Para. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and other statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said preparation, respondent represents directly or by implication that its said preparation is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, and lumbago, and that said preparation possesses substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of such ailments and conditions; that said preparation is entirely safe and harmless and may be used without danger of ill effects upon the health of the user.

The use by the respondent of the word "Remedy" in its corporate name and in the designation and description of its said preparation constitutes within itself the false and misleading representation that said preparation is a cure or remedy for the ailments and conditions hereinabove mentioned.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's preparation is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago. Said preparation is not a cure for muscular or joint aches and pains generally. Said preparation does not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago in excess of affording, in some cases, temporary symptomatic relief from the aches and pains associated with such disorders. Said preparation is not in all cases safe or harmless, as it contains the drug potassium iodide in quantities sufficient to cause in some instances injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said preparation as aforesaid may be harmful to those having healed lesions of arrested tuberculosis, or goiter. In arrested cases of tuberculosis the tendency of potassium iodide is to dissolve the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such the tuberculous process. The hazard in cases of goiter is the tendency to convert a benign adenoma to a toxic adenoma.

PAR. 6. Further, the advertisements disseminated by the respondent as aforesaid constitute false advertisements for the reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in injury to health, in that said advertisements do not contain any cautionary statement to the effect that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's preparation.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 23, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Kuhn Remedy Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 17, 1940, the Commission issued and on October 18, 1940, served its amended and supplemental complaint herein, on said respondent. On the 9th day of November 1940, the respondent filed its answer to the amended and supplemental complaint, admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended and supplemental complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended and supplemental complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this, its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Kuhn Remedy Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1855 North Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation, formerly described as "Kuhn's Rheumatic Fever Remedy," now known as "Kuhn's Remedy" and intended as a treatment for various ailments of the human body.

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by radio continuities, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

Kuhn's Remedy

You should try to alleviate the pain which causes you so much suffering in joints, muscles and tissues, and avoid the cause if possible, in order to prevent a recurrence of the symptoms. * * * it would be wrong to stop the treatment when a few more bottles of Kuhn's Remedy would have brought complete relief and satisfaction.

B. Anderson of Cuba, N. Y., writes:

It is now 9 years since I got Kuhn's Remedy after being in bed about 9 months * * * After taking the treatment the pains left me and that alone is worth more than every dollar in this world * * *

That is just what Kuhn's Remedy is intended to do, and that is why it should relieve Rheumatic aches and pains or neuralgia. The aches and pains have to go if you want to be free from suffering, so you can work, play and enjoy life. * * *

I WANT TO PROVE THIS TO YOU * * * I don't care how long you have been suffering from these painful conditions.

Kuhn's Remedy is compounded of ingredients that are recognized as being of value in the treatment of Acute Rheumatic-fever and Gout, * * * for Aches and Pains of Rheumatism and Gout. It is also an aid in reducing temperature, caused by Rheumatic Fever.

Many people have had the pains of rheumatism, neuralgia, gout and lumbago for a long time. This might necessitate taking the medicine for a longer period of time—perhaps several weeks. When you have taken a few bottles of Kuhn's Remedy regularly, we feel confident that you will be happy and satisfied and be able to enjoy the privileges that go with good health.

No disease is more pitiless in the misery and distress it brings to the waning years of life than the various forms of Muscular Aches and Pains. * * *

Those still young and middle-aged who are experiencing the touch of this tyrant disease, should lose no time in seeking its relief.

Par. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and other statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said preparation, respondent represents directly or by implication that its said preparation is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, and lumbago, and for muscular and joint aches and pains generally, and that said preparation possesses substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of such ailments and conditions; that said preparation is entirely safe and harmless and may be used without danger of ill effects upon the health of the user.

The use by the respondent of the word "Remedy" in its corporate name and in the designation and description of its said preparation constitutes within itself the false and misleading representation that said preparation is a cure or remedy for the ailments and conditions hereinabove mentioned.

Par. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago. Said preparation is not a cure for muscular or joint aches and pains generally. Said preparation does not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago in excess of affording, in some cases, temporary symptomatic relief from the aches and pains associated with such disorders. Said preparation is not in all cases safe or harmless, as it contains the drug potassium iodide in quantities sufficient to cause in some instances injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said preparation as aforesaid may be harmful to those having healed lesions of arrested tuberculosis, or goiter. In arrested cases of tuberculosis, the tendency of potassium iodide is to dissolve the fibrous tissues about the healed lesions and thereby to reactivate the tuberculous process. The hazard in cases of goiter is the tendency to convert a benign adenoma to a toxic adenoma.

Par. 6. Further, the advertisements disseminated by the respondent as aforesaid constitute false advertisements for the reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in injury to health, in that said advertisements do not contain any cautionary statement to the effect that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof.

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated, as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended and supplemental complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act

It is ordered, That the respondent, Kuhn Remedy Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparation, formerly designated "Kuhn's Rheumatic Fever Remedy" and now known as "Kuhn's Remedy," or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly;

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago; that said preparation is a cure or remedy for muscular or joint aches or pains generally; that said preparation possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of rheumatism, rheumatic fever, gout, neuralgia, or lumbago, in excess of affording temporary symptomatic relief from the aches and pains associated with such disorders; that said preparation is in all cases safe or harmless; or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation should not be used by those having tuberculosis or goiter (provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only a statement that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof, when such label contains a warning to the effect that the preparation should not be used by those having tuberculosis or goiter).

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation should not be used by those having tuberculosis or goiter (provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only a statement that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof, when such label contains a warning to the effect that the preparation should not be used by those having tuberculosis or goiter).

3. Using the word "Remedy" or any other word of similar import or meaning, as part of respondent's corporate or trade name, or to designate, describe, or in any way refer to, such preparation in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of such preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether it intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

BECKER CLOAK COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4295. Complaint, Aug. 30, 1940—Decision, Nov. 29, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacturing, among other things, women's textile fabric coats and other garments, and in selling and distributing said products to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia—

(a) Represented that its said textile fabric garments were made from the peltries of "Persian" lambs, young of Karakul breed of sheep, or were made from wool taken from the young of said breed of sheep, through referring to and designating its said textile fabric women's coats and other garments by name "Duro-Persian" and making use of and displaying said name on tags and labels attached to said garments, and through depiction, along with said words, of sheep or lambs upon some of such tags and labels (upon reverse of which were instructions for care of garment in question, outstanding feature of which was set forth as "beauty and likeness to a fur coat of the same type" with "wearing quality of the fabric * * * not GUARANTEED"), and through use of said designation in advertisements of its said garments in trade journals of interstate circulation, window display cards and other advertising matter, and further describing therein garments in question by use of words "Imported Persian" and by other words and phrases of like import and meaning, including pictorial designs of sheep or lamb, and through use in its said advertisements of large pictorial representations of garments in question which served further to emphasize resemblance thereof to Persian lamb fur;

Facts being textile fabric garments, thus labeled and advertised, were made of rayon and cotton, presence of which was not disclosed, through the twisting of former into a pile about a core of all cotton yarn, with appearance of silky, tightly curled fur, and thus close resemblance to Persian lamb fur, and products in question were not imported either from Persia or elsewhere, but were of domestic manufacture, and, as aforesaid, were not made of the wool of any animal, nor from the fur of Persian lambs obtained from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, as long indicated to consuming public from words "Persian" and "Persian Lamb" in association with coats, cloaks or similar garments for women, and accepted as meaning or indicating peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep originally found in Asia and marketed through Persian traders, and noted for their silky, tightly curled fur, and commanding high prices in the world's marts of trade and commerce, and preferred in coats, capes, or other garments made therefrom among discriminating women throughout the world;

With capacity and tendency, through use of such labels, tags, and advertising matter, to create impression in minds of purchasers and prospective purchasers of such textile fabric garments that same were made in whole or in part from the peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, or from the wool taken from such young, and that the materials from which they were made were imported from Persia, and with effect of confusing, misleading, and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into belief that such representations were true, and, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, thus engendered, of causing and inducing purchase by consuming public of substantial quantities of its said products; and

(b) Placed in the hands of unscrupulous retailers, through furnishing such labels, tags, and advertising material to customers and causing same to be placed upon its said fabric garments for resale to members of purchasing public, means whereby such retailers might deceive and mislead members of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said textile fabric garments, made from rayon and cotton, were made in fact from peltres of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep or from wool taken from such young:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr, for the Commission.

Mr. Moses T. Barrows, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Becker Cloak Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Becker Cloak Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 247 West Thirty-seventh Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing among other things, women's textile fabric coats and other garments, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the conduct of its said business the respondent causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in such fabric coats in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Complaint 31 F. T. C.

Par. 3. The words "Persian" and "Persian Lamb" when applied to, or used in association with, coats, cloaks, or similar garments for women, indicate to the consuming public, and are accepted as meaning or indicating, peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep originally found in Russia and marketed through traders of Persia. Peltries truthfully designated as "Persian" or "Persian Lamb" are noted for their silky, tightly curled fur, and bring high prices in the world's marts of trade and commerce. There is a preference among discriminating women throughout the world for coats, cloaks, capes, or other garments made of "Persian Lamb."

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, in connection with the offering for sale and the sale of its textile fabric garments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers, and to the consuming public, refers to and designates its said textile fabric women's coats and other garments by the name "Duro-Persian." Respondent attaches to said textile fabric garments certain tags and labels, some of which bear upon their face pictorial designs of sheep or lambs and the aforesaid words "Duro-Persian." Respondent also advertises its said textile fabric garments by means of trade journals having interstate circulation, by window display cards and other advertising matter which describe, designate, and refer to said textile fabric garments as "Duro-Persian." Such advertising literature also describes such garments by the use of the words "Imported Persian" and other words and phrases of like import and meaning, including pictorial designs of sheep or lambs.

Par. 5. In addition to the designation above set forth, the aforesaid textile fabric garments as manufactured and sold by respondent are so constructed as to have the appearance of the silky tightly curled and highly prized fur of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, and from their appearance convey the impression and induce the belief among prospective purchasers that they are in fact made from, or are composed of, the peltries of "Persian" lambs, the young of such Karakul sheep or from the wool coming from such lambs. Respondent further employs in connection with the advertising and sale of its said textile fabric garments, large pictorial representations thereof, which serve further to emphasize the resemblance of said textile fabric garments to Persian lamb fur.

Par. 6. In said ways and by said means, as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 hereof, the respondent represents, by the use of the words "Duro-Persian" independently and with the words "Imported Persian" or other words of like import and meaning, and by the use of pictorial designs of sheep or lambs and illustrations of said textile fabric garments, that said textile fabric garments so sold and distributed by it are made from the peltries of "Persian" lambs, the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, or are made from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep.

Respondent, by the use of such labels or tags, as aforesaid, and other advertising matter published and disseminated as hereinabove described, has created and creates the impression in the minds of the purchasers and prospective purchasers of said textile fabric garments thus sold and distributed by respondent that said textile fabric garments are made in whole or in part from the peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep or from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, and that the materials of which they are made are imported from Persia.

Par. 7. In truth and in fact, the textile fabric garments so labeled and advertised by respondent, as aforesaid, are not made from the fur of Persian lambs or any other fur, nor are they made of a genuine fur fabric composed of wool obtained from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, or the wool of any animal. Respondent's said fabric garments are, on the contrary, made of a textile material composed of rayon twisted into a pile about a core of all-cotton yarns having the appearance of silky, tightly curled fur, thus closely resembling Persian lamb fur. Said textile fabric garments, further, are not imported either from Persia or elsewhere, but are of domestic manufacture. Further, the labels, tags, and advertising material employed by respondents, as aforesaid, to describe, designate, or refer to its said products, do not disclose or indicate the presence of rayon and cotton in said textile fabric garments.

Par. 8. The use by respondent of the aforesaid representations employed in the sale of its said products in commerce as hereinabove described has the capacity and tendency to, and does, confuse, mislead, and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that said representations are true, and because of such erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered, has caused and induced, and causes and induces, the purchase by the consuming public of substantial quantities of respondent's said products.

Par. 9. Respondent further, by furnishing said false and misleading labels and tags and advertising material to customers and causing said labels and tags to be placed upon its said fabric garments for resale to members of the purchasing public, places and has placed in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby they may deceive and mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said textile fabric garments, made from rayon and cotton are made, in fact, from the peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep or from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep.

Par. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 30th day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Becker Cloak Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 18, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed for the respondent by its president, Morris Becker, and by W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as to the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, such stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Becker Cloak Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 247 West 37th Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than two years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing among other things, women’s textile fabric coats and other garments, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the conduct of its said business the respondent causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in such fabric coats in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. The words "Persian" and "Persian Lamb" when applied to, or used in association with, coats, cloaks, or similar garments for women, indicate to the consuming public, and are accepted as meaning or indicating, peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep originally found in Russia and marketed through traders of Persia. Peltries truthfully designated as "Persian" or "Persian Lamb" are noted for their silky, tightly curled fur, and bring high prices in the world's marts of trade and commerce. There is a preference among discriminating women throughout the world for coats, cloaks, capes, or other garments made of "Persian Lamb."

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent, in connection with the offering for sale and the sale of its textile fabric garments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers, and to the consuming public, refers to and designates its said textile fabric women's coats and other garments by the name "Duro-Persian." Respondent attaches to said textile fabric garments certain tags and labels, some of which bear upon their face pictorial designs of sheep or lambs and the aforesaid words "Duro-Persian." Respondent also advertises its said textile fabric garments by means of trade journals having interstate circulation, by window display cards and other advertising matter which describe, designate, and refer to said textile fabric garments as "Duro-Persian." Such advertising literature also describes such garments by the use of the words "Imported Persian" and other words and phrases of like import and meaning, including pictorial designs of sheep or lambs.

Par. 5. On the face of the tags referred to in Paragraph Four hereof appears the following printed matter:

ORIGINAL QUALITY
EXCLUSIVE DUR-O-PERSIAN Fashions
U.S. Pat. No. 354097
INSTRUCTIONS ON REVERSE SIDE

On the reverse side of the tags referred to in paragraph 4 hereof appears the following printed matter:

Findings

In order that it may render the maximum of service, the following rules should be observed.

DON'T crush or fold when wet.
DON'T place on radiator or near heat.
RAISE coat when sitting down, as constant crushing may mark this material.

PAR. 6. The material which goes into the textile fabric garments made by respondent is not made by respondent but is purchased by it from another concern. The garments made from said textile fabric and sold by respondent are so constructed as to have the appearance of silky, tightly curled and highly priced fur of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep. By reason of their aforesaid appearance, said textile fabric garments have the capacity and tendency to convey the impression and induce the belief among prospective purchasers that they are in fact made from, or are composed of, the peltries of "Persian" lambs, the young of such Karakul sheep, or from the wool coming from such lambs. Respondent further employs in connection with the advertising and sale of its said textile fabric garments, large pictorial representations thereof, which serve further to emphasize the resemblance of said textile fabric garments to Persian lamb fur.

