delivered to all the branches of the large customer.

PAR. 6. By selling bakers' yeast, as the respondent does, according to the price scale, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, and by deviating from said prices in the manner set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, large bakeries and chains make large and substantial savings, which savings may be reflected in many different ways in lessening or injuring competition. Inasmuch as these savings can be used for periodic reductions in price in the sale of bread and allied products, sales effort and sales appeal are increased, all of which operate to the disadvantage of the customers against whom these discriminations are employed. The effect of said discriminations in price so made by the respondent as heretofore set forth is and may be substantially to lessen competition and tend to create monopoly in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products in the respective lines of commerce in which respondent and its customers, receiving the benefit of such discriminatory prices, are engaged and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with customers receiving the benefit of such discrimination.

CONCLUSION

Under the facts and circumstances set forth in the foregoing findings of fact, the Commission concludes that the aforesaid acts and practices of respondent Anheuser-Busch, Inc., are in violation of section 2 (a) of said act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of an act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. Title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer filed herein on April 30, 1940, by respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the stipulation whereby certain testimony and other evidence taken in the proceeding before the Commission styled In the Matter of Standard Brands, Inc., et al., Docket No. 2986, was made additional testimony and evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint in this proceeding, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (a) of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act) as amended, and having made its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusions.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Anheuser-Busch, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast of like grade and quality, either directly or indirectly:

1. By selling said bakers' yeast at different prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased or required monthly by the respective purchasers, as set forth in paragraph 4 of said findings of fact.

2. By selling said bakers' yeast at different prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased (whether from the respondent or from any other source) over a period of time by the respective purchasers, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce in which respondent or any of its customers are engaged, or to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondent or any of its customers, except where said differentials in price, based upon the quantities or volume purchased from the respondent during such period of time by said respective purchasers, make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered during the period of time for which such differentials are allowed.

3. By means of price differences resulting from selling said bakers' yeast to a single purchaser at prices based upon the total quantity or volume purchased (whether from the respondent or from any other source) during a period of time by such purchaser, irrespective of the quantities or volume delivered by the respondent to the separate plants, factories, bakeries, or warehouses of such purchaser, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce in which respondent or any of its customers is engaged, or to injure, destroy or prevent competition with respondent or any of its customers, except where said differentials in price make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered.

4. By selling said bakers' yeast to certain of such purchasers at so-called "off-scale" prices as described in paragraph 5 of said findings of fact, even though the differentials in price of any given price scale make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said bakers' yeast is to such purchasers sold or delivered during the period of time for which such differentials in price are allowed.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

- (a) Made use of word "Bureau" in the trade name under which they conducted their said business and featured same in their advertising matter in periodicals of general circulation and on their stationery and advertising matter distributed to prospective students, and in numerous pieces of advertising matter disseminated by them described the building in which they carried on such business as "United States National Building"; and
- (b) Described and referred to one of said individuals, who more recently continued to carry on such business, in advertising matter above referred to, as "Director" of said school, and set forth in their advertising that he had been employed in the service of the United States Government and had had forestry experience and a vast knowledge of wildlife, through such representations, among others, as "* * * the director of the Bureau * * * has personally worked in the mail service * * *," "* * * The director has personally worked in Government service * * *" and "The director * * * has forestry experience and a vast knowledge of wildlife."

Facts being individual in question was not a graduate of any school of forestry or any college, and was not an expert in such subject and had not had long practical experience therein or in wildlife, and his employment by the Government had been limited to a temporary appointment for 3 or 4 weeks in a Post Office substation located in a department store in a western city, and was not such as to give him any appreciable experience in Government work or qualify him as an expert in civil service matters or make him familiar therewith, and school in question was not an agency of and had no connection with the United States Government or Civil Service Commission and did not give instruction by authority thereof, as suggested by use of word "Bureau" as aforesaid, used by many Government agencies, and by erroneous description of the United States Bank Building in which they carried on business as aforesaid as "United States National Building," they had no jobs at their disposal and could in no way influence or control appointments to United States classified civil service, nor be of assistance to prospective appointees, except by instructing them so that they might be better prepared for the necessary examinations, and, like other similar schools, they had no advance information regarding such examinations or appointments except as given to the public at large; and

- (c) Made the statements, in some of their advertisements inviting correspondence, "Forest jobs available $125—$175 month," and implied and created the impression among students and prospective students, through their said advertising matter, that their course in forestry was intended for and adapted to preparing students thereof for examinations in positions in the Forestry Service of various States and of the United States Government, through such statements as "Many opportunities are presenting themselves in forestry activities throughout the entire Nation. Forestry problems are by no means limited to Federal owned forests. Greater opportunities present themselves in State * * * forestry, * * *. The demand for qualified workers in this larger field has steadily increased, and it is to assist men in qualifying for such positions that our course in forestry has been especially designed," and "We wish particularly to call your attention to our forestry course, which we believe to be the best of its kind available. It is with the view of aiding men to acquire the practical training to assist them in passing the examination for forestry positions, that these instructions have been prepared. * * *;"

Notwithstanding fact that only graduates with a degree in forestry from recognized educational institutions with full 4-year courses therein are eligible to appointment to positions in the Forestry Service of the various States that maintain such services, and requirements are similar to qualify for examination for and appointment to positions of Junior Forester under the United States Government, and they sold their courses in forestry to all who would buy, regardless of whether or not they were otherwise qualified to receive State or Federal appointment in the respective Forestry Services, without informing purchasers that to be eligible for appointment it would be necessary for such person to have a degree in forestry from a recognized educational institution or other qualifications of education or experience not given or furnished by them, without which such persons could not qualify simply by taking their course;

With the result that persons were induced to purchase one or more of their courses of instruction by such claims and misrepresentations in their advertisements and advertising matter to the effect that individual in question, director of the school conducted by them, had been in the service of the United States and had had forestry experience, and with the further result that members of the public also were induced to purchase such courses in the belief that such individuals would be able to place them in positions under the United States Civil Service Commission; and

- (d) Included in their enrollment blank so-called money-back offer, which provided, in effect, that tuition paid by student would be refunded in event he failed to pass examination or did not secure an appointment at the time the next succeeding examination was held;

Facts being they did not disclose, in aforesaid connection, as respects United States civil service positions, that no examination might be held by Civil Service Commission for several years in a number of subjects, and that it might be months, and sometimes years, before a person, after usual lapse of several months for examination and grading of papers, placed on a register was appointed, that proportion of those examined who passed was small, and proportion of those appointed from number passing, smaller still, and, as aforesaid noted with respect to forestry positions, students of their said courses could not thereby alone qualify either for examination or positions involved, and said offer, under conditions aforesaid, was definitely misleading and meaningless for all practical purposes;

With capacity and tendency to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and to induce them to purchase their said courses of study and instruction because of such beliefs, engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to them from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce of home study correspondence courses in similar and also in other lines of study, and including among their said competitors those who do not make the misleading representations made by them as herein set forth, and do not otherwise misrepresent their respective courses, but truthfully and accurately represent the same and all matters pertaining thereto, and with effect of diverting business to them from their said competitors; to their injury and prejudice:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ray Rennison and Martha A. Rennison, individually, and doing business under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondents, Ray Rennison and Martha A. Rennison, are now, and have been for more than 2 years last past, engaged, under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for certain civil service positions under the United States Government, and also, of a course of study and instruction in the subject of forestry, which said courses of study and instruction are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Respondents' place of business is and has been located at 418 United States National Bank Building, in the city of Denver, State of Colorado. Respondents, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused and do now cause their said courses of study and instruction to be transported from their said place of business in Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States other than the State of Colorado and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for civil service positions under the United States Government and also of courses of study and instruction of other kinds, all of which are pursued by correspondence. Said respondents have been, during the time aforesaid, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in the sale of their said courses of study and instruction with such other individuals, firms, and corporations. There are among the competitors of respondents many who, in connection with the sale of their respective courses of study and instruction, do not in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling their said courses of study and instruction have made numerous misrepresentations in advertising matter published in newspapers and magazines circulated among the general public in various States of the United States, and in printed matter circulated by respondents by mail or otherwise to prospective students in various States of the United States. Among such misrepresentations are statements and phrases which import or imply that the school conducted by respondents is an agency of or is connected with or gives instruction by authority of the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission; that respondent, Ray Rennison, the director of said school, has been employed by the United States Government and that he has worked in the United States mail service; that said respondent, Ray Rennison, is an expert in forestry and has had long practical experience therein as well as in wildlife; and that the forestry course offered and used by respondents is giving instruction in forestry is of such extent, nature, and character as to prepare and qualify students who pursue the same for forestry positions under the jurisdiction of the various States of the United States, as well as for examinations for such positions.

PAR. 4. Respondents use the phrases "U. S. National Building" and "United States National Building," in connection with the word

"Bureau" in the name under which said school is conducted, on their printed matter circulated among prospective students in the promotion of the sale of courses of instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations conducted by the United States Civil Service Commission. Said phrases in such connection import and imply that said school is connected with or authorized by the United States Government or said Civil Service Commission. The correct and full name of the building where the offices of respondents are located is "United States National Bank Building." The word "Bureau" is often used as the official description of a Government agency and is widely used by the public in designating Government bodies and agencies.

PAR. 5. Among the representations, made by respondents, as aforesaid, which import or imply that respondent, Ray Rennison, has been employed by the United States Government and that he has worked in the United States mail service are the following:

This course is designed and prepared by the Director of the Bureau, * * * who has personally worked in the mail service * * *
* * * The Director has personally worked in Government service * * *

Among the representations, made by respondents, as aforesaid, which import or imply that respondent, Ray Rennison, is an expert in forestry and has had long practical experience therein as well as in wildlife, are the following:

The Rayson Service Bureau welcomes the opportunity to analyze forestry and conservation problems * * *

The director * * * has forestry experience and a vast knowledge of wildlife.

Among the representations made by respondents, as aforesaid, which import or imply that respondents' forestry course is of such extent, nature and character as to prepare and qualify students who pursue the same for forestry positions under the jurisdiction of the various States of the United States, as well as for examinations for such positions, are the following:

Many opportunities are presenting themselves in forestry activities throughout the entire nation. Forestry problems are by no means limited to federal owned forests. Greater opportunities present themselves in state * * * forestry, * * * The demand for qualified workers in this larger field has steadily increased, and it is to meet this requirement and to assist men in qualifying for such positions that our course in forestry has been carefully and especially designed.

We wish particularly to call your attention to our forestry course, which we believe to be the best of its kind available. It is with the view of aiding men to acquire the practical training to assist them in passing the examinations for forestry positions, that these instructions have been prepared. * * *

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact the school conducted by respondents is not an agency of nor is it connected with the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission, nor does it give instruction by authority thereof. Respondent, Ray Rennison, has not been employed by the United States Government in the mail service or in any other branch of the Government service. Respondent, Ray Rennison, is not an expert in forestry and he has not had long practical experience therein or in wildlife. His business is and has been for many years past that of operating a multigraph business under the name of Rayson Multigraph Service and also in connection therewith, operating the correspondence school herein described and as herein set forth. The forestry course offered and used by respondents in giving instruction in forestry is not of such extent or nature or character as to prepare and qualify students who pursue the same for forestry positions under the jurisdiction of the various States of the United States, generally speaking, or for examinations for such positions. All or practically all such forestry positions requiring a technical or scientific knowledge of forestry are open only to persons having a much more extended training and education than offered by respondents or to those having extended practical experience not given by respondents, or both. In cases where examinations are held for such positions, it is generally true that those only are eligible to take the same who have had more training or experience, or both, than that given or furnished by respondents.

PAR. 7. Respondents, in the sale of their said courses of study and instruction as aforesaid, through use of a "Money Back" agreement, and otherwise, represent to students and prospective students that money paid for instruction will be refunded if such students completing the respective courses subscribed for fail to pass an examination or examinations for which they have prepared or if they are not offered appointments to positions after passing an examination by the time the next examination is held. Said "Money Back" agreement used by respondents reads as follows:

My entire tuition will be immediately refunded if I fail to pass examinations, or if I pass and am not offered an appointment at the time the next succeeding examination is held. (Note: Students enrolling for combined courses will be made refunds on the basis of one-third for each course)

An example of a similar representation used by respondents in their advertising matter, as aforesaid, is the following:

If you do not receive an appointment to the position of your choice, your tuition fee will be returned to you as stated by your Enrollment Blank.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

The implications of said agreement and of the above-quoted representation are that an examination or examinations will be available to be taken by students who take and complete respondents' courses within a reasonable time after completion of the same; that a position is then assured immediately or within a reasonable time thereafter; and that the conditions upon which refunds depend are reasonably determinable and within a reasonable time.

In truth and in fact said agreement and the representation above quoted are misleading in that said agreement for all practical purposes is meaningless and inoperative in a large majority of cases in that at certain times and in regard to certain examinations for which respondents offer courses of study and instruments, no examinations are held for long periods of time, and as to other examinations none or practically none are held at all. As to forestry positions and examinations therefor, said agreement is misleading because it is inoperative in practically all cases, not only because of the infrequency or entire absence of examinations for such positions, but because of the fact that certain prerequisites as to education or experience, or both, that are not met or furnished by the instruction given by respondents are required both for such examinations and for such positions.

PAR. 8. The foregoing acts and practices used by respondents in connection with the offering for sale and sale of their said courses of study and instruction have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to and do, in fact, mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and implications, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase such courses of study and instruction on account thereof. Thereby substantial trade is diverted unfairly to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia of correspondence courses intended for preparing students thereof for civil service examinations as well as from those so engaged in such sale in other lines of study. As a result of respondents' said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 8, 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused the same to be served upon respondents, Ray Rennison and Martha A. Rennison, individually and doing business under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by the respondent, Ray Rennison, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, an attorney for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. No testimony or other evidence was introduced or tendered in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by or in behalf of either of said respondents. Thereafter said proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto by the respondent, Ray Rennison individually and doing business under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, testimony and other evidence, and the brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint, respondents not having filed briefs and oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ray Rennison, at the time of issuance of the complaint herein on June 8, 1938, and for about 2 years immediately prior thereto, was engaged, under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for certain civil service positions under the United States Government, and also of a course of study and instruction in the subject of forestry, which said courses of instruction were pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Until about 2 years prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, for a number of years, the same business was likewise conducted under the said trade name by the respondents, the said Ray Rennison and Martha A. Rennison. The place of business of respondents in the conduct of said business as aforesaid was at 418 United States National Bank Building, in the city of Denver, State of Colorado. In the course and conduct of said business, during the time aforesaid, and as previously stated, respondents caused the lesson material used in said courses of study and instruction to be transported as aforesaid from their said place of business in Colorado through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof in such other States.

PAR. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States were engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for civil service positions under the United States Government and also of courses of study and instruction of other kinds, all of which are pursued by correspondence. Said respondents have been, during the time aforesaid in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in the sale of their said courses of study and instruction with such other individuals, firms, and corporations. There are among the competitors of respondents many who, in connection with the sale of their respective courses of study and instruction, do not in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto.

PAR. 3. Respondents in the course of their said business and as a means of contacting members of the public for the purpose of selling to them the said courses of instruction, caused advertisements to be published in magazines and other periodicals having general circulation in various States of the United States. Some of such advertisements contained the statement "Forest jobs available $125-$175 month" and the request that interested persons qualify immediately and write to respondents for details. In numerous pieces of advertising matter disseminated by respondents the building in which respondents carried on business was described as the "United States National Building" although the correct name of such building is "United States National Bank Building." Respondent, Ray Rennison, was described and referred to in said advertising matter as the director of said school and the statements were made that respondent had been employed in the service of the United States Government, that he had had forestry experience and had a vast knowledge of wildlife. The name "Rayson Service Bureau" was prominently featured on respondents' stationery, in advertisements, and on advertising matter sent to prospective students. In said advertising matter so distributed, respondents represented that the forestry course offered would quality students who pursued the same as foresters and for positions in that line as well as for examinations therefore with particular reference to "various States, counties, and organized forestry service."

PAR. 4. Among such representations as aforesaid are the following:

* * * the Director of the Bureau, * * * has personally worked in the mail service * * *

* * * The Director has personally worked in Government service * * *

The Rayson Service Bureau welcomes the opportunity to analyze forestry and conservation problems, * * *

The director * * * has forestry experience and a vast knowledge of wild life.

Many opportunities are presenting themselves in forestry activities throughout the entire nation. Forestry problems are by no means limited to federal owned forests. Greater opportunities present themselves in State * * * forestry, * * * The demand for qualified workers in this larger field has steadily increased, and it is to assist men in qualifying for such positions that our course in forestry has been especially designed.

We wish particularly to call your attention to our forestry course, which we believe to be the best of its kind available. It is with the view of aiding men to acquire the practical training to assist them in passing the examination for forestry positions, that these instructions have been prepared. * * *

Respondents, in their advertising matter aforesaid, implied and created the impression among students and prospective students that their course in Forestry was intended for and adapted to preparing students thereof for examinations and positions in the Forestry Service of various States of the United States and of the United States Government.

PAR. 5. Only graduates with a degree in forestry from recognized educational institutions which have full 4-year courses in forestry are eligible to appointment to positions in the Forestry Service of the various States of the United States that maintain such service. Such requirement is also made in order to qualify for the examination for and appointment to the position of Junior Forester under the United States Government. All technical positions in the United States Forestry Service are now filled from the eligible lists created by the Junior Forester examination. A minor classification in said service, known as Assistant to Technician, has the requirement of 2 years of college work or 2 years field experience, or a combination of the two, in order to qualify. Respondents have sold their courses in forestry to all who would buy the same whether or not they were otherwise qualified to receive appointments in the Forestry Service of the United States or of the various States. Respondents did not inform persons purchasing such courses of the fact that to be eligible to appointment to such positions it would be necessary for them to have a degree in forestry from a recognized educational institution or qualifications of education or experience not given or furnished by respondents. Persons who are not graduates of a recognized school of forestry or who have not had other education or experience not furnished by respondents could not qualify for positions in the Forestry Service of the United States or of the various States maintaining such service, simply by taking the course sold by respondents.

PAR. 6. The respondent, Ray Rennison, is not a graduate of any school of forestry or any college and his employment by the United States Government has been limited to a temporary appointment for 3 or 4 weeks in a post office substation located in a department store in Denver, Colo. This was not such an employment as to give him any appreciable experience in Government work or to qualify him as an expert in civil service matters or to make him familiar therewith. Persons were induced to purchase one or more of the courses of instruction offered for sale by respondents by the claims and representations in respondents' advertisements and advertising matter, to the effect that the respondent Ray Rennison, the director of the school conducted by respondents, had been in the service of the United States and had had forestry experience; also members of the public were induced to purchase such courses of instructions in the belief that respondents would be able to place them in positions under the Civil Service Commission of the United States. The word "Bureau" in the trade name under which respondents carried on business is one used by many agencies of the United States Government and is suggestive of such connection, and additional ground for this assumption was afforded by the erroneous description of the building in which respondents carried on business as the "United States National Building." Said school is not an agency of, nor has it any connection with the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission, nor has it given instruction by authority thereof. Respondent, Ray Rennison, is not an expert in forestry and he has not had long practical experience in forestry or in wildlife.

PAR. 7. The enrollment blank used by respondents in the course of their business contained a so-called money-back offer which provided in effect that the tuition paid by a student would be refunded if he failed to pass the examination or did not secure an appointment at the time the next succeeding examination was held. No mention was made in such money-back offer of several important conditions which pertain to the taking of civil service examinations and appointment to positions in the classified civil service of the United States Government. Subscribers were not advised by respondents that no examinations may be held by the United States Civil Service Commission for several years in a number of subjects; that usually it is several months before examination papers are examined and the grades published; that it may be months and sometimes years before a person who has been placed on a register of eligibles is appointed to a position; that the proportion of those examined who pass the examination is small and the appointments from that number smaller still. In regard to forestry positions, students of respondents' forestry course, as previously shown, cannot by such course alone qualify either for examination or the positions involved. When these conditions are considered the money-back offer is definitely misleading and meaningless for all practical purposes.

PAR. 8. The respondents have no jobs at their disposal and cannot in any way influence or control appointments to positions in the classified civil service of the United States and can be of no assistance to prospective appointees to such positions except by instructing them so that they might be better prepared to take the necessary examinations to have their names placed upon the eligibility rolls. The United States Civil Service Commission has not authorized the respondents or anyone else to conduct schools for the purpose of instructing persons who expect to take examinations to be conducted by the Civil Service Commission for the purpose of providing lists of eligibles from which appointments may be made to positions in the classified civil service of the United States. The school conducted by respondents and similar schools do not have any advance information regarding civil service examinations or appointments to positions in the classified civil service of the United States, except such information as is given to the public at large.

PAR. 9. The representations of respondents as aforesaid are misleading and deceptive and have had the capacity and tendency to confuse, mislead and deceive members of the public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and to induce them to purchase respondents' courses of study and instruction because of the erroneous belief engendered as above set forth and to divert trade to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of home study courses pursued by correspondence in similar lines as well as in other lines of study. There were and are among the competitors of respondents those who do not make the misleading representations made by respondents, as herein set-out, and who do not otherwise misrepresent their respective courses, but who truthfully and accurately represent the same and all matters pertaining thereto. Respondents' said acts and practices have the capacity and tendency to divert, and have diverted, business to respondents from their said competitors to the substantial injury and prejudice of such competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondents as herein set-out are all to the injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, Ray Rennison, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and William C. Reeves, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, brief filed by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, respondents not having introduced testimony or other evidence or filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Ray Rennison and Martha A. Rennison, individually and doing business under the name and style of Rayson Service Bureau, or under any other trade name, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of courses of study and instruction by correspondence in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Bureau" in the name under which such business is conducted.

2. Representing, through the use of the word "Bureau" in the name used to designate the correspondence school conducted by them in connection with courses designed to prepare students for civil service examinations, or otherwise, that such school is connected with or is an agency of the United States Government.

3. Using the expression "United States National Building" instead of the correct name "United States National Bank Building," to designate the building in which their office is located.

4. Representing that respondent, Ray Rennison, is an expert in civil service matters by reason of his employment in the United States Mail Service or by reason of any other employment by the United States Government.

5. Representing that respondent, Ray Rennison, is an expert in forestry or in wildlife.

6. Representing, through the use of a money-back agreement or otherwise, that United States Civil Service positions or examinations therefor are available, immediately or within a reasonable time.

7. Representing that the forestry course offered by the respondents is of such extent, nature and character as adequately to prepare and qualify students for examinations for positions in the Forest Service of the various States of the United States having such departments, or for such positions with the United States Government.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF RESEARCH ASSOCIATES, INC., AND DERMAGELL, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3651. Complaint, Nov. 19, 1938—Decision, May 11, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of organic soap compound as cleansing cream, under designation "Dermagell," to purchasers at their respective points of location in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale or distribution of soaps, cleansing creams, and other products designed, intended, and used for cleansing skin and hair; and a concern which, at time herein involved, owned substantial majority of outstanding stock thereof and controlled and directed its business policies, practices, and activities; in advertisements of its said "Dermagell" which, then controlled as above set forth, said corporation caused to be disseminated through newspapers and other publications circulating among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Represented that said preparation was the "discovery of the century," which soothed and healed, and penetrated innermost recesses of the pores of the skin, and that use thereof would leave skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated and give any woman a soft, clear, smooth complexion or beautiful hair, and that the benefits obtained from its use were distinct and lasting, and that it actually protected the skin and prevented or cured skin disorders;

Facts being said product was not substantially different from other products or soap designed for similar use, and was not the "discovery of the century," but ingredients thereof were well known and had been used for many years in preparation of soaps and similar products, and, while its fatty acids, stearic acid, myristic acid, and carbitol, and its mild basic alkali, triethanolamine, were a little different from usual sodium or potassium soaps, it was essentially the same as any other soap, and possessed no special soothing or healing properties and would not penetrate the innermost recesses of the skin, use of said product would not leave skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated nor give any woman a soft, clear, smooth complexion and beautiful hair, and benefits obtained from such use were not distinct and lasting, and use thereof would not prevent or cure skin disorders or diseases;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements were true and that their said product possessed properties claimed and represented and would accomplish results indicated, and to cause substantial portion of such public, because of erroneous and mistaken belief thus engendered, to purchase their said compound and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors in commerce between and among the several States and in the District of Columbia who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective products:

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Randolph E. Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Ralph E. Parker, of Potter, Pierce & Scheffler, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Research Associates, Inc., a corporation, and Dermagell, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Research Associates, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its office and principal place of business at 3400 Nebraska Avenue NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. Respondent, Dermagell, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its office and principal place of business formerly at 3400 Nebraska Avenue NW., and now at 52 O Street NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. Respondent, Research Associates, Inc., owns a substantial portion of the outstanding shares of stock of respondent, Dermagell, Inc. Said corporate respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in carrying out the sales activities, practices, and policies herein set forth.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and have been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing an organic soap compound which is a cleansing cream and is designated as "Dermagell." Respondents cause the said product, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in the District of Columbia, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipment and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents are engaged in competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing soaps, cleansing creams, and other products designed, intended, and used for the cleansing of the skin and hair. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent the properties or the efficacy of their respective soaps and other products.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said product, respondents have caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of their said product and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated by advertisements inserted in newspapers and other publications having a circulation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Dermagell is a 3-purpose Cleansing Cream and Shampoo—so efficient—so utterly different from anything heretofore obtainable that authorities proclaim it “the discovery of the century.”

Dermagell soothes and heals as it penetrates the innermost recesses of the tender pores without unpleasant reaction.

Dermagell vanishes instantly—like magic when rinsed in hot or cold water, leaving the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated.

Dermagell is not expensive. It is within easy reach of the most modest budget, meaning that no woman interested in a soft, clear, smooth complexion and beautiful hair need deny herself its distinct and lasting benefits.

At last Science comes to the aid of beauty. That is the welcome news you will find in next Sunday's Herald. For the first time Washington will learn of Dermagell * * * the marvelous new three-purpose skin cleanser and shampoo. Dermagell looks much like ordinary cleansers * * * yet the moment you place it on your face you'll see a swift and dramatic change. Here is an aid to beauty the like of which you've never seen before.

Dermagell cannot irritate the most sensitive skin for it is scientifically balanced to correspond to the base range of your own blood. No other skin cleanser can say this. Dermagell not only cleanses thoroughly and gently * * * it actually protects your skin. Dermagell prevents and cures many skin disorders.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondents' product and its effectiveness in use, the respondents have represented, among other things, that said product is different from any other product designed for similar usage and is "the discovery of the century"; that said product possesses soothing and healing properties; that it penetrates the innermost recesses of the pores of the skin; that the use of said product leaves the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated; that any woman interested in a soft, clear, smooth complexion and beautiful hair will obtain distinct and lasting benefits from the use of such product; and that the use of such product prevents and cures many skin disorders.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, such product is not substantially different from other products designed for similar usage and is not the discovery of the century. The ingredients contained in such product are well known and have been used for many years in the preparation of soaps and similar products. Said product possesses no soothing or healing properties and will not penetrate the innermost recesses of the pores of the skin. The use of such product will not leave the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated, nor will the use thereof give any woman a soft, clear, smooth complexion and beautiful hair. The benefits obtained from such use are not distinct and lasting. The use of such product will not prevent or cure skin disorders.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements with respect to said product disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondents' said product possesses the properties claimed and represented, and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said product. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in similar commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective soaps, cleansing creams, and other products. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of November 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused same to be served on the respondents Research Associates, Inc., and Dermagell, Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, neither of the respondents having filed answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by B. G. Wilson, attorney for the Commission, before Randolph E. Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Neither of said respondents offered any testimony or other evidence at said hearing, but both of the respondents were represented, the respondent Research Associates, Inc., appearing by Ralph E. Parker, its attorney, and respondent Dermagell, Inc., appearing by C. G. Gilbert in the capacity of its president. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence and brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the allegations of said complaint, no brief having been filed in opposition to the allegations of the complaint or request for oral argument having been made; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Research Associates, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its offices and principal place of business at 3400 Nebraska Avenue NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia.

Respondent Dermagell, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its office and principal place of business at 52 O Street, NW., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. Respondent Research Associates, Inc., at the time of the circulation of the advertisements hereinafter set out and referred to, owned a substantial majority of the outstanding shares of stock of Dermagell, Inc., and controlled and directed the business policies, practices, and activities of respondent Dermagell, Inc.

Respondent Research Associates, Inc., on or about May 11, 1938, divested itself of a goodly part of the stock of Dermagell, Inc., by the sale thereof to parties not named as respondents in this proceeding, and since about May 11, 1938, has not held a controlling interest in respondent Dermagell, Inc., and at the present time owns no stock at all in said respondent Dermagell, Inc., and does not control or direct its business policies, practices, and activities.

PAR. 2. Respondent Dermagell, Inc., prior to and during the year 1938, was engaged in the business of selling and distributing an organic soap compound which is a cleansing cream and is designated as "Dermagell." It caused the said product, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the District of Columbia, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipment, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent Dermagell, Inc., maintained, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent Dermagell, Inc., has been engaged in competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations, and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing soaps, cleansing creams, and other products designed, intended, and used for the cleansing of the skin and hair.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said product, respondent Dermagell, Inc., in 1937 and during the time when its policies, practices, and activities were controlled by respondent Research Associates Inc., caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said product and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated by means of newspapers and other publications having a circulation among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Dermagell is a 3-purpose Cleansing Cream and Shampoo—so efficient—so utterly different from anything heretofore obtainable that authorities proclaim it “the discovery of the century.”

Dermagell soothes and heals as it penetrates the innermost recesses of the tender pores without unpleasant reaction.

Dermagell vanishes instantly—like magic when rinsed in hot or cold water, leaving the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated.

Dermagell is not expensive. It is within easy reach of the most modest budget, meaning that no woman interested in a soft, clear smooth complexion and beautiful hair need deny herself its distinct and lasting benefits.

At last Science comes to the aid of beauty. That is the welcome news you will find in next Sunday's Herald. For the first time Washington will learn of Dermagell * * * the marvelous new three-purpose skin cleanser and shampoo. Dermagell looks much like ordinary cleansers * * * yet the moment you place it on your face you'll see a swift and dramatic change. Here is an aid to beauty the like of which you've never seen before.

Dermagell cannot irritate the most sensitive skin for it is scientifically balanced to correspond to the base range of your own blood. No other skin cleanser can say this. Dermagell not only cleanses thoroughly and gently * * * it actually protects your skin. Dermagell prevents and cures many skin disorders.

PAR. 5. The product “Dermagell” is not substantially different from other products or soaps designed for a similar use. It is not “the discovery of the century.” Its ingredients are well known and have been known and used for many years in the preparation of soaps and similar products. Soap is a sodium or potassium salt of fat, and fats are esters—chemical compounds of fatty acid and glycerol; the important property of soap being that it can break down in water with the liberation of mild alkali, having cleansing properties in the removal of grease and dirt.

The ingredients contained in the product “Dermagell,” which is a semisolid preparation, consist of roughly 42 percent water; 21 percent myristic acid; nearly 7 percent stearic acid; an insignificant amount of lanolin; 11 percent carbitol, which is a substitute for glycerol though chemically a little different from the ordinary glycerine; 16 percent triethanolamine, which is a mild alkali; and a little perfume. Its fatty acid, stearic acid, myristic acid, and carbitol, and its mild basic alkali, triethanolamine, are a little different from the usual sodium or potassium soaps, but essentially it is the same as any other soap.

“Dermagell” possesses no special soothing or healing properties and will not penetrate the innermost recesses of the skin; the use of said product will not leave the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated, nor will its use give any woman a soft, clear, smooth complexion and beautiful hair; the benefits obtained from such use are not distinct and lasting, and the use of such product will not prevent or cure skin disorders or diseases.

PAR. 6. The publication and use by said respondents Dermagell, Inc., and Research Associates, Inc., of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements with respect to said product, disseminated as aforesaid, have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondents' said product possesses the properties claimed and represented, and will accomplish the results indicated, and to cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said product. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective soaps, cleansing creams, and other products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph E. Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, no evidence having been offered by respondents, brief filed herein by counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Research Associates, Inc., and Dermagell, Inc., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of an organic soap compound formerly known as "Dermagell," or any other preparation or compound composed of similar ingredients or possessing similar properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

That said preparation is the discovery of the century; that respondents' preparation soothes and heals or that it penetrates the innermost recesses of the pores of the skin; that its use will leave the skin and scalp youthfully fresh and invigorated; that its use will give any woman a soft, clear, smooth complexion or beautiful hair; that the benefits obtained from its use are distinct and lasting; that it actually protects the skin; or that it prevents or cures skin disorders.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
DR. VAN VLECK COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3988. Complaint, Jan. 4, 1940—Decision, May 13, 1940*

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment," "Dr. Van Vleck's Muco Cones," and "Dr. Van Vleck's Pills" for piles, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements thereof which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States, and otherwise, and also through letters sent to potential customers or those who had already purchased, designed to induce such persons to buy its said products or purchase same in larger quantities, and through pamphlets and circulars containing purported testimonials from diverse and sundry persons designed to induce potential customers to purchase same or buy larger quantities thereof, and which advertisements were intended and likely to induce purchase of its said products—

Represented that its said preparations, used conjointly, were an effective and scientific cure and remedy for, and a competent and effective treatment of, piles, and that application thereof conjointly constituted an "Absorption Treatment" which removed piles without surgical aid, and that their use insured immediate and lasting relief with no return of suffering, and would remove or correct the cause of such condition;

Facts being such preparations, whether used conjointly or separately, were not cures or remedies for said condition, and did not constitute competent or effective treatment therefor, other than to give some small degree of relief by means of their analgesic qualities, and prevention of constipation, and, when used conjointly, did not remove piles, bring immediate or lasting relief, nor remove or correct cause of said condition, in that such treatment would not absorb, remove, or completely eradicate protruding external or internal hemorrhoidal protuberances;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and of inducing portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase its said drug-containing medical preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. W. M. King for the Commission.

Bisbee, McKone, Badgley & Kendall, of Jackson, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Dr. Van Vleck Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges as follows:

PARAGRAP<sup>H</sup> 1. Respondent, Dr. Van Vleck Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business located at 168 West Michigan Avenue, in the city of Jackson, State of Michigan.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said preparations are known as "Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment," "Dr. Van Vleck's Muco Cones," and "Dr. Van Vleck's Pills," and represented to be remedies for piles. Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparations, and has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of false statements and representations contained in the said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

It is truly amazing how so many people say they have been lifted from a miserable existence and brought speedily back to the comfort of living by using Dr. Van Vleck Direct Treatment.

Dr. Van Vleck's Treatment has relieved thousands of their pain and suffering.

There is no doubt that Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment and Muco Cones will usually relieve the acute pain of piles without any further Treatment, but Dr. Van Vleck was not satisfied with what many would call real relief. He believed it was his duty to bring about a substantial relief and for that purpose included in his Treatment his pills. These are taken internally. The result is that Dr. Van Vleck has indeed brought immeasurable happiness into a suffering world.

In addition to the foregoing advertisements, respondent is and has been disseminating false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set out, by means of letters sent to potential customers or to persons who had already made a purchase, designed to induce said persons to purchase respondent's products, or to purchase the same in larger quantities. Among and typical of these false statements and representations disseminated, as aforesaid, by the use of such letters are the following:

How many things you may have tried, or how many have failed you, does not matter now. This we sent you is the Direct medication that we always rely on to bring reasonably quick results in such conditions as are only reached and relieved by a direct method of Treatment.

Promise yourself now that you will stop at nothing short of all the lasting ease and comfort that a good and helpful Treatment can bring you.

Even as the most distressing symptoms are yielding to the soothing action of the Treatment—it would be a serious mistake to allow a break or interruption in the good work before making these benefits lasting and durable—Keep it up, keep it up, until you have made sure of real relief, and continued comfort.

Vast numbers of people who were once the unhappy victims of this cruel affliction have stayed with this Treatment until they obtained the Lasting Relief they longed for.

PAR. 4. In addition to the foregoing advertisements and letters, respondent is and has been disseminating false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set out by means of pamphlets and circulars containing purported testimonials from diverse and sundry persons designed to induce potential customers to purchase its products, or to induce persons who had already purchased, to purchase a larger quantity thereof.

Among and typical of these statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

I have not been bothered for a long time and all due to your Treatment.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

I am thankful to say that it has done the work. I do not feel a pain or soreness at all since using the Treatment.

Since taking your Treatment I never will get through rejoicing and have never suffered from piles since.—I have no pains at all.

About 35 years ago my husband used your Treatment and has never had a return of his suffering since.

I am so thankful to say that I am getting on just fine and feel I owe my life to you for relieving me of those cruel piles.

I got very good results from your Treatment. In my case relief was almost immediate. However, I continued it for several weeks and now there is no sign of any pile suffering.

When I first wrote you I was not able to do any walking and could not ride. I had suffered with piles for 15 years. But now I am at my work and feel as if I never had the piles.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's preparations, respondent represents that said preparations used conjointly are an effective and scientific cure and remedy for, and a competent and effective treatment of, piles; that the application of said preparations conjointly constitutes an "Absorption Treatment" which removes piles without surgical aid; that their use insures immediate and lasting relief with no return or suffering, and will remove or correct the cause of piles.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparations whether used conjointly or separately are not cures or remedies for piles and do not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor other than to give some small degree of relief by means of the analgesic properties thereof and the prevention of constipation. Said preparations when used conjointly do not remove piles, do not bring immediate or lasting relief, and do not remove or correct the cause of piles in that said treatment will not absorb, remove, or completely eradicate protruding external or internal hemorrhoidal protuberances.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to its said medicinal preparations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase such medicinal preparations containing drugs.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the fourth day of January 1940, issued, and on the fifth day of January 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Dr. Van Vleck Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 19, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Dr. Van Vleck Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business located at 168 West Michigan Avenue, in the city of Jackson, State of Michigan.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said preparations are known as "Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment," "Dr. Van Vleck's Muco Cones," and "Dr. Van Vleck's Pills," and represented to be remedies for piles. Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparations, and has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of false statements and representations contained in the said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

It is truly amazing how so many people say they have been lifted from a miserable existence and brought speedily back to the comfort of living by using Dr. Van Vleck direct Treatment.

Dr. Van Vleck's Treatment has relieved thousands of their pain and suffering. There is no doubt that Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment and Muco Cones will usually relieve the acute pain of piles without any further Treatment, but Dr. Van Vleck was not satisfied with what many would call real relief. He believed it was his duty to bring about a substantial relief and for that purpose included in his Treatment his pills. These are taken internally. The result is that Dr. Van Vleck has indeed brought immeasurable happiness into a suffering world.

In addition to the foregoing advertisements, respondent is and has been disseminating false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set out, by means of letters sent to potential customers or to persons who had already made a purchase, designed to induce said persons to purchase respondent's products, or to purchase the same in larger quantities. Among and typical of these false statements and representations disseminated, as aforesaid, by the use of such letters are the following:

How many things you may have tried, or how many have failed you, does not matter now. This we sent you is the Direct medication that we always rely on to bring reasonably quick results in such conditions as are only reached and relieved by a direct method of Treatment.

Promise yourself now that you will stop at nothing short of all the lasting ease and comfort that a good and helpful Treatment can bring you.

Even as the most distressing symptoms are yielding to the soothing action of the Treatment—it would be a serious mistake to allow a break or interruption in the good work before making these benefits lasting and durable—Keep it up, keep it up, until you have made sure of real relief and continued comfort.

Vast numbers of people who were once the unhappy victims of this cruel affliction have stayed with this Treatment until they obtained the Lasting Relief they longed for.

PAR. 4. In addition to the foregoing advertisements and letters, respondent is and has been disseminating false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set out by means of pamphlets and circulars containing purported testimonials from diverse and sundry persons designed to induce potential customers to purchase its products, or to induce persons who had already purchased, to purchase a larger quantity thereof.

Among and typical of these statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

I have not been bothered for a long time and all due to your Treatment.

I am thankful to say that it has done the work. I do not feel a pain or soreness at all since using the Treatment.

Since taking your Treatment I never will get through rejoicing and have never suffered from piles since.—I have no pains at all.

When I first wrote you, I was not able to do any walking and could not ride. I had suffered with piles for 15 years. But now I am at my work and feel as if I never had the piles.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's preparations, respondent represents that said preparations used conjointly are an effective and scientific cure and remedy for, and a competent and effective treatment of, piles, that the application of said preparations conjointly constitutes an "Absorption Treatment" which removes piles without surgical aid; that their use insures immediate and lasting relief with no return of suffering, and will remove or correct the cause of piles.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparations whether used conjointly or separately are not cures or remedies for piles and do not constitute a competent or effec-

Said preparations when used conjointly do not remove piles, do not bring immediate or lasting relief, and do not remove or correct the cause of piles in that said treatment will not absorb, remove, or completely eradicate protruding external or internal hemorrhoidal protuberances.

PAB. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to its said medicinal preparations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase such medical preparations containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as found herein, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Dr. Van Vleck Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the medicinal preparations known as "Dr. Van Vleck's Ointment," "Dr. Van Vleck's Muco-Cones," "Dr. Van Vleck's Pills," or any other medicinal preparations possessing substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication:

1. That respondent's preparations, whether used separately or jointly, are cures or remedies for piles or that said preparations constitute competent or effective treatments therefor, or that said preparations have any therapeutic value in the treatment of piles in excess of the relief obtained through the prevention of constipation and the use of a mild analgesic.

2. That respondent's preparations, whether used separately or jointly, will bring immediate or lasting relief from piles; or will correct or remove the cause of piles; or will absorb, remove, or eradicate protruding external or internal hemorrhoidal protuberances without surgical aid.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF THEODORE RADIN, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3992. Complaint, Jan. 12, 1940—Decision, May 13, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations designated "Glycirenan," "Glycirenan-Forte," "Jodirenan," "Inhaledrin-Compositum" and "Aerizon," recommended as treatments for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort and bronchial irritations, and of a device called "Atmozon Aerifier" for administering said preparations, sold as aforesaid to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements thereof which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and pamphlets, circulars, and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce, and by other means, and through testimonial letters, circulars and form letters urging purchasers to try its aforesaid preparations for purposes above indicated—

Represented, directly and indirectly, that aforesaid preparations were cures or remedies for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, bronchial asthma, and other bronchial ailments, and constituted competent and effective treatments therefor, and were absolutely harmless no matter how often used, and that use thereof would prevent attacks of asthma and hay fever, or the recurrence thereof, and would relieve the suffering incident thereto;

Facts being said products were not cures or remedies for said various conditions and ailments and did not constitute competent and effective treatments therefor, in excess of furnishing temporary symptomatic relief from the paroxysms of asthma, attacks of hay fever, bronchial irritations and sinus discomfort, and, by virtue of epinephrine and ephedrine therein contained, were not harmless, no matter how often used, but, used over long period of time, might produce such prolonged vasoconstriction as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia, with secondary inflammatory reactions;

With capacity and tendency to mislead substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements were true, and to induce portion of such public to purchase said drug containing medicinal preparations because of such erroneous and mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. M. C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Irving M. Radin, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Theodore Radin, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., is a corporation duly chartered, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 18-20 East Forty-first Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations designated "Glycirenán," "Glycirenán-Forte," "Jodirenán," "Inhaledrin-Compositum," and "Aerizon" recommended as treatments for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, and bronchial irritations. Respondent in connection therewith also sells and distributes a device designated "Atmozon Aerifier" for administering said medicinal preparations.

Said medicinal preparations, when sold, are transported from respondent's place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In furtherance of the sale and distribution of its medicinal preparations, the respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning said medicinal preparations by the United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in pamphlets, circulars, and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning the said medicinal preparations by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

For Quick and Effective Relief of Asthma Use "Atmozon" Aerifler with "Silbe" medications. One user writes: "It is the most wonderful treatment I have found after 15 years of suffering." Proven successful for over 30 years.

Asthma

* * * * *

Immediate relief given in the most obstinate cases regardless of age of sufferer.

Proven Method for

Quick and Effective Relief for

Asthma

Hay Fever.

The phenomenal results obtained by the use of "Glyciren" in cases of asthma, is founded upon its composition justified by the capacity for resorption of the aerified medicaments by the mucous membrane of the bronchi.

If the Bronchitis is accompanied by an Asthmatic condition (Bronchial Asthma), the best results may be obtained by using "Glyciren" in the medicated air form.

When your case is properly diagnosed by your doctor as sinus (and no complications are visible) you can obtain almost immediate relief with an "Atmozon" and medication "Aerizon" by inhaling same in dry cold air form (medicated air).

The action of the "Silbe" medicaments, Jodirenan, and Glyciren, on the musculature of the bronchi is spasmolytic. This spasmolytic action causes the dyspnoea to disappear and allows the sufferer to be comfortable. The first medicament cuts through the mucous clogged passages so that the heaviness is eliminated and the second medicament takes away the wheeze and rale. These medications have been proven by many years of use to be the sovereign remedies in not only relieving, but also preventing attacks.

Our medications comply with regulations governing products of this character. They do not contain narcotics, are not habit-forming and are absolutely harmless regardless of the age of the user.

While the "Atmozon" constitutes the best relief obtainable—is absolutely harmless no matter how often used—* * *

PAR. 3. In addition to the foregoing advertisements, the respondent has disseminated false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set out by means of testimonial letters, circulars and form letters urging potential purchasers to try said preparations for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, and bronchial irritations.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid by the respondent through the use of said circular and testimonial letters, urging the purchase of said preparations, are the following:

We will sell you an "Atmozon" Pocket "Aerifier" * * * and a bottle of Dr. Silten's latest discovery, a new inhalant which has proven the greatest advancement in recent years, for the relief of asthma—Glycirenan-Forte.

"* * * the medication * * * is keeping me entirely free from hay fever."

The machine was delivered to me at the hospital where they had taken me a few days before, having an acute attack of asthma. * * * I have received as many as twenty hypodermics in one nite. Well, the machine arrived at the hospital, and, as soon as I started to use it, I was through with the hypodermics. No matter how severe the attack was, the machine forced enough air, mixed with glyciereenan, so that I was at ease almost instantly.

For the past fourteen years I have been a victim of both Rose Fever and Hay Fever. It was not until January, 1932 when I first used your medication that I obtained relief. Now I use the Inhaledrin-Compositum Spring, Summer and Fall, as without it I would lose many a days work. Further, it enables me to sleep and breathe in comfort at night.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative or therapeutic properties of the preparations sold and distributed by it, the respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., has represented and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that the preparations "Glycirenan," "Glycirenan-Forte," "Jodirenan," "Inhaledrin-Compositum," and "Aerizon" are cures or remedies for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, bronchial asthma, and other bronchial ailments and that they constitute competent and effective treatments therefor; that said preparations are absolutely harmless no matter how often used; that the use of said preparations will prevent attacks of asthma and hay fever, or the recurrence thereof and will relieve the suffering incident thereto.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., are not cures or remedies for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, bronchial asthma, and other bronchial ailments, and do not constitute competent and effective treatments therefor in excess of furnishing temporary symptomatic relief from the paroxysms of asthma, attacks of hay fever, bronchial irritations, and sinus discomfort. Said preparations are not absolutely harmless no matter how often used by reason of the existence of epinephrine and ephedrine in said preparations and the use of said preparations over a long period of time is likely to produce such prolonged vasoconstriction as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia, with secondary inflammatory reactions.

PAR. 6. In addition to the false and misleading statements hereinabove set forth, the respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements as aforesaid, in that the respondent fails to reveal to purchasers and prospective purchasers that the use of said medicinal preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may in some cases be injurious to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said medicinal preparations, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and also has a tendency and capacity to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase such medicinal preparations containing drugs.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 12, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent subsequently filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, with the exception of the allegations of paragraph 6 thereof, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 18-20 East Forty-first Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, Theodore Radin, Inc., is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations designated "Glycirenan," "Glycirenan-Forte," "Jodirenan," "Inhaledrin-Compositum," and "Aerizon" recommended as treatments for asthma, hay fever, sinus discomfort, and bronchial irritations. ## LOUIS GOLDMAN, TRADING AS GLOBE RUMMAGE MART

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4016. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1940—Decision, May 13, 1940

Where an individual engaged in purchase of second-hand clothing and other merchandise which he bought on the open market from other second-hand dealers, junk dealers, and at rummage sales, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in offering and describing through catalogs distributed by him through the mails and in other ways to purchasers and prospective purchasers in the various States and in said District, and through circulars, form letters, and other advertising literature which he disseminated, his said second-hand and reclaimed wearing apparel—

- (a) Represented that such apparel purchased by him as aforesaid was seasonable and salable merchandise of the latest or currently popular style, facts being it was old and out of style;
- (b) Represented that said apparel was salable merchandise in good condition and was only slightly used, facts being it was old, dirty, badly worn, and generally unsalable and frequently packages thereof, when shipped to customers, contained goods that were old, out of style, dirty, worn-out, unsalable, valueless, and of different size, color, age, quality, style, and condition from that ordered by customers;
- (c) Represented that he had complete assortments of wearing apparel available, facts being he did not have complete assortment of sizes available; and
- (d) Represented that any merchandise which was not entirely satisfactory might be returned for replacement, facts being he did not generally, as advertised by him, make satisfactory replacements or refunds where merchandise was not satisfactory;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such false statements and representations were true and into purchase of said merchandise by reason thereof:

in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis Goldman, is an individual doing business under the name of Globe Rummage Mart, and having his office and principal place of business located at 3238 South State Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. During the past year, and prior thereto, respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of second-hand clothing and other merchandise. Respondent causes said merchandise when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of second-hand and reclaimed wearing apparel sold and distributed by him, the respondent publishes a catalog listing and describing the various articles of merchandise sold and distributed by him. Respondent distributes this catalog by United States mail and by other means to purchasers and prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In addition to the catalogs distributed by the respondent, the respondent also disseminates advertising by means of circulars, form letters, and other means for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his various articles of merchandise.

In said catalogs and other means of advertising, the respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing that the merchandise sold by him is only slightly used merchandise; that all articles listed in his catalog are reclaimed or slightly used but are in good salable condition; that such articles are reasonable merchandise and are the most popular styles and the latest creations; that complete assortments are available, and that any merchandise not entirely satisfactory may be returned for replacements.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, all of the said representations, together with others not specifically set out herein are exaggerated, false, and misleading. In fact, the merchandise sold and distributed by the respondent is not only slightly used, and is not seasonable and salable merchandise of the latest style. The respondent buys his stock of merchandise on the open market from other second-hand dealers and junk dealers, and at rummage sales. When an order is shipped to a customer the package frequently contains merchandise that is old, out of style, dirty, worn out, unsaleable, valueless, and of different size, color, age, quality, style, and condition from the merchandise ordered by the respondent's customers. The respondent does not have a complete assortment of sizes available and does not generally make satisfactory replacements or refunds where merchandise has not been satisfactory, as advertised by him.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said merchandise, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 5, 1940, issued, and on February 6, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Louis Goldman, an individual trading as Globe Rummage Mart, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis Goldman, is an individual doing business under the name of Globe Rummage Mart, and having his office and principal place of business located at 3238 South State Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. During the past year, and prior thereto, respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of second-hand clothing and other merchandise. Respondent causes said merchandise when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of second-hand and reclaimed wearing apparel sold and distributed by him, the respondent publishes a catalog listing and describing the various articles of merchandise sold and distributed by him. Respondent distributes this catalog by United States mails and by other means to purchasers and prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In addition to the catalogs distributed by the respondent, the respondent also disseminates advertising matter in the form of circulars, form letters, and other literature for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his various articles of merchandise.

In said catalogs and other means of advertising, the respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing that the merchandise sold by him is only slightly used merchandise; that all articles listed in his catalog are reclaimed or slightly used but are in good salable condition; that such articles are seasonable merchandise and are the most popular styles and the latest creations; that complete assortments are available, and that any merchandise not entirely satisfactory may be returned for replacements.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, all of the said representations, together with others not specifically set out herein are exaggerated, false, and misleading. In fact, the merchandise sold and distributed by the respondent is not slightly used second-hand merchandise, and is not seasonable and salable merchandise of the latest style. The respondent buys his stock of merchandise on the open market from other second-hand dealers and junk dealers, and at rummage sales. When an order is shipped to a customer the package frequently contains merchandise that is old, out of style, dirty, worn out, unsalable, valueless, and of different size, color, age, quality, style, and condition from the merchandise ordered by the respondent's customers. The respondent does not have a complete assortment of sizes available and does not generally make satisfactory replacements or refunds where merchandise has not been satisfactory, as advertised by him.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said merchandise, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Louis Goldman, individually and trading as Globe Rummage Mart, or under any other name or names, and his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of second-hand wearing apparel in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, that wearing apparel purchased from junk or other second-hand dealers, which is old or out of style is seasonable and salable merchandise of the latest or currently popular style.
2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that wearing apparel purchased from junk or other second-hand dealers, which is old, dirty, badly worn, or generally unsalable, is salable merchandise in good condition or is only slightly used merchandise.

Order

3. Representing that respondent has complete assortments of wearing apparel available.

4. Representing that respondent will make replacements or refunds when merchandise is not satisfactory, when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

HOWARD L. BREWER AND ALBERT L. TRIBBETT, TRADING AS B &amp; T SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Complaint

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Howard L. Brewer and Albert L. Tribbett are individuals trading as B & T Sales Co. The address of respondent Howard L. Brewer is 4421 East Washington Street, Indianapolis, Ind., and of respondent Albert L. Tribbett is 967 Bolton Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. The only address of the said B & T Sales Co. is Post Office Box 334, Indianapolis, Ind.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in selling, distributing, and transporting from the city of Indianapolis in the State of Indiana to the purchasers thereof located in other States and in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, a certain medicinal preparation designated as "Menstru-Eze." Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparation, by United States mails, by insertions in magazines and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation, and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Menstru-Eze for speedy results in many unusual, overdue, difficult, abnormal delays, without pain or inconvenience.

MENSTRU-EZE FOR PERIOD SUFFERERS

By the use of Menstru-Eze it is possible to not only get relief from period suffering quickly, but to get permanent relief by using this remedy for a short period as per directions; this is not a pain relief medicine but effects the parts which cause the suffering; * * * prepared to relieve the cause. It is positively safe.

Many women report the success of Menstru-Eze when other remedies have failed; no need of staying home from work or going to bed when taking Menstru-Eze, it works quickly and with great success, * * *.

When ordering Menstru-Eze at $5.00 per bottle, you are ordering all that is needed; you will not be asked to purchase a larger supply to get results, or some other remedy to take with this, as one bottle is all that is required, and we have no other associate package to go with Menstru-Eze, none is needed. If your druggist cannot supply you, send direct to P. O. Box 334, B & T SALES CO., Indianapolis, Ind., Dept. No. D. A.

MENSTRU-EZE is not a narcotic or sedative to relieve the pain in these cases, but a treatment to relieve the cause. It is a mild treatment and requires a little time to function. Considerable relief can be expected the first month if taken according to directions; this is in hourly doses starting two days before the expected period and continued until a good flow has been secured. This treatment should be repeated the second and third month. Its use can be stopped for twelve months, and in many cases will never again be necessary.

MENSTRU-EZE is an excellent aid for relieving the discomfort of pain caused by Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea and irregularity of menstruation, when due to cold, exposure, or other temporary conditions.

If menstruation is customarily painful or of scant flow, MENSTRU-EZE should be begun two days before the expected period and taken according to the directions. If used in this manner for three successive periods it may produce permanent relief.

MENSTRU-EZE is extremely helpful to women in their change of life period. There is nothing in this treatment that will produce any harmful results. It has been proved in actual use for over twenty years.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their medicinal preparation designated as "Menstru-Eze" possesses curative and remedial properties which make such product beneficial for use in treating cases of delayed, difficult, painful, and irregular menstruation, and for use in the menopause, and for use in relieving pain incident to such disorders or conditions.

The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation possesses no properties which are of any therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed, or difficult, or painful, or irregular menstruation. Said preparation is without any therapeutic value for use in the menopause, or for use in relieving any pains incident to such disorders or conditions.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their said medicinal preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparation.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 12, 1940, issued, and on March 14, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Howard L. Brewer and Albert L. Tribbett, individually and trading as B & T Sales Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondents filed an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Howard L. Brewer and Albert L. Tribbett are individuals trading as B & T Sales Co. The address of respondent Howard L. Brewer is 4421 East Washington Street, Indianapolis, Ind., and of respondent Albert L. Tribbett is 967 Bolton Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. The only address of the said B & T Sales Co. is Post Office Box 334, Indianapolis, Ind.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in selling, distributing, and transporting from the city of Indianapolis, in the State of Indiana to the purchasers thereof located in other States and in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, a certain medicinal preparation designated as "Menstru-Eze." Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparation, by United States mails, by insertions in magazines and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation, and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparations by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

WOMEN

Delayed

Findings

Many women report the success of Menstru-Eze when other remedies have failed; no need of staying home from work or going to bed when taking Menstru-Eze, it works quickly and with great success, * * *.

When ordering Menstru-Eze at $5.00 per bottle, you are ordering all that is needed; you will not be asked to purchase a larger supply to get results, or some other remedy to take with this, as one bottle is all that is required, and we have no other associate package to go with Menstru-Eze, none is needed. Menstru-Eze is extremely helpful to women in their change of life period. There is nothing in this treatment that will produce any harmful results. It has been proved in actual use for over twenty years.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their medicinal preparation designated as "Menstru-Eze" possesses curative and remedial properties which make such product beneficial for use in treating cases of delayed, difficult, painful, and irregular menstruation, and for use in the menopause, and for use in relieving pain incident to such disorders or conditions.

The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation possesses no properties which are of any therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed, or difficult, or painful, or irregular menstruation. Said preparation is without any therapeutic value for use in the menopause, or for use in relieving any pains incident to such disorders or conditions.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their said medicinal preparation, disseminated, as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Howard L. Brewer and Albert L. Tribbett, individually, and trading as B & T Sales Co., or trading under any other name or names, their agents, servants, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a medicinal preparation designated as "Menstru-Eze," or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparation, which advertisement represents, directly or through implication, that said medicinal preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed, difficult, painful, or irregular menstruation or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions or in relieving the pain which may be incident thereto, or that said preparation is of any therapeutic or beneficial value to women during the menopause period.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Docket 4062. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1940—Decision, May 13, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in compounding, selling and distributing medicinal and therapeutic preparations, including its "Neofem Liquid," "Neofem Capsules," and "Cerene," to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in advertisements thereof which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce, and by various means and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce, directly or indirectly, purchase of its said products—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that its said "Neofem Capsules," "Neofem Liquid," and "Cerene" were cures or remedies for painful and delayed menstruation, and constituted competent and effective treatments therefor, and that their use constituted safe, sane ways of self-medication and relief from such condition, and that said "Neofem Capsules" were designed to give relief from painful menstruation or slight delay, that said "Neofem Liquid" provided a potent, direct and positive relief for cases of delayed menstruation that were past the first stages, and that said "Cerene" would give relief for stubborn cases of such condition and was dependable where other medicines had been tried and had failed;

Facts being said various preparations were not cures or remedies for said condition, and did not constitute competent and effective treatments therefor, and would not accomplish results which it claimed for them, and were not safe and harmless, by virtue of ergot, oil of savin, and aloin therein contained in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and might result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, vomiting with pelvic congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage and, in those cases where either of said preparations is used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, might result in uterine infection with extension to pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the bloodstream, causing condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

(b) Failed to reveal, in aforesaid advertisements, facts material with respect to consequences which might result from use of said preparations under conditions prescribed or under such conditions as are customary or usual;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations and advertisements were true, and to induce portion of such public to purchase said preparations containing drugs because of such erroneous and mistaken belief:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that S. M. Laboratories Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, S. M. Laboratories Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of compounding, manufacturing, selling, and distributing medicinal and therapeutical preparations. Among such preparations are preparations designated as Neofem Liquid, Neofem Capsules, and Cerene. Respondent causes said preparations, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said products, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products, and has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

RELIEF FROM DELAYED MENSTRUATION PERIODS

Nothing causes more distress to mental outlook and physical well-being than painful menstruation and that functional disorder, the uncertain period. Although physicians have found it impossible at times to account for the failure of normal menstruation, there seems to be an agreement that such periods may be due to anemia, unsuitability of employment, change of environment, severe colds, nervous shock, etc.

Neofem Capsules, Neofem Liquid, and Cerene are three reliable products that represent a safe, sane way of self-medication used successfully by thousands of women. To help you choose the one best suited to your particular case the following brief guide is given:

Neofem Capsules. If your problem is primarily a question of painful menstruation or slight delay, Neofem Capsules will give best results with a minimum amount of inconvenience. They are small capsules, just as easy to take as any tablet. They are packed in a small box ready for use and can be carried about in the handbag.

Neofem Liquid. Packaged in a small 3-ounce bottle, it is always ready for instant use and may also be conveniently carried about. In a liquid form, to be taken internally, it has obvious advantages, providing a potent, direct, positive action. We recommend it for use in cases that are past the first stage.

Cerene. For stubborn cases, where other medication has been tried and failed, we recommend Cerene. This is a combination treatment of capsules and a medicated douche. Both powder and capsules are packed together with a special applicator in one package with complete directions for use. Cerene is best described by the word "dependable."

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents directly and by implication that its preparations designated "Neofem Capsules," "Neofem Liquid," and "Cerene" are cures or remedies for painful and delayed menstruation and competent and effective treatments therefor and their use constitute safe, sane ways of self-medication and relief of delayed menstruation; that Neofem Capsules are designed to give relief from painful menstruation or slight delay that Neofem Liquid provides a potent, direct and positive relief for cases of delayed menstruation that are past the first stage; that Cerene will give relief for stubborn cases of delayed menstruation and is dependable where other medicines have been tried and have failed.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements, claims, and representations used and disseminated by the respondent, in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the preparations sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid, designated "Neofem Capsules," "Neofem Liquid," and "Cerene" are not cures or remedies for painful and delayed menstruation and do not constitute competent or effective treatments therefor. Said preparations will not accomplish the results claimed for them by the respondent. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless in that said preparations contain ergot, oil of savin, and aloin.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement or under such conditions as are customary or usual. Such use of said preparations may result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, vomiting with pelvic congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage and in those cases where either of these preparations is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy may result in uterine infection with extension to the pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the bloodstream causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal facts, material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its preparations disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's preparations containing injurious drugs.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 12, 1940, issued and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, S. M. Laboratories Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 28, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which it admitted, as to its past acts and practices, all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and stated that it is not now and for some time last past has not been engaged in the acts and practices charged. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent S. M. Laboratories Company, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

PAR. 2. Respondent has been for more than 1 year prior to March 12, 1940, engaged in compounding and in selling and distributing medicinal and therapeutic preparations. Among such preparations were certain preparations designated as "Neofem Liquid," "Neofem Capsules," and "Cerene." Respondent caused said preparations, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein respondent has maintained a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent disseminated, and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said products by United States mails, by insertion of advertisements in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which have been distributed in commerce among and between the various States in the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products, and also disseminated, and caused the dissemination of false advertisements, concerning its said products by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless in that said preparations contain ergot, oil of savin, and aloin.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual. Such use of said preparations may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, vomiting with pelvic congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage and in those cases where either of these preparations is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy may result in uterine infection with extension to the pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the bloodstream causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth the respondent also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated failed to reveal facts material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its preparations disseminated as aforesaid has had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations and advertisements are true and to induce a portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's preparations containing drugs because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits, as to its past acts and practices, all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, S. M. Laboratories Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of preparations containing drugs now designated by the names of "Neofem Capsules," "Neofem Liquid," and "Cerene," or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication, that said preparations, "Neofem Capsules," "Neofem Liquid," and "Cerene" are cures or remedies for painful or delayed menstruation or constitute safe, competent, or effective treatments therefor or that their use provides safe or sane ways of self-medication in securing relief from delayed menstruation; that Neofem Liquid provides a potent, direct, and positive relief for cases of delayed menstruation; that Cerene will give relief for stubborn cases of delayed menstruation or that it is dependable for such use; or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of such preparations may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MISSISSIPPI SALES COMPANY, INC., JOBBERS PRODUCE COMPANY, INC., AND S. O. SCOTT, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS PRESIDENT, DIRECTOR, AND MAJORITY STOCK-HOLDER OF SAID CORPORATIONS, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF PAR. (C) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914,
AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3511. Complaint, July 27, 1938—Decision, May 15, 1940

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SECTION 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COM-MISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—INTERMEDIARIES—BUYER CONTROLLED BROKERS—BROKERAGE PAYMENTS TO AND RECEIPT BY, ON BUYER PURCHASES.

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, a broker upon the purchases of a buyer possessing the power of control over such broker or in whose behalf such broker acts is a practice which Congress deemed to be an inherently unfair trade practice and specifically and unconditionally prescribed by said paragraph of said act.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SECTION 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COM-MISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—INTERMEDIARIES—CORPORATE ENTITIES—WHERE BROKER INTERMEDIARY AND BUYER DISTINCT, BUT SAME CON-TROL AND OWNERSHIP COMMON TO BOTH.

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, buyers on their own purchases, whether the same is paid directly to the buyers or transmitted to them through intermediaries, is a practice which Congress deemed to be an inherently unfair trade practice and specifically and unconditionally prescribed by said paragraph of said act, and while corporate broker "M" and corporate buyer "J" may be considered legal entities distinct from the members who compose them, such distinction is a fiction of the law which is disregarded when it is urged to an intent and purpose which is not consonant with the reason and policy of the law, and where the principal party at interest in both broker "M" and buyer "J" was "S," who was president, director, active manager, and owner of 98 percent of the stock of each, payment of brokerage fees or commissions to and receipt thereof by "M" upon the purchases of "J" was in fact and in law payment of brokerage fees or commissions to and receipt thereof by buyer "J" within the meaning of the paragraph in question of the act.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SECTION 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COM-MISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—"SERVICES RENDERED" CLAUSE.

The "services rendered" clause of said paragraph of said act does not set up conditions upon which brokerage may be paid by sellers either to buyers or to their intermediaries, agents or representatives, upon the buyers' own purchases. (The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 667 (C. C. A. 3d, 1939), 29 F. T. C. 1591;

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SECTION 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COMMISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—INTERMEDIARIES—CORPORATE ENTITIES—WHERE BROKER INTERMEDIARY AND BUYER DISTINCT, BUT SAME CONTROL AND OWNERSHIP COMMON TO BOTH—RECEIPT BROKERAGE OR COMMISSION PAYMENTS AS DIVIDENDS OR PROFITS BY BROKER'S AND BY BUYER'S COMMON PRESIDENT AND MAJORITY STOCKHOLDER.

Where three corporations engaged in different parts of the country in the sale and distribution of commodities to customers residing in the various States, and fairly representative of a large group of sellers engaged in selling and shipping commodities in interstate commerce to a corporate produce jobber on orders placed by latter through corporate general merchandise broker, as below more fully set forth, and in active competition, in the case of each, with other sellers of competitive commodities in endeavoring to sell its products to produce jobber aforesaid and to other purchasers—

Paid, in common with other sellers above referred to, on all such transactions of purchase and sale in interstate commerce, certain agreed percentages of the amount of each purchase as brokerage fees or commissions to said general merchandise broker, president, director, active manager, and majority stockholder of which served in similar capacity and similarly controlled said produce jobber, and business of which was conducted from same offices and by identical personnel as served said produce jobber, orders of which, upon which such brokerage fees or commissions, were thus paid, were made through such brokerage concern; and

Where said brokerage concern and said produce jobber, which was in active competition with other produce jobbers who purchased commodities in interstate commerce for resale to same customers to whom it endeavored to resell commodities purchased by it as above set forth, and said individual, who owned, managed, and was in control of both, as aforesaid—

Received and accepted such brokerage fees or commissions from sellers as above set forth, upon purchases made through said brokerage concern, and in connection with which said concern acted for and in behalf and subject to control of said produce jobber, and in connection with which no brokerage or selling services whatsoever, or any other form of services in connection with purchases of commodities by or sale thereof to said produce jobber, were rendered to sellers by said brokerage concern or its said president or any employee of either, and in connection with which individual aforesaid, who served and controlled said produce jobber and said brokerage concern as above set forth and to whom were periodically distributed net profits of such brokerage concern resulting from receipt of brokerage fees or commissions paid to it by sellers upon purchases of such produce jobber as above indicated, had no knowledge or information with regard to customer or consumer demand or merchandise requirements or obligations of said produce jobber to sellers involved, in his capacity as president and active manager of said produce company, which was not equally well known to him in his capacity as president and active manager of said brokerage concern;

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

Held, That such payments of brokerage or commissions on transactions aforesaid, and under the circumstances set forth, by such sellers to said brokerage concern, produce jobber and individual aforesaid, upon the purchases of said produce jobber in interstate commerce, and such receipt and acceptance, whether directly or indirectly, by said brokerage concern, produce jobber and individual aforesaid, of such brokerage fees or commissions upon such purchases, constituted violation of provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Complaint

The majority of the outstanding stock of said respondent, Mississippi Sales Company, Inc., is owned by respondent S. O. Scott, the president of said respondent corporation.

The business of the said respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is that of a general merchandise broker, and as such it acts as intermediary in transactions of sale and purchase of commodities, principally foodstuffs, between numerous sellers, among whom are the "seller respondents" hereinafter named and divers buyers, among whom are the "buyer respondents" hereinafter designated.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Mississippi, having an office and principal place of business located at 2500 A Street in the city of Meridian, Miss. It also maintains branch offices in the cities of Columbus, Miss., Greenwood, Miss., and Jackson, Miss. The officers of said respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., are as follows:

S. O. Scott, president,
M. C. Fridge, vice president,
T. J. Roth, secretary-treasurer.

The majority of the outstanding stock of respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is owned by respondent, S. O. Scott, the president of said respondent corporation.

The business of the said respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is that of a produce jobber. In the conduct of its said business produce is purchased by it from sellers residing in States other than the State of Mississippi, among whom are the "seller respondents" hereinafter named, pursuant to which purchases produce is shipped by such sellers from the respective States in which such sellers are located into and through various States of the United States to respondents, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and the produce so purchased is re-sold by said respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., to jobbers and wholesalers located in the various States of the United States, pursuant to which sales such produce is shipped and transported by said respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., into and through various States of the United States to its wholesaler and jobber customers.

PAR. 3. Respondent, S. O. Scott, is an individual residing in the city of Meridian, Miss., and having an office and place of business located at 2500 A Street, in said city and State.

PAR. 4. Respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Mississippi, having an office and principal place of business located in the city of Meridian, Miss.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

The majority of outstanding stock of said respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., is owned by R. M. Snowden, who is president of said respondent corporation, and S. O. Scott.

Respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., is engaged in the business of operating a chain of cash and carry grocery stores. In the conduct of such business commodities, particularly food products, are purchased by it from sellers residing in States other than the State of Mississippi, among whom are the "seller respondents" hereinafter named, pursuant to which purchases products are shipped by such sellers from the respective States in which such sellers are located into and through various States of the United States to the respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc.

PAR. 5. Respondent, Buckley-Young Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Alabama, having an office and principal place of business located in the city of York, Ala.

The majority of the outstanding stock of said respondent, Buckley-Young Co., is owned by R. M. Snowden, who is vice president of said respondent corporation, and S. O. Scott.

Respondent, Buckley-Young Co., is engaged in selling groceries and allied products at wholesale. In the conduct of such business commodities, particularly food products, are purchased by it from sellers residing in States other than the State of Alabama, among whom are the "seller respondents" hereinafter named, pursuant to which purchases products are shipped by such sellers from the respective States in which such sellers are located into and through various States of the United States to the respondent, Buckley-Young Co.

PAR. 6. Respondent, American Fruit Growers, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having an office and principal place of business located at 2100 Penn Avenue in the city of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Respondent, Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having an office and principal place of business located at Occidental and King Streets, in the city of Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, Dow Fruit Co., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, having an office and principal place of business located in the city of Wenatchee, Wash.

Respondent, E. O. Muir Co., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Utah, having an office and principal place of business located at 158 Pacific Avenue, in the city of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Respondents, William Henderson, Hunt Henderson, Christ Gamble, and Fred Gamble, are individuals doing business under the firm name and style of William Henderson Sugar Refinery, having an office and principal place of business located at 749 South Peters Street in the city of New Orleans, La.

The respondents named in this paragraph will be hereinafter referred to as "seller respondents."

Each of the "seller respondents" named in this paragraph is engaged in the sale of commodities to customers residing in States other than the respective States in which said "seller respondents" are located, pursuant to which sales commodities are shipped and transported by each of said "seller respondents" into and through various States of the United States to their respective customers. Said "seller respondents" are fairly typical and representative members of a large group or class of manufacturers, processors, and producers, engaged in the common practice of selling some of their commodities, in interstate commerce as aforesaid, through respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., to the respondents, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., The Penny Stores, Inc., and Buckley-Young Co. Said group or class of said sellers comprise a large number of such manufacturers, processors, and producers, too numerous to be separately named herein or to be brought before the Commission in this proceeding without manifest inconvenience and delay.

PAR. 7. Respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., places orders for a substantial portion (probably 85 percent), of the products by it required in the ordinary course and conduct of its business with, and purchases the same from, the "seller respondents," and others, through the agency of the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and upon receipt of such orders each of said "seller respondents," and others, ships the products so ordered from the respective States in which said sellers are located into and through various other States of the United States to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.

In the course of the buying and selling transactions herein above referred to, resulting in the delivery of products from the "seller respondents," and others, to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., said "seller respondents" and others, since June 19, 1936, have transmitted, paid and delivered, and do transmit, pay and deliver to the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and S. O. Scott, so-called brokerage fees or commissions, the same being certain percentages of the quoted sales prices agreed upon by said "seller respondents," and others, and the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and S. O. Scott, and the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.,

and S. O. Scott, since June 19, 1936, have received and accepted and are receiving and accepting such so-called brokerage fees or commissions while the ownership, management, and control of respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is identified and affiliated with the ownership, management, and control of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., through the person and active management of respondent, S. O. Scott, who is president, director, and majority stockholder of both said respondent corporations, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and also through other mutual officers, directors, and employees.

In all of the buying and selling transactions hereinabove referred to, the so-called brokerage fees or commissions are paid and transmitted by said "seller respondents," and others, and accepted and received by said respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and S. O. Scott, while the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is acting in fact for and in behalf, and subject to the control, of respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., for which said so-called brokerage fees or commissions no services whatsoever in connection with such purchases have been rendered or are now being rendered to, for or on behalf of the said "seller respondents," and others, by the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., or S. O. Scott.

PAR. 8. Respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., places orders for a substantial portion of the products by it required in the ordinary conduct of its business with, and purchases the same from, one or more of the "seller respondents," and others, through the agency of the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and upon receipt of such orders each of such sellers, ships the products so ordered from the respective States in which such sellers are located into and through various other States of the United States to the respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc.

In the course of the buying and selling transactions hereinabove referred to resulting in the delivery of products from said sellers to the respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., said sellers, since June 19, 1936, have transmitted, paid and delivered, and do transmit, pay and deliver to the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., so-called brokerage fees or commissions, the same being certain percentages of the quoted sales prices agreed upon by said sellers and the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and The Penny Stores, Inc., and the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., since June 19, 1936, has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such so-called brokerage fees or commissions while the ownership, management, and control of said respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is identified and affiliated with the ownership, management, and control of respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., through respondent, S. O. Scott, who is president, director, and majority stockholder of respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and who is also a stockholder in respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., and also through the mutual stockholder interests of R. M. Snowden, who is president of respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., and respondent, S. O. Scott, who together own the majority stock of respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., and who also together own the majority stock of respondent, Buckley-Young Co., and other corporations not named herein.

In all of the said buying and selling transactions hereinabove referred to, the so-called brokerage fees or commissions are paid and transmitted by the said sellers to, and accepted and received by, the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., while the said respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is acting in fact for and in behalf, and subject to the control, of respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., for which said so-called brokerage fees or commissions no services whatsoever in connection with such purchases have been rendered or are now being rendered to, for or on behalf of the said sellers by the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc.

PAR. 9. Respondent, Buckley-Young Co., places orders for a substantial portion of the products by it required in the ordinary conduct of its business with, and purchases the same from, one or more of the "seller respondents," and others, through the agency of the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and upon receipt of such orders each of such sellers, ships the products so ordered from the respective States in which they are located into and through various other States of the United States to the respondent, Buckley-Young Co.

In the course of the buying and selling transactions hereinabove referred to, resulting in the delivery of products from said sellers to the respondent, Buckley-Young Co., said sellers, since June 19, 1936, have transmitted, paid and delivered, and do transmit, pay, and deliver to the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., so-called brokerage fees or commissions, the same being certain percentages of the quoted sales prices agreed upon by the said sellers and the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Buckley-Young Co., and the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., since June 19, 1936, has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such so-called brokerage fees or commissions while the ownership, management, and control of said respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is identified and affiliated with the ownership, management, and control of respondent, Buckley-Young Co., through respondent, S. Snowden, who is vice president of respondent, Buckley-Young Co., and respondent, S. O. Scott, who together own the majority stock of respondent, Buckley-Young Co., and who also together own the majority stock of respondent, The Penny Stores, Inc., and other corporations not named herein.

In all of the buying and selling transactions hereinabove referred to, the so-called brokerage fees or commissions are paid and transmitted by the said sellers to, and accepted and received by, the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., while the said respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is acting in fact and in behalf, and subject to the control of respondent, Buckley-Young Co., for which said so-called brokerage fees or commissions no services whatsoever in connection with such purchases have been rendered or are now being rendered to, for, or on behalf of the said sellers by the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc.

PAR. 10. The transmission and payment of said so-called brokerage fees or commissions by the "seller respondent," and others, to, and the receipt and acceptance thereof by, the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and S. O. Scott, upon the purchases of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and the transmission and payment of said so-called brokerage fees or commissions by the "seller respondents," and others, to, and the receipt and acceptance thereof by, the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., upon the purchases of the respondents, The Penny Stores, Inc., and Buckley-Young Co., in the manner and under the circumstances hereinabove set forth, is in violation of the provisions of section 2 (c) of the above mentioned act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by the act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 13, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by section 1 of the act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission, on July 27, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, charging them with violating the provisions of paragraph (c) of section 2 of the said act as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John Darsey, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner for the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by R. E. Wilbourn, attorney for the said respondents, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answers, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of the said John Darsey for the Commission, and the said R. E. Wilbourn for the respondents, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Mississippi. It maintains its principal office and place of business at 2500 A Street, in the city of Meridian, Miss., and branch offices in the cities of Columbus, Greenwood, and Jackson, Miss.

Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., has outstanding 100 shares of stock, 98 shares of which are owned by S. O. Scott, who is president of the corporation.

Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is engaged in the general merchandise brokerage business. In the conduct of its said business it acts as intermediary in transactions of sale and purchase of commodities between numerous sellers and buyers.

PAR. 2. The respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Mississippi. It maintains its principal office and place of business at 2500 A Street, in the city of Meridian, Miss., and branch offices at the cities of Columbus, Greenwood, and Jackson, Miss.

The jobbers Produce Co., Inc., has outstanding 100 shares of stock, 98 shares of which are owned by S. O. Scott, who is president of the corporation.

The business of the Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is that of a produce jobber. In the conduct of its said business produce is purchased for resale by it from sellers located in States other than the State of Mississippi, pursuant to which purchases produce is shipped by such sellers from the respective States in which said sellers are located across State lines to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.

The business engaged in by each of the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., in Meridian, Miss., and in each of their respective branch offices, is conducted in each office by the identical personnel from the same quarters under the direct and active supervision of the respondent, S. O. Scott.

PAR. 3. The respondent, S. O. Scott, is an individual residing in the city of Meridian, Miss., and having an office at 2500 A Street in said city and State. At all times hereinafter referred to the respondent S. O. Scott has been president, director, and active manager of each of the respondents Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and has owned 98 percent of the outstanding capital stock of each of said corporations.

PAR. 4. The respondent American Fruit Growers, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware with an office and principal place of business at 1400 Chamber of Commerce Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The respondent, Dow Fruit Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with an office and principal place of business in the city of Wenatchee, Wash.

The respondent, E. O. Muir Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Utah, with an office and principal place of business located at 158 Pacific Avenue in the city of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Each of the respondents, hereinabove named in this paragraph, is engaged in the sale and distribution of commodities to customers residing in the various States of the United States.

The respondents named in this paragraph will hereinafter be referred to as seller respondents. These seller respondents are fairly representative of a large group of sellers engaged in selling and shipping commodities in interstate commerce to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and to other purchasers thereof. Each of the seller respondents actively competes with other sellers of competitive commodities in endeavoring to sell its products to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and to other purchasers thereof.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its said business, since June 19, 1936, the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., has placed orders for a substantial quantity of commodities with the seller respondents and other sellers through the medium of the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., pursuant to which orders commodities have been sold and shipped in interstate commerce by the seller respondents and other sellers to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc. On all such transactions of purchase and sale in interstate commerce between the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and the seller respondents and other sellers, prior to the service of the complaint herein, the seller respondents and other sellers paid and transmitted to the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., brokerage fees or commissions on the basis of an agreed percentage (usually 3 to 5 percent) of the amount of each purchase.

During the period from July 1, 1936, to July 1, 1938, the seller respondents and other sellers paid and transmitted approximately $11,000 to the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., as brokerage fees or commissions upon those purchases of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co. Inc., which were invoiced directly to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc. In addition, within the same period, an undetermined and substantial amount of brokerage fees or commissions were paid by said sellers to the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., upon the purchases made by respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., from said sellers through the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., in pool cars which were invoiced to other customers of said sellers.

PAR. 6. The net profits of the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., resulting from the receipt of brokerage fees or commissions paid to it by the seller respondents and other sellers upon the purchases of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., as aforesaid, and upon the purchases of other customers, are periodically distributed to the respondent, S. O. Scott.

PAR. 7. The function of, and the services performed by, brokers representing sellers in connection with the sale of commodities is to find customers for sellers and, acting under and subject to the control of sellers, to sell commodities to those customers for and on behalf of sellers and as the agents of said sellers; the brokers' function in such cases is a selling function, and the service rendered by them is a selling service rendered to sellers.

PAR. 8. In all of the transactions of purchase and sale of commodities, as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, wherein the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., purchased commodities from sellers through the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., the following circumstances and conditions existed:

The respondent, S. O. Scott, was president and director of each of the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and owned 98 percent of the outstanding capital stock of each of said corporations.

The business engaged in by each of the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., was conducted from the same offices by the identical personnel under the direct and active supervision of the respondent, S. O. Scott; and

There was no knowledge or information with regard to customer or consumer demand, merchandise requirements of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., or obligations of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., to the seller respondents or other sellers, available to the respondent, S. O. Scott, in his capacity as president and active manager of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., which was not equally as well known to the respondent, S. O. Scott, in his capacity as president and active manager of the respondent Mississippi Sales Co., Inc.

PAR. 9. In all of the transactions of sale and purchase, hereinabove described, wherein the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., purchased commodities from the seller respondents and other sellers through the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., acted for and in behalf, and subject to the direct control, of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.

PAR. 10. No brokerage or selling services whatsoever, or any other form of services in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., as hereinafter described, were rendered to sellers by the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., or the respondent, S. O. Scott, or any employee of either of said respondents.

PAR. 11. At all times hereinabove referred to, the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., has been in active competition with other produce jobbers who purchase commodities in interstate commerce for resale to the same customers to whom the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., endeavors to resell commodities purchased by it, as aforesaid.

PAR. 12. With respect to the allegations of the complaint concerning the payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., upon the purchases of the respondents, The Penny Stores, Inc., and Buckley-Young Co., the Commission finds that in connection with such purchases the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., did not act for or in behalf, or subject to the control, of either of the respondents, The Penny Stores, Inc., or Buckley-Young Co.

Conclusion

William Henderson, Hunt Henderson, Christ Gamble, and Fred Gamble, individuals doing business under the firm name and style of William Henderson Sugar Refinery and Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., were also named as seller respondents herein. In the case of the former it does not appear that any payments of brokerage have been made by the four named individuals doing business as William Henderson Sugar Refinery, to the respondent Mississippi Sales Co., Inc. In the case of the latter there was no answer filed or any appearance entered on behalf of this respondent, and the record does not contain any evidence of its corporate identity.

CONCLUSION

The Commission concludes as follows with regard to the application of paragraph (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, to the facts heretofore found:

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, a broker upon the purchases of a buyer possessing the power of control over such broker or in whose behalf such broker acts is a practice which Congress deemed to be an inherently unfair trade practice and specifically and unconditionally proscribed by said paragraph of said act.

The respondent Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., is a buyer-controlled intermediary within the meaning of said paragraph of said act, and in all transactions wherein it purchases commodities for the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., or negotiates or deals with sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by, or the sale thereof to, the latter, it acts for and in behalf, and subject to the direct control, of the respondent Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., within the meaning of said paragraph of said act.

Since June 19, 1936, the seller respondents and other sellers have paid and transmitted brokerage fees or commissions in substantial amounts to, and the same have been accepted and received by, the respondent Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., upon the purchases of the respondent Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, buyers on their own purchases, whether the same is paid directly to the buyers or transmitted to them through intermediaries, likewise is a practice which Congress deemed to be an inherently unfair trade practice and specifically and unconditionally proscribed by said paragraph of said act.

The respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., are corporations and for some purposes they may be considered legal entities distinct from the members who compose them. But that distinction is a fiction of the law which is disregarded when it is urged to an intent and purpose which is not consonant with the reason and policy of the law.

The payment of the brokerage fees or commissions to, and the receipt thereof by, the respondent Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., upon the purchases of the respondent Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., when the principal party at interest in each of the said respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., is the respondent, S. O. Scott, who is president, director, active manager, and owner of 98 percent of the capital stock, of each of said corporations, is in fact and in law payment of brokerage fees or commissions to, and receipt thereof by, the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., within the meaning of said paragraph of said act.

The "services rendered" clause of said paragraph of said act does not set up conditions upon which brokerage may be paid by sellers either to buyers or to their intermediaries, agents, or representatives, upon the buyers' own purchases. (The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 667 (C. C. A. 3d, 1939), 29 F. T. C. 1591; Oliver Brothers v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 763, 770, 771 (C. C. A. 4, 1939), 28 F. T. C. 1926, 1936-1938; Biddle Purchasing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 96 F. (2d) 687 (C. C. A. 2d, 1938), 26 F. T. C. 1511; Webb-Crawford Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 109 F. (2d) 268 (C. C. A. 5th, 1940), see post, p. 1630.

No selling services whatsoever were in fact, or could be in law, rendered to sellers in connection with the purchases of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., by either the respondent, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., or the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., or by any agent, representative, or employee of either said respondents within the meaning of said paragraph of said act.

Since June 19, 1936, the seller respondents and other sellers have paid and transmitted brokerage fees or commissions in substantial amounts to, and the same have been received by, the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and S. O. Scott, upon the purchases of the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., in interstate commerce, in violation of paragraph (c) of section 2 of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, testimony and other evidence, taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed in support of said complaint and in opposition thereto and the oral arguments of John Darsey, counsel for the Commission and R. E. Wilbourn, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion with respect to the violation of the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An Act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes":

It is ordered, That the respondents, American Fruit Growers, Inc., a corporation, Dow Fruit Co., a corporation, and E. O. Muir Co., a corporation, and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale of commodities in interstate commerce to the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., do forthwith cease and desist from paying or granting to any of the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., or S. O. Scott, or any officer, representative, agent, or employee of any of the latter named respondents, any brokerage fee or commission, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That each of the respondents, Mississippi Sales Co., Inc., and Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., and the respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees of each of said respondents, in connection with the purchase of commodities in interstate commerce by the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc., do forthwith cease and desist from the practice of receiving or accepting, either directly or indirectly, from sellers any brokerage fees or commissions, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof.

Order

30 F. T. C.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, S. O. Scott, do forthwith cease and desist from the practice of receiving or accepting brokerage fees or commissions, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, either directly or indirectly, as stock dividends or distribution of profits, or otherwise, in connection with the purchase of commodities in interstate commerce by the respondent, Jobbers Produce Co., Inc.

It is further ordered, That the charges of the complaint herein with respect to the respondents, The Penny Stores, Inc., Buckley-Young Co., Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., and William Henderson, Hunt Henderson, Christ Gamble, and Fred Gamble, individuals doing business under the firm name and style of William Henderson Sugar Refinery, be, and the same hereby are, dismissed for the reasons set forth with respect to each of said respondents in paragraph 12 of the findings as to the facts herein.

It is further ordered, That the respondents who are subject to the provisions of this order shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
SWEETS COMPANY OF AMERICA, INC.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 2959. Order, May 25, 1940

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (1) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on December 7, 1938, 27 F. T. C. 1190, and in which Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on January 29, 1940, in Sweets Company of America, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 109 F. (2d) 296, 30 F. T. C. 1625, made and entered its written opinion directing that said order be modified by substitution of words "are likely to be made" for "may be made" in subdivision 1 thereof, by substitution of words "are likely to be used" for "may be used" in subdivision 2 thereof, and by substitution of words "are likely to be given" for "may be given" in subdivision 3 thereof, and on February 19, 1940, entered its decree modifying Commission's order as aforesaid directed, and, as so modified, affirmed said order and directed respondent to comply therewith—

Requiring respondent, its officers, etc., in connection with offer, etc., of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, forthwith to cease and desist from (1) selling, etc., candy so packed, etc., that sales thereof to the general public are to be made or are likely to be made by means of a lottery, etc., (2) supplying, etc., dealers with packages, etc., of candy which are used, or which are likely to be used, to conduct a lottery, etc., in sale, etc., of candy therein contained to public, or (3) supplying, etc., dealers, for sale to public, with packages, etc., of candy composed of individually wrapped pieces of candy of uniform size and shape and of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy or any other merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or other merchandise are to be or likely to be given as prizes to the purchasers procuring pieces of said candy of a particular color, as in said order below set forth.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Louis H. Solomon, of New York City, for respondent.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, the testimony and other evidence, and briefs and oral arguments for the respective parties; and the Commission having on December 7, 1938, made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that the respondent Sweets Co. of America, Inc., had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and having on December 7, 1938, issued and subsequently served, upon the respondent, its order to cease and desist from said violations; and the respondent Sweets

Co. of America, Inc., having thereafter petitioned the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review and set aside said order to cease and desist; and said Court, on January 29, 1940, having made and entered its written opinion directing that said order to cease and desist be modified by the substitution of the words "are likely to be made" for "may be made" in subdivision 1 thereof, by the substitution of the words "are likely to be used" for "may be used" in subdivision 2 thereof, and by the substitution of the words "are likely to be given" for "may be given" in subdivision 3 thereof, and that, as so modified, the said order be affirmed; and the Court, on February 19, 1940, having entered its decree modifying the Commission's order as directed in its opinion, and, as so modified, affirming it and directing the respondent to comply therewith; and the Court, having, in its decree, directed the Commission to modify its said order to cease and desist as set forth in said decree—

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the mandate in said decree, and to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with said decree:

It is ordered, That the respondent Sweets Co. of America, Inc., it officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or are likely to be made by means of a lottery, gambling device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers, packages or assortments of candy which are used or which are likely to be used to conduct a lottery, gambling device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of said candy contained in the said packages or assortments to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers for sale to the public packages or assortments of candy composed of individually wrapped pieces of candy of uniform size and shape and of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy or any other merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or other merchandise are to be or are likely to be given as prizes to the purchasers procuring pieces of said candy of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION

Where a corporation and three individuals, who were president, secretary, and treasurer thereof, and managed, controlled and dominated its affairs and activity, engaged in manufacture and sale of men's felt hats and caps from old, worn and previously-used hat bodies which they purchased and which, after being cleaned, steamed, ironed, and shaped by them, and in some instances fitted with new trimmings, sweatbands, linings, and size labels, had the appearance of new hats and caps; acting in conjunction and cooperation with each other in acts, practices and methods below set forth and in substantial competition with others also engaged in sale and distribution of such products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Sold said hats and caps, with appearance aforesaid, and with no marking or designation stamped thereon to indicate to purchasing public that they were made from old, worn and previously used hat bodies and other materials, to wholesale jobbers and retailers, who resold such articles to purchasing public without disclosing facts aforesaid and under such circumstances as to indicate that said hats and caps were in fact new, and failed, through use of words "Made Over" in inconspicuous and illegible type and in connection with and in proximity to such legends as "DeLuxe Quality" stamped or imprinted on said hats and caps, to apprise prospective purchasers that said articles were made from old, worn, and previously used hat bodies rather than from shop-worn hats which had never been worn or used, as made by various manufacturers from shop-worn new hats reclaimed from merchants' shelves and never used or worn, and cleaned, steamed and renovated by manufacturers in practically same manner as with hats made from old and previously used hat bodies;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial number of members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said hats and caps were made from new and unused materials or from hat bodies which were merely shop-worn and which had not been previously used, and with result, as consequence of such belief, that purchasing public was induced to, and did, purchase substantial quantities of their said hats and caps, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., a corporation, and Harry Samnick, Jacob Samnick, and Louis Reinken, individually and as officers of said Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. Respondents Harry Samnick, Jacob Samnick, and Louis Reinken, are individuals and are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, of respondent Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., and as such manage, control, and dominate its corporate affairs and activities. All of the respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices, and methods, hereinafter alleged. All have their offices and principal place of business at 124 Wooster Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of men's felt hats and caps of the character hereinafter set forth. Respondents cause their said products when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now and have been at all times referred to herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, also engaged in the sale and distribution of men's hats and caps in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents buy old, worn, and previously used hat bodies, which are cleaned, steamed, ironed, and shaped by respondents and in some instances fitted with new trimmings, sweat bands, linings, and size labels. Such hats are then sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers who in turn sell said products to the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid old, worn and previously used hat bodies, after having been reconditioned and refitted as aforesaid, have the appearance of new hats and caps, and said hats and caps are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers without any marking or designation stamped thereon to indicate to the purchasing public that said hats and caps were manufactured from old, worn, and previously used hat bodies and other materials. Said hats and caps are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that said hats and caps are manufactured from old felt hat bodies and other materials which have been previously worn, and under such circumstances as to indicate that said hats and caps are in fact new hats and caps.

Respondents also cause to be stamped or imprinted in said hats and caps the legend "DeLuxe Quality" and other legends of similar import, and in connection with and in proximity to such legends, the respondents also cause to be placed in said hats and caps in inconspicuous and illegible type the further legend "Made Over."

It is the practice of various manufacturers of hats and caps to manufacture finished hats and caps from perviously used hat bodies and from felt hat bodies obtained from new but shop-worn hats, as well as from newly manufactured materials. Shop-worn hats are new hats which have been reclaimed from merchants' shelves by said hat and cap manufacturers and which have never been used or worn. Said shop-worn hats are cleaned, steamed and renovated by said hat manufacturers in practically the same manner as hats made from old previously used hat bodies.

The use by respondents of the mere term, "Made Over," to designate their said hats and caps, is wholly insufficient to apprise prospective purchasers of the fact that such hats and caps are made from old, worn, and previously used hat bodies, rather than from shop-worn hats which have never been worn or used.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the acts and practices above set forth has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said hats and caps are manufactured from new and unused materials or from hat bodies which are merely shopworn and which have not been previously used. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

In consequence thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products, and thereby substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 15th day of December 1939, issued and thereafter served its amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., a corporation, and Harry Samnick, Jacob Samnick, and Louis Reinken, individually and as officers of Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 5, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer respondents admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of

Findings

New York. Respondents Harry Samnick, Jacob Samnick, and Louis Reinken, are individuals and are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, of respondent Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., and as such manage, control, and dominate its corporate affairs and activities. All of the respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts, practices and methods hereinafter alleged. All have their offices and principal place of business at 124 Wooster Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of men's felt hats and caps of the character hereinafter set forth. Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now and have been at all times referred to herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, also engaged in the sale and distribution of men's hats and caps in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents buy old, worn, and previously used hat bodies, which are cleaned, steamed, ironed, and shaped by respondents and in some instances fitted with new trimmings, sweat bands, linings, and size labels. Such hats are then sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers who in turn sell said products to the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid old, worn and previously used hat bodies, after having been reconditioned and refitted as aforesaid, have the appearance of new hats and caps, and said hats and caps are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers and retail dealers without any marking or designation stamped thereon to indicate to the purchasing public that said hats and caps were manufactured from old, worn, and previously used hat bodies and other materials. Said hats and caps are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that said hats and caps are manufactured from old felt hat bodies and other materials which have been previously worn, and under such circumstances as to indicate that said hats and caps are in fact new hats and caps.

Respondents also cause to be stamped or imprinted in said hats and caps the legend "DeLuxe Quality" and other legends of similar import, and in connection with and in proximity to such legends, the respondents also cause to be placed in said hats and caps in inconspicuous and illegible type the further legend "Made Over."

It is the practice of various manufacturers of hats and caps to manufacture finished hats and caps from previously used hat bodies and from felt hat bodies obtained from new but shop-worn hats, as well as from newly manufactured materials. Shop-worn hats are new hats which have been reclaimed from merchants' shelves by said hat and cap manufacturers and which have never been used or worn. Said shop-worn hats are cleaned, steamed, and renovated by said hat manufacturers in practically the same manner as hats made from old, previously used, hat bodies.

The use by respondents of the mere term, "Made Over," to designate their said hats and caps, is wholly insufficient to apprise prospective purchasers of the fact that such hats and caps are made from old, worn, and previously used hat bodies, rather than from shop-worn hats which have never been worn or used.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the acts and practices above set forth has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said hats and caps are manufactured from new and unused materials or from hat bodies which are merely shop-worn and which have not been previously used. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

In consequence thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products, and thereby substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended and supplemental complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Manhattan Hat Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, and Harry Samnick, Jacob Samnick, and Louis Reinken, individually and as officers of said corporation, respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of hats and caps in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that hats or caps composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials by failure to stamp on the sweat bands thereof, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the sweat bands, a statement that said products are composed of second-hand or used materials, provided that if sweat bands are not affixed to such hats or caps then such stamping must appear on the bodies of such hats or caps in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating said bodies.

2. Representing in any manner that hats or caps made in whole or in part from old, used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3408. Complaint, May 6, 1938—Decision, May 28, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in milling and selling feed for animals, including its "Victor Chick Pellets" chicken feed, to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including those who make, sell, and distribute similar products in commerce as aforesaid and do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective goods—

(a) Represented, through advertisements in newspapers, farm papers, and by radio broadcasts that its said pellets would grow chicks faster, healthier, and cheaper with less likelihood of disease or death than any other feed, regardless of price, and that chicks fed therewith reached the egg-laying period in 4 weeks' less time than those fed mash feed and lay invariably at the age of 5 months, and that said pellets cost less and excel all other feeds, regardless of price;

Facts being that use of such pellets, compared with those of other feeds of same general formula, kind, and quality, would not grow chicks faster, healthier, or more cheaply than other feeds, and use thereof, compared with other comparable feeds, as aforesaid, would not reduce costs substantially nor lessen mortality rate, and said pellets, subject to aforesaid qualification, did not exceed all other feeds nor assure one of greater poultry profits, and they were not the only feed which was properly digested by chicks, and said pellets would not cause chickens to produce eggs within any definite time or period earlier than chicks fed other feeds of similar composition; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that any other feed that did not contain kiln-dried corn was dangerous to the health and life of chicks, and that said pellets would keep indefinitely, and that there was no possibility of any ingredient therein getting rancid or moldy and causing chick deaths;

Facts being corn other than kiln-dried is not dangerous and does not, absent an excess of moisture, become moldy, and said pellets would not keep indefinitely under all conditions or be free from rancidity or mold;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all said representations were true, and with result, as consequence of such belief, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its product, and trade was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of products intended and used for purpose for which it recommended its said feed, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products:

Held, That such acts and practices under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Complaint

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiners.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Perry, Van Pelt & Marti, of Lincoln, Nebr., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Crete Mills, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in this respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Crete Mills, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Nebraska, with its principal office at Crete, Nebr.

Respondent is engaged in the business of milling and selling feed for animals, including a chicken feed manufactured and sold under the trade name of "Victor Chick Pellets." Respondent causes said products when sold to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Nebraska to purchasers thereof at their various places of location in States of the United States other than the State of Nebraska and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and during all the times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said products so sold by it in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with persons, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of chick feeds and other milling products similar to those sold by the respondent in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course of its said business, as hereinabove described, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, respondent has made extravagant, deceptive, false, and misleading statements concerning the efficacy and effect of its products and the results that are achieved by using it as chick feed, by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines, and by printed pamphlets, letters, testimonials, and radio programs broadcast over the air. The following are examples of the many representations that are false and misleading:

Victor Chick Pellets will grow your chicks faster, healthier, and cheaper, than any other feed, regardless of price.

This year any feed that does not contain kiln dried corn, that is, artificially dried corn, and corn products, may kill your chicks, since last year's corn crop contained moisture in excess of the amount that it can carry safely in baby chick feeds.

Chicks fed Victor Chick Pellets reach the egg-laying stage in four weeks less time than those fed mash feed.

You save over 20% in your feed costs, lower your mortality rate and bring your pullets to the laying stage in four weeks less time by feeding the modern, economical feed—Victor Chick Pellets.

Why not use the feed that will shorten the period to profits from your poultry by four weeks and feed Victor Chick Pellets? From every angle, increased growth, cleanliness, economy, lower mortality, less disease, Victor Chick Pellets excel all other feeds regardless of price.

One of the many advantages of the modern chick feed—Victor Chick Pellets—is that chick feed in pellet form will keep indefinitely. There is no possibility of any ingredient in the feed getting rancid, or mouldy, causing chick deaths, nor will any of the ingredients lose their feeding value through deterioration.

Victor Chick Pellets will invariably insure eggs in 5 months—and you'll get more eggs and better quality eggs. That's because Victor Chick Pellets contain the 19 ingredients vital to chick health, growth and vitality.

19 prescribed ingredients that will insure eggs in 5 months.

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in the respondent's advertising literature and in broadcasts of its radio programs, purport to be descriptive of respondent's product and of its efficacy in use as a chick feed. In all of its advertising literature, its radio broadcasts, and through other means, respondent represents through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect (1) that Victor Chick Pellets will grow chicks faster, healthier, cheaper, with less liability to disease or death than any other feed regardless of price; (2) that any other feed that does not contain kiln-dried corn is dangerous to health and life of chicks; (3) that chicks which are fed Victor Chick Pellets reach the egg-laying period in 4 weeks' less time than those fed mash feed; (4) that Victor Chick Pellets will keep indefinitely; (5) that there is no possibility of any ingredient in the feed getting rancid or moldy, causing chick deaths; (6) that pullets fed upon respondent's product will invariably lay eggs at the age of 5 months; (7) that Victor Chick Pellets cost less and excel all other feeds regardless of price.

PAR. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the efficacy and effect of its product are false, deceptive, misleading, and grossly exaggerated.

In truth and in fact Victor Chick Pellets will not grow chicks faster, healthier, or cheaper nor with less liability to disease or death than any other feed regardless of price. Chicks which are fed Victor Chick Pellets do not reach the egg-laying period in 4 weeks' less time than those chicks fed mash feed, nor will they invariably lay eggs at the age of 5 months. Other feeds which do not contain kiln-dried corn are not necessarily dangerous to chicks. Respondent's product will not keep indefinitely. It will get rancid and moldy under precisely the same conditions which would cause any chick feed in pellet form to become rancid and moldy. Many other types of chick feed are as good as respondent's product and cost no more.

PAR. 5. The false and misleading representations used by the respondent, as set forth herein, in connection with the sale of its product, have the capacity to and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said representations are true and that said product will accomplish the results claimed. As a direct consequence of the false, deceptive, and misleading representations of the respondent and the erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced thereby, as herein set out, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial quantity of respondent's product, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly from competitors engaged in the business of distributing or selling other products designed for similar use, who truthfully advertise and represent the efficacy and effect of their respective products and the result that may be expected to obtain from the use thereof. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 6, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Crete Mills, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Robert Van Pelt, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas and Arthur F. Thomas, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief or requested oral argument); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Crete Mills, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Nebraska, with its office and principal place of business located at Crete, Nebr., and is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of milling and selling feed for animals, including chicken feed manufactured and sold under the trade name of "Victor Chick Pellets," and has caused its said product when sold to be transported from its place of business in the city of Crete, State of Nebraska, to purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of Nebraska. It maintains a course of trade in commerce in said products among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There are competitors of the respondent who manufacture, sell, and distribute products similar to those of respondent among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as set out in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of inducing members of the public to purchase its said product, respondent has caused and causes advertising to be published in newspapers, farm papers, and by radio broadcasts, in which it represents that:

(a) Victor Chick Pellets will grow chicks faster, healthier, and cheaper with less likelihood of disease or death than any other feed regardless of price;

(b) Any other feed that does not contain kiln-dried corn is dangerous to the health and life of chicks;

1308

Conclusion

- (c) Chicks which are fed Victor Chick Pellets reach the egg-laying period in 4 weeks' less time than those fed mash feed;
- (d) Victor Chick Pellets will keep indefinitely;
- (e) There is no possibility of any ingredient in the feed getting rancid or moldy, causing chick deaths;
- (f) Pullets fed upon respondent's product will invariably lay eggs at the age of 5 months;
- (g) Victor Chick Pellets cost less and excel all other feeds, regardless of price.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that the use of Victor Chick Pellets, when compared with pellets of other feeds of the same general formula, kind, and quality, will not grow chicks faster, healthier, or cheaper than other feeds; other than kiln-dried corn is not dangerous and does not become moldy unless it contains an excess of moisture; as compared with other feeds of the same general formula, kind, and quality, the use of Victor Chick Pellets will not reduce feeds costs substantially nor lessen the mortality rate of chicks; as compared with other feeds of the same general formula, kind, and quality, Victor Chick Pellets do not excel all other feeds nor is one assured of greater poultry profits by feeding same; Victor Chick Pellets will not keep indefinitely under all conditions or be free from rancidity or mold; Victor Chick Pellets is not the only feed which is properly digested by chicks nor will it cause chickens to produce eggs within any definite time or period earlier than chicks fed other feeds of similar composition.

PAR. 4. The Commission further finds that the statements and representations made by the respondent in its advertising matter and radio broadcasts concerning the benefits to be derived from respondent's product, Victor Chick Pellets, as herein set forth, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all said representations are true. As a result of this erroneous belief, a number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's product, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States products intended and used for the purpose for which respondent recommends its said product, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and Arthur F. Thomas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, brief on behalf of the Commission filed herein (respondent not having filed brief or requested oral argument), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Crete Mills, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its chicken feed now known as "Victor Chick Pellets," or any other chicken feed containing substantially similar ingredients, whether sold under that name or any other name, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by inference, that:

1. Said product will grow chicks faster, healthier, cheaper, and with less likelihood of disease or death than any other feed, regardless of price.
2. Any feed containing corn other than kiln-dried is dangerous to the health and life of chicks.
3. Chicks which are fed said product reach the egg-laying period in less time than those fed mash feed.
4. Said product will keep indefinitely.
5. There is no possibility of any ingredient in the feed getting rancid or moldy and causing chick deaths.
6. Pullets fed upon respondent's product will invariably lay eggs within any definite time or period earlier than chickens fed upon feeds of similar composition.
7. Said product costs less than other similar feeds, or that respondent's product excels all other feeds, regardless of price.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
MCDONNELL & SONS, INC.COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3907. Complaint, Oct. 4, 1939—Decision, May 28, 1940*

Where a corporation engaged in sale of grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums, and in installation thereof in cemeteries, and in thus selling its said products direct to owners of cemetery lots in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in active competition with others engaged in sale of similar products in commerce, as aforesaid, among practically all the States—

Represented, through catalogs and advertising matter to which it gave wide distribution in various States, that sales of such markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums were made by it direct from quarry to cemetery and that it designed, manufactured, and erected memorials in any cemetery in the United States, and was one of the few erectors of monuments and memorials which owned quarries and a manufacturing plant at Barre, Vt., and made sales direct to cemetery lot owners, and that it was operating its quarry and finishing plant and that all work turned out by it was manufactured and finished by craftsmen in the plant and shops which it operated, and that its quarrying and manufacturing facilities placed it in a position to execute the highest grade of memorial work at the lowest possible cost, and illustrated its catalog and advertising with apparent pictures of the plant in active operation and men at work in its quarry;

Facts being that, while business in question had been established over 80 years ago by grandfather of president of said corporation, and continuously carried on in family since that time, and said corporation did own a granite quarry and fully equipped plant at Barre, suitable for the finishing of granite parts for grave markers, and maintained an office in the plant building, in charge of the corporate vice president and treasurer, under whose direct supervision work produced for it as below set forth was gotten out, no granite had been produced from said quarry nor the finishing plant operated for some 5 or 6 years or more last past, and granite parts for grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums sold by it were produced for it by proprietors of finishing plants other than that owned by it, as aforesaid, and from another quarry, or quarries, and, while catalogs and other advertising aforesaid were gotten out when it was producing granite from its own quarries and operating its factory and finishing plant at Barre, it continued to distribute from supply thereof remaining, after discontinuance of operation, such catalogs and advertising to prospective customers in the various States, and reprints thereof after exhaustion of original supply;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasing public, through representations that it was selling direct from quarry to cemetery and was prepared to render complete service in sale of its said grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums, many purchasers of which products have preference for buying same directly from the quarry and the

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that McDonnell & Sons, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, McDonnell & Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 858-860 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent, McDonnell & Sons, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of said grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof, makes certain representations in its catalogs, pamphlets, advertising literature, and otherwise, of which the following are typical examples;

1315

Direct from Quarry to Cemetery.

We design, manufacture and erect memorials complete in any cemetery in the United States. * * *

In one of its pamphlets appear illustrations of respondent's marble quarry and finishing plant situated at Barre, Vt., which illustrations create the impression of said quarry and finishing plant being in active operation. Other representations made in said advertising literature are to the effect that—

McDonnell & Sons are one of the few erectors of monuments and memorials owning quarries and a manufacturing plant at Barre, Vt. and selling direct to the cemetery lot owner. All work is finished in the firm's plant at Barre, Vt., and shipped direct to all parts of the United States. * * *

Manufactured by craftsmen at the McDonnell finishing plant and shops * * *. All work is finished in the firm's plant at Barre, Vt.

Our quarrying and manufacturing facilities place us in a position to execute the highest grade of memorial work at the lowest possible cost, and our setters are men of ability and experience. * * *

PAR. 4. All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to represent to the purchasing public that the material used in respondent's grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums is secured from the quarry owned by respondent; that all monuments or memorials are sold direct from respondent's quarry to the ultimate consumer; that the completing and finishing of all work is performed in respondent's own finishing plant at Barre, Vt., and shipped direct from said plant to the purchasers thereof. Respondent further represents and implies that all of the several steps in the manufacture of monuments and memorials from the time the marble is quarried from respondent's quarry until the delivery of the finished product to the ultimate purchaser are taken exclusively in respondent's own quarry and finishing plant.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, said statements and representations were and are false and misleading. While it is true that the respondent owns a quarry and a finishing plant at Barre, Vt., said quarry has not been in operation since the year 1928 and said finishing plant has not been in operation since the year 1932. In truth and in fact, all of respondent's supply of marble is purchased from other quarries and all work is finished by other independent manufacturers and finishing plants.

PAR. 6. Many purchasers of grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums show a preference for products which may be purchased directly from the quarrier and manufacturer in the belief that in so purchasing they may have the advantage of cheaper prices and the benefit of services which would not be available if said purchases would have to be made through middlemen or wholesalers. The respondent by representing to the purchasing public that it is selling its products direct from quarry to cemetery and rendering one complete service leads the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that it in fact furnished the material for said products from its own quarry and completes the manufacture in its own finishing plant.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations hereinabove set forth in selling said grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums had, and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into buying said grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums in the erroneous beliefs that such representations are true and that respondent is in fact using marble from its own quarry and manufacturing and finishing its products in its own finishing plant.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 4, 1939, issued its complaint in the above-entitled proceeding and caused same to be served upon the respondent, McDonnell & Sons, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by said respondent, William C. Reeves, an examiner for said Commission, was designated and appointed to take testimony and to receive evidence in said proceeding, and, pursuant thereto, a hearing was held at Buffalo, N. Y., on November 13, 1939, at which hearing testimony was introduced and evidence received in support of the charges stated in the complaint at the instance of William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Thomas C. Burke, and Charles S. Desmond, of the firm of Burke & Desmond, of Buffalo, N. Y., which testimony was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint and answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs by counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent and the oral argument of the respective counsel and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, McDonnell & Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, with principal places of business at Buffalo in said State and at Barre, in the State of Vermont. It is engaged in the business of the sale of grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums, and the installation of same, in cemeteries in various States of the United States. Such sales are made by respondent direct to owners of lots in cemeteries. Respondent causes the markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums sold by it to be transported, when sold, from Barre in the State of Vermont, or from Buffalo, in the State of New York, through and into various other States of the United States and into the District of Columbia to the respective purchasers thereof, and in the course and conduct of its said business respondent has been, and is now, in active competition with various persons and partnerships and other corporations also engaged in the sale of similar grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums in commerce among practically all of the States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The business conducted by the respondent was established about 82 years ago by the grandfather of the president of the respondent, and at all times since it was established, such business has been carried on first by the original proprietor and since his death by his descendants, and all the capital stock of the respondent has been owned by descendants of such original proprietor, except that the widow of one of such descendants was active in the business as an officer and stockholder for a number of years after the death of her husband. The main sales office of the respondent is located at Buffalo, N. Y. It owns a granite quarry, consisting of a 40-acre tract of land at Barre, Vt. It also owns a fully equipped plant located on a 4-acre tract of land at Barre, Vt., which plant is suitable for the finishing of granite parts of grave markers. No granite has been produced from such quarry since about 1931, and the finishing plant has not been operated since 1932, but respondent maintains an office in the plant building, which office is in charge of the vice president and treasurer of respondent. Since 1932 granite parts for grave markers monuments, memorials, and mausoleums sold by respondent have been produced for respondent by proprietors of finishing plants other than that owned by respondent and from granite taken from the quarry operated by the firm of Wetmore & Morse, at Barre, Vt., except in a small number of instances in which the customer specified that the granite from another quarry be used, but in all instances the work produced for respondent by others has been gotten out under the direct supervision of the vice president and treasurer of respondent, located at its office at Barre, Vt.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, as set out in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, for the purpose of inducing members of the public to purchase the grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums, offered for sale and sold by it made use of catalogs and advertising matter which it gave wide distribution in various States which catalogs and advertising matter contained representations to the effect that sales of such markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums were made by respondent direct from quarry to cemetery; that respondent designed, manufactured, and erected memorials in any cemetery in the United States; that respondent was one of the few erectors of monuments and memorials which owned quarries and a manufacturing plant at Barre, Vt., and made sales direct to the cemetery lot owners; that respondent was operating its quarry and finishing plant and that all work turned out by it was manufactured and finished by craftsmen in the plant and shops operated by respondent; that the quarrying and manufacturing facilities of respondent placed it in a position to execute the highest grade of memorial work at the lowest possible cost. The catalogs and advertising were illustrated by what would appear to be pictures of the plant in active operation and with men at work at its quarry. At the time the original of these catalogs and pieces of advertising matter was gotten out by respondent, it was then producing granite from its own quarries and was operating its factory and finishing plant at Barre, Vt., but when such operations were discontinued by respondent it had on hand a supply of such catalogs and advertising matter which it continued to distribute to prospective customers in various States of the United States and when that supply was exhausted it had made reprints of same and continued their distribution.

PAR. 4. Many purchasers of grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums have a preference for such grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums which may be purchased directly from the quarrier and manufacturer in the belief that in so purchasing they may have an advantage of lower prices and the benefit of services which would not be available when purchases are made through middlemen or wholesalers. The representations made by respondent to the purchasing public to the effect that it has been selling grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums direct from quarry to cemetery and was prepared to render one complete service, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public and to cause members of the public to purchase grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums from respondent in the mistaken belief that such grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums had been made from granite produced from a quarry operated by respondent and had been finished in a plant operated by respondent, and as a result trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from its competitors in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Order

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, and the statements and representations made by it, as herein set forth, have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and to the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Thomas C. Burke, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, McDonnell & Sons, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of granite grave markers, monuments, memorials, and mausoleums in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

30 F. T. C.

Representing that products which are not made from granite obtained from a quarry owned by the respondent, are sold direct from the quarry to the ultimate purchaser; or that the granite from which such products are made is produced in a quarry owned and operated by the respondent; or that products which are not manufactured and finished in a plant owned, operated, or controlled by the respondent, are made or manufactured by the respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4049. Complaint, Mar. 6, 1940—Decision, May 28, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment," to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements thereof which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce, and by other means, and which were intended or likely to induce purchase of its said products—
Represented, directly and by implication, that said products possessed remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and with respect to those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples and with skin rashes, outbreaks, and itches, including foot and toe itches and skin itches generally, and that they possessed therapeutic properties of value in the treatment of said various ailments and conditions, in excess of temporary relief from itching symptom associated therewith, and were adopted by and used in many hospitals and also by many doctors;

Facts being they did not possess any remedial, curative, or healing properties for aforesaid ailments and conditions, nor possess any therapeutic properties of beneficial value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptom of itching usually associated with or accompanying said diseases or disorders, by virtue of the emollient and astringent properties which they possessed and which might serve, at most, as palliatives for such temporary relief, and they had not been adopted by hospitals or doctors generally, and were not generally thus used, and representations used and disseminated by it as above set forth were grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, and constituted false advertisements;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and into purchase of its said medicinal preparations as result of such statements, representations, and advertisements;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Hydrosal Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated

Complaint

the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Hydrosal Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 333 East Eighth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing two medicinal preparations known as "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment." In the course and conduct of its business, respondent causes said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent had disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Hydrosal has now become the favorite aid of thousands who formerly suffered from the itching and burning of eczema, dry, itching skin, piles, cracked, itching toes, surface pimples and other externally caused irritations.

Promotes healing.

First adopted by many doctors in hospitals.

It has aided thousands who formerly suffered from itching, burning eczema, itching skin and other externally caused skin irritations.

SURFACE PIMPLES. Thousands now clearing them with the aluminum ointment.

Tests in many hospitals show its remarkable power in clearing surface pimples and other externally caused skin irritations.

If you suffer from eczema, rash and other externally caused skin irritations, try the ointment used by many doctors and hospitals.

Thousands say Hydrosal brings amazingly fast, thorough relief.

Romance faded because her face was disfigured with ugly pimples. When they disappeared after applying Hydrosal, she knew they were only external.

Itching stops quickly. (Accompanied by illustrations of face, hand and foot, and the phrase, "Skin outbreaks, rashes * * * eczema, foot itch * * *")

Hydrosal a veritable blessing for relief of rashes, eczema, athlete's foot, pimples, poison ivy. Itching stops quickly, smarting, burning disappear, angry redness vanishes.

STOPS ITCHING FACE. (Accompanied by illustration upon which is superimposed the phrase "Skin outbreaks, rashes, eczema.")

PAR. 3. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and through the use of other statements and representations similar thereto but not specifically set forth herein, the respondent represents, directly and by implication, that the preparations designated "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment" possess remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, and poison ivy and with respect to those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples and with skin rashes, outbreaks, and itches, including foot and toe itches and skin itches generally; that said preparations possess therapeutic properties of value in the treatment of eczema, piles, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and of those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples and with skin rashes, outbreaks, and itches, including foot and toe itches and skin itches generally, in excess of temporarily relieving the itching symptom associated therewith, and that said preparations were adopted by and used in many hospitals and also by many doctors.

The representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, and constitute false advertisements. The preparations designated as "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment" do not possess any remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, or poison ivy, or for those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples or with skin rashes, outbreaks, or itches. Said preparations do not possess any therapeutic properties of beneficial value in the treatment of such diseases or disorders and possess no therapeutic value in connection therewith in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptom of itching usually associated with or accompanying said diseases or disorders. Said preparations possess emollient and astringent properties which may serve at most as palliatives to temporarily relieve itching but possess no other therapeutic value. Respondent's said preparations have not been adopted by hospitals or doctors generally and are not generally used in hospitals or by doctors.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing deceptive and misleading statements and representations and false advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and into the purchase of respondent's medicinal preparations as a result of such statements, representations and advertisements.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 6, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Hydrosal Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 11, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Hydrosal Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 333 East Eighth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing two medicinal preparations known as "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment." In the course and conduct of its business, respondent causes said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Hydrosal has now become the favorite aid of thousands who formerly suffered from the itching and burning of eczema, dry, itching skin, piles, cracked, itching toes, surface pimples and other externally caused irritations.

Promotes healing.

First adopted by many doctors in hospitals.

It has aided thousands who formerly suffered from itching, burning eczema, itching skin and other externally caused skin irritations.

Surface pimples. Thousands now clearing them with the aluminum ointment.

Tests in many hospitals show its remarkable power in clearing surface pimples and other externally caused skin irritations.

If you suffer from eczema, rash and other externally caused skin irritations, try the ointment used by many doctors and hospitals.

Thousands say Hydrosal brings amazingly fast, thorough relief.

Romance faded because her face was disfigured with ugly pimples. When they disappeared after applying Hydrosal, she knew they were only external.

Itching stops quickly. (Accompanied by illustrations of face, hand and foot, and the phrase, "Skin outbreaks, rashes * * * eczema, foot itch * * *").

Hydrosal a veritable blessing for relief of rashes, eczema, athlete's foot, pimples, poison ivy. Itching stops quickly, smarting, burning disappear, angry redness vanishes.

Findings

30 F. T. C.

Stops Itching Face. (Accompanied by illustration upon which is superimposed the phrase "Skin outbreaks, rashes, eczema.")

PAR. 3. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and through the use of other statements and representations similar thereto but not specifically set forth herein, the respondent represents, directly and by implication, that the preparations designated "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment" possess remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, and poison ivy and with respect to those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples and with skin rashes, outbreaks, and itches, including foot and toe itches and skin itches generally; that said preparations possess therapeutic properties of value in the treatment of eczema, piles, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and of those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples and with skin rashes, outbreaks, and itches, including foot and toe itches and skin itches generally, in excess of temporarily relieving the itching symptom associated therewith, and that said preparations were adopted by and used in many hospitals and also by many doctors.

The representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, and constitute false advertisements. The preparations designated as "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment" do not possess any remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, or poison ivy, or for those disorders characterized by or associated with pimples or with skin rashes, outbreaks, or itches. Said preparations do not possess any therapeutic properties of beneficial value in the treatments of such diseases or disorders and possess no therapeutic value in connection therewith in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptom of itching usually associated with or accompanying said diseases or disorders. Said preparations possess emollient and astringent properties which may serve at most as palliatives to temporarily relieve itching but possess no other therapeutic value. Respondent's said preparations have not been adopted by hospitals or doctors generally and are not generally used in hospitals or by doctors.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing deceptive and misleading statements and representations and false advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and into the purchase of respondent's medicinal preparations as a result of such statements, representations, and advertisements.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Hydrosal Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's medicinal preparations now designated "Hydrosal Liquid" and "Hydrosal Ointment," or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same names or any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of said preparations, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication, that respondent's said preparations possess any remedial, curative, or healing properties with respect to eczema, piles, athlete's foot, poison ivy, or disorders characterized by or associated with pimples, skin outbreaks, or itches; or that said preparations possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptom of itching usually accompanying or associated with such disorders; or that said preparations are in general use by the medical profession or hospitals.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3785. Complaint, May 9, 1939—Decision, May 29, 1940

Where a corporation, engaged along with an affiliate, in sale and distribution in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction concerning Diesel engines and other trade subjects, conducted in whole or in part by correspondence, to various purchasers in other States and in said District, in active and substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar courses of study and of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students for various positions, employments, trades, callings, and professions and conducted in whole or in part by correspondence—

- (a) Represented to prospective and potential students that it would make available employment with good pay to those students who completed its courses, through such statements in advertisements as "Wanted: Diesel Operators—Installation, Sales, Service, Trouble Shooters, Engineering, All Departments, to Train Immediately for Jobs," and "Become a Diesel Expert—Mechanically minded men of good character to prepare for service in this vast new industry. Our aim—a job for every graduate. Day, evening and home study, with practical shop work at one of our completely equipped institutes. Many students now in splendid, well paying positions," and through sales representatives, and in effect that courses of study offered by it, if diligently pursued by student of average ability, were such that they would enable such student, without other experience or training, to become qualified as a Diesel engine expert, operator, or skilled workman on Diesel engines;

Facts being it merely had instructions courses for sale, had no regular full- or part-time work to offer to prospective students or students who completed its courses, did not obtain employment for any student who was a graduate of its school but failed, in many instances, to be of any assistance to its graduates when requested to do so, and its said courses were not such as would qualify a student of average ability, as aforesaid, and without other experience or training, as a Diesel engineer, etc.;

- (b) Represented, through its advertisements and sales representatives, that its offer of training was made only to a limited number of students in any given territory and to persons having special qualifications for carrying on courses of study offered by it, facts being its offers were made to general public and all students who could pay the price of the course or installments thereon were accepted; and
- (c) Represented, through its advertisements and sales representatives, that classes including shop training with Diesel engines and machinery installed in its buildings, would be held in various localities other than that in which it had its principal office and place of business and under competent instructors, facts being that no such training was offered at other points and such instruction as was advertised at said point was of little value and not given by instructors of competence;

With result that a substantial number of prospective students believed said representations to be true and in reliance thereon, were thereby induced to purchase its said courses of instruction, and many competitors in interstate commerce in educational field of instruction in Diesel engineering and who do not make use of unfair representations in aforesaid and other trade subjects, and of methods of advertising similar to those employed by it, were injured by unfair method thus employed by it, and substantial number of students, believing said representations to be true and in reliance thereon, enrolled for said courses, with effect of thereby diverting business unfairly to it from competitors aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that New York Diesel Institution, Inc., a corporation, and Henry M. Kramrath, John L. Snider, Everett K. Pangburn, Richard B. Cornell, Frank F. Hayward, individually and as officers of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are violating the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business at 47 Rector Street, city of Newark, State of New Jersey. Respondent Henry M. Kramrath is the president of said corporation, said John L. Snider is its vice president, said Everett K. Pangburn is its treasurer, said Richard B. Cornell is its national sales manager, and said Frank F. Hayward is manager thereof. Their office addresses are the same as that of said corporate respondent. Said individual respondents are and have been in active charge of the business of said corporate respondent and control and direct its acts, practices, and policies.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent New York Diesel Institution, Inc., is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of courses of study and instruction concerning Diesel engines, air-conditioning and other trade subjects, which said courses of study and instruction are pursued in whole or in part by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Said respondent corporation operates and has for some time past operated resident and correspondence schools at Newark, N. J., and Albany, N. Y., for which it solicits students through agents and advertisements in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent corporation in the course and conduct of its said business caused and now causes its said courses of study and instruction to be transported from its said place of business in Newark, N. J., to, into and through States of the United States other than New Jersey to various purchasers thereof in such other States and in the District of Columbia. During the time mentioned herein, the respondent New York Diesel Institution, Inc., has been in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals located in various States of the United States engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction concerning Diesel engines, air-conditioning and other trade subjects, and also of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for various positions, employments, trades, callings, and professions, all of which are pursued in whole or in part by correspondence.

PAR. 3. Respondents in the solicitation of students to enroll in their said courses have made many misleading representations to the effect that they have jobs to offer instead of being engaged merely in the business of giving instruction as previously mentioned. One such representation has been made by the use of advertisements under the heading: "Wanted: Diesel Operators" or similar headings or by the use of so-called blind advertisements which do not give the name of the advertiser or clearly indicate the nature of the business in which the advertiser is engaged, give only a box number in care of the paper in which the advertisement appears, and also by use of obscure wording of the advertisements by means of which an offer of employment is implied. An example of an advertisement so used by said respondent corporation is the following:

WANTED: DIESEL OPERATORS

Installation, Sales, Service, Trouble Shooters, Engineering, All Departments, to Train Immediately for Jobs.

BECOME A DIESEL EXPERT

Mechanically minded men of good character, to prepare for service in this vast new industry. Our aim—a job for every graduate. Day, evening and home study, with practical shop work at one of our completely equipped institutes. Many students now in splendid, well paying positions. Low tuition with small monthly payments. ## NEW YORK DIESEL INST., INC.

Albany, N. Y., Newark, N. J., and Boston, Mass.

Respondent, through its sales representatives, further represents that employment is available with good pay and promises and has promised for some time last past to secure and aid in securing said employment for its graduates. That a job is offered the prospective student at the completion of his training is further implied by the information requested on a questionnaire used by respondent for enrolling students, much of which has no special bearing upon the applicant's specifications to take the courses offered. Among the inquiries made in said questionnaire are the following:

Are you willing to accept work in a foreign country?

Have you ever handled crews?

If you qualify for this enrollment are you willing to allow this institution to use your name as a representation in your district when you are employed in the Diesel Industry?

In truth and in fact, respondents merely have instruction courses for sale and have no regular full or part-time work to offer to prospective students or to students who complete their courses.

PAR. 4. Respondents, by use of said advertisements and by other statements of like effect in advertisements, or by salesmen, represent that their offers to enroll students for training are made to a limited number from a community or to persons having special qualifications, or that such offers are otherwise limited to students capable of carrying on the training successfully to the end that graduates will be a credit to the industry. Examples of statements to this effect are the following:

For the protection of the Institution and the student the Institution reserves the right to request the return of all lessons, binders, or any school materials in his possession and to refund all moneys, less entrance fee, to the student if the school decides that the student is not capable of carrying on this training successfully. It is the purpose of the Institution to graduate only those who will be a credit to the industry.

In truth and in fact, respondents' offers are not made only to a limited number and no special selection of students is made by respondents. Solicitation and acceptance of students are limited generally speaking only by the number of prospects available.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. Respondents, through advertising matter concerning their courses of instruction and through their sales representatives in selling said courses, make and have made for some time last past many exaggerated and misleading statements and representations in regard to their schools to the effect that classes, including shop training with Diesel machinery installed for this purpose, would be held locally under competent instructors, thus enabling students to finish the entire course locally. Among such representations is the following: That respondents had already opened a school in Providence, R. I., and that the school would be fully equipped with appropriate machinery and able Diesel teachers.

In truth and in fact, the representations referred to are misleading in that they are greatly exaggerated and not accurate statements of the facts involved. Respondents do not hold classes locally, including shop training with Diesel machinery installed for this purpose, so as to enable students to finish their entire course locally. Respondents had not and have not opened a school, fully equipped with appropriate machinery and able Diesel teachers, at Providence, R. I.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing statements and representations and others similar thereto, in offering for sale and selling their courses of study and instruction in commerce as herein set out, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations as set out in paragraphs 3 to 5, inclusive, are true, and induces them to purchase such courses of study and instruction on account thereof. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of correspondence courses intended for preparing students thereof for various positions, employments, trades, callings, and professions, including courses of the same general kind as those offered by respondents.

There are among competitors of respondents those who, in the sale of their respective courses of study and instruction, do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent their courses of study and instruction or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondents' said practices as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The above acts and practices done by respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of competitors of respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 9th day of May 1939, issued its complaint against respondents New York Diesel Institution, Inc., a corporation, and Henry M. Kamrath, John L. Snider, Everett K. Pangburn, Richard B. Cornell, and Frank F. Hayward, individually and as officers of said corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and thereafter served its complaint upon the respondent New York Diesel Institution, Inc., a corporation. Complaint was not served upon the individual respondents and their whereabouts are to the Commission unknown.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answer on May 19, 1939, by respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Curtis Shears, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Bernard A. Green, attorney for the respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., before Randolph Preston, a duly appointed trial examiner of said Commission, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

On July 31, 1939, with the permission of the Commission, the answer first filed was withdrawn and an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint was filed by respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc. No answers were filed or appearances entered on behalf of the individual respondents herein.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission as to the respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint (said respondent not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., is now and for several years last past has been a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey with its principal office and place of business located at 47 Rector Street, in the city of Newark, State of New Jersey.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instructions concerning Diesel engines and other trade subjects, which said courses of study and instruction are conducted in whole or in part by correspondence through the medium of the United States Mails. Said respondent has had as an affiliate, for some time past, a similar school the New York Diesel Institution of Albany, N. Y., a separate corporation, which in July 1937, transferred its sales staff and student contracts to said respondent.

Prior to July 20, 1938, Henry M. Kramrath, John L. Snider, Everett K. Pangburn, Richard B. Cornell, and Frank F. Hayward were in active control of the management of said respondent but on November 10, 1938, Mr. W. D. Dawson, who is now president of respondent corporation, was placed in full charge of its affairs and continued in full charge up to date of the hearings in this proceeding.

Said respondent corporation, in the course and conduct of its business, has for some years past caused and now causes its courses of study and instruction to be transported from its place of business in Newark, N. J., to and through various States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey, to various purchasers thereof in such other States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. During the times mentioned herein, the respondent has been in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia engaged in the sale and distribution of courses of study concerning Diesel engines and other trade subjects, and also of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students for various positions, employments, trades, callings and professions, all of which are conducted in whole or in part by correspondence.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the soliciting of students to enroll in its said courses, has made many misleading representations to the general effect that it will procure jobs for students in addition to giving

NEW YORK DIESEL INSTITUTE, INC.

Albany, N. Y.

Newark, N. J.

Boston, Mass.

Respondent has never conducted any such school in Boston, Mass.

Said respondent, through the above advertisements and others of similar character and import, and also through its sales representatives, has represented to prospective and potential students that it will make available employment with good pay to those students who complete its courses. Respondents merely have instruction courses for sale, and have no regular full or part time work to offer to prospective students or to students who complete said courses, and respondent did not obtain employment for any student who was a graduate of its school, but failed in many instances to be of any assistance to its graduates when requested to do so.

PAR. 5. In addition to the misrepresentations made to prospective students by the respondent as aforesaid, the respondent represented through its advertisements and its sales representatives that its offer of training was made only to a limited number of students in any given territory, and to persons having special qualifications for carrying on the courses of study offered by respondent; whereas, in truth and in fact, respondent's offers were made to the general public, and all students who could pay the price of the course, or installments thereon, were accepted.

Respondent further represented through its advertisements and by its sales representatives, that classes including shop training with Diesel engines and machinery installed in its buildings would be held in various localities other than Newark, N. J., under competent instructors; whereas, in truth and in fact, no such training was offered other than at Newark, N. J., and the said instruction so afforded at this point was of little value and was not given by competent instructors.

PAR. 6. The courses of study offered by said respondent, if intelligently pursued by a student of average ability, are not such as will qualify said student, without other experience or training, as a Diesel engineer, expert operator or skilled workman on Diesel engines, in a Diesel factory or in the operation of a Diesel engine.

PAR. 7. A substantial number of prospective students believed the representations set out herein to be true and in reliance thereon were thereby induced to purchase said respondents' courses of instruction.

PAR. 8. Said respondent has had many competitors in interstate commerce in the educational field of instruction in Diesel engineering, who do not make use of unfair representations in Diesel engines and other trade subjects and methods of advertising similar to those employed by the respondent, and such competitors were and are injured by the unfair methods thus employed by said respondent and a substantial number of students, believing the aforesaid representations to be true and in reliance on said representations, have enrolled for said courses and business has thereby been unfairly diverted from said competitors to said respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the answer of respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., a corporation, in which answer said respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, New York Diesel Institution, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of courses of study concerning Diesel engines and other trade subjects and other courses of study and instruction intended to prepare students for various positions, employments, trades, callings, and professions, which are conducted in whole or in part by correspondence, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From representing directly, indirectly or by inference that employment is available with good pay to any student who completes one of its courses and that respondent will procure or aid in the procuring of said employment for students taking one of its courses of instruction.

2. From representing directly, indirectly or by inference to prospective students that its offer of training is made only to a limited number of students in any given territory and to persons having special qualifications for carrying on the courses of study offered by respondent.

3. From representing directly, indirectly or by inference that classes including ship training with Diesel engines and machinery installed in its buildings will be held in various localities other than Newark, N. J., under competent instructors.

4. From representing directly, indirectly or by inference that the courses of study offered by it, if diligently pursued by a student of average ability, are such that they will enable such student, without other experience or training, to become qualified as a Diesel engineer, expert, operator, or skilled workman on Diesel engines.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to Henry M. Kramrath, John L. Snider, Everett K. Pangburn, Richard B. Cornell and Frank F. Hayward, for the reason that the complaint and notice of hearings were not served upon said individual respondents because their whereabouts were unknown.

It is further ordered, That the respondent New York Diesel Institution, Inc., shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

UNITED STATES BUSINESS CARD COMPANY, UNITED STATES STATIONERY CORPORATION, LEWIS WEIS-MAN, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS INCOME RECORD PUBLISHING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3784. Complaint, May 6, 1939—Decision, May 31, 1940

Where two corporations, and an individual who was president and treasurer thereof and majority stockholders and director, and controlled sales policy and acts and practices of corporation still active as below set forth, engaged for a number of years in sale of stationery and business forms to buyers in the District of Columbia and in other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar products for similar purposes in commerce as aforesaid, and who neither misrepresent their goods as approved by the United States Government nor themselves as the world's largest manufacturers of business cards exclusively—

- (a) Represented that certain of their business forms were approved by the United States Government through placing thereon the phrase "U. S. Approved," facts being none of the forms sold by them was ever approved by or made according to the specifications of the Government or any agency thereof, and they were not sellers of merchandise approved by the United States Government, purchase of which many buyers prefer; and Where one of said corporations which, as aforesaid, subsequently became inactive—

- (b) Represented that it was the world's largest manufacturer of business cards exclusively, facts being neither it nor its successor made such cards exclusively during period of time concerned, and corporation in question was not world's largest manufacturer of such products during entire period of time involved;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and false belief that such representations were true and to induce number of said public to buy substantial quantity of said stationery and business forms which, lacking such belief, they would not purchase, and with result, as direct consequence of such belief, induced by representations as aforesaid, that number of said public were caused to buy substantial quantities of said products, and trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors aforesaid, who truthfully advertise their stationery and forms:

Held, That such acts and representations were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the United States Business Card Co., a corporation, United States Stationery Corporation, a corporation, and Lewis Weisman, individually and trading as Income Record Publishing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent United States Business Card Co. is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent United States Stationery Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey and having its office and principal place of business in the city of Elizabeth, State of New Jersey. Respondent Lewis Weisman is president and treasurer of both of said corporate respondents and directs and controls the sales policies and other acts and practices herein described of said corporate respondents. Respondent Lewis Weisman also does business under the firm name and style of Income Record Publishing Co., having his office and principal place of business in the city of Elizabeth, in the State of New Jersey. Respondents are now, and have been for a number of years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing stationery and business forms in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said stationery and business forms, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of the origin of the shipment thereof, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said stationery and business forms among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and during all the times mentioned herein have been, engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise. Among said competitors are many who truthfully advertise and represent their merchandise and who do not make any false and misleading statements and representations in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and selling their merchandise, have caused pamphlets, business forms, and other printed matter to be distributed among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. On certain of said business forms and other printed matter, respondents place or cause to be placed the term "U. S. Approved." The use of this term by the respondents in the matter aforesaid serves as a representation by respondents that their said business forms have been approved by the United States Government or an agency thereof. In truth and in fact said business forms of the respondents have not been approved by the United States Government or any agency thereof.

PAR. 4. There is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, a preference on the part of a substantial number of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia for merchandise, including business forms, which has been approved by the United States Government or an agency thereof because of their belief that such merchandise has been examined by representatives of the United States Government and has been found to be of good quality and material and desirable for use.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, United States Business Card Co., has distributed pamphlets and other printed matter among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia on which was printed the statement "World's Largest Manufacturers of Business Cards Exclusively." The use of this statement by said respondent in the manner aforesaid serves as a representation that said respondent is and was the world's largest manufacturer engaged exclusively in the manufacture of business cards. In truth and in fact the said respondent is not and was not the world's largest manufacturer engaged exclusively in the manufacture of business cards.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, in the manner aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondents' merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors who do not falsely represent their respective merchandise. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 6th day of May 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents United States Business Card Co., a corporation, United States Stationery Corporation, a corporation, and Lewis Weisman, individually and trading as Income Record Publishing Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by L. E. Creel, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by R. Robert Hochman, 233 Broadway, New York, N. Y., attorney for the respondents, before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent, Lewis Weisman, is an individual trading under the firm name and style of Income Record Publishing Co.

with office and principal place of business at Elizabeth, N. J. He is also president and treasurer of respondents' United States Business Card Co. and United States Stationery Corporation. The former of these is a New York Corporation, inactive since sometime in 1937, with office and principal place of business in the State and city of New York; the latter is a New Jersey corporation, successor to said New York corporation, with office and principal place of business at Elizabeth, N. J. Said Weisman, besides being president and treasurer of each corporation, owns a majority of its stock and directs and controls its sales policy and other acts and practices herein described.

PAR. 2. Respondents, excepting that the United States Business Card Co. became inactive in 1937, as aforesaid are, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the business of selling stationery and business forms to buyers in the District of Columbia and in States of the United States other than the States of New York and New Jersey, and of shipping and transporting the goods so sold from their said places of business into and through other States and said District and there delivering them to the buyers.

PAR. 3. Respondents are in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products used for similar purposes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States who neither misrepresent their goods as approved by the United States Government nor themselves to be "world's largest manufacturers of business cards exclusively."

PAR. 4. Respondents, in promoting the sale of goods in commerce as aforesaid, did, for several years prior to the early part of 1939, represent that certain of their business forms were approved by the United States Government by placing on said forms the phrase "U. S. Approved." The respondent United States Business Card Co. also represented that it was the world's largest manufacturer of business cards exclusively.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, none of the business forms sold by the respondents was ever approved by or made according to the specifications of the United States Government or any agency thereof. Neither the United States Business Card Co. nor its successor manufactured business cards exclusively during all the period of time in which it represented that it did manufacture business cards exclusively. The United States Business Card Co. was not the world's largest manufacturer of business cards during the entire period of time it represented that it was the world's largest manufacturer of such cards.

Order

PAR. 6. Many buyers prefer merchandise that has been approved by the United States Government.

PAR. 7. The false and misleading representations made by respondents, as set forth above, have had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and false belief that said representations are true, and to induce a number of the purchasing public to buy a substantial quantity of said stationery and business forms which they would not buy except for such erroneous and false belief. Further, said representations have the capacity and tendency, as a direct consequence of such erroneous false belief, induced by the representations of respondents as aforesaid, to cause a number of the purchasing public to buy substantial quantities of said stationery and business forms, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their said competitors who truthfully advertise and represent their stationery and business forms.

CONCLUSION

Said acts and representations of respondents Lewis Weisman, United States Business Card Co., and United States Stationery Corporation have been and are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents United States Business Card Co., a corporation; United States Stationery Corporation, a corporation; their officers, representatives, agents, and employees; and Lewis Weisman, individually and trading as Income Record Publishing Co.; his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of stationery and business forms in commerce, as

30 F. T. C.

“commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From representing that said products are approved by, or manufactured according to specifications of, the United States Government or any agency thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent United States Business Card Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of printed business cards in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From representing that it is the world’s largest manufacturer of business cards.