PAR. 7. In said ways and by said means, as set forth in the three preceding paragraphs hereof, the respondent represents, by the use of the words "Duro-Persian" independently and with the words "Imported Persian" or other words of like import and meaning, and by the use of pictorial designs of sheep or lambs and illustrations of said textile fabric garments, that said textile fabric garments so sold and distributed by it are made from the peltries of "Persian" lambs, the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, or are made from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep.

The use by respondent of the labels and tags, as aforesaid, and other advertising matter published and disseminated as hereinabove described, has the capacity and tendency to create the impression in the minds of purchasers and prospective purchasers of said textile fabric garments thus sold and distributed by respondent that said textile fabric garments are made in whole or in part from the peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep or from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, and that the materials of which they are made are imported from Persia.

PAR. 8. In truth and in fact, the textile fabric garments so labeled and advertised by respondent, as aforesaid, are not made from the fur of Persian lambs or any other fur, nor are they made of a genuine fur fabric composed of wool obtained from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep, or the wool of any animal. Respondent's said fabric garments are, on the contrary, made of a textile material composed of rayon twisted into a pile about a core of all-cotton yarns having the appearance of silky, tightly curled fur, thus closely resembling Persian lamb fur. Said textile fabric garments are not imported either from Persia or elsewhere, but are of domestic manufacture. Further, the labels, tags, and advertising material employed by respondent, as aforesaid, to describe, designate or refer to its said products, do not disclose or indicate the presence of rayon and cotton in said textile fabric garments.

Par. 9. The use by respondent of the aforesaid representations employed in the sale of its said products in commerce as hereinabove described, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, confuse, mislead, and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that said representations are true, and because of such erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered, has caused and induced, and causes and induces, the purchase by the consuming public of substantial quantities of respondent's said products.

Par. 10. Although not heretofore aware of it, respondent now admits that by furnishing the aforesaid labels and tags and advertising material to customers and causing said labels and tags to be placed upon its said fabric garments for resale to members of the purchasing public, it has placed in the hands of unscrupulous retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby they may deceive and mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said textile fabric garments, made from rayon and cotton are made, in fact, from the peltries of the young of the Karakul breed of sheep or from the wool taken from the young of the Karakul breed of sheep.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Becker Cloak Co., Inc., a corporation, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Becker Cloak Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of women's textile fabric garments in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Persian," or any term containing the word "Persian" to designate, describe or in any way refer to, textile fabric garments which simulate Persian lamb peltries in appearance.

2. Representing or implying in any manner that textile fabric garments are made from the peltries of Persian lambs, the young of the Karakul breed of sheep; or representing that such garments are made from wool taken from such lambs, when they are not made from such wool.

3. Representing in any manner that such garments are imported from Persia, or any other foreign country, or are made from imported materials, when they are not in fact so imported or made from imported materials.

4. Using any pictorial design of a sheep or lamb, or of any other wool-bearing animal, in connection with any description of, or reference to, textile fabric garments which are not made from the wool of the animal so depicted.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
In the Matter of

JAMES R. KAYE, TRADING AS THE LO-WELL PENCIL COMPANY AND THE LO-WELL COMPANY

Complaint, Findings, and Order in Regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 26, 1914

Docket 4318. Complaint, Sept. 17, 1940—Decision, Nov. 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale of pencils, carbon paper, and other merchandise, to purchasers in other States, and in also giving or selling premiums to his customers as an inducement for purchasing his products, and including among such premiums, which varied from time to time, various types of merchandise, including, among other things, novelty merchandise, fountain pens, pencil sharpeners, cameras, and electric razors; in offering such different premiums at different periods of time and in engaging in the practice of representing falsely, to induce purchase of pencils and carbon paper or other merchandise sold and distributed by him, quality, material, construction, durability and other characteristics of the various premiums offered to purchasers of his regular merchandise—

(a) Represented, as typical of false statements and representations disseminated by circulars and other printed matter distributed and circulated by him among prospective customers in various States and in the District of Columbia, that certain fountain pens given or sold by him as premiums had points or nibs made of or covered with substance known as "iridium" and were of high quality, and that certain of them had pen points made or covered with substance known as "durium," through such statements or representations as "Genuine Iridium Nibs," "Fine Quality," and "Durium Pointed," facts being points of said pens were not tipped or covered with, or made of, some special alloy or special substance of unusual quality, giving them special writing quality and durability, as implied through use, as aforesaid, of word "Durium," nor tipped or covered with "Tridium," there is no metal or substance known to science or industry as "Durium," and pens in question were not of fine quality but, on the contrary, of a very low, cheap grade; and

(b) Made a practice, as further typical of his methods in connection with operation of his business, of placing in circulars above described pictorial representations purporting to illustrate cameras offered as premiums, facts being cameras sent by him to customers were not of grade and quality pictured in said circulars, but were of inferior grade and quality to, and different from, those illustrated therein, both from standpoint of materials used and workmanship; and

Where said individual, in conducting his said business and in offering pencils or one of his regular items of merchandise—

(c) Made such representations, as further typical of his methods and practices in conducting his said business, in describing such items in circulars above set forth, as "100% first quality in every respect," "New," "Better," "Outwears ordinary pencils," and "New record-breaking price reduction," facts being his said pencils were not in any respect comparable to those of

first quality or grade, selling generally at retail for 5 cents each, but were either second or third grade and of type which ordinarily sells at retail at price of 2½ cents each, his said products, represented as new and better than ordinary pencils, were not new in sense of being a different product from those which had been sold by him and others theretofore, and were no better than others of a similar grade, and would not outwear such other pencils, and his said product, represented as being sold at a new record-breaking price, was in fact being sold at a price higher than that of similar pencils theretofore sold by him;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in the various States into the mistaken and erroneous belief that his said false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations were true, and of inducing members of such public, because of said erroneous belief engendered as above set forth, to purchase substantial quantities of his said products, and with result of diverting unfairly trade to him from his competitors engaged in sale of similar products in commerce, and who do not misrepresent their products but advertise same truthfully and honestly:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. L. E. Creel, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. James W. Bevans, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that James R. Kaye, an individual trading as The Lo-Well Pencil Co. and The Lo-Well Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent James R. Kaye is an individual trading as The Lo-Well Pencil Co. and The Lo-Well Co. with his principal place of business located in the city of New York in the State of New York. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling pencils, carbon paper, and other merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. He causes, and has caused, said merchandise when sold to be shipped from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States other than New York. In the course and conduct of his business respondent has been at all times herein referred to in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce of similar products.
Complaint

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent gives or sells premiums to his customers as an inducement for their purchasing his products. At different periods of time, in promoting the sale of his products, respondent offers as premiums in connection therewith various types of merchandise, including among other novelty merchandise, fountain pens, pencil sharpeners, cameras, and electric razors. Although respondent offers different premiums at different periods of time, he continues to use the same general method in connection with said offering and with respect to the other practices hereinafter described.

PAR. 3. In the course of the operation of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of pencils and carbon paper or other merchandise which he sells and distributes, respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the quality, material, construction, durability, and other characteristics of the various premiums he offers to purchasers of his regular merchandise. Such false statements and representations are disseminated by means of circulars and other printed matter distributed and circulated among prospective customers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among and typical of respondent's false representations as to the quality and material of his said premiums are the following relating to fountain pens appearing in various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid:

Genuine Iridium Nibs
Fine Quality
Durium pointed

In truth and in fact, said points of respondent's fountain pens are not tipped or covered with substances known as Iridium or Durium. Said fountain pens are not of fine quality, but on the contrary are of a very low, cheap grade. The use of the word "Durium" in the representations purporting to describe the points of certain of respondent's fountain pens, as hereinbefore set out, creates the impression or belief that said pen points are made of some special alloy or are tipped with some special substance of unusual quality, giving said points a special writing quality and durability. In truth and in fact, there is no metal or substance known to science or industry as "Durium."

Par. 4. Further typical of respondent's methods in connection with the operation of his business is his practice of placing in the circulars hereinabove described pictorial representations purporting to illustrate cameras which are offered as premiums. The cameras which are, in fact, sent to customers by respondent are not of the grade and quality pictured in said circulars but are of inferior grade and quality to, and different from, those illustrated in the circulars, both from the standpoint of materials used and workmanship.

Par. 5. Further typical of respondent's methods and practices in conducting his said business is his practice of falsely representing to prospective purchasers, in the circulars hereinabove described, the quality of one of his regular items of merchandise, namely, pencils. In describing said product, respondent has made the following representations:

100% first quality in every respect
New
Better
Outwears ordinary pencils
New record-breaking price reduction

In truth and in fact, respondent's pencils are not 100 percent first quality, being either second or third grade, and not in any respect comparable to pencils of first quality. Respondent's said pencils are of the type which ordinarily sells at retail at a price of 2½ cents each, while first grade pencils generally sell at retail for 5 cents each. Respondent's said pencils represented to be "new" and "better" than ordinary pencils are not new in the sense of their being a different product from those which had been sold by respondent and others before said representation was made; they are no better than others of a similar grade and will not outwear other pencils of similar grade. Respondent's further representation that certain of his said pencils are being sold at a new record-breaking price is likewise untrue, said pencils in fact being sold at a higher price than that of similar pencils theretofore sold by the respondent.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true. Because of said erroneous belief engendered as aforesaid, members of the purchasing public have been induced to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products. As a further result of said false and misleading representations, trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors engaged in the sale of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and who do not misrepresent their products but advertise the same truthfully and honestly.
Findings

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Federal Trade Commission on September 17, 1940, issued, and on September 18, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent James R. Kaye charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent James R. Kaye is an individual trading as The Lo-Well Pencil Co. and The Lo-Well Co., with his principal place of business located in the city of New York in the State of New York. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of selling pencils, carbon paper, and other merchandise in commerce among and between the various

States of the United States. He causes, and has caused, said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States other than New York. In the course and conduct of his business respondent has been at all times herein referred to in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the several States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent gives or sells premiums to his customers as an inducement for their purchasing his products. At different periods of time, in promoting the sale of his products, respondent offers as premiums in connection therewith various types of merchandise including, among other novelty merchandise, fountain pens, pencil sharpeners, cameras and electric razors. Although respondent offers different premiums at different periods of time, he continues to use the same general method in connection with said offering and with respect to the other practices hereinafter described.

Par. 3. In the course of the operation of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of pencils and carbon paper or other merchandise which he sells and distributes, respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the quality, material, construction, durability and other characteristics of the various premiums he offers to purchasers of his regular merchandise. Such false statements and representations are disseminated by means of circulars and other printed matter distributed and circulated among prospective customers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among and typical of respondent's false representations as to the quality and material of his said premiums are the following relating to fountain pens appearing in various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid:

Genuine Iridium Nibs
Fine Quality
Durium pointed

In truth and in fact, said points of respondent's fountain pens are not tipped or covered with substances known as Iridium or Durium. Said fountain pens are not of fine quality, but on the contrary are of a very low, cheap grade. The use of the word "Durium" in the representations purporting to describe the points of certain of respondent's fountain pens, as hereinbefore set out, creates the impression or belief that said pen points are made of some special alloy or are tipped with some special substance of unusual quality, giving said points a special writing quality and durability. In truth and in fact, there is no metal or substance known to science or industry as "Durium."

Par. 4. Further typical of respondent's methods in connection with the operation of his business is his practice of placing in the circulars hereinabove described pictorial representations purporting to illustrate cameras which are offered as premiums. The cameras which are, in fact, sent to customers by respondent are not of the grade and quality pictured in said circulars but are of inferior grade and quality to, and different from, those illustrated in the circulars, both from the standpoint of materials used and workmanship.

Par. 5. Further typical of respondents' methods and practices in conducting his said business is his practice of falsely representing to prospective purchasers, in the circulars hereinabove described, the quality of one of his regular items of merchandise, namely, pencils. In describing said product, respondent has made the following representations:

New
Better
New record-breaking price reduction.

In truth and in fact, respondent's pencils are not 100 percent first quality, being either second or third grade, and not in any respect comparable to pencils of first quality. Respondent's said pencils are of the type which ordinarily sells at retail at a price of 2½ cents each, while first grade pencils generally sell at retail for 5 cents each. Respondent's said pencils represented to be "new" and "better" than ordinary pencils are not new in the sense of their being a different product from those which had been sold by respondent and others before said representation was made; they are no better than others of a similar grade and will not outwear other pencils of similar grade. Respondent's further representation that certain of his said pencils are being sold at a new record-breaking price is likewise untrue, said pencils in fact being sold at a higher price than that of similar pencils theretofore sold by the respondent.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true. Because of said erroneous belief engendered as aforesaid, members of the purchasing public have been induced to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products. As a further result of said false and misleading representations, trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors engaged in the sale of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and who do not misrepresent their products but advertise the same truthfully and honestly.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent James R. Kaye, individually and trading as The Lo-Well Pencil Co. and The Lo-Well Co., his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pencils, carbon paper and various types of premiums in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act do forthwith cease and desist from representing in any manner or by any means:
1. That pencils are of first quality unless such pencils are in fact of the kind and quality usually sold at retail as and known as 5-cent pencils.

2. That a line of pencils is new unless there are features about such pencils which distinguish them from pencils which have theretofore been sold by respondent.

3. That a line of pencils is "better" unless such pencils are of a higher quality than those which have theretofore been sold by respondent.

4. That respondent's pencils will outwear ordinary pencils unless such pencils possess wearing qualities greater than those of pencils usually sold at retail as 5-cent pencils.

5. That pencils are being sold at reduced prices unless in fact such pencils are being offered for sale at a price lower than the prices at which they are usually and customarily sold by respondent.

6. That the quality, grade, or material of his products or of the various premiums offered by him are superior to or different from the actual quality, grade, or material of such products or premiums.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

H. STANLEY JONES, H. EDWIN JONES AND MAURICE C. BERKELEY, DOING BUSINESS AS HOWARD E. JONES & CO., KING FOODS COMPANY, BALTIMORE SALES SERVICE COMPANY, BALTIMORE MACARONI COMPANY, AND OCONO COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (C) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4215. Complaint, Aug. 2, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where three individuals engaged as partners and under various trade names, in business of acting as brokers in sale of food products, and particularly canned fruits and vegetables, and also engaged in buying and selling such products for their own account, and in buying, selling, and distributing, in the course of their said businesses, such food products in commerce among the various States, and in causing products purchased by them for their own account to be shipped and transported to them from sellers' various places of business, including, in case of many, those located and doing business in other States, and in causing products sold for their own account to be shipped and transported to their customers located and doing business, in case of many, also in other States—

Received, in course and conduct of their aforesaid business of buying food products for their own account, as above set forth, and trading under various firm names and styles, from numerous sellers, brokerage fees or allowances or discounts in lieu thereof on many of their said own account purchases:

Held, That said individuals, in receiving and accepting brokerage fees or allowances or discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities as above set forth, violated provisions of section 2 (c) of Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. S. G. Churchill, for the Commission.
Allers & Cochran, of Baltimore, Md., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), as amended by an act of Congress, approved June 19, 1936, commonly known as the Robinson-Patman Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have been and are now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of said act as amended, issues its complaint against said respondents and states it charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, H. Stanley Jones, H. Edwin Jones, and Maurice C. Berkeley, are copartners doing business, principally under the firm name and style of Howard E. Jones & Co., but also under the firm names and styles of King Foods Co., Baltimore Sales Service Co., Baltimore Macaroni Co., and Ocono Co. The respondents have their principal office and place of business at 206 South Broadway Street, Baltimore, Md.