From representing that it is the world’s largest manufacturer which is engaged solely in the manufacture of business cards.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
SOUTHERN VITRIFIED PIPE ASSOCIATION ET AL.COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3863. Complaint, Aug. 8, 1939<sup>1</sup>—Decision, May 31, 1940*

Where nine corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe, and members of an association which included most of the manufacturers of said product located in that part of the United States lying east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, and who (1) sold product in question, important item in modern construction, sanitation, and community development and frequently bought and used by municipalities and by State and Federal governments for improvement of their own properties and by governmental emergency relief agencies, such as the Works Progress Administration of the United States Government, and other agencies dealing with the relief of unemployment and other results of the depression, direct to municipalities, counties, States and the Federal Government, and to dealers at the same prices, terms, and conditions of sale, and direct to large contractors, (2) had control of a large, valuable, and continuous trade and commerce among the several States in such product, large quantities of which they sold and shipped and caused to be transported and delivered to purchasers across State lines, and (3) were in a position, to the extent that they acted concertedly and cooperatively in the production and price of their products, both to dominate and manipulate the market in which Governmental agencies and unorganized consumers must buy such products in territory in which said manufacturers did business;

Acting concertedly and by agreements among themselves, and through their said association, as the case might be, and continuing, pursuant to agreement, understanding, and cooperation among themselves, acts, practices, and agreements which were in effect, mostly, during the period covered by the Code for the Industry under the National Industrial Recovery Act, and with intent of substantially suppressing and restricting competition as to price and otherwise in sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce among the several States where they did business—

- (a) Fixed and agreed among themselves on prices, terms, and conditions of sale to be quoted and collected for their products, and caused such prices, etc., to be filed with their said association and to be compiled and distributed among themselves and their customers, and agreed to and did adhere to such prices, etc., pending the filing of changes therein with association aforesaid;
- (b) Agreed among themselves that quotations and sales should be made upon a delivered basis only, with freight equalized from members' respective shipping points, so that cost of their products to any given buyer when delivered from any point was identical at any given destination, regardless of variations in freight from different places of production and shipment, and entered into agreement or understanding among themselves by which, despite differences in actual weights of vitrified clay sewer pipe, as produced and shipped by the various manufacturers, the weights to be used in the calculation of freight charges, freight equalizations, delivered price, and discounts, were made uniform, and agreed upon higher prices for delivery of their products by truck than when delivered by railroad, with intent and effect of discouraging truck delivery and preventing reductions below level of identical delivered prices calculated on a rail freight basis;

- (c) Refused, by united policy, to quote and sell to aforesaid Government purchasing agencies on an f. o. b. mill basis, and therein and thereby tended to and did deprive the Federal Government of opportunity to benefit from land grant and other special railroad rates to which it was lawfully entitled, and, in advance of submission and opening of sealed bids on Federal, State, and municipal projects requiring product aforesaid, exchanged among themselves prices which they intended to quote and prevented, in prices quoted, any divergence, and agreed with respective dealer customers as to prices to be quoted by latter in bidding on pipe for Works Progress Administration and other projects financed by the Government, with intent and effect of causing submission of identical bids by dealers aforesaid;
- (d) Made complaints to officers of their association to whom, along with committees and employees, they had delegated function of preventing deviation from price and other agreements herein concerned restricting competition among the members involved, of suspected deviations from the prices and terms agreed upon, and caused investigations to be made of such complaints, including examination of books and records of suspected offenders, and entered into discussions among themselves and with manufacturers suspected or charged with such deviations, with intent and effect of obtaining renewed adherence to agreements on prices and related matters, and made use of meetings of their association as occasion for discussing, making, amending, and renewing such agreements, and maintained committee thereof with intent and effect of preventing deviation from agreed prices by threats, argument, and propaganda, to the effect that such deviations would constitute violation of Federal laws against price discrimination and subject such deviators to corrective action by the Commission;
- (e) Agreed among themselves as to differentials in price to be charged on sales to dealers, as compared with those to building contractors, and thus agreed as to what concerns should be recognized as dealers and entitled to purchase at dealers' prices, terms and discounts;
- (f) Attempted, by interchange of information among themselves, to restrict production of vitrified clay sewer pipe to an amount that could be sold and shipped at the prices established and maintained by their aforesaid agreements, and, acting directly and in cooperation with their association, its officers and directors, collaborated with other trade associations of manufacturers of said product in other sections of the United States, with intent and effect of restraining price competition between member manufacturers concerned, selling into territory covered by some other association, and manufacturers in said territory selling into that covered by their own association; and
- (g) Employed certain organization, of which two general officers of their own association were part owners, as agency for putting into effect and carrying out above policy, rules, practices, and methods of competition;

With effect, as incident to and a necessary result of their agreed policy of making delivered prices only and of equalizing their agreed delivered prices by equalizing freight from various shipping points to any given destination, that they, manufacturers aforesaid, habitually and systematically demanded, charged, accepted, and received larger sums of money per unit of product from their customers located near their respective plants than from their customers located at greater distances, thereby forced nearby customers to pay more, while more distant customers were allowed to pay less to respective manufacturers herein involved, deprived their nearby customers of any price advantage by reason of their proximity to the place of production, and thereby habitually and systematically discriminated in price among their respective customers in bad faith in order to suppress competition in price among themselves, and with result that, by means of the agreements, rules, policies, practices, and cooperative methods of competition adopted and carried out by concerted action and agreement as aforesaid, they, the manufacturers herein concerned, deprived purchasers and consumers of vitrified clay sewer pipe of the advantages of normal competition that would otherwise exist among such manufacturers, compelled unorganized purchasers, thereby, to buy at prices and terms determined collectively and collusively by themselves, and artificially enhanced the amounts exacted from such purchasers above the amounts obtainable had there been no such collusive action:

Held, That such acts and practices of said manufacturers, their association, and officers and directors thereof as above set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and had a dangerous tendency to and actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among themselves in their sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce; and placed in themselves the power to control and enhance prices; and created in such manufacturers a monopoly in the sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce in aforesaid part of the United States; and unreasonably restrained such commerce in said products in said territory; and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the respondents named and represented in the caption hereof have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The Commission names and includes as respondents in this proceeding the Southern Vitrified Pipe Association, Cliff B. Beasley, president of said Association, W. Clement Boren, Jr., its vice president, D. M. Strickland, its secretary-manager and John M. Byrne, its treasurer. It joins these individuals both separately and as representatives of all the members of respondent Association. The Commission also includes as respondents in this proceeding the members of the board of directors of said respondent Association both individually and as representatives of the members, but the names of such Board are not at present known to the Commission. The Commission also names and includes as respondents in this proceeding both separately and as representatives of the entire membership the following members: W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., Lee Clay Products Co., Pomona Terra Cotta Co., Pine Hall Brick & Pipe Co., The Columbia Clay Co., Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., Oconee Clay Products Co., Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co., Owensboro Sewer Pipe Co., and P. Bannon Pipe Co.

PAR. 2. The Southern Vitrified Pipe Association is a voluntary unincorporated trade association with its office and principal place of business at Cincinnati, Ohio. The membership of respondent Association comprises all or practically all of the manufacturers of vitrified clay sewer pipe located in that part of the United States lying east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

Respondent, W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware and has its general office and principal place of business at Kansas City, Mo. It does the largest volume of business of any of respondent manufacturers and has producing plants in Alabama and Tennessee, as well as pipe producing plants in States outside the territory represented by respondent Association.

Respondent, Lee Clay Products Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, with offices and producing plant located at Clearfield, Ky.

Respondent, Pomona Terra Cotta Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina with offices and producing plant located at Pomona in that State.

Respondent, Pine Hall Brick & Pipe Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina, with offices at Winston-Salem and producing plant at Ceramic in that State.

Respondent, The Columbia Clay Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina with offices and producing plant located near Columbia in that State.

Respondent, Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia with office and principal place of business at Augusta, Ga., and producing plant at Cambria, Ga.

Respondent, Oconee Clay Products Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia, with office, principal place of business, and producing plant at Milledgeville, in that State.

Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the States of Indiana with office and principal place of business at Cannelton in that State.

Respondent, Owensboro Sewer Pipe Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky with office and principal place of business at Owensboro, Ky.

Respondent, P. Bannon Pipe Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky with office and producing plant at Louisville in that State.

PAR. 3. The vitrified clay sewer pipe with which this proceeding is concerned is an important item in modern construction, sanitation, and community development. It is frequently bought and used by municipalities, State, and Federal governments for the improvement of their own properties and also by Governmental emergency relief agencies, such as the Works Progress Administration of the United States Government, and other agencies dealing with the relief of unemployment and other results of the depression.

PAR. 4. Respondent manufacturers sell their products direct to municipalities, counties, States, and the Federal Government, and to dealers, at the same prices, terms, and conditions of sale. Their products are also sold direct to large contractors and to jobbers. Respondent manufacturers have control of a large, valuable, and continuous trade in commerce among the several States in the commodity with which this proceeding deals, and in the course of such trade and commerce sell and ship and cause to be transported and delivered, large quantities of material and finished products across State lines. To the extent that respondent manufacturers act collusively and collectively in the production and pricing of their goods they are in a position both to dominate and manipulate the market in which Governmental agencies and unorganized consumers must buy such goods in the territory where respondent manufacturers do business.

PAR. 5. For more than 5 years last past respondent Association, its officers, directors, and members, and respondent manufacturers have engaged in a wrongful, and unlawful combination and conspiracy among themselves, for the purpose and with the effect of substantially suppressing and frustrating competition as to price and otherwise in the sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce among the several States where respondent manufacturers do business. To that end respondents, by concerted action and agreement among themselves, and with others not joined herein as respondents, have adopted and carried out the following policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition:

(a) Respondents have agreed among themselves as to the prices, terms, and conditions of sale to be quoted and collected for their products, have caused such prices, terms, and conditions of sale to be filed with respondent Association and to be compiled and distributed among themselves and their customers, and have agreed to adhere to such prices, terms, and conditions of sale pending the filing of changes therein with respondent Association.

(b) Pursuant to the agreement above alleged, respondent manufacturers have adhered to such prices, terms, and conditions of sale in the making of price quotations and in the making of actual sales.

(c) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves that quotations and sales should be made upon a delivered basis only, with freight equalized from their respective shipping points, so that the cost of their products to any given buyer when delivered from any point, would be identical at any given destination regardless of the variations in freight from different places of production and shipment.

(d) By concerted action respondent manufacturers have reached an agreement or understanding among themselves by which, despite differences in the actual weights of vitrified clay sewer pipe as produced and shipped by the various manufacturers, the weights to be used in the calculation of freight charges, freight equalizations, delivered prices and discounts were made uniform.

(e) By a united policy of refusing to quote and sell to the aforesaid Government purchasing agencies on an f. o. b. mill basis, respondents have entered into an agreement that tends to deprive and has deprived the Federal Government of the opportunity to benefit from land grant and other special railroad rates to which it is lawfully entitled.

(f) In advance of the submission and opening of sealed bids on Federal, State, and municipal projects requiring vitrified clay sewer pipe, respondent manufacturers have exchanged among themselves the prices which they intended to quote in such bids and thereby prevented any divergence in the prices quoted.

(g) Respondent manufacturers have agreed with their respective dealer customers as to the prices to be quoted by such dealers when bidding on pipe for the Works Progress Administration and other projects financed by the Government, for the purpose and with the effect of causing such dealers to submit identical bids.

(h) The members of respondent Association have selected its officers, committees, and employees and have delegated to them the function of preventing deviation from the price agreements and other agreements herein alleged restricting competition among the respondent manufacturers. Respondent manufacturers have made complaints to their Association officers of suspected deviation from the prices and terms agreed upon and have caused investigations to be made of such complaints, including examination of the books and records of the suspected offenders. Respondent officers and manufacturers have discussed such complaints among themselves and with manufacturers suspected or charged with such deviations, for the purpose and with the effect of obtaining renewed adherence to the alleged agreements on prices and related matters. Meetings of respondent Association have been used by respondent manufacturers as the occasion for discussing, making, amending, and renewing such agreements.

(i) Respondent manufacturers have maintained a committee of their Association for the purpose and with the effect of preventing deviation from their agreed prices by threats, argument, and propaganda to the effect that such deviation would constitute a violation of Federal laws against discrimination in price and would subject such deviators to corrective action by the Federal Trade Commission.

(j) Respondent manufacturers have agreed upon higher prices for delivery of their products by truck than when delivered by railroad, for the purpose and with the effect of discouraging truck delivery and of preventing reductions below the level of identical delivered prices calculated on a rail freight basis.

(k) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves as to the differentials in price to be charged on sales to dealers as compared to building contractors.

(l) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves as to what concerns should be recognized as dealers and entitled to purchase at dealers' prices, terms, and discounts.

(m) Respondent manufacturers have attempted by interchange of information among themselves to restrict the production of vitrified clay sewer pipe to an amount that could be sold and shipped at the prices established and maintained by the agreements among respondents heretofore alleged.

(n) Most of the acts, practices, and agreements referred to above were in effect during the period covered by the code for the industry under the National Industrial Recovery Act, and have continued in effect pursuant to agreement, understanding, and cooperation among respondents.

(o) Respondent Association, officers, and manufacturers have collaborated with other trade associations composed of other manufacturers of vitrified clay sewer pipe located in other sections of the United States for the purpose and with the effect of restraining price competition between respondent manufacturers who sell into territory covered by some other association and manufacturers in such territory who sell into the territory covered by respondent Association.

(p) Respondent manufacturers have employed "The Byrne Organization" of which respondents Strickland and Byrne are part owners, as an agency for putting into effect and carrying out the above policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition.

PAR. 6. As an incident to and a necessary result of their agreed policy of making delivered prices only and of equalizing their agreed delivered prices by equalizing freight from various shipping points to any given destination, the respective respondent manufacturers have habitually and systematically demanded, charged, accepted, and received larger sums of money per unit of product from their customers located near their respective plants than from their customers located at greater distances, have thereby forced nearby customers to pay more in order that more distant ones might pay less to the respective respondent manufacturers, have deprived their nearby customers of any price advantage by reason of their proximity to the place of production, and have thereby habitually and systematically discriminated in price among their respective customers in bad faith in order to suppress competition in price among respondent manufacturers.

PAR. 7. By means of the aforesaid agreements, understandings, rules, policies, practices, and cooperative methods of competition, respondents have deprived purchasers and consumers of vitrified clay sewer pipe of the advantages of normal competition that would otherwise exist among respondent manufacturers. Respondents have thereby compelled unorganized purchasers to buy at prices and terms determined collectively and collusively by respondents and have artificially enhanced the amounts exacted from such purchasers above the amounts obtainable had there been no such determination. The amounts exacted from public purchasing agencies constitute part of the financial obligations of Government payable either with or without interest out of tax receipts.

PAR. 8. The above-alleged acts and things done by respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public engaged in the purchase and resale of vitrified clay sewer pipe, of competitors engaged in the production and sale thereof, and of consumers of such commodity, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts and practices in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 8, 1939, issued, and on August 9, 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Southern Vitrified Pipe Association, Cliff B. Beasley, president, W. Clement Boren, Jr., vice president, D. M. Strickland, secretary-manager, and John M. Byrne, Treasurer, and W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., Lee Clay Products Co., Pomona Terra Cotta Co., Pine Hall Brick & Pipe Co., The Columbia Clay Co., Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., Oconee Clay Products Co., Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co., Owensboro Sewer Pipe Co., and P. Bannon Pipe Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the respondents' answers, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted motion of all the respondents, except P. Bannon Pipe Co., for permission to withdraw said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, by stipulation between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents, the Commission on April 23, 1940, entered its order amending nunc pro tunc its complaint and respondents waived notice of hearing, oral argument, and written briefs before the Commission on this amendment, and further waived service of an amended answer to said amended complaint, and it was agreed and ordered that the substitute admission answers to the original complaint be considered the answers to said amended complaint. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint, and answer of P. Bannon Pipe Co. and substitute answers of all the other respondents, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The Southern Vitrified Pipe Association is a voluntary unincorporated trade association with its office and principal place of business at Cincinnati, Ohio. The membership of respondent Association comprises most of the manufacturers of vitrified clay sewer pipe located in that part of the United States lying east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

Respondent, W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, and has its general office and principal place of business at Kansas City, Mo. It does the largest volume of business of any of respondent manufacturers and has producing plants in Alabama and Tennessee, as well as pipe-producing plants in States outside the territory served by members of respondent Association.

Respondent, Lee Clay Products Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, with offices and producing plant located at Clearfield, Ky.

Respondent, Pomona Terra Cotta Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina, with offices and producing plant located at Pomona in that State.

Respondent, Pine Hall Brick & Pipe Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina, with offices at Winston-Salem and producing plant at Ceramic in that State.

Respondent, The Columbia Clay Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina, with offices and producing plant located near Columbia in that State.

Respondent, Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia, with office and principal place of business at Augusta, Ga., and producing plant at Cambria, Ga.

Respondent, Oconee Clay Products Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia, with office, principal place of business, and producing plant at Milledgeville, in that State. Said Oconee Clay Products Co., resigned as a member of respondent Association in 1937.

Respondent, Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, with office and principal place of business at Cannelton in that State.

Respondent, Owensboro Sewer Pipe Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, with office and principal place of business at Owensboro, Ky.

Respondent, P. Bannon Pipe Co., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky, filed a petition in bankruptcy on April 12, 1932, and on April 13, 1932, was duly adjudicated a bankrupt by the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. Thereafter, on June 27, 1932, one Maxwell S. Barker was duly elected Trustee in Bankruptcy for the said P. Bannon Pipe Co., and thereafter and until December 19, 1938, operated the sewer pipe manufacturing plant of the P. Bannon Pipe Co. under authority of orders entered in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky. On or about December 19, 1938, the said Maxwell S. Barker as trustee of the said P. Bannon Pipe Co., bankrupt, pursuant to the proper orders of the court aforesaid, sold all the assets of the said P. Bannon Pipe Co. and since that time has distributed to the creditors of the said P. Bannon Pipe Co. all of the funds coming into his hands as trustee for that estate. On or about September 10, 1939, the said Maxwell S. Barker died, and no other trustee has been selected as the estate has been fully administered.

PAR. 2. The vitrified clay sewer pipe with which this proceeding is concerned is an important item in modern construction, sanitation, and community development. It is frequently bought and used by municipalities, State and Federal governments for the improvement of their own properties and also by governmental emergency relief agencies, such as the Works Progress Administration of the United States Government, and other agencies dealing with the relief of unemployment and other results of the depression.

PAR. 3. Respondent manufacturers sell vitrified clay sewer pipe direct to municipalities, counties, States, and the Federal Government and to dealers at the same prices, terms, and conditions of sale. They also sell their products direct to large contractors. Respondent manufacturers have control of a large, valuable and continuous trade and commerce among the several States in vitrified clay sewer pipe, and in the course of such trade and commerce sell and ship, and cause to be transported and delivered to the purchasers thereof, large quantities of vitrified clay sewer pipe across State lines. To the extent that respondent manufacturers act concertedly and cooperatively in the production and pricing of their products as hereinafter set forth, they are in a position both to dominate and manipulate the market in which governmental agencies and unorganized consumers must buy such products in the territory where respondent manufacturers do business.

PAR. 4. For more than 5 years last past, respondent Association, its officers, directors, and members, and the respondent manufacturers, for the purpose of substantially suppressing and restricting competition as to price and otherwise in the sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce among the several States where respondent manufacturers do business, by concerted action and agreement among themselves have adopted and put into effect the following policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition:

(a) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves as to the prices, terms, and conditions of sale to be quoted and collected for their products, have caused such prices, terms, and conditions of sale to be filed with respondent Association and to be compiled and distributed among themselves and their customers, and have agreed to adhere to such prices, terms, and conditions of sale pending the filing of changes therein with respondent Association.

(b) Pursuant to the foregoing agreement, respondent manufacturers have adhered to such prices, terms, and conditions of sale in the making of price quotations and in the making of actual sales.

(c) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves that quotations and sales should be made upon a delivered basis only, with freight equalized from their respective shipping points, so that the cost of their products to any given buyer when delivered from any point is identical at any given destination regardless of the variations in freight from different places of production and shipment.

(d) Respondent manufacturers entered into an agreement or understanding among themselves by which, despite differences in the actual weights of vitrified clay sewer pipe as produced and shipped by the various manufacturers, the weights to be used in the calculation of freight charges, freight equalizations, delivered prices, and discounts were and are made uniform.

(e) By a united policy of refusing to quote and sell to the aforesaid Government purchasing agencies on an f. o. b. mill basis, respondent manufacturers have entered into an agreement that tends to deprive and has deprived the Federal Government of the opportunity to benefit from land grant and other special railroad rates to which it is lawfully entitled.

(f) In advance of the submission and opening of sealed bids on Federal, State, and municipal projects requiring vitrified clay sewer pipe, respondent manufacturers have exchanged among themselves the prices which they intended to quote in such bids and prevented any divergence in the prices quoted.

(g) Respondent manufacturers have agreed with their respective dealer customers as to the prices to be quoted by such dealers when bidding on pipe for the Works Progress Administration and other projects financed by the Government, for the purpose and with the effect of causing such dealers to submit identical bids.

(h) The respondent manufacturers, members of respondent Association, have selected its officers, committees, and employees and have delegated to them the function of preventing deviation from the price agreements and other agreements herein alleged restricting competition among the respondent manufacturers. Respondent manufacturers have made complaints to said Association officers of suspected deviations from the prices and terms agreed upon and have caused investigations to be made of such complaints, including examination of the books and records of the suspected offenders. Respondent officers and manufacturers have discussed such complaints among themselves and with manufacturers suspected or charged with such deviations, for the purpose and with the effect of obtaining renewed adherence to the said agreements on prices and related matters. Meetings of respondent Association have been used by respondent manufacturers as the occasion for discussing, making, amending, and renewing such agreements.

(i) Respondent manufacturers have maintained a committee of said Association for the purpose and with the effect of preventing deviation from their agreed prices by threats, argument, and propaganda to the effect that such deviation would constitute a violation of Federal laws against discrimination in price and would subject such deviators to corrective action by the Federal Trade Commission.

(j) Respondent manufacturers have agreed upon higher prices for delivery of their products by truck than when delivered by railroad, for the purpose and with the effect of discouraging truck delivery and of preventing reductions below the level of identical delivered prices calculated on a rail freight basis.

(k) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves as to the differentials in price to be charged on sales to dealers as compared to building contractors.

Findings

30 F. T. C.

(l) Respondent manufacturers have agreed among themselves as to what concerns should be recognized as dealers and entitled to purchase at dealers' prices, terms, and discounts.

(m) Respondent manufacturers have attempted by interchange of information among themselves to restrict the production of vitrified clay sewer pipe to an amount that could be sold and shipped at the prices established and maintained by the agreements among respondents heretofore set forth.

(n) Most of the acts, practices, and agreements referred to above were in effect during the period covered by the Code for the Industry under the National Industrial Recovery Act, and have continued in effect pursuant to agreement, understanding, and cooperation among respondents.

(o) Respondent manufacturers, through and in cooperation with respondent Association, its officers, and directors, have collaborated with other trade associations composed of other manufacturers of vitrified clay sewer pipe located in other sections of the United States for the purpose and with the effect of restraining price competition between respondent manufacturers who sell into territory covered by some other association and manufacturers in such territory who sell into the territory covered by respondent Association.

(p) Respondents have employed "The Byrne Organization," of which respondents Strickland and Byrne are part owners, as an agency for putting into effect and carrying out the above policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition.

PAR. 5. As an incident to and a necessary result of their agreed policy of making delivered prices only and of equalizing their agreed delivered prices by equalizing freight from various shipping points to any given destination, the respective respondent manufacturers have habitually and systematically demanded, charged, accepted, and received larger sums of money per unit of product from their customers located near their respective plants than from their customers located at greater distances; have thereby forced nearby customers to pay more, and more distant customers were allowed to pay less to the respective respondent manufacturers; have deprived their nearby customers of any price advantage by reason of their proximity to the place of production; and have thereby habitually and systematically discriminated in price among their respective customers in bad faith in order to suppress competition in price among respondent manufacturers.

PAR. 6. By means of the agreements, rules, policies, practices, and cooperative methods of competition adopted and carried out by concerted action and agreement as aforesaid, respondents have deprived purchasers and consumers of vitrified clay sewer pipe of the advantages of normal competition that would otherwise exist among respondent manufacturers; and have thereby compelled unorganized purchasers to buy at prices and terms determined collectively and collusively by respondents and have artificially enhanced the amounts exacted from such purchasers above the amounts obtainable had there been no such collusive action.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have created in the respondent manufacturers a monopoly in the sale of vitrified clay sewer pipe in such commerce in that part of the United States lying east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in said products in said territory; and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission and the answers of respondents, in which answers all of the respondents except P. Bannon Pipe Co., admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents, except P. Bannon Pipe Co., have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., Lee Clay Products Co., Pomona Terra Cotta Co., Pine Hall Brick & Pipe Co., The Columbia Clay Co., Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., Oconee Clay Products Co., Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co., Owensboro Sewer Pipe Co., and their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through respondent Southern Vitrified Pipe Association, or through respondents Cliff B. Beasley, W. Clement Boren, Jr., D. M. Strickland, or John M. Byrne, or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist, in connection with the offering for sale or sale and distribution of vitrified clay sewer pipe in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, from doing and performing by concerted action, agreement or understanding between any two or more of them, the following acts and things:

1. Fixing or establishing prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which they will sell vitrified clay sewer pipe products to the purchasing public.

2. Entering into, participating in, or carrying on, through the respondent Association or under its auspices or through any other central agency, meetings, or otherwise, discussions and exchanges of information concerning proposed or future prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which they will sell vitrified clay sewer pipe products to the purchasing public.

3. Promising to adhere to filed prices, terms, and conditions of sale for their said products pending the filing of changes therein with respondent Southern Vitrified Pipe Association.

4. Pursuant to any promise or assurance, adhering to filed prices, terms, and conditions of sale in the making of quotations or sales of their said products.

5. Making quotations and sales of their said products upon a delivered basis only, with freight equalized from their respective shipping points, so that the cost of their said products to any given buyer, when delivered from any point, will be identical at any given destination, regardless of variations in freight from different places of production and shipment.

6. Fixing arbitrary weights to be used in the calculation of freight charges and freight equalizations so that delivered prices and discounts are made uniform.

7. Refusing to quote and sell to Government purchasing agencies on an f. o. b. mill basis.

8. Exchanging among themselves, in advance of the submission and opening of sealed bids on Federal, State, and municipal projects requiring vitrified clay sewer pipe, the prices which they propose to quote in such bids.

9. Fixing and establishing differentials in price to be charged on sales to dealers as compared with sales to building contractors.

10. Agreeing with their respective dealer customers as to the prices to be quoted by such dealers on the resale of vitrified clay sewer pipe.

11. Determining what concerns shall be recognized as dealers and entitled to purchase at dealers' prices, terms, and discounts.

12. Restricting the quantity of vitrified clay sewer pipe to be produced by the respondent manufacturers or any of them.

Order

13. Collaborating with trade associations composed of manufacturers of vitrified clay sewer pipe located in other sections of the United States, but who sell vitrified clay sewer pipe in the territory served by said respondent manufacturers east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, for the purpose and with the effect of restricting and restraining competition as to prices, terms, and conditions of sale of said products in said territory.

14. Obtaining adherence to prices, terms, and conditions of sale of their said products filed by said manufacturers with the respondent Association or any other central agency, by exchanging information at meetings held under the auspices of said Association, or otherwise, as to prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which said products have been sold by respondent manufacturers; by making and investigating complaints of alleged deviations in prices, terms, and conditions of sale by said manufacturers; by the examination of books and records of the suspected offenders and by threats of legal action against such offenders.

15. Employing "The Byrne Organization," of which respondents D. M. Strickland and John M. Byrne are part owners, or any other person, partnership, or corporation, to act as an agency for putting into effect or carrying out, directly or indirectly, any of the policies, rules, practices, or methods of competition prohibited by this order.

It is further ordered, That the amended complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to P. Bannon Pipe Co.

It is further ordered, That all of the respondents, except P. Bannon Pipe Co., shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF LADY ESTHER, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3917. Complaint, Oct. 6, 1939—Decision, May 31, 1940

Where a corporation, engaged in sale and distribution of cosmetics and other toilet preparations, including its Lady Esther Face Cream, to wholesale and retail purchasers in other states and to members of the public direct, in substantial competition with others engaged in the distribution and sale of face creams, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations adapted to and used for the same general purposes as its said Lady Esther Face Cream in commerce among the various States; in its advertisements of its said face cream in newspapers and other periodicals of general circulation and in the various States and in said District, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce, and through broadcasts from radio stations of extra-state audience, and in statements and other advertisements which it disseminated and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of its aforesaid face cream in commerce—

- (a) Represented, directly or through implication, that its said Lady Esther Face Cream penetrated the skin and to the bottom of the pores thereof and removed dirt from the outside which had gotten into or under the skin and filled said pores, through its action in sinking into the pores and then flushing out waste matter therein, and that the method of cleaning the skin of the face by the use of its said cream was different from that of other skin-cleaning preparations in that, unlike the others, it cleaned more than the exterior openings of the pores.

Facts being, it did not thus penetrate the skin or have any unique or unusual or active penetrative properties in relation thereto, outside dirt does not get into or under the skin or become imbedded therein, etc., as above set forth by it, its said cream will not remove such dirt, if so located, or cleanse the pores below the exterior openings thereof, and principal effect of its said product is to cleanse outer surface of skin and exterior openings of pores, as do many other skin cleaners, and its said method was no different in such general respect from that of such others, and any absorptive and lubricating effect as distinguished from penetrative action of said product is of temporary duration, determined by such factors as length of time lubricating ingredients remain on skin and amount of absorption of such ingredients.

- (b) Represented that its said product would overcome, correct or cure dry skin and was as efficacious on an oily skin as on a dry one, and that cause of an oily skin was same as that of a dry one, and that soap and water were injurious to the skin and dried it, and that a dry skin was an old one and the cause of all wrinkles, which tiny lines became, and that use of said product supplied a dry skin with what it needed to overcome or cure such condition;

Facts being that its said product would not overcome, correct or cure a dry skin or do more in correcting it than furnish, as aforesaid, temporary supply of lubrication which was not identical with secretions supplied by the skin and required constant renewal of applications, if such lubrication were to be maintained, and, while its said product might be used on an oily skin and would clean such a skin at least to same extent as a dry one, it was not otherwise as efficacious on the former as on the latter, and cause of two was not the same, soap and water are not injurious to skin and do not dry it except temporarily, and its said product does not supply dry skin with what it needs to overcome or cure such condition, and dry skin is not an old one nor such a skin the cause of all wrinkles, nor is it true, as set forth by it, that all tiny lines become wrinkles, and dry skin, lines and wrinkles may be due to causes such as advancing age, disease, worry and conditions of the muscles and tissues underlying the skin and other causes upon which its product would have no effect.

- (c) Represented, as aforesaid, that blackheads are imbedded dirt and that its said product would remove blackheads and correct the cause thereof, facts being, blackheads are waxy skin secretions, exterior surfaces of which are discolored by exterior dirt, and said preparation will not remove them as distinguished from removing superficial dirt from the outside surfaces thereof, nor correct their cause.
- (d) Represented, as aforesaid, that said product would prevent or remove wrinkles or lines of the face and that use thereof would refine the pores of the skin and correct or remove cause of enlarged pores and remove from the skin blemishes or rough spots, and that users of said cream were free from a rough skin, and that its use refreshed tired cells and brought new life thereto and safeguarded beauty glands and brought them back to activity;

Facts being that while its said product might remove superficial accumulations of dirt from pore openings, help nature refine the pores and, to the extent that superficial pore enlargements might be due to such accumulations, serve to reduce the same, it would not refine the pores or correct or remove the cause of enlarged pores nor remove from the skin blemishes or rough spots other than those due solely to dryness thereof, and it would not banish roughness permanently, not all users of its cream are free from rough skin, and it did not refresh tired cells or bring new life thereto nor safeguard so-called beauty glands, if such there be, nor bring same back to activity, and would not affect the skin advantageously otherwise than as herein set forth, many unfavorable conditions of which are result of internal conditions such as dietary excesses or deficiency, nervous disorders, drug rashes, glandular disturbances or other conditions in regard to which its said product would have no appreciable effect and which can be effectively treated only by removing the cause thereof, on which its said product is without effect;

- (e) Represented that its said cream was a solvent of dust, soot, dirt, dead skin cells or various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin;

Facts being said product was not a solvent of dust, dead skin cells or other various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin; and

- (f) Falsely represented that results from use of its said cream were guaranteed; With tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of its said product into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, as hereinabove set forth, and to induce them to purchase said cream by reason thereof, and with the result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce of face creams, soaps and cosmetics of various kinds, including those who, in the sale of their said preparations and products, do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto; to their substantial injury in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Donovan R. Divet for the Commission.

Rogers, Ramsay & Hoge, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lady Esther, Ltd., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lady Esther, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 7171 West 65th Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of cosmetics and other toilet preparations. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause its said cosmetics and other toilet preparations to be transported from its said place of business in Illinois to, into and through States of the United States other than Illinois to the purchasers thereof in such other States. The usual course of dealing of respondent in its business as aforesaid is to sell its products to wholesale and retail stores through which they are eventually sold to members of the public. Respondent also sells its products as aforesaid direct to members of the public. Among the products so sold as aforesaid is a face cream known and described as Lady Esther Face Cream.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms and corporations in various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of face creams, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations adapted to and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said Lady Esther Face Cream. Respondent has been, during the time aforesaid, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in the sale of its said Lady Esther Face Cream with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said Lady Esther Face Cream, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said face cream; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements and false and misleading statements concerning its said face cream, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said face cream in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of the false and misleading statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

1. What you want is deep cleansing! Many methods only "clean off" the skin. They do not clean it out! * * * What you want is a cream that does more than "grease" the surface of your skin. You want a cream that penetrates the pores! Such a cream, distinctly, is Lady Esther Face Cream. It is a cream that gets below the surface—into the pores. * * *

2. There is one sure way to remove that underneath dirt and that is to use a cream that penetrates the pores. * * *

3. * * * Many methods are merely surface methods. They take off only the top dirt and leave the imbedded dirt untouched. What you want is deep-reaching action—a cleansing out of the stubborn, buried dirt. * * *

4. * * * Demand a cleanser that goes below the surface. Insist upon a cleanser that gets into the pores, deeply into the pores! Lady Esther Face Cream is a pore-deep cleanser. * * *

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

5. * * * It cleanses deeply, to the very bottom of the pores. It doesn't clean just the surface of your skin—it goes below the surface and removes hidden dirt which ordinary cleansing methods fail to reach. * * *

6. * * * it's a penetrating cream, which gets into your skin. * * *

7. I say that my cream will remove that deeply imbedded dirt that is the cause of large pores and black-speck blemishes. * * *

8. Those little black specks that keep showing up in your skin—do you know what they really are, * * * They're imbedded dirt—dirt that has found its way deeply into your pores * * * When your pores are completely cleansed of the plugging matter, blackheads automatically disappear. PAR. 5. Respondent makes and has made the foregoing statements in its advertising matter, as well as many others of similar import, which are misleading in that they represent or imply:

1. That Respondent's said face cream penetrates the skin; that it penetrates to the bottom of the pores of the skin; that it penetrates into and below the skin; and that it has unique, unusual and active penetrative properties in relation to the skin.

2. That dirt from the outside gets into and under the skin, is imbedded therein and fills the pores to the bottom and that respondent's face cream will remove the same.

3. That respondent's cream dissolves dirt and waste matter in the pores of the skin.

4. That respondent's cream sinks into the pores of the skin and then by reverse action flushes out the waste matter therein.

5. That the method of cleaning the skin of the face by the use of respondent's cream is different from that of other skin cleaning preparations in that it cleans more than the surface of the skin, while other preparations clean only the surface.

6. That blackheads are imbedded dirt.

7. That respondent's cream will correct, overcome or banish a dry skin.

8. That respondent's cream is equally efficacious on an oily skin as on a dry skin and that the cause of both conditions is the same.

9. That the use of respondent's cream will prevent and remove wrinkles and lines in the face.

10. That respondent's cream will remove blackheads as distinguished from removing superficial dirt from the outside surface thereof.

Complaint

30 F. T. C.

11. That respondent's cream will refine the pores of the skin and correct enlarged pores.

12. That respondent's cream will remove rough spots and blemishes from the skin.

13. That soap and water are injurious to the skin and that they dry the skin.

14. That respondent's cream supplies dry skin with what it needs to overcome and cure such condition.

15. That users of respondent's cream never suffer from rough skin and that it will banish roughness.

16. That respondent's cream refreshes tired cells and brings new life to the cells and to the skin.

17. That respondent's cream safeguards beauty glands and brings them back to activity.

18. That dry skin is an old skin.

19. That dry skin is the cause of wrinkles and that tiny lines become wrinkles.

20. That results are guaranteed.

21. That respondent's cream removes and corrects the cause of enlarged pores and blackheads.

22. That respondent's cream is a solvent of and dissolves the various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact respondent's face cream does not penetrate the skin or penetrate to the bottom of the pores of the skin or into and below the skin; respondent's cream does not have any unique or unusual or active penetrative property in relation to the skin; dirt from the outside does not get into or under the skin or become imbedded therein or fill the pores to the bottom and respondent's cream will not remove dirt if so located; respondent's cream will not dissolve dirt or waste matter in the pores of the skin; skin cleansers generally, including respondent's said cream, clean the surface of the skin, including the minute exterior openings of the pores, and respondent's cream is no different in this general respect from other skin cleansing preparations; blackheads are not imbedded dirt but are waxy skin secretions the exterior surfaces of which are discolored by exterior dirt; respondent's cream will not overcome, correct, or banish a dry skin but merely furnishes a temporary supply of lubrication, respondent's cream is not equally efficacious on oily skin as on a dry skin; the cause of an oily skin is not the same as the cause of a dry skin; respondent's cream will not prevent or remove wrinkles or lines in the face, it will not remove blackheads as distinguished from removing superficial dirt from the outside surfaces thereof; it will not refine the pores of the skin or correct enlarged pores; it will not remove rough spots or blemishes from the skin; soap and water are not injurious to the skin and do not dry the skin; respondent's cream does not supply dry skin with what it needs to overcome or cure the condition; it is not true that all users of respondent's cream do not suffer from a rough skin or that said cream will banish roughness since any lubricating effect it may have is only temporary and superficial; respondent's cream does not refresh tired cells or bring new life to the cells or to the skin; respondents' cream does not safeguard so-called beauty glands or bring them back to activity if, in fact, such glands exist; it is not true that a dry skin is an old skin; a dry skin is not the cause of wrinkles nor is it true that tiny lines become wrinkles; respondent does not in fact guarantee the results claimed for the use of its cream; respondent's cream does not remove and correct the cause of enlarged pores and blackheads; generally speaking, respondent's cream is not a solvent of and does not dissolve the various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin.

PAR. 7. The principal effect of respondent's said cream is to cleanse the outer surface of the skin. It also serves as a lubricant but such lubricating effect is of temporary duration and lasts only as long as the lubricating ingredients remain on the skin. This necessitates constant renewal of applications of the cream if such lubrication is to be maintained. Such treatment merely supplements the oil supplied by the skin itself but the lubrication supplied by respondent's cream is not identical with the secretions of the skin. Respondent's cream does not stimulate the action of the oil glands in the skin and has no effect of correcting the cause of the deficiency in secretion of the glands of the skin. Many unfavorable skin conditions are the result of internal conditions of the body such as excesses or deficiencies of dietary intake, unbalanced diet, too great or too little consumption of certain kinds of food, faulty or upset metabolism, nervous disorders, glandular disturbances and other conditions in regard to which respondent's face cream will have little, if any, effect on the resulting skin conditions. Such skin conditions can be effectively treated only by removing the causes thereof. Respondent's cream has no effect on these causes. A dry skin, lines in the face and wrinkles are due to causes such as advancing age, disease, worry, anxiety, overwork, conditions of the muscles and tissues underlying the skin and other causes upon which respondent's face cream will not have any effect. A cream of the general nature of respondent's does not penetrate the skin but may, to a limited extent, be absorbed by the skin. Such absorption, however, is not equivalent to or synonymous with penetration. Respondent's cream is not a solvent of dust, soot or dead skin cells or of various kinds of organic and inorganic matter which may and do soil the skin of the face.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said face cream have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase said face cream on account thereof. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of face creams, soaps, and cosmetics of various kinds. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in the sale of their preparations and products do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 6th day of October 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Lady Esther, Ltd., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 27th day of February 1940, respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and its counsel, Rogers, Ramsay & Hoge, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent, Lady Esther, Ltd., is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 7171 W. 65th Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics and other toilet preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, respondent has caused, and does now cause, its said cosmetics and other toilet preparations, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in Illinois to, into and through States of the United States other than Illinois to the purchasers thereof in such other States. The usual course of dealing of respondent in its said business as aforesaid is to sell its products to wholesale and retail stores through which they are eventually sold to members of the public. Respondent also sells its products, as aforesaid, directly to members of the public. Among the products so sold as aforesaid is a face cream known and described as Lady Esther Face Cream.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent now is, and has been during the time above mentioned, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals also engaged in the business of distributing and selling face creams, cosmetics, and other toilet preparations adapted to and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said Lady Esther Face Cream, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business in commerce as herein described respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said product, Lady Esther Face Cream, has caused advertisements to be placed in newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has also published and circulated circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. Respondent has also broadcast advertising from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in the various States of the United States other than the States in which said broadcasts originated. These advertisements, circulars, and radio broadcasts contain certain statements concerning the efficacy of the product, Lady Esther Face Cream, and the results which may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof. Similar advertising statements are made in other advertisements disseminated for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, purchases of said face cream in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, respondent, in said newspaper, periodical, radio, and circular advertisements, made, among others, the following representations:

1. What you want is deep cleansing! Many methods only "clean off" the skin. They do not clean it out! * * * What you want is a cream that does more than "grease" the surface of your skin. You want a cream that penetrates the pores! Such a cream, distinctly, is Lady Esther Face Cream. It is a cream that gets below the surface—into the pores. * * *
2. There is one sure way to remove that underneath dirt and that is to use a cream that penetrates the pores * * *
3. * * * Many methods are merely surface methods. They take off only the top dirt and leave the imbedded dirt untouched. What you want is deep-reaching action—a cleansing out of the stubborn, buried dirt * * *
4. * * * Demand a cleanser that goes below the surface. Insist upon a cleanser that gets into the pores, deeply into the pores! Lady Esther Face Cream is a pore-deep cleanser.
5. * * * It cleanses deeply, to the very bottom of the pores. It doesn't clean just the surface of the skin—it goes below the surface and removes hidden dirt which ordinary cleansing methods fail to reach * * *
6. * * * It's a penetrating cream, which gets into your skin * * *
7. I say that my cream will remove that deeply imbedded dirt that is the cause of large pores and black-speck blemishes * * *
8. Those little black specks that keep showing up in your skin—do you know what they really are. * * * They're imbedded dirt—dirt that has found its way deeply into your pores * * * When your pores are completely cleansed of the plugging matter, blackheads automatically disappear. Also your pores automatically come down in size. Responding to Nature, they reduce themselves to their original, invisible smallness.
9. * * * Lady Esther Face Cream loosens blackheads, floats out the stubborn dirt that laughs at your surface cleanser * * *
10. * * * It removes the cause of enlarged pores and blackheads * * *

11. * * * At the same time as Lady Esther Face Cream is unburdening your pores, it is also lubricating your skin. It is resupplying it with a fine oil that combats dryness and keeps the skin youthfully soft and smooth * * *

12. * * * Keep up this soothing Cleansing—(with Lady Esther Face Cream)—and you'll see those faint lines fade away—because your sebaceous glands will be back on the job—then you can say goodbye forever to dry skin.

13. * * * Lady Esther Cream contains a fine oil that overcomes dryness and roughness * * *

14. * * * "Don't you believe dry skin isn't serious. It's the dry skin that invites the tiny lines that may grow into wrinkles * * *" * * * Lady Esther Cream * * * brings back that soft dewey-fresh look which proves that the dry parched skin is smooth and pliant once more * * *

16. Lady Esther Face Cream is an excellent corrective of dry skin * * *

17. * * * Supplies Dry Skin with What It Needs * * *

18. * * * You see, dryness and oiliness are just different symptoms of the same trouble. And they are both easy to overcome with Lady Esther Cream * * *

19. * * * Lady Esther Cream, * * * counteracts the very cause of dryness * * *

20. * * * Dry patches and tiny lines will start to disappear * * *

21. * * * easily changes a dry, dingy skin into a smooth one * * *

22. * * * "It's the dry skin that invites the tiny lines that may grow into wrinkles * * *" * * * Lady Esther Cream * * * brings back that soft dewey-like look which proves the dry parched skin is smooth and pliant once more * * *

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing statements, representations, and advertisements and others of similar import, not herein specifically set forth, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to Lady Esther Face Cream, has the tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief:

1. That respondent's said face cream penetrates the skin; that it penetrates to the bottom of the pores of the skin; that it penetrates into and below the skin; and that it has unique, unusual and active penetrative properties in relation to the skin.

2. That dirt from the outside gets into and under the skin, is imbedded therein and fills the pores to the bottom and that respondent's face cream will remove the same.

3. That respondent's cream dissolves dirt and waste matter in the pores of the skin.

4. That respondent's cream sinks into the pores of the skin and then by reverse action flushes out the waste matter therein.

5. That the method of cleaning the skin of the face by the use of respondent's cream is different from that of other skin cleaning preparations in that it cleans more than the surface of the skin, while other preparations clean only the surface.

6. That blackheads are imbedded dirt.

7. That respondent's cream will correct, overcome, or banish a dry skin.

8. That respondent's cream is equally efficacious on an oily skin as on a dry skin and that the cause of both conditions is the same.

9. That the use of respondent's cream will prevent and remove wrinkles and all lines in the face.

10. That respondent's cream will remove blackheads as distinguished from removing superficial dirt from the outside surface thereof.

11. That respondent's cream will remove all rough spots and blemishes from the skin.

12. That soap and water are injurious to the skin and that they dry the skin.

13. That respondent's cream supplies dry skin with what it needs to overcome and cure such condition.

14. That users of respondent's cream never suffer from rough skin and that it will banish roughness.

15. That respondent's cream refreshes tired cells and brings new life to the cells and to the skin.

16. That respondent's cream safeguards beauty glands and brings them back to activity.

17. That dry skin is an old skin.

18. That dry skin is the cause of wrinkles and that tiny lines become wrinkles.

19. That results are guaranteed.

20. That respondent's cream removes and corrects the cause of enlarged pores and blackheads.

21. That respondent's cream is a solvent of and dissolves the various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin.

PAR. 6. Respondent's face cream does not penetrate the skin or penetrate to the bottom of the pores of the skin or into or below the skin. Respondent's cream does not have any unique or unusual or active penetrative properties in relation to the skin. Dirt from the outside does not get into or under the skin or become imbedded therein or fill the pores to the bottom, and respondent's said cream will not remove dirt if so located. Respondent's cream will not dissolve dirt or waste matter in the pores of the skin or cleanse the pores below the exterior openings of the pores. Respondent's said cream does not sink into the pores of the skin and then by reverse action or otherwise flush out the waste matter therein. Many skin cleaners, including respondent's said cream, clean the surface of the skin including the exterior openings of the pores and respondent's cream in its method of cleaning is no different in this general respect from such other skin preparations. Blackheads are not imbedded dirt, but are waxy skin secretions, the exterior surfaces of which are discolored by exterior dirt. Respondent's cream will not overcome, correct, or cure a dry skin, but merely furnishes a temporary supply of lubrication. Respondent's said cream may be used on an oily skin and will clean an oily skin, at least to the same extent as a dry skin, but otherwise is not as efficacious on an oily skin as on a dry skin. The cause of an oily skin is not the same as the cause of a dry skin. Respondent's cream will not prevent or remove wrinkles or lines in the face except such lines as may be caused by dryness of skin. It will not remove blackheads as distinguished from removing superficial dirt from the outside surfaces thereof. Respondent's face cream will not refine the pores of the skin or correct or remove the cause of enlarged pores. It may, however, remove superficial accumulations of dirt from the pore openings, help nature refine the pores, and to the extent that superficial pore enlargement may be due to such accumulations will serve to reduce pore openings. It will not remove from the skin blemishes or rough spots other than those due solely to dryness of the skin. Soap and water are not injurious to the skin and do not dry the skin except temporarily. Respondent's cream does not supply dry skin with what it needs to overcome or cure that condition. It is not true that all users of respondent's cream do not suffer from a rough skin or that said cream will banish roughness permanently, since any lubricating effect it may have is only temporary. Respondent's cream does not refresh tired cells or bring new life to the cells of the skin. Respondent's cream does not safeguard so-called beauty glands or bring them back to activity if in fact such glands exist. It is not true that a dry skin is an old skin and a dry skin is not the cause of all wrinkles, nor is it true that all tiny lines become wrinkles. Respondent does not, in fact, guarantee the results claimed for the use of its cream. Respondent's cream does not remove or correct the cause of enlarged pores and blackheads. Generally speaking, respondent's cream is not a solvent of, and does not, dissolve dust, soot, dirt, dead skin cells or the various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin. Respondent's said cream will not affect the pores of the skin advantageously otherwise than as stated in this findings as to the facts.

PAR. 7. The principal effect of respondent's said cream is to cleanse the outer surface of the skin and the exterior openings of the pores. The respondent's cream does not penetrate the skin but may, to a limited extent, be temporarily absorbed by the skin and in this way may have a lubricating effect; such absorption, however, is not the equivalent of or synonymous with penetration. Such lubricating effect is of temporary duration determined by such factors as the length of time that the lubricating ingredients remain on the skin and by the amount of the absorption of such ingredients. This necessitates constant renewal of applications to the skin if such lubrication is to be maintained. Such treatment merely supplements the oil supplied by the skin itself, but the lubrication supplied by respondent's cream is not identical with the secretions of the skin. Respondent's cream does not stimulate the action of the oil glands in the skin and has no effect in correcting the cause of the deficiency in the secretion of the glands of the skin. Many unfavorable skin conditions are the result of internal conditions of the body, such as excesses or deficiency of dietary intake, unbalanced diet, too great or too little consumption of certain kinds of food, faulty or upset metabolism, nervous disorders, drug rashes, glandular disturbances or other conditions in regard to which respondent's face cream will have no appreciable effect upon the resulting skin conditions. Such skin conditions can be effectively treated only by removing the causes thereof, and respondent's cream has no effect on these causes. A dry skin, lines in the face and wrinkles may be due to causes such as advancing age, disease, worry, anxiety, overwork, conditions of the muscles and tissues, underlying the skin, and other causes upon which respondent's face cream will not have any effect. Respondent's cream is not a solvent of dust, soot, dirt, dead skin cells or of various kinds of organic and inorganic matter which can and do soil the skin of the face.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said face cream have had the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations made by respondent as herein detailed, are true, and to induce them to purchase said face cream on account thereof. Thereby, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of face creams, soaps, and cosmetics of various kinds. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in the sale of their preparations and products do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of said respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Lady Esther, Ltd., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a cosmetic preparation now designated as "Lady Esther Face Cream" or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements represent, directly or through implication:

1. That said Lady Esther Face Cream penetrates the skin or penetrates to the bottom of the pores of the skin or into or below the skin, or has any unique or unusual or active penetrative properties in relation to the skin.

2. That dirt from the outside gets into or under the skin or becomes imbedded therein or fills the pores of the skin to the bottom, or that respondent's cream will remove dirt if so located.

3. That said Lady Esther Face Cream will dissolve dirt or waste matter in the pores of the skin or cleanse them below their exterior openings.

4. That said cream sinks into the pores of the skin and then by reverse action or otherwise flushes out the waste matter therein.

5. That the method of cleaning the skin of the face by the use of respondent's said cream is different from that of other skin cleaning preparations in that it cleans more than the surface of the skin and the exterior openings of the pores, whereas other skin preparations clean only the surface and the exterior openings of the pores.

6. That blackheads are imbedded dirt or are anything other than waxy skin secretions, the exterior surfaces of which are discolored by exterior dirt.

7. That said cream will overcome, correct, or cure a dry skin or do more in affecting a dry skin than furnish a temporary supply of lubrication.

8. That said cream is as efficacious on an oily skin as on a dry skin except that it will clean an oily skin at least to the same extent as a dry skin.

1364

Order

9. That the cause of an oily skin is the same as the cause of a dry skin.

10. That the use of said cream will prevent or remove wrinkles or lines in the face other than such lines as may be caused by dryness of the skin.

11. That the use of said cream will remove blackheads or any part or portion of blackheads except the superficial dirt on the outside surface thereof.

12. That the use of said cream will refine the pores of the skin or correct or remove the cause of enlarged pores or have any effect thereon except that its use may remove superficial accumulations of dirt from the pore openings and may help nature refine the pores, and to the extent that superficial pore enlargement may be due to such accumulations will serve to reduce pore openings.

13. That the use of said cream will remove from the skin blemishes or rough spots other than those due solely to dryness of the skin.

14. That soap and water are injurious to the skin or that they dry the skin except temporarily.

15. That the use of said cream supplies dry skin with what it needs to overcome or cure that condition.

16. That all users of said cream are free from a rough skin or that the use of said cream will banish roughness permanently or have any lubricating effect on the skin more than a temporary lubricating effect.

17. That the use of said cream refreshes tired cells of the skin or brings new life to such cells.

18. That the use of said cream safeguards beauty glands or brings them back to activity.

19. That dry skin is an old skin.

20. That a dry skin is the cause of all wrinkles or that it is the cause of any wrinkles without specifying such wrinkles as the kind of wrinkles that are caused by a dry skin; or that all tiny lines become wrinkles, or that any tiny lines become wrinkles without accompanying said statement with a truthful explanation as to the kind or kinds of tiny lines which may or do become wrinkles.

21. That the respondent guarantees its said cream or the results claimed by the use thereof, unless the nature and extent of such guarantee are clearly and adequately disclosed in immediate connection and conjunction with such guarantee and with equal prominence and emphasis.

22. That the use of said cream removes or corrects the cause of enlarged pores or blackheads.

Order

30 F. T. C.

23. That said cream is a solvent of or dissolves dust, soot, dirt, dead skin cells, or the various forms of dirt and waste matter that soil the skin.

24. That the use of said cream will affect the pores of the skin advantageously otherwise than as heretofore indicated in this order.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ORDERS OF DISMISSAL, OR CLOSING CASE, ETC.

DIGEST OF GENERAL STIPULATIONS OF THE FACTS AND AGREEMENTS TO CEASE AND DESIST <sup>2</sup>

2494.<sup>3</sup> Seafood—Nature.—Hudgins Fish Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of fish and crustacea in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The American lobster, also known as the northern lobster, is found only along the North American coast from North Carolina to Labrador. It is more abundant and attains its greatest size in the northerly part of its range in eastern Maine and the Maritime Provinces. These lobsters are scientifically known as macrurous crustaceans of the genus Homarus. Another type of marine macrurous crustacean of the genus Palinurus is found in southern waters and variously referred to as Sea Crayfish, Spiny Lobster, Rock Lobster, and southern Lobster. The term "Lobster" has long been associated in the minds of the consuming public with the genus Homarus.

Hudgins Fish Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Lobster" or the words "Lobster Meat" or "Lob. Meat" as descriptive of a species of food fish other than that properly known as "lobster," the macrurous crustacean of the genus Homarus, unless the said words "Lobster," "Lobster Meat," or "Lob. Meat," whenever so used, be accompanied, in equally conspicuous type and in direct connection therewith, by appropriate language identifying the species or locality of such product. (Mar. 7, 1940.)

The digests published herewith cover those accepted by the Commission during the period covered by this volume, namely, December 1, 1939, to May 31, 1940, inclusive. Digests of previous stipulations of this character accepted by the Commission may be found in vols. 10 to 29 of the Commission's decisions.

<sup>2</sup> In the interest of brevity there is omitted from the published digests of the published stipulations agreements under which the stipulating respondent or respondents, as the case may be, agree that, should such stipulating respondent or respondents ever resume or indulge in any of the practices, methods, or acts in question, or in event of issuance by Commission of complaint and institution of formal proceedings against respondent, as in the stipulation provided, such stipulation and agreement, if relevant, may be received in such proceedings as evidence of the prior use by the respondent or respondents of the methods, acts, or practices herein referred to.

2600. Baby Chicks—Nature, Quality and Certified.—Milton Johnson and Mark Johnson, copartners, trading as Trail's End Poultry Farm, engaged in the chick hatchery business and in the sale and distribution of chicks incubated at their place of business from eggs, certain of which were purchased by the said copartners from nearby farm flocks owned or controlled and operated by others, pursuant to contracts existing between such flock owners and the aforesaid copartners, in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Milton Johnson and Mark Johnson, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in advertising or printed matter of whatever kind or character, or in any other way, of the words "300-egg double pedigree White Leghorn breeding males" or of any other words of similar implication, either alone or in connection with the words "finest bred chicks," "finest breeding cockerels," or with any other words, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the chicks supplied by said copartners in filling orders therefor are or have been hatched from eggs laid by stock of the 300-egg or pedigreed type, when such is not the fact. Said copartners also individually agree to cease and desist from the use of the word "Certified" or of any other word of similar meaning as descriptive of their chick products, or in any other way, the effect of which is to import or imply or cause or tend to cause the belief by purchasers that the chicks sold by them have been authoritatively endorsed or guaranteed or attested as to quality, qualifications, and fitness thereof, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

2601. Cartooning Courses of Instruction—Qualifications, Nature, Opportunities, Guarantee, Free, Commission Approval, Etc.—Edward D. Muenchow, sole trader, doing business as Moon Gag-Cartoon School, engaged in conducting a correspondence school and in the sale of courses of instruction in cartooning in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Edward D. Muenchow, in connection with the sale and distribution of his courses of instruction in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that he is an internationally known cartoonist when such is not a fact.

(b) Representing that the "Moon Gag-Cartoon School" correspondence course is written and illustrated by a cartoonist who is daily or regularly producing cartoons for more than 30 nationally circulated magazines and newspapers, or for any thereof, when such is not a fact.

(c) Representing that every trick of the trade that one needs to know to become a successful cartoonist is included in such course of instruction.

(d) Representing that students who have completed his course of instruction will or may, by reason thereof, be in a position to earn banker's wages, own a home, a car, and other luxuries; or in any other way making overstatements or misrepresentations as to the earning power or future security of his graduates and students.

(e) Representing either directly or indirectly that any person, without regard to his education, imagination, discernment, sense of humor, experience, or artistic talent can or may become a competent and successful cartoonist by taking his course of instruction.

(f) Representing that it is necessary for one to have had some of his work actually printed before most magazine editors will accept his cartoons.

(g) Stating that he has made arrangements with the editors of the Cartoon Book, or otherwise that he can assure the printing and publication of cartoons therein, without explaining that he is himself the publisher and editor of such book.

(h) The use of the word "guarantee" or other word or words of similar import in connection with money-back agreements or otherwise in such a manner as to mislead or deceive students, prospective students, or the public.

(i) Representing any commodity or service as "free" when in fact such commodity or service is regularly included as part of the course of instruction or service.

(j) Representing that statements made in his advertising media comply with the rules for advertising private home-study schools as promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission; using the name of the Federal Trade Commission in his advertising matter in any way the effect of which may be to convey the impression that his claims have been given either the express or the tacit approval of the Commission. (Dec. 1, 1939.)

2602. Tooth Brushes—Sterilized.—Takamine Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a type of tooth brush called "Takamine" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Takamine Corp., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its tooth brushes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Sterilized" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that all germ life of whatever kind or description on said tooth brushes has been destroyed or removed, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 1, 1939.)

2603. Tub and Shower Bath Glass Enclosures—Composition and Quality.—Abram R. Finkel, an individual trading as Keystone Shower Door Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing glass enclosures for tub and shower baths, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Abram R. Finkel, in connection with the sale and distribution of his product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements of whatever kind or character of the word "Plate" either alone or in connection with the word "Commercial" or with any other word or words as descriptive of the glass content of said products which is not "Plate" glass, and from the use of the said word "Plate" or the words "Commercial Plate" in any way the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the glass portion of said product is what is known as "Plate" glass, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

2604. Photographs or Photographic Enlargements—Association, Nature and Photographic Studio.—E. J. Moak, sole trader as Acme Art Association, engaged in the sale and distribution of colored photographic enlargements by mail order and otherwise in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

E. J. Moak, in connection with the sale and distribution of photographs and photographic enlargements in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use in his trade name or in any other manner as applied to his business of the word "Association" alone or in connection with any other word or words; or the use of any similar term, title, or designation, the effect of which is to import or imply or cause the belief that such personal business enterprise is either a voluntary association of individuals for a common end or a body of persons organized for the prosecution of some purpose.

(b) Representing directly or in any other manner that colored or tinted photographs or photographic enlargements are paintings or oil paintings.

(c) Using the term "painting" either alone or in conjunction with any other terms or words in any way to designate, describe, or refer to colored or tinted photographs, or photographic enlargements or other pictures produced from a photographic base or impression.

(d) Representing either directly or inferentially that he owns, operates, or maintains a photographic studio of his own, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

2605. Uniforms and House Dresses—Nature and Composition.—G. H. Hess, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of uniforms and house dresses and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

G. H. Hess, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use, directly or indirectly, of the terms "shrunk," "pre-shrunk," or word, terms, mark, label, or representation of like effect, or similar import, as descriptive of its goods when the same are not in fact shrinkproof or nonshrinkable, or have not in fact been fully shrunk or preshrunk to the extent that no residual shrinkage is left remaining in such goods. If the term "shrunk" or the term "pre-shrunk" be used properly to indicate that such goods have undergone the application of a shrinking process and have been shrunk to a substantial extent but as to which there remains a certain amount of residual shrinkage, then such term or word shall be accompanied, as an integral part thereof and in immediate conjunction therewith, by a truthful phrase, statement or assertion clearly and unequivocally setting forth in percentage or percentages the amount of residual shrinkage remaining in both the warp and the filling, or in the warp or the filling whichever has the greater residual shrinkage; for example, "Preshrunk (or shrunk)—will not shrink more than --% under Commercial Standard CS59-36".

(b) The use of the word "linene" or the term "lin" independently or in conjunction with any other word or words in trade indicia, advertisements, or otherwise, to designate or describe products not made of the fiber of the flax plant; and from the use of such word "Linene" or such term "lin" in any way which may have the tendency or effect to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that the products so described are made of the fiber of the flax plant, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

2606. Hosiery, Etc.—Cooperative Group Organization, Special Advantages, Etc.—Thrift Buyers of America, a corporation, engaged in the retail sale and distribution of hosiery and other merchandise by United States mails and otherwise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Thrift Buyers of America, in connection with its sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use, in its corporate or trade name, of words or terms such as "Thrift Hosiery Society" or "Thrift Buyers of America," as descriptive of its business; or the use in its trade-promotional representations of expressions such as "Thrift Associates," "Group Buying," "In Unity there is Strength," or of any words or statements of similar import, having the tendency or capacity to create the impression or convey the belief that such retail business engaged in for personal profit is a nonprofit, cooperative group organization conducted for the mutual benefit of its members.

(b) The issuance of "membership" certificates or the designation of its customers as "members" with the effect of conveying the belief that such customers thereby enjoy the advantage of mass buying and avoid paying a retailer's profit on the merchandise bought.

(c) Representing that its customers or prospective customers can, do, or may effect savings of 25 percent, 40 percent, or 25 to 50 cents on every pair of hosiery, or any other percentage or amount in excess of what actually has been realized by its customers in their purchase of its merchandise. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

2607. Rug and Upholstery Cleaning Fluid—Qualities or Properties.—Albert Isserson, an individual trading as Nu-Life Cleaner Manufacturing Co., engaged in compounding and packaging a rug and upholstery cleaning fluid and in the sale thereof under the trade name "Nu-Life Rug and Upholstery Cleaner" in commerce between and among various States of the United States, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Albert Isserson, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from the use in his advertisements and advertising matter or otherwise of any word, statement, or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said product has sterilizing or germ-destroying or moth-proofing properties or qualities, or that, when used as directed, it will completely de-moth upholstery furniture or rid or banish from the same all moths, or that it will have any moth-elimination effect other than to act as a contact killer of such pests. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

2608. Cartooning Courses of Instruction—Competitors' Conduct and Products, Personal Instruction, Copyright, Opportunities, Testimonials, Etc.—Ralph A. Hershberger, sole trader, doing business as The National School of Cartooning, engaged in the business of conducting a correspondence school and in the sale of courses of instruction in cartooning, in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ralph A. Hershberger, in connection with the sale and distribution of his courses of instruction in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The defamation of competitors by imputing to them dishonorable or questionable conduct, or the false disparagement of the character, nature, quality, value, or scope of their courses of instruction or educational services, or in any other material respect.

(b) Representing that personal instruction and criticism will be given by a correspondence school only when so specifically stated in an enrollment blank.

(c) Representing that a copyright has been granted by the United States Government for the "Circle System" or for any other system of drawing, or by implication or direct statements that the booklets or other material issued by the National School of Cartooning are the only cartooning publications for which a copyright has been granted within the past 20 years.

(d) Representing either directly or inferentially that students who have completed his course of instruction will or may by reason thereof step into good positions as cartoonists or comic artists, earn from $30 to $75 per week at the start, have rapid advancement beginning immediately, or "do the same" as certain outstanding cartoonists supposed to earn more than $100,000 a year; or in any other way making over-statements or misrepresentations as to the earning power or future security of his students and graduates.

(e) Representing either directly or indirectly that any person, without regard to his education, imagination, discernment, sense of humor, experience, or artistic talent, can or may become a competent and successful cartoonist or comic artist by taking his course of instruction.

(f) Publishing testimonial letters without indicating the dates when such letters were written. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

2609. Ladies' Fur Garments, Buckskin Jackets, and Gloves—Tannery, Factory, Nature and Composition.—Three Rivers Fur Tannery, engaged in the sale and distribution of ladies' fur garments or coats, buckskin jackets, and gloves made from cowhide and horsehide, and other merchandise, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Three Rivers Fur Tannery, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist—

1. From the use of the word "Tannery" as part of the corporate or trade name used by it in the advertisement, sale, or distribution of products made from skins or hides not tanned by it; and from the use of the words "Tanning," "Tanners," or any similar word or words in connection with the advertisement, sale, or distribution of its products so as to import or imply that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the place wherein the work of tanning said products is carried on, when such is not the fact.

2. From the use of the word "Manufacturing" or the word "factory" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, pictorial or other representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation makes or manufactures the products advertised or sold by it under such representations, or any thereof, or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the factory or plant wherein said products are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact.

3. From the use in its advertising matter or otherwise of any word or words, such as "Hudson Seal," "Northern Seal," "Lapin," "American Broadtail," "Beaverette" or "Laskin Mouton," as descriptive of furs unless the same shall be immediately accompanied in equally conspicuous type of the correct name of the fur actually used so as to form the last word of the description as, for example, "Hudson Seal—Dyed Muskrat," "Northern Seal—Dyed Rabbit or Coney," "Lapin Dyed—Rabbit or Coney," "American Broadtail—Processed Lamb," "Mouton Dyed—Lamb." (Dec. 7, 1939.)

2610. Women's and Children's Wearing Apparel—Composition.—The Eastern Isles Importing Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged under the trade name "Futura Fashions" in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of women's and children's wearing apparel in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving of silk fiber. Dress goods and other items of women's apparel designated, described, and referred to as "satin" and "crepe" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

The unqualified term "crepe" denoting silk, has been for a long time and still is associated in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public with and as designating or meaning unweighted silk; that is to say, said word is understood by a substantial portion of the public to refer to silk that has not been subjected to a metallic bath resulting in metallic substance or substances impregnating the silk fiber.

The words "acetate" and "bemberg," when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the word "satin," or other words or phrases of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe rayon, are not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to indicate to, or inform them that the merchandise so described, designated, or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk: to wit, rayon.

The Eastern Isles Importing Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Using the word "Satin" or any other word of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. If the word "Satin" or similar word is used properly as descriptive of the construction of a fabric or product containing fiber other than pure silk, then such word when so meant shall be accurately and nondeceptively qualified by using (in immediate conjunction therewith and in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness) a word or words clearly naming and disclosing the fiber, fibers, or materials of which said fabric or product is composed, stated in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent; such as, for example, "Silk and Rayon Satin" for fabric of satin construction and composed of a mixture of pure silk and rayon, each present in substantial proportion but with the silk predominant; or "Rayon Satin" when composed of rayon.

(b) Using the words "Acetate," "Bemberg," or other trade term, either alone or in combination with any other word or words, as descriptive of the rayon content of garments, fabrics, or material, unless such words are immediately accompanied by the word "Rayon" in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness; as "Acetate Rayon," "Bemberg Rayon."

(c) Using the word "crepe," or any other word connoting pure silk, to designate or describe fabrics which are not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. In the event any such fabric or product contains any weighting, loading, or adulterating material, conspicuous and nondeceptive disclosure of the presence of such weighting, loading, or adulterating materials and the percentage or proportion thereof shall also be made in immediate conjunction with such word "crepe" or other pure-silk connoting word.

(d) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosure of the fact that the material of which said product is composed is rayon, made clearly and unequivocally in the invoices and labeling and in all advertising matter, sales-promotional descriptions, or representations thereof, however disseminated or published.

(e) Advertising, branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent, as "silk and rayon" where the silk is predominant. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

2611. Hosiery—Manufacturer.—Joseph Thomas, an individual trading as Thomas Hosiery Manufacturing Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Joseph Thomas, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Manufacturing" as part of his trade name and from the use of the said word "Manufacturing" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said Joseph Thomas makes or manufactures the products offered for sale or sold by him, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

Charles E. Carter, in connection with his sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers or retail dealers assortments of candy which are used, or which may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public.

(c) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

(d) Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

(e) Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

2613. Elastic Braids and Webbing, Etc.—Manufacturer.—Charles Leitner, an individual trading as Crown Webbing Co., engaged in the manufacture and sale of articles made from raw elastics and also in the sale and distribution of elastic braids and webbings in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Charles Leitner, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing on his letterheads, in his trade literature or otherwise, that he is a manufacturer of elastic braids and webbings or other articles unless and until such be the fact; or representing in any way, either directly or inferentially, that the elastic braids and webbings sold by him are made or fabricated in a plant which he owns and operates or absolutely controls, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 8, 1939.)

2614. Chrome Plated Professional Furniture and Equipment for Barber Shops and Beauty Parlors—Composition.—Theo. A. Kochs Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of chrome plated professional furniture and equipment for barber shops and beauty parlors, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Chromium is a grayish-white metal, hard and brittle (as usually prepared), and resistant to corrosion. It is extensively used in chrome steel, nichrome, stellite, and other alloys and as a plating like nickel. An article made of steel or other metal and coated or covered with chromium and designated "Chrometal" is misbranded in that such designation imports or implies that the article is composed throughout either of chromium metal or of an alloy of chromium and other metal, such for example as chrome steel (steel and chromium).

Theo. A. Kochs Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from using, directly or indirectly, the word "Chrometal," or a word or words of similar import or meaning, alone or in connection with any other word or words, to brand, designate, or describe furniture or other equipment or merchandise sold or offered for sale by it, until and unless the metal of which such furniture or other article is made is composed throughout of chromium or of an alloy of chromium and other metal in proportions entitling it to be properly represented and referred to as chrome metal, as understood by industry, the trade, and the purchasing public. (Dec. 8, 1939.)

2616.<sup>1</sup> Toupees and Wigs—Unique Advantages.—John E. Jevnikar, sole trader, engaged in the manufacture of toupees and wigs and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John E. Jevnikar, in connection with his sale and distribution of toupees and wigs in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that he is familiar with the individual needs of his prospective customers, or that he has all the necessary data on hand, and inferentially or otherwise that he has records of the prospective customer sufficient to enable him to repair, adjust or otherwise service his wig or toupee, when such are not the facts. (Dec. 29, 1939.)

Andrew M. Smith and Jack Lucas, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing in any way that their regular method of sale is a special advertising offer, or that the regular price charged is a special price; or stating or representing that the price charged for such enlargement is a "Special Christmas Offer" or any other special offer, so long as no reduction or other trade concession is made therewith; or, by the use of statements such as "Only one offer to a family," or otherwise, representing that the offer is limited as to the number of persons to whom it is available, when such is not the fact.

(b) Stating or representing that their photographic enlargements are "oil colored portraits" or from using any other designation for, or otherwise describing their colored photographs in a way which may import or imply or tend to cause the belief by purchasers, that such colored photographs are portraits in the ordinarily accepted meaning of a picture of a person drawn from life, particularly in oils.

(c) Stating or representing that certificates or coupons issued to purchasers are worth $7.50 or $5, or any other sum, when such is not the fact; or representing in any way that the value of a photograph called for by such certificate is greater than the price for which the certificate itself is sold.

(d) Representing that such tinted photographic enlargements introduced "Photography's latest creation", are of "superior quality"; or that "Hollywood Lightings" are used on all sittings—when such are not the facts.

(e) The use of the word "guarantee" or the word "guaranteed" or any other words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, sale, or offering for sale of their products unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security as, for example, refund of purchase price. (Dec. 12, 1939.)

2618. Automobile Seat Covers—Manufacturer.—Charles A. Greenspan, sole trader, as Standard Auto Seat Cover Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of covers for automobile seats, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Charles A. Greenspan, in connection with his sale and distribution of auto seat covers or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing in any way, directly or indirectly, by printed or spoken statements, picturizations, or otherwise that he is the manufacturer of the goods sold by him when he neither owns, operates, or controls the plant or factory in which such goods are made. (Dec. 13, 1939.)

2619. Cartoon Courses of Instruction—Special or Limited Offers and Success.—Corwin Landon, an individual trading as Landon School, engaged in continuing the conduct of a business started at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1909 by his father, C. N. Landon, now deceased, which business is that of a correspondence school for instruction in cartooning and includes the sale and distribution of lesson material in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Corwin Landon, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his course of instruction in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from—or is a "special reduced rate" or a "Fall offer" or "special anniversary rate," when in fact said price is the customary amount regularly charged for the course of instruction in the usual course of business and is without limitation as to time or occasion.

(a) Stating or representing in advertisements or printed matter of whatever kind or description that the price for which said course of instruction is offered to students or prospective students is "special"

(b) Stating or representing that 2,000 or any other number of the students of said course of instruction are now successful comic artists or cartoonists or are now actually engaged in this type of work, when in truth, there are no available facts to substantiate such claim. (Dec. 14, 1939.)

2620. Collection Agency Plans, Etc.—Indorsements or Approval, Profits, Free Product, Special Offers, Testimonials, Etc.—Dorsey E. Wynkoop, individual, trading as "Key Systems" and as "National Credit Rating Bureau," engaged in the sale and distribution of mimeographed material, which purportedly describes plans for use by purchasers in the operation of collection agencies by mail, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Dorsey E. Wynkoop, in connection with the sale and distribution of his mimeographed, printed, or other material or plans in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of statements or representations which directly assert or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers—

1. That said plan or plans has or have the approval of business organizations, chambers of commerce, legislative bodies, or the like, when such is not the fact.

2. That profits from business based on such plan or plans ordinarily are from $3,000 to $5,000 per year, or that profits of from $10,000 to $25,000 per year are not unusual. The said individual also agrees to cease and desist from the use of any other statements or representations concerning profits that are exaggerated or much in excess of the profits that users of the said plan or plans can reasonably expect to realize therefrom.

3. That "Folios" or material and plans are given "free" or as a gratuity to each purchaser of Folio No. 1, when such is not the fact.

4. That each or any of the Key Folios numbered 2 to 15, inclusive, are prepared to sell for $2, or any other price, when such is not the fact.

5. That the offer made by the said Dorsey E. Wynkoop, is a "special" offer or one the acceptance of which is limited to 10 days or any other designated period of time, when in fact, such offer is the regular offer made by the said individual in the usual course of business without limitation as to time.

6. That firms or concerns, named or otherwise, have used or are using the plan or plans of said individual, when such is not the fact. Said Dorsey E. Wynkoop also agreed to cease and desist from the use, in his advertisements and advertising matter or in any other manner, whatever, of quotations purporting to be excerpts from so-called unsolicited, expressions of appreciation from persons who or concerns which have received or use Key Folios, when in fact such quoted excerpts are not such copies as properly convey the thought or meaning expressed in the original letters.

Said individual further agreed to cease and desist from the use in connection with the sale of his plans or material in commerce of the trade name "National Credit Rating Bureau" either alone or in connection or conjunction with the phrase "A National Organization" or in any other way, so as to import or imply that the said Dorsey E. Wynkoop is associated with or operates a Nation-wide organization or performs a credit rating service, national or otherwise. (Dec. 13, 1939.)

2621. Drug Sundries—Manufacturer.—Robert J. Pierce, Inc., a New York corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of drug sundries in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Robert J. Pierce, Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing in any way, either directly or indirectly, that it is the manufacturer of any product offered for sale and sold by it, when such is not the fact; or in any other way, representing that goods are of its own manufacture which are in fact produced in plants or factories which it neither owns, operates, nor controls. (Dec. 15, 1939.)

2622. Hosiery—Mills and Branch Offices.—David Carity and Morris Carity, copartners trading under the firm name and style of United Hosiery Mills, engaged in the business of selling hosiery in commerce between and among various States of the United States, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

David Carity and Morris Carity, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Mills" as part of their trade name and from the use of the word "Mills" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said copartners knit or manufacture the products offered for sale or sold by them or that they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured. Said copartners also agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, as through the use of purported local addresses, that they have an office or place of business at each of the indicated locations, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 15, 1939.)

2623. Air Cooling Device—Qualities.—W. H. Fabry Manufacturing Co., Inc., engaged in the manufacture, among other things, of a device called "The Fabreeze Air Cooler," in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of devices designed to cool the air, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

W. H. Fabry Manufacturing Co. agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Air Cooler" either as part of the trade name or designation for the aforesaid device or in any other way as descriptive of the device offered for sale or sold by it in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to customers or prospective customers that the action of said device on air passed therethrough produces a useful degree of cooling regardless of atmospheric conditions, or in those areas of the country where the relative humidity is high; provided that, if the said words are so used, they shall be accompanied by some other words or statement so as to indicate clearly and unequivocally that the action of said device will be effective as a cooling medium only under certain atmospheric conditions, as for example, in areas of normal low relative humidity. (Dec. 18, 1939.)

2624. Shoes—Composition.—Best & Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of shoes, as retailer, among other types of merchandise, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Best & Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter or in any other way of the words "Alligator Calf" as descriptive of said products not made from the hide of an alligator, and from the use of the words "Alligator Calf" or the word "Alligator" in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or consumers that the products to which said word or words refer are made from the hide of an alligator, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 15, 1939.)

2625. Tires, Rope, Paint and Other Merchandise—Factory and Special Prices.—Coast-to-Coast Stores (Central Organization, Inc.), hereinafter some times referred to as "Central Organization, Inc.," a corporation, engaged in purchasing and supplying the merchandise offered for sale and sold by some 235 stores operated by their individual owners and located in various Midwestern and Western States, and which stores it has developed into a chain, known as "Coast-to-Coast" Stores, and also engaged, pursuant to the terms of contracts existing between it and the said "chain" stores, in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce to and among said stores of merchandise purchased by it, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Coast-to-Coast Stores (Central Organization, Inc.), in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise or advertising matter of whatever kind or description, in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist—

1. From the use of such advertising or from placing advertising in the hands of others for their use which contains statements such as "From Our Tire Factory," "From Our Rope Factory," "From Our Paint Factory," or any other similar statement or representation which imports or implies or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the designated products are made or manufactured by the said Central Organization, Inc., or by the locally owned and operated store or the merchant named in the advertising.

2. From the use in said advertising of statements such as "Annual Manufacturers Cooperative Sale," "Hundreds of Manufacturers' Cooperative Specials in Our Store," or of any other statement of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that all the various prices charged for the advertised products have been reduced or are special or are less than the prices cus-tomarily charged for said products in the usual course of business, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 18, 1939.)

2626. Fog Light or Lamp—Qualities.—Fog King Lamp Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a fog light or lamp having a special type of reflector and amber colored lenses, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Fog King Lamp Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of any statement or representation, the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the beam of light produced by said device will penetrate fog to any greater extent than ordinary white light or that it will successfully penetrate a dense or heavy fog or give any substantial visibility in such fog, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 19, 1939.)

2627. Antifreeze Preparation—Laboratory and Qualities.—Alfred Loveman, an individual, trading as Kantfreeze Chemical Co. and Kantfreeze Laboratory, engaged in the sale and distribution of crystals under the trade designation “Kantfreeze” for use in protecting automobile radiators from freezing temperatures, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Alfred Loveman, in connection with the sale and distribution of his product in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words “Kantfreeze Laboratory” as and for a trade name when in fact there is no such laboratory; and from the use of the word “laboratory” as part of or in connection with his trade name or in any other way so as to import or imply that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a place devoted to experimental study in a branch or branches of natural science or the application of scientific principles in the preparation of his products or of any drugs or chemicals, when such is not a fact.

(b) Representing that Kantfreeze or any other product of similar composition will not corrode or cause rust or that it will “protect” one’s car against such conditions when used in the cooling system of an automobile. (Dec. 19, 1939.)

2628. Rubber Typewriter Keys—Composition.—J. Oliver Thorp, sole trader as Rubber Products Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of rubber typewriter keys in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Para rubber, as known to industry and trade, is a whole latex rubber prepared from the latex of wild Heavea trees in the Amazon district of South America. The output of this rubber is now small compared to that of plantation rubber. A product of a cultivated rubber plantation, designated and sold as "Para" rubber, is misbranded in that it conveys or tends to convey the impression that such product is from the wild rubber trees of the Amazon Valley.

J. Oliver Thorp, in connection with his sale and distribution of rubber products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Para Rubber" or the word "Para" as descriptive of any product not actually made of Para rubber, that is to say, rubber prepared from the latex of wild Heavea trees in the Amazon district of South America. (Dec. 21, 1939.)

2629. Buttons—Composition.—Rochester Button Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of buttons, including a pattern or style designated "Technoid," which it sells in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Rochester Button Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on its sample cards and invoices or in labeling or otherwise advertising said products of the word "Ocean" so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said products are made of ocean pearl, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 19, 1939.)

2630. Handkerchiefs—Converter and Manufacturer.—Charles Wicenstowski, Sidney Wicenstowski, and David Feldman, copartners, trading as Charles Wicenstowski, engaged in the business of purchasing gray handkerchief goods, causing the same to be converted by the usual processes into the finished products and thereafter selling the same in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Charles Wicinstowski, Sidney Wicinstowski, and David Feldman in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on their letterheads and printed matter or in any other way of the words "Converter and Manufacturer," or of either of said words, or the word "Factory" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which conveys, tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said copartners are engaged in the converting and/or manufacturing of said products or that they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the factory or plant in which said products are converted and/or manufactured. The said copartners also agree to cease and desist from stating or representing that they have a factory or plant at Ellenville, N. Y., when such is not the fact. (Dec. 20, 1939.)

2631. Women's Wearing Apparel—Composition.—Benjamin Schlien and Harry Kramer, copartners operating under the firm name of Metropolis Co., engaged in the manufacture of women's wearing apparel and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Benjamin Schlien and Harry Kramer, in connection with the sale and distribution of their product in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from advertising, branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent; for example, "cotton and rayon." (Dec. 26, 1939.)

2632. Course of Instruction in Air Conditioning and Electric Refrigeration—Institute, Association, Employment, Free Product, Opportunities, Etc.—Highland Technical Institute, Inc., engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce, between and among various States of the United States, of a correspondence course of instruction which it styles "Extension-Shop Training Course in Air Conditioning and Electric Refrigeration," in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar courses of instruction, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Highland Technical Institute, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its course of instruction in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the word "Institute" either with or without the words "Highland" and "Technical" as a part of or in connection with the corporate or trade name under which it carries on its business; and from the use of the word "Institute" independently or in connection with any other words or expressions implying or suggesting that such trade school is an organization conducted for the promotion of learning, philosophy, art or science, and has equipment and faculty such as to entitle it to be designated an Institute.

(b) The use of any fictitious name, title, or expression importing the existence of an organization, or some relationship thereto, which does not in fact exist; and from the use of the word "Association" or the term "Training Department" in connection with the words "Western Trades" or any other word or words, the effect of which is to import or imply or convey the belief that said private business is that of, or is an adjunct to, an organization of the members of the western crafts or industries or any similar group, formed for the purpose of considering and solving their problems as such.

(c) The use of "Help Wanted" or other employment columns in newspapers or other publications in such manner as to deceive prospective students into the belief that jobs are offered.

(d) Representing that it pays students $1.40 per day or any other sum or that it provides board and room during shop training period, unless in conjunction with each and every such representation or statement it definitely and clearly sets forth and explains that the $1.40 per day or the cost of the board and room referred to is payable from funds previously collected from each student for that purpose.

(e) Representing any service or commodity as "free" when in fact such service or commodity is regularly included as part of the course of instruction or service for which the student has paid.

(f) Representing either directly or indirectly that Seymour Hardy Thompson or Patrick W. Denton or any other person or persons not actually on the staff or directly connected with said school are on such staff or associated therewith.

(g) Representing, either directly or indirectly that any person, though lacking in proper education, experience or aptitude can master its study course easily or otherwise.

(h) Making exaggerated or extravagant statements relative to the probability or possibility of prospective students' developing inventions which will lead to fortune and fame.

(i) Representing that the instruction and training offered "makes it possible for your dream to come true"; or enables one to cash in and begin earning money before finishing either the home work or the shop training; or will "easily pay you a profit of $300 to $400 a month" or other specified sum; or will capacitate or qualify one to "pick the job you want" in the manufacturing, engineering, contracting, merchandising, or transportation lines; or to obtain and/or fill positions such as master mechanic, foreman, superintendent, inspector, designer, executive, engineer, estimator, manager, technician, or consultant; or using in its advertising matter or in talks by its sales persons any other overstatements or representations as to the actual earning power or probable salaries, advancement, promotions, or future security or wealth of its graduates or students.

(j) Representing either directly or indirectly in its advertising or in talks by its sales representatives that as the result of any such training, the graduate may picture himself as, or reasonably anticipate that he will become a "trained engineer," a "consulting engineer," or a "factory distributor," or will possess wealth and luxuries, or have the "honor and dignity of a professional man."

(k) The use of the word "Personnel" in its advertising matter to designate any official, employee, or sales representative in such a manner as to infer or imply that such official, employee, or sales representative may be in a position or have the capacity to employ personnel, when such is not a fact.

(l) Referring to its shop as "our engineering shops," or using the word "engineering" or the word "engineer" in any way as descriptive of or as designating its equipment, its instruction or its graduates; or denominating any member of its faculty as an engineer who does not hold an engineering degree from some recognized college or university; or in any other way, representing that this trade school is an engineering concern or offers engineering instruction.

(m) The use of statements or representations either printed or spoken, importing or implying or tending to cause the belief that it is in position to offer employment to or place all its graduates or students, when such is not a fact. (Dec. 26, 1939.)

Gafco, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its furs in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of the word "Chinchillonette" or of any other word simulating the word "Chinchilla" as descriptive of a fur which is other than chinchilla fur; and from the use of the said word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the fur so referred to is that of a chinchilla, unless, when the said word is so used to designate a fur other than that of the chinchilla, then in that case, it shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that said fur is not chinchilla fur and so as to clearly and unequivocally disclose the actual trade name or nature of the fur, as for example, "Chinchillonette—Dyed Coney." (Dec. 26, 1939.)

2634. Canvas Boats—Qualities.—Pauline S. Winans, an individual, trading as Kalamazoo Canvas Boat Co., engaged in the manufacture of portable folding canvas boats, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Pauline S. Winans in connection with the sale and distribution of her products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that the canvas boats offered for sale and sold by her are puncture-proof or have "no leaks, no repairs," or making claims or assertions of similar import or meaning with the capacity or tendency to create the impression or cause the belief by purchasers that such boats are impervious to penetration or piercing by sharp or pointed objects of whatsoever kind; or that no leaks will ever develop or that all repairs will or may be avoided, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 26, 1939.)

2635. Course of Instruction—Qualities and Institute.—Harry Kahne, an individual, trading as Kahnetic Mentalism Institute, and as Institute of Kahnetic Ability, engaged in the business of conducting a home study course of instruction, known as "Kahnetic Mentalism," consisting of 12 lessons prepared by the said Harry Kahne and which he sells and has sold in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry Kahne, in connection with the sale and distribution of his course of instruction in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description of statements or representations which assert or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasing students or to prospective students or others, that the said course of instruction is such as will develop the brain, or will enable all students thereof, regardless of age, sex, or congenial factors, to attain success or to realize the wishes and desires of life, or will provide the necessary qualifications or a formula for success or bring forth latent ability in all cases, or that the student, due to his or her increased brain power or mental ability thus acquired, can win or get any desired thing or accomplish any desired mental feat or can immediately grasp the entire situation of any business proposition which presents itself, or will become a mental giant, or will acquire an education equivalent to a college course. Said individual also agreed to cease and desist from the use, in connection with the offering for sale or sale of his course of instruction in interstate commerce, of any statement or representation which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the mental exercise referred to in said course of instruction will be of benefit other than such as may result from the concentration or study required for their performance or from the possible development of new channels of thought which react upon those already established. The said individual further agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Institute" as part of the trade name or names under which he conducts his business, and from the use of the said word in any way so as to import or imply or which may tend to convey the belief to others that the business conducted by him is that of an institute or organization for the promotion of learning, philosophy, the arts or sciences. (Dec. 28, 1939.)

2636. Electric Brooders—Savings Accomplished.—Globe American Corp., corporation maintaining a division under the trade name "Makomb Steel Products Co." engaged in the manufacture of a full line of poultry equipment, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Globe American Corp., in connection with the sale and distribution of its electric brooders or other poultry equipment in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from making claims in its advertising matter or otherwise that its Elect-O-Stat Brooder or other brooder of similar construction cuts the current cost of electricity 30 percent to 40 percent or by any other proportion or extent in excess of that actually ascertained and proven by means of competent and acceptable scientific tests. (Dec. 28, 1939.)

2637. Dog and other Animal Foods—Qualities, Composition, Nature of Manufacture, Guarantee, Etc.—George A. Mighton, Stanley E. Mighton, and Kenneth G. Mighton, copartners, trading as S. E. Mighton Co., Ltd., engaged in the manufacture of canned dog and other animal foods and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George A. Mighton, Stanley E. Mighton, and Kenneth G. Mighton in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that their dog or other animal foods are “balanced” foods for all breeds of dogs, cats, puppies, and foxes, or any thereof.

(b) Representing that such foods contain yeast or that yeast is added thereto, unless and until the quantity or percentage of yeast content is sufficient adequately to satisfy the yeast requirements of an average dog or other animal for which intended.

(c) Representing that such foods are “more nourishing,” or that the use thereof results in better bones and coat or better health, unless in connection with each and every such representation it be clearly stated that the benefits claimed will obtain only when there is a deficiency in the feed or ration ordinarily provided such animals.

(d) Representing as beef or as beef food products any of their brands of dog or other animal foods, the meat content of which consists wholly or in part of tongue trimmings, lungs or other parts or portions of beef animals which may be designated not as beef but as meat byproducts. Where descriptions of the meat content of foods containing both beef and meat byproducts are indicated on the labels or otherwise, such descriptions shall clearly and definitely indicate the proportion or quantity of such beef and of such meat byproducts.

(e) Representing that their dog or animal foods provide necessary vitamins in proper proportions with other food elements and minerals, unless and until such proper proportions are scientifically ascertained and are followed.

(f) Representing their products as “vitaminized,” “vitamin food,” or as containing vitamins, unless the vitamin content be sufficient to justify such claims; or making any other statements having the ca-capacity or tendency to convey the belief that such products are rich in vitamins or are substantially supplemented with vitamins, when such is not the fact.

(g) Asserting without due qualification that vitamin A guards against infection or promotes growth and health or that vitamin D builds strong bones and muscles, prevents and cures rickets, strengthens bitches in whelp, or develops sturdier puppies; or stating the therapeutic property of any vitamin without explanation that it is effective only in case of such vitamin deficiency.

(h) Representing, inferentially or otherwise, either by brand names such as "Extra Liver," "Extra Beef," or "Extra Liver and Vegetables," or by descriptive matter on the labels or otherwise, that liver, beef, or other designated foods constitute the principal ingredient of certain brands of their dog or other animal foods, when such is not a fact; or that liver, beef or other designated foods constitute a greater proportion of their product than actually is a fact.

(i) Representing that their products contain ingredients other than those actually contained therein.

(j) Representing that their dog or other animal food products are prepared by or under the direction of an expert or experts when such is not a fact.

(k) The use of the words "Guarantee" or "Guaranteed" or any words of similar meaning, in connection with the advertising, sale, or offering for sale of their products unless, whenever so used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, for example, refund of purchase price. (Dec. 20, 1939.)

2638. Spectacle Frames, Mountings, Etc.—Qualities and Composition.—John David Brock, an individual, trading under the names "Specialty Optical Co.," "Superior Optical Co.," and "K-C Wholesale Optical Co.," engaged in the sale and distribution of spectacle frames, mountings, and the like, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John David Brock, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his rhodium plated products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of the words "Pink Finish" or "Tan Finish" either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, or in any other way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the pink or tan finish is an inherent quality of the rhodium used in plating said products, and therefore, will neither wear away nor change its color. Said individual also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the term "Semi-Precious" as descriptive of products made from so-called "Villadium" which is not composed, in part at least, of the precious metals, and from the use of the word "precious" either alone or in connection with the word "semi" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that said products are made of an alloy which is composed of metals, one or more of which is "precious" metal as that term is understood and generally accepted to mean by the trade and purchasing public. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

2639. Photographic Trade Journal—Unique Nature or Character and Mailing Cost.—Charles J. Ver Halen and Charles J. Charles J. Ver Halen and Charles J. Ver Halen, Jr., in connection with the advertisement, sale, and distribution of their trade journal in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in their printed matter or on the said publication or in any other way of any statement or representation which directly asserts or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to readers or purchasers that the said trade journal or publication is either the first or the only trade journal in the photographic industry. The said copartners also agreed to cease and desist from the statement or claim that their said publication is the Official Buying Guide of the Photographic Industry, when such is not the fact. The said copartners further agreed to cease and desist from the use of any statement or representation concerning the alleged cost of mailing an issue of the said publication to subscribers thereof in the various zones of the United States which is not in all respects true. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

2640. Diamonds and Jewelry—Importer and Direct Dealing.—Silbermann, Kohn & Wallenstein, Inc., engaged in the business of importing diamonds and manufacturing jewelry and in the sale of such merchandise in commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Silbermann, Kohn & Wallenstein, Inc., agreed that it will cease and desist from the use of advertisements or from placing advertisements in the hands of others for their use, wherein there appears any statement or representation which directly asserts or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that an individual, firm, or corporation named or otherwise referred to in said advertising is the importer of the displayed merchandise, when in fact such individual or concern is not the importer thereof. Said corporation also agrees to cease and desist from stating or representing in advertising matter or in any other way that prices charged for designated merchandise have been stripped of or do not include the profits of the middleman, broker or importer, or any thereof, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

2641. Hosiery—Mills.—Century Hosiery Mills, Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Century Hosiery Mills, Inc., agreed to cease and desist from the use on its correspondence stationery or other printed matter of the word "Mills" as part of the corporate or trade name under which it conducts its business consisting of the sale and distribution in commerce, as defined by the said act, of products which are not knitted or manufactured by it; and from the use of the word "Mills" or of any other word or words of similar import in its advertising or in any manner whatsoever, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products offered for sale or sold by it in interstate commerce are knitted or manufactured by it or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the mill or factory wherein said products are knitted or manufactured. when such is not the fact. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

2642. Women's Shoes—"Cancellation,"—David R. Schlossman, an individual, trading as "Clark's Cancellation Shoes," engaged in the sale of women's shoes in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

David R. Schlossman, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his shoes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Cancellation" as part of his trade name and from the use of the said word or of any statement or representation involving the use of said word or of any other word or similar meaning in his advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products sold by the said David R. Schlossman are of the cancelled-order class, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

2643. Portable Dance Floor Mats and Theatrical Equipment—Exclusive Manufacturer.—The G. L. The G. L. Morris Corp., in connection with its sale and distribution of portable dance floor mats or other equipment or merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing itself to be a "manufacturer" when it neither owns, operates, nor controls a manufacturing plant; from representing itself to be the "Exclusive" manufacturer, distributor, or vendor of portable dance floor mats or any other product when in fact there are similar products on the market made and sold by others; or from representing in any other way, either directly or inferentially that all products of a designated type or kind are those of The G. L. Morris Corp., when such is not a fact. (Jan. 3, 1940.)

2644. Electrical Apparatus and Equipment—Reconditioned or Used Product as New, Special Prices, Etc.—American Electrical Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of new and reconditioned electrical apparatus and equipment, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

American Electrical Sales Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Advertising, offering for sale, or selling used or reconditioned equipment or merchandise without properly disclosing the fact, that said equipment or merchandise is used or reconditioned; and from the use in any and all statements or representations in its advertising or otherwise, the effect of which is to import or imply that said equipment or merchandise is new and unused when in fact such is not the case.

(b) Quoting the price of new equipment as the "regular price" for used or reconditioned equipment which it offers for sale.

(c) Representing that a price charged for second-hand equipment or merchandise is "sensational" or "remarkable" in that the purchaser presumably is buying new equipment at a great bargain when in fact he is paying a second-hand price for second-hand equipment or merchandise.

(d) Representing that a price for goods offered for sale is "Special while they last," so long as the figure quoted is the only price for which such goods have been sold or offered for sale; or in any other way, either directly or inferentially representing that the advertised offer is special or unusual so long as no price reduction or other trade concession is made therewith. (Jan. 8, 1940.)

2645. Celluloid and Metal Advertising Specialties—Manufacturers.—N. G. Slater Corp., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling and distributing celluloid and metal advertising specialties, such as calendar cards, typewriter eraser shields, military insignia, campaign buttons, and the like, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

N. G. Slater Corp., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its catalogs or advertising matter of whatever kind or description of the word "Manufacturers," either alone or in connection with any other word or words, so as to import or imply that it makes or manufactures the products referred to in said advertising matter, and from the use of the said word "Manufacturers" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the products offered for sale or sold under such representation are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 8, 1940.)

2646. Distilled Spirits—Distiller.—Southwestern Distilled Products, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the rectifying, bottling, and sale of distilled spirits, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Southwestern Distilled Products, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from holding itself out to be, or in any way designating itself as a distiller, in its advertising matter, trade literature, labels, or otherwise, when such is not a fact; or in any manner representing that the liquors offered for sale and sold by it have been distilled in its own plant when it neither owns, operates, nor controls the plant in which such distilled spirits are produced. (Jan. 8, 1940.)

2647. Drugs and Sundries—Competitive Products.—David H. Blanck, an individual, trading as David H. Blanck & Co. engaged in the sale and distribution of drugs and sundries, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

David H. Blanck, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from simulating or imitating the wrappers or containers of a competitive product in any way by design, arrangement, wording or otherwise, with the capacity and tendency to confuse purchasers or delude them into the belief that the product so labeled is that of another concern. (Jan. 18, 1940.)

2648. General Merchandise—Nature of Manufacture.—Sears, Roebuck & Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling a general line of merchandise at retail across the counter and also by mail order, and in the distribution of its products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its merchandise in commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of the words or phrases "Hand-Made" and "Hand-Stitched" or of any other words or phrases of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said merchandise is made or stitched by hand, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 8, 1940.)

2649. Medicinal Preparations—Qualities.—Ciba Pharmaceutical Products, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of two certain medicinal preparations, one being designated "Agomensin" or "Agomensin 'Ciba,'" and the other "Sistomensin" or "Sistomensin 'Ciba,'" in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth herein.

Ciba Pharmaceutical Products, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, directly or otherwise—

(a) That Agomensin "Ciba," in either of its forms, has the action, in all cases, of activating menstruation, stimulating ovarian function, or preventing hyperemia of the female sexual organs.

(b) That Agomensin "Ciba" is indicated as a proper and effective treatment or cure for functional amenorrhea, delayed or scanty menstruation, uterine hypoplasia, habitual abortion, etc., regardless of the cause.

(c) That the hormone content, estrin or progesterin, of Agomensin "Ciba" is present in such amounts as to be therapeutically effective except in cases where relatively low hormone potency is indicated.

(d) That the uniformity of Agomensin "Ciba" is assured by physiological assay.

(e) That Sistomensin "Ciba," in either of its forms, is a competent and effective treatment for the control of hemorrhage of puberty and of menopause, in all cases.

(f) That Sistomensin "Ciba" is indicated for all symptoms of hormone deficiency or for all types of climacteric disturbances.

(g) That the estrin content of Sistomensin "Ciba" is such that, when given as directed, it will be effective except in cases where relatively low hormone potency is indicated. (Jan. 3, 1940.)

2650. Knitted Sportswear—Mills.—Sidney Levy and Abe D. Kasen, copartners, operating under the firm name and style of Ascot Mills, engaged in the sale and distribution of knitted sportswear in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sidney Levy and Abe D. Kasen, and each of them, agreed, in connection with their sale and distribution of knitted sportswear or other products in commerce as defined by said act, to cease and desist from the use of the word "Mills" as a part of their trade name or in anyway so as to import or imply or which may have the capacity or tendency to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that said copartners knit or manufacture the product sold by them or that they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the mills or factories in which the same are made, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 3, 1940.)

2651. Theater Equipment and Supplies—Manufacturers, Distributors, Direct Dealing, Exporters, Size of Business, Used or Second-Hand as New, Special Prices, Guarantees, Etc.—Consolidated Theatre Supply Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of theatre equipment, accessories, and supplies between and among various States of the United States, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Consolidated Theatre Supply Corp., in connection with its sale and distribution of theatre equipment and supplies or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Using the word “Manufacturers” or other word, term, or expression of similar import, as descriptive of its business, or the use of the word “manufacturers” in any way, except in referring to products it may actually manufacture.

(b) Describing its business as that of “Distributors” or in any other manner the effect of which is to import or imply or convey the impression that such jobbing concern is a duly constituted distributing agency for the producers of the goods which it sells.

(c) The use of the words “Buy Direct,” either independently or in connection with the word “Save” or any other words; or representing in any other manner whatsoever, either directly or indirectly, that the customer will, can, or may avoid paying a middleman’s profit by dealing with said corporation.

(d) Representing that it has an “Export Department” or maintains “An especially trained and highly efficient Foreign Department” when no such departments exist in fact; or describing its business as that of “Exporters” unless and until a substantial portion of its regular business is actually in the export trade.

(e) Representing itself to be the “Theatre Equipment Center of America,” or the “N. Y. Chair Headquarters,” or the “leaders” in sound equipment or in all qualities and types of theatre chairs, or in any other goods or merchandise.

(f) Asserting that detailed information as to its financial standing or reliability may be obtained from “Any bank or trust company in New York City”; or otherwise, by direct statement or by implication, representing that its commercial reputation is so outstanding that all New York financial institutions are fully informed thereof—or any such, except the one or ones with which it does business.

(g) The use of any and all assertions or representations, direct or implied, with the capacity, tendency or effect of conveying the impression or belief that said corporation conducts a large and imposing business, or engages in mass-buying to such extent that its customers substantially profit thereby; and from the use of overstatements, exaggerations, or specious connotations regarding volume of business, numbers of customers or the magnitude of commercial transactions.

(h) Advertising, offering for sale or selling second-hand, used, rebuilt, or reconditioned equipment or merchandise without clearly and unequivocally disclosing, as to each item, that the same is second-hand, used, rebuilt, or reconditioned as the case may be; and from the use of any and all statements, picturizations or other representations in its advertising matter the effect of which is to import or imply that said equipment or merchandise is new and unused when in fact such is not the case.

(i) Quoting the price of new equipment as the "usual price" or in any other way representing that it is the standard price for second-hand, used, rebuilt, reconditioned or obsolete equipment which it offers for sale; or in any other way placing a fictitious or exaggerated valuation upon such articles of merchandise.

(j) Representing that the prices charged for goods offered for sale are either "Special," "Very Special," "Introductory," "Drastic Reductions," or "Lower Than Ever," or that they betoken a "Big Annual Event" or an "Annual Clearance Event" so long as the figures quoted are the only prices for which such goods have been sold or offered for sale by said corporation; or in any other way, either directly, or inferentially representing that the advertised offer is special or unusual so long as no price reduction or other trade concession is made therewith.

(k) Asserting or in any other way representing that "We avoid offering to customers job lot merchandise," when such is not the fact.

(l) Representing that the price and the quality of its goods are "guaranteed" or that every item is "fully guaranteed" to be new, fresh, or standard grade merchandise, when such is not a fact; and from the use of the word "guaranteed" or the word "guarantee" or any other word of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, sale, or offering for sale of its equipment or merchandise unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price.

(m) Designating its method of merchandising as a "Triple Thrift Replacement Plan," or otherwise representing by the use of words such as "plan," "Thrift Plan," or "Thrift Allowance," that advantageous transactions are offered other than the usual prices and payment terms, when such is not the fact; or making statements or representations of any kind to the effect that the purchase and use of its equipment or merchandise will cut the cost of upkeep by half, will stop costly repairs or will eliminate operating worries. (Jan. 9, 1940.)

2652. Courses of Instruction in Apartment House and Hotel Management, Textbooks, Etc.—Employment, Free Reciprocal Service or Relations, Etc.—Alvin Lovingood, an individual, conducting under the trade names “National Apartment House & Hotel Schools” or “National School of Instruction in Apartment House Management,” certain resident and correspondence school courses of instruction in apartment house and hotel management at his place of business, and engaged in the sale of said correspondence school courses of instruction and also textbooks dealing therewith in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, and in addition to such activities, the said Alvin Lovingood sold and shipped so-called franchises to various persons authorizing the operation by them of similar schools under the name “National Apartment House & Hotel School”; he also sold and shipped the lesson papers and textbooks to be and which were used by such franchise purchasers in the conduct of their schools; in 1934, said respondent caused the Los Angeles National Apartment & Hotel School, Inc., to be incorporated under laws of the State of California and he became its president. Subsequent to its organization, said corporation undertook to conduct and did conduct a school similar to that operated by said Alvin Lovingood, and in the course and conduct of their business, said corporation and the said individual were at all times herein referred to in competition with other corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, and entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Alvin Lovingood and Los Angeles National Apartment & Hotel School, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of correspondence school courses of instruction and the sale and allocation to others of franchises to operate similar schools in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of statements or representations, either printed or oral, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to students or prospective students that the said individual or the said corporation will undertake to obtain and will obtain employment for graduates of the said courses of instruction and that any services rendered by the said Alvin Lovingood or the said corporation, in the matter of obtaining employment for the graduate student, is “Free” when in fact an extra charge or fee is required therefor.

(b) Representing that he or it conducts or operates an “Employment Department” or “Employment Bureau” unless and until such actually are facts, or making any other representations as to service purportedly to be rendered in connection with the obtainment or attempt to obtain employment for graduate students which are not in all respects fulfilled.

(c) Representing reciprocal service of any kind or description between his or its school or schools with schools in different named cities, when in fact no such service exists, or representing any existent reciprocal service, unless such representation be accompanied by a clear unequivocal statement indicating the nature of such service, and the cost or price thereof, if any.

(d) Representing, either directly or by implication, that the school or schools operated by him or it have reciprocal relations with franchise or other schools in any named city, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 12, 1940.)

2653. Luggage—Composition.—California Luggage & Leather Coat Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing luggage and other products and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

California Luggage & Leather Coat Co., Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Genuine Leather" or "Genuine Cowhide" as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for products not manufactured from the top or grain cut of the leather; and from the use of the word "Leather" or the word "Cowhide" either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products so designated are manufactured from the top or grain cut of the leather, when such is not the fact. If the products are composed of leather made from the inner or flesh cut of the hide, and the word "Leather" or the word "Cowhide" is used as descriptive thereof, then in that case, the word "Leather" or the word "Cowhide" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words, as "Split," printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that said products are not composed of leather made from the top or grain cut or layer of the cowhide. (Jan. 12, 1940.)

2654. Carbon Paper, Typewriter Ribbons, Mimeographing Inks and Stencils—Manufacturers.—Sol Neelman, an individual, who formerly conducted business as Quality Ink & Manifold Co., but who is now carrying on business as Quality Ink & Carbon Co., engaged in sale and distribution of carbon papers and allied products, as typewriter ribbons, mimeographing inks and stencils, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sol Neelman, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of any designated product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements, advertising or printed matter whatever kind or description of the word "Manufacturers" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said Sol Neelman makes or manufactures the said designated product and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact. (Jan 16, 1940.)

2655. Courses of Instruction for Civil Service—Extension, Institute, Government Connection, Opportunities, Guarantee, Nature, Value, Etc.—Wilbur O. Boren, sole trader, engaged as Service Extension Institute in the sale and distribution of correspondence school courses for home study intended to assist students thereof to pass United States civil service examinations, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Wilbur O. Boren, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his correspondence courses of instruction in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the word "Extension" or the word "Institute," either together or independently, in the trade name for his business or to designate or describe his correspondence school; or of any similar term, title or designation the effect of which is to import or imply or cause the belief that his correspondence course is an extramural service from a resident school extending its instructional advantages to persons unable to avail themselves in the regular way, or is an institution for the promotion of learning, philosophy, art, or science.

(b) Representing by direct statement or by reasonable inference either in his advertising media or by statements by himself or by his canvassing salesmen or agents, or otherwise—

1. That either he or his correspondence school has any connection with the United States Civil Service Commission or other governmental agency.

2. That he or any of his salesmen, agents, or employees are employed by or represent any governmental agency, or are charged with the responsibility of securing or selecting employees for the Government.

3. That students or graduates of the correspondence course sold by him will be accorded preferential treatment upon examination for civil service positions or when being considered for appointment.

4. That salaries paid governmental employees are amounts in excess of the salaries actually paid.

5. That the said correspondence school has been in existence for a longer period of time than is actually the fact.

(c) Exaggeration or overstatement of the number of civil service employees in the Government.

(d) Assertion that educational advantages or qualifications are not needed or required by applicants for positions within the classified civil service.

(e) Representing that Government employees have the guarantee of or receive pensions; or in any other way that all Government employees receive retirement pay or that such is "guaranteed" to civil service employees or is available to them until the prescribed age and service period have both been met.

(f) Listing as "exceptional" or "excellent" opportunities with "many vacancies," civil service positions for which examinations have not been held for years and for which the lists of qualified eligibles exceed the requirements.

(g) Representing that a railway clerkship or any other specified job in the civil service "often" leads to a higher position, or in any other way representing that promotions in the civil service are a matter of course or attainable generally.

(h) Making any incorrect or misleading statements as to the nature of any civil service examination or as to eligibility of an applicant therefor; or exaggerated or misleading representations as to the desirability of qualifying for specified positions.

(i) The use, directly or indirectly, of any so-called "money-back" agreement or similar guarantee, agreement, or contract with students conditioned upon the student's taking or passing, or having the opportunity to take or pass, a future Government or civil service examination or test, or conditioned upon the student's being placed upon a Government or other eligible list, or upon his securing or having the opportunity to secure employment within the field of training pursued—with the capacity, tendency, or effect of misleading students or prospective students by reason of concealment of pertinent facts, or of other circumstances or conditions of its use.

(j) Making any other misleading or deceptive statements or representations, by way of advertising, oral presentation, or otherwise, concerning the character, nature, quality, value, or scope of the course of instruction or educational service offered by him, or in any other material respect, with the tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive students, prospective students or the public. (Jan. 15, 1940.)

2656. Slate—Comparative Tests and Quality.—Seba H. Hamm and John D. Hamm, copartners trading under the firm name of S. H. Hamm & Son, engaged in the sale and distribution of slate in interstate commerce in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The quality of slate is determined by several tests—such as the modulus of rupture test, which determines the weight in pounds the slate will withstand before breaking; and another known as the absorption test, which determines the amount of water absorbed by the slate. A higher weight figure per square inch and a lower absorption percentage indicates a better quality of slate. Slate quarried in the Bangor District of Pennsylvania has for some time been known to the trade and sold as “Genuine Bangor Certificate Slate.” A nearby district where slate is quarried is that of Pen Argyl. The slate from both districts is used principally for roofing purposes and must meet certain specifications prior to acceptance by builders.

Seba H. Hamm and John D. Hamm, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of slate in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from publishing comparative tests purporting to show that slate distributed by them is of higher quality than competitive products when, in fact, the figures given and the assertions made are not warranted by the weight of scientific evidence; or in any other way representing that such slate has greater strength, or greater resistance against absorption of moisture than specified competitive products when such is not the fact, or that it possesses any other superior quality not actually present. (Jan. 19, 1940.)

2657. Miniature Adding Machine—Qualities and Special Price.—Henry D. Mack, sole trader, trading as Tavella Sales Co. and also as Precision Instrument Co., engaged in the manufacture, among other calculating devices, of a miniature adding machine known as the “Tasco Pocket Arithmometer” which he sells and distributes in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Henry D. Mack, in connection with the sale and distribution of his adding machine and other equipment and devices in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing—

(a) That the Tasco Arithmometer or any similar device does the work of higher priced adding machines, or "exactly the same" work as more costly machines; or either directly or inferentially that such device is as accurate, fast, or dependable as more expensive machines used for the same purposes, unless and until such be the facts.

(b) Representing that the price charged for said Arithmometer or other article or device offered for sale is either "low" or "Special," so long as the figure quoted is the regular price or more than the regular price for which the same has been sold or offered for sale by him; or in any other way, either directly or inferentially representing that the advertised offer is special or unusual so long as no price reduction or other trade concession is made therewith. (Jan. 22, 1940.)

2658. Varnishes—Composition and Qualities.—George A. Morhard Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of varnishes and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George A. Morhard Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of varnishes and similar merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing either directly or indirectly—

(a) That its Kauri-Congo Varnish or any similar preparation contains a high percentage of Kauri-Congo gum or of tung oil or either unless and until such be a fact; or in any other way overstating or misrepresenting the gum or tung oil content actually present in said product.

(b) That the oil length of said product is 30 gallons or any other amount or quantity in excess of the true measure thereof.

(c) That said product is water resistant, when such is not a fact.

(d) That said product has a low acid number or that it is non-reactive to zinc oxide, when such are not the facts.

(e) That said product can be used as an all-purpose spar varnish; or in any other way representing that it has the requisite qualities and properties of a spar varnish or is suitable for all the purposes for which spar varnish is used, when such are not facts. (Jan. 22, 1940.)

2659. Mattresses—Exaggerated Fictitious Prices.—Leon T. Clickner and Lawrence R. Clickner, copartners trading under the firm name of Watertown Mattress Co., engaged in the manufacture of bed mattresses in commerce between and among various States of the United States, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Leon T. Clickner and Lawrence R. Clickner, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their mattresses or other products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed they will cease and desist from selling, offering for sale, or supplying to their customers for resale, their products tagged, labeled, or otherwise marked with any false, fictitious, or misleading prices which are in excess of the prices for which said products are intended to be sold and usually are sold in the due course of trade. (Jan. 22, 1940.)

2660. Upholstery Nails or Tacks—Imported as Domestic.—E. H. Tate Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of merchandise, including upholstery nails or tacks, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

E. H. Tate Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from—

1. The use of the words "Boston, Massachusetts" or the letters "U. S. A.," or of the said words and letters in connection or combination each with the other, or in any other way so as to indicate that said products are of domestic make or manufacture, when such is not the fact.

2. Causing the brands or marks on imported products, which indicate the foreign origin or manufacture of such products, to be omitted, removed, erased, or concealed so as to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture of said products. (Jan. 22, 1940.)

2661. Shoulder Brace—Qualities.—The Ohio Truss Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of trusses, abdominal supporters, shoulder braces, and similar articles, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The Ohio Truss Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from labeling, designating, or otherwise referring to a shoulder brace or similar product which it offers for sale as "Long-Life Health Brace"; or representing in any other way that the user thereof may expect thereby to attain health, wealth, youth, or happiness; or that any such results are to be obtained through correct breathing or erect posture per se. (Jan. 23, 1940.)

2662. Neckties—Composition.—Franklin Knitting Mills, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of neckties and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Franklin Knitting Mills, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from selling or offering for sale any silk or silk product which contains any metallic weighting without full and nondeceptive disclosure of the presence of such metallic weighting, together with the proportion or percentage thereof, made in the labels, tags, or brands attached to the merchandise and in the invoices and all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations however disseminated or published. (Jan. 26, 1940.)

2663. Pens and Pencils and Other Office Supplies—Quality and Value.—James R. Kaye, an individual trading as The Lo-Well Co, engaged in the business of selling office supplies, including pencils and carbon papers, by mail order and otherwise, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

James R. Kaye agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description—

1. Of statements or representations to the effect that the pen points of his fountain pens are tipped with iridium, when such is not the fact.

2. Of the phrases, "Fine Quality" or "First Quality" or of any other words or phrases as descriptive of pens or pencils or other products so as to import or imply that said products are of a grade or quality which is higher or better than actually is a fact.

3. Of pictorial or other representations of products which do not accurately and definitely depict the products offered for sale or distributed as premiums, or the effect of which representations tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that said products are of a value greater than represented or that they are identical or of equal quality with the products actually sold or distributed as premiums. (Jan. 26, 1940.)

2664. Wrist Watches—Unique Nature.—Gruen Watch Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of wrist watches and in the sale of certain thereof under the name "Gruen Curvex" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Gruen Watch Co., in connection with the advertisement, sale, and distribution of its Gruen Curvex wrist watches in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of any statement, pictorial, or other representation, the effect of which is to convey or which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the principle involved in the said Gruen Curvex wrist watches is the only way ever found to put a full-sized movement in curved wrist watches or that the Gruen method of construction is the only way to make the movement big enough to give true pocket-watch accuracy in a wrist watch. (Jan. 29, 1940.)

2665. Letterheads and Other Stationery—Manufacturer.—Horace H. Nahm and Jack S. Heller, copartners trading under the firm name of Nahm Photogravure Co., engaged in the designing of letterheads for business stationery, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Horace H. Nahm and Jack S. Heller, and each of them, agreed that in connection with their sale and distribution of letterheads and other stationery in commerce as defined by said act, they will cease and desist from representing that their business includes the manufacture of letterheads or other articles of commerce so long as they neither own, operate, nor control the plant or factory in which such letterheads or other articles are manufactured or made. (Jan. 29, 1940.)

2666. Shoe Polish Pastes—Composition and Patented.—George J. Kelly, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing shoe polish pastes, liquids, and dyes, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George J. Kelly, Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its paste product in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description, or in any other way, of statements or representations which directly assert or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers—

(a) that said paste product is composed of Carnauba wax and turpentine, pure or otherwise, when such is not the fact. If said product is composed in substantial part of carnauba wax and turpentine and in part of an ingredient other than such wax and turpentine, and the words "Carnauba wax and turpentine" are used as descriptive of such wax and turpentine content, then in that case, the said words shall be accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that said product is not composed wholly of such wax and turpentine, but is composed in part of other ingredients.

(b) that the self-service package or container offered or furnished by the said corporation to dealers who purchase its product, is patented, when in fact such is not the case. (Jan. 29, 1940.)

Joseph Paty, agreed to cease and desist from offering for sale or selling in commerce, as defined by said act, imported products not clearly and distinctly marked to show the country of origin of said products. The said individual also agreed to cease and desist from the use on the book or other containers of said products of the phrase "Printed in U. S. A." or the letters "U. S. A." either alone or in connection with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that said products are of domestic origin, or the effect of which tends or may tend to confuse or mislead purchasers or prospective purchasers with respect to the identity of the country of origin of said products. (Jan. 30, 1940.)

2668. Pictures, Photographs and Portraits—Quality, Free Product, Prompt Delivery, Refunds, Etc.—George Edward Martin, an individual, trading as Martin Studios, engaged in the business of making photographs or pictures, especially of children and babies, and in the sale thereof in commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George Edward Martin, in connection with the sale and distribution by him, under the trade name "Martin Studios" or otherwise, of pictures, photographs, portraits, or other related products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, directly or in any manner, that said products made by him or by the said Martin Studios, are of the highest quality and that they will compare favorably with samples displayed to the customer from whom an order for such products is obtained, when such is not the fact. The said George Edward Martin also agreed to cease and desist from the use of statements or representations, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that a finished photograph, portrait, or picture of a particular person, subject, thing or object will be given free to each customer, or that the customer's order for products will be promptly filled and delivered on or before a specified date or occasion, as Christmas, or that the customer will not be required to pay postage or c. o. d. charges on the products, or that the customer's money will be refunded or suitable adjustment made, including a return to the customer of any picture or pictures furnished by the customer to the said Martin Studios, if the customer is dissatisfied with the delivered product, unless and until such promises, statements, or representations are bona fide and the promises made or implied thereby actually are fulfilled. (Jan. 26, 1940.)

2669. Dog and Cat Food—Quality and Composition.—J. S. Morgan and I. C. Morgan and I. H. Morgan, copartners trading as Morgan Packing Co., engaged in the packing of canned foods including dog and cat food, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

J. S. Morgan, I. C. Morgan, and I. H. Morgan, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce as defined by said Act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that their prepared dog and cat food is a "Balanced Ration" or otherwise that it is a balanced food suitable for dogs and cats of every breed and age.

(b) Representing any ingredients of such dog and cat food to be meat byproducts unless and until the same consists of meat byproducts properly so-called.

(c) Representing that such dog and cat food contains 50 percent protein meat and bone scraps or any percentage or proportion thereof in excess of the correct amount or ratio.

(d) Omitting any substantial ingredient such as the water content from the printed formula of said food, or continuing to list therein molasses, tomatoes or other ingredients which are no longer included in such products. (Feb. 1, 1940.)

2670. Fog Lamp—Qualities.—American Automatic Devices Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing a so-called fog lamp for use as an auxiliary driving light for motor driven vehicles, and in the sale thereof under the trade designation "Hy-Power No. 19" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

American Automatic Devices Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its light or lamp device in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of any statement or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the beam of light produced by said device is such that it will illuminate the road in a dense fog so as to assure safe driving for 1,100 feet ahead or that it will penetrate, go under or undermine such fog or give any substantial visibility in fog or thick mist. (Feb. 2, 1940.)

2671. Fur Coats—Nature and Composition.—David Borenstein and Samuel Mesgar, copartners, trading under the firm name of Roebing Fur Shop, engaged in the manufacture of fur coats and garments and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

David Borenstein and Samuel Mesgar, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their fur coats in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use, in advertisements or on labels, tags, brands, or otherwise, of any description, designation, or representation of any fur which deceptively conceals the true name or nature of the fur with the tendency and capacity or effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers, prospective purchasers or the consuming public.

(b) The use of any trade name such as "Sealine," "Beaverette," "Marmink," "Squirrelette," "Minkolette," or other trade designation in a manner which is calculated to or has the capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers, prospective purchasers or the consuming public as to the character, name, nature or geographical or zoological origin of any fur or fur product or a product made partly of fur, or in any other material respect.

(c) The use, falsely or deceptively, in advertisements, tags, labels, brands or other representations of furs, of any trade name or coined name such as "Cocoalette" or other name or words descriptive of the fur as being the fur of an animal which is in fact nonexistent.

(d) The sale or offering for sale, through advertisements or otherwise, of fur-trimmed garments the fur of which is composed of pieces and not of full skins, or of fur garments made in whole or in part of pieces, tails, paws, throats, heads or scraps, or of plate or mats composed of pieces and not of full skins, without fully disclosing such fact, and with the tendency and capacity or effect of misleading or deceiving purchasers, prospective purchasers or the consuming public. (Feb. 2, 1940.)

2672. Metal Social Security Plates—Agents Earnings or Profits.—Maurice Willens, an individual, trading as "U. S. Name-Plate Company" or "United States Name-Plate Company" and as "The Printwell Company," engaged in the sale of metal Social Security plates in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Maurice Willens, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication—

1. That agents, dealers or others engaged in the sale or resale of said products make commissions of $10 to $25 every day or 400 percent profit;

2. That $10 to $25 per day or 400 percent profit are the earnings usually made or realized by agents, dealers or others engaged in the sale or resale of said products.

3. That agents, dealers, or others can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time, which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have theretofore been consistently made in like periods of time by his active full-time agents, dealers or others in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

4. By the use of such words as "up to," "as high as," or any other words or terms of like import that prospective agents, dealers, or others can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of his agents, dealers, or others in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances. (Feb. 5, 1940.)

2673. Thumb Tacks—Foreign Product as Domestic.—Waterbury Tack Co., Inc., a corporation, Shelton Tack Co., a corporation, and Holland Manufacturing Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale of thumb tacks in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Waterbury Tack Co., Inc., Shelton Tack Co., and Holland Manufacturing Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Made in U. S. A." as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for said products or to otherwise advertise the same so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are of domestic origin. If products of foreign origin or make are treated to improve their appearance or for other purpose in the United States of America and reference is made to such treatment, then in that case, a suitable word or words shall be used so as to indicate clearly that said products are merely treated or processed in the United States of America but are not manufactured therein. (Feb. 5, 1940.)

2674. Soilless Plant Growing Chemical—Endorsement, Unique Nature, Qualities, Etc.—Emil Bergman, sole trader under the name and style of Dagmar Plant Industries, engaged in the sale and distribution of a chemical product designated "Quik-Gro" for soilless plant growing, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Emil Bergman, in connection with the sale and distribution of his product in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing either directly or inferentially—

(a) That his product "Quik-Gro" has been endorsed or approved by the National Resources Committee or any other authoritative body when such is not the fact; or that such group or body is authority for a claim that potatoes, tomatoes and/or much of the household food may be produced by the use thereof.

(b) That by the "Quik-Gro" method or any similar method one can have a beautiful flower or vegetable garden in the basement or other place where sunlight is not available; or that fruits and vegetables grown by such soilless method will be free from insects or insecticides; or that "Quick-Gro" will speed up the growth of soil-grown plants.

(c) That reports from any agency of the Soviet Government indicate successful tests made with "Quick-Gro"; or that any such agency ever has tested "Quik-Gro."

(d) That the product has been endorsed or approved by Marshall, Reid & Company, Inc., or by any other nonexistent person, firm or corporation, or by any existing person or concern, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 7, 1940.)

2675. Paper Products—Competitive Products.—Scott Paper Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing various paper products including bathroom tissue and in the sale thereof under the trade name "Waldorf Tissue" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Scott Paper Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its "Waldorf Brand" in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way of statements or representations, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that all products, regardless of their quality, which are offered for sale or sold in competition with the said "Waldorf Brand" contain splinters, rough or thin spots, dirt or other defects. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of any statement or representation which in any way unwarrantably disparages the products of a competitor or competitors. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of any statement or representation which imports or implies or which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that all the products, which are marked by others in competition with the "Waldorf Brand," have the aforesaid imperfections, or any thereof, or contain them to such an extent as to cause the said products of competitors to be harmful or unhealthy to users thereof. (Feb. 8, 1940.)

2676. Oils—Refinery and Sealed.—Bodie-Hoover Petroleum Corp., a corporation, engaged in the business of blending and canning oils bought in bulk from refiners and in selling the same under its own trade brands in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Bodie-Hoover Petroleum Corp. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing itself to be a refiner of petroleum or that the products which it sells are refinery sealed or sealed at the refinery when in fact it neither owns, operates, nor controls a plant or plants in which the oil products sold by it are refined; or that the oils processed and sealed in its own plant are "Refinery Sealed" or "Sealed at Refinery" when such is not the fact. (Feb. 8, 1940.)

2677. Liquors, Gins, Etc.—Distillers.—Distillers Products Corp. of Kentucky, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, and bottling distilled liquors and in the production of gin through the redistillation of alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Distillers Products Corp. of Kentucky, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Distillers" as part of or in connection with its corporate or trade name; and from the use of the word "Distillers" or of any other word or words of similar meaning on its letterheads or printed matter or in its advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or description, in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation is a distiller or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a distillery or distilleries or that the products which it sells and distributes in commerce are distilled by it, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 8, 1940.)

2678. Molds or Forms and Supplies for Concrete Burial Vaults—Qualities or Results.—Automatic Sealing Vault Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling molds or forms and other equipment and supplies for use in the manufacture of concrete burial vaults in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Automatic Sealing Vault Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in interstate commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its printed or advertising matter or in any other way of statements or representations which directly assert or import or imply that concrete burial vaults manufactured in molds or forms and/or containing materials sold by the said corporation will afford or assure enduring or permanent protection to the caskets or bodies encased therein, or that said vaults are and will remain permanently waterproof, or that the application of its so-called waterproofing paints or other preparations to the vaults will prevent permanently the intrusion of water. (Feb. 12, 1940.)

2679. Tuna Fish—Domestic as Imported.—Santo Alioto, Joseph Alioto, Christopher Alioto, Frank Alioto, John Alioto, Samuel Alioto, and Dominick Alioto, copartners trading under the firm names "Santo Alioto & Sons" and "Alto Products Company" engaged in the sale and distribution of canned foods, including tuna fish, in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Santo Alioto, Joseph Alioto, Christopher Alioto, Frank Alioto, John Alioto, Samuel Alioto, and Dominick Alioto, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed that they and each of them would cease and desist from the use on labels affixed to the containers of said products, or in any other way of the word "Tonno" in connection or conjunction with any other Italian word or words, pictorial representation, insignia, or otherwise, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or to the ultimate consumer that said products are products obtained from the coasts of Italy or were packed in and imported from Italy, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 12, 1940.)

2680. Lingerie and Handkerchiefs—Plant or Factory.—Mamary Brothers, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of lingerie and men's and women's handkerchiefs, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Mamary Brothers, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that it owns or operates a plant or factory in Shanghai, China, or Swatow, China, or in any other locality where it does not in fact maintain its own plant or factory; or in any other way representing that it makes or manufactures goods which it imports from China or that it owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured, when such are not the facts. (Feb. 12, 1940.)

2681. Fountain Pens, Electric Shavers and Cameras—Special Prices, Limited Supplies, Manufacturer, Guarantee, "Genuine," Value, Etc.—Federal Instrument Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of cheap fountain pens, electric shavers and cameras in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Only pens of high price and superior quality are sold with a bona fide "Lifetime" guarantee, and the responsible makers thereof repair or replace pens, so warranted, if defective, without charge and without limitation as to time. When the "point" of a pen is designated as being of a certain metal, the trade and consuming public understand such reference to mean that the nib or point thereof is made of some superior hard metal different from the body of the pen, so as to insure smooth writing and lasting qualities. The word "Genuine," when used to describe an article of commerce, invites unreserved confidence in the truthfulness of the description given, and is taken and understood by the public to signify a complete absence of fiction or counterfeit.

Federal Instrument Corp., in connection with its sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing in any way that its regular method of sale is a "close-out sale" or offers "reduced close-out prices," or that the "Supplies are limited," at the prices offered; or that pretended or imaginary savings from operations are passed on to its customers in the form of remarkable price reductions or "super values"; or in any other manner asserting or implying that there is anything special or unusual about such plan of merchandising so long as no real reduction or trade concession is made therewith.

(b) Representing that its customers receive their goods "direct from factory" or "at a fraction of their regular prices" or in any other way, by direct statement or reasonable inference, that said corporation itself manufactures the goods that it sells, thus eliminating all middleman's profits, or that its prices to the customers are any reduction whatsoever from regular retail prices for which these goods are sold, when such are not the facts.

(c) Quoting figures purporting to be the "value" or the "regular," "genuine" or customary prices of articles, which figures are in excess of the prices for which such articles are sold or can be obtained in the usual course of business; or in any other way representing that the value of an article offered for sale by it is more than the price charged, so long as said price is equal to or greater than the ordinary retail price for such or similar articles.

(d) Representing that a price of $1 for a pen and pencil set wholesaling at 40 cents means a "cash discount" of $4 from the regular retail price; or that a price of $2.75 for an electric shaver wholesaling at 80 cents and retailing at $2 means a cash discount of $6.25 from the regular retail price; or that a price of $1.98 for a camera wholesaling at 65 cents and retailing at $1 means a cash discount of $4.52 from the regular retail price or value; or in any other way whatsoever, that a "cash discount" is given or any saving is effected by the buyer where there is none in fact.

(e) Issuance of so-called "cash discount vouchers," "coupons" or "certificates" purporting to represent some advantage, benefit, profit, or avail to the holder when there is none in fact; or representing that such spurious token is "worth $4.00 or more," or worth any sum whatsoever, so long as the prices charged for the goods are the same either with or without the alleged coupon, voucher or certificate.

(f) Representing in any way that a designated article is given "free" or as a gratuity to the purchaser of another article, when in fact the cost of the alleged gift is included, either in whole or in part, in a deceptive price charged for the article offered for sale.

(g) The advertising, issuance or dissemination of a "Lifetime Guarantee," or "Guarantee for Life" or other general guarantee certificates as pertaining to its merchandise; or the designating of any other representation or agreement as a guarantee, guaranty, or warranty which involves a service charge or calls for the payment of additional money by the purchasers of such merchandise.

(h) Use of the word "genuine" or similar word or representation in a manner purporting to certify or tending to emphasize the truthfulness of any advertising claim contrary to fact.

(i) The use of words such as "Genuine Duotone Durium Point" or other words or expressions the effect of which is to import or convey the impression that its pen points are made of or tipped with any purported substance fanciful or real, when such is not a fact.

(j) Representing that the fountain pen which it offers for sale "Writes 3 months on 1 filling," or in any other way exaggerating or misstating the actual capacity, qualities or attributes of such pens. (Feb. 14, 1940.)

2682. Handkerchiefs—Plant or Factory, Foreign Office.—James S. Mack-soud, sole trader as Macksoud Importing Co., engaged in the importation, sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

James S. Macksoud, in connection with his sale and distribution of handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing himself in any way to be a manufacturer of handkerchiefs or other merchandise when he neither owns, operates, nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by him are made; or from representing that he has manufacturing plants of his own at Swatow, China, Shanghai, China, Chefoo, China, or elsewhere, for the production of these or other goods or merchandise when such is not a fact; or from representing that he has an office or place of business in Shanghai, Chefoo or other place where he does not maintain in fact such an establishment. (Feb. 15, 1940.)

2683. Luggage—Fictitious Prices and Reductions.—Sam Skuller, an individual trading as Likley Luggage Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of luggage at retail and by mail order, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sam Skuller, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Quoting, in his catalogs, price lists, labels, tags, or in any other way, fictitious or misleading figures purporting to be the regular sale or list prices of merchandise, or figures which are in excess of the prices at which such articles are sold by him in the normal and usual course of trade.

(b) Representing in any way whatsoever, in his catalogs, trade literature or otherwise, that a discount of 50 percent or any other fictitious reduction from his customary prices is offered the purchaser when such is not a fact. (Feb. 17, 1940.)

2684. Ribbons—Composition.—John C. Welwood Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of ribbons in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John C. Welwood Corp., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Moire Taffeta," "Satin Taffeta" or any other silk connoting word or words, or in any way so as to import or imply that the fabrics to which said words, or any thereof, refer, are composed of silk, when such is not the fact. If the word "Moire" or the word "Taffeta" or the word "Satin" is used properly as descriptive of the construction of a fabric or product containing fiber other than pure silk, then the word so used shall be accurately and nondeceptively qualified by using (in immediate conjunction therewith, and in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness) a word or words clearly naming and disclosing the fiber, fibers or materials of which said fabric or product is composed, stated in the order of their predominance by weight, such as, beginning with the largest constituent; for example, "Rayon and Silk Satin Taffeta" for a fabric of satin taffeta construction and composed of a mixture of rayon and pure silk, each present in substantial proportion but with the silk predominant; or, "Rayon Moire Taffeta," where the product is composed of rayon.

(b) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosure of the fact that the material of which said product is composed is rayon, made clearly and unequivocally in the invoices and labeling and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations thereof, however disseminated or published.

(c) Advertising, branding, labeling, selling or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent; for example, "Rayon and Silk" where the product is composed of rayon and silk, the silk predominating, or "Cotton and Rayon" where the cotton content predominates. (Dec. 8, 1939.)

2685. Smoking Tobacco—Foreign Office.—James Eshelby and Isabel S. Eshelby, executors of the Estate of Fanny L. Eshelby, and as such executors trading under the name "E. O. Eshelby Tobacco Company," engaged in the manufacture of tobacco products, including a smoking tobacco designated "Colonial Smoking Mixture," in competition with partnerships and with corporations, individuals and firms likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

James Eshelby and Isabel S. Eshelby, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, they and each of them, as executors of the estate of Fanny L. Eshelby or in any other capacity, will cease and desist from the use on the packages or containers of said products or in any other way of the words "British Office" or the purported address "2 Wembley Road, Northumberland" and from the use of either the said words or the said purported address so as to import or imply that the business conducted by them has associated or connected therewith a British office or one which is located at the address specified, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 19, 1940.)

2686. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturer.—Embassy Handkerchief Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Embassy Handkerchief Co., Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said Act, agreed to cease and desist from designating, describing or referring to itself as a "manufacturer" of handkerchiefs or other merchandise when it neither owns, operates, nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by it are made; or in any manner, representing that it has a manufacturing plant of its own for the production of these or other goods or merchandise when such is not a fact. (Feb. 19, 1940.)

2687. Handkerchiefs—Foreign Offices, Branch Offices, Stockrooms and Factory.—Cambridge Handkerchief Works, Inc., a New York corporation with its principal place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, and with a factory in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, engaged in the manufacture of men's and women's handkerchiefs between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Cambridge Handkerchief Works, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed it will cease and desist from representing that it maintains foreign offices at Shanghai, China, or Swatow, China, or offices and stockrooms at Chicago, Illinois, or in any other locality where no such office or stockroom exists in fact; or that it has a factory or plant at Passaic, N. J., or in any other place where it does not actually own, operate or directly and absolutely control such a plant or factory wherein the products which it sells are made. (Feb. 19, 1940.)

2688. Corrugated Boxes or Shipping Containers—Manufacturer.—Irving L. Odman Co., a corporation with its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, engaged in the sale and distribution of corrugated boxes or shipping containers in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Irving L. Odman Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from marking or stamping its products with its corporate or trade name together with the words "Certificate of Box Maker" or the word "Maker" or any other word or words of similar meaning so as to import or imply that the said Irving L. Odman Co. makes or manufactures the said products, or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 19, 1940.)

2689. Metal Novelties—Composition.—Henry Bronsther and Miller Bronsther, copartners, trading under the firm name of The Anchor Manufacturing Co., engaged in the manufacture of glassware and glass and metal novelties, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Henry Bronsther and Miller Bronsther, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from branding, labeling, or otherwise designating or describing any product or the metal content thereof as "Sterling Silver" or "Sterling" which is not in fact throughout a homogeneous alloy containing not less than 92.5 percent pure silver. (Feb. 20, 1940.)

2690. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturers and Foreign Factories.—Henry Goldberg and Murray Van Praag, copartners trading under the firm name of Goldberg & Van Praag, engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in commerce in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Henry Goldberg and Murray Van Praag, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed they will cease and desist from representing on their stationery or other printed or advertising matter that they are "manufacturers," or from the use of any other words or expressions of similar meaning so as to import or imply or the effect of which may be to convey the belief to purchasers that they make or manufacture the handkerchiefs offered for sale and sold by them; or that they actually own, operate, or directly and absolutely control the plants or factories in which such products are made or manufactured. They further agree to cease and desist from stating or representing in any way that they own, operate or maintain factories at Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, Swatow, China, Chefoo, North China, or elsewhere when such is not a fact. (Feb. 20, 1940.)

2691. Yeast Feed for Cattle, Poultry, Etc.—Qualities and New Discovery.—Warren E. Lair, an individual trading as Jamaica Milling Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing a prepared yeast culture feed offered as a supplement to grain for the growing and fattening of cattle, hogs, poultry, and other domestic animals, under the trade name "Min-Ro-Lac," in commerce in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Warren E. Lair, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of the Min-Ro-Lac product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from the use in his advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or character or in any other way of statements or representations which directly assert or import or imply—

(a) That the use of said product will reduce or cut feeding costs one-half.

(b) That the said product is a remedy for infectious diseases of the digestive tract.

(c) That it will obviate or remove the Blackhead or Cholera hazard from turkey raising.

(d) That it will cause the production of larger eggs or appreciably increase the egg production of hens fed therewith.

(e) That the addition of one tablespoonful of the product to each grain ration feed for milk cows will result in a noticeable or marked difference in the milk flow or condition of the cows so fed or that the addition of such quantity of the product to the feed rations of horses or mules will act as a wonderful conditioner or renew the life and vigor of such livestock.

(f) That such product is a new discovery.

(g) That 96 pounds of properly balanced feed or any other quantity of such feed in excess of  $32\frac{1}{3}$  pounds is obtainable from the admixture of water to  $\frac{1}{3}$  pound of said product and 1 bushel or 32 pounds of ground oats.

(h) That the said yeast concentrate product will produce a sweet culture instead of an ordinary or usual fermentation of feeds.

(i) That the normal vitamin content of the average ordinary home grown rations is so supplemented by the addition thereto of said product as to assure more rapid daily gains by beeves fed therewith. (Feb. 20, 1940.)

2692. Yeast Feed for Cattle, Poultry, Etc.—Qualities and New Discovery.—Ralph D. Schultz and Arthur J. Reeder, copartners, who, in 1936 and for about 2 years thereafter, were actively engaged under the trade name Min-Ro-Lac Sales Co., in the sale and distribution in commerce of a product known as “Min-Ro-Lac”, in competition with other partnerships, individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ralph D. Schultz and Arthur J. Reeder, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of the Min-Ro-Lac product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed that they, and each of them, will cease and desist from the use in their advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or character or in any other way of statements or representations which directly assert or import or imply—

(a) That the use of said product will reduce or cut feeding costs one-half.

(b) That the said product is a remedy for infectious diseases of the digestive tract.

(c) That it will obviate or remove the blackhead or cholera hazard from turkey raising.

(d) That it will cause the production of larger eggs or appreciably increase the egg production of hens fed therewith.

(e) That the addition of one tablespoonful of the product to each grain ration feed for milk cows will result in a noticeable or marked difference in the milk flow or condition of the cows so fed or that the addition of such quantity of the product to the feed rations of horses or mules will act as a wonderful conditioner or renew the life and vigor of such livestock.

(f) That such product is a new discovery.

(g) That 96 pounds of properly balanced feed or any other quantity of such feed in excess of  $32\frac{1}{3}$  pounds is obtainable from the admixture of water to  $\frac{1}{3}$  pound of said product and 1 bushel or 32 pounds of ground oats.

(h) That the said yeast concentrate product will produce a sweet culture instead of an ordinary or usual fermentation of feeds.

(i) That the normal vitamin content of the average ordinary home-grown rations is so supplemented by the addition thereto of said product as to assure more rapid daily gains by beeves fed therewith. (Feb. 20, 1940.)

Franco Co., engaged in the importation, sale, and distribution of handkerchiefs and embroideries in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Samuel Franco, in connection with the sale and distribution of his merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing in his trade literature or otherwise that he maintains or operates offices or establishments in Swatow, China, or in Chefoo, China, or in any other locality where he does not actually maintain such an office or establishment. (Feb. 21, 1940).

2694. Class and Fraternity Jewelry—Composition.—Bastian Brothers Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of class and fraternity jewelry and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

In the jewelry industry and trade an article described as "gold" is understood to be of 10 carats or better in fineness. "Commercial Standard CS67-38 for Marking Articles Made of Karat Gold" as adopted by representative manufacturers, distributors, and users of karat-gold articles, contains the following definitions:

2b. "Gold" includes any alloy of the element gold of not less than 10 karat fineness. "Karat gold" means an alloy of the element gold of not less than 10 karat fineness.

2e. "Quality Mark" means any mark, as herein defined, indicating or purporting to indicate that any article is composed of gold, or indicating or purporting to indicate the quality, fineness, quantity, weight, or kind of gold in an article.

4. No gold article of less than 10 karat fineness shall have applied to it any quality mark.

Bastian Brothers Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from stamping, branding, labeling, or otherwise designating any article or articles manufactured from any alloy of the element gold of less than 10 carat fineness as "gold," or by the use of any other "Quality mark," indicating or purporting to indicate that any such article is gold. (Feb. 12, 1940.)

Oskamp Nolting Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from representing or designating itself as "Wholesale Jewelers" or its merchandise as "Wholesale Jewelry," and from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description of the words "Wholesale Jewelers" or "Wholesale Jewelry" or of other word or words of similar meaning so as to import or imply that the merchandise sold by the said Oskamp Nolting Co. is obtainable by the purchaser at wholesale prices. Said corporation also agrees to cease and desist from the use of the word "Wholesale" in any way as descriptive of the business conducted by it, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the merchandise purchased from the corporation under the alleged 50 percent discount is the price at which said merchandise or comparable competitive merchandise is sold to the jobbing or retail trade in the usual course of business, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 23, 1940.)

2696. Athletes' Foot Preparation—Qualities and Guarantees.—Ruth Cecil Arden, sole trader as The Verard Co., engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce, of a medicinal preparation under the trade designation "Verard Solution" intended for use in the treatment of athlete's foot, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ruth Cecil Arden, in connection with the sale and distribution of her medicinal preparations in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing by assertion or inference that Verard Solution or any similar product is of itself a competent treatment or an effective remedy for the disease or condition commonly known as athlete's foot.

(b) Directly or inferentially representing that any person using such medication will no longer suffer with red or swollen feet, cracked or peeling skin, itchiness or danger of spreading; or that beneficial results may be expected by the user without regard to the stage of the infection, the presence of accompanying factors or the necessary hygienic measures which must attend any type of medication for such conditions.

(c) Representing that this medication brings "sure" and "Positive" relief or "clears up all cases" of athlete's foot "completely," or "fully" relieves the same in "less than 10 days" or within any other specified time.

(d) Designating such preparation as a "guaranteed product" or its action as bringing "guaranteed relief;" or the use of the words "guaranteed" or "guarantee" or any other word of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, sale, or offering for sale of her products unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as, for example, refund of purchase price. (Feb. 23, 1940.)

ment to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

F. A. Salamy Co., Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that it is a "manufacturer" of handkerchiefs or other merchandise, or in any other way importing or implying that it owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the products sold by it are made, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 23, 1940.)

2699. Candies—Lottery.—Claxton Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof together with punchboards in interstate commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Claxton Candy Co., Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers or retail dealers assortments of candy which are used, or which may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public.

(c) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

(d) Mailing, shipping, or transporting to agents or to distributors or members of the public punchboards, push cards or pull cards or other lottery devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons to sell or distribute any merchandise by the use thereof.

(e) Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices. (Feb. 23, 1940.)

2700. Flour—Lottery.—Abilene Flour Mills Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of flour and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Abilene Flour Mills Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Participating in the cost of, or in any way supplying to or placing in the hands of others, premium flour or other merchandise used or to be used to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale and distribution of flour or other product.

(b) Participating in the cost of, or in any way supplying to or placing in the hands of others, prize-drawing cards or other lottery devices for the purpose of enabling such persons to dispose of or sell any merchandise by the use thereof.

(c) Selling or participating in the sale of any merchandise by the use of prize-drawing cards or other lottery devices. (Feb. 26, 1940.)

2701. Book Matches—Prices, Quality, Free Product, Etc.—Fayette H. Lawson and William A. Lawson, individuals or copartners, trading as Chicago Match Co. and as Book Match Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing book matches and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Fayette H. Lawson and William A. Lawson, in connection with the sale and distribution of their product in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing, directly or by implication, that they sell all their book matches at a price of $7.95 per case of 2,500 books or at any price other than the actual price at which such products are sold by them; or that no extra charge is made for "DeLuxe designs," "Three color covers," or any other style or styles, such as "union labels," and "special red, white and blue covers," when in fact extra charges are made therefor.