Par. 2. Respondents are now engaged and for many years prior hereto have been engaged in the business of acting as brokers in the sale of food products, particularly canned fruits and vegetables, said business having been carried on by them, principally under the firm name and style of Howard E. Jones & Co.

Respondents are also now engaged and for many years prior hereto have been engaged in the business of buying and selling for their own account food products, particularly canned fruits and vegetables, said business having been carried on by them principally under the firm name and style of King Foods Co., but also under the firm names and styles of Howard E. Jones & Co., Baltimore Sales Service Co., Baltimore Macaroni Co., and Ocono Co.

Respondents buy, sell, and distribute said food products aforesaid in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondents cause the products which they purchase for their own account to be shipped and transported to them from the various places of business of those sellers from whom respondents purchase said products, many of such sellers being located and doing business in States other than the State of Maryland. Respondents cause the products which they have sold for their own account to be shipped and transported, pursuant to said sales, to their customers, many of such customers being located and doing business in States other than the State of Maryland.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their business of buying food products for their own account in commerce, as aforesaid, the respondents, trading under the firm names and styles aforesaid, have been and are now receiving and accepting from numerous sellers brokerage fees, or allowances or discounts in lieu thereof, on many of said purchases for their own account.

Par. 4. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936.
Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 2d day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

Said respondents duly filed their answer to said complaint, which answer admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint. Said answer further waives all intervening procedure herein and further hearing as to said facts and also waives the filing of briefs and the presentation of any oral argument. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondents, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondents, H. Stanley Jones, H. Edwin Jones, and Maurice C. Berkeley, are copartners doing business, principally under the firm name and style of Howard E. Jones & Co., but also under the firm names and styles of King Foods Company, Baltimore Sales Service Company, Baltimore Macaroni Company, and Ocono Company. The respondents have their principal office and place of business at 206 South Broadway Street, Baltimore, Md.

Par. 2. Respondents are now engaged and for many years prior hereto have been engaged in the business of acting as brokers in the sale of food products, particularly canned fruits and vegetables, said business having been carried on by them, principally under the firm name and style of Howard E. Jones & Co.

Respondents are also now engaged and for many years prior hereto have been engaged in the business of buying and selling for their own account food products, particularly canned fruits and vegetables, said business having been carried on by them principally under the firm name and style of King Foods Company, but also under the firm
Order

Par. 3. Respondents buy, sell, and distribute said food products mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondents cause the products which they purchase for their own account to be shipped and transported to them from the various places of business of those sellers from whom respondents purchase said products, many of such sellers being located and doing business in States other than the State of Maryland. Respondents cause the products which they have sold for their own account to be shipped and transported, pursuant to said sales, to their customers, many of such customers being located and doing business in States other than the State of Maryland.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business of buying food products for their own account in commerce, as aforesaid, the respondents, trading under the firm names and styles aforesaid, have since June 19, 1936, received from numerous sellers brokerage fees, or allowances or discounts in lieu thereof, on many of said purchases for their own account.

CONCLUSION

In receiving and accepting brokerage fees or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of the respondents, in which answer said respondents admit all of the material allegations of facts set forth in said complaint, and waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered That in the course and conduct of their business of buying food products for their own account in commerce, the respondents, H. Stanley Jones, H. Edwin Jones, and Maurice C. Berkeley, copartners doing business under the firm names and styles of Howard E. Jones & Co., King Foods Co., Baltimore Sales Service Co., Baltimore Macaroni Co., and Ocono Co., or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondents' own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction, or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof, or any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondents' own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondents named in the caption hereof shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

A. FLETCHER SISK, THEODORE E. FLETCHER, AND HAROLD E. STARK, TRADING AS ALBERT W. SISK & SON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914,
AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 10, 1936

Docket 4275. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where three individuals engaged in Maryland as field brokers, in acting as agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers, and as thus engaged in effecting, in some instances, sales of such commodities for sellers through corresponding or local brokers whom they employed to assist them in making such sales, and in effecting, in other instances, sales of such commodities directly to purchasers, and in effecting sales as aforesaid, in either event, to purchasers in States other than that in which respective sellers were located, and in compensating, in those cases in which sales were effected through corresponding or local brokers employed by them, such corresponding or local brokers through a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to them, and amounting to, usually 4 percent of purchase price paid by purchaser for commodities in question—

(a) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts to purchasers in those cases in which they effected, as above set forth, sale of commodities in question directly to purchasers, rather than through the medium of said corresponding or local brokers, as above described:

Held, That said individuals, in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers, as above set forth, violated section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and Where said individuals, engaged in the business of purchasing for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers, such canned fruits and vegetables, from sellers in other States, pursuant to which purchases commodities were shipped and transported by sellers from respective States in which located across State lines, either to them or, pursuant to their instructions and directions, to respective purchasers to whom they had resold such commodities, and from, in many instances, sellers, located in State of Maryland, and who, pursuant to their instructions and directions, caused commodities thus purchased by them to be shipped and transported from said State across State lines to respective purchasers to whom they had resold such commodities—

(b) Received and accepted from sellers, in connection with purchases of such commodities by them for their own account in interstate commerce, as aforesaid set forth, brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts; and
(c) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to purchasers in other States of such commodities purchased by them for their own account, and to which purchasers they had resold, as above set forth, said commodities:

Held, That said individuals, in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, from sellers upon their purchases of commodities, and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, to purchasers upon the resale of commodities, as respectively above set forth, violated section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of subsection (e) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents, A. Fletcher Sisk, Theodore E. Fletcher, and Harold E. Stark, are individuals, trading as Albert W. Sisk & Son, with their principal office and place of business located in Preston, Md. Respondents are engaged in the business of field brokers, acting as agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondents to assist them in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents receive from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondents to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondents in connection with such sales.
In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondents to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, respondents have effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondents are also engaged in the business of purchasing canned vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Maryland pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Maryland, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.
Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which sales respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

Par. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondents upon the purchases of commodities by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondents as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 28th day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission on October 7, 1940. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondents named in the caption hereof, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents, A. Fletcher Sisk, Theodore E. Fletcher, and Harold E. Stark are individuals trading as Albert W. Sisk & Son, with their principal office and place of business located in Preston, Md. Respondents for a number of years have been engaged in the business of field brokers, acting as the agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondents through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondents to assist them in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents have received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondents through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondents for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondents to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondents in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly, a certain percentage usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondents for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondents to such direct purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, the respondents have effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondents to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondents for a number of years have also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Maryland, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which sales the respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.
Order

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondents in the capacities of field brokers, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondents, the respondents A. Fletcher Sisk, Theodore E. Fletcher, and Harold E. Stark, trading under the name Albert W. Sisk & Son, or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondents to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondents to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondents in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondents A. Fletcher Sisk, Theodore E. Fletcher, and Harold E. Stark, trading under the name Albert W. Sisk & Son, or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondents' own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondents' own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondents named in the caption hereof shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4282. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where three individuals, engaged in Pennsylvania in purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account, and in reselling same to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers and, as thus engaged, in making many purchases of such commodities for their own account, for resale as aforesaid, from sellers in other States and pursuant to which such commodities were shipped and transported by such sellers from the respective States in which they were located across State lines either to said individuals, or, pursuant to their instructions and directions to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said individuals, and also in making many purchases of such commodities for their own account as above set forth from sellers located in said State of Pennsylvania by which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from said individuals, commodities thus purchased were shipped and transported from said State across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said individuals—

(a) Received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amount, through usually purchasing commodities in question at prices lower than those at which such commodities were being sold to other purchasers thereof by an amount which reflected all or a portion of the brokerage which was currently being paid by the sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers; and

(b) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to the purchasers of such commodities bought by said individuals for their own account as above set forth, and resold to such purchasers and shipped, pursuant to such resale, to purchasers in question across State lines:

Held, That in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities, and that in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities, as respectively above set forth, said individuals violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.
Montgomery & McCracken, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondents.
The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents Walter W. Thrasher, Willoughby J. Rothrock, Linton A. Thrasher, and Wainwright Churchill are individuals, trading as Thomas Roberts & Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 135 South Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondents are engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account and of reselling the same to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Pennsylvania, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Pennsylvania across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Paragraph 2. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Usually, the receipt and acceptance of the aforesaid allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage is accomplished by respondents by purchasing commodities at prices lower than the prices at which such commodities are sold to other purchasers thereof by an amount which reflects all or a portion of the brokerage currently being paid by the sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers.

Par. 3. Since June 19, 1936, respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which sales respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

Par. 4. The receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondents upon the purchases of commodities by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondents as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 28th day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

On October 8, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondents named in the caption hereof, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents Walter W. Thrasher, Willoughby J.
Rothrock, Linton A. Thrasher, and Wainwright Churchill are individuals trading as Thomas Roberts & Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 135 South Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondents for a number of years have been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account and of reselling the same to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Pennsylvania, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Pennsylvania across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Paragraph 2. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commisions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Usually, the receipt and acceptance of the aforesaid allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage has been accomplished by respondents by purchasing commodities at prices lower than the prices at which such commodities were being sold to other purchasers thereof by an amount which reflected all or a portion of the brokerage which was currently being paid by the sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers.
PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which sales the respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondents Walter W. Thrasher, Willoughby J. Rothrock, Linton A. Thrasher, and Wainwright Churchill, trading under the name Thomas Roberts & Co., or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondents’ own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondents' own account.

It is further ordered, That in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondents, the respondents Walter W. Thrasher, Willoughby J. Rothrock, Linton A. Thrasher, and Wainwright Churchill, trading under the name Thomas Roberts & Co., or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondents to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondents to local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondents in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That the respondents named in the caption hereof shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Docket 4283. Complaint, Aug. 29, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where two individuals engaged in Virginia, as field brokers, in acting as agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers and in effecting, in some instances as thus engaged, sales of such commodities for sellers through corresponding or local brokers employed by them to assist them in making such sales, and in other instances in effecting sales of such commodities for sellers to purchasers directly, and pursuant to which sales, whether effected by said individuals through aid of such corresponding or local brokers, or directly, commodities thus sold were shipped and transported by sellers thereof across State lines to respective purchasers, and as thus engaged, in compensating such corresponding or local brokers in former cases through payments to such brokers of certain percentage, usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to them for services in connection with such sales and usually amounting to 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities—

(a) Granted and allowed, in connection with the sales of such commodities in interstate commerce effected by them for sellers to purchasers directly, brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to such purchasers and amounting, usually, to 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to them for services in connection with such sales, or allowance or discount in lieu thereof:

Held, That in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as above set forth, said individuals violated provisions of Section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said individuals, engaged in business of purchasing canned fruit and vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores and other purchasers, and as thus engaged in making many purchases of such commodities from sellers located in other States and pursuant to which purchases said commodities were shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they were located across State lines, either to said individuals or, pursuant to instructions and directions from them, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said individuals, and in also making many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, by which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from said individuals, commodities thus purchased were caused to be shipped

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents Charles F. Unruh and Robert A. Harris, Jr., are individuals trading as C. F. Unruh Brokerage Co. with their principal office and place of business located in Kinsale, Va. Respondents are engaged in the business of field brokers, acting as agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondents to assist them in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly.

Paragraph 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents receive from sellers a brokerage fee or com-

and transported from said State across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom said commodities had been resold by them;

(b) Received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by said individuals for their own account in interstate commerce as above set forth; and

(c) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to the purchasers of such commodities bought by said individuals for their own account and resold, as aforesaid, to purchasers located in other States and pursuant to which sales they caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers:

Held, That in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, from sellers upon their purchases of commodities, and that in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as respectively above set forth, said individuals violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.
mission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondents to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondents in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondents to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, respondents have effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondents are also engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, have caused the commodities
so purchased by respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

Par. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondents upon the purchases of commodities by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondents as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 20th day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.
On October 8, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the said respondents, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Charles F. Unruh and Robert A. Harris, Jr., are individuals trading as C. F. Unruh Brokerage Co., with their principal office and place of business located in Kinsale, Va. Respondents for a number of years have been engaged in the business of field brokers, acting as the agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondents through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondents to assist them in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly.

PAR. 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents have received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondents through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondents for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondents to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondents in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondents for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondents to such direct purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, the respondents have effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondents to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondents for a number of years have also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondents.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales the respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across States lines to such purchasers.
C. F. Unruh Brokerage Co.