(b) Representing that they are "the Quality leader" in the book match industry or that the matches they manufacture and sell are of the "Highest Quality," when such are not the facts.

(c) Stating that their catalogs contain "over 865 Special Book Match cuts" or any other number thereof greater than is actually a fact.

(d) The use in their advertising of the term "three color covers," or of any other term, words, or expression with the capacity, tendency, or effect of creating the impression or conveying the belief to purchasers that the number of colors printed or otherwise inscribed upon the stock from which their book match covers are made is greater than actually is a fact.

(e) Representing that any article is given "free" when receipt of such article is contingent upon any consideration, terms, or conditions, as payment of money or rendering of services, not clearly and unequivocally disclosed in direct connection with the making of such representation.

(f) The use in their advertising or printed matter or in any other way of the words "Bronzing" or "Bronze," or words of similar meaning, as descriptive of their printed match book covers or other printed products so as to import or imply or the effect of which may be to convey the belief to purchasers that such printed product is the result of imparting a gold, silver, or other metallic color by means of powders, painting, or chemical process, when such is not a fact. (Mar. 1, 1940.)

2702. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturer.—M. Zwaifler & Co., Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

M. Zwaifler & Co., Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from designating, describing, or referring to itself as a "manufacturer" of handkerchiefs or other merchandise when it neither owns, operates, nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by it are made; or in any manner, representing that it has a manufacturing plant of its own for the production of these or other goods or merchandise when such is not a fact. (Mar. 1, 1940.)

2703. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturer and Domestic and Foreign Factories.—M. Joseph Rosen, sole trader as Manfield Handkerchief Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

M. Joseph Rosen, in connection with his sale and distribution of handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the designating, describing, or referring to his business as that of a "manufacturer" of handkerchiefs or other merchandise when he neither owns, operates nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by him are made; or from representing that he has factories or plants for the production of these or other goods or merchandise at Passaic, N. J.;

Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Boston, Mass., or elsewhere; or maintains foreign offices at Paris, France; Manchester, England; Swatow, China; Mayaguez, Puerto Rico; Belfast, Ireland; or elsewhere, when such are not facts; or from representing that he has offices of his own in Passaic, N. J.; Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Boston, Mass.; or elsewhere, when in fact the offices so designated or referred to are those of salesmen and are not financed, supervised, and controlled by him. (Mar. 1, 1940.)

2704. Kelp Product—Composition, Qualities, Ailments, Doctor, Etc.—Melvin E. Page, an individual trading as Dental Research Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of a kelp product under the trade designation “Ce-kelp,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Melvin E. Page in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing in any way, directly or indirectly—

(a) That Ce-kelp is “Rich in minerals,” or that it prevents or corrects most of what physicians call the deficiency diseases, or any such.

(b) By statement, inference, or implication, that Ce-kelp or similar product is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for any of the following conditions:

Goiter, heart trouble, tuberculosis, diabetes, anemia, high and low blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, kidney and bladder trouble, frequent colds, nervousness, constipation, acidosis, pyorrhea, over and underweight, cataract, cancer, “etc.”

(c) That any of the following are recognized or properly classified as being deficiency diseases: Heart trouble, tuberculosis, anemia, high and low blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, kidney and bladder trouble, frequent colds, nervousness, constipation, acidosis, pyorrhea, over and underweight, cataract or cancer.

(d) That the main cause of deficiency diseases is lack of mineral elements in ductless glands, or that this or any other kelp product is “literally packed” with such essential elements.

(e) That there is an increasing prevalence of degenerative diseases, or that noted medical authorities are of opinion that the white races will disappear from the face of the earth unless the causes are understood; or by statement or inference that such degenerative diseases are due to “mineral deficiency,” or that Ce-kelp or similar product has any cognizable effect in the prevention, correction, or cure of these or any other diseases whatsoever.

(f) That faulty metabolism is due to impoverished ductless glands; or that Ce-kelp provides "the necessary foods" of the ductless glands, "corrects" metabolism, or supplies the necessary materials for the proper functioning of "all the organs of the human system."

(g) That our common foods do not supply the minerals for the maintenance of health and body; or that centuries of rainfall have washed such minerals from the soil and carried them to the sea, whereby they "cannot get into" our vegetable food plants.

(h) That science has not yet discovered a way in which inorganic minerals may be prepared so that the body can assimilate them, or that in organic form they are builders of the body rather than mere stimulants.

(i) That rheumatism and arthritis are due to alternating excess and insufficiency of phosphorus or calcium in the blood, or that these or cataract of the eye may be removed or cleared up by feeding phosphorus to the glands.

(j) That kelp is "the missing ingredient" containing those substances "most often absent in soil raised food"; or, "definitely" or otherwise, that Ce-kelp is a "normalizer of the body metabolism" or is not a drug.

(k) That Ce-kelp can do no harm to anyone in any way, or that the taking of "too much of it doesn't do any harm"; or that it "positively," or perceptibly, improves the body's disease resisting powers; or restores the impoverished glands; or heals the body in a normal way or at all; or gives resistance to colds and all disease germs or any thereof; or that its continued use will result in a "marked improvement," or any substantial improvement, in general health tone; or tends to "correct," or has any discernible effect upon, the underlying causes of symptoms; or that it feeds the glands, or that in no other way can the organs of the body keep healthy and efficient.

(l) That the endocrine or ductless glands "have charge" of the replacement of the body cells; or that the "boss" endocrine is the pituitary, which sends messages to and regulates opposing glands, restoring order between them and reinstating their "normal condition of check and checkmate."

(m) That white flour and sugar cause the perfect health, physique, and teeth of the primitive peoples to disappear.

(n) That refined foods, generally and without proper qualification, have been deprived of certain food principles, namely, the vitamins and the minerals; or that "fourteen" vitamins are known today, or any number in excess of that recognized by competent medical authority.

(o) That disease conditions for which kelp is given to cattle are "many times more prevalent" in human beings.

(p) That the only way to be sure that all the trace minerals essential to health are in the diet is to make sea food a part of one's daily intake; or that a few Ce-kelp tablets every day amply supply all such trace minerals.

(q) That insurance statistics or any other statistics or records show that over 50 percent of the persons who die in the United States or elsewhere between the ages of 55 and 64, die of diabetes; or so representing that any other percentage or proportion thereof in excess of the actual ratio or number.

(r) That a lowered calcium-carbono-phosphate content of the blood and/or the structure of the hard tissues of the body result from the eating of sugar, or that by the intake of sugar other needed materials are taken out of the blood and tissues.

(s) That effects of a "one-sided salt intake" or the common use of salt are acne, skin eruptions, constipation, diarrhea, or comparable afflictions; or that such intake makes wounds slow to heal or disturbs the blood content of four, or any, valuable salts or substances.

(t) That Ce-kelp supplies all the salts needed by the body, or that the flavor of food is improved with powdered Ce-kelp used as a seasoning.

(u) That potato water is a correct remedy for arthritis, or that Ce-kelp is also a correct remedy therefor, or is better as such a remedy than potato water or any other water.

(v) That the use of kelp changes the level of calcium and phosphorus in the system thereby reducing the susceptibility and increasing the immunity to dental decay; or otherwise representing in any way that Ce-kelp or similar product materially affects the ratio of calcium and phosphorus or the preservation or building of the teeth.

(w) That many of the so-called incurable diseases are not incurable at all, or that "most everything can be cured" by removing the causes for the lack of resistance to diseases by adequate nutrition, or that mineral intake is the first requirement of such adequate nutrition; or the use of any statements or assertions having the capacity, tendency, or effect of creating the impression or conveying the belief to consumers that Ce-kelp or similar product will cure or be instrumental in bringing about a cure of "incurable diseases" or "most anything."

That he will cease and desist from designating himself as "Dr." or "Doctor" unless, whenever so referring to himself, and in immediate connection therewith, it be clearly and unequivocally disclosed that he is a doctor of dentistry and not of medicine; or from representing that he is "one of the leading authorities" or is a recognized authority at all, on calcium-phosphorus blood studies or similar subjects, or that he has given more time and work to the subject than any other person, when such is not the fact. (Mar. 1, 1940.)

2705. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturer.—Jack M. Gemal, sole trader as Gemal Handkerchief Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Jack M. Gemal, in connection with his sale and distribution of handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from designating, describing, or referring to himself as a "manufacturer" of handkerchiefs or other merchandise when he neither owns, operates, nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by him are made; or in any manner, representing that he has a manufacturing plant of his own for the production of these or other goods or merchandise when such is not a fact. (Mar. 4, 1940.)

Sea Food—Nature.—East Coast Fisheries, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of fish and crustacea in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The American lobster, also known as the Northern lobster, is found only along the North American coast from North Carolina to Labrador. It is more abundant and attains its greatest size in the northern part of its range in Eastern Maine and the Maritime Provinces. These lobsters are scientifically known as macrurous crustacean of the genus Homarus. Another type of marine macrurous crustacean of the genus Palinurus is found in southern waters and variously referred to as sea crayfish, spiny lobster, rock lobster, and southern lobster. The term "lobster" has long been associated in the minds of the consuming public with the genus Homarus.

East Coast Fisheries, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of sea-food products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Lobster" as descriptive of a species of food fish other than that properly known as "lobster," the macrurous crustacean of the genus Homarus, unless the said word "Lobster," whenever so used, is accompanied, in equally conspicuous type and in direct connection therewith, by appropriate language identifying the species or locality of such product. (Mar. 7, 1940.)

2708. Merchandise—Foreign Concern or Branch and Imported as Domestic.—London House, Ltd., engaged in the sale and distribution of imported and domestic merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

London House, Ltd. agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "London House, Ltd." as and for its corporate and trade name, or the address London on its trade stationery or the words "London House" or expressions or legends of similar meaning as a brand or label for its merchandise or in its advertising matter, or picturizations depicting English characters or scenes, so as to import or imply or have the capacity or tendency to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that said New York corporation is a London house or company, or manufactures products or conducts a business or maintains a branch in London, or that domestic merchandise manufactured in this country is of English or other foreign origin and imported into the United States. (Mar. 6, 1940.)

2709. Concrete Burial Vaults—Qualities and Test.—W. F. Tomlinson Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of concrete burial vaults, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

W. F. Tomlinson Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that its concrete vaults are “as enduring as the ages,” “as durable as solid granite,” or constructed “to last forever” or in any other way representing by statement or inference that they are everlasting or durable for all time.

(b) Representing that either the material used or the type of construction of such vaults will insure complete protection against moisture, vermin, or all other severe underground dangers to which a vault may be exposed.

(c) Representing that an immersion test in water for a limited time, or any similar demonstration, is “dramatic proof” or furnishes conclusive evidence that such vaults will permanently remain waterproof or will afford or assure enduring or permanent protection to the caskets or bodies encased therein under the conditions of use. (Mar. 8, 1940.)

2710. Advertising Material—Threatening Infringement Suits and Exclusive Territory.—Harry J. Baruch, manager and active directing head of Owen-Fields, Inc., Curtis, Owen, Fuller Corporation, corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of advertising material consisting of cuts, mats, printed, and other matter, in competition with other individuals and corporations and with firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry J. Baruch, Owen-Fields, Inc., and Curtis, Owen, Fuller Corporation, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of advertising material in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representations direct or implied, made either by themselves, or by their canvassing salesmen or agents, that users of competitive advertising copy such as “It’s a Fact,” “Isn’t it the Truth,” or “Where’s Elmer,” or other features resembling or purportedly resembling the prepared advertising copy or displays sold or offered for sale by them, will or may be involved in litigation for copyright infringement or otherwise, unless suits or actions against those threatened are duly and immediately prosecuted.

(b) The circulation, either by themselves or by their representatives, of threats of suit for infringement of copyrights or otherwise among customers or prospective customers of competitors, not made in good faith but for the purpose of or with the effect of harassing or intimidating customers or prospective customers, or of unduly hampering, injuring, or prejudicing competitors in their businesses.

(c) Representing in any way, directly or indirectly, either by themselves or by their agents, that the purchaser of an advertising feature or series sold by them, such as "Its the Truth" or "Where's George," will thereby obtain or be assured of exclusive rights, within a specified territory or otherwise, to the use of any mats, cuts, or prepared advertising copy incorporating the same or similar aspect, approach, or characteristic idea; or that protection of such alleged exclusive rights will be afforded the user, when such are not facts. (Mar. 9, 1940.)

2711. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities.—Acquin Pharmacal Co., a corporation, engaged in the production of a medicinal preparation designated "Acquin" and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Acquin Pharmacal Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its product, "Acquin," in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from statements or representations which convey or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that "Acquin" or similar product is a competent or effective treatment or remedy for headaches, simple neuralgia, colds, sore throat, or other malady, disease, or ailment or is efficacious for any purpose other than as a temporary relief of minor pains or mild discomforts incident thereto. (Mar. 13, 1940.)

2712. Women's Undergarments—Composition.—Martha Maid Manufacturing Co., engaged in the manufacture of women's undergarments and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Martha Maid Manufacturing Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the term or phrase "Pure Dye" as applied to any fiber or fabric or part of fabric unless such material so described is exclusively pure silk without any other other fiber, weighting, excess finishing, or dyeing materials. If the term or phrase "Pure Dye" be used in a truthful and nondeceptive manner as descriptive of the silk content of a mixed fabric, it shall be accurately, clearly, and unequivocally disclosed in immediate conjunction therewith that such term or phrase so employed is used as applying only to the silk content of such mixed fabric; for example, "Rayon and Pure Dye Silk."

(b) Branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed of rayon and other kinds of fiber or substances without full and nondeceptive disclosure, in labels, on tags, invoices and whatever advertising matter is used, of the rayon and other content of such product made by accurately designating and naming each constituent fiber thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent and giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial proportion and also taking such steps in connection therewith as are necessary in the respective transactions to avoid and prevent deception. (Mar. 13, 1940.)

2713. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities.—Professional Laboratories, Inc., engaged in the manufacture of a medicinal preparation designated "Tri-Costivin," in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products and of products for similar purposes, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Professional Laboratories, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its product "Tri-Costivin" or similar preparation, in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing by statement or inference—

(a) That "Tri-Costivin" is not a laxative.

(b) That such or any similar product will normalize or regulate the flow of gastric juice.

(c) That generally and without regard to vitamin deficiencies, this or any like product will invigorate the nervous mechanism or control the stomach or intestinal musculature.

(d) That by the additional influx of function-energizing hormones, said product will increase the activity of the pancreas or the duodenum, when in fact it contains no such hormones.

(e) That by means of bile salts, endocrine gall bladder substance or otherwise, such preparation will regulate the flow of bile. (Mar. 14, 1940.)

2714. Oil Burners—Manufacturer, Corporation, Guarantee, Size of Business, Earnings or Profits, Etc.—James W. Brigham, an individual trading under the assumed name of Brigham Oil Burner Co. and also as "Ace-Heat Oil Burner Div., Metallic Manufacturing Company," Peter Parr, vice president of Metallic Manufacturing Co., and James W.

Brigham, operating individually and as "Brigham Oil Burner Company," as "Ace-Heat Oil Burner Div., Metallic Manufacturing Company," and as "Ace-Heat Oil Burner Div., Metallic Mfg. Co., Peter Parr, President," engaged in the sale in commerce of oil burners for installation in heating and cooking stoves, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

James W. Brigham, Peter Parr and Metallic Manufacturing Co., and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of oil burners or other devices or merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, they will cease and desist from—

(a) The use, or permitting the use, of the words "Ace-Heat" Oil Burner Div., Metallic Manufacturing Company" as a trade name or designation for the individual business of James W. Brigham or any other individual; or in any manner representing that said personal business is that of Metallic Manufacturing Co. or other corporation, or is a "Division" thereof; or otherwise, by collusion, ruse or artifice, imposing upon purchasers and the public under such or any other false or assumed character of business.

(b) The use of the fictitious official title "President," as applied to James W. Brigham in the "Brigham Oil Burner Company" of which he is the sole party in interest, or to Peter Parr in the nonexistent "Ace-Heat Oil Burner Division"; or of any other feigned or pretended appellation with the capacity, tendency or effect of creating an erroneous impression as to the organization and personnel of such business.

(c) Advertising a spurious "Guarantee," or designating as guarantor the Metallic Manufacturing Co. or any other corporation, person or legal entity which has not in good faith duly and formally undertaken to secure faithful performance of the terms of the guaranty offered.

(d) Representing that the burners offered for sale by any of the parties hereto, are manufactured or sold "by the thousands," or otherwise indicating any number thereof in excess of the actual figures.

(e) Representing that the purported "low price" for which these burners are sold is occasioned by or due to "quantity production" or to mass production of any kind, when such is not a fact; or use of the word "flivver" or similar term in a manner the effect of which is or may be to convey the belief that this particular device has influenced the general sale and distribution of oil burners as the "flivver" has done in the automobile field; or in any other manner representing that this is a business of great magnitude or national importance.

(f) Representing directly or indirectly, that "big money," "unlimited profits," a "tremendous market," or a "nice income" from a "few hours a day spare time," or any other impressive or unusual earnings have been realized or may be expected or anticipated by persons selling or handling such product; or that prospective salespersons or other representatives can or may make profits or earnings from the sale thereof which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings theretofore consistently made by those who have sold said product in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances. (Mar. 15, 1940.)

2715. Hosiery and Lingerie Preparation—Qualities, New Product, Fictitious Prices, Special or Limited Offers, Manufacturer, Guarantee, Etc.—Sanford W. Binker, an individual, trading as Superior Sales Co. and as Superior Manufacturing Co., engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a product designated "Superior" for use as a treatment for hosiery and lingerie, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sanford W. Binker, in connection with the sale and distribution of his product in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use in his advertising or printed matter of whatever kind or description of any statement or representation which directly asserts or imports or implies that the treatment of silk hosiery or lingerie with said product will prevent or stop such articles of wearing apparel from running or snagging, rotting, or fading, or will increase the breaking strength of the heel or toes of such hosiery or make the hosiery last three or four times longer than would hosiery not so treated or will reduce hosiery or lingerie expense one half or more, or that the use of said product can be relied upon generally to improve the texture or set the color of silk wearing apparel.

(b) Representing, directly or by implication that said product is "new" or of recent origin or discovery.

(c) Advertising or representing in any manner, as the customary or regular price of his product, any price or value which is in fact fictitious or in excess of the price at which such product customarily is offered for sale and sold in the usual course of business.

(d) Representing as "free" an article included, with another article in a combination offer, when in fact neither article is given free or as a gratuity, but the price paid is the consideration for the two articles purchased, or from representing that any article is given free or as a gratuity, when the alleged gift is included in the consideration paid for some other article.

(e) Advertising in any way so-called "special advertising campaign" offers, when in fact such offers are not unusual or limited as to the time of their acceptance or otherwise, but are the customary offers usually made in the usual course of business.

(f) The use of the word "Manufacturing" as part of his trade name or from the use of the said word or of any other word or term of similar import or meaning in any way so as to import or imply that the said Sanford W. Binker makes or manufactures the product sold by him or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said product is made or manufactured.

(g) The use of the word "guaranteed" or the word "guarantee" or any other word of similar meaning in connection with the advertisement, sale, or offering for sale of his product unless, whenever such word is used clear and unequivocal disclosure shall be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (Mar. 18, 1940.)

United Publishing Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Disseminating any advertisement or advertising matter which conveys or tends to convey the impression or belief that any money or other thing of value is to be given or awarded to any person or persons as a prize, unless all of the terms and conditions under which such prize is to be awarded be clearly and definitely indicated or set forth in immediate connection with such offer.

(b) Representing, inferentially or otherwise, that the solving of a puzzle contained in or forming a part of a contact advertisement or in any follow-up literature or otherwise, will or may result in the winning of an automobile, a money prize, substantial or otherwise, or other thing of substantial value, when such is not the fact.

(c) Statements or representations in or pertaining to contact advertisements, follow-up literature, or otherwise, which infer, import, or imply that persons answering such advertisements or solving puzzles contained therein will attain thereby an opportunity, wonderful or otherwise, to win an automobile, cash prize or other thing of value, or attain any material benefit other than that which may accrue as a result of entering into a subsequent contest or contests, the outcome or determination of which is to depend upon the number of magazine subscriptions or other commodities sold or of services rendered by the various contestants.

(d) Using any progressive, integrated or continuous plan to sell magazine subscriptions, commodities, or merchandise unless every step or phase of the plan is clearly set forth in the first mailing to the prospect, before any money or service is accepted, showing without ambiguity exactly what will be required of the prospect and what compensation or regard will be given for each act or payment required in contending for a prize, award, premium, or other advantage or benefit. (Mar. 19, 1940.)

2717. Electric Brooders—Composition.—Royal Manufacturing Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of poultry equipment and hatchery supplies, including electric brooders, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Royal Manufacturing Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its electric brooders in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising or printed matter or in any other way of the word "Chrome" as descriptive of the heating elements with which its said brooders are equipped, and from the use of the word "Chrome" or of any other colorable imitation of the word "Chromium" in any way as descriptive of said heating elements so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said heating elements are composed of chromium. If the said elements are composed in substantial part of chromium and in part of other metal, and the word "Chrome" is used to refer to such chromium content, then in that case, the word "chrome" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that said heating elements are not composed wholly of chromium but are composed in part of metal other than chromium. (Mar. 19, 1940.)

2718. Face Powder—Laboratories and Manufacturer.—Premier Laboratories, Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of face powder in commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar products, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Premier Laboratories, Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of face powder or other merchandise in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Premier Laboratories, Inc." as and for its corporate or trade name when in fact there are no such laboratories; in any way the effect of which is to import or imply or cause the belief that said corporation actually owns and operates or controls a place devoted to experimental study in any branch of natural science or the application of scientific principles in the preparation of its products or of any drugs or chemicals, when such is not the fact.

(b) Designating, describing, or referring to itself as "Manufacturing Chemists and Perfumers" or in any other way representing itself to be a manufacturer of chemicals, perfumes, or other commodities when it neither owns and operates nor directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the goods sold by it are made; or in any manner, representing that it has a manufacturing plant of its own for the production of these or other goods or merchandise, when such is not a fact. (Mar. 19, 1940.)

2719. Dog Food—Composition.—Variety Foods, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing a canned dog food and in the sale of certain thereof under the trade name "Vigor" in interstate commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Variety Foods, Inc., in connection with the marking, branding, labeling, or advertising of the dog food offered for sale, sold, or distributed by it in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the term "Meat-By-Products" as descriptive of an ingredient of which said food is composed, and from the use of the said term in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said food contains an edible part other than meat which has been derived from the carcasses of animals, as cattle, swine, sheep, or goats in good health and sufficiently mature at the time of slaughter. (Mar. 19, 1940.)

2720. Academic Caps and Gowns—Composition.—Emanuel Cohen, Daniel Cohen, and Abraham Kadis, copartners, trading as National Academic Cap & Gown Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of academic caps and gowns and other articles of merchandise, in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Emanuel Cohen, Daniel Cohen, and Abraham Kadis, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the word "Silk" either independently or as a part of the trade designation "Silk Neu Faille" or in conjunction with any other word or words, in trade indicia, advertisements, or otherwise, to designate or describe fabrics not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm; and from the use of such word "Silk" in any way which may have the tendency or effect to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that products made of other materials are actually made of silk.

(b) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosure of the fact that the material of which such product is composed is rayon, made clearly and unequivocally in invoices and labeling, and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or designations thereof, however disseminated or published. (Mar. 19, 1940.)

2721. Sweaters and Swimming Suits—Composition.—Louis Rubin, sole trader as Princeton Knitting Mills, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of sweaters and swimming suits in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Louis Rubin, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the—

(a) Use in his advertising matter, or as labels, tags, or otherwise of the legend "100% Wool" as descriptive of bathing suits or other garments not composed entirely of wool; or the use of the word "Wool" in any way so as to import or imply that the garment referred to is composed wholly of wool when an integral part thereof is composed of other fibers. If the body of the garment is properly represented as "Wool," but the supporter, plaque, or reinforcement is of other material, then the word "Wool" shall be immediately accompanied by suitable phraseology, in type equally conspicuous, indicating clearly that such designation does not apply to the supporter, plaque, or reinforcement.

(b) Branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product, an integral part of which is composed of rayon and other kinds of fibers or substances without full and nondeceptive disclosure of the rayon and other content of such product, made by accurately designating and naming each constituent fiber thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in a proportion of 5 percent or less by weight; as for example "Cotton and Rayon." (Mar. 20, 1940.)

2722. Electric Dry Shaver—Fictitious Prices.—Miracle Dry Shaver Corp., a corporation, and J. M. Friedman, president and owner of substantially all of its capital stock, engaged in his individual capacity and as president of the corporation, in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce, a type of electric razor of the dry shaver variety under the two trade names "Miracle" and "Shave King" in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Miracle Dry Shaver Corp. and M. J. Friedman, in his capacity as an individual and as president of the said corporation, agreed, in connection with the advertisement, sale, or distribution of products in commerce as defined by said act, to cease and desist from offering for sale, selling, or supplying others with products to which are affixed or which bear or in any manner are referred to by means of any price purporting to be the retail selling price of the said products, when in fact such price is not the regular retail selling price thereof or is in excess of the price at which the product is actually or customarily offered for sale or sold or intended to be sold in the usual course of retail trade. (Mar. 15, 1940.)

2723. Stone Monuments and Markers—Qualities.—Sears, Roebuck & Co., a corporation, operating a number of catalog mail-order houses and conducting a large number of retail stores throughout the United States, selling and distributing merchandise including marble and granite monuments, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., in connection with its sale and distribution of stone monuments and markers in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its printed or advertising matter or in any other way, of the words "lasts forever" or the words "eternally beautiful" or other words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply that the monuments or markers to which said word or words refer will last forever or throughout long periods of time beyond their provable capacity of endurance; and from representing that lettering and ornamentation will show up better on blue vein Vermont marble than on "any other kind," including by inference all other kinds of blue marble when such is not a fact. (Mar. 25, 1940.)

2724. Oil and Oil Products—Refineries.—Allied Petroleum Corp., a corporation, originally organized as the "Allied Refineries, Inc.," engaged in the sale and distribution of oil and oil products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Allied Petroleum Corp. agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Refineries" as part of the corporate or trade name used by it in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its commodities in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; and from the use of the word "Refineries" in any way, the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation is engaged in business as a refinery or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which are refined the commodities offered for sale and sold by it. (Mar. 26, 1940.)

2725. Hosiery—Mills and Manufacturers.—Seven Point Hosiery Mills, Inc., a corporation, engaged as a wholesaler or jobber in the sale and distribution of hosiery in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

2755. Men's Shirts, Ties, Etc.—Manufacturers, Imported, Composition, Nature of Manufacture, Direct Dealing, Value, Etc.—Wellington Manufacturing, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of men's shirts, ties, and other haberdashery in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Wellington Manufacturing, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the word "Manufacturing" as part of its corporate or trade name and of the word "Manufacturers" as descriptive of its business; and from the use of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends to convey the belief that it makes or manufactures the products sold by it or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured.

(b) Representing by picturizations, descriptions, or otherwise that the plant or factory of Unity Shirt Corporation or of any other concern is that of Wellington Manufacturing, Inc.; or in any other way representing that it has a plant or factory of its own or that illustrations depicting a manufacturing plant are those of a plant or factory belonging to and operated by said corporation.

(c) Representing by means of labels, tags, advertising matter, oral presentation or in any other way that fabrics of domestic manufacture are "Imported Fabrics."

(d) The use of the words "Pure Silk of Heavy Quality" or "Silk" independently or as a part of or in conjunction with any other word or words in trade indicia, advertisements or otherwise, to designate or describe fabrics or merchandise not made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm; and the use of such word "Silk" in any way which may have a tendency or effect to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that products made of other materials are actually made of silk.

(e) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosure of the fact that the material of which such product is composed is rayon, made clearly and unequivocally in the invoices, labeling and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations thereof however disseminated or published.

(f) Branding, labeling, or otherwise designating or describing a product as all wool, the fiber content of which is not wool throughout.

(g) Designating or describing neckties or other products not made or fashioned according to the craft of a tailor as "Hand Tailored."

(h) Representing that the goods which it sells are available to the purchaser at manufacturer's prices or at manufacturer-to-consumer prices; or otherwise, by statement or implication in any way representing that its customers save a middleman's profit at the prices quoted.

(i) Representing that the neckties which it offers for sale and sells are of "$2 and $3 qualities"; or, by the use of fictitious valuations or figures or in any other way, directly or indirectly representing that an article of its merchandise is actually worth more than the price charged its customer therefor. (Apr. 11, 1940.)

2756. Manicuring Instruments—Nature.—Wigder Manufacturing Co., engaged in the manufacture of manicuring instruments, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Wigder Manufacturing Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its manicuring instruments or other products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed it will cease and desist from advertising, labeling, branding, or in any other way representing that such products are "rustproof;" or otherwise, by the use of the term "rustproof" or of any word, term or expression of similar import, representing that articles which have not been scientifically processed in a manner that will absolutely prevent the rusting thereof, are rustproof. (Apr. 11, 1940.)

2757. Chromium Plated Steel Furniture—Composition.—Emil J. Paidar Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of professional furniture, barber shop fixtures, and beauty parlor equipment in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Emil J. Paidar Co., in connection with its sale and distribution of chromium plated steel furniture in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of trade designations or brands "Chrometube" or "Chromedtube" as applied to or descriptive of products not composed throughout of chromium metal; and from the use of the word "Chrome" or the word "Chromed" or any similar word coined or otherwise in its advertising matter or in any way as descriptive of the metal content of a product which is not chromium throughout. If in referring to products made of steel which is merely coated or covered with chromium, the words "Chrome" or "Chromed" or words of similar meaning or implication be used as descriptive of such coating or covering, then in that event the word used shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words as "plated," so as to indicate clearly that such metal products are not composed throughout of chromium. (Apr. 12, 1940.)

2758. Linens and Handkerchiefs—Manufacturers and Foreign Factories.—Sabbagh Brothers, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of decorative linens and handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sabbagh Brothers, Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of decorative linens, handkerchiefs, or other products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Manufacturers" as descriptive of its business and from representing that it has plants or factories for the production of such or any other goods at Chefoo, China; Swatow, China; Shanghai, China; or elsewhere. It also agreed to cease and desist from the use of any other word or words of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that it makes or manufactures the products sold by it or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured. (Apr. 12, 1940.)

2759. Handkerchiefs—Nature of Manufacture.—New York Handkerchief Manufacturing Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

New York Handkerchief Manufacturing Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its handkerchiefs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use, directly or indirectly, of the term "Pre-Shrunk" or the term "Shrunk" or word, term, mark, label, or representation of like effect or similar import, as descriptive of its goods when the same are not in fact shrinkproof or nonshrinkable, or have not in fact been fully shrunk, or preshrunk to the extent that no residual shrinkage is left remaining in such goods. If the term "Pre-Shrunk" or the term "Shrunk" be used properly to indicate that such goods have undergone the application of a shrinkage process and have been shrunk to a substantial extent but as to which there remains a certain amount of residual shrinkage, then such term or word shall be accompanied as an integral part thereof or in immediate conjunction therewith, by a truthful phrase, statement or assertion clearly and unequivocally setting forth in percentage or percentages the amount of residual shrinkage remaining in both the warp and the filling, or in the warp or the filling whichever has the greater residual shrinkage; for example, "Pre-shrunk (or shrunk)—will not shrink more than —%." The percentage of residual shrinkage so designated shall not be less than the percentage shown under recognized and reliable test methods such as Commercial Standard CS59-39. (Apr. 12, 1940.)

2760. Diapers—Sterilized.—Earnshaw Knitting Co., engaged in the business of selling hosiery and garments, including diapers known by the trade name "Vanta," for infants and children, in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Earnshaw Knitting Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its packaged products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from the use on its cartons or in its advertising matter of the word "sterilized" or of any other word of similar implication as descriptive of products which are not in a state of sterility at the time of their removal from the package by the purchaser thereof; and from the use of the said word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said products are free from pathogenic bacteria and other micro-organisms at the time of their removal from the package by the purchaser thereof. (Apr. 15, 1940.)

2761. Stock Feeds—Composition, Nature, Etc.—Western Mills, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing stock feeds, including a product which it has sold in interstate commerce under the trade names or designations "Sioux Prize Mineral Meat Scraps" and "Sioux Mineralized Meal," in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Western Mills, Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist—

1. From the use of the word "meat" either alone or in connection with the words "scraps" or "meal" in the trade name or designation for its product or otherwise to describe or refer to said product which is not composed wholly of meat, meat scraps, or meat meal; unless, if said product is composed in substantial but less than a predominant part of meat or meat products, and the word "meat" is used to refer to such meat content, then in that case, it shall be made to appear, clearly and unequivocally, by other suitable words or manner, that said product is not composed wholly or in predominant part of meat or meat products or meat meal.

2. From describing or representing its product to be the "one and only balancer" when in fact, there are available on the market other substances of the same or substantially the same value and which are intended for similar uses.

3. From the use of any statement or representation relating to the proportions of savings in feeding costs allegedly obtained from the use of said product, when in fact, there is no authentic basis for such claimed savings. (Apr. 15, 1940.)

2762. Pens—Nature.—Eagle Pencil Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of pens, pencils and allied products, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

When pens are "Tipped," the trade and the consuming public understand the term to mean that the nib, or point, thereof, is made of some superior hard metal different from the body of the pen, to insure smooth writing and lasting quality.

Eagle Pencil Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its pens or other products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the descriptive designation "Iridoid" as applied to or in connection with pen points which it sells or offers for sale; and from the use of the word "Iridoid" or any other coined or fictitious word, term or expression the effect of which is or may be to import or imply or convey the impression that pen points so designated are made of or tipped with any purported substance fanciful or real having special or exceptional qualities. (Apr. 15, 1940.)

with Herman M. Bilski, Alfred A. Bilski, and Wolf Levy in the business of the purchase, repair, and resale of used automobile tires in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Perry-Field Tire & Rubber Co. and the said Herman M. Bilski, Alfred A. Bilski, and Wolf Levy, in connection with the advertisement offering for sale, sale or distribution of tires in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed they and each of them will forthwith cease and desist from—

1. The use of the word "reconditioned" or of any other word of similar import, without qualification, or of the picturization of a tire or tires purportedly equipped with treads equivalent to or simulating those of new tires, or of the said picturization in connection with the said unqualified word, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to customers or prospective customers that each of the tires to be furnished them will be equipped with treads like those on new tires or that the treads thereof will be of such good, sound condition as are the pictured treads, namely, the treads on new tires.

2. Requiring customers, who seek to avail themselves of the advertised 12 months service, to ship their tires to the aforesaid Chicago office for inspection and to pay the transportation cost of such shipment as well as the transportation cost of the tires sent for replacement, unless the fact that such conditions are imposed and such charges made is clearly and unequivocally set out and stated in the advertisement.

3. The use of any statement or so-called agreement which purports to assure continuity of service from said tires which is improbable under the conditions of their work.

4. The use of the words "For a limited time only" or of any other words of similar meaning in connection with the alleged gift offer of merchandise, when in fact such gift offer is an ordinary and customary one made in the usual course of business. (Apr. 15, 1940.)

2764. Insecticides—Containers or Packages of Competitor.—Lilly Products Co., Inc., engaged in the business of manufacturing insecticides, including an arsenical preparation designated "Ant Cups" to be used as an ant and roach eliminant, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among various States of the United States in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harris Products Co., is the name of a concern located in Miami, Fla., where it has been engaged at all times since the latter part of 1926 in the business of manufacturing an ant and roach insecticide and in the sale thereof, under the trade designation "Ant Buttons," in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in competition with other concerns engaged in the sale of products intended for similar uses. In selling and distributing its products in commerce, the said Harris Products Co. at all times has caused and now causes its insecticide, green in color, to be placed in bottle caps, a number thereof being packed in containers of a distinctive size and shape, coloring and wording; and the said products, due to such characteristic packing and dressing, have become well and favorably identified in the public mind as products manufactured by the said Harris Products Co. and which had been sold by it in the competitive market for a number of years prior to the doing of the acts and things by Lilly Products Co., Inc., hereinafter set forth.

Lilly Products Co., Inc., agreed that it will cease and desist forthwith from offering for sale or selling in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, its insecticides placed in containers or packages whose dress or appearance is contrived or formed, as by means of the color effects used or of pictorial or other designs or printed words or statements in type of a size or kind, so as to simulate the dress or appearance of the containers or packages in which similar merchandise is sold or offered for sale by a competitor, with the tendency or capacity to confuse, mislead or deceive purchasers into the belief that its merchandise is the merchandise of a competitor. (Apr. 16, 1940.)

2765. Candy—Lottery Schemes.—F. C. Klotz, Jr., sole trader as Klotz Confection Co., engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof together with push cards in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

F. C. Klotz, Jr., in connection with his sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling or distributing candy, or any other merchandise, so packed and assembled that sales of such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public, are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery scheme, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(b) Supplying to, or placed in the hands of, others assortments of candy, or other merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public.

(c) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy, or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public.

(d) Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (Apr. 18, 1940.)

2766. Oil Burner Devices—History, Comparative Data or Merits, Scientific Facts, Qualities, Safety, Earnings, Etc.—Diagraph-Bradley Stencil Machine Corp., engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among various States of the United States of oil burners of the so-called "blue flame" type for installation in stoves, ranges, and the like, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Diagraph-Bradley Stencil Machine Corp. agreed that, in connection with the advertisement or offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its devices in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, it will cease and desist from stating or representing, either directly or by implication—

1. That its device is a new invention.
2. That the greater proportion of air to oil consumed in its device is so substantially different from the proportion of air to oil generally consumed in other oil burners as to be a factor of economical use for consideration in connection with the purchase of its device.
3. That the fuel oil consumed in the device is cheaper than coal in all sections of the country or is 35 percent more economical than coal, wood, or gas generally.
4. That there is scientific basis for the claim that the heat obtained from the device is twice as hot as other heat, or, in fact, is any hotter than other heat.
5. That all of the features of the device, including lighting, are automatic.
6. That the device assures absolute or perfect safety.
7. That exclusive trade territory is allotted or reserved by the corporation to each of its agents.
8. That a burner actually is given free or as a gratuity to the agent to start him in business for himself, or for any other reason, when in fact, the burner is obtained by the agent for a monetary or other consideration.

9. That its agents, salesmen, or other representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have heretofore been consistently made in like periods of time by its active, full-time agents, salesmen, or representatives in the ordinary and usual courses of business and under normal conditions and circumstances. (Apr. 18, 1940.)

2767. Paint Products—History, Comparative Data and Merits, Qualities and Competitive Products.—Nu-Enamel Corporation, engaged in the manufacture of a general line of paint products, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Nu-Enamel Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, agreed it will cease and desist from representing—

(a) That Nu-Enamel enamelled paint is the first basic improvement in house-paint in over 400 years, or that all good painters so agree; or that from the year 1521 until Nu-Enamel invented enamelled paint there had been “over 400 years of stagnation” in the art of making paint.

(b) That Nu-Enamel Corporation was the first to discover the process for using tung oil as a base for paint, enamel and varnish.

(c) That Nu-Enamel enamelled paint “Lasts 3 times as long” as lead-and-oil paints, or lasts for any specified length of time longer than ordinary paint.

(d) That a surface painted with Nu-Enamel will, after a considerable period such as 5 years, be restored to its original luster and beauty or to its original appearance by the simple operation of washing.

(e) That lead-and-oil paint, or “even the best grade” thereof, produces a “shocking” appearance, or that a lead-and-oil paint film “is not possible to clean successfully”; or that the three basic ingredients of Nu-Enamel possess certain distinct virtues not found in ordinary lead-and-oil paint; or that linseed oil will combine with mist or rain and disappear from the paint film; or that the lead pigment in ordinary paint lacks strength and oxidizes, or rapidly causes immediate chalking and color fading. And the said Nu-Enamel Corporation further agrees not to publish similar or other disparaging statements as to competitive products, or to disseminate advertising material or representations, by assertion, picturization, or inference, to the effect that lead-and-oil paint products are inherently inferior and unsatisfactory for the purposes used. (Apr. 18, 1940.)

Mark D. Hodges, in connection with his sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling or distributing candy, or any other merchandise, so packed and assembled that sales of such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public, are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery scheme, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy, or other merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public.

(c) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy, or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public.

(d) Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (Apr. 18, 1940.)

2769. Candy, Pipes and Cigarettes—Lottery Schemes.—Gorton Cigar and Candy Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of lottery assortments of candy, pipes, and cigarettes in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Gorton Cigar and Candy Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of candy, pipes, cigarettes, or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed it will cease and desist from—

(a) Selling or distributing candy, pipes, cigarettes, or other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery scheme, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(b) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others candy, pipes, cigarettes, or other merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public.

(c) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with candy, pipes, cigarettes or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise, to the general public.

(d) Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (Apr. 17, 1940.)

2770. Automobile Tires—Composition.—Falls Rubber Co. of Akron, Inc., engaged in the business of manufacturing automobile tires and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Falls Rubber Co., of Akron, Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its tires in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist forthwith from marking, stamping, branding, or labeling said tires with either the phrase "Silent Safety Six" or "Heavy Duty 6" or with any other phrase of similar implication, the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief that the tires so referred to are composed, constructed, or equipped with six plies. The said corporation also agrees to cease and desist from the use on its tires or the wrappings thereof or in connection with the advertisement, sale or distribution of such tires of any mark, stamp, brand, or label which imports or implies that the said tires contain more plies in their construction than they actually contain. (Apr. 17, 1940.)

2771. Pipes, Cigars and Tobacco Products—Lottery Schemes.—Rothenberg & Schloss Cigar Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of pipes, cigars, and tobacco products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Rothenberg & Schloss Cigar Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its cigars, tobaccos, and pipes in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, cigars, tobaccos, and pipes, or other merchandise, together with punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public.

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, either with cigars, tobaccos, and pipes, or other merchandise, or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public.

(c) Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (Apr. 19, 1940.)

2772. Cigarettes—Factory, Importer and Branches.—Peter Zaphirio, sole trader as A. Zaphirio & Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of cigarettes under his private brand of “Zaphirio” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Peter Zaphirio, in connection with his sale and distribution of cigarettes or other products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the word “Manufacturers” as descriptive of his business or of the legend “Fac. No. 355, 2d Dist. N. Y.,” in a manner importing or implying that such factory is his own; and from the use of any other word or words of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that he makes or manufactures the products sold by him, or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured.

(b) Representing that the cigarettes sold by him are “Blended from our own direct importation of choice Turkish tobacco”; or in any other way representing that he is an importer of such tobacco or of any other commodity.

(c) Representing that he has branch places of business in New York or in Cavalla Macedonia or elsewhere. (Apr. 19, 1940.)

2773. Casein Glue—Qualities.—Herman J. Reich and A. W. Render, copartners trading as Magic Iron Cement Co., engaged in the business of selling a casein glue and in the sale thereof under the trade name "Magic" in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Herman J. Reich and A. W. Render, in connection with the sale and distribution of their casein glue in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed they and each of them will cease and desist from the use in their advertising or printed matter, on their labels or in any other way of the word "waterproof" or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication as descriptive of their said glue, which is not, in fact, waterproof, and from the use of such word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said product is impervious to water or its effects. (Apr. 19, 1940.)

2774. Oil Burner Device—History, Comparative Data or Merits, Free Product, Exclusive Territory, Etc.—The United Factories, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of oil burners for installation in stoves and furnaces, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

United Factories, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that the device sold by it is a new cheap-type oil burner or that it burns cheap oil in a new way; or by the use of similar terms or phrases or otherwise, representing that the heating process employed in its open-pool or pot-type oil burners is an innovation or involves any new principles; or inferentially or otherwise that such burners operate satisfactorily with grades of oil inferior to or cheaper than the grades which should be used therein.

(b) Representing that the oil burners which it sells furnish twice the heat rendered by coal or wood, either at half the cost or at smaller cost, or at all; or by statement or inference representing generally or without due regard to circumstances and environment that the heat from such oil burners is any greater than that from coal or wood or is any cheaper.

(c) Representing that any article is given "free" or as a gratuity when the receipt of such article is contingent upon any consideration, terms, or condition, as payment of money or rendering of services.

(d) Representing by statement or inference that exclusive trade territory is or may be given, allotted, or reserved, either "free" or for a consideration or otherwise, to any person, or that agents or salespersons are designated for any territory or district with exclusive agency or selling rights therein. (Apr. 22, 1940.)

2775. Corn and Callous Pads—History, Qualities, Comparative Data or Merits, Guaranteed, Opportunities, Earnings, Free Products, Etc.—Edna Foster, a sole trader as American Royal Products Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of corn and callous pads in commerce between and among various States of the United States, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Edna Foster, in connection with her sale and distribution of corn pads or other commodities in commerce as defined by said act, agreed she will cease and desist from representing—

(a) That the "Riteway" Corn and Callous Remover or any product of similar composition is amazing, new, marvelous, sensational, or different, or has outstanding or other features over all existing types; or that it stops pain in 3 seconds or removes corn by the roots in 3 days or other specified time; or in any way, by statement or inference representing that such preparation is actually superior to or will accomplish more than like products on the market.

(b) That the "Riteway" Corn and Callous Remover is "$1,000 guaranteed"; or that sales thereof by dealers are guaranteed or "double money back" guaranteed; or in any other way, by statement or inference, representing that any money or bond in the sum of $1,000 or other amount has been posted to secure the faithful performance of an undertaking in connection with the purchase or use of said commodity, or that there actually is any guaranty pertaining thereto.

(c) That the sale of said product is going like wildfire for agents, demonstrators, or crew managers, or that an agent or vendor thereof can or may expect to turn $1 into $27, or make $2 to $3 an hour, or develop a steady and permanent big business in the marketing thereof; or otherwise representing, directly or by implication, that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make profits or earnings which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings theretofore consistently made by active full-time dealers or salesmen of said commodity in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

(d) That the money-making plan offered in connection with the sale of said product is either wonderful or secret, or that this or the athlete's foot prescription, the foot exercises or any other thing is given "Free" when receipt thereof is contingent upon any consideration, terms, or conditions as payment of money or rendering of services, not clearly and unequivocally disclosed in direct connection with the making of such representation.

(e) That a charge of 10 cents, or other amount, is intended merely "for mailing and handling" of a sample package when in fact such sum covers the full price for which said commodity is regularly sold and delivered; or representing that such package is worth 25 cents or any amount in excess of that for which it is usually sold; or that a commodity is given "with my compliments" where money has been paid therefor.

(f) That she has paid $50 or any other sum for her athlete's foot prescription; or by designating it as a "$50 Formula" or in any other way, representing that such prescription is worth $50 or other amount in excess of the actual cost thereof.

(g) That E. L. Fox is the president of American Royal Products Co.; or otherwise, by the use of fictitious names, titles, or designations, representing that her business is incorporated or extensive in size and operation. (Apr. 22, 1940.)

(a) The use of the word “Mills” as part of his trade name and of the word “Manufacturers” as descriptive of his business; and from the use of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that he makes or manufactures the products sold by him, or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured.

(b) Representing that his place of business is in Hickory, N. C., or that his place of business in New York City is but a branch or sales office thereof; or by the use of these or any other fictitious designations or addresses, representing that he has a hosiery mill or place of business located in the cotton-mill section of the country or that his address in New York City is other than his sole place of business.

(c) Representing that he sells men's hosiery "at mill prices," "Direct from Mill to Consumer" or "From Manufacturer to Consumer" or that he distributes "our" mills' production to "the many large organizations throughout the entire United States"; or by a statement or inference representing in any way that his customers buy direct from the mill, thereby eliminating middlemen's profits, or that he is a distributor for any mill in the sense of his being its authorized general sales agent, or that his business extends throughout the entire United States or includes many large organizations among its customers.

(d) The use of the word "Silk" in trade indicia, advertisements, or otherwise, to designate or describe hose or merchandise not made wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm; and the use of such word "Silk" in any way which may have the tendency or effect to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that products made of or containing other material are composed of silk.

(e) Branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed of rayon and other kinds of fiber or substances without full and nondeceptive disclosures of the rayon and other content of such products, made by accurately designating and naming each constituent fiber thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in a proportion of 5 percent or less by weight; for example, "Rayon, Cotton and Silk."

(f) Representing that the regular retail value of the hose sold by him is $3 per dozen; or representing in any other way that the regular retail price or the true value of such merchandise is any amount in excess of the price for which he sells the same and for which comparable products are actually or customarily being sold in the retail market; or in any other way placing a fictitious or exaggerated valuation upon the merchandise sold and offered for sale by him.

(g) Representing the usual and customary price for which he sells his products as a "special price"; or representing in any other way that a price is "special" so long as no reduction or other trade concession is made therewith. (Apr. 26, 1940.)

2790. Copper-Steel Sheets—Qualities and Results.—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing copper-steel sheets, among other things, to be used in the construction or manufacture of many articles, as grave vaults and caskets, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter or in the advertising supplied by it to others for their use of statements or representations which directly assert or import or imply—

1. That said copper-steel sheets retain the same degree of resistance to deterioration caused by rust, corrosion, or pitting, resulting from their burial in soils generally, as they possess, when subjected only to atmospheric conditions above ground.

2. That burial vaults or caskets made of "copper-steel" sheets are more durable or longer lived or more resistant to rust corrosion, or pitting (when submerged in the soils) than vaults or caskets made of plain steel sheets of like weight and thickness buried in soils of the same or similar chemical nature or action.

3. That the said corporation has available or on file records of numerous disinterments which show copper-steel vaults to be in excellent condition after many years under ground.

4. That vaults made of copper-steel have been completely proved by the performances of hundreds of vaults now in use.

5. That the records show that U. S. S. Copper Steel Vaults were still in good condition when disinterred after from 17 to 21 years interment. (May 1, 1940.)

2796. Cleaning Fluid—Qualities and Laboratories.—Harry Teichlauf, an individual trading as Textile Laboratories, engaged in the sale of a cleaning fluid under the trade designation "Textilene" in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry Teichlauf in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on his labels, or in any other way—

1. Of the statements "Removes all stains," "It is particularly excellent for Lipstick stains" or of any other statement or representation of similar implication when in fact, the use of such product will not return to their original appearance all kinds of fabric materials, regardless of the nature of the stain or marking to which the materials have been subjected;

2. Of the statement "It will not leave spots, rings or discoloration" or of any other similar representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said product, when applied only to the spot sought to be removed from certain fabrics, as weighted silks, will leave no ring or will not cause a resultant discoloration;

3. Of the word "Laboratories" as part of his trade name or in any way, when in fact the said Harry Teichlauf does not own and operate or control the laboratory in which the cleaning fluid sold by him is made or manufactured. (May 1, 1940.)

2797. Pianos and Other Musical Instruments—Terms and Conditions.—E. E. Forbes & Sons Piano Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the retail sale of pianos and other musical instruments, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein:

E. E. Forbes & Sons Piano Co., Inc. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description of the statement "No Money Down," when in fact, a down payment generally is required and insisted upon in the sale of such instruments, and from the use of the said words or of any other words of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to prospective purchasers that the instruments offered for sale under such representation may be purchased without the making of any down payment. (May 2, 1940.)

2798. Candies, Etc.—Lottery Schemes.—Hollander, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of confectionery and in the sale and distribution thereof in assortments together with push cards, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Hollander, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling or distributing confections, candies, or any other merchandise, so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery scheme, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others confections, candies, or other merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public;

(c) Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with confections, candies or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public;

(d) Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (May 2, 1940.)

2799. Men's Clothing—Custom and Hand Tailored and Composition.—Ted Brooks Clothing Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of men's clothing, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ted Brooks Clothing Co., Inc. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing any garments offered for sale and sold by it as "custom tailored" which are not in fact made to order for the persons buying same.

(b) Representing any garment only partially finished by hand as being "hand tailored throughout".

(c) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosure of the fact that the material of which such product is composed is rayon, made clearly and unequivocally in the invoices and labeling and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations thereof, however disseminated or published. If the word "Celanese" be used to designate a product composed of rayon, such word shall be immediately accompanied by the word "Rayon" printed in type equally conspicuous so as to indicate clearly that said product is rayon, and if the word "Satin" is used properly as descriptive of the construction of a fabric composed of rayon, then such word shall be accurately and non-deceptively qualified by the word "Rayon" in type equally conspicuous; for example, "Celanese Rayon Satin." (May 2, 1940.)

2800. Hosiery—Mills.—B. Ontra Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Reggie's Hosiery Mills, engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

B. Ontra Co., Inc. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Mills" as part of the trade name under which it offers for sale or sells its products in commerce as defined by the said act; and from the use of the word "Mills" or of any other word of similar implication in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory wherein are made or manufactured the products offered for sale and sold by it. (May 2, 1940.)

2801. Paint and Oil Products—Composition, Refining, Etc.—Carl L. Ficken, an individual trading as Noble Refining Co., engaged in the business of selling paint and oil products in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Carl L. Ficken in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith—

1. From the use of the word "linseed" either alone or in connection or conjunction with the word "blended" or with any other word or words as descriptive of a product which is not composed of pure linseed oil or a blend of pure linseed oils, and from the use of the word "linseed" in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the product referred to is composed of pure linseed oil, when such is not the fact.

2. From the use of the word "turpentine" either alone or in connection or conjunction with the word "blended" or with any other word or words as descriptive of a product which is not composed of pure turpentine or a blend of pure turpentines, and from the use of the word "turpentine" in any way, which tends or may tend to cause the belief that the product referred to is composed of pure turpentine, when such is not the fact.

3. From the use of the word "Refining" as part of his trade name, and from the use of the word "Refining" or the word "Producers" or of any other word or words of similar implication, when in fact, the said individual does not produce or refine the products sold by him, that is to say, does not actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the refinery or factory in which said products are produced or refined. (May 3, 1940.)

2802. Knitting Yarns—Composition and Factory.—Joseph A. Keller, an individual, trading as F. & K. Yarn Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of knitting yarns, in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Joseph A. Keller in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

1. Representing that said products, or any thereof, are composed of fibers or materials other than those of which the same actually are composed.

2. Using the word "Cashmere" or the word "Cashiere" or of any other word simulating the word "Cashmere" to designate a product which is not composed wholly of the hair of the Cashmere goat.

3. Using the word "silk" or "crepe" or any other silk-connoting word as descriptive of a product which is not composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

4. Using the word "tweed" as descriptive of a product which is not composed of wool.

Provided, That if the product is composed in substantial part of either cashmere, silk or tweed, and the word "Cashmere," "Silk," or "Tweed" is used properly to describe such cashmere, silk or tweed content, then in that case, the said word "Cashmere," "Silk," or "Tweed" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type and which accurately describes each other constituent fiber or material of which the product is composed in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

5. Using the words "Pure Boucle" as descriptive of a product composed of rayon, or otherwise to advertise, offer for sale, sell or distribute a product composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly and unequivocally disclosing such rayon content and, when the product is composed in part of rayon, from failing to disclose each constituent fiber or material by name in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

6. From using the word "Factory" or of any other word of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said Joseph A. Keller makes or manufactures the products sold by him or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the factory or plant in which said products are made or manufactured. (May 3, 1940.)

2803. Candy Bars—Food Value.—F. B. Washburn Candy Corp., a corporation engaged in the business of manufacturing candy bars and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

F. B. Washburn Candy Corp., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing that its said products are equal in food value to either 2 eggs, 2 baked potatoes, 2 lamb chops, or a glass of milk. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of any statement or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that its candy bar products contain food value greater than is actually the fact. (May 6, 1940.)

2804. Sales Promotion Plan—Lottery Devices and Earnings or Profits.—R. Thomas Lincoln and Henry Thompson trading as Volume Sales Promotion Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of a sales promotion plan known as "Swap for Cash," in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

R. Thomas Lincoln and Henry Thompson in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Selling or distributing sales promotion cards or any other device so designed that their use by retail dealers constitute or may constitute the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

(b) Supplying to or placing in the hands of retail dealers or others, sales promotion cards or sales booster plans or schemes or any other devices which are used or which may be used without alteration or rearrangement thereof to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise when distributed to the consuming public.

(c) Furnishing or supplying to dealers display posters or circulars or other advertising literature bearing legends or statements informing the public as to the manner in which said sales promotion cards or other lottery devices are to be or may be distributed and used.

(d) Representing directly or by implication that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time, which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have theretofore been consistently made in like periods of time by its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

(e) Representing directly or by implication by the use of such words as "up to" "as high as," or any words or terms of like import that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances. (May 6, 1940.)

2805. Casein Glue—Qualities.—L. B. Allen Company, Inc., a corporation, engaged under the trade name "O. R. Chemical Company" in the sale of a casein glue, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

L. B. Allen Co., Inc. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on its labels or in any other way of the word "waterproof" or of any other word or words of similar import as descriptive of said glue which is not, in fact, waterproof; and from the use of such word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said product is impervious to water or its effects. (May 6, 1940.)

2806. Handkerchiefs—Manufacturers.—Isaiah S. Assin and Mac Ancona, copartners, trading as I. S. Assin & Co. engaged in the sale and distribution of handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Isaiah S. Assin and Mac Ancona in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Manufacturers" as descriptive of their business. They also agree to cease and desist from the use of any other word or words of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that they make or manufacture the products sold by them, or that they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which such products are made or manufactured. (May 6, 1940.)

2807. Women's Undergarments—Composition, Nondisclosure and Origin or Sponsorship.—Blossom Products Corp., a corporation engaged in the manufacture of women's undergarments and in the sale and distribution thereof, through its subsidiary, Rayon Corp. of America, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Blossom Products Corp. and Rayon Corp. of America in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Misstatements of the percentage of any fiber present in any product offered for sale by them.

(b) Deceptively concealing the true fiber content or failing to make full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber content of articles which purport to be wool; that is, have the appearance and feel of being wool. In a case of named fabrics which are present in less than a substantial amount the percentage thereof shall be given.

(c) Using the unqualified terms "Woolywarms" or "Woolies" or word or expression of similar import as descriptive of garments or other products when the fiber thereof is not composed wholly of wool.

(d) Attaching to merchandise sold by them, brands, labels, or other trade indicia bearing the name "Dr. Ames" or other fictitious name or symbol having the capacity or tendency to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers as to the origin or sponsorship of such products. (May 8, 1940.)

2808. Table and Kitchenware—Terms and Conditions, Connections or Affiliations, Promotional or Publicity Undertakings and Pottery.—Imperial China Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling table and kitchenware under a sales-promotional plan or scheme in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Imperial China Co., Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its table and kitchenware in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the stating or representing, either directly or through its salesmen or agents or in any other way—

1. That the $60 or other deposit required to be paid by the “redemption dealer” who enters into contractual relations with the said corporation, is to be considered by such dealer only in the nature of a good faith bond or as a temporary deposit or as earnest money and that the said amount, or such part of it as has not been credited in connection with the purchase or ware by the said dealers, will be returned to the dealers at their request if the plan under which the ware is purchased proves unsatisfactory to the dealers after a 60-day trial.

2. That the said Imperial China Co., Inc., is closely affiliated with Royal China Inc., or that the latter corporation owns 80 percent of the stock of the former corporation, or that the said two corporations are working in close cooperation, or that under a working agreement between the two corporations, Imperial China Co., Inc., has taken over and is now conducting the business of Royal China, Inc., in Texas or other designated territory and will supply the requirements of all customers, including those of Royal China, Inc.

3. That the Imperial China Co., Inc., is able to and will furnish the same or identical patterns as those furnished by Royal China, Inc., so that by purchasing the sales-promotional plan offered by Imperial China Co., Inc., the “redemption dealer” will be able to continue to supply customers who have accumulated sets of the Royal China, Inc., patterns and who might wish to further add to such sets.

4. That the Imperial China Co., Inc., or its salesmen, would obtain a specified minimum number of “cooperating dealers” who would agree to purchase certificates from Imperial China Co., Inc., and distribute the same among their own customers for redemption by the “redemption dealers”; that the said salesman would remain in the locality for a sufficient length of time to properly instruct the “cooperating dealers” in the operation of the plan, or would return within a short time to give such instruction; or that newspaper advertising and publicity campaigns to assure the success of the plan would be provided or undertaken by the salesmen at the expense of the Imperial China Co., Inc., unless and until such representations actually are fulfilled.

5. That the said Imperial China Co., Inc., owns and operates or controls the pottery wherein is made the table and kitchenware offered for sale and sold by the said corporation. (May 10, 1940.)

2809. Rugs—Source or Origin, Qualities and Imported.—Abraham & Straus, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

“Persian,” “Chinese,” and “Numdah” rugs, as known to the public and the trade, are made in Persia, China, and the Cashmir district of India, respectively, and possess the characteristic common to all true oriental rugs in that they are hand-woven or hand-knotted of colored woolen or silk yarn (with warps of cotton sometimes added), featured by distinctive texture, workmanship, and design, and by the fact that the pattern and colors appear on the back side as well as the front.

A “reproduction” is a counterpart or reconstruction of something else. The words “Persian,” “Chinese,” and “Numdah” in advertising, labels, or other trade indicia either with or without the word “reproduction,” connote all the essential structure and properties of a genuine oriental or Chinese rug and imply that it possesses the special fibers and the almost universally known superior wearing and appearance qualities thereof.

Abraham & Straus, Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of rugs in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use in its printed or advertising matter or as a brand for rugs which it offers for sale and sells, of the words “Persian,” “Chinese,” “Numdah” or other distinctively oriental names as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact made in the countries or localities designated with all the essential characteristics and qualities of such rugs.

(b) The use of the words “Persian Chinese Numdah Reproductions,” “Persian Reproductions,” “Chinese Reproductions,” or other use of the word “Reproduction” as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact reproductions of the types named, to wit: True counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(c) The use of the words “Persian,” “Chinese,” “Numdah,” or other distinctively oriental appellation in connection with any rug which does not contain all the inherent qualities and properties of such oriental and Chinese rugs, unless when properly used to describe the design or pattern only thereof, the word “Persian,” or the word “Chinese” or the word “Numdah” shall be immediately accompanied by a word such as “design” or “pattern” printed in type equally conspicuous, so as to indicate clearly that only the form delineated on the surface of the rug is a likeness of the type named; for example, "Persian Design," "Chinese Pattern."

(d) The use of the words "Importers' Surplus—Persian, Chinese, Numdah," "Importer's Close-Out of Gem-Like Reproductions—Chinese, Persians, Numdahs," or "Imported Reproductions—Persian, Chinese, Numdah"; and from the use of the words "Importer's" or "Imported" in connection with geographic names in any way having the capacity or tendency to create the impression or convey the belief that goods actually made in other countries are from the countries named. If the word "Imported" or similar term be properly used to indicate that such goods are not of domestic origin and geographic names are correctly used to describe the type of product imported, then in such case the true country of origin shall be clearly and nondeceptively disclosed in direct connection therewith. (May 15, 1940.)

2810. Rugs—Source or Origin, Qualities, Importer, Value, Etc.—Irving Heiney, an individual trading as Linen Mart and as Imperial Lingerie Store, engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

"Chinese," "Persian," "Sarouk," "Kirman," and certain other oriental rugs as known to the public and trade are made in China, Persia, or elsewhere in the Orient and possess the characteristics common to all true oriental rugs in that they are handwoven or hand-knotted of colored woolen or silk yarn (with warps of cotton sometimes added) featured by distinctive texture, workmanship and design, and by the fact that the pattern and colors appear on the reverse as well as the front or face of the rug.

A "replica" is a duplicate—that which resembles or corresponds to something else. A designation "Persian Replica" as applied to a rug simulating or copying the design or pattern only of a Persian rug is misleading in that it connotes all the essential structure and properties of a genuine oriental rug and implies that it possesses the special fibers and the almost universally known superior wearing and appearance qualities thereof.

Irving Heiney in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, in his printed or advertising matter or by window display cards or otherwise, from—

(a) The use of the words "Chinese," "Persian," "Sarouk," "Kirman," "Karvan," "Bagdad," "Calcutta," "India," "Irak," or other distinctively oriental names or words, or of illustrations depicting oriental scenes, depictions or characters on labels, brands, or otherwise in connection with the rugs sold and offered for sale by him; and from the use of said words or illustrations or any thereof in any way so as to import or imply that such rugs are made or manufactured of the materials and in accordance with the processes used in the manufacture of true oriental and/or Chinese rugs.

(b) The use of the words "Imported Sarouk Replica," "Imported Persian Replica," "Persian Replica," "Imported Karvan Persian Replica," "Genuine Samarkand Chinese Replica," or other use of the word "Replica" or of any similar word which imports that the article to which such word applies is a replica or duplicate of an original, as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact reproductions of the types named, to wit: True counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(c) The use of the words "Chinese," "Persian," "Sarouk," "Kirman," "Karvan," "Samarkand," "Bagad," "Calcutta," or other distinctive oriental appellation in connection with any rug which was not made in the country or locality designated or implied and does not contain all the inherent qualities and properties of such oriental or Chinese rug, unless when properly used to describe the design or pattern only thereof, such word or words of oriental appellation shall be immediately accompanied by a word such as "Design" or "Pattern" printed in type equally conspicuous, so as to indicate clearly that only the form delineated on the surface of the rug is a likeness of the type named; for example, "Persian Design," "Chinese Pattern."

(d) The use of the words "Imported Sarouk Replica," "Imported Persian Replica," "Genuine Imported Heavy Karvan," or "Imported Karvan Persian Replica"; and from the use of the word "Imported" or any word of like meaning in connection with geographic names in any way having the capacity or tendency to create the impression or convey the belief that goods actually made in other countries are from the countries named. If the word "Imported" or similar term be properly used to indicate that such goods are not of domestic origin and geographic names are correctly used to describe the type of product imported, then in such case the true country of origin shall be clearly and nondeceptively disclosed in direct connection therewith.

(e) Representing by the use of the word "Importer" on his stationery or otherwise that he is an importer or directly imports his merchandise or goods from abroad.

(f) Representing the "worth" or value of any article of merchandise offered for sale by him to be an amount or figure which is in fact fictitious and in excess of the price at which such product is customarily offered for sale and is available to the purchasing public. (May 15, 1940.)

2811. Storage Batteries—Comparative Data and Merits.—Norris Ouellette, an individual trading as Power Battery Co., engaged in the manufacture of storage batteries and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Norris Ouellette in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing—

(a) That his "Power Cell" or other battery of similar construction maintains a high voltage under excessive load; or otherwise, by statement or inference, that the terminal voltage maintained by Power Cell is either higher than or more enduring than that of standard competitive batteries on the market.

(b) That "Power Cells," or batteries of similar construction, charge fully in one-third to one-half the time required for other batteries, or in any specified comparative time not fully established by competent and reliable scientific evidence. (May 16, 1940.)

2812. Jewelry—Prices.—Yeblon & Co., Inc., and Hyman & Zaslav, Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of jewelry and allied merchandise, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The term "list price" as applied to the sale of merchandise is an expression used by wholesalers and manufacturers in connection with their sales to the retail trade; and an indicated discount from such list price determines the amount which the retail dealer pays for the goods purchased by him. That is to say, a discounted list price connotes the amount charged the dealer by a wholesaler for the item of merchandise. His resale price to the public, or "retail price," is consequently higher, and may or may not be equal to the wholesaler's original list price.

Yeblon & Co., Inc., and Hyman & Zaslav, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use, in catalogs, printed matter, or in any other manner, of the terms "List Prices," "Discount," "Catalog List Price," or "Subject to Our Regular Distributors Discount"; or from representing in any way directly or inferentially that the prices at which they offer for sale and sell their various items of merchandise constitute a discount to the purchaser or are wholesale prices, when in fact said prices are the usual and customary prices at which they sell such merchandise in the normal course of business. (May 16, 1940.)

2813. Cigarettes—"Importing" and Source or Origin.—MM Importing Co., Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of cigarettes, among other merchandise, in commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

MM Importing Co., Inc., agreed that it will cease and desist from the use of the word "Importing," as part of its corporate or trade name or in any other way, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of products which it does not actually import. It also agrees to cease and desist from the use of the word "Importing" as part of the corporate or trade name under which it offers for sale, sells, or distributes in commerce cigarettes which are made or manufactured, in whole or in part, of domestically grown tobacco or which are manufactured in the United States of America. It also agrees to cease and desist from the use of the word "Importing," or of any other word or words of similar implication, either alone or in connection with the words "Turkish Cigarettes," or in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said cigarettes are made wholly or in part of imported tobacco or are manufactured abroad, unless, if the said "Importing" is used in connection with the sale of cigarettes, actually imported by said company, which are composed wholly of imported tobacco, but which are made or manufactured in the United States of America, then in that case, it shall be disclosed, clearly and unequivocally, on the face of the container of the cigarettes that the same are domestically manufactured or that they are not of foreign manufacture. (May 17, 1940.)

2814. Facial Preparations—Nature of Manufacture and Qualities.—Alexandra de Markoff Sales Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale of cosmetics, including facial preparations, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Alexandra de Markoff Sales Corp., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from—

1. Representing, through the use of the words "compounded by hand" or of any other word or words of similar import designating or to purportedly describe products which are not compounded by hand, and from the use of the said words in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the products referred to are in fact made or mixed by hand.

2. The use of the words "Skin Food" or of any other word or words of similar import to designate or as descriptive of a product which does not in fact serve as a food or nourishment for the human skin or tissues, and from the use of said words in any way so as to import or imply that the said product will feed or nourish the skin or tissues to which it is externally applied.

3. Representing that its so-called "Skin Food," when applied to the skin, is absorbed by the skin with the result that the skin is fed or nourished or otherwise therapeutically benefited by such absorption of said product.

4. Stating or representing that its products, or any thereof, will erase or remove lines or wrinkles from the skin, build up the tissues, remould the face, or restore or perpetuate youthful or firm contours to the face or throat. (May 18, 1940.)

2815. Dimple-Making Device—Qualities, Patented, Nature, Etc.—John H. Lofquist, an individual, engaged in conducting a business under the trade name "Darling Dimple Company" said business consisting of the sale of a so-called dimple-making device in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John H. Lofquist, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of his device in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from stating or representing—

1. That the said device will produce permanent dimples in the face of the user thereof, or that any facial depression which may be effected through the use of said device will be other than of a temporary nature, or that such depression in the soft tissues of the cheeks will not promptly disappear under normal action of the facial muscles when the pressure exerted by the device has been removed.

2. That the said device is the subject matter of a United States or other patent, unless and until such is a fact.

3. That the said device was patented or invented by "Dr. J. H. Lofquist" or that the said device contains special or scientific features which are the result of medical advice or services. (May 18, 1940.)

2816. Cleaning Fluid—New Product and Qualities.—Lionel E. Samuels, individual trading as Solvosol Co., engaged in the business of compounding and packing a cleaning fluid and in the sale and distribution thereof under the trade name "Solvosol" in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lionel E. Samuels, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his cleaning fluid in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his labels or containers or in any other way—

1. Of the word "New" either alone or in connection with the word "Entirely" or "Process" or with any other word or words as descriptive of said product which is not in fact new.

2. Of the phrase "Leaves No Ring" or of any statement or representation of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said product will not leave a ring or discoloration when applied only to the spot to be removed from certain fabrics, as for example, weighted silks. (May 18, 1940.)

2817. Gauze Bandages—"Sterilized."—Cra-Tex Corp., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing gauze bandages and in the sale thereof under the trade name "Cra-Tex" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Cra-Tex Corp., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements or printed matter of the word "sterilized" or of any other word or words of similar implication as descriptive of its products which are not in a state of sterility at the time of their removal from the package by the purchaser thereof, and from the use of the said word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said products are free from aerobic and anaerobic bacteria and other microorganisms at the time of their removal from the package by the purchaser thereof. (May 18, 1940.)

2818. Rugs—Source or Origin and Qualities.—Stern Brothers, a corporation, engaged in the operation of a retail department store and in the sale and distribution of merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True Oriental rugs are made in Asia and have for many years been well-known to the purchasing public as possessing certain characteristics in that they are hand-woven or hand-knotted of colored woolen of silk yarn (with warps of cotton sometimes added), featured by distinctive texture, workmanship and design, and by the fact that the colors and pattern appear on the backside as well as the front.

A "replica" is a duplicate—that which resembles or corresponds to something else; and a "reproduction" is a counterpart or reconstruction of something else. Designations such as "Oriental Reproductions," "American Oriental," or "Domestic Oriental," as applied to a rug simulating or copying the design or pattern only of an oriental rug, are misleading in that they connote all the essential structure and qualities of a genuine oriental rug and imply that it possesses the special fibers and the almost universally known superior wearing and appearance qualities thereof.

Stern Brothers, in connection with its sale and distribution of machine-made rugs in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Kara Kirman" or other distinctively oriental names as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact made in the countries or localities designated or implied with all the essential characteristics and qualities of such rugs.

(b) The use of the words "Oriental Reproductions," "Sarouk, Kirman, Kashan reproductions," "American-Made Oriental Reproductions," or other use of the word "Reproductions" or of any similar word which imports or implies that the article to which such word applies is a reproduction, replica, or duplicate of an original, as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact reproductions of the types indicated; to wit: True counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(c) The use of the words "American Oriental," "Domestic Oriental," or other appellation including the word "Oriental" or other expression indicative of an oriental type, as descriptive of a rug which does not contain all the inherent qualities, properties and constructive features of a true oriental rug.

(d) The use of the words "Sarouk," "Kirman," "Kashan," or other distinctively oriental appellation in connection with any rug which was not made in the country or locality designated or implied and does not contain all the inherent qualities and properties of such oriental rugs; unless, if properly used to describe the design or pattern only thereof, such word or words of oriental appellation shall be immediately accompanied by a word such as "Design" or "Pattern" printed in type equally conspicuous, so as to indicate clearly that only the form delineated on the surface of the rug is a likeness of the type named; for example, "Kirman Design," "Sarouk Pattern." (May 18, 1940.)

2819. Greeting Cards—"Free Samples," Terms and Conditions and Products Sent Unordered.—Merwin B. Grogan, sole trader as M. B. Grogan

Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of greeting cards in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Merwin B. Grogan, in connection with his sale and distribution of greeting cards or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Advertising "free samples" or any other use of the word "free" or similar expression in a manner purporting a gift or gratuity only, where any consideration such as payment of money, rendering of services, or otherwise, is required of the person receiving articles of merchandise sent in response to his request for such free samples or other gratuity.

(b) Delivering any invoiced article of merchandise to a customer or prospective customer without prior notice of the terms under which such article is to be sent and permission first obtained to make the shipment; inducing a customer to order samples or other goods by deceptively concealing the terms of the transaction; or in any other way imposing a burden upon a customer or prospective customer either to pay for goods received by him or return the same where he has not been previously apprised of such conditions and consequently authorized the shipment. (May 18, 1940.)

2820. Greeting Cards—"Request Samples" and Terms and Conditions.—Harry Doehla, Senia Doehla, Margaret Doehla, and August Doehla, copartners, trading variously under the firm names of Bluebird Studios and Harry Doehla Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of greeting cards and other commodities in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations like engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry Doehla, Senia Doehla, Margaret Doehla, August Doehla, and each of them, agreed in connection with their sale and distribution of greeting cards or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, they will cease and desist from the use in their advertising matter of the statement "Request samples" or otherwise inviting their customers or prospective customers to receive sample goods unless in immediate connection therewith and with equal conspicuousness it be clearly indicated that the goods thus referred to will be billed to the recipient and payment required. (May 18, 1940.)

2821. Fountain Pens—Value, Special or Limited Offers and Quality.—Maurice Robbin and Hilda Robbin, copartners trading as Robbin's Camera Shop, engaged in the sale at retail of cards, cameras and other products, including so-called "John Shannon Vacuum Filler Sacless Fountain Pens" in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Maurice Robbin and Hilda Robbin, in advertising, offering for sale, selling, or distributing their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed and each of them, to cease and desist from—

1. Stating or representing that said products are a $3 value or of any other alleged valuation which is exaggerated or in excess of the actual value of said products or the price which the purchaser pays and the copartners charge for said products in the usual course of business.

2. Stating or representing that the offered retail sales price of said product is "special" or will last for "3 days only" or any other time limitation, when in fact said price is the regular and customary price asked for said products in the usual course of business and without limitation as to time.

3. Stating or representing that bona fide protection for life is extended and assured to the purchasers of said pens, when in fact, no such protection is offered and the products are not of such quality as to last for the period of life expectancy.

4. The use of the statement "Your first investment is your only investment" or of any other statement of like import or meaning, when in truth, such statement is contrary to the facts. (May 18, 1940.)

2822. Greeting Cards—"Free Samples," Terms and Conditions and Products Sent Unordered.—Southern Greeting Card Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of greeting cards in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships, likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Southern Greeting Card Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

- (a) Advertising "free samples," or any other use of the word "free" or similar expression in a manner purporting a gift or gratuity only, where any consideration such as payment of money, rendering of services, or otherwise, is required of the person receiving articles of merchandise sent in response to his request for such free samples or other gratuity.

(b) Delivering any invoiced article of merchandise to a customer or prospective customer without prior notice of the terms under which such article is to be sent and permission first obtained to make the shipment; inducing a customer to order samples or other goods by deceptively concealing the terms of the transaction; or in any other way imposing a burden upon a customer or prospective customer either to pay for goods received by him or return the same where he has not been previously apprised of such conditions and consequently authorized the shipment. (May 20, 1940.)

2823. Men's Shirts or Other Textile Materials—"Vat Dyed" or Quality.—Spiegel, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of merchandise including men's shirts, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

When a textile material steeped in a liquor containing a dye is exposed to the air, the dye is reformed by oxidation and precipitated in the fiber. Dyes so used are called "Vat Dyes." Fabrics made of yarn dyed before being woven are referred to as "Yarn Dyed." To the trade and the purchasing public the term "Vat Dyed" connotes a superior quality of dye coloring which commands a much higher price for a product than if it were yarn dyed.

Spiegel, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing by statement or inference that yarn dyed shirts or other textile materials are "vat dyed," or in any other way passing off as "vat dyed" any goods or merchandise not actually dyed by the vat process. (May 20, 1940.)

2824. Greeting Cards—"Free Samples", Terms and Conditions and Products Sent Unordered.—Edith M. Schwer, executrix of the estate of Charles C. Schwer, deceased, trading as Charles C. Schwer, engaged in the sale and distribution of greeting cards in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Edith M. Schwer, in connection with the sale and distribution of her products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—of merchandise sent in response to his request for such free samples or other gratuity.

(b) Delivering any invoiced article of merchandise to a customer or prospective customer without prior notice of the terms under which such article is to be sent and permission first obtained to make the shipment; inducing a customer to order samples or other goods by deceptively concealing the terms of the transaction; or in any other way imposing a burden upon a customer or prospective customer either to pay for goods received by him or return the same where he has not been previously apprised of such conditions and consequently authorized the shipment. (May 21, 1940.)

2825. Greeting Cards and Christmas Package Wrappings—"Free Samples", Terms and Conditions and Products Sent Unordered.—John A. Hertel Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of greeting cards and Christmas package wrappings, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John A. Hertel Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Advertising "free samples," or any other use of the word "free" or similar expression in a manner purporting a gift or gratuity only, where any consideration such as payment of money, rendering of services, or otherwise, is required of the person receiving articles of merchandise sent in response to his request for such free samples or other gratuity.

(b) Delivering any invoiced article of merchandise to a customer or prospective customer without prior notice of the terms under which such article is to be sent and permission first obtained to make the shipment; inducing a customer to order samples or other goods by deceptively concealing the terms of the transaction; or in any other way imposing a burden upon a customer or prospective customer either to pay for goods received by him or return the same where he has not been previously apprised of such conditions and consequently authorized the shipment. (May 22, 1940.)

2826. Correspondence Course in Cartooning—Indorsements or Testimonials, Success or Standing, Employment and Free Gift.—Bernard Singerman, an individual trading as Raye Burns School of Cartooning, engaged in the business of conducting a correspondence school in cartooning which includes the sale and distribution of lesson material in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Bernard Singerman, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his course of instruction in cartooning in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist forthwith from the use in his advertisements and advertising or printed matter of whatever kind or description or in any other way—

1. Of statements or representations or of letters or the reproduction of letters purportedly written by the editor or by others associated with magazines or publications, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief, that such magazines or publications now buy thousands, or any number of cartoons yearly from the Raye Burns School of Cartooning, when in fact the said magazines or publications are not in print at the present time and have not been in print for some time.

2. Of letters or the reproduction of letters purportedly received by the said Raye Burns without solicitation on his part from persons associated with magazines, syndicates, schools, and the like, so as to import or imply that the said publications or concerns habitually turn to or call upon the said Raye Burns School of Cartooning for the cartoonists they need, or that the said Raye Burns School of Cartooning enjoys a prestige in the matter of placing its students with such publications or concerns which it does not have.

3. Of statements or representations which tend or may tend to convey the belief that any one, whether or not he or she is possessed of the ability or talent to draw or to create saleable cartoons, can achieve success as a cartoonist or can readily find lucrative employment, or that the students of the said Raye Burns School of Cartooning are widely sought after by editors, publishers or others desiring to purchase cartoons.

4. Of the statement or representation that his course in cartooning will be mailed as a "gift" or as "complimentary copies" to each person sending in $1 "to cover the expense of printing and mailing," when in fact, the expense of printing and mailing the course in cartooning does not amount to $1 and is so much less than said amount as to offer the said Raye Burns a profit of such substantiality over and above the printing and mailing expense as to negative the statement or representation that the said course is either complimentary or a gift. (May 23, 1940.)

alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Woods Manufacturing Co., Ltd., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description of the word "Eider" or "Arctic," either alone or in connection or combination with the word "down" as descriptive of the filler content of its products which are not in fact filled with down obtained from the Eider duck, and from the use of the said words "Eider" or "Arctic" or of any other word or words of similar import, in anyway, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the filler of said products is composed of Eiderdown, as such term is generally understood and accepted to mean. Said corporation also agrees to cease and desist from the use, in connection with the sale, advertising, describing or distributing of its products, of any statement, of pictures or symbols which tend or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the filler of said products is composed of down obtained from wild or other water fowl, such as are referred to by the statement or represented by the pictures or symbols, when in fact, such is not the case. (May 23, 1940.)

2828. Aluminum Kitchen Utensils—Composition.—Enterprise Aluminum Co., engaged in the manufacture of aluminum kitchen utensils and in the sale and distribution thereon in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Enterprise Aluminum Co. agreed that in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, it will cease and desist from the use of the word "Silverglo" or other term of similar import to designate or describe its aluminum products; and from the use of such or any like designation or expression containing the word "Silver" with a capacity or tendency to create the impression or convey the belief to purchasers that the durability or value of such utensils is enhanced or affected by silver metal contained therein. (May 27, 1940.)

2829. Coffee—Nature, Qualities, Composition and Source or Origin.—Old Dutch Mills, Inc., engaged in the business of roasting and blending coffee and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

In the coffee trade, "Mocha" denotes a superior coffee grown in the Yemen district in Arabia and "Java" a superior coffee grown in the island of Java. Mocha has a very high and distinctive flavor and Java a very strong body. For many years the blend of these two coffees has been favorably known throughout the world, and the term "Mocha and Java" is generally understood to mean a blending of these two coffees, and is regarded by a large portion of the consuming public as synonymous with all that is best in coffee. As the sources of supply are limited, the genuine Mocha and Java coffee is much more expensive than many ordinary coffees.

Old Dutch Mills, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its coffee products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Mocha and Java" in its advertising, on its labels and containers, in oral presentations by salesmen or otherwise, as descriptive of its Old Dutch brand of coffee or other product of similar composition; and from featuring the words "Mocha" and "Java" in anyway which has or may have the capacity, tendency, or effect of conveying the belief to purchasers that a blend of these with other types of coffee is a pure blend of wholly Mocha and Java as such term is construed by the trade and consuming public.

(b) Passing off an inferior blend of coffee as "Mocha and Java"; or in anyway, by adroit wording, deceptive typography, guile or subtlety, representing that Mocha and Java are the sole or the principal ingredients of a coffee product the bulk of which consists of cheaper grades and qualities.

(c) The use on its invoices or trade literature of the letters "O D M & J" as applied to said coffee, or of other letters, terms or symbols importing or implying that the Old Dutch brand of coffee is either wholly or predominantly of Mocha and Java.

(d) Naming, in its sales promotional representations, on its labels, brands, or otherwise, the minor factors of a blended coffee offered for sale and sold by it without first naming also, as a part of such descriptive statement and with equal conspicuousness, the major factors, all in their order of predominance by bulk; for example, "Santos, Colombian, Mocha and Java." (May 27, 1940.)

2830. Sheets and Pillowcases—Source or Origin, Qualities, Patent, Manufacturers and Factory.—Equitable Embroidery Co., Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of sheets and pillowcases in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Equitable Embroidery Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words “Madero Embroidery” or “Madero” as a brand, trade mark, or other sales designation of sheets, pillowcases or other merchandise sold by it; or the use of the word “Madero” or any other semblance of the word “Madeira” as descriptive of any article of merchandise which is not produced in the Madeira Islands with all the qualities and properties of genuine Madeira products.

(b) Representing that a patent is pending on the construction or with reference to any other feature of the sheets and pillowcases which it offers for sale.

(c) The use of the word “Manufacturers” as descriptive of its business; and from the use of any other word or words of similar implication the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that it makes or manufactures the products sold by it, or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant or factory in Mayaguez, P. R., or elsewhere, in which such products are made or manufactured. (May 27, 1940.)

2831. Rugs—Nature, Source or Origin, Imported and Qualities.—Gimbel Brothers, Inc., a corporation, engaged in operating a retail department store and in the sale and distribution of merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True oriental rugs are made in Asia and have for many years been well-known to the purchasing public as possessing certain characteristics in that they are hand-woven or hand-knotted of colored woolen or silk yarn (with warps of cotton sometimes added), featured by distinctive texture, workmanship and design, and by the fact that the colors and pattern appear on the backside as well as the front.

A “replica” is a duplicate—that which resembles or corresponds to something else; and a “reproduction” is a counterpart or reconstruction of something else. Designations such as “Oriental Reproduction,” “Oriental Replica,” or “American Oriental,” as applied to a rug simulating or copying the design or pattern only of an oriental rug, are misleading in that they connote all the essential structure and qualities of a genuine oriental rug and imply that it possesses the special fibers and the almost universally known superior wearing and appearance qualities thereof.

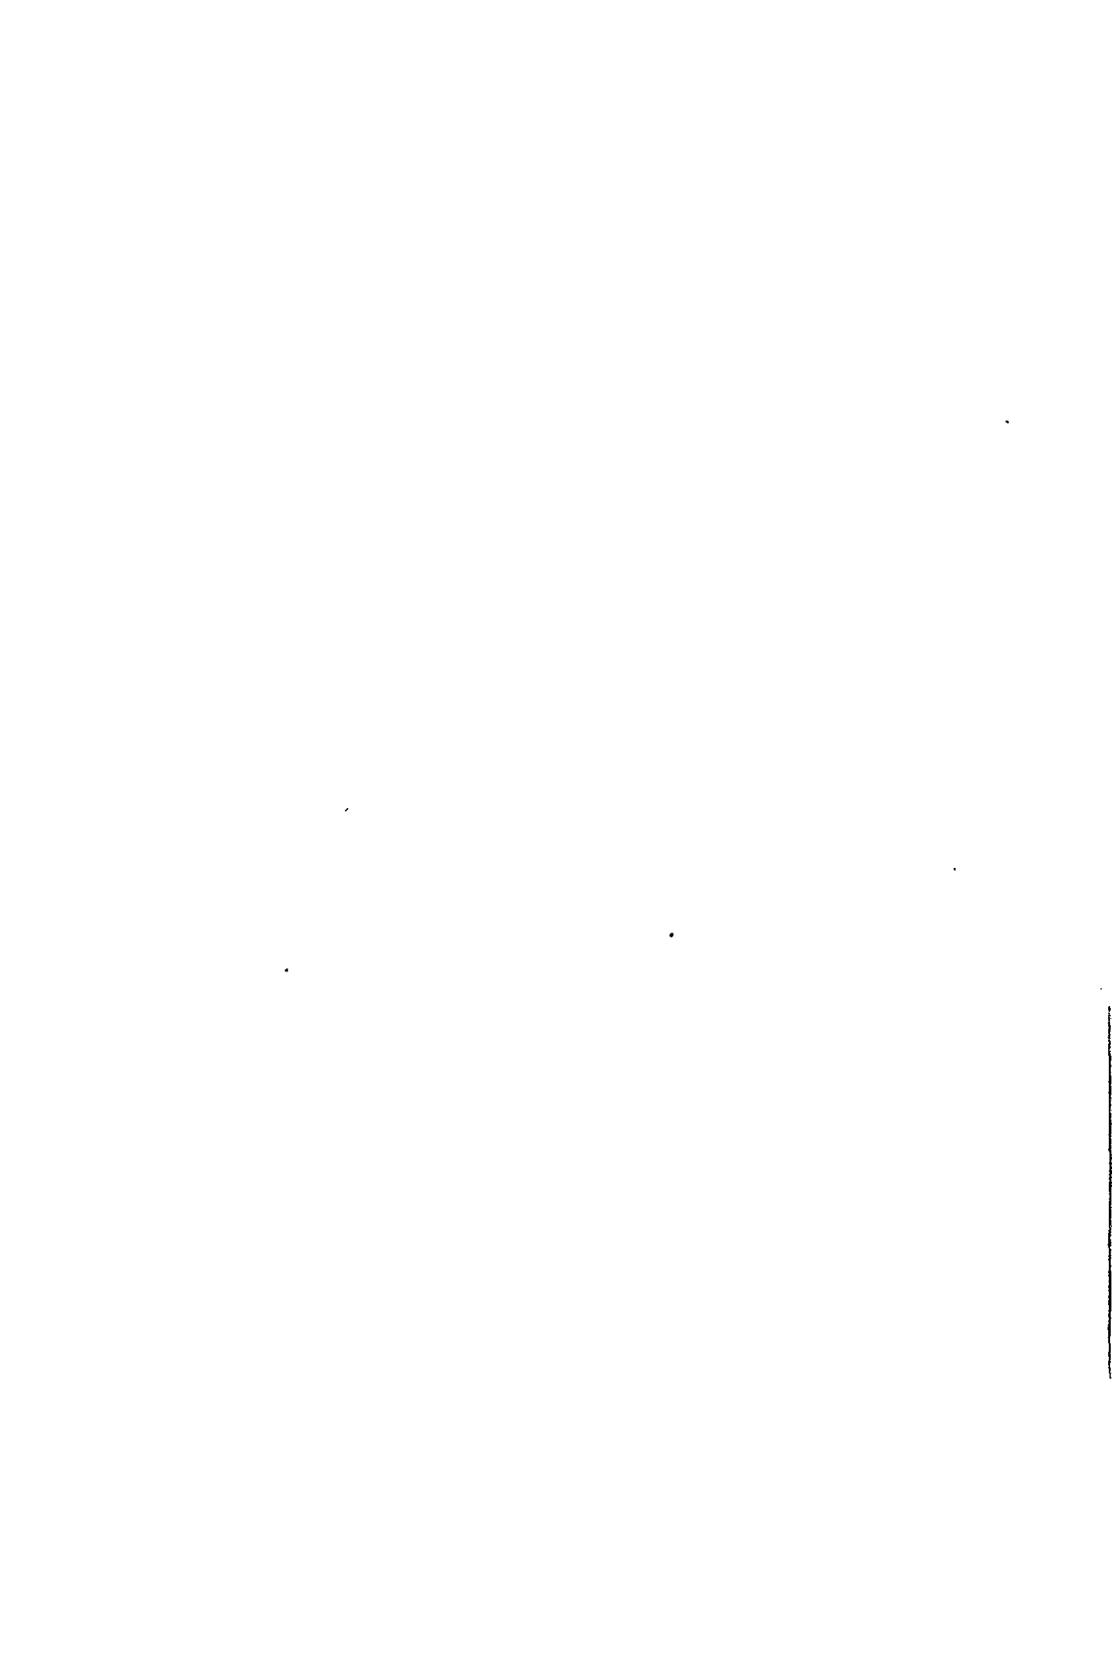

Gimbel Brothers, Inc., in connection with its sale and distribution of machine-made rugs in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Oriental Reproduction," "Oriental Replica," "Copies of Real Orientals," "Aristan Reproductions of Orientals," "Imported Reproductions" of "Hand-Woven Orientals," or other use of the words "Reproduction," "Replica" or "Copies" or of any similar word which imports or implies that the article to which such word applies is a reproduction, replica, or duplicate of an original, as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact reproductions of the types indicated; to wit: True counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(b) The use of the words "American Oriental" or other appellation including the word "Oriental" or other expression indicative of an oriental type, as descriptive of a rug which does not contain all the inherent qualities, properties and constructive features of a true oriental rug.

(c) The use of the word "Oriental" or other distinctly oriental appellation in connection with any rug which was not made in the country or locality designated or implied and does not contain all the inherent qualities or properties of such oriental rug; unless, if properly used to describe the design and pattern only thereof, such word or words of oriental appellation shall be immediately accompanied by a word such as "design" or "Pattern" printed in type equally conspicuous, so as to indicate clearly that only the form delineated on the surface of the rug is a likeness of the type named.

(d) The use of the words "Imported Reproductions of Hand-Woven Orientals"; and from the use of the word "Imported" or any word of like meaning in connection with geographic names or words in any way having the capacity or tendency to create the impression or convey the belief that goods actually made in other countries or regions are from the countries or regions named or implied. If the word "Imported" or similar term be properly used to indicate that such goods are not of domestic origin and geographic names or terms are correctly used to describe the type of product imported, then in such case the true country of origin shall be clearly and nondeceptively disclosed in direct connection therewith. (May 29, 1940.)

DIGEST OF FALSE, MISLEADING, AND FRAUDULENT ADVERTISING STIPULATIONS<sup>1</sup>

0727.<sup>2</sup> Moth Repellent—Qualities, New and Earnings or Profits.—The Puro Co., Inc., a corporation, 3107 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a moth repellent designated Puro and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

- (a) That Puro will protect upholstery from damage by moths.
- (b) That Puro is brand new, an amazing discovery, is just out, contains a secret chemical, or by any other terminology that Puro is new or different from all other moth preventives.
- (c) That persons selling Puro are earning fortunes thereby, or are making $5 to $8 per day.

(d) By the use of such as "up to," "as high as," or any words or terms of like import that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

The said The Puro Co., Inc., agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (April 4, 1940.)

02269.<sup>2</sup> Poultry Feed and Remedy—Qualities.—The G. E. Conkey Co., a corporation, Cleveland, Ohio, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling poultry feeds and remedies designated Conkey's Y-O Starting Feed and Conkey's Y-O 32% Supplement and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

- (a) That either of the products will prevent leg weakness in poultry when that condition is not due to a deficiency of vitamin D.
- (b) That either of the products is a competent treatment for or an effective remedy for an existing leg weakness, or that either of them will cure that condition. (Jan. 2, 1940.)

<sup>1</sup> The stipulations in question are those of the radio and periodical division with vendor-advertisers. Period covered is that of this volume, namely, December 1, 1939, to May 31, 1940, inclusive. For digests of previous stipulations, see vols. 14 to 29 of Commission's decisions.

02349.<sup>1</sup> Correspondence Course—Opportunities.—American Landscape School, a corporation, Plymouth Building, Des Moines, Iowa, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a correspondence course in Landscape Architecture and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That the positions open in the profession of landscape architecture and gardening greatly exceed the number of persons qualified and available to fill such positions, or that the opportunities for employment in the profession of landscape architecture and gardening are greater than is actually the case.

(b) That it daily receives letters from prospective employers offering its students and graduates opportunities for employment in the field of landscape architecture and gardening, or that the opportunities for employment which it is able to offer its students and graduates are greater than is actually the case.

It is agreed, That this supplemental stipulation as to the facts and agreement to cease and desist is to be taken and considered to be supplemental to a stipulation heretofore executed by the American Landscape School and accepted and approved by the Federal Trade Commission on March 17, 1939, and that said stipulation is to remain in full force and effect, and the terms thereof are not to be affected in any way by this supplemental stipulation.<sup>2</sup> (May 7, 1940.)

02469. Typewriters—Free Trial and Comparative Data or Merits.—Woodstock Typewriter Co., a corporation, Woodstock, Ill., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling typewriters designated Woodstock Typewriters and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That a free trial may be had of a Woodstock typewriter until such time as a free trial is provided to all responsible persons in all localities in which the representation is regularly disseminated,

(b) That, according to information in its possession, Woodstock typewriters were used to win most of the world's school contests, when it does not possess any reliable information to that effect. (Dec. 5, 1939.)

02470. Woolen Blankets—Nature of Manufacture.—Frank E. Davis Fish Co., a corporation doing business under the trade name The Colbey Co., 93 Rogers Street, Gloucester, Mass., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling woolen blankets and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

Using the word "Pre-shrunk" or any other term or words of similar import or meaning, to describe, designate, or in any way refer to any blanket which is not in fact shrink-proof or nonshrinkable, or which has not been fully shrunk or preshrunk to the extent that no residual shrinkage is left therein. (Dec. 2, 1939.)

02471. Medicinal Preparation—Nature of Product and Qualities.—The Chattanooga Medicine Co., a corporation, Chattanooga, Tenn., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Cardui and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

That a medicinal preparation now designated Cardul, or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name.

Is an analgesic or will act immediately to relieve the pain or discomfort associated with menstrual distress or other functional disturbances of women. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

02472. Coffee—Comparative Data or Merits.—The Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., a corporation, 35 East Seventh Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a food product designated Kroger's Hot Dated Coffee and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That the cost of packing coffee by any method other than that employed by the advertiser, is any amount in excess of the actual cost thereof.

(b) That coffee is not as fresh as it could be if it does not have the date of roasting stamped on the package.

(c) That the date stamped on the advertiser's package or container, of itself, indicates to the retailer or consumer the length of elapsed time in days since the coffee contained therein was roasted.

(d) That ordinary systems of dating only measure the time from warehouse to consumer.

(e) That such of the advertiser's coffee as is not sold, on or before the date stamped on the package, is not for sale at any price;

(f) That the advertiser's system of dating is "the only" method or system that has any meaning.

(g) That no other coffee affords the same freshness at the time of purchase. (Dec. 7, 1939.)

connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp, or any similar course of treatment sold under that name, or any other name or names—

1. Employs a principle that is now used by those skilled in physical culture; or
2. Has found an application in health institutions where regular treatments may be had.

(b) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp, or any similar course of treatment sold under that name, or any other name or names, will—

1. Feed starved or poisoned hair roots;
2. Remove poison from hair roots; or
3. Restore new beauty and vigor to hair;

(c) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp, or any similar course of treatment sold under that name, or any other name or names, will—

1. Produce results when all other methods have failed;
2. Stimulate dormant circulation of the scalp; or
3. Remove incrustations and other strictures which prevent the hair from growing properly.

(d) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp is a new discovery or a scientific discovery.

(e) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp, or any similar course of treatment sold under that name, or any other name or names, will—

1. Overcome scalp disorders;
2. Prevent baldness;
3. Enable one to enjoy beautiful hair;
4. Stop falling hair;
5. Cure dandruff; or
6. Rid the hair of scalp and hair ailments that lead to baldness.

(f) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp is a way to avoid the risk of baldness.

(g) That the "Healthy Hair" course of treatment for the hair and scalp is the one and only way to preserve hair.

(h) That results are guaranteed. (Dec. 13, 1939.)

02478. (a) By the use of such expressions as "Livability Guaranteed" or by any other similar statement that he guarantees the livability of all grades of chicks sold by him unless and until he makes reimbursement in full for all losses by death.

(b) That he carries insurance to protect his customers from loss due to the death of any chicks purchased from him unless and until he carries insurance with an accredited insurance company for the protection of his customers against his failure to make reimbursement in accordance with his agreement.

(c) That the breeders producing his chicks are inspected by the American Poultry Association until the breeders are actually inspected by an impartial representative of such Association and not in any way connected with his hatchery. (Dec. 18, 1939.)

02480. Electric Fence Units—Savings or Economy, Qualities and Comparative Data or Merits.—Fred F. Richards, an individual trading as Richards' Electro-Fence Co., 309 North Eleventh Street, Payette, Idaho, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling various electric fence units designated Electro-Fence Units and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That, by the installation of electric fences or of any Electro-Fence Unit, anyone can thereby effect a saving of any definite amount, irrespective of the amount of fencing required.

(b) That any electric fence unit selling at a lower price than Electro-Fence Units, is without a built-in indicator.

(c) That the voltage of any Electro-Fence Unit is greater than that of any other make, or that the voltage of competitive units, whether referred to individually or collectively or in any manner, is less than is actually the case.

(d) That Electro-Fence Units are the safest to use or cost the least to purchase or operate.

(e) That the use of any Electro-Fence controller with a single wire enclosure can be relied upon to confine every animal of any class of livestock, or any animal whose natural covering or coat would serve to insulate it from electric shock at the probable point of its contact with the wire.

(f) That the warning signal device or that the mechanisms used to change alternating current to direct current and to permit but a small amount of current to reach the fence at one time are exclusive features of the Electro-Fence Units. (Dec. 18, 1939.)

02481. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, Composition, Ailments, Results, Safety, and Laboratories.—Harry Tomback, an individual, trading as Tomil Research Laboratories, 501 West One hundred eighty-third Street, New York, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Albaderm and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That the application of "Albaderm" to the skin will of itself relieve or can be depended upon to relieve acne, blackheads, whiteheads, or other skin blemishes.

(b) That the application of "Albaderm" to the skin will "Dissolve" pimples or that it will cause them to disappear.

(c) That by the repeated and continued use of "Albaderm" alone, for any given period of time, sufferers of pimples, acne, blackheads, or other skin blemishes can rid themselves permanently of these blemishes or can obtain permanent relief.

(d) That "Albaderm", or the ingredients composing it, will exert powerful bacteriocidal or germicidal action, or will remove bacteria infections causing skin blemishes.

(e) That "Albaderm" is a product consisting of sulphides and sulphur, or impliedly that "Albaderm" contains any sulphur which does not exist in combination, as a chemical compound, with some other element.

(f) That the sulphides in "Albaderm" will restore tone to dilated blood vessels.

(g) That "Albaderm" contains any ingredient which is approximately one-third or more as actively germicidal as phenol.

(h) That the use of "Albaderm" will be of material influence in healing any or all sore spots.

(i) That acne is most generally found in people with an oily skin, or that an oily skin is a cause of acne, blackheads, or whiteheads.

(j) That the application of "Albaderm" will of itself render the skin clear, blemish-free, beautiful, alluring, or velvety.

(k) That as a result of the continued application of "Albaderm" to the skin, one will attract those one yearns to love, or that one will become popular.

(l) That the application of "Albaderm", according to the directions prescribed, has brought happiness to hundreds of individuals or to any other specific number of individuals.

(m) That the application of "Albaderm" to the skin is harmless in all cases.

(n) Through the use of the words "laboratory" or "research," or any other word or words or terms of similar meaning or import as a part of any trade name, or in any other manner that he owns, controls, operates, conducts, or maintains a laboratory for the purpose of conducting researches or for manufacturing, testing or experimenting with the preparation sold by him until he actually owns and operates a laboratory wherein he conducts research work in connection with the preparation sold by him. (Dec. 19, 1939.)

02482. Medicinal Preparations—Qualities, Nature, Association of Members of Medical Profession, Etc.—World's Dispensary Medical Association, a corporation, 665 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling medicinal preparations designated Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

That a medicinal preparation now designated "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery" or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

(a) Will keep the digestive system in tune regardless of the system's requirements; is an anti-acid or will counteract excess acidity of the stomach; will of itself build up the human system, relieve a weakened condition, tired run-down feeling, increase weight, pep, energy, vigor, or vitality; or is the one or only recognized tonic.

That a medicinal preparation now designated "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription" or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

(b) Is an analgesic or will act immediately or quickly to relieve the pain or discomfort associated with menstrual distress or other functional disturbances of women.

(c) Is of any appreciable value in relieving the pain or discomfort associated with menstrual distress or other functional disturbances of women unless in direct connection therewith it is stated that such results may follow only when used for some length of time.

It is further agreed that the World's Dispensary Medical Association in connection with the dissemination of advertising by the means or in the manner above set out will cease and desist from representing—

(d) By the use of the word "association" or word or words of similar import or meaning in its corporate title or otherwise that it is an association of doctors or medical men;

(e) That complete medical advice is given those persons who write for the same. (Dec. 13, 1939.)

(b) That a person can make a specified number of sales in any definite period of time.

(c) That No-Stitch Ties are made from a fabric recently discovered by science.

(d) That such ties will not stain or that every kind of stain can be removed without injuring the ties.

The said Louis Kaine further agreed to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

1. That prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time, which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have theretofore been constantly made in like periods of time by its active, full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

2. By the use of such words as "up to," "as high as," or any words or terms of like import, that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives, can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of its active, full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives, in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

3. Any amount as being the actual earnings or profits of any specified agent, salesman, distributor, dealer, or other representative earned in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions, when such amount was either not actually net earnings or profits or was not made in the ordinary course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances. (Dec. 18, 1939.)

02484. Shoe Polish and Dye and Shoe Cleaner—Qualities and Comparative Merits.—Barton Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, 4157 North Kingshighway, St. Louis, Mo., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a shoe polish and dye designated Dyanshine and a white shoe cleaner designated Barton's White Glaze Polish and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That Dyanshine will eliminate scratched and marred areas from shoe leather or do more than render such areas less conspicuous to casual observation by supplying thereto a color similar to that of the leather wherein they occur.

(b) That the process of recoloring, redyeing, and imparting a highly polished, lively finish to used shoe leather with Dyanshine is a process of restoring color to such leather, or that this process is an exclusive feature found only in Dyanshine.

(c) That Dyanshine or the oils thereof will render shoe leather impervious to water or keep it in its original condition; feed or nourish leather.

(d) That Dyanshine causes shoes or the leather of which they are composed to retain the appearance they had when new; take on the appearance of new shoes after being repaired one or more times; or remain in their original, new condition while being used.

(e) That shoe dyes, pastes, or polishes other than Dyanshine cause shoes to become marred by unsightly cracks or in any manner whatsoever damage or detract from the appearance of the shoe leather on which they are used.

(f) That Dyanshine exerts any influence or control in any manner whatsoever over the number of times a shoe may be repaired or half-soled.

(g) That Dyanshine will cause shoes to wear better or last longer than they would if Dyanshine had not been used thereon.

(h) That when shoe dyes, pastes, or polishes other than Dyanshine are used on the shoes, the upper leather thereof will dry out, become cracked, lose its original appearance, become dull and lusterless, or that such shoes are apparently worthless as soon as the soles become worn.

(i) That Dyanshine will have any effect whatsoever on the outer sole, insole, box-toe, lining, welting, and other parts of a shoe, excluding the upper shoe leather, by making unqualified statements relative to its effects upon "shoes."

(j) That Barton's White Glaze Polish will not rub off shoes after its application thereto. (Dec. 20, 1939.)

Eddie, Bedar Eddie, and Pauline Eddie, copartners, trading as Superior Feed Mills, 2100 S. Robinson Avenue, Oklahoma City, Okla., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling various livestock and poultry feeds, designated Superior Chick-to-Pullet All-in-One Mash, Superior Egg Mash, Superior Pig and Hog Meal, Superior Hog Cubes, Superior Milk Producer, Superior Broiler Mash, and Dandy Kandy Sweet Feed Cattle Fattener and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That Superior Chick-to-Pullet All-in-One Mash or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

1. Will guard against all common chick troubles; or
2. Will avoid the possibility of chick troubles or of set-backs or of disease; or
3. Is the only feed of its type; or
4. Excels every other chick feed or chick mash in economy of use or in case of feeding or in promoting growth and development; or
5. Will insure profits or will insure the lives of chicks; or
6. Will, through its vitamin content or otherwise, prevent common chick diseases or common chick troubles except insofar and to the extent that its nutritional qualities may be of value as an aid in effecting such results; or
7. Is always used by successful poultrymen or is more widely used than any other chick feed; or
8. Will, through its cod liver oil content or otherwise, provide all of the benefits of sunshine.

(b) That Superior Egg Mash, or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

1. Will produce more eggs or will produce eggs more cheaply than any other feed; or
2. Will "assure" large, uniform eggs or good egg production at the least feed cost, or will "assure" more eggs or healthier hens; or
3. Is more widely used and recommended than any other; or
4. Can be relied upon to double the egg production of the average flock; or
5. Supplies, through its cod liver oil content or otherwise, all of the benefits of sunshine.

(c) That one bag of Superior Pig and Hog Meal, or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, is equal in feeding value to 12 bushels of corn, or excels every other feed in promoting the growth and development of swine.

(d) That Superior Hog Cubes or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, are generally superior to any other hog feed and excel all other hog feeds in economy of use or in promoting weight gain.

(e) That Superior Milk Producer, or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

1. Is a complete feed; or
2. Furnishes in kind and quality all ingredients supplied by fresh green grass; or
3. Is the only feed containing citrus pulp; or
4. Was the first balanced dairy feed; or
5. Will, through its citrus pulp content, increase the appetite.

(f) That Superior feeds give the best and cheapest results.

(g) That they are always first with new feeds.

(h) That, by using the various Superior feeds, prospective purchasers, irrespective of the feed or ration already employed, will thereby realize such results as increased profits or greater egg production or better health and development of their flocks or increased hatchability or greater livability or better feathering or greater milk production or milk production at less cost.

(i) That Superior Broiler Mash, or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, will insure against or prevent the possibility of cannibalism or of leg weakness or of slipped tendons.

(j) That Dandy Kandy Sweet Feed Cattle Fattener, or any other feed preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, makes market top cattle quicker than any other feed.

The aforesaid advertiser vendors further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 11, 1940.)

02494. Hand Lotion—Comparative Merits and Qualities.—The Frostilla Co., Inc., a corporation, Elmira, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a hand lotion designated Frostilla Fragrant Lotion and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That competitive lotions in general leave a sticky or gummy residue.

(b) That the ingredients in Frostilla Fragrant Lotion are definitely known to be more costly than those employed in competitive lotions generally, when such is not, in fact, definitely known.

(c) That Frostilla Fragrant Lotion or any other preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties whether sold under that name or any other name.

1. Excels other hand lotions in general in producing such beneficial results as it is capable of effecting or accomplishes such results where other lotions generally fail; or
2. Prevents the nail cuticle from becoming rough or ragged; or
3. Is effective for every case of parched skin or for every case of reddened hands; or
4. Tones or stimulates the skin or does more than aid in conditioning the skin; or
5. Is "the" perfect hand lotion; or
6. Keeps hands young looking; or
7. Is most always preferred where hand lotions are tested side by side.

The said The Frostilla Co., Inc., further agree not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 12, 1940.)

02495. Matrimonial Agency—Comparative Merits, Special Offers, Etc.—J. E. Hershner, an individual trading as Exchange Publishing Co., 3827 Main St., Kansas City, Mo., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling lists of names, memberships and information in a matrimonial agency and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That his facilities for placing one in correspondence or bringing about marriages are greater or better than those of any other matrimonial bureau or offer any better chances of success;

(b) That any offer is "special" unless it is less in price than the usual or regular price charged and is limited in time;

(c) That his statements relating to the financial or other standing, education, character, occupation or profession of those whose names appear on such lists are other than the mere statements of those persons themselves, in the absence of some reasonable investigation into the truth or falsity of such statements.

The said J. E. Hershner agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 12, 1940.)

02496. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities.—A. C. Stonestreet, and W. F. Stonestreet, copartners, trading as Sampson Medicine Co., Winston-Salem, N. Car., vendor-advertisers, were engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Cook's C. C. C. and agreed in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

That a medicinal preparation now designated as Cook's C. C. C. or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, is of therapeutic value in cases of kidney trouble, or diarrhea, or flux, or ague, or female weakness, or phthisic, or cuts or burns, or in any condition where the skin is lacerated, or is of any therapeutic value for any external condition, unless its value is expressly limited to the temporary symptomatic relief of such condition and then only where and to the extent that the symptoms of such condition may be relieved by the use of a counterirritant, or is of any therapeutic value for any internal condition unless its value is expressly limited to the temporary symptomatic relief of such conditions and then only where and to the extent that the symptoms of such condition may be relieved by the use of a carminative.

The said A. C. Stonestreet and the said W. F. Stonestreet further agreed not to publish, or cause to be published, any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing statement. (Jan. 16, 1940.)

02497. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, Results and Remedy.—B. Frank Senseman, an individual, 5300 Lancaster Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., advertiser-vendor, was engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Dr. Senseman's Calf Scours Remedy and Dr. Senseman's Calf Scour Powder and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

That a medicinal preparation now designated "Dr. Senseman's Calf Scours Remedy" and "Dr. Senseman's Calf Scour Powder," or any other preparation containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, whether sold under said names or any other name or names—

(a) Is an effective treatment or competent remedy for the disease known as white scours or scours.

(b) Is a proven product.

(c) Restores to normal the intestines of calves afflicted with the disease known as white scours or scours.

It is further agreed by B. Frank Senseman that in connection with the dissemination of advertising by the means and in the manner above set out, he will forthwith cease and desist from representing by the use of the word "Remedy" in the trade name of his preparation, or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, in designating said preparation, that the same is a remedy for white scours or scours.

The said B. Frank Senseman further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 15, 1940.)

02498. Medicinal Preparations—Nature, Qualities, Ailments, Etc.—Harold Hain, an individual trading as Hain Pure Food Co., 604 San Mateo St., Los Angeles, Calif., vendor-advertiser was engaged in selling medicinal preparations designated Hain Col-Lax and Hain Colon Food and agreed in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That Hain Col-Lax:

1. Is a laxative food or is a natural laxative; or
2. Will effect a change in intestinal flora; or
3. Is not capable of producing any degree of irritation; or
4. Is efficacious or harmless in all cases of intestinal disorders.

(b) That defecation of three or four times daily is essential in the elimination of putrefaction or toxemia.

(c) That Hain Col-Lax will do more than relieve constipation.

(d) That colitis, ulcers, appendicitis, nervous breakdowns or other diseases and pathological conditions are the direct result of auto-intoxication, unless it is stated that such is merely the opinion of some medical authorities.

(e) That putrefaction cannot occur in an acid environment or in a carbohydrate environment or that the predominance of acid forming bacteria will cause the system to be free of toxic poisons.

(f) That the use of Hain Colon Food will completely eliminate putrefaction or, through changing the intestinal flora or otherwise, clear the blood stream of toxic wastes and regulate the entire system.

(g) That "many foods" and dust in the air are full of "putrefactive" germs.

Harold Hain further agreed to cease and desist from designating in any way his lactose dextrin product as a colon food.

The said Harold Hain further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 17, 1940.)

02499. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities and New.—Vadscos Sales Corp., a corporation, 2109 Borden Ave., Long Island City, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Quinlax and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) Is a competent or effective treatment to stimulate circulation or to eliminate acids through the pores.

(b) Treats "seven" symptoms or phases of a cold or is an effective treatment or remedy for all of the symptoms which usually accompany colds.

(c) Is a complete treatment or an effective remedy for colds.

(d) Is a new preparation on the market or affords a new method for treating colds or their symptoms.

(e) Is ideal or especially suitable for children. (Jan. 16, 1940.)

(a) That the amount of wheat germ in a package of Wheat Hearts is equivalent to the amount of wheat germ in any specified quantity of wheat when such quantity of wheat has a wheat germ content greater than that of a package of Wheat Hearts.

(b) That its product Wheat Hearts has a Vitamin B<sub>1</sub> content greater than any other cereal.

(c) That the caloric value of its product Wheat Hearts is directly transmissible into or is an equivalent of bodily energy or vitality.

(d) That any amount of Wheat Hearts will supply a quota of vitamin B<sub>1</sub> unless the amount stated is in accord with scientific determinations.

The said General Mills, Inc., further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 19, 1940.)

02501. Lubricating Oil—Qualities, Test, Results and Comparative Merits.—The McAlester Fuel Co., a corporation, McAlester, Okla., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling an oil designated as Paranay Motor Oil and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That Paranay Motor Oil possesses qualities never before known in any oil.

(b) That the so-called "Miracle Test" is the best test ever devised for determining the lubricating qualities of motor oils.

(c) That the strength of the oil film alone on motor bearings determines the quality of lubrication obtained from any oil, and the ability of any oil to prevent excessive friction.

(d) That Paranay Motor Oil has the toughest film in oildom and the longest life.

(e) That the use of Paranay Motor Oil will cause the motor to produce more pep, mileage, horsepower and speed, or quicker acceleration, greater hill-climbing ability, a cooler motor and less engine wear than all other motor oils.

(f) That the use of Paranay Motor Oil will result in almost no repair bills.

(g) That more Paranay Motor Oil clings to the motor bearings and for a longer period of time than all other motor oils and affords better protection to the motor bearings than all other motor oils.

(h) That Paranay Motor Oil prevents the excessive friction and wear in the motor caused by other oils, especially while breaking in the motor.

(i) That Paranay Motor Oil will keep an automobile, tractor, truck, or any other machine running just as smoothly, powerfully or economically the second, third or fourth year as it ran the first year.

The said The McAlester Fuel Co. agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 19, 1940.)

02502. Women's Coats—Nature, Quality, Earnings or Profits, Etc.—Herman Korach, an individual doing business under the trade name of H. Korach Co., 809 West Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling women's coats and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) Using the word "Pony" or any other word that simulates "Pony" in sound or spelling; or the words "lamed" or "lambled" or any other word containing the letters "Lam" or simulating the word "Lamb" in sound or spelling; or the word "Persian," or any word that simulates "Persian" in sound or spelling; or the word "Koracal," or any word that simulates "Karakul" or "Caracul" in sound or spelling; or the words "Seal" or "Seal Plush," or any other words or terms that contain the word "Seal" or any word that simulates "Seal" in sound or spelling; or the name of any animal, pelt or fur to designate any cloth coat or garment that is not made of the pelt or fur of the animal designated, unless immediately preceded by the words "Cloth imitation of" in clear, plain conspicuous type.

(b) Representing that his coats are the original genuine Koracal coats.

(c) Representing that his coats previously designated "Koracal" are new or novel.

(d) Representing that his coats will satisfy a woman's longing for a fur coat.

(e) Representing he has developed a strange new material that looks exactly like fur.

(f) Representing that hundreds of women in any one locality are eager to buy his coats.

(g) Representing that his salespersons or agents purchase his coats at a price permitting them to charge a customer a very excessive price and at the same time having said customer believe that she is obtaining a bargain.

(h) Representing by the use of such words as "up to," "as high as," or any words or terms of like import that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make earnings or profits either in cash amounts or percentage of profit within any specified period of time or otherwise of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time or otherwise made by a substantial number of his active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

Herman Korach further agreed that in his future advertising, where a word or phrase is used in connection with a specific claim or representation of earnings or profits by way of qualification or limitation, such word, words, or phrases will be made equally as clear and plain as the specific claim or claims which they purport to limit or qualify.

Herman Korach further agreed that in computing the period of time during which specified earnings or profits were made he will include all of the time actually used for demonstrations, solicitations, and any other services performed in connection with either the sale, delivery, or collection of the purchase price by the particular agent, salesman, distributor, dealer, or other representative who is alleged to have made such earnings or profits.

The said Herman Korach agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 19, 1940.)

02503. Fumigant, Insecticide and Rodent Control—Safety, Comparative Merits, Qualities and Results.—Innis, Speiden & Co., a corporation, 117 Liberty St., New York City, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a fumigant, insecticide and rodent control designated Larvacide and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That Larvacide is a safer fumigant, unless conspicuous notice is given in direct connection with every claim for safety, that all fumigants are a deadly poison, but by Larvacide's capacity to produce tears warns persons to get away from it.

(b) That Larvacide is generally a more effective fumigant than other similar products.

(c) That Larvacide provides complete control of pests; or completely exterminates bugs, moths, every flying and crawling pest, including rats and mice.

(d) That Larvacide when used on lumber or other forest products will effect a permanent or continued freedom from insect life.

(e) That Larvacide has generally no equal as a fumigant or insecticide.

(f) That Larvacide is the most powerful fumigant yet developed.

(g) That one fumigation a year with Larvacide will provide protection from moths unless it is clearly stated in direct connection with such representation that usual general spot treatment is needed.

(h) That the use of Larvacide to fumigate machinery will result in egg-free flour made by such machinery.

(i) That Larvacide penetrates every berry in every bushel of wheat.

The said Innis, Speiden & Co. agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Jan. 19, 1940.)

(b) That prospective purchasers, by using any of his feeds or by virtue of any ingredient or ingredients in such feed, will thereby be enabled to realize results superior to those already being obtained, unless such improved results would be expected to follow unequivocally and however meritorious the feed or ration already being employed by such prospective purchasers, and where the realization of any such improved result would be expected to be limited to cases where prospective purchasers had been employing feeds inferior to those which he offers for sale that then such limitation be clearly, appropriately and conspicuously indicated.

(c) That any of his feeds are perfectly balanced.

(d) That Super Quality Coccidiosis Control Mixture, when used in conjunction with proper sanitary measures or otherwise, will absolutely prevent the development of coccidiosis in baby chicks or that said mixture will cure coccidiosis, or that said mixture will do more than aid in the prevention of coccidiosis, or that its use will obviate the necessity of resorting to drugs or medicines for the treatment or prevention of coccidiosis, or that it is completely medicated, or that it will help in the prevention of infectious disease generally or of any specific infectious disease, unless, where it does so only by reason of its nutritive qualities, such reason is clearly, appropriately, and conspicuously indicated.

(e) That any of his feeds incorporate every new feeding discovery of value in a poultry or livestock ration.

(f) That every ingredient in Super Quality Starting Mash is completely assimilated or that said mash is potently fortified with all the known vitamins.

(g) That the minerals present in Super Quality Supplement Mash are completely water soluble.

- (h) That cereal grains are deficient in all of the vitamins.
- (i) That Super Quality Growing Mash provides in ample amounts every known vitamin.
- (j) That Super Quality Pullet Mash will prevent the possibility of neck moult or premature production.
- (k) That Standard 24 percent Dairy Feed will provide a complete ration.
- (l) That the buttermilk or milk sugar content in Super Quality feeds is of any particular value in aiding digestion or assimilation or in promoting intestinal health or in giving a tonic effect or in helping to keep the intestinal tract free of harmful bacteria.
- (m) That his various feeds are sold entirely direct to the purchasing public.
- (n) That Super Quality Starting Mash will afford the lowest mortality rate or that any of his hog feeds will afford the highest profit or will grow and develop swine at the lowest feeding cost or will put on the most weight or will grow and develop swine in the shortest time or with the smallest amount of feed.

The said J. Kendley Martin further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Mar. 21, 1940.)

02533. Book on Eye Exercises—Qualities, Etc.—Macfadden Book Co., Inc., a corporation, 205 West Forty-second Street, New York City, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a book embracing a system of eye exercises entitled "Strengthening the Eyes" and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

- (a) That its book now entitled "Strengthening the Eyes," whether under that or any other title, containing or prescribing the same or similar ophthalmological advice and exercises, is based upon new facts or that the said advice or exercises are new or revolutionary.
- (b) That by following said advice and exercises a person with weak or defective vision may quickly train any of the muscles of his eyes so as to correct such weak or defective vision.
- (c) That the use of the method advocated in this book will enable everyone to train the muscles of the eyes so as to make them work properly at all times without effort or strain.
- (d) That the use of this method will enable one to obtain perfect eyesight either with or without the use of glasses.
- (e) That the suggestions, advice, and method of exercise prescribed in this book will help one to control the muscles of the eyes, without qualification, or by any other terminology, importing or implying that they will help one to control all muscles of the eyes.
- (f) That none of the exercises prescribed in this book can cause injury to the eyes.
- (g) That as a result of the purchase and use of the method described in this book, those who have used glasses to overcome the effect of faulty refraction, far or nearsightedness, astigmatism, squint eyes, cross eyes, weak, watering eyes, poor vision, eye headache or strain, or any one of such conditions can, in general or in the majority of instances, remove these ocular defects and can thereby be relieved of the necessity for wearing glasses.
- (h) That the method prescribed in this book will give one complete mastery over any eye muscles; and
- (i) That exercise is the only real help in cases of impaired vision.

The said Macfadden Book Co., Inc., agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Mar. 25, 1940.)

<sup>1</sup> Stipulation No. 02540, approved March 28, 1940, was rescinded by the Commission as of May 8, 1940, and matter involved made the subject of a new stipulation, No. 02602, approved July 17, 1940, which will be found reported in its appropriate place in vol. 31 of the Commission's Decisions.

designated Aviola, or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name—

1. Is a preventive or competent cure or an effective treatment for piles, hemorrhoids, or any other rectal ailment.

2. Acts as an analgesic for piles or hemorrhoids or any other rectal ailment, or will in any manner relieve the pain, anguish, worry, or agony that may be associated with said ailments.

3. Is a competent remedy or an effective treatment for protruding piles or is of any therapeutic value in the prevention of protruding piles.

4. Will stop piles from bleeding.

5. Is sold at a price intended to cover only the cost of manufacture and not intended to include a profit.

6. Is "Guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drug Act," or by the use of any other words or expressions, has been examined or is approved by the Federal Government, or that the Federal Government guarantees it complies with the law.

The said Frederick Hoffman agreed not to publish, or cause to be published, any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Apr. 4, 1940.)

02542. Mechanical Device—Qualities, Economy or Savings and Opportunities.—W. M. Houston and M. Logan, copartners, trading as H. & L. Conversions, 2112 Addison Street, Berkeley, Calif., vendor-advertisers, were engaged in selling a mechanical device designated under various names, including Dies-L-Gas, Semi Diesel Fuel Oil Conversion Unit, Des-A-Gas Unit, and H. & L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) By the words "Semi-Diesel" or otherwise that the H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit when attached to an ordinary gasoline engine converts the latter into a semi-Diesel engine or into an engine which functions in the manner of a semi-Diesel engine.

(b) By the words "Des-A-Gas," "Dies-L-Gas," or otherwise that the H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit when attached to an ordinary gasoline engine converts the latter into a Diesel engine or into an engine which functions in the manner of a Diesel engine.

(c) That reliable evidence at present indicates that Diesel engines will be in our automobiles within a year.

(d) That by the use of an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit an ordinary gasoline engine will be capable of delivering as much power or more power per gallon of fuel oil than it ordinarily could deliver on gasoline without the use of this device.

(e) That with the use of an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit, the performance of a motor on fuel oil or on low-grade gasoline will be equal to or superior to that of the same motor on a good grade of gasoline.

(f) That by the use of an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit more mileage per gallon will be obtained on fuel oil or on low-grade gasoline than would be obtained without the use of this device on a good grade of gasoline.

(g) That one will obtain one-third more mileage on fuel oil through the use of an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit than one would obtain ordinarily on gasoline without the use of this unit.

(h) That an ordinary gasoline engine will idle or saunter idly at all times on fuel oil as well as on gasoline.

(i) That when an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit and fuel oil are used no carbon is formed in the engine or that there is no dilution of the lubricating oil with the fuel oil.

(j) That the heat units in the fuel oil that is used in a motor equipped with an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit are completely "cracked" or volatilized.

(k) That as a result of the installation of an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit, and the use of fuel oil, an ordinary gasoline engine will run in an almost frictionless manner, or that it will run more smoothly than it otherwise would.

(l) That fuel oil vapor before combustion is completely vaporized or "dry."

(m) That an H. and L. Fuel Oil Conversion Unit is "absolute perfection."

(n) That with the demonstrated savings that one can make with the H. and L. Conversion Unit sales resistance is practically eliminated.

The said W. M. Houston and M. Logan agreed not to publish or cause to be published, any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Apr. 4, 1940.)

(a) That the product is a complete beauty treatment.

(b) That the product will smooth away or remove lines from the skin or change the normal texture of the skin to make it seem finer.

- (c) That the product will keep the skin young.
- (d) That the product is a competent treatment or effective remedy for blackheads.
- (e) That the product will remove all traces of foreign matter from the pores.

The said Sempray Jovenay Co. further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Apr. 9, 1940.)

02545. Novelties—Opportunities, Earnings, or Profits, Free and Patented.—Hook-Fast Specialties, Inc., a corporation, P. O. Box 1425, Providence, R. I., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling novelties designated Hook-Fast Products and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That it sets agents up in business for themselves, or that it offers a chance for men to get in business for themselves; or that the profits, earnings or income will be big, substantial, or come in daily, or increase weekly; or

(b) That it furnishes a sample case or samples when it requires payment, deposit, or services before it supplies its agents with a sample case or samples unless it clearly and plainly states in direct connection with every such statement just what is required in the form of payment, deposit, services, or otherwise in full detail; or

(c) By using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for distributing respondent's merchandise unless all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the terms "free" or "without cost," or any other terms of similar import or meaning and there is no deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise, or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise; or

(d) That any of its products are patented or sold exclusively by its agents unless such be the facts; or

(e) By using the terms "free" or "without cost" or any other terms of similar import or meaning to designate or describe any article of merchandise regularly included in a combination offer with any other article or articles of merchandise that such article is a gift or included without cost or charge to the buyer.

The said Hook-Fast Specialties, Inc., in soliciting salespersons agents, or dealers in aid of the sales of its products, further agreed to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(f) That prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time, which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have theretofore been consistently made in like periods of time by its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or

(g) By the use of such words as "up to", "as high as", or any words or terms of like import that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or

(h) Any amount as being the actual earnings or profits of any specified agent, salesman, distributor, dealer, or other representative earned in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions, when such amount was either not actually net earnings or profits, or was not made in the ordinary course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or

(i) That the minimum amounts which prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make in profits or earnings within any specified period of time is an amount in excess of the minimum amount earned in like periods of time by all of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

Hook-Fast Specialties, Inc., further agreed that in its future advertising, where a word or phrase is used in connection with a specific claim or representation of earnings or profits by way of qualification or limitation, such word, words, or phrases will be made equally as clear and plain as the specific claim or claims which they purport to limit or qualify.

Hook-Fast Specialties, Inc., further agreed that in computing the period of time during which specified earnings or profits were made it will include all of the time actually used for demonstrations, solicitations, and any other services performed in connection with either the sale, delivery, or collection of the purchase price by the particular agent, salesman, distributor, dealer, or other representative who is alleged to have made such earnings or profits.

The said Hook-Fast Specialties, Inc., agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Apr. 11, 1940.)

(a) That any of the feeding plans of J. Kendley Martin or that any of the feeds of J. Kendley Martin or any ingredient or ingredients in such feed will “insure” or “assure” for the user any result which may not be expected to follow under every condition of use or which, for its accomplishment, is not entirely dependent on such feeding plan or on such feed or on any ingredient or ingredients in such feed.

(b) That prospective purchasers, by using any of the feeds of J. Kendley Martin or by virtue of any ingredient or ingredients in such feed, will thereby be enabled to realize results superior to those already being obtained unless such improved results would be expected to follow unequivocally and however meritorious the feed or ration already being employed by such prospective purchasers, and where the realization of any such improved result would be expected to be limited to cases where prospective purchasers had been employing feeds inferior to those which are offered for sale and sold by J. Kendley Martin, that then such limitation be clearly, appropriately and conspicuously indicated.

(c) That any of the feeds of J. Kendley Martin are perfectly balanced.

(d) That Super Quality Coccidiosis Control Mixture, when used in conjunction with proper sanitary measures or otherwise, will absolutely prevent the development of coccidiosis in baby chicks, or that said mixture will cure coccidiosis or do more than aid in the prevention of coccidiosis, or that its use will obviate the necessity of resorting to drugs or medicines for the treatment or prevention of coccidiosis, or that it is completely medicated, or that it will help in the prevention of infectious diseases generally or of any specific infectious disease, unless, where it does so only by reason of its nutritive qualities, such reason is clearly, appropriately and conspicuously indicated.

(e) That any of the feeds of J. Kendley Martin incorporate every new feeding discovery of value in a poultry or livestock ration.

(f) That every ingredient in Super Quality Starting Mash is completely assimilated or that said mash is potently fortified with all the known vitamins

(g) That the minerals present in Super Quality Supplement Mash are completely water soluble.

(h) That cereal grains are deficient in all of the vitamins.

(i) That Super Quality Growing Mash provides in ample amounts every known vitamin.

(j) That Super Quality Pullet Mash will prevent the possibility of neck moulting or premature production.

(k) That Standard 24 percent Dairy Feed will provide a complete ration.

(l) That the buttermilk or milk sugar content in Super Quality feeds is of any particular value in aiding digestion or assimilation or in promoting intestinal health or in giving a tonic effect or in helping to keep the intestinal tract free of harmful bacteria.

(m) That the various feeds distributed by J. Kendley Martin are sold entirely direct to the purchasing public.

(n) That Super Quality Starting Mash will afford the lowest mortality rate or that any of the hog feeds sold and offered for sale by J. Kendley Martin will afford the highest profit or will grow and develop swine at the lowest feeding cost or will put on the most weight or will grow and develop swine in the shortest time or with the smallest amount of feed. (Apr. 24, 1940.)

- (f) That Thymite will rid or eliminate roaches from all buildings overnight.
- (g) That one application of Thymite will keep any building clean of roaches, water bugs, silver bugs, or ants, for one year.
- (h) That there are no other insecticides which will achieve substantially the same results as will Distol Concentrate or Thymite.

The said Wilson Bros. Paint and Hardware Co., agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (May 20, 1940.)

02575. Food Supplements and Medicinal Preparations—Nature and Qualities.—McCullum Laboratories, a corporation, 17234 South Main Street, Gardena, Calif., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling food supplements and medicinal preparations designated Isodent, Isomar, Isoveg, Isolax, Kelp Tablets and Garlic-Parsley McCullum Tablets and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

- (a) That any of the above named products supplies to the average diet the mineral or vegetable elements in which such diet is deficient.
- (b) That a medicinal preparation now designated Isodent, or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing substantially the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, is a balanced dentifrice, or that it restores natural color to the teeth, or builds firmness of the gum tissues or attacks acid mouth germs or reduces tartar.
- (c) That a food product now designated Isomar, or any other preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, is a balanced gland food, or combines the most valuable organic minerals from land or sea vegetation.
- (d) That a food product now designated Isoveg, or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, provides a source of many of the more important nutritional factors, or that such factors are frequently missing in the average daily menu.

(e) That the preparation now designated as Isolax, or any other preparation or product containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name, or any other name, is a food.

(f) That the food product now designated Kelp Tablets or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, is rich in vital minerals or that such minerals are necessary to body nutriment.

(g) That the food product now designated Breakfast Granules or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, aids the digestion.

(h) That the food product now designated Alfalfa Tea and Tablets, or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, aids Nature in providing a source of natural alkaline nutriment; that it is a valuable internal supplement to creams or powders, or that it increases liquid secretion.

(i) That the food product now designated Garlic-Parsley McCollum Tablets, or any other product containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name, will reduce high blood pressure, or that clinical investigation has shown that either garlic or parsley will cause a lowering of blood pressure, or relieve headaches, dizziness or similar symptoms resulting from functional high blood pressure.

The said McCollum Laboratories, Inc., further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (May 27, 1940.)

02576. Medicinal Preparation—History, Nature and Qualities.—Medical Tea Co. of California, Inc., a corporation, and Otto Wise, an individual trading as Medical Tea Co. of California, 307 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Calif., were engaged in selling a medicinal preparation designated Cento Tea, formerly designated Aesculapius Tea and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That such product or that the particular formula for such product has been used for centuries or has been used for any period of time greater than is actually the case.

(b) That such product or that any of the ingredients in such product is of value in the treatment of gall or liver or kidney ailments, or is a competent and reliable agent for the relief of symptoms associated with such ailments, or is of value in preventing or dissolving kidney stones, or gallstones, or possesses healing or analgesic properties, or is capable of restoring one to normal or vital health, or aids the liver in its functions, or purifies gall passages, or helps eliminate poisons and foreign matter from the system, or possesses disinfectant properties, or acts as a cleanser for the liver or kidneys or gall, or cleanses the stomach, or is capable of bringing about a proper distribution of body liquids, or stimulates gall secretions.

(c) That such product is not a laxative.

(d) That the ingredients in such product are carried to the affected parts.

(e) That all modern physicians subscribe to the theory that constipation causes auto-intoxication or a "backing up" of toxic poisons within the body.

(f) That every ingredient in such product possesses therapeutic value.

(g) That the hypericum content of such product stimulates the appetite.

The said Otto Wise and the said Medical Tea Co. of California, Inc., further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (May 27, 1940.)

02577. Drug—Success and Qualities.—Armand S. Weill Co., Inc., a corporation, 170 Franklin Street, Buffalo, N. Y., was engaged in the business of conducting an advertising agency which disseminated advertisements for a drug designated "Raz-Mah" on behalf of Templetons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

(a) That said preparation is sold by all druggists.

(b) That sufferers from asthma will be almost instantly relieved from wheezy, difficult breathing by Templetons Raz-Mah Capsules.

(c) That sufferers from hay fever will be speedily, quickly or almost instantly relieved from sneezing, itching and excessive watery secretions in the nose and eyes associated with hay fever, by Templetons Raz-Mah Capsules.

(d) That coughs due to bronchial irritation or otherwise will be speedily, quickly or almost instantly relieved by Templetons Raz-Mah Capsules.

(e) That sufferers from smokers' cough and bronchial irritations are relieved by Templetons Raz-Mah Capsules.

(f) That the use of Templetons Raz-Mah Capsules will prevent bronchial irritations from developing into asthma. (May 28, 1940.)

DECISIONS OF THE COURTS

IN CASES INSTITUTED AGAINST OR BY THE COMMISSION <sup>1</sup>

ALLE-RHUME REMEDY COMPANY, INC., AND BLOCK DRUG COMPANY, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION <sup>2</sup>

No. 7245

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Third Circuit, Dec. 5, 1939)

Order dismissing, on stipulation and agreement of parties, petition for review of cease and desist order of Commission in the matter of Alle-Rhume Remedy Co., Inc., et al., Docket 3678, August 25, 1939, 29 F. T. C. 707, and which, as thereafter modified on November 13, 1939 (29 F. T. C. 716), directed respondent corporations, their officers, etc., to cease and desist from disseminating any advertisements in connection with offer and sale of their "Allenru" or other similar medicinal preparation, which advertisements represent, directly or by implication, that preparation in question will drive out of or rid joints or muscles of all uric acid deposits, or that excess uric acid causes or aggravates most cases of rheumatism, or that said preparation is compounded from safe or scientific formula, etc., as in said order in detail set forth.

Sher & Sher, of Rutherford, N. J., for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Before BIGGS and MARIS, Circuit Judges:

Upon consideration of the agreement of counsel for both sides, in the above entitled cause,

It is now ordered, That the said appeal be, and the same is, hereby dismissed.

EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION, INC., ET AL. v. FEDERAL

No. 97

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Dec. 18, 1939)

JURISDICTION—IN GENERAL—COMPETITIVE WIDE SALE IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE—SCHOOL REFERENCE WORKS—PUBLISHERS.

A New York corporation publishing a reference book suitable for use by school children and sold in interstate commerce in many states in competition with others selling similar books is subject to the Federal Trade Commission Act. Federal Trade Commission Act, section 5; 15 U. S. C. A. section 45.

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE SUPPORTED BY SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Findings of the Federal Trade Commission supported by substantial evidence are conclusive.

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—TRADE AND CORPORATE NAMES—BUSINESS PRIVATE PROFIT ENTERPRISE AS EDUCATIONAL UNDERTAKING.

Evidence supported finding of the Federal Trade Commission that corporate and trade names of business enterprises selling reference book for profit misled a substantial portion of prospective purchasers into erroneous belief that teachers and educators were united to sell book for a common purpose other than financial gain and that members of the public were induced to make purchases which they would not have made except for their erroneous belief.

PUBLIC INTEREST—METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—BUSINESS STATUS, ADVANTAGES OR CONNECTIONS—BUSINESS PRIVATE PROFIT ENTERPRISE AS EDUCATIONAL UNDERTAKING.

[471] Where business enterprises selling reference books for profit employed selling procedure designed to give impression that their paramount purpose was not profit but the attainment by a group of learned people of their purpose to serve the cause of education, the purchasing public was entitled to be protected against the deception practiced, and a proper order to that end by the Federal Trade Commission was in the public interest.

PUBLIC INTEREST—METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—COMMISSION ACTION—SPECIFIC AND SUBSTANTIAL AS PREREQUISITE.

The interest of the public in selling procedure to justify action by the Federal Trade Commission must be specific and substantial.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—MODIFICATION BY COURT—IN GENERAL.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has power to modify orders of the Federal Trade Commission.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—MODIFICATION BY COURT—METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—TRADE AND CORPORATE NAMES—BUSINESS PRIVATE PROFIT ENTERPRISE AS EDUCATIONAL UNDERTAKING—“EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION”—MODIFICATION TO PERMIT USE IF DISCLOSURE TRUE STATUS BY ACCOMPANYING WORDS.

Use of term “Educators Association” in names employed by business enterprises selling reference book for profit in a manner not misleading to the purchasing public would not be “unfair competition,” and hence an order of the Federal Trade Commission, requiring enterprises to cease and desist from representing through use of that term that they constituted a group of educators or that their business was anything other than a private enterprise for profit, was modified to provide that names could be used if coupled with other words revealing true character of business.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—DISCONTINUANCE OF PRACTICES—IN GENERAL—EFFECT.

Discontinuance of practices violative of the Federal Trade Commission Act does not alone deprive the Federal Trade Commission of power to make an order otherwise justified, but, under the act, past as well as present practice gives the commission cause for action. Federal Trade Commission Act, section 5 (b) ; 15 U. S. C. A., section 45 (b).

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—DISCONTINUANCE OF PRACTICES—TERMS AND CONDITIONS—AGENTS’ OR REPRESENTATIVES’—REFUNDS—BUSINESS STATUS, ADVANTAGES OR CONNECTIONS, AND PRODUCT OF SELLER—EDUCATIONAL CONNECTIONS AND BOOK’S OFFICIAL ADOPTION AS TEXTBOOK REQUIRED.

Though business enterprises organized to sell a reference book for profit had ceased to violate the Federal Trade Commission Act before complaint was filed, the Federal Trade Commission could order enterprises to cease and desist from representing to prospective representatives that they would refund deposits under certain conditions and from representing that they were connected with educational institutions or that their book was prescribed as a textbook, where those provisions of order were based on adequate findings supported by evidence.

(The syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 108 F. (2d) 470)

On petition by the Educators Association, Inc., and others, to review order of Commission requiring petitioners to cease and desist from the use of certain sales practices found to amount to unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of section 5, order modified, and, as modified, affirmed.

Townsend, Kindleberger & Campbell, of New York City (E. Crosby Kindleberger, of New York City, of counsel), for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, and Mr. William L. Pencke and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorneys, all of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before SWAN, CHASE, and CLARK, Circuit Judges.

CHASE, Circuit Judge:

The Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint against the petitioners and, after hearings thereon, made an order requiring them to cease and desist from the use of certain sales practices which were found to amount to unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (38 Stat. 717, 15 U. S. C. A. 45). This petition was brought to review that order.

[472] During the proceedings certain facts were stipulated and, from those facts supplemented by evidence taken as to others, it was shown that Educators Association, Inc., is a New York corporation with its principal office in the city of New York which publishes a reference book suitable for use by school children which is called The Volume Library. This book is sold in interstate commerce in many of the states in competition with others selling similar books.

Educators Association, Inc., sells its entire output of The Volume Library to petitioner, Leo F. Tully, who is its president and owns 95 percent of its stock. He does business under the trade name Educators Association and maintains offices at the address of Educators Association, Inc. He either sells the books outright to the other petitioners who in turn sell them to the public or has them sold to the public by the other petitioners acting as sales agents. In either event, the sales are ostensibly made to the public by Educators Association. In connection with each sale of a book the purchaser is given a certificate of membership in Educators Association, which in fact is only a trade name, that bears a facsimile of the corporate seal of Educators Association, Inc., and the signatures of L. L. Tully, president; E. E. Richards, vice president; and M. L. Kelley, secretary. It states in part that " * * * the person to whom this certificate is addressed and immediate family are members of Educators Association. Said membership becomes effective when 'The Volume Library' is fully paid for, and gives full privileges for 10 years of consulting our Bureau of Research and Service regarding any practical question whose answer does not appear in 'The Volume Library.'" This service is given without cost provided a self-addressed stamped envelope was enclosed with the inquiry. It is mainly done by having a clerk answer the questions received though some are referred to others and Mr. Tully has an arrangement whereby forty questions a year may be referred to Encyclopedia Britannica for answer.

Sales people, employed on a commission basis with certain guarantees, are instructed in the methods of selling to be used and if they follow instructions, which include learning several pages of a composition called a sales talk, are entitled to the refund of a deposit, after working a designated time, which they are required to make to obtain a sample book and supplies. In making sales, they are expected to call at the homes of people having children in school and enlist their interest in the book by showing how it can be used by the children in their studies. Formerly, some parts of this sales talk may have indicated to parents that the sales agents were connected in some way with the school their children attended or that use of The Volume Library was a school requirement but that method of selling had been stopped before the complaint in these proceedings was issued. There was also evidence to show that sales people had been induced to sign contracts of employment without being fully advised as to the conditions of those contracts but that practice, too, had been discontinued before the issuance of the complaint.

Originally, people who did qualify as educators had had an association which compiled the matter that first was published but had been superseded by the corporate publisher and the contributors, many of them well-known educators, were not associated together at any time after petitioner Tully began to do business under the trade name Educators Association. The order under review provided that petitioners should cease and desist—

“(1) From representing through the use of the term ‘Educators Association’ in any corporate or trade name or through any other means or device, that they or any of them, constitute a group of educators or teachers formed into an association or that the business operated by them, or any of them, is anything other than a private business enterprise for profit.