Order

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon their purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commission or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the said respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondents in the capacity of field brokers, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondents, the said respondents Charles F. Unruh and Robert A. Harris, Jr., trading under the name C. F. Unruh Brokerage Co., or any other name, their agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondents to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondents to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondents in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce, the said respondents Charles F. Unruh and Robert A. Harris, Jr., trading under the name C. F. Unruh Brokerage Co., or any other name, their agents, employees and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondents' own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondents' own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondents named in the caption hereof shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in Virginia in acting as field broker, as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores and other purchasers, and in effecting, in some instances, as thus engaged, sales of such commodities for sellers through corresponding or local brokers employed by him to assist him in making such sales, and, in other instances, in effecting sales of such commodities for sellers to purchasers directly, and pursuant to which sales, whether effected by said individual through aid of such corresponding or local brokers, or directly, commodities thus sold were shipped and transported by sellers thereof across state lines to respective purchasers, and, thus engaged, in compensating such corresponding or local brokers in former cases through payments to such brokers of certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to him for services in connection with such sales and usually amounting to 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities—

(a) Granted and allowed, in connection with the sales of such commodities in interstate commerce effected by him for sellers to purchasers directly, brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to such purchasers and amounting usually to 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to him for services in connection with such sales, or allowance or discount in lieu thereof:

Held, That in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers, as above set forth, said individual violated provision of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said individual, engaged in business of purchasing canned fruit and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers and, as thus engaged, in making many purchases of such commodities from sellers located in other states and pursuant to which purchases said commodities were shipped and transported by sellers from the respective states in which they were located across state lines, either to said individual or pursuant to instructions and directions from him, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said individual, and in also making many purchases of such commodities for his own account, as aforesaid, from sellers located in State of Virginia by which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from said individual, commodities thus purchased were caused to be shipped and transported from said State across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom said commodities had been resold by him;

(b) Received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by said individual for his own account in interstate commerce as above set forth; and

(c) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to the purchasers of such commodities bought by said individual for his own account and resold as aforesaid to purchasers located in other States, and pursuant to which sales he caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across state lines to such purchasers:

Held, That in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, from sellers upon his purchases of commodities, and that in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities, as respectively above set forth, said individual violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the party respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Cecil G. Reaburn, is an individual trading as C. G. Reaburn & Co., with his principal office and place of business located in Roanoke, Va. Respondent is engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondent to assist him in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent receives from sellers a brokerage fee or commission usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.
In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondent to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business since June 19, 1936, respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent is also engaged in the business of purchasing canned vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for his own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondent for his own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondent has resold such commodities purchased for his own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

Par. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondent to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondent upon the purchases of commodities by the respondent as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondent to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondent as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 29th day of August 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent named in the caption hereof, charging him with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

On September 27, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Cecil G. Reaburn, is an individual, trading as C. G. Reaburn & Co., with his principal office and place of business located in Roanoke, Va. Respondent for a number of years has been engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as the agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through brokers commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondent to assist him in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

PAR. 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such direct purchasers.
Findings

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business since June 19, 1936, the respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent for a number of years has also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for his own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondent for his own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has resold such commodities purchased for his own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales the respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.
Order

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon his purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 15, 1936 (U. S. C. title 13, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondent in the capacity of a field broker, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondent, the respondent Cecil G. Reaburn, trading under the name C. G. Reaburn & Co., or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondent to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondent to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondent in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondent Cecil G. Reaburn, trading under the name C. G. Reaburn & Co., or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondent’s own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondent’s own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

H. WELDON RUFF, TRADING AS H. M. RUFF & SON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SUBSEC. (C) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914,
AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4292. Complaint, Aug. 30, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where an individual engaged in Pennsylvania as field broker, in acting as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers, and in effecting in some instances, as thus engaged, sales of such commodities for sellers through corresponding or local brokers employed by him to assist him in making such sales, and in other instances in effecting sales of such commodities for sellers to purchasers directly, and pursuant to which sales, whether effected by said individual through aid of such corresponding or local brokers or directly, commodities thus sold were shipped and transported by sellers thereof across State lines to respective purchasers, and as thus engaged, in compensating such corresponding or local brokers in former cases through payments to such brokers of certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to him for services in connection with such sales and usually amounting to 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities—

(a) Granted and allowed, in connection with the sales of such commodities, in interstate commerce effected by him for sellers to purchasers directly, brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to such purchasers and amounting, usually, to 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to him for services in connection with such sales, or allowance or discount in lieu thereof:

Held, That in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as above set forth, said individual violated provision of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said individual, engaged in business of purchasing canned fruit and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers, and as thus engaged in making many purchases of such commodities from sellers located in other States and pursuant to which purchases said commodities were shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they were located across State lines, either to said individual or, pursuant to instructions and directions from him, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said individual, and in also making many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in State of Pennsylvania by which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from said individual, commodities thus purchased were caused to be shipped and transported from said State across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom said commodities had been resold by him;
(b) Received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts in connection with the purchases of such commodities by said individual for his own account in interstate commerce as above set forth; and

(c) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to the purchasers of such commodities bought by said individual for his own account and resold as aforesaid to purchasers located in other States and pursuant to which sales he caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers:

Held, That in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, from sellers upon his purchases of commodities, and that in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as respectively above set forth, said individual violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the party respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent H. Weldon Ruff is an individual trading as H. M. Ruff & Son, with his principal office and place of business located in York, Pa. Respondent is engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondent to assist him in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Paragraph 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent receives from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondent to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business since June 19, 1936, respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent is also engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for his own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Pennsylvania, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Pennsylvania across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.
PAR. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondent for his own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

PAR. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondent has resold such commodities purchased for his own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which sales respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

PAR. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondent to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondent upon the purchases of commodities by the respondent as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by the respondent to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by the respondent as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 30th day of August, 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent named in the caption hereof, charging him with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

On October 2, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent H. Weldon Ruff, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent H. Weldon Ruff is an individual, trading as H. M. Ruff & Son, with his principal office and place of business located in York, Pa. Respondent for a number of years has been engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as the agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondent to assist him in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Paragraph 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such direct purchasers.
Findings

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business since June 19, 1936, the respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

PAR. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

PAR. 5. Respondent for a number of years has also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for his own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Pennsylvania, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Pennsylvania across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

PAR. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondent for his own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

PAR. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has resold such commodities purchased for his own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to which sales the respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon his purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer said respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent H. Weldon Ruff has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondent in the capacity of a field broker, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondent, the respondent H. Weldon Ruff, trading under the name H. M. Ruff & Son, or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondent to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondent to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondent in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondent H. Weldon Ruff, trading under the name H. M. Ruff & Son, or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondent’s own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondent’s own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4298. Complaint, Aug. 30, 1940—Decision, Nov. 30, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in Virginia as field broker, in acting as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers, and in effecting in some instances, as thus engaged, sales of such commodities for sellers through corresponding or local brokers employed by it to assist it in making such sales, and in other instances in effecting sales of such commodities for sellers to purchasers directly, and pursuant to which sales, whether effected by said corporation through aid of such corresponding or local brokers or directly, commodities thus sold were shipped and transported by sellers thereof across state lines to respective purchasers, and as thus engaged, in compensating such corresponding or local brokers in former cases through payments to such brokers of certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to it for services in connection with such sales and usually amounting to 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities—

(a) Granted and allowed, in connection with the sales of such commodities in interstate commerce effected by it for sellers to purchasers directly, brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to such purchasers and amounting, usually, to 50 percent of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to it for services in connection with such sales, or allowance or discount in lieu thereof:

Held, That in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers, as above set forth, said corporation violated provision of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said corporation, engaged in business of purchasing canned fruit and vegetables for its own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers and, as thus engaged, in making many purchases of such commodities from sellers located in other States and pursuant to which purchases said commodities were shipped and transported by sellers from the respective states in which they were located across State lines, either to said corporation or, pursuant to instructions and directions from it, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities had been resold by said corporation, and in also making many purchases of such commodities for its own account as aforesaid from sellers located in State of Virginia, by which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from said corporation, commodities thus purchased were caused to be shipped and transported from said State across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom said commodities had been resold by it;
(b) Received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by said corporation for its own account in Interstate commerce as above set forth; and

(c) Granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, in substantial amounts, to the purchasers of such commodities bought by said corporation for its own account and resold as aforesaid to purchasers located in other States and pursuant to which sales it caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across state lines to such purchasers:

Held, That in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions, or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof, from sellers upon its purchases of commodities, and that in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities, as respectively above set forth, said corporation violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the party respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia with its principal office and place of business located at 119 Norfolk Avenue, Roanoke, Va. Respondent is engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondent to assist it in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent receives from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.
In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondent to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business since June 19, 1936, respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent is also engaged in the business of purchasing canned vegetables for its own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for its own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for its own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondent.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondent for its own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondent has resold such commodities purchased for its own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

Par. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondent to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondent upon the purchases of commodities by the respondent as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondent to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondent as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled “An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes,” approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. ing all intervening procedure and further bearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and answer as aforesaid, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia with its principal office and place of business located at 119 Norfolk Avenue, Roanoke, Va. Respondent for a number of years has been engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as the agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondent to assist it in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such direct purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business since June 19, 1936, the respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent for a number of years has also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for its own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for its own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for its own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Virginia, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Virginia across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchase of such commodities by the respondent for its own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

Par. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has resold such commodities purchased for its own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Virginia, pursuant to which sales the respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon its purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the said respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondent in the capacity of a field broker, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondent, the respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondent to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondent to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondent in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondent’s own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondent’s own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, American Brokerage Co., Inc., shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Mr. John Darsey, for the Commission.

Complaint

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

Paraphraph 1. Respondents, William E. Silver and Francis S. Silver, are individuals, trading as William Silver & Co., with their principal office and place of business located in Aberdeen, Md. Respondents are engaged in the business of field brokers, acting as agents of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who are employed by respondents to assist them in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly.

Par. 2. For services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents receive from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales is granted and allowed by respondents to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondents in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities are effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by
sellers to respondents for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, is granted and allowed by respondents to such purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business since June 19, 1936, respondents have effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by respondents to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondents are also engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for their own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have made many purchases of such commodities for their own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Maryland pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to respondents or, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

Since June 19, 1936, respondents have also made many purchases of such commodities for their own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Maryland, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from respondents, have caused the commodities so purchased by respondents to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland across States lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by respondents.

PAR. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by respondents for their own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, respondents have received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

PAR. 7. Since June 19, 1936, respondents have resold such commodities purchased for their own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which sales respondents have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the resale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, respondents have granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

PAR. 8. The granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; the receipt and acceptance of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers by respondents upon the purchases of commodities by the respondents as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and the granting and allowing of brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof by respondents to purchasers upon the resale of commodities by respondents as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 9th day of October 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

On October 9, 1940, the respondent William E. Silver filed his answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and waiving the filing of briefs and presentation of oral argument. On October 19, 1940, the respondent Francis S. Silver filed a motion to dismiss the complaint insofar as it related to him for the reason that he had not been connected with the business involved in the complaint since June 1, 1936. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, and motion as aforesaid, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent William E. Silver, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, William E. Silver, is an individual, trading as William Silver & Co., with his principal office and place of business located in Aberdeen, Md. Respondent for a number of years has been engaged in the business of a field broker, acting as the agent of sellers in transactions of sale and purchase of canned fruits and vegetables between sellers thereof and jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

In some instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through brokers, commonly known as corresponding or local brokers, who have been employed by the respondent to assist him in making such sales. In other instances sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly.

Para. 2. For the services rendered to sellers in connection with the sale of such commodities in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has received from sellers a brokerage fee or commission, usually 4 percent of the purchase price paid by the purchaser for such commodities.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by the respondent through corresponding or local brokers, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales has been granted and allowed by the respondent... to such corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services rendered to the respondent in connection with such sales.

In the instances where sales of such commodities have been effected for sellers by respondent to purchasers directly, a certain percentage, usually 50 percent, of the brokerage fee or commission paid by the sellers to the respondent for services in connection with such sales, or an allowance or discount in lieu thereof, has been granted and allowed by the respondent to such direct purchasers.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business since June 19, 1936, the respondent has effected sales of such commodities for sellers in each of the manners set forth in paragraph 1 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State in which the respective sellers of such commodities are located, pursuant to which sales such commodities have been shipped and transported by the sellers thereof across State lines to the respective purchasers thereof.

Par. 4. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with sales of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, which sales were effected for sellers by the respondent to purchasers directly as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to such purchasers.

Par. 5. Respondent for a number of years has also been engaged in the business of purchasing canned fruits and vegetables for his own account for resale to jobbers, wholesalers, retail chain stores, and other purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has made many purchases of such commodities for his own account for resale as aforesaid from sellers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which purchases such commodities have been shipped and transported by sellers from the respective States in which they are located across State lines either to the respondent or, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has also made many purchases of such commodities for his own account as aforesaid from sellers located in the State of Maryland, which sellers, pursuant to instructions and directions from the respondent, have caused the commodities so purchased by the respondent to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland across State lines to the respective purchasers to whom such commodities have been resold by the respondent.

Par. 6. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchases of such commodities by the respondent for his own account in interstate commerce as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, the respondent has received and accepted from sellers brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts.

PAR. 7. Since June 19, 1936, the respondent has resold such commodities purchased for his own account as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof to purchasers located in States other than the State of Maryland, pursuant to which sales the respondent has caused such commodities to be shipped and transported across State lines to such purchasers.

Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the sale of such commodities in interstate commerce as aforesaid, the respondent has granted and allowed brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof in substantial amounts to the purchasers of such commodities.

PAR. 8. The Commission finds that the respondent Francis S. Silver, prior to the issuance of complaint herein, dissociated himself from the business in connection with which the practices involved herein are found to have been engaged in.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of commodities from sellers as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof; in receiving and accepting brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof from sellers upon his purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof; and in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers upon the resale of commodities as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent William E. Silver, in which answer said respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and upon the motion to dismiss filed by respondent Francis S. Silver, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent William E. Silver has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That in connection with sales of commodities in interstate commerce effected for sellers by respondent in the capacity of a field broker, and in connection with the resale in interstate commerce of commodities purchased by respondent, the respondent William E. Silver, trading under the name William Silver & Co., or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser in such transactions by selling commodities to any of such purchasers at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondent to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondent to corresponding or local brokers for brokerage services or sales assistance rendered to respondent in effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce the respondent William E. Silver, trading under the name William Silver & Co., or any other name, his agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for respondent's own account at a price or on a basis which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance and discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondent's own account.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondent Francis S. Silver for the reason that it appears that this respondent, prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, dissociated himself from the business in connection with which the practices involved herein were alleged and are found to have been engaged in.

It is further ordered, That the respondent William E. Silver shall, within 30 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

The digests published herewith cover those accepted by the Commission during the period covered by this volume, namely, June 1, 1940, to November 30, 1940, Inclusive. Digests of previous stipulations of this character accepted by the Commission may be found in vols. 10 to 30 of the Commission's decisions.

2 In the interest of brevity there is omitted from the published digests of the published stipulations agreements under which the stipulating respondent or respondents, as the case may be, agree that, should such stipulating respondent or respondents ever resume or indulge in any of the practices, methods, or acts in question, or in event of issuance by Commission of complaint and institution of formal proceedings against respondent, as in the stipulation provided, such stipulation and agreement, if relevant, may be received in such proceedings as evidence of the prior use by the respondent or respondents of the methods, acts, or practices therein referred to.

Louis Fenster & Brother, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from—

(a) Labeling, invoicing, or otherwise designating or referring to coats or other articles made or manufactured from the pelttries of Chinese lamb as “Blk. Pers.,” “Black Persian Caracul;” “Blk. Persian Caracul,” “Blk. Pers. Car.,” or “Krimmer Caracul,” or other use of the words “Persian” or “Krimmer,” either with or without the explanatory clause “Dyed Lamb.”

(b) Representing, directly or inferentially, or placing in the hands of others a means to represent, that coats or other articles made or manufactured from Chinese lamb pelttries are made or manufactured from the pelttries of Persian lambs or Krimmer lambs; or otherwise making representations which convey or tend to convey a misconception as to the character, name, nature, breed or zoological origin of any fur products offered for sale or sold by it. (June 3, 1940.)

2834. Photographic Prints—Special Offer and Price and Nature.—Maurice W. Teplow, sole trader as Hall Gentry Studios, engaged in the making of photographic portraits and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

A “goldtone” print, properly defined, is made by a process which involves the use of small quantities of nitrate gold in the developing solution, such process giving a light brown tint to photographs and imparting a soft appearance to flesh and hair not obtainable by the ordinary sepia process. A print made by the sepia process and then tinted to simulate goldtone is not correctly designated as “goldtone.”

The term “etching” as known to the trade and the public, has no application to photography, as it involves an entirely different process, being produced by the action of acid on a metal plate from which prints are made. Certain photographic prints that have been sometimes referred to as “Photo etchings” are also made by a process different from that used in ordinary photography, being printed through a screen on a rough sensitized paper, making a positive print which is then photographed and another print made on rough paper, whereby a picture is produced which resembles, but is not, an etching. A plain white ground vignette photograph print is not an etching and is misbranded if so designated.

Maurice W. Teplow, in connection with his sale and distribution of photographic prints in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—
(a) Representing in any way that his regular method of sale is a "special offer," or directly or by implication that a special price is offered when the regular price is charged, or that some advantage in quality is offered when there is none; or in any manner whatsoever, that the offer is special or unusual so long as no price reduction or other trade concession is made therewith.

(b) Representing the "regular value" of a photograph customarily sold for $1 to be $5 or any other amount in excess of the price charged; or in any other way, directly or by implication, representing that the various types of photographs and portraits made in his studio or for his account have actual and regular values and customarily sell for sums in excess of the prices actually charged therefor.

(c) Representing, through advertising literature containing the descriptive language "Goldtone Featherweight Oil Colored Print" or terms or expressions of similar import, or in any manner whatever, that sepia print photographs are Goldtones or are Goldtones Oil Colored.

(d) Representing, through advertising literature containing the descriptive language "Black and White Vignette Etching" or terms or expressions of similar import, or in any manner whatever, that ordinary black and white photographs are Vignette Etchings or Etchings of any kind. (June 3, 1940.)

2835. Mattresses—Doctors’ Supervision and Guarantee.—R. C. Heller Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of mattresses and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

R. C. Heller Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Designating mattresses sold by it as "Dr. Marshall Correct Posture Custom Built Mattress" or "Dr. Reed’s Health Rest Mattress"; or representing directly or indirectly through the use of the word "doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or through the use of words of similar import, meaning and effect, or through any other means or device or in any other manner that a mattress sold by it has been designed by, or under the supervision and direction of any doctor.

(b) The use of the word "guaranteed" or the word "guarantee" or any other words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, sale or offering for sale of its products unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (June 3, 1940.)
2836. Cameras—Qualities.—Detrola Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of cameras and radios, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged likewise, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Detrola Corporation, in connection with its sale and distribution of its camera products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing in its advertising or otherwise that its Detrola Candid Camera or other camera having an actual shutter speed of 1/100th of a second has a shutter speed of 1/200th of a second; or in any other way representing the shutter speed of a camera offered for sale and sold by it to be in excess of the speed in point of fact attained. (June 3, 1940.)

2837. Ribbons—Composition and Nature of Manufacture.—Lefton Textile Corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of ribbons in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lefton Textile Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Advertising, branding, labeling, invoicing, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent; as, “Rayon and Silk,” where the rayon predominates.

(b) Using the word “velvet” or other word importing pure silk to describe or designate any fabric or product not composed wholly of silk. If the word “velvet” or similar word be used properly as descriptive of the type of construction only, of a fabric or product containing fiber other than pure silk, then such word, wherever used, shall be immediately accompanied by a word or words clearly naming and disclosing the fiber, fibers or material of which said fabric or product is composed, stated in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent; for example, “Rayon Velvet with Satin Back” for a product composed of a rayon pile or face and a satin back, the rayon content of the product predominating.

(c) Advertising, branding, labeling, invoicing, selling, or offering for sale any ribbons having cut edges and/or made by the adhesion of separate layers of fabric, unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of such process of manufacture is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating such process or method by the use of some generally understood descriptive term or terms; as for example, “cut-edge” to describe ribbons having cut (not woven or selvage) edges, and “pasted-back” to describe ribbons made by the joining of two separate layers of fabric. (June 4, 1940.)

2838. Hosiery—Composition and Nature.—Danville Knitting Mills, Inc., trading also as Master Knit Hosiery Mills, a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of hosiery products, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Danville Knitting Mills, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing by statement or by inference, on its labels, transfers, brands, in its advertising matter or otherwise, that its Master Knit Hose, or any product of similar construction or composition:

(a) Has toes and/or heels of linen or is made with linen toe and/or heel.

(b) Has toe and/or heel of 3-ply construction.

(c) Has reinforced gore of toe and/or heel. (June 4, 1940.)

2840. Hosiery—Domestic as Imported and Manufacture.—Ellis Mills and Marvin T. Reavis, copartners, trading under the firm name of Ellis Hosiery Mills, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of hosiery products in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals, and corporations, likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

English ribbed hose is a distinctive type and quality of hosiery originating in England, manufactured there under a patented process, and imported into the United States where it has long been favorably known and recognized by the trade and the purchasing public. Later, English machines for this type of hosiery were imported into the

United States and are used by some hosiery mills. Similar machines are now also manufactured in America on which hosiery in simulation of the English rib is made for the domestic market. Among a substantial portion of the consuming public there is a preference first for the English made imported product, and secondly for that made on machines imported from England. This has in some cases resulted in a false branding of an American machine product as being made on machines imported from England. Hosiery so stamped has been in demand and often sells more readily than hosiery of even better grade and quality not so stamped.

Ellis Mills and Marvin T. Reavis, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of hosiery products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use, on their transfers, brands or other markings, of the words "Genuine 6 x 3 Rib" as descriptive of hose that is but an imitation of English rib, or the words or legend "Made on machines imported from England"; or representing or characterizing such product in any other way that may import or imply, or the effect of which may be to convey the belief that the same is either of a style and quality known to the trade and public as genuine English rib hose or is manufactured by English made machines. (June 3, 1940.)

2841. Mattresses—Professional Supervision or Indorsement and Guaranteed.—Eagle Mattress Co., Inc., engaged in the business of manufacturing mattresses, among other things, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Eagle Mattress Co., Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its products in commerce, agreed it will cease and desist from the use on labels affixed to its products, or in any other way—

(a) Of the word "doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." or the initials "M. D." either alone or in connection or conjunction with a name or in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said products are made in accordance with the design or under the supervision of a doctor of medicine or physician or that said products contain special or scientific features resulting from medical determination or services.

(b) Of any word or words, statement, or representation which directly asserts or imports or implies that said products are guaranteed or endorsed by a member of the medical profession, that is to say, a doctor of medicine or physician. (June 4, 1940.)
2842. Women's Clothing—Composition, Nondisclosure and Guaranteed.—Kanner Dress Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of women's clothing, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a number of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving. Dress goods described and referred to as "crepe" have been for a long time, and at the present time still are, associated in the public mind with fabrics made of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. The unqualified term "crepe" denotes pure unweighted silk to a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public.

The words "Acetate" and "Celanese," when used either separately or in combination or conjunction with the word "crepe" or other words or phrases of similar import or meaning to designate or describe rayon, are not sufficiently well known and understood by the purchasing and consuming public to inform them that the merchandise so described, designated or referred to is made in whole or in part of a material other than silk, to wit, rayon.

Kanner Dress Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Using the words "Crepe," "French Crepe," "Cinderella Crepe," "Acetate Crepe," "Silk Garments," "Silk Weaves," or any other word importing pure silk, to describe, designate or refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. If the word "Crepe" or similar word be used properly as descriptive of the type of construction only, of a fabric or product made of rayon, then such word, whenever used, shall be immediately accompanied by the word "Rayon," in letters or type equally conspicuous; for example, "Rayon Crepe," "Acetate Rayon Crepe."

(b) Using the words "Acetate," "Celanese," or other trade term, either alone or in combination with any other word or words, as descriptive of the rayon content of garments, fabrics or material, unless such words are immediately accompanied by the word "Rayon" in letters or type of equal conspicuousness; as, "Acetate Rayon," "Celanese Rayon."

(c) Selling or offering for sale any product made of rayon without disclosing clearly and unequivocally in the invoices and labeling and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations thereof, however disseminated or published, that the material of which said product is composed is rayon.

(d) The use of the word "Guaranteed" or any other word or words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, offering for sale or sale of its products, unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (June 5, 1940.)

2843. Fur Garments—Source or Origin and Nondisclosure.—Ritz Thrift Shop, Inc., and Aaron Kaye and June Jacobs, copartners trading as Radio City Thrift Shop, engaged in the sale and distribution of fur garments in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and partnerships and with firms and individuals likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ritz Thrift Shop, Inc., and Aaron Kaye and June Jacobs, copartners, in connection with the sale and distribution of fur garments in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed they will cease and desist from—

(a) Representations which import or imply or the effect of which is to convey or tend to convey the impression or belief to the purchasing public that their second-hand fur garments, or any appreciable proportion thereof, are left with them for sale by society women or the ultra-rich; were purchased from society women, the ultra-rich or estates; or otherwise representing the source of such second-hand garments as other than the true source thereof.

(b) Advertising any special sale of used or second-hand furs or other used goods or merchandise, unless such advertisements clearly and unequivocally indicate that the goods or merchandise so offered for sale are used or second-hand. (June 5, 1940.)

2844. Fur Garments—Nondisclosure.—Jack Barnett Furs, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of fur garments, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Jack Barnett, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from disseminating invoices or other descriptive literature which fails to disclose clearly and unequivocally that the garments designated or described therein are manufactured from dyed furs or peltries. (June 5, 1940.)

2845. Fabrics and Cloth—Composition.—H. M. Kolbe Co., Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of woven fabrics or cloth in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

H. M. Kolbe Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from the use of the descriptive designations “Part Linen,” “Part Linen Suitings,” or “A Part Linen Fabric,” for its Sagamore suitings or any other cloth or fabric of similar composition; and from naming or in any way featuring, in its sales promotional representations, on its brands, labels or otherwise, a minor constituent fiber of a mixed fabric offered for sale and sold by it without first naming also, as part of such descriptive statement and with equal conspicuousness, the major constituent fibers, all in the order of their predominance by weight; for example, “Cotton and Linen.” (June 6, 1940.)

2846. Linens, Laces, Etc.—Quality and Source or Origin.—The Esther Shop, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of linens, laces, and other related goods, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True Tuscany Lace, as known to the trade and the public, is a handmade filet lace of grape design produced from linen thread in the Tuscany district of Italy. A lace not made in Tuscany and of linen, which is designated “Tuscany Lace” is a misbranded product.

The Esther Shop, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “Fine Tuscany,” “Hand-Made Tuscany,” or words of similar import as descriptive of laces or other articles sold by it which are not in fact true Tuscany lace actually made in Tuscany of linen thread; or in any way, by assertion or inference, misrepresenting the type, quality or origin of an article of merchandise offered for sale. (June 6, 1940.)

2847. Linens, Laces, Etc.—Quality, Source or Origin and Guaranteed.—Esther Beyda, sole trader under the style and name of Beyda’s Linen Shop, engaged in the sale and distribution of linens, laces, and infants’ and children’s wear in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
True Tuscany Lace, as known to the trade and the public, is a hand-made filet lace of grape design produced from linen thread in the Tuscany district of Italy. A lace not made in Tuscany and of linen which is designated "Tuscany Lace" is a misbranded product.

Esther Beyda, individually and trading as Beyda's Linen Shop or otherwise, in connection with her sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) The use of the words "Tuscany Lace," "Guaranteed Hand-made Tuscany Lace," "Tuscany Lace Cloth," or words of similar import, either with or without the explanation "Made in China," as descriptive of laces or other articles sold by her which are not in fact true Tuscany Lace actually made in Tuscany of linen thread; or in any way, by assertion or inference, misrepresenting the type, quality, or origin of an article of merchandise offered for sale.

(b) The use of the word "Guaranteed" or any other word or words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, offering for sale or sale of her merchandise unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (June 6, 1940.)

2848. Hosiery—Composition.—Evenknit Hosiery Mills, a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of hosiery and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

In the stocking industry, the word "Crepe" is understood by the trade and the purchasing public to mean a thin fabric of silk fiber (unless otherwise specified) of a distinctive type of construction. Hosiery in order to be properly designated as "crepe" should, according to manufacturing standards, be constructed in the body (or boot) of yarn which in the total of the turns in both the initial and final twists is at least 80 turns per inch for three-thread and 60 turns per inch for four-thread.

Evenknit Hosiery Mills, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the designations "Genuine Crepe" or "Crepe" as descriptive of a hose or other product which, due to its construction, cannot be properly labeled "Crepe," that is to say, where such product is knitted of threads having a total number of twists or turns less than the minimum total number understood by the trade and the public as crepe construction; or in any other particular, wherein said product does not meet the specifications entitling it to be properly designated as crepe.

(b) Advertising, branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent. (June 4, 1940.)

2849. Hosiery—Composition and Nature.—Vermont Hosiery & Machinery Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing hosiery and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Vermont Hosiery & Machinery Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its hosiery in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the phrase “100% Virgin Wool Face” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words as descriptive of such hosiery, the face of which is not in fact composed wholly of virgin wool; and from the use of the words “Wool Face” in any way so as to import or imply that hosiery so described is faced throughout with such wool. If parts of said hosiery, as the top, leg and sole thereof, are faced with wool, but the heel and toe of the hosiery are not so faced, and the words “Wool Face” are used to properly describe the facing of the top, leg and sole of the hosiery, then in that case, the words “Wool Face” shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that said hosiery is not faced throughout with wool or so as to indicate clearly that the heel and toe of the hosiery are not so faced. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “Lisle” as descriptive of the lining of hosiery which is not in fact lined with lisle, as that term is generally understood and recognized to mean. Said corporation further agrees to cease and desist from the use of the hyphenated words “Shrink-less” or of any other word or words of similar implication as descriptive of hosiery, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said hosiery is proof against shrinkage, that is to say, will not shrink when laundered in the usual or customary manner. (June 10, 1940.)

2850. Feather Quilts and Comforters—Special or Limited Offers.—One Daiber, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of feather quilts and comforters, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

One Daiber, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing in any way, by the use of statements such as "Pre-season Clearance," "Big Seasonal Reduction," "How I can Save Money on Pre-season Sale," or otherwise, that its regular method of sale is a special offer; or directly or inferentially, that a special price is offered when the regular price is charged, or that some advantage in quality is offered when there is none; or in any other manner whatsoever that the offer is special or unusual so long as no price reduction or other trade concession is made therewith.