“(2) Representing to prospective representatives that they will refund deposits or pay any specific sums of money or salaries to such representatives until and unless they fully and adequately disclose all of the terms and conditions upon which refunds or payments are actually made.

“(3) From representing or implying that they or their representatives, agents, or canvassers are connected in any manner with public schools or other educational institutions, or that said Volume Library, or any other and similar publication is prescribed as a text book or required to be used in connection with school work.”

The nature of the business in which the petitioners are engaged clearly makes the Federal Trade Commission Act [473] applicable and if the findings are supported by substantial evidence they are conclusive. (Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Co., 258 U. S. 483, 491; Federal Trade Commission v. Curtis Co., 260 U. S. 568, 580; Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Society, 302 U. S. 112, 117; Fioret Sales Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 100 F. (2d) 358 (C. C. A. 2)).

Having found upon substantial evidence that Educators Association, Inc., and Educators Association were both business enterprises organized and existing solely to make profits from the sale of the book and that they did not comprise a group of teachers or educators properly so-called, the Commission found further that the corporate and trade names used did mislead a substantial portion of prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that a group of teachers and educators were united to sell the book "for a common purpose other than financial gain and have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the public under such false and erroneous belief to make purchases of said volume which they would not make except for such erroneous and false belief." The part of the finding above quoted was, we think, sufficiently supported by the evidence. The selling procedure in connection with the use of those names was designed to give the impression that the paramount purpose to be achieved by the seller was not profit to be gained in business but instead the attainment by a group of learned people of their purpose to serve the cause of education. The natural tendency of such an erroneous concept would be to induce parents to buy the book when they would not have done so had they known the truth. The purchasing public is entitled to be protected against that kind of deception and a proper order to that end is in the public interest (Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., 288 U. S. 212, 217).

Of course the interest of the public must be specific and substantial (Federal Trade Commission v. Paladam Co., 283 U. S. 643). In this instance that interest is in not being deceived by the use of the corporate and trade names in connection with attempts to sell the book. The use of those names in a manner which did not mislead the purchasing public would not be unfair and certainly would not be unfair competition. Perhaps paragraph 1 of the order was not intended to prevent the use of either of those names. But we have the power to modify such orders (Federal Trade Commission v. Balme, 23 F. (2d) 615, 618), and for the sake of clarity that part of the order should be modified to provide that the names may be used if coupled with other words which do away with their tendency to create a false impression by revealing the true character of the business conducted (Federal Trade Commission v. Army and Navy Trading Co., 88 F. (2d) 776).

The other two paragraphs of the order are based upon adequate findings which are supported by the evidence. Both findings and evidence, however, are to the effect that the petitioners had ceased to violate section 5 of the act in the respects forbidden before the complaint was filed. Because of this, it is argued that paragraphs 2 and 3 of the order should be set aside. We do not understand that discontinuance of practices violative of the act will alone deprive the Commission of power to make an order otherwise justified. The act in express terms requires the Commission to issue a complaint if it shall appear to it that such a proceeding would be to the interest of the public whenever "* * * any such person, partnership, or corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition or unfair or deceptive act or practice in commerce, * * *" (15 U. S. C. A., sec 45 (b)). Past as well as present practices give the Commission cause for action and their discontinuance is no defense (Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, 84 F. (2d) 910, 913; Federal Trade Commission v. Wallace, 75 F. (2d) 733, 738).

Order modified as above and, as modified, affirmed.

MILLINERY CREATORS' GUILD, INC., ET AL. v. FEDERAL

No. 9

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Jan. 22, 1940)

BOYCOTTS—TRADE ASSOCIATION ACTION—STYLE PIRACY PREVENTION—CUTTING OFF COMPETITORS' ACCESS TO CUSTOMERS OR MARKET—WHERE PRICE MAINTAINING EFFECT.

Where trade association having members which comprised a substantial majority of manufacturers of high priced women's hats sought to combat "style piracy" by inducing major retail outlets to refrain from purchasing hats which were piracies of designs registered with the association and by refusing to sell to retailers dealing with pirates, and where necessary effect of the manufacturers' combination was to maintain their price structure, the Federal Trade Commission was justified in entering a cease and desist order on ground that the association's method was "unfair competition," since the boycott employed by the association was unlawful. Federal Trade Commission Act, section 5, 15 U. S. C. A. section 45; Sherman Anti-Trust Act, sections 1, 2, 15 U. S. C. A., sections 1, 2.

BOYCOTTS—IN GENERAL—LEGALITY—WHERE NO RESTRICTIVE RESULT RE IMPORTANT COMPETITIVE PRICE, QUALITY, OR SERVICE.

The anti-trust laws contravene concerted action that unduly confines important areas of competition in price, quality, or service, but, unless it has such restrictive result, a combination to boycott is not necessarily unlawful.

BOYCOTTS—IN GENERAL—LEGALITY—OBJECTIVES—ILLEGAL ACTS—PREVENTION—COMPETITIVE INTENT AND EFFECT—WHERE BENEFICIAL COMPETITION NOT NECESSARILY ELIMINATED AND INTENDED TO BE.

[176] On petition by Millinery Creators' Guild, Inc., and others, to review and set aside an order by Commission, order affirmed.

Mr. Lowell M. Birrell, of New York City (Mr. Charles A. Van Patten, of New York City, of counsel), for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorney, all of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Weisman, Quinn, Allan & Spett, of New York City (Mr. Milton C. Weisman and Mr. Melvin A. Albert, both of New York City, of counsel), for Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., amicus curiae.

Before SWAN, AUGUSTUS N. HAND, and CLARK, Circuit Judges.

CLARK, Circuit Judge.

This is a petition by Millinery Creators' Guild, Inc., and its members, for review of respondent's cease and desist order directed against petitioners' plan to prevent so-called "style piracy" of designs in women's hats. Such plan was found by respondent to be an unfair method of competition under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Millinery Creators' Guild, Inc., formerly Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., is a trade association organized as a stock corporation under the laws of the State of New York. It has "members" which the Federal Trade Commission finds to comprise "a substantial majority" of the manufacturers of high-priced women's hats, or hats which sell at wholesale for at least 8 dollars. Though not stated in its certificate of incorporation, the admitted immediate purpose of the Guild is to combat the practice known as "style piracy." Original creations designed by members of the Guild and by other high-priced milliners are often copied as soon as they appear in public, and the copyists manufacture and distribute their "piracies" at prices far below those charged by the originators. To eliminate this type of competition, the Guild has established a registration bureau, with which any creator of original designs and styles may register his model. Once a model is accepted by the bureau, it is the usual practice of members to accept it as an original design and style, but this is not conclusive, final determination being made by a committee of the Guild. Most of the country's major retail outlets have been approached, and over 1,600 of them have been persuaded to sign "Declarations of Coöperation." These Declarations state the intention of the retail stores not to purchase any hats which are piracies of designs registered with the Guild. Members of the Guild have agreed among themselves not to sell to any retailer who persists in purchasing from the pirates. One former member of the Guild, Milgrim Hats, Inc., was expelled from membership for failing to abide by these policies.

We believe that the boycott employed by the Guild is one that is unlawful under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, 15 U. S. C. A. sections 1, 2. Hence the Federal Trade Commission was justified in concluding that the Guild's method of restraining competition was unfair and in entering its cease and desist order. (Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Packing Co., 257 U. S. 441, 453; Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 85 F. (2d) 522, 525 (C. C. A. 2).)

The antitrust laws contravene concerted action that unduly confines important areas of competition in price, quality, or service. Unless it has this restrictive result, a combination to boycott is not necessarily unlawful. So long as the particular agreement is not intended to and does not have the necessary effect of eliminating beneficial competition, a boycott designed to prevent the commission of an illegal act may be unobjectionable. (United States v. American Livestock Commission Co., et al., 279 U. S. 435; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 394; Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, supra; United States v. Sugar Institute, D. C. S. D. N. Y., 15 F. Supp. 817, 899, modified and affirmed 297 U. S. 553.) In certain cases group action may permissibly have broader objectives, and a trading exchange may fix rules for trading and forbid dealing with non-members, provided again that there is no perceptible effect on legitimate methods of competition. (Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604; Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231.) [177] But it is easy to overstep the line, and a boycott or other concerted action aimed at abolishing socially useful types of competition will not be tolerated. (Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600; Binderup v. Pathé Exchange, 263 U. S. 291; Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, supra; United States v. Sugar Institute, supra (with cases cited at 15 F. Supp. 900).)

The permissible zone of conduct has recently been defined in Sugar Institute v. United States, 297 U. S. 553, at 598-599, where the Chief Justice declared: "And cooperative endeavor may appropriately have wider objectives than merely the removal of evils which are infractions of positive law," but then said, "As the statute draws the line at unreasonable restraints, a cooperative endeavor which transgresses that line cannot justify itself by pointing to evils afflicting the industry or to a laudable purpose to remove them."

We turn, then, to consider the alleged evil of style piracy, and whether its abolition will eliminate a socially useful type of competition.

What passes in the trade for an original design of a hat or a dress cannot be patented or copyrighted. An "original" creation is too slight a modification of a known idea to justify the grant by the government of a monopoly to the creator; yet such are the whims and cycles of fashion that the slight modification is of great commercial value. The creator who maintains a large staff of highly paid designers can recoup his investment only by selling the hats they design. He suffers a real loss when the design is copied as soon as it appears; the imitator in turn reaps a substantial gain by appropriating for himself the style innovations produced by the creator's investment. Yet the imitator may copy with impunity, and the law grants no remedy to the creator. (Cheney Bros. v. Doris Silk Corp., 35 F. (2d) 279 (C. C. A. 2).)

The Guild emphasizes the immorality of style piracy, and urges that it is an abuse which honest and respectable merchants may permissibly combine to eliminate. But there are larger issues at stake here, and there were larger issues at stake in the Cheney case, than the ethical propriety of copying. The law of unfair competition has a simple rubric: An ungentlemanly practice will be condemned so long as its condemnation will not injure the consuming public more than the ungentlemanly practice itself. Style piracy was not outlawed in the Cheney case, because to outlaw it would afford a virtual monopoly to the creator of an unpatented and uncopyrighted design. The holder of a patent or copyright has contributed valuable information to the public, and in return he has been granted a limited monopoly; Congress has not yet, however, seen fit to extend the privileges of a monopolist to the inventor of an unpatentable idea. Despite the limited holding of International News Service v. Associated Press, 248 U. S. 215, and its strictures against permitting one person to take a "free ride" on the labor and inventiveness of another, we believe that the public interest is best served by limiting the protection afforded an idea to the particular chattel in which it is embodied. (Lewis v. Vendome Bags, Inc., 108 F. (2d) 16, (C. C. A. 2); Krem-Ko Co. v. R. G. Miller & Sons, 68 F. (2d) 872 (C. C. A. 2); Sinko et al. v. Snow-Craggs Corp., 105 F. (2d) 450, 452 (C. C. A. 7).

It is true that concerted activity may be proper to eliminate evils, even though those evils are not violations of positive law, and the fact that the pirate is immune from legal restraint is not of itself sufficient cause to forbid the Guild from devising other means to control him. But here the courts have refrained from enjoining the pirate because they will not support a monopoly in an unpatentable idea. It would be strange to say that the Guild may establish this same monopoly by extrajudicial methods. Style piracy has been lethal in its effect on hat prices, and one of its results has been to make the latest fashions readily available to the lowest purchasing classes. The market of the high-grade originators has been sharply curtailed, and their prices have suffered correspondingly. It is safe to say that the members of the Guild instituted their antipiracy campaign to protect their markets and price levels, as well as to improve business morals within the industry. The testimony of a representative of Peggy Hoyt, Inc., makes this graphically clear.

"Q. Were you asked to become a member of either of these two Guilds?

"A. Yes. * * * Mr. Earl Farrington, who is one of the best grade, what I call a wholesaler, that is, his business is strictly a [178] wholesaler, I have known him for 20 years, crossed with him many, many times on the boat. He called me up and suggested this idea about the fact that the millinery business was in the doldrums, you see, something had to be done about it and they had gotten together all of the leading milliners, so-called, to try to create a greater interest in women wearing hats and raising the prices for a better grade milliner because, for instance, the average milliner 15 years ago easily got $30 for every hat they sold, today the God damn thing sells for $1.95, I mean, they sell for $1.95 around town, as a result of which they practically ruin every milliner. * * *

We believe, therefore, that concerted action to eliminate style piracy extends beyond the permissible area of industrial self-regulation. The purpose of the milliners, and the necessary effect of their combination, is to maintain their price structure, and to eliminate a distasteful "evil" which the law nevertheless recognizes to be a socially desirable form of competition. Such an antithesis is unavoidable: What is desirable competition to the consumer may be outlaw traffic to the established manufacturer. But while we maintain the competitive system, a monopoly in an idea, not recognized by positive law, must be jealously scrutinized lest the few are protected at the expense of the many. See Fly, Observations on the Anti-Trust Laws, Economic Theory and the Sugar Institute Decisions: I, 45 Yale L. J. 1339, 1348, 1371.

Petitioners point out that the similar plan of Fashion Originators' Guild of America, Inc., applicable to women's ready-to-wear dresses, was upheld in a direct action under the antitrust laws in Wm. Filene's Sons Co. v. Fashion Originators' Guild of America, Inc., 90 F. (2d) 556 (C. C. A. 1), affirming D. C. Mass., 14 F. Supp. 353, as well as under a State antitrust law in Wolfenstein v. Fashion Originators' Guild of America, Inc., 244 App. Div. 656, 280 N. Y. S. 361. Apparently these decisions go well to the edge of permissible law, at least as we read the decisions of the Supreme Court. And the Filene case carefully distinguishes this proceeding, then pending before the Commission, by pointing out that the Fashion Guild, unlike the Millinery Guild, has no controlling position in the industry, for it contains only a limited number of manufacturers producing less than 6 percent of the yearly output of ready-to-wear dresses. Whether this is a valid distinction need not now be determined, since in any event we feel that the present order is justified.

The form of the order seems appropriate to the end in view, namely, the prohibition of further boycott of retailers and manufacturers who have copied members' styles and designs in female haberdashery. It is affirmed and an order will be entered enforcing it.

SWEETS COMPANY OF AMERICA, INC. v. FEDERAL

No. 154

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Jan. 29, 1940.)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCOPE AND FORM—DEFINITENESS AND COMPLETENESS—LOTTERY MERCHANDISING—CANDY—CANDY, ETC., SO PACKED, ETC., THAT SALES, ETC., "MAY BE" MADE, ETC.—SELLER OBLIGATIONS AS NOT DEFINED.

Federal Trade Commission's order directing candy manufacturer to cease distributing candy so packed that sales to general public are to be made or "may be made" by means of a lottery, supplying to dealers packages which are used or "may be used" to conduct a lottery, and supplying to dealers assortments of candy which are to be or "may be given" as prizes to purchasers, was objectionable, since the quoted phrases would place upon manufacturer all responsibility for acts of any jobber or retailer who might reassemble candies, however they had been packed, so that they would be again placed in prohibited combination.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—MODIFICATION BY COURT—LOTTERY MERCHANDISING—CANDY—WHERE NEITHER PROBABLE NOR ANTICIPATED VIOLATING SALES WITHIN APPARENT TERMS PROHIBITIONS.

Where Federal Trade Commission did not intend to prohibit candy manufacturer from making sales unless manufacturer had reason to suppose that jobber or retailer would use candy in connection with lottery, but Commission's order was so sweeping that it seemed to prohibit a sale, even though use of candies in lottery might neither be anticipated nor probable, the order was modified so that it would only preclude sales where a lottery system was known to be practiced, or where the packing of the candy carried an unfair appeal to purchasers.

On petition to review an order of Commission requiring petitioner to cease and desist from certain methods of supplying candy to dealers that may be used for a gambling or gift enterprise, order modified.

Mr. Louis H. Solomon, of New York City, for petitioner.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel; Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel; and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorney for Federal Trade Commission, all of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before SWAN, AUGUSTUS N. HAND, and CLARK, Circuit Judges.

<sup>1</sup> Reported in 109 F. (2d) 296. For case before Commission, see 27 F. T. C. 1190, and for order as modified to conform with court's decree, see supra, p. 1299.

AUGUSTUS N. HAND, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition to review an order of the Federal Trade Commission entered on December 7, 1938, against Sweets Company of America, Inc. The petitioner is a manufacturer of candy engaged in shipping its product to retail dealers and jobbers throughout the United States.

The Federal Trade Commission made findings of fact which so far as they are pertinent to the issues before us were the following:

"PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, * * * the respondent has sold various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described in detail for the purpose of showing the methods used by the respondent, but this description does not include all of the details of the several sales plans which the respondent has used in the distribution of its assortments of candy by lottery or chance. Such assortment is composed of 150 small rolls or pieces of candy of uniform size and shape called 'Little Rolls', which are packed in a box together with 24 larger pieces of candy called 'Dinner For Six', packed in a separate box, which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said small rolls or pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner:

"The majority of the said small rolls or pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have the same color but a small number of or a minority of said small rolls or pieces of candy have a different color. Said rolls or pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1 cent each, but the purchasers who procure one of the said rolls or pieces of candy colored differently from the majority of said rolls or pieces of candy are entitled to receive, and are given without charge, one of the said larger pieces of candy. The rolls or pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are individually wrapped in non-transparent wrappers, and the color of the said pieces of candy is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the wrapper is removed. The said larger pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

* * * * *

"PAR. 4. Many dealers buy from respondent equal numbers of boxes of said 'Little Rolls' and said 'Dinner For Six'. Said 'Little Rolls' are contained in a box and the majority of said rolls which are of one color are separated by a partition from the minority of said rolls which are of a different color. There are no indications on the wrappers of said rolls as to the colors thereof. Many retail dealers who purchase said 'Little Rolls' and 'Dinner For Six' mix the said rolls of different colors and sell them for 1 cent each and give said 'Dinner For Six' pieces of candy as prizes to purchasers of said rolls of a different color than the majority of said rolls in accordance with the sales plan or method described in paragraph 2 hereof. The packing and distributing by respondent of candy in the manner above found is contrary to public policy. * * *

After making a further finding to the effect that other manufacturers in competition with the petitioner do not sell their candies in assortments such as are above described and lose trade because consumers prefer assortments which involve the gambling feature, the Commission concluded that the above practices injure competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition.

[298] The Commission thereupon made an order directing the petitioner to cease and desist:

"1. Selling and distributing candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gambling device, or gift enterprise.

"2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers packages or assortments of candy which are used or may be used to conduct a lottery, gambling device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of said candy contained in the said packages or assortments to the public.

"3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers for sale to the public packages or assortments of candy composed of individually wrapped pieces of candy of uniform size and shape and of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy or any other merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or other merchandise are to be or may be given as prizes to the purchasers procuring pieces of said candy of a particular color."

The order to "cease and desist" further provided that within 60 days the petitioner should file a written report setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it had complied with the directions of the Commission.

The petitioner argues that the words "or may be made" in subdivision 1 of the order; "or may be used" in subdivision 2; "or may be given" in subdivision 3 are such as to throw upon it all responsibility for the acts of any jobber or retailer who may reassemble candies, however they may have been packed, so that they are again placed in prohibited combinations. This seems a reasonable criticism, for any box of candies of identical sizes, containing chocolate-covered pieces of a variety of flavors, might be used for gambling purposes, for a child buying some of the pieces might be given a prize if he happened to pick out a piece the contents of which was of a particular flavor. The Commission does not intend to prohibit a manufacturer from making such a sale unless he has reason to suppose that the jobber or retailer who buys his candy will use it in connection with a lottery. This is shown by the statement in the brief of the Commission that their order is not applicable to "straight candy," because a dealer thereafter so repacks and reassembles it as to sell it as "chance candy." Yet the order is so sweeping that it seems to prohibit a sale like the one described, even though the use of candies in a lottery might neither be anticipated nor probable.

We think that an innocent vendor will not be subjected to the risk of violating the order if it be modified so that the words "are likely to be made" are substituted for "may be made" in subdivision 1; the words "are likely to be used" are substituted for "may be used" in subdivision 2; and the words "are likely to be given" are substituted for "may be given" in subdivision 3. The order as thus modified would only preclude sales where a lottery system was known to be practiced or where the packing of the candy carried an unfair appeal to purchasers. It would not preclude a manufacturer from selling its candies when so packed that a lottery was neither reasonably anticipated, nor suggested, nor likely to occur.

Counsel for the Commission insist that the order requires no modification because it only forbids sales in cases where candy is "so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery." But this limitation is at most only found in subdivision 1, and not in subdivisions 2 or 3, and even in subdivision 1 precludes any assembly of candy in which a selection of a particular flavor by chance is possible. Subdivision 2 is subject to a similar criticism. Subdivision 3 would preclude sales of candies of uniform size and shape, but of different flavors, contained in wrappers of the same color, even in cases where there was no likelihood of their use in a lottery just because a lottery might possibly occur.

It must be remembered that the proof of the use of petitioner's candies for lottery purposes was confined to transactions in but four or five retail stores. The Commission has shown by its brief that no burdensome order is intended. The difficulty with the order as framed is that when read literally its terms are more severe than the purposes of the Commission require and that it does not clearly inform the manufacturer of its rights.

It is to be observed that the petitioner has not attacked the findings of the Commission that the particular method which the petitioner has employed in assembling its candies for sale and described in paragraph 4 supra is a practice which is contrary to public policy. Therefore the [299] order as modified forbids the particular practice therein described and such other practices as are likely to involve a lottery.

An order similar in form to the one in the case at bar was modified by the Courts of Appeal of the Seventh, First, and Ninth Circuits in Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, 84 F. (2d) 910, 913 (C. C. A. 7); Federal Trade Commission v. Miller Co., 97 F. (2d) 563 (C. C. A. 1); Ardelle v. Federal Trade Commission, 101 F. (2d) 718 (C. C. A. 9). In Ostler Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 962 (C. C. A. 10); such an order was allowed to stand without modification by the Court of Appeals of the Tenth Circuit, and in National Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 104 F. (2d) 999, the Seventh Circuit abjured its earlier decision in Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, supra, and permitted a like order to remain unchanged. We think the decisions of the Courts of the First and Ninth Circuits are to be preferred to those of the Seventh and Tenth because they more clearly define the obligation of the manufacturer.

An order should pass affirming the order of the Commission as modified in the manner above provided.

Order modified.

CLARK, Circuit Judge, dissenting in part:

I would affirm the Commission's order. I do not believe we should substitute our own vagueness for that of the Commission. The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals has repented of so doing. National Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 104 F. (2d) 999 (C. C. A. 7), repudiating Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, 84 F. (2d) 910 (C. C. A. 7). Compare also Ostler Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 962 (C. C. A. 10). These cases hold that the Commission's order cannot reasonably be construed to have application to straight candy, but, in view of the allegations of the complaint and the findings, applies only to candy carrying an unfair appeal to retail dealers and purchasers, on account of the element of chance involved in its sale. So viewed, the order does not make petitioner responsible for acts of retailers and is proper. The cases point to an extensive evil and suggest the undesirability of an ineffective order, as does the testimony before the Commission. If the order proves unworkable in practice, the Commission may correct it more expertly than we can now when we do not know that it contains other than imaginary defects.

I do not understand our modification of the order. Does "likely to be used" mean any more than "capable of being used," which is the present order reasonably construed? Presumably the new order must mean something other than did the one it changes. If "likely" means "probable," and that is something more than "capable," we may be getting dangerously near the nullifying requirement of subjective intent on the part of the manufacturer. At any rate, "are likely to" suggests a question-begging requirement of some unspecified quantum of proof of possibilities, which may render the order practically unenforceable.

The Commission's difficulty here apparently springs from over-kindness (cf. Capon Water Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 107 F. (2d) 516, 518 (C. C. A. 3)), for an order requiring distinctive labeling of the candies would seem impervious to attack. Even though the Commission may have to come to such an order in time, I would not discourage its trying of milder measures first, as I fear we are doing when we present it with a mandate thus uncertain.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COMMISSION PROVISIONS—PUBLIC INTEREST—WHETHER FINDING PREREQUISITE.

The section of Federal Trade Commission Act relating to orders against unfair methods of competition and requiring a finding that proceedings would be in the public interest was inapplicable to proceeding under section of Clayton Act, prohibiting the payment or acceptance of commission, brokerage, or other compensation, without qualification, under which section Trade Commission is not required to inquire about evil effect or whether proceeding would be in the public interest. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45; Clayton Act, sec. 2 (c), as amended June 19, 1936, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 13 (c).

STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—IN GENERAL—PUNCTUATION.

Commas will not be permitted to defeat the legislative meaning.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE—REGULATION—PROTECTION—SCOPE AS POLICE POWER.

Congress has a power to regulate interstate commerce so full and complete that it may prohibit what is of harmful tendency therein, much like a State may in other fields by virtue of the police power.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COMMISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS, OR TO BUYER AGENTS OR REPRESENTATIVES—WHERE BROKER PAYEES, OFFICERS AND CONTROLLERS OF BUYER COMPANY—WHETHER PROHIBITION DENIAL DUE PROCESS.

The statute prohibiting payment or acceptance of commission, brokerage, or other compensation is not unconstitutional as denying "due process of law," as applied to partners or brokerage firm who owned 95 percent of stock of corporation, who were required to desist from accepting commissions in connection with purchase of commodities in interstate commerce by the corporation.

(The syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 109 F. (2d) 268)

On petition by the Webb-Crawford Co. and others to review order of Commission which com[269]manded petitioners to cease and desist from certain practices, and cross-petition by Commission requesting court to command obedience to order, order sustained and obedience commanded.

Mr. Max Michael, of Athens, Ga., and Mr. Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, Ga., for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. John Darsey, special attorney, Federal Trade Commission, both of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before FOSTER, SIBLEY, and HOLMES, Circuit Judges.

SIBLEY, Circuit Judge:

The Webb-Crawford Co., a corporation, and Ed D. Wier, E. L. Wier, and Carter W. Daniel, who trade under the name Daniel Brokerage Co., bring under review (15 U. S. C. A. sec. 21, 28, U. S. C. A. sec. 225) and order of the Federal Trade Commission which commanded that "The Webb-Crawford Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Ed D. Wier, E. L. Wier, and Carter W. Daniel, either in their capacities as partners in Daniel Brokerage Co.

or in their individual capacities, in connection with the purchase of commodities in interstate commerce by the Webb-Crawford Co., do forthwith cease and desist from accepting or receiving from sellers any fees or commissions or brokerage or any allowance in lieu thereof." The Commission by cross petition asks us to command obedience to the order.

There are contentions that some of the findings of fact are unsupported by evidence and other facts are not found which the evidence proves. It is also urged against the order that there is no finding that the condemned practice had an injurious effect upon competition, or that this proceeding would be in the interest of the public as required by statute; and that the complaint does not make the issues adjudged. Lastly, it is urged that the order, resting on subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the act of June 19, 1936, 49 Stats, 1526, 15 U. S. C. A., section 13, denies due process of law as here interpreted and applied.

The complaint in its last paragraph alleges that payment by sellers to and acceptance by Ed D. Wier, E. L. Wier, and Carter W. Daniel of fees and commissions is in violation of section 2, subsection (c) of the statute, they being the majority stockholders, the officers and directors of the buyer, the Webb-Crawford Co. The cease and desist order is supported by and substantially pursuant to the complaint.

The complaint rests squarely on subsection (c) of section (2) of the Clayton Act, and the authority to enforce it granted to the Commission in section 11, 15 U. S. C. A. sections 13 (c), 21. Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U. S. C. A. section 45, relates to orders against unfair methods of competition, and as to those a finding that proceedings would be in the public interest is made an element. That section is inapplicable here. While subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended makes necessary a finding that the discrimination therein condemned affects competition or tends to create monopoly, subsection (c) mentions no such element. Subsection (a) begins: "It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce," to do certain things. Subsection (c) begins with the same words, thus taking a fresh start and by an entirely independent paragraph and without any such qualification condemns other things. The Congress considered the effect on commerce of the things named in subsection (c), and absolutely prohibited them. The Trade Commission is not to enter on any enquiry about their evil effect, nor whether a proceeding would be in the public interest. Its duty is to enforce the prohibition.

We need not consider in detail the attacks upon the findings of fact. It is wholly undisputed that Ed D. Wier, E. L. Wier, and Carter W. Daniel are partners in the brokerage company, and that they own 95 percent of the stock of the Webb-Crawford Co., the first named being the corporation's president and salesman, the second its vice president and its buyer, and the third its secretary and treasurer and financial manager. They constitute its board of directors and completely control it. The brokerage partnership is managed by C. R. Daniel, a brother of Carter W. Daniel and a small stockholder in the Webb-Crawford Co. He has his brokerage office in the warehouse of that com[270]pany, paying rent for it. The brokerage partnership represents only sellers and is paid only by them. It has many other customers beside the Webb-Crawford Co., and the Webb-Crawford Co. buys not over 10 percent of its goods through the partnership. It seems to us that the Board was not justified in finding that the partnership was controlled by the Webb-Crawford Co., but that the reverse is true, that the partners could and did control the corporation. It is not the case of a dummy broker really acting for the buyer. The Webb-Crawford Co. did not get the brokerage fees or any of them. That it borrowed money from some of the partners is not the same thing. Nor do we see that the brokers failed to render selling service to the sellers. Their connection with the large business of the Webb-Crawford Co., which naturally would secure obtaining its orders, other things being equal, would tend to make sellers employ them as their brokers, but there is no evidence that the relationship was abused to the injury of either seller or buyer. What in our opinion is fatally important is that one of the brokers, E. L. Wier, as vice president of the Webb-Crawford Co., does all its buying. He acts as the representative of the buyer; and as one of the brokers receives one-fourth of the commission paid by the seller. Ed D. Wier, who sells the purchased goods for the Webb-Crawford Co., and must have a voice in determining what shall be bought, gets a fourth of the commission; and Carter W. Daniel, who checks the bills and pays them, gets the remainder of the commission. Without reflecting on the faithfulness or honesty of anyone here concerned, it is evident that the tendency and general results are precisely the same as if the Webb-Crawford Co., the buyer, had gotten the commissions. And the law equally condemns both things. Omitting the inapplicable alternatives, we quote from subsection (c): "It shall be unlawful for any person * * * to pay or grant, or to receive, or accept, anything of value as a commission * * * in connection with the sale or purchase of goods * * * either to the other party to such transaction (the Webb-Crawford Co.,) or to an agent, (or) representative, (E. L. Wier, Ed D. Wier, Carter W. Daniel) * * * of any party to such transaction other than the person by whom such compensation is so granted or paid." Sellers who sell to the Webb-Crawford Co. cannot pay brokers' commissions to these men who in fact act for and represent the buyer in making the purchases. The interposition of C. R. Daniel as manager for the brokers does not change the fact that the commissions are paid to his principals who are the officers and representatives of the buyer.

Subsection (c) contains the words "except for services rendered." Do they qualify the whole subsection, so that any person having any relations whatever to the opposite party to a commercial sale can take a commission, provided he renders service? Such a construction would largely destroy the statute, and nullify its plain intent. The words can, by transferring a comma, be attached to those immediately preceding: "or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof except for services rendered." The statute would then prohibit "a commission, brokerage, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof except for services rendered, in connection with the sale or purchase, etc." The punctuation as published is confusing. We think the true meaning is better indicated by taking the comma out after "thereof," and inserting it after "rendered." Commas are not to be suffered to defeat the legislative meaning.

The statute is not unconstitutional as depriving these stockholders, without due process, of their right to engage in business activities merely because they are stockholders in a corporation. They may do all the brokerage business they can which has not been made unlawful. The particular part of their business here ordered to cease has been made unlawful. Congress has a power to regulate interstate commerce so full and complete that it may prohibit what is of harmful tendency therein, much like a State may in other fields by virtue of the police power. We have no doubt that the regulation before us escapes being arbitrary, and has a real relation to the health and purity of interstate commerce. Cases tending to sustain this and other points ruled are Biddle Purchasing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 96 F. (2d) 687 (C. C. A. 2); Oliver Bros. v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 763 (C. C. A. 4); Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 667 (C. C. A. 3).

The order under review is sustained and obedience to it is commanded.

EVIDENCE—COURT LIMITATIONS—WHERE FINDINGS SUPPORTED.

In proceeding to set aside cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, Circuit Court of Appeals is not permitted to weigh or review evidence, and findings of Commission, if supported by evidence, are conclusive (15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45).

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—JURISDICTION—PARTIES—JOINER—PARTICIPANTS, AGENTS AND INSTRUMENTALITIES—CORPORATE PHOTOGRAPHER, DISCOUNT CORPORATION, AND SALESMEN—WHERE LATTER CONTRACTORS AND ORDER OBTAINERS THROUGH FALSE REPRESENTATIONS FOR FORMER—TINTED ENLARGEMENTS AND FRAMES.

In proceeding to review cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission which was directed against corporate photographer, a discount corporation, and picture salesmen, evidence established that photographer which engaged in selling tinted enlargements and frames therefor and salesmen who contacted customers and obtained orders through false representations, represented that customers were dealing directly with and purchasing directly from photographer, and that salesmen had apparent and actual authority to represent photographer.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—JURISDICTION—PARTIES—JOINER—PARTICIPANTS, AGENTS AND INSTRUMENTALITIES—CORPORATE PHOTOGRAPHER, DISCOUNT CORPORATION, AND SALESMEN—WHERE DISCOUNT CONCERN LEGAL FICTION IN SCHEME TO MISLEAD AND DEFRAUD.

In proceeding to review cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission which was directed against a corporate photographer, a discount corporation, and picture salesmen, wherein evidence established existence of fraudulent and deceptive plan whereby customers were induced to purchase pictures through the salesmen, evidence established that discount corporation was a legal fiction used to forestall claims made by customers who had been victims of fraudulent sales plan, so that cease and desist order was properly entered against the discount corporation.

METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—DECEPTIVE INDUCEMENTS TO PURCHASE—SPECIAL PRICES OR OPPORTUNITIES TO BUY—"LUCKY DRAW"—TINTED PICTURES.

Evidence sustained finding of Federal Trade Commission of existence of fraudulent plan by which customers were induced to purchase tinted pictures from salesmen who represented corporate photographer, which included use by salesmen of so-called "draw" by which customer was led to believe that he was being presented with an opportunity to purchase a painting at a price far less than it otherwise would have been.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCHEMES AND METHODS TO DECEIVE AND DEFRAUD—PARTICIPANTS—COMPETITIVE INJURY AND PUBLIC INTEREST—PICTURES AND FRAMES.

A cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission which was directed against participators in scheme to sell pictures and frames was authorized as against contention that methods employed by the participators were not injurious to competitors or that proceeding was not in the interest of the public, where the evidence established that the methods employed were fraudulent and deceptive.

METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—SCHEMES AND METHODS TO DECEIVE AND DEFRAUD—WHERE EFFECTIVE IN INDUCING PURCHASES BY MANY—COMPETITIVE INJURY AND PUBLIC INTEREST AND POLICY.

A method of selling based upon fraud and deception whereby many persons are induced to purchase a product is contrary to public policy and in itself is an injury to actual and potential competitors, and prevention of such a method by cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission is authorized in the public interest.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCHEMES AND METHODS TO DECEIVE AND DEFRAUD—IF COMPETITORS ALSO GUILTY.

A cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission which was directed against participators in fraudulent scheme for selling tinted pictures and frames was not improper because of alleged fact that competitors of the participators employed same or similar sales methods.

[394] On petition by the International Art Co. and others against Commission to set aside cease and desist order of Commission, petition denied and order affirmed.

Mr. Albert H. Fry, of Chicago, Ill., for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Mr. M. Marshall Morgan, and Mr. James W. Nichol, all of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before SPARKS, MAJOR, and TREANOR, Circuit Judges.

MAJOR, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition to set aside a cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, entered December 16, 1938, by virtue of section 45, 15 U. S. C. A. The findings and conclusions of the Commission follow generally the allegations of the complaint. They are both of such length that they can not, with propriety, be set forth in detail.

In substance, the facts found are: Petitioners, International Art Co. (herein called "Art Company"), and American Discount Co. (herein called "Discount Company"), are separate corporations having the same office and principal place of business at 325 West Huron Street, Chicago, Ill. They were organized by petitioner, John C. Kuck, who is president, general manager, and the owner of substantially all the stock of both corporations. The Art Company has been and is engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling tinted or colored enlargements of family and other photographs, and frames therefor. Kuck directs all activities and controls the affairs and policies of each corporation, and has general control of the representatives, agents and salesmen engaged in the operation of the business, which is conducted throughout and in many of the states. The salesmen are the ones who deal directly with the public in the soliciting and taking of orders, and work in crews under the direct supervision of what is styled as a manager or customer-manager. Each salesman is supplied by the Art Company with all blanks used in connection with the business, including a certificate certifying that the salesman is the duly accredited representative of such company. Order blanks used by the salesmen, when a sale is made, are directed and mailed to the Art Company. When the order is received and filled by the latter, it is delivered to a common carrier and shipped to its point of destination in the name of the company. In the meantime, the salesman who obtained the order has left the particular territory, and another agent known as the delivery man, with his credentials from the company, is there to receive the shipment and make delivery. He notifies the customer in the name of the company as to when personal delivery will be made to the customer's home. At that time, the contract price is collected in cash by the delivery man, or a note taken on a form furnished by the Art Company, but payable to the Discount Company. The business is conducted generally under the direction and control of Kuck.

The salesman, in connection with his sales talk, always has with him a sample picture. His object is to induce the customer to furnish a photograph of some member of the family and enter into a contract by which the Art Company agrees to paint a picture like the sample displayed. Certain false and deceptive statements are found to have been made by the salesmen by which the customer is induced to purchase. Among such are, that the sample picture has been awarded first prize, which has created a great demand therefor, and that the Art Company has arranged for its artist to paint this particular family size and, that the supply will be limited to a few people in each locality for exhibition purposes. For this reason it is represented that the purchaser will be given the picture for the actual cost of materials, or the cost of materials and delivery; that such pictures are expensive and usually sell for $30, and on some occasions the pictures are represented to have a value as high as $100; they are referred to as "oil paintings," "hand-painted" and "finely finished paintings." The prospective customer is advised that the "painting" to be furnished will be finished the same as the sample exhibited and, that the picture will be framed but that the customer need not take the frame unless desired. In instances where the "painting" to be made is of a child or baby, the salesman informs the prospective purchaser that the Chicago Tribune is preparing to hold a baby contest and that the Art Company has made an arrangement to enter its pictures in said contest. The salesman, in order to make a sale, introduces to the prospective purchaser a "draw" which consists of certain certificates enclosed in an envelope. The drawing of a "red seal certificate" entitles the prospect to one picture for $15, and a second picture free; the drawing of a "blue seal certificate" entitles the prospect to receive two pictures for $15, or one picture for half the regular price, to wit: $7.50. The drawing of a "green seal certificate" entitles the prospect to nothing. The salesman so manipulates the drawing that the prospect draws whatever the salesman desires. The picture, as delivered, is completely framed in a hexagon designed frame, and the purchaser is informed by the delivery man that due to the odd design, it can not be procured at any other place, and if the picture is removed from the frame it will quickly deteriorate. If the salesman succeeds in selling the frame, it is at a price ranging from $22.50 to $25.

Concerning the representations thus made, the Commission found that the picture delivered is not like the sample displayed; said sample never won a prize; sales are not limited to a selected few persons in any territory; the usual price charged by the Art Company for said pictures was $7.50; that the purchaser was not given a reduced price; that the so-called "painting" was nothing more than an enlarged photograph made up by a Chicago photographer who charged 25 cents for each enlargement; that a so-called artist colors the pictures and is able to finish 25 or 30 pictures per day; that the entire cost of a finished picture would not exceed $1.50; that said pictures were not "paintings" as that word is understood by artists or by the public; that the Chicago Tribune did not have a baby contest in progress or even in contemplation; that the purpose of the "draw" was to convey to the mind of the prospective purchaser that he was to receive a picture at a greatly reduced price and, that he could only realize on his successful "draw" by the purchase of a picture, and that the purchaser was induced and persuaded to purchase a frame against his will and at an exorbitant price.

When the purchaser sought relief from the fraud which had been perpetrated upon him, he was informed by the Art Company that the matter was out of its hands and the purchaser was referred to the Discount Company who was the holder of the purchaser's note. The Discount Company would advise the purchaser that it was an innocent purchaser for value, and would threaten to take legal action, warning the purchaser that this would involve $10 court costs, plus attorney fees.

It was found that firms and persons engaged in the sale of colored enlargements of photographs and frames in interstate commerce, as well as those engaged in the business of painting portraits and selling paintings, and who truthfully represented the same, are competitors of the Art Company and, that the plan adopted by such company in the sale of its product is an unfair method of competition, as well as prejudicial and injurious to the public.

Before entering into a discussion of the points raised by petitioners, it is well to have in mind the well established rule that this court, in a proceeding of this character, is not permitted to weigh or review the evidence and, that the findings of the Commission, if supported by evidence, are conclusive (Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U. S. 67, 73; Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Society et al., 302 U. S. 112, 117).

While petitioners, under what they entitle "contested issues" attack substantially every finding made by the Commission, yet their argument is directed to only a few, to which we shall confine our discussion. Further, we think it may be stated, at least as a general proposition, that petitioners' argument is directed at the interpretation placed upon the findings rather than to the findings themselves.

The cease and desist order is directed against the Art Company, the Discount Company and John C. Kuck, and their servants, salesmen, employees, and agents, and it is in connection therewith that petitioners devote a major portion of their argument. It is their contention that both companies are engaged in a separate and independent business and, that none of the so-called managers, salesmen or deliverymen is an agent of such character that his acts are binding upon the Art Company. The Commission with reference to the question of agency, in part found:

"The solicitors, salesmen, deliverymen, district managers, and other representatives selling the respondent International Art Company's colored enlargements of photographs, and frames therefor, to members of the purchasing public, are agents for the International Art Company and are accepted and dealt with as such by the purchasing public. * * *"

[396] Petitioners, with reference to this finding, state:

"Every word of that finding may be true and yet the company does not have control over the actions of those salesmen, nor can the Commission make a new contract for them to give the company that power, without having the other party to the contract in court, which they did not have. * * *

Then the argument proceeds that the construction of the term "agency" as construed by the Commission, is unwarranted. In other words, that there was no agency in the sense that the Art Company had such control over those participating in the sales plan as would make the company liable for their acts and statements. The Commission further finds regarding this same subject matter:

"Based upon the testimony of customers of the International Art Company and upon general representations of the respondents made both directly and through its agents, salesmen and representatives, and also by reason of the use of the credential cards, contracts and order blanks above described, the Commission finds that the respondents as well as their salesmen and other representatives soliciting orders for pictures and frames therefor, have customarily represented that such customers are dealing direct with the respondent International Art Company and are purchasing such pictures direct from the International Art Company."

We have examined the evidence sufficiently to conclude that this finding not only is supported by substantial evidence, but is conclusively shown. True, there was testimony by the so-called managers and representatives to the effect the business was being conducted by them independently and, that they received no orders or directions from the Art Company. There is evidence, however, including the physical facts, which demonstrate to the contrary. For instance, each salesman was issued a certificate designating him as the representative of the Art Company; the order was taken in its name; the picture was shipped in its name, and the customer was notified in its name of the time of delivery. All blanks used by the salesmen were furnished by the Art Company and bore its name. The customer had a right to believe—in fact, could not have believed otherwise, than that the salesmen were the agents of the Art Company, with full authority in the matter.

Petitioners' argument and authorities are largely concerned with the relation between a manufacturer and a retail merchant. For example, it cites Marshall Field & Co., a store which sells the products of the American Woolen Co., and argues that the latter is not liable for representations made by the former as to the products sold. We assume, however, that Marshall Field & Co. acts entirely in an independent capacity, and not as a representative of the Woolen Company. It is also sought to compare the instant situation with the relation existing between the automobile manufacturer and its local agent. This is another instance, however, of the agency conducting its business in its own right and in an independent manner. These illustrations have no analogy to the present situation. Here, the agent was clothed with apparent and, we think, real authority to speak and act for and on behalf of the principal, and the latter is bound thereby. We know of no theory of law by which the company could hold out to the public these salesmen as its representatives, reap the fruits from their acts and doings without incurring such liabilities as attach thereto.

In this connection, it is claimed the order should not run against the Discount Company. Again, it is argued that this company has no connection with the Art Company. The finding, however, not seriously disputed, is to the effect that both corporations had their office in the same room, with merely an aisle separating their desks. The Art Company used 325 West Huron Street as its address, and the Discount Company, the Orleans-Huron Building as its address. Petitioner Kuck was president of both corporations and owned practically all of the stock in each. The flimsy argument is made that the Discount Company was organized for the benefit of the customers whose notes were discounted. It is plainly obvious, however, that it was for the benefit of Kuck and the Art Company. Petitioners came close to correctly appraising the situation in their answer in stating the Discount Company served "in an effort to discourage customers from setting up trumped up charges against a legitimate balance small in amount and far from the home office." At another point, reference is made to this company as a "legal fiction." No doubt it was such, the true purpose of which was to forestall a claim [397] made by a customer who had been a victim of the fraudulent sales plan, by pleading itself an innocent purchaser for value. We are unable to perceive any other reason for its existence. There can be no doubt but that it was a corporation without substance and, that its purpose was to aid and assist in the Art Company's plan of operation. We think it was properly included in the Commission's order.

The finding of the Commission that the plan by which customers were induced to purchase, including the use of the "draw," was fraudulent and deceptive, also has ample support. To our minds, the "draw" was not only an important element in a fraudulent scheme, it was fraudulent in itself. We are presented with the unique, as well as illogical argument that the sole purpose of the "draw" was a means of securing entrance into a home, determining whether the prospect had the appearance of financial responsibility, and if not, leaving without offending. True, as a matter of fact, there was no chance of gain or loss in the scheme, but the prospect was made to believe there was an element of gain, and that was plainly its purpose. The fact that the result of the "draw" made by the prospect was determined and fixed by the salesman and, that the prospect, even if lucky, had gained nothing, does not change the situation. The point is, the customer was deceived in that he was led to believe he was being presented with an opportunity to purchase a painting at a price far less than it otherwise would have been. It is no answer to say that after the customer was thus prepared, the purchase was made by reason of the exhibited sample. We think the testimony and exhibits are thoroughly convincing that the methods employed were fraudulent and deceptive and, that all who participated in the plan from Kuck, as president of the two corporations, down to and including the person who made delivery of the pictures, was a party thereto, and they all plainly come within the inhibition of the Federal Trade Act.

There likewise is no merit in the contention that the methods employed were not injurious to competitors or that the proceeding was not in the public's interest. The Commission properly found to the contrary. A method employed, based upon fraud and deception, whereby many persons are induced to purchase a product, is contrary to public policy and in itself is an injury, not only to actual competitors, but potential as well (Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, 493, 494; Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643, 651, 652; National Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 104 F. (2d) 999, 1006). The prevention of such a method is in the public interest (Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., 288 U. S. 212, 217).

It is also immaterial that competitors employ the same or similar methods. If such be the case, it would afford the basis for an argument that such competitors should be dealt with likewise, not that petitioners should escape.

The petition to set aside the order of the Commission is denied and a decree will be entered affirming the same.

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. Feb. 1, 1940.)

TEMPORARY INJUNCTIONS OR ORDERS—APPEALS—WHERE MATTER DISCRETIONARY IN COURT BELOW—REVERSAL—DISCRETION'S ABUSE AS PREREQUISITE.

Reversal of a temporary injunction or order involving discretion necessitates a clear showing of abuse of discretion.

TEMPORARY INJUNCTIONS OR ORDERS—APPEALS—WHERE CONTROVERSY FACTUAL AND DISPUTED IN COURT BELOW.

RESTRAINING AND INJUNCTIVE ORDERS—FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT, SECTION 13—DISTRICT COURT JURISDICTION—PENDENCY OF PROCEEDING BEFORE COMMISSION—WHETHER PREREQUISITE.

District Court's jurisdiction to enjoin the dissemination of false advertisements under statute is not dependent upon pendency of proceeding before Federal Trade Commission. Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, sec. 13 (a) (2), as added in 1938, 15 U. S. C. A., secs. 53 (a) (2).

RESTRAINING AND INJUNCTIVE ORDERS—FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT, SECTION 13—SCOPE—AS PREVENTIVE OF OFFENDER'S SUCCESSFUL REAPING OF FRUITS OF WRONGDOING IN ADVANCE OF EFFECTIVE PREVENTIVE COMMISSION ACTION OTHERWISE.

Statute relating to temporary injunction restraining dissemination of false advertisements pending issuance of complaint by Federal Trade Commission was written to prevent ineffectuality of proceeding before Commission due to offender's collecting the spoils incident to improper practices and liquidating or dissolving before the Commission can put a stop to offender's unfair practices.

RESTRAINING AND INJUNCTIVE ORDERS—FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT, SECTION 13—SCOPE—RESTRAINING ACTION "PENDING THE ISSUANCE OF A COMPLAINT"—AS PERTAINING TO INTERIM FOLLOWING UNLAWFUL ADVERTISEMENT AND IN ADVANCE OF COMMISSION ACTION.

In statute respecting temporary injunction restraining dissemination of false advertisements, expression "pending the issuance of a complaint" means that in the interim between "the causing of the dissemination of an advertisement" in violation of statute and the action of the [517] Federal Trade Commission, the latter may institute suit in district court to enjoin dissemination of such advertisements.

RESTRAINING AND INJUNCTIVE ORDERS—FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT, SECTION 13—SUPERSEDEAS APPLICATIONS—DEFENDANTS' IRREPARABLE DAMAGE AS AGAINST DECEPTION AND MULCTING OF PUBLIC—PUZZLE SELLING SCHEMES—WHERE PURCHASE INFERIOR PRODUCT AND IN QUANTITY NOT RELATED ORDINARY NEED, REQUIRED, AND LARGE SUMS OTHERWISE EXTRACTED FROM PROSPECTS—COSMETICS.

Application for supersedeas pending appeal from order granting preliminary injunction restraining defendant from disseminating alleged false advertisements would be denied, though damages to defendant would be irreparable where, if injunction were lifted until appeal could be heard, defendants would have extracted several million dollars from prospective buyers on the offer of a chance to win prizes, although ostensibly the transaction dealt with sale of cosmetics, where amounts of sales of cosmetics would not be related to an ordinary person's needs and would not be affected by absence of quality of the cosmetics.

COURT OF EQUITY—DUTIES—IN GENERAL—ILLEGITIMATE PROFITS, AND BUSINESSES UNFAIRLY CONDUCTED.

A court of equity has no duty to protect illegitimate profits or to advance business which is conducted by unfair business methods.

On motion for supersedeas pending appeal from District Court for the Northern Division of Illinois, Eastern Division, and in action by Commission against Thomsen-King Company, Inc., and others to restrain defendants from disseminating alleged false advertisements, and in which preliminary injunction was granted, supersedeas pending appeal from order granting such preliminary injunction denied.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Curtis Shears, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for Commission.

Mr. Robert J. Folonie, Mr. Lewis F. Mason, and Mr. John A. Nash, all of Chicago, Ill., for defendants.

Before EVANS, MAJOR, and KERNER, Circuit Judges.

EVANS, Circuit Judge:

This is an emergency motion by defendants, for supersedeas, pending appeal from an order of the district court granting a preliminary injunction restraining defendants from disseminating false advertisements therein set forth.

The Federal Trade Commission instituted the suit pursuant to the statute which provides (title 15, U. S. C. A., sec. 53):

“(a) Whenever the Commission has reason to believe—

“(1) that any person, partnership, or corporation is engaged in, or about to engage in, the dissemination or the causing of the dissemination of any advertisement in violation of section 52 of this title, and

“(2) that the enjoining thereof pending the issuance of a complaint by the Commission under section 45 of this title, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by the court on review * * * the Commission * * * may bring suit in a district court * * * to enjoin * * * the dissemination of such advertisement.”

The complaint filed by the Federal Trade Commission (January 8, 1940) is a lengthy one wherein it alleges that an injunction is necessary to prevent false advertising, the sale of cosmetics through a puzzle promotional scheme, which contemplated the purchase by the contestants of a quantity of cosmetics for which they would have no use, and which could not be resold without loss, and which were of inferior quality. The company's plan, so it is alleged, was initiated by a “puzzle” for which a prize of $50 would be paid for a successful solution. On the contestant's sending in his solution, he was notified that his entry passed a preliminary check-up and was before the final judges, and that if three dollars were sent the participant would receive five dollars' worth of cosmetics, and if a “promptness prize blank” were returned within a designated time, there would be a chance to win a $1,250 cash prize and a Buick car, or a total cash prize of $2,750.

The Commission charges that defendant corporation is but a reincarnation of a former corporation which promoted the identical sort of sales scheme, and which corporation dissolved in a short time, to be succeeded by another corporation, all of its practices being for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of the Federal laws, and more particularly of evading the reach of the arm of the Federal Trade Commission.

[518] The complaint was supported by affidavits of its attorney, in re activities of predecessor companies, and of persons deceived by former companies.

Notice of application for the temporary injunction was served upon the appellants who filed their appearances 3 days later. On the same day the district court issued its order for preliminary injunction, from which an appeal is here taken, and pending the hearing and determination of which, the instant motion for super-seedeas is directed. The order was predicated upon findings of fact: (a) Dissemination of false advertisements for the purpose of inducing the purchase of cosmetics; (b) such advertisements, unless stopped, will cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public.

Appellants challenge the soundness of the order on the ground that the alleged false advertisements are not stated to be in regard to the commodities sold, but as to extraneous matters; that the supporting affidavits do not concern the instant corporate defendant; there is no showing that any member of the public had been misled; the injunction will work irreparable injury to the defendants; the section of the act permitting the issuance of this injunction is unconstitutional because defendants are deprived of due process having no hearing; no showing of injury to the public health; the district court erred in failing to give the defendants an opportunity to answer.

Defendants are not in a position to assert the full strength of their fact protestations. In other words, they are attacking an order which is supported by a sworn complaint and sustaining affidavits, without anything on their side to dispute the facts therein set forth. Their fact assertions are not supported by pleading or affidavit.

Reversal of a temporary injunctive order involving discretion necessitates a clear abuse showing.<sup>2</sup>

A temporary injunctive order will ordinarily be affirmed if the controversy is factual and disputed.

<sup>2</sup> Alabama v. United States, 279 U. S. 229; Myers v. Bethlehem Corp., 303 U. S. 41, 52; Gibbs v. Buck, 307 U. S. 60, 76; Independent Cheese Co. v. Kraft Phenix Cheese Corp., 7 Cir., 56 F. (2d) 575.

Defendants contend that their application for a supersedeas presents a question quite different from that raised on an appeal from a temporary injunctive order. This may be so in the general run of appeals, but in the instant case we have a peculiar situation. The lifting of the injunction, if we accept the plaintiff's statement of facts as true, will effectually defeat the purpose of the suit. Theoretically the litigation may be continued, but the value of the decision will be purely academic.

We have then a factual situation where allegations are made on one side upon which the court made its finding with no factual dispute by the defendants. Defendants assert they were not permitted to offer any defense. They assert the district court "shut them off" "without a hearing."

This charge is unsupported by the record. There is nothing to show that they asked for more time within which to file an answer or to submit affidavits. Moreover, they could have applied for a modification of the order and presented their evidence together with their verified answer. They have seen fit to present their request for a supersedeas to this court, upon a record which leaves the plaintiff's statement of facts undisputed.

Defendants argue, however, that accepting these facts the plaintiff still was not entitled to the relief granted, for the reason that the district judge's jurisdiction in the matter is statutory and restricted to matters specifically covered by the statute. In other words, accepting the plaintiff's version of the facts, defendants challenge the district court's jurisdiction to issue an injunction before the Federal Trade Commission had issued its complaint against defendants, asserting dissemination of false advertisements.

We are unable to accept defendants' view that the court's jurisdiction under section 53 (a) (2) is dependent upon the pendency of proceedings before the Federal Trade Commission. Subsection (2) was written for a purpose which was to prevent the ineffectuality of proceedings before the Commission due to the offender's collecting the spoils incident to improper practices and liquidating or dissolving before the Commission can put a stop to its unfair practices.

[519] As we construe the expression "pending the issuance of a complaint" in subsection (2), it means that in the interim between "the causing of the dissemination of an advertisement" in violation of section 52 of title 15, U. S. C. A., and the action of the Commission, the latter may institute suit in the district court to enjoin the dissemination of such advertisement. The effectiveness of the Commission's action might be defeated unless this authority to invoke the district court's jurisdiction were given. It is a necessary part of the plan to prevent fraud and fraudulent commerce through fraudulent advertisements.

The other objections to the decree advanced by appellants to justify the issuance of a supersedeas until the appeal could be heard are all predicated upon factual bases. For example, it is stated that the advertisements complained of are not in regard to the sale of cosmetics but to the printing of a puzzle and of prize offerings for its solution, which prize offering gave the recipient the opportunity of a chance of securing an automobile.

Plaintiff's complaint and affidavits however, show these advertisements were but a part of a plan to enlist the interest of the public in the subsequent advertisements which were to deal with a contest where the winners were to be given prizes and these prizes were to be won by holders of certificates showing purchases of cosmetics. The first advertisement was merely to secure the names of prospective customers, somewhat derisively described in the affidavit as a "sucker list." The complaint alleges that defendants' efforts were successful, and a list of 330,000 was promptly obtained, to be increased when the final returns were "all in."

We are satisfied that none of the other objections advanced by appellants justifies the granting of the supersedeas. Only one will be given specific, though brief attention.

Appellants claim that their damages will be irreparable. This statement is justified by the disclosed facts. Plaintiff, on the other hand, asserts that if the injunction be lifted, the damage to the public will also be irreparable. Its statement is likewise fairly supported by the facts. In other words, the injunction will interrupt defendants' business for the period of its continuance. On the other hand, if the injunction be lifted until the appeal can be heard on its merits, the defendants will have extracted several millions of dollars from the more than 330,000 prospective buyers. The money will be obtained on the offer of a chance to win prizes although ostensibly the transaction deals with the sale of cosmetics. The amounts of the sales of cosmetics are not related to an ordinary person's needs, and are not affected by the absence of quality of the cosmetics.

Under the circumstances, we are to balance the gains and losses, and as we record the score, continue or lift the injunction in question. The vote is not even close. Our conclusion is in favor of continuing the injunction and denying the motion for supersedeas. In other words, defendants' losses through the interference (or destruction) of their business is not of such a character as to invite preventive orders by a court of equity who has no duty, irrespective of the Federal Trade Act, to protect illegitimate profits or advance business which is conducted by unfair business methods.

The application for a supersedeas is denied.

BUNTE BROTHERS, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE

No. 6792

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. February 20, 1940.)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—VALIDITY, IN GENERAL—PREREQUISITES—METHODS' UNFAIRNESS, INTERSTATE COMMERCE, AND PUBLIC INTEREST.

A cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, to be valid, must be supported by evidence which establishes that the methods used are unfair, that the methods are used in interstate commerce, and that the proceeding by the commission to prevent use of the methods is in the interest of the public. (Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5 (a), as amended, 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45 (a)).

PUBLIC INTEREST—LOTTERY MERCHANDISING—LOCAL MANUFACTURER'S PRACTICE AS HAMPERING EXTRASTATE SELLERS IN SELLING INTO—CANDY "BREAK AND TAKE" SELLING.

Findings, sustained by evidence, that 48 candy manufacturers located in 13 different States, and shipping in excess of $1,440,000 worth of "straight" candy from their factories to the State of Illinois annually, were handicapped in attempting to compete with local manufacturer which sold candy in "break and take" assortments, established that proceeding by Federal Trade Commission to prevent use of such selling was in the "public interest," as respects validity of cease and desist order.

PUBLIC INTEREST—UNFAIR METHODS PROCEEDING UNDER SECTION 5—COMPETITION, EXISTING AND POTENTIAL—WHERE THREATENED.

A proceeding by the Federal Trade Commission to prevent the use of unfair methods is in the "public interest" if the unfair methods threaten the existence of potential as well as existing competition, as respects validity of cease and desist order.

METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—COMMISSION LIMITATIONS—INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The only practices with which the Federal Trade Commission may concern itself are transactions in interstate commerce (Federal Trade Commission Act, secs. 4, 5 (a), as amended, 15 U. S. C. A., secs. 44, 45 (a)).

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—SCOPE, IN GENERAL—AS SUPPLEMENTING SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT IN PROHIBITION OF PRACTICES UNFAIR AND DESTRUCTIVE OF COMPETITION IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The purpose of the Federal Trade Commission Act is to supplement the Sherman Anti-Trust Act and to prohibit practices which are unfair and destructive of competition in interstate commerce (Sherman Anti-Trust Act, 15 U. S. C. A., secs. 1-7, 15 note).

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—INTRASTATE SELLING—LOTTERY MERCHANDISING—CANDY—WHERE OTHER STATES' CANDY MAKERS' COMMERCE INTO OFFENDER'S, THEREBY AFFECTED.

An order of the Federal Trade Commission commanding an Illinois candy manufacturer engaged in distributing its products in the State of Illinois to cease and desist from certain unfair practices in the sale and distribution of its candy in the State of Illinois is invalid because applying to practices not used "in interstate commerce," though the unfair methods affect the commerce which candy makers of other States carry on with retailers in Illinois.

On petition for review of an order of Commission, directing petitioner to cease and desist from certain unfair trade practices, order vacated and set aside.

Mr. Samuel G. Clawson, of Chicago, Ill., for petitioner.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, and Mr. P. C. Kolinski and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorneys, all of Washington, D. C., for Commission.

Before EVANS, TREANOR, and KERNER, Circuit Judges.

EVANS, Circuit Judge:

Petitioner seeks to set aside an order of the Federal Trade Commission directing it to cease and desist from certain unfair trade practices in the sale of its candy.

The order is based upon findings made by the Commission after hearings upon a formal complaint. The complaint charged, and the Commission found, that petitioner [413] is an Illinois corporation, with its principal place of business in Chicago, Ill.,<sup>1</sup> and that for several years past it has been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of candies to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retailers, located throughout the United States, but particularly in the State of Illinois.

The Commission found that petitioner's sales of candies involved the use of chance (commonly known as "break and take") in the sale and distribution to the ultimate consumers thereof. Typical of these assortments is one composed of a number of wrapped caramels, uniform in size, shape, and quality, a number of larger pieces of candy, and a box of candy. The majority of caramels in the assortment have the same color center, but a few are of a different color. The purchaser buys a caramel and breaks it open. If its center is of the same color as the majority of the caramels, he receives nothing extra, but if it is of a different color, he is given, without additional charge, one of the larger pieces of candy in the assortment. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in each assortment is entitled to receive, without additional charge, the box of candy in the assortment. This assortment was extensively sold in Illinois during the summer months of 1935, and was known as the "Summer Bar Assortment."

It was also found that petitioner manufactures and distributes in Illinois another assortment known as the "Ta-Ka Flyer Bar Assortment." The principle of this assortment is the same as that described above. There are 160 pieces of candy in all, 20 of which have differently colored centers. The pieces are sold to the consumer at a price of 1 cent each, whereupon they are broken open to ascertain the color of the center. Those who have selected a piece with a differently colored center receive, as a reward, a larger piece of candy, gratis.

Petitioner distributed its assortments to 95 percent of the candy jobbers in Illinois. During the year 1936, approximately 23 percent of its total candy business, or $72,300 worth, consisted of the "break and take" variety. All candies are sold through the same type of merchandising channels. Jobbers who handle chance assortments also handle "straight" goods. Many retail dealers prefer to buy their candy from one jobber because of the convenience in dealing with a single salesman, handling only one order blank, and paying but one bill. The retail dealers who desire chance assortments are, therefore, prone to buy all of their candy from a jobber who sells chance assortments.

The Commission also found that the effect of the practice of petitioner substantially lessened competition to the detriment of its competitors, situated in other States, who also sold candy in the State of Illinois.

Among other matters the Commission found:

"Some out-of-state manufacturers experienced a marked decrease in their sales of straight goods in Illinois * * * when the sale of chance assortments, particularly of the break and take variety, was active * * *. A representative of a New York manufacturer suffered a marked decline in his sales of straight candies in the Illinois market in May and June of 1935 over sales of straight candies in the same market in May and June of 1934. * * * The sales of a Pennsylvania manufacturer of a competing confection, chewing gum, in Illinois in September and October of 1935, were but 74 percent and 62 percent, respectively, of his sales in the same market during the same months in 1934. * * * The presence in the Illinois market of 40,000 of respondent's (petitioner herein) break and take chance assortments during the year 1935 was a strong factor contributing to the sales declines these interstate competitors of respondent suffered. * * * A competitor of respondent, located in the state of Wisconsin, who had been ordered, by this commission to cease and desist from the unfair practices which respondent was pursuing, suffered an 80 percent reduction of sales in Illinois from the $60,000 business of the preceding year. Another Wisconsin competitor who had a $100,000 yearly business was adversely affected 20 percent."

Upon these findings, the Commission entered its cease and desist order.

Almost identical practices have been condemned in Federal Trade Commission v. R. F. Keppel & Bro., 291 U. S. 304, as unfair methods of competition within the meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. [414] Following this decision, we, in Bunte Bros. v. Federal Trade Commission, 104 F. (2d) 996, upheld the Commission's order to desist from practices quite similar.

We are on secure and undisputed ground, when we assume that an order of the Commission to be valid must be supported by evidence which establishes: (1) The methods used are unfair; (2) The methods of competition condemned must be used in interstate commerce; (3) The proceeding by the Commission to prevent the use of the methods must be in the interest of the public (Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., 238 U. S. 212, 216).

That the practice complained of herein is unfair, is settled by the decisions. (See Bunte Bros. v. Federal Trade Commission, supra, and Federal Trade Commission v. Keppel & Bro., supra.)

From the findings of the Commission sustained by the evidence, it is equally clear that the instant proceeding is in the public interest. A great percentage of the consuming public buys candy. The Commission found that 48 candy manufacturers located in 13 different States, and shipping in excess of $1,440,000 worth of "straight" candy from their factories to the State of Illinois annually, were handicapped in attempting to compete with petitioner within the State.<sup>2</sup> It is sufficiently within the public interest, moreover, if the unfair method threatens the existence of potential, as well as existing, competition (Federal Trade Commission v. Klesner, 280 U. S. 19, 28. See also Federal Trade Commission v. Keppel & Bro., supra.)

The only debatable question in the case is restricted to the asserted noninterstate character of the business affected by the order. Petitioner denies that its condemned business was or is interstate.

The order was directed against the methods used by petitioner in the State of Illinois. It reads:

"It is ordered that the respondent, Bunte Bros., Inc., * * * in the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy, in the State of Illinois, do cease and desist from: * * *"

Section 44, Title 15, U. S. C. A., provides:

"'Commerce' means commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, * * *"

Section 45 (a) provides:

"Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful.

"The Commission is hereby empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations, * * * from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce."

Our question may be stated thus: Is an order directed to an Illinois candy manufacturer engaged in distributing its product in the State of Illinois, valid, which commands it to cease and desist from certain unfair practices in the sale and distribution of its candy in the State of Illinois?

Petitioner answers in the negative and cites:

Schechter Corp. v. U. S., 295 U. S. 495; Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Company, et al., 291 U. S. 67; Federal Trade Commission v. Maisel Trading Post, Inc., 77 F. (2d) 246; Minnesota Rate Cases, 230 U. S. 352; Winslow v. Federal Trade Commission, 277 Fed. 206; Utah-Idaho Sugar Co. v. F. T. C., 22 Fed. 122; California Rice

<sup>2</sup>The Commission stated that there were outstanding against 127 competitors of petitioner, orders requiring them to cease and desist from the use of such methods in connection with their sales in interstate commerce.

Industry v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 716; Canfield Oil Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 274 Fed. 571; Ward Baking Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 264 Fed. 330; Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 264 U. S. 298; Federal Trade Commission v. Claire Furnace Co., 285 Fed. 936 (reversed on another ground); Leader v. Apex Hosiery Co., 3 Cir., 108 F. (2d) 71, November, 1939; United Leather Workers International Union v. Herkert Co., 265 U. S. 457.

Its chief reliance seems to be the Schechter case.

[415] The respondent contends that "unfair methods of competition in commerce" extend not only to commerce between the States but to intrastate commerce where the unfair practices in the latter field affect the interstate commerce of the same industry. In other words, unfair methods adopted by one who makes and sells his candy in Illinois are subject to the act if such maker indulges in unfair trade methods and his unfair trade methods affect, and interfere with, interstate commerce in candy. In the instant case the respondent found that petitioner's unfair methods of trade did interfere with and affect the commerce which candy makers of Wisconsin and New York carried on with the retailers in Illinois. As supporting its view it cites:

Loewe v. Lamlor, 208 U. S. 274; National Labor Relations Board v. Fainblatt, 306 U. S. 601; Federal Trade Commission v. Wallace, 75 F. (2d) 733; Currin v. Wallace, 306 U. (2d) 436, decided Nov. 29, 1939.

Numerous arguments press for consideration in the disposition of this close and troublesome question.

On the one side the fear is expressed that the more recent decisions of the courts, most noticeable of which are National Labor Relations

Board v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, supra, and Electric Bond & Share Co. v. Securities & Exchange Commission, 303 U. S. 419, have obliterated the heretofore well-defined and well-recognized distinctions between State and Federal Government activities and have perfected a well-nigh completely centralized government. The commonly entertained idea that it is judicial decisions which have led to the disappearance of the local governments as a controlling force in business is erroneous. The enlargement of Federal Government activity is traceable directly to the ever-increasing reach of commerce which has refused to remain static or local. It is this enormous growth in the field of commercial activities which has emphasized the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution and enlarged the scope of its application. This growth of commerce in turn has been the inevitable result of the inventive traits and qualities of our people, whose discoveries have improved old, and created new, instruments of transportation, so that now nearly all commerce is interstate.

Equally significant is the necessity, so apparent in some phases of commerce, for regulation by Congress of intrastate business because its control is essential or appropriate to the regulation of a similar phase of the same commerce but interstate in character. The close, intimate, essential, and inseparable relation of intrastate commerce to interstate commerce, in some fields, makes it necessary to include both, if the legislation is to be effective.

This fear of over-centralization, if real and well grounded, may be overcome either [416] through nonaction by Congress or by Federal legislation which discriminately restricts its scope so that our dual system of government is preserved. It is not within the field of judicial action.

Equally pressing has been the argument that when commerce, both state and interstate, is conducted by those who will not abide by "the rules of the game," and whose business ethics are such that they resort to unfair methods of trade in order to get an undue advantage of a competitor and to do so, hide behind the protection of state non-action and defy the Federal Government to stop a business thus builded on unfair methods, courts should sustain the efforts of the Federal Trade Commission to stop such unfair practices even though the business be wholly intrastate. The argument is strongly advanced to invoke the Federal commerce clause on the theory that it is both essential and appropriate to regulate the intrastate commerce in such cases because of its close relation to the interstate commerce.

Here, too, the fault lies not with judicial decisions, but is due to two other influences:

First. The unethical practices of so-called business men who believe all is legitimate and proper which is not condemned by statute. Not finding a prohibition "written in their bond," they proceed to take advantage of competitors who have a higher regard for the decencies of competitive efforts.

Petitioner's practices have been condemned by court decisions as unfair, unethical, and contrary to the laws which govern interstate commerce. Its persistence in continuing practices thus condemned may find legalistic but no moral support in this decision. An unfair business practice is still unethical, even though not included within the reach of a statute which prohibits it in interstate commerce. Petitioner limits its field of unethical practices to intrastate commerce where the Federal Government's statute does not apply. Its avoidance of legal liability in no way exculpates it from the charge of foul business practices.

Second. The absence of state legislation dealing with intrastate business, which condemns and prohibits the same unfair practices condemned by the Federal Trade Act.

These arguments for and against our applying the Federal Trade Commission Act to the case before us cannot, however, be taken too seriously. The only practices with which the Commission may concern itself are transactions "in interstate commerce." The Commission's authority is to be found in the act which created it, as amended. The purpose of the act was to supplement the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (Federal Trade Commission v. Beechnut Packing Co., 257 U. S. 441, 453) and to prohibit practices which were unfair and destructive of competition "in interstate commerce." On this point there is no doubt. Both the intent and the language of the act are clear. But when it comes to the field of competition covered by the act it is less clear and "plain." The words, the meaning of which we are to construe, are definitely "in commerce" not "affecting interstate commerce."

We have been favored with briefs which cite, analyze, distinguish, criticize, or approve nearly all the cases which have been before the courts, involving this act, as well as many cases which have dealt extensively with the subject of interstate commerce. In view of the exhaustive discussions appearing in the opinions in these cases, further discussion is hardly appropriate. We must assume they state the law as it exists today and that legislation defining "commerce," "in commerce," and "affecting interstate commerce" must be applied in the light of said decisions.