(b) Representing by the use of statements such as "While They Last," "Prompt Action Will Save You 40%" or in any other way that an offer or purported offer is open for a limited time so long as any orders received after the expiration of the time limitation, implied or otherwise, are accepted and filed; or that diligence in accepting the offer will save the purchaser 40 percent or any other percentage or proportion of the price of such merchandise. (June 11, 1940.)

2851. Rugs—Source or Origin, Quality and Guaranteed.—The John Shillito Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True Oriental rugs are made in Asia and have for many years been well-known to the purchasing public as possessing certain characteristics in that they are hand-woven or hand-knotted of colored woolen or silk yarn (with warps of cotton sometimes added), featured by distinctive texture, workmanship, and design, and by the fact that the pattern and colors appear on the back side as well as the front.

A "reproduction" is a counterpart or reconstruction of something else. Designations "Persian Reproduction" or "Oriental Reproduction," as applied to rugs simulating or copying the design or pattern only of Persian or Oriental rugs are misleading in that they connote all the essential structure and properties of a genuine Oriental rug and imply that it possesses the special fibers and the almost universally known superior wearing and appearance qualities thereof.

The John Shillito Co., in connection with its sale and distribution of rugs or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the words "Chinese," "Persian," "Oriental," "Kashmir," "Mandalays," "Bagdad," "Baristan," "Persiatana," "India," or other distinctively Oriental names as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact made in the countries or localities designated with all the essential characteristics and qualities of such rugs.

(b) The use of the words "Persian Reproduction," "Oriental Reproductions" or other use of the word "Reproduction" or of any similar word which imports that the article to which such word applies is a replica or duplicate of an original, as descriptive of rugs which are not in fact reproductions of the types named, to wit, true counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(c) The use of the words "Persian," "Chinese," "Oriental," "Kashmir," "Mandalays," "Bagdad," "Baristant," "Persiatana," "India," or other distinctively Oriental appellation in connection with any rug which does not contain all the inherent qualities and properties of such Oriental rug; unless, if properly used to describe the design or pattern only thereof, such word or words of Oriental appellation shall be immediately accompanied by a word such as "Design" or "Pattern" printed in type equally conspicuous, so as to indicate clearly that only the form delineated on the surface of the rug is a likeness of the type named; for example, "Persian Design," "Chinese Pattern."

(d) The use of the word "guaranteed" or any other words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, sale, or offering for sale of its products unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (June 11, 1940.)

2852. Dresses—Quality and Value.—Kallman & Morris, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of women's dresses, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Kallman & Morris, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:
(a) The use of the words “Reproduced by Kalmour” or other use of the word “reproduced” or of any word which imports that the article to which such appellation applies is a replica or duplicate of an original, as descriptive of dresses which are not in fact reproductions of the types named, to wit, true counterparts or reconstructions thereof in all particulars.

(b) Using, or placing in the hands of others the means to use pictorial or other representations of dresses which do not accurately or definitely depict the garments offered for sale; or otherwise representing such garments in any way which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief to the purchasing public that said dresses are of a value greater than is indicated by the prices charged therefor, or that dresses actually sold or offered for sale are identical with or of a quality equal to the garments so depicted. (June 17, 1940.)

2353. Clothing and Dry Goods—Composition and Nondisclosure.—Frank & Seder, a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of clothing and dry goods in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and within individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

In the trade and with the purchasing public, the unqualified word “silk” as descriptive of a fabric or garment connotes that the fiber content thereof is silk exclusively without any metallic weighting whatsoever.

Frank & Seder, in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the term “all wool” or representations of similar import or meaning as descriptive of a suit or garment which is not in fact composed entirely of wool; or deceptively concealing the true fiber content or failing to make full and nondeceptive disclosures in its advertising and labels or other trade indicia, of the fiber content of articles purporting to be wool, such fibers to be stated in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent; as “Rayon and Wool.” In a case of named fibers which are present in less than a substantial amount the percentage thereof shall be given.

(b) Advertising, branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than 5 percent.

c) Selling or offering for sale any silk or silk product, or designating the same by the unqualified terms "silk" or "silk crepe," which contains any metallic weighting without full and nondeceptive disclosure of the presence of such metallic weighting, together with the proportion or percentage thereof, designated in the labels, tags, or brands attached to the merchandise and in the invoices and all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions, or representations, however disseminated or published. (June 17, 1940.)

2854. Cylinder Locks and Padlocks—Qualities.—Chicago Lock Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing cylinder locks and padlocks and in the sale of said products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Chicago Lock Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from—

(a) Representing, designating, or referring to its said lock as "Thief-Proof," and from the use of the said hyphenated words or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the lock thus referred to is proof against the acts of thieves or will withstand indefinitely all attempts to defeat it through the keyhole by picking, or through the use of special keys or tools or other devices.

(b) The use of the phrase "defies duplication," as descriptive of the lock key so as to import or imply that said key will completely withstand duplication, when in fact such duplication, though it may be difficult, is not impossible. (June 17, 1940.)

2855. Home Permanent Wave Outfit—Qualities, Free, Business Status and Manufacturers.—Sally Lindner, Sybil Moses, and Jean Tanner are copartners, trading under the firm name and style "The Mollin Co." engaged for more than 1 year last past in the business of selling a so-called home permanent wave outfit under the trade name "Glamour Permanent Wave" in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Sally Lindner, Sybil Moses, and Jean Tanner, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, sale or distribution of their wave outfits in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed, and each of them agreed, to forthwith cease and desist.

1. From stating or representing that a so-called permanent wave may be accomplished by the use of their outfit which will last for 6 months in every instance or regardless of the type or kind of hair treated.

2. From the use of the phrase "reconditions the hair" or of any other phrase or statement of similar implication, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the use of said outfit will restore old, worn, or faded hair to its original condition.

3. From the use of the word "free" as descriptive of their shampoo and waveset, when in fact said items are not given free or as a gratuity, but are, in fact, a part of the outfit and their cost is included in the price for which the outfit is sold in the usual course of business.

4. From the use on the box container of the outfit or in any other way of either the words "New York" or the word "Hollywood" in connection with the words "Milady Hair Specialist" or otherwise, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said copartners are engaged in business as hair specialists at either of the said localities or that they have an office or place of business in said cities or either thereof.

5. From the use of the words "Manufacturers" or of any other word of similar import, when in fact, the said copartners do not make or manufacture the items of which their wavesets are composed; and from the use of the said word in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said copartners actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said items are made or manufactured. (June 19, 1940.)

2856. Wood Stain—Nature, Results, Qualities, Etc.—The C. A. Mauk Lumber Co., a corporation, engaged in the distribution of lumber and shingles and also wood stain bearing the trade designation "Meta-Kote" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The C. A. Mauk Lumber Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said Act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that "Meta-Kote" or any product of similar composition:
(a) Is a metal, or a liquid metal coating, or a metal in liquid form.

(b) Forms a solid film of metal, or an armor of metal protection, or a tough, dense armor of rust-proof metal, or a metallic finish for old, worn-out shingles or any other surface.

(c) Provides an “impenetrable shield” to the attacks of time or the elements, or is an effective coating for years, almost indefinitely or for any period of time in excess of that for which comparable shingle stains on the market afford such protection.

(d) Brings beauty to the home that lasts through generations or for any other exaggerated or unreasonable extent of time.

(e) Has not the slightest resemblance to paint, stain or varnish or otherwise, that it is not in fact a stain colored with pigment and having a varnish-like vehicle. (June 20, 1940.)

2857. Wallpapers—Qualities.—Spiegel, Inc., a corporation, engaged as a mail order house in the sale and distribution of numerous products, including wallpapers, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Spiegel, Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its wallpapers in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist:

1. From the use of the word “washable” as descriptive of those of its products which are not in fact washable without resultant discoloration or damage thereto, and from the use of the word “washable” in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the products so represented or referred to can be washed when in fact such washing results in the discoloration of or damage to said products.

2. From the use of the word “color-fast” or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication as descriptive of said products, the color or colors of which are not in fact unfadable, and from the use of said word in any way so as to import or imply that the color or colors of the products thus referred to will not fade, change, or be altered when exposed to light. (June 24, 1940.)

2858. Barometers or Other Instruments—Domestic and Source or Origin.—Max Bauer, sole trader as Bauer Thermometer Co., engaged in the importation and sale and distribution of weather recording instruments in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
A substantial portion of the buying public prefers merchandise of domestic manufacture, and the tariff laws of the United States provide that every article of foreign origin (or its container) imported into the United States shall be marked in a conspicuous place as legibly, indelibly and prominently as the nature of the article (or container) will permit, in such manner as to indicate to an ultimate purchaser in the United States the English name of the country of origin of the article. An article of foreign origin imported into the United States, though enclosed in a frame of domestic manufacture, and marked or labeled “Made in U. S. A.” is misbranded.

Max Bauer, in connection with his offering for sale, sale, and distribution of barometers or other instruments having movements or mechanisms of foreign origin, in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing, by the use of the term “Made in U. S. A.,” or any other term indicative of American manufacture, that said barometers or other instruments are wholly of American manufacture,

(b) Causing the brands or marks on imported barometer movements or other parts, or on similar products, which indicated the foreign origin or manufacture thereof, to be removed, erased or concealed so as to mislead or deceive ultimate purchasers with reference to the foreign origin or manufacture thereof, unless the removal or erasure or concealment of said brands or marks is necessary to the further manufacture or processing of said products. (June 24, 1940.)

2859. Neckwear—Nature and Composition.—J. Schneier Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing neckwear, gentlemen’s ties, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

J. Schneier Co., Inc., in connection with the advertisements, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist—

(a) From the use of the words “Hand Loom” as descriptive of products manufactured from material not made on hand looms; and from the use of the words “Hand Loom” either alone or in connection with the word “Reproductions” or with any other word or words or in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products to which such words refer are made of hand-loomed material.

(b) From the use of the words “All Wool” as descriptive of products which are not composed wholly of wool; and from the use of the word "Wool" either alone or in connection with the word "All" or with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that the products thus referred to are composed wholly of wool, when in fact they are not so composed. If the products are composed in substantial part of wool and in part of a fiber or fibers other than wool, and the word "wool" is used to properly describe such wool content, then in that case, the word "wool" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type and which accurately describes each other constituent fiber or material of which the products are composed in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

(c) From labeling, invoicing, or advertising in any way products composed of rayon in part without clearly and unequivocally disclosing the fact that the products are composed in part of rayon together with other named constituent fibers, each of such fibers to be named in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent. (June 24, 1940.)

2860. Silk Preservative Compound—Qualities and Manufacturer.—John W. Daniels, an individual, trading as Charme Manufacturing Co., engaged in the business of selling an alleged silk preservative compound under the trade name "Charme" in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

John W. Daniels, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his "Charme" preparation in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith:

1. From stating or representing on the containers of said preparation or in advertising the same or in any other way that runs or snags in silk hosiery or lingerie are prevented by the use thereon of said preparation, or that the use of said preparation will strengthen the heels and toes of silk hosiery, improve the resistance of all colors to washing, or have the effect of deodorizing silk hosiery or lingerie.

2. From the use of the letters "MFG," as part of his trade name, and from the use of the said letters or the word "Manufacturing" or of any other letters, word, or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said John W. Daniels makes or manufactures the preparation sold by him or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said preparation is made or manufactured. (June 24, 1940.)
2861. Chinaware and Earthenware—Nature.—Maddock & Miller, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the wholesale distribution of chinaware and earthenware products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

There are two general classifications of tableware and hotelware, namely, vitrified or chinaware, and semivitrified or earthenware. Although it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between these two wares, the chinaware generally has a more glossy surface, is slightly translucent and is not absorbent, whereas the semivitrified or earthenware is more or less absorbent and is not usually translucent. In the trade the word “vitrified” is associated with chinaware, and the term “semivitrified” or the term “semi-vitreous” with earthenware. As chinaware is a product of considerable superiority, both in appearance and in quality, the use of the word “vitrified” as descriptive of an earthenware product is not warranted in that it imports or implies to a substantial portion of the trade and the public that the article so branded or referred to is chinaware.

Maddock & Miller, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed it will cease and desist from branding, labeling, invoicing, or otherwise designating earthenware products or products other than true chinaware as “Maddock's Vitrified Hotelware,” “Vitrified Blue Willow,” or “Vitrified Wakefield;” and from the use of the word “Vitrified” or similar descriptive designations as applied to semivitrified products in any manner having the capacity, tendency, or effect of conveying the impression or belief that such product is chinaware as understood by the trade and the public. (June 24, 1940.)

2862. Fabric Garments—Composition.—Julius Nelson Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of fabric garments in interstate commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships, likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Julius Nelson Corporation, in connection with its sale and distribution of wearing apparel or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist:

(a) The use of the term “Fur-Fabric” as descriptive of garments manufactured from fabrics composed of wool, cotton, or any fibers other than fur; and from the use of the word “fur” or of any other term, designation, or representation either alone or in connection with the word “fabric” or other word, so as to import or imply or the effect of which may be to convey the belief or impression to the purchasing public that such garments are made or manufactured from the fur or peltres of fur bearing animals or are composed of a fabric made of fur.

(b) Advertising, selling, or distributing garments composed of fibers other than fur under any representations or conditions of deceptive concealment whereby purchasers or the consuming public are or may be misled into buying such garments in the belief that they are composed of fur. (June 24, 1940.)

2863. Abdominal Support—Qualities.—United States Truss Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a device, known as "Richfal Abdominal Support," in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

United States Truss Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its so-called “Richfal Abdominal Support” in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist forthwith from the use of any statement or representation which directly asserts or imports or implies that the use of said device will have the effect of causing the user to “reduce without exercise” or will enable him or her to “keep thin without dieting” or will otherwise result in the loss of excess fat by the user thereof. (June 24, 1940.)

2864. Diamonds and Diamond Rings—Government Standards Conformearce.—Schless-Harwood Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the wholesale distribution of diamonds in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Schless-Harwood Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that the diamonds and diamond rings or other articles of commerce offered for sale and sold by it are perfect “in accordance with the required standards of the Federal Trade Commission,” or that they meet or conform to the “Federal Trade Commission Standard”; and from the use of the name “Federal Trade Commission” in its advertising, on its labels, tags, or in any other way which may import or imply that the Federal Trade Commission has examined and approved the articles designated. (June 26, 1940.)
2865. Paper Products—Manufacturer.—Merchants Paper Corporation, a corporation, engaged as a jobber in the sale and distribution of a general line of paper products, including corrugated paper boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Merchants Paper Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its commodities or merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word "Manufacturers" as descriptive of its business; or the use of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that it makes or manufactures commodities sold by it or that it actually owns or operates, or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which such commodities are made or manufactured.

(b) Stamping, branding, or otherwise marking a certificate or any form of certification as "box maker" on boxes or containers not actually made by it; or otherwise, by assertion or implication representing that it is the manufacturer thereof, or that any statement bearing the name of said corporation is the certified statement of the maker of such box or container. (June 26, 1940.)

2866. Baby Shoes—Professional Supervision.—Harry L. Katzman, an individual, engaged in the sale of baby shoes in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry L. Katzman, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use, in marking, branding, labeling, or otherwise designating or referring to his said products, of the words "Dr. Katzman Health Shoes" or the word "Health" in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said products are made in accordance with the design or under the supervision of a physician or doctor of medicine or that they contain special scientific, health, or orthopedic features resulting from medical determination or services. (June 25, 1940.)

2867. Soaps and Toilet Goods—Qualities, Results, Unique, Comparative Merits, Composition, Indorsements, and Testimonials, Etc.—Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., a Delaware corporation, and Kirkman & Son, Inc., a Delaware corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of soaps and toilet goods in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged,
entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. and Kirkman & Son, Inc., and each of them, agreed that in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce as defined by said act, they will cease and desist from representing, directly or otherwise, by assertion or by implication:

(a) That Palmolive Soap contains special protective qualities all its own or not present in any other soap or soaps.
(b) That such soap “protects” the skin against the loss of natural or “youth giving” oils, or has a “protective” lather.
(c) That the use of Palmolive Soap will keep the skin young or prevent “middle age” skin; or that it is efficacious in retarding the natural aging of the skin.
(d) That Palmolive Soap “thoroughly” cleanses the pores or gently removes “every trace” of dirt and cosmetics.
(e) That removal of dirt and cosmetics from the pores by the use of Palmolive Soap will enable the skin to breathe; or by statement or inference that breathing or respiration is a function of the human skin.
(f) That the “natural” or “youth” oils or the fatty secretions from the sebaceous glands “feed” or “nourish” the skin; or that Palmolive Soap assists in any way toward the nourishment of the skin.
(g) That Palmolive Soap is “unique” or “utterly unlike” any other soap, or that it is essentially different from various other soaps on the market.
(h) That Palmolive Soap was or is the “only” soap gentle enough or sufficiently pure, soothing, mild, or safe for use by the Dionne Quintuplets; or that no other soap made is as pure, soothing, mild, or safe.
(i) That the “soft, smooth complexions” of the Dionne Quintuplets are directly the result of or wholly attributable to Palmolive Soap.
(j) By oral or written statements or by depictions or illustrations, that Palmolive Soap is composed wholly or in part of edible olive oil or of the grade of olive oil used for bathing new-born babies.
(k) By the use of the unqualified statement “Made with olive oil” as descriptive of Palmolive Soap, Palmolive Shave Cream, or Palmolive Brushless Shave Cream; or by representations of like import, that the oil or fat content of such products is wholly or predominantly olive oil.
(l) That persons purporting to be authorities, who have not professionally used and actually approved Palmolive Soap or other products, and whose names appear on published testimonial letters or endorsements thereof, have inferentially or otherwise based such testimonials or opinions upon their own professional experience, use, and controlled laboratory tests.

(m) By the use of appellations such as "Beauty Specialists" that persons purporting, in testimonials, endorsements, or otherwise to make scientific statements regarding the skin are experts adequately equipped and qualified to render such opinion unless they actually are accredited skin specialists or dermatologists.

(n) That Cashmere Bouquet soap or the lather thereof will remove "every bit" of dirt and cosmetics from every pore; or in any other way asserting or implying that such soap or lather removes all dirt and cosmetics whatsoever from the pores.

(o) That Cashmere Bouquet soap will cause or is capable of causing the skin to become alluring, clear, or smooth in cases where such results will not be achieved by cleansing the skin.

(p) That the product Concentrated Super Suds destroys or removes all germs, dangerous and otherwise, that "lurk in every family wash" or are present in wearing apparel or other washable fabrics.

(q) That Concentrated Super Suds is the only soap which has the capacity to protect the family health from being endangered by germs depicted in accompanying microphotographs or referred to in such statements as "the above microphotos show some of the dangerous germs which Mrs. Robinson saw through the microscope—germs that were actually found in her wash," "millions of germs are present in all family washes," and "dangerous germs that unless removed, may spread serious infection."

(r) That clothing or other fabrics washed in a solution of Concentrated Super Suds and water at a temperature ordinarily used for home laundering, will be "Hospital Clean"; or otherwise, that such articles will be effectively sterilized or as germ-free as by hospital sterilization methods.

(s) That dishes washed with the product "Super Suds" require no wiping but will dry clean with no soap film adhering thereto; or that dishes washed with Super Suds require no wiping, rinsing, scalding, or other operation subsequent to washing, for the purpose of removing soap or other residue therefrom.

(t) That Super Suds "protects your hands," or that such preparation contains any special ingredient that shields or preserves the skin.

(u) Unqualifiedly that the use of Colgate Rapid-Shave Cream will obviate the necessity for shaving twice daily; that the use of such product or of Palmolive Shave Creams results in faster or smoother shaves than are obtainable with comparable shaving preparations.

(v) That Palmolive shave creams make the skin either healthier, firmer, or younger; or that such preparations have therapeutic or nutritional properties affecting the skin structure.

(w) That "Most bad breath begins with the teeth," or that bad breath in most cases is due to or caused by improperly cleaned teeth; or that "A safe, sure way to correct bad breath is through regular use of the thorough, cleansing action provided only by the special ingredients in Colgate's Dental Cream"; or that the action of said preparation is certain and unfailing in removing bad breath or that it "corrects" the condition regardless of cause; or that "only" Colgate Dental Cream can accomplish the things claimed for it; or that such product contains "special" or "unique" ingredients for combating bad breath or for cleansing purposes not to be found in any other dentifrice.

(x) That the foam produced by Colgate Dental Cream removes "all" decaying food deposits lodged between the teeth or in the mouth; or that the use of such product will prevent tooth decay or dental caries.

(y) That "every dentist knows" that mucin plaques harden into tartar; or otherwise, that such is the unanimous opinion of the dental profession.

(z) That "Kirkman Soap Flakes keep your hands soft and white," or that such flakes "Do my hands more good than a flossy manicure"; or will soak dirt out of fabrics without rubbing or some mechanical or manual action; or that lingerie or other textiles washed with such product will keep their brand new appearance almost forever. (June 26, 1940.)

2868. Men's Shirts—Quality and Nature of Manufacture.—Atlas Shirt Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing men's shirts and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Atlas Shirt Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from—

1. Stating or representing that the material used in the making of said products, or any part or parts thereof, has a tested strength far in excess of Government specifications for aeroplane cloth, and from the use of any statement or representation which either directly asserts or imports or implies that the tensile strength of the cloth of which said products or parts thereof are made is in excess of that of the cloth used in the manufacture of airplanes by the Federal Government or any of its departments or that the cloth used by the said corporation in the manufacture of its products is of greater tensile strength than is actually the fact.

2. The use of the term "Full Shrunk" or the statement "Will Not Shrink" or of any other word, words, or statement of similar implication as descriptive of said products which are not in fact proof against shrinkage. If, however, the products have undergone the application of a shrinking process and have been shrunk to a substantial extent but as to which there remains a certain amount of residual shrinkage, and the word "Shrunk," "Preshrunk," or term or word of like effect or similar import is used as descriptive of such products, then in that case, the said term or word shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to clearly and unequivocably indicate the fact that there still remains an amount of residual shrinkage, as for example:

(a) "Preshrunk (or shrunk)—will not shrink more than —% under Commercial Standard CS59-36."

(b) "Preshrunk (or shrunk)—residual shrinkage will not exceed —% under Commercial Standard CS59-36."

(c) "Preshrunk (or shrunk)—residual shrinkage will not exceed warp—%, filling—of, Commercial Standard CS59-36."

(d) "These goods have been shrunk (or preshrunk) to the extent that residual shrinkage will not exceed —% when tested in accordance with the recognized and approved standards or tests." (June 26, 1940.)

2869. Household Material Cleaner—Qualities.—General Household Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing a solvent known as "Cali-Foam" for use in the cleaning of upholstery furniture, drapes, rugs, and other household materials, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

General Household Corporation in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing in its advertisements or on its labels or in any other way—

(a) That its product is a moth preventive or will prevent moths, or that it is a deodorant or will deodordize in the sense that it destroys offensive odors of other substances.

(b) That the use of said product "will not ring" or result in the formation of a "ring" when it is applied only to a spot to be cleaned or removed, or that the “most inexperienced” or unskilled person can successfully apply the product to fabrics without a resultant “ring” formation. (June 28, 1940.)

2870. Basic Slag—Comparative Merits, Indorsements, Qualities, Results, Economy, Etc.—Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of iron and steel, including a byproduct known as Basic Slag, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing directly or otherwise:

(a) That the Basic Slag which it offers for sale and sells is always as good as superphosphate and frequently better or serves as well as acid phosphate for fertilizing purposes; or that the lime content of its Basic Slag makes it superior to superphosphate for winter legumes or other products.

(b) Inferentially or otherwise, that quotations from Professor M. J. Funchess or other scientific authorities on basic slag are applicable to the Basic Slag product offered for sale and sold by it, when such comments are in fact based upon other products of superior quality and not upon the grade or product thus advertised and sold.

(c) That phosphoric acid induces quick germination of seed or rapid plant growth.

(d) That the iron oxide contained in its Basic Slag accounts for the deep green color and splendid healthy condition of foliage or has any material effect thereon.

(e) That silica is a neutralizer of soil acids.

(f) That calcium oxide, or lime, makes available the potash in the soil, or inferentially or otherwise that the physical quality of all soil is improved by the application of lime; or that this particular form of lime is the “most powerful” neutralizer of acid soils, or is more potent or efficacious than any other true acid neutralizer.

(g) That magnesium oxide is lime or a form of lime.

(h) That manganese oxide changes crude forms of plant food into simpler and more usable forms; or inferentially or otherwise, that a sufficient quantity of manganese is not usually present in all soils for any purpose for which such element is required; or that so “powerful” is the action of the manganese content of Basic Slag that it may properly be called a “chemical plow.”
(i) That the addition of manganese sulphate to the soil by the application of Basic Slag will act as a stimulant all during the growing life of the plant; or inferentially or otherwise, that a sufficient quantity of manganese sulphate is not already present in most soils for its scientific purpose.

(j) That the Basic Slag offered for sale and sold by it is "unusually economical"; or without due qualification, that its use is economical at all, or that it can be applied at least $1 per ton cheaper, or any cheaper than acid or superphosphate.

(k) By statement or implication that phosphoric acid leaches the soil or contains sulphuric acid, through the use of assertions such as "phosphorus as contained in Basic Slag * * * will not leach from the soil, as is the case with many other phosphates. It contains no sulphuric acid," or by means of any other presentation having the capacity unwarrantedly to disparage competitive products.

(l) That Tennessee Basic Slag supplies "the 6 important elements that all growing things need," or that silica and iron are essential elements for this purpose; or by omission to name them or otherwise, that nitrogen and potash are not as vital or indispensable as the six elements named; or that each particle of Basic Slag "carries its own complete supply of all elements."

(m) That plant food elements in the soil are rendered more available, or that greater results are secured from fertilizers containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash by the application of Basic Slag than by the use of other ingredients such as lime.

(n) That Basic Slag produces thin, smooth skinned fruit or improves the quality or increases the yield of citrus or other fruits, or that it makes pecans or other nuts fill out or produces a superior quality thereof. (June 28, 1940.)

2871. Shirts, Hose and Other Men's Wearing Apparel—Manufacturers, "Direct to Wearers," Nature of Manufacture, Composition and Nondisclosure.—Rosecliff-Quaker Corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of shirts, hose, and other men's wearing apparel in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Rosecliff-Quaker Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its commodities in commerce agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word "manufacturers" or the word "shirtmakers" or of depictions of factory scenes as descriptive of its business; or the use of any other words or representations of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that it makes or manufactures commodities sold by it or that it actually owns or operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant or factory in which such commodities are made or manufactured.

(b) The use of the term "direct to wearers" or expressions of similar import in a manner, the effect of which may be to convey the impression or belief that the consumer procures his goods at factory prices, that is to say, at the prices for which the manufacturer sells to its distributors, thereby effect a saving to the ultimate purchaser of a middleman's profit.

(c) The use, directly or inferentially, of the terms or words "shrunk," "double shrunk," "no allowance need be made for shrinkage" or other words, terms, marks, labels, or representations of like effect or similar import, as descriptive of its goods when the same are not in fact shrink proof or nonshrinkable, or have not in fact been fully shrunk or preshrunk to the extent that no residual shrinkage is left remaining in such goods. If the term "shrunk" or similar terms or words be used properly to indicate that such goods have undergone the application of a shrinking process and have been shrunk to a substantial extent but as to which there remains a certain amount of residual shrinkage, then such term or word or words shall be accompanied, as an integral part thereof and in immediate conjunction therewith, by a truthful phrase, statement of assertion clearly and unequivocally setting forth in percentage or percentages the amount of residual shrinkage remaining in both the warp and the filling, or in the warp or filling, whichever has the greater residual shrinkage; for example, "Shrunk—Will not shrink more than —% under Commercial Standard C. S. 59-36."

(d) The use of the words "Pure Silk" or "Silk" independently or as a part of or in conjunction with any other word or words in advertisements, trade indicia or otherwise, to designate or describe fabrics or merchandise not made wholly of silk; and the use of the word "Silk" in any way which may have a tendency or effect to confuse, mislead or deceive purchasers into the belief that products made in part of other materials are made wholly of silk. If the leg or boot of hosiery is properly represented as "silk" but the top, heel, toe, sole, or any part thereof, are composed of other materials, than the word "silk" shall be immediately accompanied by suitable phraseology in type equally conspicuous, indicating clearly that such designation does not apply to the top, heel, toe or sole, as the case may be.

(e) Advertising, branding, labeling, invoicing, selling, or offering for sale any product composed in whole or in part of rayon, unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than five per cent. (July 1, 1940.)

2872. Furniture and House Furnishings—Source or Origin, Factories, Prices and Custom Built.—S. & M. Grand Rapids Furniture Factories, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the retail sale and distribution of furniture and house furnishings in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

There are numerous furniture manufacturers in the city of Grand Rapids, State of Michigan, whose products have attained such Nation-wide reputation for quality and excellence that the words "Grand Rapids" convey a high prestige in the minds of the purchasing public generally, which naturally assumes that furniture so designated has its origin in the city of Grand Rapids aforesaid.

S. & M. Grand Rapids Furniture Factories, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. The use of the words "Grand Rapids" and the word "Factories" as part of its corporate or trade name.

2. The use of the words "Grand Rapids" in any way so as to import or imply that the said corporation is a dealer in "Grand Rapids" furniture or that its furniture is manufactured or made in or obtained from Grand Rapids, Mich., when such is not the fact.