Our conclusion (which is not free from doubt) is that the phase of petitioner's business wherein its practices are unfair is wholly intrastate. It is the phase of petitioner's business which is conducted wholly in Illinois, by an Illinois corporation, which makes and sells its product in Illinois. It is not within the purview of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. If an extension of the Federal Trade Commission's jurisdiction be advisable so as to include practices affecting interstate commerce, it is for Congress, not the court to make the change.

The petitioner is entitled to the relief sought and to an order vacating and setting aside the order of the Federal Trade Commission.

its true character. The main ground of the petition is that such a modification involves a complete contradiction which makes the elimination of the trade name itself necessary under the rule set forth in Heusner & Son v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 596 and El Moro Cigar Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 107 F. (2d) 429. But the difference between those cases and this one is that in them the offending word "Havana" was falsely descriptive of the product sold. Here the deception is only as to the character of the seller. We purposely left the needed modification indefinite before in order that the parties might have an opportunity to work that out unhampered by our decision. Without meaning to curtail their freedom of action in that respect now, we venture the suggestion that the modification might consist of a suitable statement, to accompany the use of the trade name in each instance, to the effect that Educators Association is only a trade name under which books published by Educators Association, Inc., are distributed for profit.

UNITED CORPORATION ET AL. v. FEDERAL TRADE

No. 4547

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit. Mar. 11, 1940)

JURISDICTION—OTHER STATUTES—PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT—WHERE SELLER CANNED MEAT PRODUCTS STOCK OWNER IN TWO CORPORATE LICENSED PACKERS, PRODUCTS OF WHICH SOLD BY IT.

A corporation engaged in marketing of canned meat products which were packed for the corporation by two licensed corporate packers, upon the acquisition of 20 percent of capital stock of such corporate packers, became a "packer" whose business was subject to control of Secretary of Agriculture under Packers and Stockyards Act. Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921, sec. 201, 7 U. S. C. A. sec. 191.

JURISDICTION—OTHER STATUTES—PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT AND MEAT INSPECTION ACT—BRANDING AND LABELING—MEAT FOOD PRODUCTS AND UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES IN SALE THEREOF.

The provisions of Packers and Stockyards Act vesting in Secretary of Agriculture jurisdiction to deal with violations and to require a packer to cease and desist therefrom together with provisions of Meat Inspection Act vest Secretary of Agriculture with plenary power to regulate branding and labeling of meat food products and to forbid unfair trade practices in sale thereof. Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921, secs. 202, 203, 7 U. S. C. A. secs. 192, 193; Meat Inspection Act, 21 U. S. C. A. sec. 75.

JURISDICTION—OTHER STATUTES—AT OR PRECEDING COMPLAINT—WHETHER DIVESTED BY SUBSEQUENT CHANGE—REGULATORY AND NONPUNITIVE POWER OF COMMISSION AS DETERMINING.

The power of Federal Trade Commission is purely regulatory and not punitive, and hence jurisdiction must exist at time of entry of its order, and jurisdiction at time of commission of acts objected to as unfair trade practices or at time of filing of complaint with regard thereto is not sufficient, since order to be entered does not relate to past practices or determine rights as of time of filing of complaint as in an action at law, but commands or forbids action in the future. Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, as amended by Act March 21, 1938, 52 Stat. 111; 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45.

JURISDICTION—OTHER STATUTES—PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT AND MEAT INSPECTION ACT—WHERE SELLER CANNED MEAT PRODUCTS THEREAFTER BY ACQUIRING STOCK IN CORPORATE PACKERS, "PACKER" WITHIN PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT.

When a corporation engaged in marketing of canned meat products, by acquiring stock in corporate packers, became a "packer" within Packers and Stockyards Act and hence subject to jurisdiction of Secretary of Agriculture, the Federal Trade Commission had no further power of regulation over corporation notwithstanding commission might have been considering regulation under a complaint filed before corporation became a packer. Meat Inspection Act, 21 U. S. C. A. sec. 75; Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921, secs. 201-203, 406 (b), 7 U. S. C. A. secs. 191-193, 227; Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, as amended by Act March 21, 1938, 52 Stat. 111, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—MISBRANDING OR MISLABELING—SOURCE OR ORIGIN—PACKER BUSINESS—JURISDICTION.

The practice of using brands in such way as to create a false impression as to origin of merchandise cannot be defended, but power to regulate business of packers rests with Secretary of Agriculture and not with Trade Commission or with the courts.

Before PARKER, SOPER, and DOBIE, Circuit Judges.

PARKER, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition to review and set aside an order of the Federal Trade Commission requiring petitioner, United Corporation, to [474] cease and desist from representing orally or by other means that the corned beef hash and deviled ham which it sells are made from products originating in Virginia, from using the trade name "Virginia Products Company," from using labels containing the word "Virginia," and from invoicing its sales from Richmond or other place within the State of Virginia. As we are of opinion that the Commission was without jurisdiction to enter the order, we shall confine our discussion to that phase of the case.

Petitioner is a Virginia corporation engaged in the marketing of canned meat products including corned beef hash and deviled ham, which are packed for it by two licensed packers, Montell, Inc. of Cambridge, Md., and Emmart Food Products Co. of Chicago, Ill. The meats used in these products, except in the case of the deviled ham packed by Montell, Inc., are not obtained from cattle or hogs grown in Virginia; but the labels containing the word "Virginia" have been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture under the Meat Inspection Act, 21 U. S. C. A. 75. Petitioner owns 20 percent of the capital stock of Montell, Inc., and of Emmart Food Products Co., and owned same at the time of the entry of the order by the Commission. Prior to the entry of the order, it had moved for the dismissal of the proceedings on the ground that it was a "packer" within the meaning of the Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921, 7 U. S. C. A. 191, and hence was not within the jurisdiction of the Commission.

The Commission, while virtually conceding that petitioner at the time of the entry of its order came within the definition of a packer as contained in the Packers and Stockyards Act, contends that it had jurisdiction because petitioner had not acquired that status at the time of the filing of the petition before it. The facts as to this are that the petition was filed March 31, 1937. Petitioner acquired 20 percent of the stock of Montell, Inc., April 12, 1937, and 20 percent of the stock of Emmart Food Products Co. May 1, 1937. The order was not entered until August 2, 1939. As early as 1936 petitioner had entered into a contract entitling it to a one-fifth interest in the business of Montell, which was then operating as a partnership.

There can be no question but that upon the acquisition of the stock of Montell, Inc., and the Emmart Food Products Co., petitioner became a packer whose business was subject to the control of the Secretary of Agriculture under the Packers and Stockyards Act. It was engaged in the marketing of meat food products and it owned and controlled an interest in two corporations engaged in the business of "Manufacturing or preparing meats or meat food products for sale or shipment in commerce." 7 U. S. C. A. 191.

And we think it equally clear that, as a packer subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture under the Packers and Stockyards Act, petitioner was excepted from the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission. Section 406 (b) of that Act, 42 Stat. 169, 7 U. S. C. A. 227, provides: "(b) On and after the enactment of this act, and so long as it remains in effect, the Federal Trade Commission shall have no power or jurisdiction so far as relating to any matter which by this act is made subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary, except in cases in which, before the enactment of this act, complaint has been served under section 5 of the act entitled 'An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,' approved September 26, 1914, * * * and except when the Secretary of Agriculture, in the exercise of his duties hereunder, shall request of the said Federal Trade Commission that it make investigations and report in any case."

The exceptions to the general clause excluding jurisdiction by the Trade Commission manifestly do not preserve the jurisdiction of the Commission in this case, for the reason that the complaint herein had not been served at the time of the passage of the act, which was August 15, 1921, and no investigation and report has been requested of the Commission by the Secretary of Agriculture. And, on the other hand, there can be no question but that the general clause excluding jurisdiction by the Commission applies to unfair practices in the marketing of meat food products by a packer, since this was a matter made subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture by sections 202 and 203 of the act, 42 Stat. 161, 7 U. S. C. A. secs. 192 and 193. Section 202 provides that it shall be unlawful for any packer to engage in or use any "unfair, unjustly discriminatory, or deceptive practice or device in commerce." And section 203 vests [475] in the Secretary of Agriculture jurisdiction to deal with violations of section 202 and to require a packer to cease and desist therefrom.

Any doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion is removed if consideration be given to section 5 of the Trade Commission Act, as amended by the act of March 21, 1938, 52 Stat. 111, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45. That section as so amended provides:

"Sec. 5. (a) Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful.

"The Commission is hereby empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations, except banks, common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, and persons, partnerships, or corporations subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, except as provided in section 406 (b) of said act, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce." [Italics supplied.]

Section 203 of the Packers and Stockyards Act together with the provisions of the Meat Inspection Act of March 4, 1907, 34 Stat. 1262, 21 U. S. C. A. 75, undoubtedly vest the Secretary of Agriculture with plenary power to regulate the branding and labeling of meat food products and to forbid unfair trade practices in the sale thereof. The Secretary has promulgated elaborate regulations with respect to the branding and labeling of such products, in which the use of deceptive labels is forbidden and the use of geographical names regulated. Regulations of 1922, section 7, paragraphs 1 and 2 (b), are as follows:

"Section 7. Paragraph 1. No meat or product, and no container thereof, shall be labeled with any false or deceptive name; but established trade names which are usual to such articles and are not false or deceptive and which have been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture may be used.

"Paragraph 2. No statement, word, picture, design, or device which conveys any false impression or gives any false indication of origin or quality shall appear on any label. For example:

* * * * *

"(b) Names of countries, States, and Territories, and such other geographical names as the department may approve, may be used on labels, only when followed by the word 'style', 'type', 'cut', or 'brand', in the same size and style of lettering as the geographical name, unless the products for which the labels are intended are prepared in the localities named: * * *"

The Supreme Court has sustained this exercise of power on the part of the Secretary of Agriculture and has held that exclusive power has been delegated to him by Congress with respect thereto. Brougham v. Blanton Mfg. Co., 249 U. S. 495. The Court said in that case:

"The test of the product is the meat inspection laws, not the trademark laws, and therefore we are concerned with the action of the Department of Agriculture and not with that of the Interior Department. And so intimately is the case concerned with the action of the Department of Agriculture that the basic and dominant contention of the Government is that to the Department is committed the power of determining the fact of the influence of the name and label of the company. In other words, the power of determining whether a trade name is 'false or deceptive' given by the law to the Secretary of Agriculture is, when exercised, conclusive of the falsity or deception of the name. (Bates & Guild Co. v. Payne, 194 U. S. 106, and cases cited; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659), and the power necessarily is a continuing one. The contention and the cited cases have been approved very lately in Houston v. St. Louis Independent Packing Co., ante, 249 U. S. 479, in which it is declared that the decision of the department, unless arbitrary, is conclusive."

It was doubtless because plenary power over the unfair trade practices of packers had been vested in the Secretary of Agriculture by the Packers and Stockyards Act and the Meat Inspection Act, that Congress withheld jurisdiction over packers from the Federal Trade Commission. Only confusion could result from an overlapping jurisdiction, as this case well illustrates.

And since the power of the Federal Trade Commission is purely regulatory and not punitive, it is clear that jurisdiction must exist at the time of the entry of its order. Jurisdiction at the time of the commission of acts objected to as unfair trade practices or at the time of the filing of the complaint with regard thereto is not sufficient; for the order to be entered does not relate to past practices or determine rights [476] as of the time of the filing of the complaint, as in an action at law, but commands or forbids action in the future. The Commission cites a number of cases holding that the jurisdiction of a court attaches upon the filing of the complaint and that subsequent changes cannot confer or divest jurisdiction; but these cases, we think, have no bearing upon the question here involved and furnish no analogy to be applied in the case of a regulatory commission whose orders operate in futuro. An analogy is furnished, however, by the rule prevailing in equity to the effect that the court, in making its decree, is governed by the situation existing at the time the decree is entered, and not by that which existed at the inception of the litigation. 10 R. C. L. 559; 21 C. J. 664; Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. Price, 4 Cir. 106 F. (2d) 411, 419; Randel v. Brown, 2 How. 406. And relief will not be afforded in equity when during the pendency of the suit, even on appeal, an event occurs making it impossible to grant effective relief. Tennessee v. Condon 189 U. S. 64; Mills v. Green 159 U. S. 651. When petitioner here, by acquiring stock in Montell, Inc., and Emmart Food Products Co., became a packer within the meaning of the Packers and Stockyards Act and subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Trade Commission had no further power of regulation over it; and the fact that the Commission may have been considering regulation under a complaint theretofore filed is immaterial.

A case directly in point is Chamber of Commerce v. Federal Trade Commission, 8 Cir. 13 F. (2d) 673, 685. It appeared in that case that, while a proceeding against the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce was pending before the Trade Commission, Congress passed the Grain Futures Act regulating a number of matters involved in the proceeding. In holding that as to these matters the Commission ceased to have jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the proceeding had been filed before the passage of the Grain Futures Act, the Court said:

"The above act was passed after this complaint was filed but before the order was made herein. As the orders of the Commission are purely remedial and preventative, the effect thereof is entirely in the future. Therefore, the jurisdiction of the Commission should, in this respect, be measured as of the time of the order rather than as of the filing of the complaint or as of the hearing thereon."

In the very recent case of Federal Communications Commission v. Pottsville Broadcasting Co., 309 U. S. 134, 60 S. Ct. 437, the Supreme Court held that it was error for the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in remanding a cause to the Federal Communications Commission, to require that it make its decision on the record theretofore made before it, saying that, after the Commission had corrected the error pointed out by the Court of Appeals, its responsibility was to enforce the legislative policy committed to its charge, that the practice followed in courts was not controlling and that, after remand, the Commission was again charged with the duty of judging the application before it in the light of "public convenience, interest and necessity." This, of course, is entirely inconsistent with any idea that the power of the Commission is to be determined as of the date of the filing of the complaint before it.

If the jurisdiction of the Commission over the petitioner should be determined as of the date of the filing of the complaint, interesting questions would arise as to whether petitioner did not then own a sufficient interest in the Montell partnership to bring it within the Packers and Stockyards Act, and, if not, whether the regulatory power of the Commission could be exercised to prevent the sale by petitioner of meat food products which had been packed by a duly licensed packer and bore labels approved by the Secretary of Agriculture under the Meat Inspection Act. If it was lawful, as there can be no doubt it was, for Montell, Inc., and Emmart Food Products Co. to sell under these labels, it is rather difficult to see how the sale by petitioner of products which he had purchased from these packers under such labels could be held an unfair trade practice. We need not decide these questions, however, as we are of opinion, for the reasons stated, that the jurisdiction of the Commission over petitioner must be judged as of the date of its order, and that at that time it had no jurisdiction, since prior thereto petitioner had become a packer within the meaning of the Packers and Stockyards Act and its business had become subject to the exclusive regulation of the Secretary of Agriculture.

We are not to be taken as in any sense approving the position of petitioner [477] on the merits. The practice of using brands in such way as to create a false impression as to the origin of merchandise is one which, in our opinion, cannot be defended. El Moro Cigar Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 4 Cir. 107 F. (2d) 429; Federal Trade Com'n v. Walker's New River Mining Co., 4 Cir. 79 F. (2d) 457. The power to regulate the business of packers, however, rests with the Secretary of Agriculture, not with the Trade Commission or with the courts.

For the reasons stated, the order of the Federal Trade Commission will be set aside for lack of jurisdiction over the business of petitioner. Reversed and order set aside for lack of jurisdiction.

DECREE

The petitioner herein, having filed with this court on, to wit, December 12, 1939, its petition to review and set aside an order to cease and desist issued by the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, under date of October 17, 1939, under the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and a copy of said petition having been served upon the respondent herein, and said respondent having thereafter certified and filed herein, as required by law, a transcript of the entire record in the proceeding lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered, including all the evidence taken and the report and order of said respondent, and excluding only, by stipulation of the parties, certain physical exhibits retained for convenience in the office of the respondent, at Washington, D. C.; and brief and appendix on behalf of the petitioner having been filed herein on March 11, 1940; and the respondent having agreed that paragraph 1 of its said order to cease and desist, issued on October 17, 1939, may, by this honorable court, be modified by adding thereto the following proviso, to wit:

Provided, That nothing in this order shall prohibit the respondent from using the terms "condensed smoke" or "liquid smoke" in enumerating or stating the ingredients of such salt when there has been added thereto a refined concentrate resulting from the destructive distillation of wood, and where the application of such product is in sufficient quantity to impart to such salt the flavor of smoke * * * and that paragraph 2 of said order may, by this honorable court, be stricken out in its entirety; and said modifications being acceptable to the petitioner herein; and said parties having filed herein their joint motion asking this honorable court to enter a decree modifying said order, affirming said order as so modified, and commanding obedience to the terms thereof:

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That said order to cease and desist be modified by adding to paragraph 1 thereof the following proviso, to wit:

Provided, That nothing in this order shall prohibit the respondent from using the terms "condensed smoke" or "liquid smoke" in enumerating or stating the ingredients of such salt when there has been added thereto a refined concentrate resulting from the destructive distillation of wood, and where the application of such product is in sufficient quantity to impart to such salt the flavor of smoke * * * and by striking out in its entirety paragraph 2 of said order, as follows, to wit:

2. Representing that its product described or designated as "Avery Sugar Curing Smoke Salt" does the complete job of curing and smoking meat, or that meat by treatment with such product acquires therefrom the same taste or flavor or other properties or effects, as meat acquires from treatment with salt and subsequent exposure to the smoke of burning wood during the process and course of its combustion.

and that said order, as so modified, be, and the same hereby is, affirmed.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the petitioner, Avery Salt Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of salt in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, forthwith cease and desist from—

Using the word "smoke," or any other word or words signifying smoke, or implying use of smoke, to designate or describe salt offered for sale, or sold, for curing, preserving, smoking, or flavoring meats, unless the salt so described or designated has been or is directly subjected to the action and effect of the smoke from burning wood during the process and course of its combustion sufficiently to acquire from such source alone all of its smoke or smoke effects for use in curing, preserving, smoking, or flavoring meats: Provided, That nothing in this order shall prohibit the petitioner from using the terms "condensed smoke" or "liquid smoke" in enumerating or stating the ingredients of such salt when there has been added thereto a refined concentrate resulting from the destructive distillation of wood, and where the application of such product is in sufficient quantity to impart to such salt the flavor of smoke.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the petitioner, Avery Salt Co., shall, within 90 days after the entry of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, shall modify its said order to cease and desist as hereinabove set forth in this decree.

PUBLIC INTEREST—COMPETITORS, PRESENT OR POTENTIAL—METHODS HAVING CAPACITY AND TENDENCY TO INJURE USER'S.

Preventing the use of methods that have a tendency and capacity to injure unfairly the user's present or potential competitors is in the "public interest" and such practice may be restrained (Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5; 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45).

PUBLIC INTEREST—DETERMINATION—COMMISSION DISCRETION.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCOPE AND FORM—DEFINITENESS AND COMPLETENESS—NAMES, DESIGNATIONS AND TERMS—MEDICINAL PREPARATIONS—THERAPEUTIC QUALITIES—NAMES, ETC., ATTRIBUTING QUALITIES NOT POSSESSED OR MINIMIZING OTHERS—"PEPSIN."

Order of the Federal Trade Commission requiring corporation to cease and desist from representing through use of word "pepsin" that preparation owed its laxative property to its pepsin content, from using the word "pepsin" to describe any preparation which did not contain a sufficient quantity thereof to possess substantial therapeutic value by reason of the pepsin content, or from using any term to describe preparation by names which minimized the presence of its active ingredients held not vague, indefinite or ambiguous.

EVIDENCE—FALSE AND MISLEADING ADVERTISING PROCEEDINGS—MEDICINAL PREPARATIONS—ADMISSION EVIDENCE AS TO ADVERTISING DISCONTINUED IN ADVANCE OF CHARGES—WHETHER SETTING ASIDE GROUND.

In proceedings on charges of employing false and misleading advertising in marketing of a medicinal preparation, admission of evidence dealing with advertising which had been discontinued and had not been resumed prior to filing of the charges was not ground for setting aside cease and desist order.

On petition to review and set aside order of Commission, order affirmed.

[890] Mr. Edward S. Rogers, Mr. William T. Woodson, Mr. James H. Rogers and Rogers, Woodson & Rogers, all of Chicago, Ill., for petitioner.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Mr. William L. Taggart, and Mr. James W. Nichol, all of Washington, D. C., for Commission.

Before TREANOR and KERNER, Circuit Judges, and LINDLEY, District Judge.

KERNER, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, Inc., to review the proceedings and to set aside a cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, upon complaint charging that petitioner's advertising was false and misleading and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell graduated from a medical college in 1875 and immediately engaged in the practice of medicine. In the course of his practice he originated a medicinal preparation which was marketed by a company with which he was connected up to the time of his death. Petitioner is the successor of this company. It manufactured, sold, and distributed this preparation in interstate commerce, selling and distributing it in bottles placed in a carton wrapper, and pamphlets containing representations relative to the preparation were wrapped around each bottle.

The words "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin combined with Laxative Senna Compound" are printed on the label. In smaller letters are the words "Alcohol 4½ percent" and in still smaller letters the words "Syrup Pepsin composed of Senna Cascara Sagrada Peppermint Oil Aromatics." In larger letters appear the words "A Laxative For Constipation."

The gist of the complaint as amended charged that petitioner's advertising was false and misleading in that it represented that the use of pepsin in the preparation had a therapeutic value as a laxative and in the treatment of constipation.

The Commission entered an order that the petitioner, among other things, cease and desist from—

"(4) Representing through the use of the word 'pepsin' alone or in association with any other word or words in the designation or description of such preparation * * * that said preparation owes its laxative and cathartic properties to its pepsin contents.

"(5) Using the word 'pepsin' alone or in association with any other word or words to designate, describe or refer to any preparation which does not contain a sufficient quantity of pepsin, as an active ingredient, to possess substantial therapeutic value by reason of such pepsin content.

"(6) Using any term or name to describe, designate or refer to such preparation containing senna and cascara sagrada as its active ingredients, which name or names conceal or deceptively minimize the presence of such ingredients."

In substance the pertinent facts found by the Commission are that pepsin has no therapeutic value as a laxative or as a relief from constipation; that the pepsin in the preparation is used as a vehicle for the senna and cascara sagrada; that the use of the words Syrup Pepsin and Syrup of Pepsin to describe and designate the preparation in which the active ingredients are senna and cascara sagrada is deceptive and misleading and has the tendency to cause the purchasing public who are uninformed as to the therapeutic value of pepsin to have the mistaken belief that the pepsin in such preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation; that the use of the aforesaid terms has the tendency to cause the purchasing public who are informed as to the value and purpose of the use of pepsin to have the mistaken belief that said preparation is a pepsin preparation designed and used for the purposes for which a preparation in which pepsin is the principal active ingredient would be used; that senna and cascara sagrada are very powerful drugs and the use of said preparation in a sufficient dosage will produce a cathartic effect; that the use of the aforesaid terms to describe a preparation in which pepsin serves as a vehicle for senna and cascara sagrada is misleading and deceptive, and has the capacity and tendency to conceal the presence of the senna and cascara sagrada and to mislead and deceive the purchasing public as to the active ingredients in the preparation.

The Commission also found as a fact that these false, deceptive, and misleading statements had a tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade to petitioner from its competitors.

At the outset it is insisted that this proceeding is not in the interest of the public. No one can gainsay it is in the public interest to prevent the use of methods [891] that have a tendency and capacity to injure unfairly the user's present or potential competitors and that such practice may be restrained. In determining whether a proceeding is in the public interest the Commission exercises a broad discretion (Federal Trade Commission v. Klesner, 280 U. S. 19, 28), and each case must be determined upon its own facts (Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Co., 257 U. S. 441, 453), and when misbranded goods attract customers by means of the fraud which they perpetrate, trade is diverted from the producer of truthfully marked goods (Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, 493. See also Federal Trade Commission v. Real Products Corporation et al., 90 F. (2d) 617, 619; Federal Trade Commission v. Artloom Corporation, 69 F. (2d) 36, 38; and Armand Company v. Federal Trade Commission, 78 F. (2d) 707, 710). We conclude that under the circumstances in the instant case the proceeding was in the interest of the public.

Counsel also argues that the findings of fact are not supported by substantial evidence, and he insists there is nothing in the record which proves the ultimate facts necessary to support the Commission's findings.

A chemist testified for the petitioner to the effect that if the preparation is placed in a bottle with meat and left there 2½ hours, the pepsin content of the preparation will demonstrate its effectiveness as a digestant. This witness, petitioner's sole expert, also stated that pepsin has no cathartic qualities. The Commission's expert witnesses, 10 qualified physicians, testified that pepsin possesses no therapeutic value as a laxative or in the treatment of constipation. On this evidence the Commission made its finding that pepsin has no therapeutic value as a laxative. This court is not permitted to pass upon the weight of the evidence, and if the findings of the Commission are supported by the evidence, they are conclusive and must be accepted by us (Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Society et al., 302 U. S. 112; Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co. et al., 291 U. S. 67; Federal Trade Commission v. Pacific States, etc., Ass'n., 273 U. S. 52; and Indiana Quartered Oak Co. v.

Federal Trade Commission, 26 F. (2d) 340). This is true even though witnesses base their opinions upon their general medical and pharmacological knowledge. Justin Haynes & Co., Inc., v. Federal Trade Commission, 105 F. (2d) 988; certiorari denied, 308 U. S. 616).

We now address ourselves to the contention that the order is vague and indefinite. It is claimed that a cease and desist order must be definite and certain and complete in itself, and the argument is that to understand provisions 5 and 6 of the order the reader must refer back to the findings to which they relate. While it is true that we ought not to sanction an order which may subject petitioner to the possibility of contempt proceeding where the order is not definite and complete, the order in our case, we believe, is not ambiguous.

We have considered petitioner's contentions that evidence presented by the Commission dealt with advertising which had been discontinued and not resumed prior to the filing of the charges and that the Commission had not accorded petitioner a fair hearing. From our examination of the record we are unable to find any grounds which would justify us in holding that petitioner did not have a fair hearing, and the admission of the evidence referred to furnishes no grounds to set aside the order (United States v. Abilene & Southern Ry. Co., 265 U. S. 274; Consolidated Edison Co. et al. v. National Labor Relations Board et al., 305 U. S. 197, 230).

The order of the Commission is affirmed.

Docket No. 3162

DEAR MR. BILL: It has been called to my attention that the petition for review filed by you in the circuit court in relation to the above-entitled matter is still pending.

It was my understanding that after the order in the above-entitled matter had been modified you were to withdraw your said petition. Will you please let me hear from you in regard to the same.

With kind personal regards, I remain,

Yours very truly,

DANIEL J. MURPHY,
Trial Attorney.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCOPE AND FORM—PROHIBITIONS' EXTENT—USE NAME, ETC., TO MISREPRESENT COMPOSITION—WHERE MISREPRESENTATION OTHERWISE OF COMPOSITION OF PRODUCT ONLY, ALLEGED AND FOUND—"SILVER" FOR KITCHEN UTENSILS SOLD AS CONTAINING NO ALUMINUM.

Where complaint of Federal Trade Commission alleged that corporation in selling kitchen utensils under specified trade name represented that the utensils contained no aluminum and implied that they contained silver, and Commission [444] found merely that corporation in selling the utensils represented that utensils sold under the trade name contained no aluminum, cease and desist order should not have been extended beyond requiring corporation to refrain from making representations which in view of trade name and appearance of utensils would represent that such utensils contained an appreciable amount of silver.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—DECREES OF COURT ENFORCING, SETTING ASIDE, OR MODIFYING—CONTINUING POWER OF COURT WHERE CHANGED CONDITIONS.

The grant of original jurisdiction to the Circuit Court of Appeals to enforce, set aside, or modify orders of the Federal Trade Commission carries with it the power to vacate or modify its own decree whenever good cause is shown to exist as a result of changed conditions.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDER—DECREES OF COURT ENFORCING, SETTING ASIDE, OR MODIFYING—CONTINUING POWER OF COURT WHERE CHANGED CONDITIONS—SCOPE OF PRESENT AS THUS AFFECTED—KITCHEN UTENSILS' POSSIBLE FUTURE CONFORMANCE TO REPRESENTATIONS NOT CURRENTLY WITHIN FACTS.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has continuing power to make any modifications of its decree enforcing cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission that may be required to protect rights which may result from changed conditions, and hence order based on existing state of facts and warranted by allegations of complaint and admissions of corporation would not be modified because the utensils sold and distributed by corporation might in the future satisfy requirements of representations which corporation was prohibited from making by cease and desist order.

Before SPARKS, MAJOR, and TREANOR, Circuit Judges.

TREANOR, Circuit Judge:

This case comes before us on a petition to review and set aside an order of the Federal Trade Commission. The petitioner is a corporation of the State of Delaware with its principal office and place of business in Chicago, Ill. The petitioner is engaged in interstate commerce and its business consists of the sale and distribution of kitchen utensils.

The Federal Trade Commission issued its complaint against petitioner for violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act,<sup>1</sup> and petitioner filed its answer in which it admitted all the material allegations of fact and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing in respect to said facts. Respondent made findings of fact and entered the usual cease and desist order.

The petitioner's contentions may be stated as follows:

1. Item 5 of the Commission's order is unlawful because it enjoins the petitioner's use of its trade name, although the complaint did not allege, nor did the Commission find as a fact, nor did petitioner agree or stipulate that the trade name or petitioner's use thereof was unlawful.

2. The first clause of item 7 of the order should be modified by appending thereto "manufactured by competitors" for the reason that without these words the order goes beyond the scope of the complaint.

3. The first clause of item 7 of the order substantially exceeds the scope of the complaint in respect both to its present and future operation.

The allegations of the complaint, which are material to petitioner's contentions, are disclosed by the following quoted excerpts:

"Paragraph 1. * * * Respondent (petitioner) is now and since 1933 has been engaged in the sale and distribution of kitchen utensils under the trade name 'Silver Seal.' * * *"

"Paragraph 3. * * * The method chiefly employed by * * * (petitioner in advertising and selling) is the giving of manual demonstrations * * * These demonstrations are given generally before groups * * * and are accompanied by [445] various statements and representations as to the character, nature, and quality of respondent's (petitioner's) said product and their effectiveness in use as hereinafter set forth."

"Paragraph 4. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made * * * in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of said products in commerce as hereinbefore alleged are those to the effect that said utensils, offered for sale and sold under the trade name 'Silver Seal,' contain no aluminum

* * *; that the method of cooking made possible by said utensils is new and revolutionary; that said utensils are more durable and more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors; * * *”

“By the means and in the manner aforesaid respondent (petitioner) further represents and implies that it manufactures the utensils offered for sale and sold by it and that said utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver. * * *”

“Paragraph 5. * * * The utensils offered for sale and sold by the respondent (petitioner) are not manufactured by the respondent (petitioner), and said utensils do not contain an appreciable amount of silver metal. * * *”

In paragraph 4 of its findings the Commission finds, in harmony with the allegations of paragraph 4 of the complaint, that among and typical of the statements and representations made by petitioner are those to the effect that the utensils offered for sale and sold under the trade name “Silver Seal” contain no aluminum, or such a small amount of aluminum that the presence of such metal is not noticeable, etc. And it is further found that “by the means and in the manner aforesaid” petitioner represents and implies that it “manufactures the utensils offered for sale and sold by it and that said utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver.”

Item 5 of the cease and desist order is based upon paragraph 4 of the complaint and paragraph 4 of the Commission’s finding. By item 5 of the order the petitioner is ordered to cease and desist from “representing through the use of the term ‘Silver Seal,’ or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning, as the trade name for said utensils, or in any other manner, that the usefulness, durability, or value of such utensils is enhanced or affected by reason of silver metal contained in such utensils.” Petitioner construes item 5 of the order to require it to cease and desist from the use of the words “Silver Seal” as its trade name.

It is clear that the complaint did not allege, and that the Commission did not find, that the use of the trade name “Silver Seal,” apart from verbal statements and representations, constituted a representation that “the usefulness, durability, or value” of the utensils in question was “enhanced or affected by reason of silver metal contained in such utensils.” And since there is no allegation in the complaint that the use of the trade name “Silver Seal” constitutes a representation that the utensils bearing such trade name contain an appreciable amount of silver, and since there is no finding to that effect, there is no justification in law for an order which prohibits the use by petitioner of its trade name, since such order must be predicated on the assumption that by the use of such trade name petitioner does in fact represent that the utensils bearing the trade name contain an appreciable amount of silver.

When petitioner filed its answer admitting the material allegations of the complaint it was entitled to have the scope of its admissions limited by a normal and reasonable construction of the language of the complaint. It cannot be charged with having admitted that the mere use of the trade name "Silver Seal" constitutes a representation that utensils bearing such name contain an appreciable amount of silver, which enhances their virtue, when there is no such allegation in the complaint; and when the only use made of the trade name "Silver Seal" in the complaint is to designate the class of utensils in respect to which typical representations have been made.

Respondent suggests that the only words which conceivably may represent or imply that the utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver are the words "Silver Seal." But this ignores petitioner's alleged statements and representations. We have stated that there is no allegation in the complaint, and no finding of fact, to the effect that the mere use of the trade name "Silver Seal" did represent or imply the existence of such silver content. We are of the opinion, however, that the display of a utensil of the appearance of silver or aluminum, which bears the trade name [446] "Silver Seal," when such display is accompanied by representations that the utensil contains no appreciable amount of aluminum, that it is more durable and more easily cleaned than aluminum or granite utensils, and is superior in other respects to competing aluminum or granite utensils, reasonably could be understood to represent that the utensils with the trade name "Silver Seal" contain silver and that the presence of the silver in some way makes it superior to aluminum or granite utensils. It clearly would be a necessary inference that a representation was being made that some metal ingredient or metal plating of the appearance of silver or aluminum contributed special virtue to the utensils and that such metal was not aluminum. The representations plus the use of the trade name "Silver Seal" reasonably would suggest that this metal was silver or some silver alloy. For, obviously, representations as to the character, nature, and quality of the "Silver Seal" utensils reasonably could be interpreted to represent that the utensils contain some silver metal, although the same representations might not carry such an inference when made in reference to a utensil which does not have the appearance of being made of silver metal and which does not bear a trade name suggestive of silver content.

Petitioner, on the basis of the complaint and the findings, is not under a duty to cease and desist from the use of "Silver Seal" as a trade name for the particular utensils, although it is under a duty to refrain from making statements or representations respecting such utensils which could be construed to represent that the utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver, which gives them a superior utility and value; and in determining whether the statements and representations do amount to such a representation, it would be proper to take into consideration the fact that they are made in respect to utensils which are made of a material which resembles silver metal and which bear the suggestive name of "Silver Seal." An order would be proper which, in substance, would require petitioner to refrain from making any statements or representations which in view of the trade name and appearance of the utensils in question would represent that such utensils contain an appreciable amount of silver.

We think that if item 5 of the cease and desist order is changed to read as follows it will state the duty of petitioner and give effect to the material allegations of the complaint and the corresponding finding of fact: (Cease and desist from) Representing by statements or in any other manner that the usefulness, durability, or value of the utensils offered for sale and sold under the trade name "Silver Seal," or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning as a trade name for said utensils, is enhanced or affected by reason of silver metal contained in such utensils. By the foregoing the significance of the trade name "Silver Seal" is adequately recognized, since, as indicated above, statements or representations respecting "Silver Seal" utensils must be appraised in the light of the silverlike appearance of the utensils and the suggestiveness of the trade name.

The respondent, Federal Trade Commission, does not oppose petitioner's requested second modification of item 7 of the order, and in our opinion such modification should be made in order to avoid uncertainty. Item 7 should be modified by inserting in the third line of the item, immediately following the word "utensils," the additional words "manufactured by competitors."

Petitioner's third requested modification is based upon the argument that the order which prohibits petitioner's representing that its utensils are "more durable or more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors" does not take into account "the fact that petitioner's utensils may in the future actually be more durable and more easily cleaned than competitors'." Petitioner suggests that the language of item 7 be further modified by inserting the additional words "unless it be the fact." The language of item 7 modified in both particulars as urged by petitioner would read "representing that the utensils designated as 'Silver Seal' are more durable or more easily cleaned than are aluminum or granite utensils manufactured by competitors, unless it be the facts * * *."

We are of the opinion that this court should not require the Commission to make the suggested modification. The order is based upon a present existing state of facts, and is warranted by the allegations of the complaint and the admissions of the petitioner. It is true that the Commission has no authority to require the petitioner to cease and desist from representing that its wares are more durable or more easily cleaned than those of its competitors, if such a representation is true; and it is possible, by reason of improvements in the quality of petitioner's utensils or by reason of deterioration in the quality of utensils of competitors, that the representation which is prohibited by the order may be made truthfully at some time in the future. But we are of the opinion that this court has continuing power to make any modifications of our enforcement decree that may be required to protect rights which may result from changed conditions. The grant of original jurisdiction to this court to enforce, set aside, or modify orders of the Federal Trade Commission carries with it the power to vacate or modify its own decree whenever good cause is shown to exist as a result of changed conditions.<sup>2</sup>

Respondent is entitled to a decree broad enough to take care of the present situation, and we are of the opinion that item 7 does not go beyond the present need and does not foreclose the assertion of any rights of petitioner which may arise by reason of future changes.

We conclude that items 5 and 7 of the Commission's order should be modified as indicated; and the order is so modified and, as modified, is affirmed.

File No. 956-H

(District Court, Southern District of California, Central Division.
May 27, 1940)

On application for preliminary injunction to restrain the defendants from disseminating certain alleged false advertisements, pending issuance of complaint by Commission and determination of proceeding thus instituted before it, it appearing, among other things, that defendants had filed a verified answer placing in issue all the material allegations of the bill, excepting only jurisdictional facts pertaining to interstate commerce, and the corporate existence of the principal defendant, and that defendants had also filed a considerable number of affidavits, sworn to by apparently reputable physicians, categorically denying material charges set forth in the opposing affidavits, and that in some of the affidavits submitted on behalf of the defense it was asserted that preparation in question had been made and sold to general public for many years, and that during such period no one, as far as known to defense or to subscribing physicians, had suffered any ill effects therefrom, and also that advertising matter had been submitted to outstanding authorities on subject of medicinal advertising, as set forth, application denied.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel and Mr. Abner E. Lipscomb, special attorney, all of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. Carl B. Sturzenacker, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Hall & Cotten, of Oklahoma City, Okla., for defendants.

MEMORANDUM OF CONCLUSIONS

HOLLZER, District Judge:

This is an application for an injunction to restrain the defendants from disseminating certain alleged false advertisements pending the issuance of a complaint by plaintiffs and the determination of the latter proceeding before the Commission. The complaint filed in this cause alleges facts, and is supported by affidavits, which if uncontradicted, might warrant the issuance of such injunctive relief.

However, the defendants have filed a verified answer placing in issue all of the material allegations of the bill with the exception of the jurisdictional facts pertaining to interstate commerce and the corporate existence of the principal defendant. In addition, the defendants have filed a considerable number of affidavits, sworn to by apparently reputable physicians, who categorically deny the material charges set forth in the opposing affidavits.

Furthermore, in some of the affidavits submitted on behalf of the defense, it is asserted that the preparation in question has been manufactured and sold to the general public for a great many years, that during that period in excess of 40 million capsules of said product have been sold and distributed, that never to the knowledge of the defense, or of any of the physicians subscribing to the affidavits submitted on behalf of the defense, has any person complained of having suffered in any respect any unpleasantness, sickness, illness, or had any bad results from the taking or using of said product, either temporarily or continually. Likewise, in the affidavit sworn to by the president of the corporate defendant, this official has asserted that prior to the printing of any advertising matter, publication, or printing of circulars, he submitted the same to the most outstanding authorities in the United States on the subject of advertising medicinal products, for their approval, naming these experts. None of these affirmative allegations submitted by the defense has been denied.

Under this state of the record the well established rule is that on such an application for a temporary injunction, there being a verified answer filed denying the equities of the bill, such answer being supported by affidavits fully rebutting the charge complained of, the temporary injunction will not issue. (Water Co. etc. v. Public Service Commission, etc. 250 Fed. 304; Demarest v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 257 Fed. 162; City of Sacramento v. Southern Pacific Co. 155 Fed. 1022; Decorative Stone v. Bldg. Trades Council, 13 F. (2d) 123.)

During the oral argument counsel for plaintiff relied particularly on a ruling made by another judge of this court in action No. 806-Y, Federal Trade Commission v. Sekov Corporation, et al., and it was contended that the decision in the latter case was on all fours with the present suit. However, an examination of the minutes of the court show that at the hearing on the application for an injunction in the case cited, the defendants interposed no answer nor any counter affidavits, and likewise their counsel stated that while they would not consent to the issuing of the requested injunction they would not oppose the same.

For the foregoing reasons, defendants are entitled to an order herein denying plaintiff's application for a temporary injunction.

MINUTE ORDER

For the reasons set forth in the memorandum of conclusions this day filed, it is ordered that plaintiff's application for a temporary injunction be denied.

DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants, The Chapman Health Products Co., a corporation, John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, as individuals and as officers of said corporation, and

<sup>1</sup> In this connection, attention should be invited to case of Thomsen-King & Co. et al., in which temporary injunction issued (see infra, p. 1692), and in which Circuit Court of Appeals refused application for supersedeas (see supra, p. 1642), and to case of American Medicinal Products, Inc., et al., in which District Court for Southern District of California, Central Division, on May 27, 1940, for reasons set forth in the court's memorandum of conclusions, denied Commission's application for temporary injunction or restraining order (see supra, p. 1683).

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants have waived hearing herein, and have consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Northern District of Ohio, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation containing drugs for the treatment of obesity, designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, in commerce, between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and now cause the dissemination of false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that the use of said preparation is a competent, safe, and scientific treatment for obesity and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of this preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may effect nausea, severe vomiting, gastro-intestinal irritation, diarrhea, and serious bowel trouble, headaches, muscular debility and muscular and articular pains, vertigo, insomnia, raised temperature, irregular pulse, physical exhaustion, tremor, tachycardia and collapse, and may result in chronic poisoning, thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body of mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation and other serious and irreparable injury to health, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the defendants The Chapman Health Products Co., a corporation, John W. Chapman and Nellie C. Chapman, as individuals and as officers of said corporation, their agents, servants, representatives, employees and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation designated as Faid, otherwise known as Daintee, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that said preparation constitutes a safe, competent, and scientific treatment for obesity, or that its use will have no ill effect upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparation when taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

Dec. 20, 1939)

Decree of preliminary injunction, by District Judge Barnes, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisement of defendant's drug-containing preparations for women, under designations "Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength" and "Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength," and which it appears, as below set forth, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances and other serious conditions leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage in nonpregnant women, and, where used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, may result in abortion and in uterine infections causing condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and constitute, in use thereof, a menace to health and life of pregnant women, as more particularly below set forth; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. James L. Baker, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant Blanche Kaplan, an individual, trading as the Progressive Medical Co. and as the Ladies Aid Co., and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant has waived hearing herein, and has consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of medicinal preparations containing drugs for the relief of delayed menstruation designated as Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and now causes the dissemination of false advertisements by the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparations, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the use of said preparations is a safe, competent, efficient and specific treatment for delayed menstruation and that their use will have no ill effects upon the human body, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of these preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage in nonpregnant women; that in those cases where Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, their use may result in abortion and in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and that the use of said preparations is a menace to the health and life of pregnant women, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the defendant Blanche Kaplan, an individual, trading as the Progressive Medical Co. and as the Ladies Aid Co., her agents, servants, representatives, employees and assigns and all other persons participating with her and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations known as Ladies' Aid No. 2, Ordinary Strength and Ladies' Aid No. 3, Extra Strength, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that said preparations constitute safe, competent, efficient and specific treatments for delayed menstruation or that their use will have no ill effect upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparations, when taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

Nash & Donnelly (John A. Nash of counsel), and Mr. Lewis F. Mason, both of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. Richard E. Williams, of Des Moines, Ia., for defendants.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., a corporation; George Thomsen, its president; and Merrold Johnson, its office manager, individually and in their respective capacities for said corporation, after due notice to each of said defendants to appear on January 8, 1940, said motion having been continued until this day, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorneys, Curtis Shears, Wm. F. Dinnen, and James McKeag, and the said defendants appearing by their respective attorneys, namely Nash & Donnelly by John A. Nash of counsel, and Lewis F. Mason of Chicago, Ill., and Richard E. Williams of Des Moines, Iowa, and the court having read the sworn pleadings and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having heard and duly considered the arguments of counsel, and now being fully advised in the premises, now finds:

1. That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division.
2. That it has jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter hereof.
3. That the said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of face powders, cleansing cold cream, cold cream, complexion soap, lipstick, tooth powder, and other commodities, all or most of which are known as "Margaret King" cosmetics, and are cosmetics within the meaning and definition of said term in section 15 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

4. That said defendants and each of them have disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and now cause the dissemination of false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the said Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetics, and by various means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the said Federal Trade Commission Act, of said cosmetics, in violation of the said Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which said advertising the defendants and each of them have disseminated or caused to be disseminated advertisements misleading in a material respect, for the purposes aforesaid, as alleged and set forth in the said sworn bill of complaint.

5. That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the said Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said Act.

6. That the plaintiff is entitled to the issuance of a preliminary injunction as prayed for in said bill of complaint.

It is therefore hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendants, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., a corporation; George Thomsen, its president; and Merrold Johnson, its office manager, individually and in their respective capacities for said corporation, their officers, employees, servants, representatives, agents, and assigns, and all other persons participating with the said defendants, either directly or through corporations, trade names, or any other devices, be and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetics known as Margaret King Cosmetics, whether sold under the same name or under other names, or disseminating and causing to be disseminated any advertisements by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetics in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent, infer, imply, or are to the effect:

1. That respondents are conducting a contest or contests confined to a picture puzzle or naming of a soap, toothpaste, or tooth powder, and involving only competition in skill and promptness in submitting solutions thereof by parties responding thereto.

2. That respondents are giving away a substantial sum of money, in the form of prizes, in which a certain or limited number of members of the public are to share, as a means of advertising the products of said company and of gaining publicity for the products of said company in various communities.

3. That a money prize or reward is guaranteed for simply mailing a so-called Promptness Certificate as requested.

4. That a money prize or reward is guaranteed to that person who becomes a member of one of the so-called "Prize Clubs."

5. That not one penny of contestant's own money is needed to win a money prize under said Prize Club Plan.

6. That by the simple act of responding to the advertising of respondents and to literature received from respondents and to the requests therein made by respondents, any person may receive or win a specified grand prize, or various other prizes.

7. That the grand prizes and other prizes offered will be given free without the expenditure of either money or work on the part of contestants.

8. That the elements or conditions incident to the winning of prizes are easy and simple.

9. That hundreds have already won big cash prizes in similar friendship campaigns conducted by the same prize company which is conducting the current contest.

10. That the trade names used by respondents represent big responsible concerns, endorsed by certain Des Moines banks and the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce.

11. That the contest conducted by respondents, and the sale of products by contestants therein, is for the purpose of advertising said products to the general public.

12. That the preparations and products sold to persons who enter said contest are sold at reduced prices and at less than an established retail price and value.

13. That the recipient of so-called booster points in the form of a certificate of award, is the subject of a special favor or advantage not generally extended to other individual contestants, and that the said booster points substantially enhance the chance of recipient toward the winning of one or more of the prizes offered by respondent.

14. That certain points offered or given, designated in large numbers, and awarded in connection with first and second orders for merchandise, have a material and substantial value, giving the recipient thereof a substantial advanced standing over that of others toward the winning of one or more prizes offered, and that such points are given or offered exclusively to the individual addressed or to a group of individuals selected and restricted in number.

15. That the recipient of a so-called "Grand Prize Promptness Certificate" has gained an advantage for himself, by virtue of skill in solving a puzzle or special favor on the part of respondents, with respect to the purchase of an assortment of cosmetics or toilet preparations, and with respect to the acquisition of points and chances toward the winning of one or more of the prizes being offered by respondents.

16. That respondents, under each of the trade names used by them, have been in business for a long period of years and have an established reputation with respect to their products and for business success.

17. That the interest of the respondents in the contestant is personal and superior to that of other contestants in general.

18. That the person addressed is sure to be the recipient of the grand prize or other prizes offered.

19. That the giving of a certain order for goods, and the payment of a specified amount therefor, will assure the contestant addressed of securing a money prize.

20. That so-called advice and suggestions given in letters to contestants are due to a personal interest in the contestant addressed and that such advice and suggestions are given exclusively to the one addressed.

21. That the contestant or person addressed stands in a position equal to that of any other contestant having a favorable chance of winning the grand prize or any other of the prizes offered.

22. That the contestant or person addressed stands in a position superior to that of all or the majority of other contestants having a favorable chance of winning the grand prize or any other of the prizes offered.

23. That the participant is among the leaders in said prize club for the grand prize or extra prizes, and that one more order may win the prize referred to.

24. That the advertising matter discloses all of the terms and conditions that must be met by the contestant when said terms and conditions so set out are not, in fact, the only terms and conditions that must be met in order to be successful in winning a prize or an award in said contest.

25. That the advertising matter sets out the terms and conditions the contestants will be required to meet without stating that said terms and conditions so specified and set out are, in fact, only a portion of the requirements that must be met by a contestant.

26. That a contestant has achieved a more advanced position toward success in said contest than said contestant has in fact achieved.

27. That a form letter mailed in said contest to an addressee therein refers to his actual position or relative standing, when such is not the fact.

28. That respondent corporation is a manufacturing concern and that it originates, compounds and prepares the preparations and products sold by it.

29. That the opening offer of goods at a certain price is merely for advertising purposes.

30. That so-called advice and suggestions given in letters to contestants are due to personal interest in the contestant addressed and that such advice and suggestions are given exclusively to the one addressed.

31. That there is no element of lottery in connection with the contest or the sale of the merchandise.

32. That there is nothing to buy or sell in connection with the grand prize.

33. That any of said preparations will restore a youthful condition of the skin, produce a youthful appearance, or make the skin younger, remove wrinkles and worry lines, tone and strengthen the muscles or help make the gums healthy.

Pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against the said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said Act.

It is further ordered, That this order of injunction be issued without bond.

injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisements to induce, etc., as below set forth, purchase of defendants' "Eve Martin" cosmetics, and which advertisements represent, infer, imply, or are to the effect that defendants are giving away a substantial sum of money in the form of prizes, in which a certain or limited number of members of the public are to share, as a means of advertising the products of said company and of gaining publicity for the products of said company in various communities, and which, in numerous other particulars as hereinafter set forth, contain various representations as to the nature, terms, and conditions of such supposed contests, results accomplished by others, defendants' sole interest therein, individual prospect's particular standing in the contest, etc.; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Curtis Shears, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., and Mr. John K. Valentine, special attorney, of Des Moines, Iowa, for the Commission.

Williams & Shaw, of Des Moines, Iowa, for defendants, and, along with—

Mr. Frank J. Comfort, of the firm of Comfort, Comfort & Irish, of Des Moines, Iowa, for F. W. Fitch Co.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants, Winship Corporation and F. W. Fitch Co., corporations, and Don W. Parmelee, an individual, after due notice to each of them to appear on January 19, 1940, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorneys, Curtis Shears of Washington, D. C., and John K. Valentine of Des Moines, Iowa, and the said defendants appearing by their respective attorneys, namely, Richard E. Williams for defendants Winship Corporation and Don W. Parmelee, Frank J. Comfort for defendant F. W. Fitch Co., and Prentice W. Shaw for all defendants; and the Court having read the sworn pleadings, the sworn bill of complaint and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having had before it a certified copy of the stipulation, testimony and exhibits introduced and made a part of the record in the Commission's Docket No. 3833, entitled "In the Matter of Richard E. Williams, et al.," and having considered such portions of said sworn testimony and exhibits from this and other dockets of the Federal Trade Commission as were offered herein, and having heard and duly considered the motions and the arguments of counsel and now being fully advised in the premises, it now appears to this Court, as to defendants Winship Corporation and Don W. Parmelee:

1. That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Southern District of Iowa.

2. That it has jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter hereof.

3. That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of certain beauty preparations and toiletries, consisting of face powders, cleansing and other cold creams, astringent lotions, perfumery, and other preparations and toiletries which are designated and known under the name of "Eve Martin," and all or most of which are cosmetics within the meaning and definition of said term in section 15 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

4. That said defendants and each of them have disseminated or have caused the dissemination of false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in said Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetics, and by various means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in said Federal Trade Commission Act, of said cosmetics in violation of said Federal Trade Commission Act, and that said false advertisements so disseminated or caused to be disseminated are misleading in a number of material respects, for the purposes aforesaid, as alleged and set forth in the said sworn bill of complaint.

5. That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertisements pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of the said Federal Trade Commission Act.

6. That the plaintiff is entitled to the issuance of a preliminary injunction as prayed for in the said bill of complaint.

It is therefore hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendants, Winship Corporation, a corporation, and Don W. Parmelee, an individual, their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and assigns, and all other persons participating in said defendants' business, either directly or through corporations, trade names, or any other devices, be and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetics known as "Eve Martin" cosmetics, whether sold under the same name or under other names, or disseminating and causing to be disseminated any advertisements by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the same or similar cosmetics in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent, infer, imply, or are to the effect:

1. That defendants are giving away a substantial sum of money, in the form of prizes, in which a certain or limited number of members of the public are to share, as a means of advertising the products of said company and of gaining publicity for the products of said company in various communities.

2. That the mere returning of a so-called "Qualification Blank" before a given date as instructed will entitle said recipient to a promptness prize of money.

3. That the returning of said "Qualification Blank" is the one thing left to do to win a cash award.

4. That the elements or conditions incident to the winning of prizes are easy and simple.

5. That hundreds have already won big cash prizes in similar friendship campaigns conducted by the same prize company which is conducting the current contest.

6. That the contest conducted by defendants, and the sale of products to contestants therein, is for the purpose of advertising said products to the general public.

7. That the preparations and products sold to persons who enter said contest are sold at reduced prices and at less than an established retail price and value.

8. That the recipient of so-called prize credits in the form of a certificate of award, is the subject of a special favor or advantage not generally extended to other individual contestants, and that the said prize credits substantially enhance the chance of said recipient toward the winning of one or more of the prizes offered by defendants.

9. That certain points offered or given, designated in large numbers, and awarded for answering the first advertisement received and for sending in an order for merchandise, have a material and substantial value, giving the recipient thereof a substantial advanced standing over that of others toward the winning of one or more prizes offered, and that such points are given or offered exclusively to the individuals selected and restricted in number.

10. That the interest of the defendants in the contestant addressed is personal and superior to that of other contestants in general.

11. That the giving of a certain order for goods, and the payment of a specified amount therefor, will assure the contestant addressed of securing a money prize.

Pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against the said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, or until there has been a final determination of this cause upon its merits by this Court.

It is further ordered, That this order of injunction be issued without bond.

It is further ordered, That temporary injunction shall not issue as to the defendant F. W. Fitch Co. at this time, but leave is granted to the Federal Trade Commission to file another application for a temporary injunction as to the defendant F. W. Fitch Co. at any time.

It is further ordered, That the motion of the defendant F. W. Fitch Co. to dismiss the complaint as to it is hereby denied, and overruled,

To all of which adverse to the parties hereto said parties are given an appropriate exception.

which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparations in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that the use of said preparations is an effective, safe and scientific aphrodisiac, and an effective, safe and scientific treatment for strengthening and rejuvenating the sexual organs of man or woman, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" and as "Man's Tonic," and sold as "U. S. Special Tablets," as a tonic, as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce a congestion affecting the mucous membrane of the sexual organs and other epithelial structures of the urogenital tract, including those of the kidney, prostate gland, and bladder; may also aggravate any existing disturbance in the aforesaid organs such as nephritis, prostatitis, and cystitis, and may even originate such disturbances or produce a hemorrhage of the bladder; may result in nervous irritability, severe frontal headaches and fainting; and that the use of said preparation is a menace to the health of men and women, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of said preparation, advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule) and as "Man's Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule), and sold as "Sextogen Capsules For Men or Women," as a tonic, as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in nervous irritability and insomnia, headaches, muscular and auricular pains, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, physical exhaustion, tremor, tachycardia, thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation, and premature death; and that the use of said preparation is a menace to the health of men and women, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act:

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendants, Edwin L. Leisenring, an individual, trading as U. S. Drug & Sales Co., U. S. Drug Laboratories, and U. S. Drug Co., and Gordon Leisenring, an individual, their agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" and as "Man's Tonic," and sold as "U. S. Special Tablets," and the drug preparation advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule) and as "Man's Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule), and sold as "Sextogen Capsules For Men or Women," whether sold under the same names or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisement represents directly, indirectly or by implication that said preparations, or either of said preparations, are effective, safe, and scientific aphrodisiacs, and effective, safe, and scientific treatments for the strengthening and rejuvenating of the sexual organs of man or woman, or which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparations, or either preparation, if used as a tonic as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or if used under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. SEKOV CORPORATION,

OFFICERS THEREOF, AND AS INDIVIDUALS TRADING
AS SEKOV REDUCING STUDIOS<sup>1</sup>

File No. 806 Y Civil

(District Court, Southern District of California, Central Division, February 17, 1940)

Decree of preliminary injunction, by District Judge Wm. P. James, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisements of defendants' drug-containing preparations for obesity or reducing, under designations "Sekov Reducer" and "Sekov," and which it appears, as below set forth, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce headaches, muscular and auricular pains, nausea, vomiting, and various other serious conditions and symptoms, including irreparable injury to the heart muscle and premature death; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Abner E. Lipscomb, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. Harold E. Prudhon, of Los Angeles, Calif., for defendants.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants, Sekov Corporation, a corporation, and Edwin H. Vokes, and Hazel Ruth Vokes, as officers of said corporation, and as individuals trading as Sekov Reducing Studios, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, Abner E. Lipscomb, and the defendants appearing by their attorney, Harold E. Prudhon, and the Court having read the sworn pleadings and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having heard and duly considered the argument of counsel, and now being fully advised in the premises, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Southern District of California, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants, and

<sup>2</sup> Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Sekov Corporation et al., Docket 4061, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of September 18, 1940.

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of drug preparations advertised and sold as "Sekov Reducer" and as "Sekov," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and now cause the dissemination of, false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparations, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparations in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that said preparation advertised and sold as "Sekov Reducer" and as "Sekov" is a scientific reducer or remedy for the treatment of obesity, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised and sold as "Sekov Reducer" and as "Sekov," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce headaches, muscular and auricular pains, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor, tachycardia, thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation, and premature death, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act:

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendants, Sekov Corporation, a corporation, and Edwin H. Vokes, and Hazel Ruth Vokes, as officers of said corporation, and as individuals trading as Sekov Reducing Studios, their agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised and sold as "Sekov Reducer" and as "Sekov," whether sold under the same names or any other names, or disseminating and causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent directly, indirectly or by implication that said preparation is a safe, competent and scientific treatment for obesity or that such treatment is designed to guard the health of the user, or that it acts entirely on a corrective principle, or that it is unlike harsh methods of reducing in that it does not contain cathartics or dangerous drugs, or that it does not reduce by merely tearing down fatty cells, or that it is made for reaching the glands whose faulty function is the cause of most overweight, or that it regulates the action of the glands gently and gradually, or that it takes off the fat without weakening the body, or that it is specially prepared to be effective in reducing practically all cases of overweight, or that it reduces by normalizing the body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparation, if used as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or if used under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, Abner E. Lipscomb, and the defendant appearing by its attorney, David D. Blumenstein, and the defendant having waived hearing herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith and the Court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Western District of Pennsylvania, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods, also designated as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

<sup>2</sup> Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., Docket 4154, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of July 6, 1940.

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the use of said preparation is a safe, competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods, also designated as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce, when used by non-pregnant women, a gastrointestinal disturbance such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of said preparation, advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods, also designated as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said Act:

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods, also designated as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), whether sold under the same names or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Commission Act, and which advertisement represents directly, indirectly, or by implication that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, May's Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston, a corporation, and the court having read the pleadings and the affidavits filed in connection therewith, and having heard and considered the argument of counsel, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Southern District of West Virginia, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the party and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength)" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength)," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as <sup>2</sup> Such complaint duly issued in the matter of May's Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston, Docket 4153, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of July 6, 1940.

"commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the said preparation is a safe, dependable, certain, harmless preparation and the only safe preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength)" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength)" as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, when used by nonpregnant women, may result in gastrointestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhages, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of said preparation, advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength)" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength)," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, when used by pregnant women, may result in abortion, which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act:

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, May's Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston, a corporation, its officers, agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength)" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength)," whether sold under the same names or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisement represents directly, indirectly, or by implication that said preparation is a safe, dependable, certain, or harmless preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, Abner E. Lipscomb, and the defendant appearing by its attorney, Howard L. Robinson, and the defendant having waived hearing herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and the court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Northern District of West Virginia, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules For Delayed Periods, also designated Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

<sup>3</sup> Such complaint duly issued in the matter of May's Cut Rate Drug Co., Docket 4152, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of July 6, 1940.

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant has disseminated or is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparation advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules For Delayed Periods, also designated Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules For Delayed Periods, also designated Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in nonpregnant women gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules For Delayed Periods, also designated Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion, which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said Act.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, servants, representatives, employees and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules For Delayed Periods," also designated Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (double strength) and as Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules (triple strength), whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisement represents, directly, indirectly, or by implication that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. OMEGA MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC., TRADING AS OMEGA ELECTROLYSIS INSTITUTE, AND MILTON L. BROWNSHIELD, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICER OF SAID CORPORATION.<sup>1</sup>

File No. 8-443

(District Court, Southern District of New York. May 10, 1940)

Decree of preliminary injunction, by District Judge Edward A. Conger, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisements of defendants' device or apparatus for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair by individual self-application in the home, under designation "Omega Home Use Portable Machine," and which it appears, as below set forth, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in local infections, skin burns, scarring, and other conditions and disfigurement, and, under certain conditions, as below set forth, in infection so serious that fatal consequences may result therefrom; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. James L. Baker, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Omega Electrolysis Institute, and Milton L. Brownshield, individually and as an officer of said corporation, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, James L. Baker, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants have waived hearing herein, and have consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Southern District of New York, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of a device or apparatus designated as the Omega Home Use Portable Machine, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus and by various means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that the use of said device or apparatus, designated as the Omega Home Use Portable Machine, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, is an effective and efficient, modern method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body; that it is safe, foolproof, and pleasant to use and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of said device, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in local infections, skin burns, scarring, metallic stains, permanent pitting, and disfigurement; that when infection occurs in the nose, on the upper lip or over the glabella, it may be so serious as to cause death, and in those instances where the device and method are applied to cancerous or syphilitic lesions, which are not recognizable as such by the layman, fatal consequences may result from infection, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Omega Electrolysis Institute, and its officers, and Milton L. Brownshield, individually, and as an officer of said corporation, their respective agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus, designated as the Omega Home Use Portable Machine, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that the use of said device or apparatus by individual self-application in the home is an effective and efficient, modern method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body; that it is safe, foolproof, and pleasant to use or that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said device and method by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health, physical injury, or permanent disfigurement; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. ELECTROLYSIS ASSOCIATES, INC., AND LOUIS ZINBERG, AS OFFICER OF SAID CORPORATION AND TRADING AS BEAUTIDERM COMPANY<sup>1</sup>

File No. 8-442

(District Court, Southern District of New York. May 10, 1940)

Decree of preliminary injunction, by District Judge Edward A. Conger, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisements of defendants' device or apparatus for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair by individual self-application in the home, under designation "Beautiderm Midget," and which it appears, as below set forth, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in local infections, skin burns, scarring and other conditions and disfigurement, and, under certain conditions, as below set forth, in infection so serious that fatal consequences may result therefrom; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. James L. Baker, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the order to show cause dated May 9, 1940, and upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendants, Electrolysis Associates, Inc., a corporation, and Louis Zinberg, as an officer of said corporation and as an individual trading as Beautiderm Co., and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, James L. Baker, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants have failed to appear and show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued without bond, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendants have been duly served and are domiciled and transact business in the Southern District of New York, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of a device or apparatus, designated as the Beau-

<sup>2</sup>Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Electrolysis Associates, Inc., et al., Docket 4144, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of September 27, 1940, which order was later vacated on October 25, 1940.

tiderm Midget, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendants have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements by United States mails, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly, or indirectly, the purchase of said device, and by various means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that the use of said device or apparatus, designated as the Beautiderm Midget, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home is an effective, efficient, easy, safe, and scientific method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body, and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of said device, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in local infections, erysipelas, skin burns, scarring, metallic tattoo marks, pitting, or permanent disfigurement; that when infection occurs in the nose, on the upper lip or over the glabella, it may be so serious as to cause death, and in those instances where the device and method are applied to cancerous or syphilitic lesions, which are not recognizable as such by the layman, fatal consequences may result from infection, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the defendants, Electrolysis Associates, Inc., a corporation, and its officers and Louis Zinberg, as an officer of said corporation and as an individual trading as Beautiderm Co., their respective agents, servants, representatives, employees and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus, designated as the Beautiderm Midget, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that the use of said device or apparatus by individual self-application in the home is an effective, efficient, easy, safe and scientific method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body; or that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said device by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health, physical injury or permanent disfigurement; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

under designation "O. B. C. Reducing Capsules," otherwise known as "O. B. C. Capsules," and which it appears, as below set forth, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce nausea, vomiting, headache, muscular and articular pains, and other serious conditions and symptoms, including irreparable injury to heart muscle and other serious and irreparable injury to health; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and disposition of such complaint, as in said decree set forth.<sup>2</sup>

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. James L. Baker, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. I. Ralph Weinstock, of Philadelphia, Pa., for defendant.

DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, I. Ralph Weinstock, an individual, trading as Thyrole Products Co.; the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, James L. Baker, and the defendant appearing in person, and the Court having read the pleadings and the affidavits filed in connection therewith, and having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, and

It appearing to the Court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and

It appearing to the Court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation containing drugs for the treatment of obesity, designated as O. B. C. Reducing Capsules, otherwise known as O. B. C. Capsules, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and

It appearing to the Court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and now causes the dissemination of, false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparation, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the use of said preparation is a mild and an effective treatment for obesity; that it will restore vim, vigor, and mental alertness and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, and

It appearing to the Court, That the use of this preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce nausea, vomiting, headache, muscular and articular pains, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor, tachycardia, and angina pectoris, and may result in thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation and other serious and irreparable injury to health, and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the defendant I. Ralph Weinstock, an individual, trading as Thyrole Products Co., his agents, servants, representatives, employees and assigns and all other persons participating with him and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation designated as O. B. C. Reducing Capsules, otherwise known as O. B. C. Capsules, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that said preparation constitutes a mild and an effective treatment for obesity; that it will restore vim, vigor, and mental alertness and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that said preparation, when taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

PENALTY PROCEEDINGS

During the period covered by this volume, i. e., December 1, 1939, to May 31, 1940, six of the alleged violations of its cease and desist orders certified by the Commission to the Attorney General under the provisions of section 5 (1), Federal Trade Commission Act, were settled in the district courts and civil penalties in the sum of $12,000 were collected. The cases so disposed of are as follows:

United States v. John Petrie, trading as B-X Laboratories, and Purity Products Company; United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois; agreed judgment of $2,500 satisfied December 19, 1939.

The Commission had ordered John Petrie, his representatives, etc., in connection with the offer, etc., in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, of his medical preparations for internal use for various troubles of the female anatomy, to cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That said products "Menstra" or "Minex," "B-X Monthly Relief Compound," or "B-X Monthly Tablets," form safe, competent, or reliable remedies or treatments for delayed, painful, or suppressed menstruation, or for menstrual disorders generally; or that said products form a general preventive for ill health; or that said products are effective to tone up the generative organs, or the whole system; or that said products are abortifacients; or that said products are harmless or produce no bad after effects.

2. That said product "Hygeen" is an effective, potent, or powerful germicide under the conditions of use for feminine hygiene; or that it is effective in the prevention of venereal diseases; or that it can be used safely or without fear of harmful results so far as the prevention of infection is concerned; or that it is a positive or dependable contraceptive under all conditions or in all cases; or that it is effective as a deodorant for use after menstruation; or that it is harmless.<sup>1</sup>

United States v. K. & S. Sales Company et al.; United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois; agreed judgment for $4,500 entered and satisfied December 19, 1939.

Respondent, the K. & S. Sales Co., its representatives, etc., in connection with offer, etc., in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, of various articles of merchandise, including hosiery, clocks, cameras, etc., were ordered by the Commission forthwith to cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push cards, punchboards, or similar devices so as to enable such persons to dispose of or sell by the use thereof such articles of merchandise.

2. Mailing, shipping, or transporting to the members of the public or to dealers push cards, punchboards, or similar devices so prepared or printed as to enable said persons or dealers by the use thereof to sell or distribute merchandise being offered for sale and sold by respondent.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of various articles of merchandise by the use of push cards, punchboards, or similar devices.<sup>2</sup>

United States v. Holst Publishing Company et al.; United States District Court for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division; judgment of $2,000 entered and satisfied January 18, 1940.

Respondent Bernhart P. Holst, doing business as Holst Publishing Co., his representatives, etc., in connection with the offer, etc., of certain books or reference work designated and sold under the name "Progressive Reference Library," together with a loose-leaf extension service, or substantially the same books or reference work under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, were ordered to cease and desist from representing—

(a) That the purchaser or prospective purchaser is being given or will be given a set of the said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" free by reason of the exceptional ability of the purchaser or prospective purchaser in his or her chosen trade, profession, or avocation and standing in his or her community, or for any other reason.

(b) That any purchaser or prospective purchaser is on a preferred list to receive a 10-volume set of the said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" free.

(c) That the purchaser or prospective purchaser is being given or will be given a set of the reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" free, on condition that such purchaser or prospective purchaser writes respondent a letter of commendation concerning the said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library," after such purchaser or prospective purchaser has had an opportunity to study the same.

(d) That any purchaser or prospective purchaser is being given or will be given a set of the reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" free, on condition that such purchaser or prospective purchaser subscribes to a 10-year loose-leaf extension service or any extension service covering any period of time.

(e) That any purchaser or prospective purchaser is receiving, or will receive, any benefit, discount, or concession, in any manner or form, or by any pretense; and that any purchaser or prospective purchaser, in paying the sum of $49.50, is paying other than the usual selling price of said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library."

(f) That the reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" has been revised, enlarged, and brought down to date, until and unless said reference work has in truth and in fact been substantially revised, enlarged, and brought down to date.

(g) That Bernhart P. Holst, or any other of said respondents, or any other person, firm, or corporation, is a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the contracts executed by purchasers in connection with the purchase of said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" and the accompanying extension service, when such is not the fact.

(h) That the purchaser or prospective purchaser of said reference work now designated as "Progressive Reference Library" is only buying or paying for an extension service intended to keep the set of books up to date.<sup>3</sup>

United States v. Deran Confectionery Co.; United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts; agreed judgment in the sum of $1,000 entered February 8, 1940.

Such order directed defendant corporation, respondent before the Commission, its representatives, etc., in connection with the offer, etc., of candy in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, forthwith to cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made, or are designed to be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to and placing in the hands of dealers assortments of candy which are used, or which are designed to be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale and distribution of candy contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail individually wrapped pieces of candy of uniform size and shape with different colored centers, together with packages or boxes of candy or any other merchandise, which said packages or boxes of candy or other merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchasers procuring pieces of candy with centers of a particular color.<sup>4</sup>

United States v. Elmer Candy Co.; United States District Court; Eastern District of Louisiana; judgment in the sum of $1,000 entered February 14, 1940.

Respondent manufacturer, his representatives, etc., in connection with the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products were ordered to cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers, or retail dealers, packages or assortments of candy which are used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said package or assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of chocolate-covered candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy or articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy, or articles of merchandise, are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color,

4. Furnishing to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers display cards, either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products, or separately, bearing a legend, or legends, or statements, informing the purchaser that the candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance, or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.*

United States v. Klimate-Pruf Manufacturing Company; United States District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina; agreed judgment of $1,000 entered March 23, 1940.

The Commission's order directed the defendant, Max Klein, doing business as Klimate-Pruf Manufacturing Co., his representatives, etc., in connection with the sale and distribution of waterproofing compounds, roof coatings, paints, and similar products in interstate commerce, to cease and desist:

1. From conducting business under the name Klimate-Pruf Manufacturing Co., or under any other trade or corporate name containing the word "Manufacturing."

2. From using the phrases "Manufactured exclusively by the Klimate-Pruf Manufacturing Co.," "Factory and warehouse, Kingsland, N. J.;" or any phrase, slogan, or pictorial representation of similar import; or any statement or representation whatsoever that respondent is the manufacturer of said commodities; or any statement or representation or pictorial representation importing or implying that respondent is selling and distributing said commodities direct from the manufacturer or factory to his customer purchasers without the intervention of middlemen.<sup>6</sup>