3. The use of the word "Factory" or "Factories" or the statement "From Factory Direct to You" or of any other word, words or statement of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said corporation makes or manufactures the products offered for sale and sold by it or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plants or factories in which said products are made or manufactured.

4. Tagging, labeling, or otherwise marking its products with any false, fictitious, or misleading price which is in excess of the price for which said products are customarily sold in the usual course of business.

5. Stating or representing in any manner that the prices for which said products are offered for sale or sold are wholesale prices, when in fact they are the prices for which said products are customarily sold in the usual course of retail trade.

6. The use of the words "Custom Built" or of any other words of similar import as descriptive of "stock" products, that is to say, products not made upon special orders of a customer. (July 1, 1940.)

2873. Hats and Caps—Second-Hand as New.—The Lincoln Novelty Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of headgear and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lincoln Novelty Co., in connection with its sale and distribution of hats or caps in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Representing that hats composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials by failure to stamp on the sweat bands thereof, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the sweat bands, a statement that said products are composed of second-hand or used materials, provided that if sweat bands are not affixed to such hats then such stamping must appear on the bodies of such hats in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating said bodies.

(b) Representing in any manner that hats made in whole or in part from old, used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials. (July 1, 1940.)

2874. Scalp Treatment—Ailments, Qualities and Laboratories.—William S. LaRue, an individual, trading as “LaRue Laboratories,” engaged in the operation of a barber shop and in the sale and distribution of a product known as “LaRue’s Master Scalp Treatment” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

William S. LaRue, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of his product known as “LaRue’s Master Scalp Treatment” in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from:

(a) stating or representing through the use of the words “attacks dandruff germs” or of any other words of similar meaning or implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that dandruff is caused by germs, when in truth, such is not medically recognized to be the fact.

(b) stating or representing that the use of the said product will retard either gray or falling hair or that it will stimulate hair growth or help bring back its natural oil and give it brilliant luster.

(c) stating or representing that bad nerves are the paramount cause of all gray hair.

(d) the use of the words "LaRue Laboratories" as and for his trade name, when in fact, there are no such laboratories; and from the use of the word "Laboratories" in any way so as to import or imply that said individual actually owns and operates or controls a place devoted to experimental study of any branch of natural science or the application of scientific principles in the preparation of his product. (July 9, 1940.)

2875. Hair Dressings—Qualities.—Relco Drug Co., Inc., a corporation, purchased the business and physical assets of Reliance Drug Co., a partnership consisting of George W. Lundgren and Robert L. Lundgren, who had been engaged in the manufacture of two certain hair dressing commodities, one being designated "Relco Double Quinine Hair Grower" and the other "Relco Hair Dressing Pomade," and the said Relco Drug Co., Inc., since such purchase, is engaged in the sale and distribution of said commodities in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Relco Drug Co., Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of said products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from representing:

(a) That said products, or either thereof, when applied externally, will cause or promote the growth of hair or will stop falling hair.

2876. Hair Dressings—Qualities.—George W. Lundgren and Robert L. Lundgren, copartners, trading under the firm name and style "Reliance Drug Company" for more than 10 years prior to April 1939, engaged in the business of manufacturing or compounding two certain hair dressing commodities, one designated "Reliance Double Quinine Hair Grower" and the other "Reliance Hair Dressing Pomade," and in the sale and distribution of said commodities in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George W. Lundgren and Robert L. Lundgren, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of said products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from representing:
(a) That said products, or either thereof, when applied externally, will cause or promote the growth of hair or will stop falling hair.

2877. Metal Trim and Mouldings—Passing Off, Quality, Composition, Etc.—Pyramid Metals Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of metal trim and mouldings and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

In the metal trade the descriptive term “18-8 Stainless” indicates and is understood to mean a steel alloy product superior to that designated as “17-7 Stainless.” It is more costly, contains higher percentages of chromium and nickel and a less percentage of carbon, and is deemed more satisfactory for outside construction.

Pyramid Metals Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Substituting or passing off to purchasers, 17-7 metal trim as and for 18-8 trim, or any other product or article of commerce as being that of a superior type, quality or composition.

(b) Representing, either directly or indirectly, by instructions or authorizations to its salesmen or dealers or in any other manner whatsoever, that 18-8 metal trim is offered for sale and sold by it when in fact such product is not 18-8 trim; or quoting prices for 17-7 trim as being its prices for 18-8 trim; or by any other means of sales presentation, misrepresenting the type, quality, composition or nature of products which it offers for sale and sells. (July 9, 1940.)

2878. Dog Shampoo and Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, New Product, Etc.—Alfred LePine, an individual trading as Exhibitors Products Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of drug supplies, including a shampoo or liquid soap designated “Sulphasol” and a medication designated “Best in Show Conditioning Capsules,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Alfred Le Pine, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word “Conditioning” or similar word, term or expression as descriptive of or as part of the name of the product
heretofore designated "Best in Show Conditioning Capsules," or in connection with publicity material pertaining thereto, so as to import or imply that such product is efficacious generally as a conditioner of dogs for show purposes or otherwise.

(b) Representations to the effect that the product heretofore sold under the trade designation "Best in Show Conditioning Capsules" gives permanent improvement, keeps show dogs fit or gives them the will to win; or unqualifiedly increases appetite or aids digestion or elimination, gives vitality and pep, puts solid weight on bad doers and underweight dogs, prevents unseasonable shedding, causes dull, lifeless, or staring coats to take on a bright and healthy aspect or makes good dogs look better; or any representations that cause or may cause the impression or belief that such product or any product of similar composition is an effective treatment or competent remedy for all maladies, diseases and ailments to which dogs are subject, or that the use of such product will prevent sickness or generally improve the appearance of dogs for show purposes or otherwise.

(c) Statements to the effect that "Sulphasol" is a new product; that it stimulates hair follicles, stops skin trouble from the start, benefits all types of coats, causes even growth or improved texture of the hair or starts the growth of new hair; that it unqualifiedly stops unseasonable shedding, itching or scratching, intensifies coat texture, stimulates a healthy all-over coat growth, destroys mange organisms, heals or repairs eczema ravages, can be relied upon to prevent bald spots or heal raw or bare spots; or other statements or representations which convey or may convey the belief that such product imparts any therapeutic effects other than such as may be due to the action of its sulphur content on certain organisms in the skin and hair, as the sarcoptic mite of scabies and certain fungi. (July 9, 1940.)

2879. Hats and Caps—Second-Hand as New.—Lewis Tanenbaum, an individual, trading as Sha-Po Manufacturing Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing hats and caps and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lewis Tanenbaum, in connection with the sale and distribution of hats and caps in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing that said headgear, which is composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials, is new or is composed of new materials by failure to stamp on the sweatbands thereof, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the sweatbands, a statement that said products are composed of second-hand or used materials, provided that if sweatbands are not affixed to such hats or caps, then such stamp must appear on the bodies of such hats or caps in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating said bodies.

(b) Representing in any manner that hats or caps made in whole or in part from old, used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials. (July 9, 1940.)

2880. Manual and Course of Instruction—Government Connection, Opportunities, Etc.—Irving Groger and Leo I. Rieff, copartners trading as Civil Service Aid Publishers, engaged in the publication, sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of printed manuals or pamphlets containing questions and answers and other material designed to prepare persons for civil service examinations, in competition with other firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Irving Groger and Leo I. Rieff in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the words “Civil Service” as part of or in connection with the firm or trade name by which they conduct their business; and from the use of said words independently or in connection with any other word or expression implying or suggesting any connection with the Civil Service Commission or with the United States Government; or the making of such representation in any other manner.

(b) Listing the title “Immigration Inspector” as a position for which their manual prepares a student; or naming or indicating as open to their students, any other civil service or alleged civil service positions that are nonexistent, that have been discontinued, or the titles of which have been changed, or the registers of which are not depleted and for which no examinations are presently contemplated.

(c) Representing that their manual or course of instruction includes new types of questions and answers “that will be used in coming examinations”; or in any other manner whatsoever, by statement or by implication, that they have access to the questions contemplated by the Civil Service Commission for any future examination, or any means of knowing what type of questions and answers will be given and required. (July 10, 1940.)

2881. Mattresses and Furniture Products—Prices.—L. Kenneth Schoenfeld, an individual, trading as Washington Furniture Manufacturing Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing various types of furniture products and bedding, including mattresses, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

L. Kenneth Schoenfeld in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from selling, offering for sale, or supplying to his customers for resale, any products labeled, tagged, or otherwise marked with any false, fictitious, or misleading prices which are in excess of the prices for which said products are sold in the usual course of trade. (July 10, 1940.)

2882. Wrist Watch Straps—Qualities and Prices.—David F. Cowen and Raymond Cowen, copartners, trading under the firm name of Cowen Brothers, engaged in the sale and distribution of wrist watch straps in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

“Sweatproof,” as descriptive of leather, implies a quality of imperviousness to the penetration of perspiration and to the adverse or deteriorating action of perspiration. While leather is sometimes coated with lacquer to prevent penetrability by perspiration, such treatment is but temporary and would be effective only so long as the lacquered surface remained intact. There is no leather watch strap known to the trade that could be accurately or properly designated as “Sweatproof.”

David F. Cowen and Raymond Cowen, and each of them, in connection with the sale and distribution of their leather wrist watch straps or other commodities in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word “Sweatproof” in their advertising matter, on their tags, labels, mounting cards or in any other way as descriptive of their wrist watch straps; and from the use of any other words or representations of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend, to convey the belief to purchasers that any wrist watch straps or other leather products offered for sale and sold by them have been rendered impervious to the penetration of perspiration and to the adverse or deteriorating action of perspiration.

(b) The use of fictitious price tags or labels indicating that their wrist watch straps sell or are intended to be sold for $1, $1.25, $1.50, or $2; or in any other way, directly or by implication, representing that their various types of straps or other articles of merchandise have regular values and customarily sell for sums in excess of the prices actually charged therefor. (July 11, 1940.)
2883. Cigarettes—Foreign Branches, Imported and Manufacturers.—Themis Poulides, an individual trading under the name and style of "Poulides Brothers," engaged in the business of manufacturing cigarettes at his plant or factory in New York from tobacco imported by him, and which cigarettes he sells and has sold in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Themis Poulides, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his cigarettes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from:

1. Stating or representing in any manner whatsoever that he has a depot or branch at Cavalla, Macedonia, Greece, or that the cigarettes sold by him are made or manufactured at and imported from said place.

2. Using or placing in the hands of his customers for their use any labels or printed matter bearing the name of such customer in connection or conjunction with—

(a) The words "Manufacturers of" or any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which is to convey, or tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the named customer is the manufacturer of the cigarettes, when in fact, said cigarettes are not manufactured by such customer.

(b) The phrase "Blended from our own Direct Importation of Choice Turkish Tobacco" so as to import or imply that the said customer imports the tobacco used in the making of the cigarettes, when in fact the customer does not import such tobacco.

(c) The words "Branches at Cavalla, Macedonia," when in fact the said customer has no such branch. (July 16, 1940.)

2884. Electric Refrigerators—Qualities and Nature.—Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing electric refrigerators and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its refrigerators in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the statement or representation "Nothing to get out of order" as descriptive of its refrigerator, or the cooling element thereof, which contains or is made up of moving parts that may, in fact, get out of order. (July 16, 1940.)
2885. Paints and Allied Products—Manufacturers and Composition.—Leo Sophir, Jack J. Sophir, and Alfred Sophir, copartners, trading under the firm name and style of Morris Paint & Varnish Co., engaged in the sale of paints, varnishes, lacquers, and allied products in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and which corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Leo Sophir, Jack J. Sophir, and Alfred Sophir, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed, and each of them agreed, to cease and desist forthwith.

1. From representing, either directly or by implication, through the use of the word “Manufacturers” or of any other word or words, statement, picturization, or in any other way that they make or manufacture the products offered for sale or sold by them or that they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact.

2. From the use of the phrase “100% Pure White Lead” as descriptive of the paint, the pigment content of which is not composed wholly of white lead; and from the use of the words “White Lead” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or in any way, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the pigment content of paint so referred to is composed wholly of white lead. If the pigment content of the paint is composed in substantial part of white lead, and in part of an ingredient or ingredients other than white lead, and the words “White Lead” are used to describe such white lead content, then in that case, the words “White Lead” shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that the pigment content is not composed wholly of white lead but is composed in part of an ingredient or ingredients other than white lead. (July 11, 1940.)

2886. Barber and Beauty Preparations—Qualities.—Grecian Chemical Co., a corporation, trading as “Zala Perfumery Co.” and also as “The Olive Co.” engaged in the business of compounding a line of barber and beauty preparations and in the sale and distribution thereof under its aforesaid trade names in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Grecian Chemical Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist:

(a) From the use of the words “scalp food” as descriptive of said products, or any thereof, and from the use of the said words in any way or of the statement “Feed the scalp what it needs” or of any other statement of similar import, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said products, or any thereof, act or acts as a nutriment for the scalp to which it is externally applied.

(b) Stating or representing that the use in any of said products will replace or in any way restore in the scalp natural oil, that is to say, oil such as is derived from the sebaceous glands. (July 17, 1940.)

2887. Dog Supplies—Qualities and Guarantee.—Earl Ewing, an individual trading as Zenith Products Co., engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of dog supplies, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Earl Ewing, in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word “conditioning” or similar word, term, or expression as descriptive of or as part of the name of the product heretofore designated “Best-in-Show Conditioning Capsules,” or in connection with publicity material pertaining thereto, so as to import or imply that such product is efficacious generally as a conditioner of dogs for show purposes or otherwise.

(b) Representations to the effect that the product heretofore sold under the trade designation “Best-in-Show Conditioning Capsules” ends skin and coat trouble; or unqualifiedly prevents or controls unhealthy skin and coat conditions, corrects abnormal blood or constitutional disturbances, eliminates poisons, creates appetite, aids digestion, and elimination, works on every organ, builds up physical condition, adds weight, aborts sickness, or provides pep, vitality, spirit, or style; or any representations that cause or may cause the impression or belief that such product or any product of similar composition is an effective treatment or competent remedy for all maladies, diseases, or ailments to which dogs are subject, or that the use of such product will prevent sickness or generally improve the appearance of dogs for show purposes or otherwise.
(c) Statements to the effect that “Sulphasol” is a new or revolutionary product or is a skin tonic; that it will end skin and coat troubles or will stimulate hair follicles or cause hair growth; that it unqualifiedly allays itch, reduces inflammation, destroys eczema or mange organisms, or can be relied upon to stop itching or scratching or prevent or control unhealthy skin and coat conditions; or other statements or representations which convey or may convey the belief that such product imparts any therapeutic effects other than such as may be due to the action of its sulphur content on certain organisms in the skin and hair, as, the sarcoptic mite of scabies and certain fungi.

(d) The use of the word “guarantee” or any other word or words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale of his products, unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security. (July 18, 1940.)

2888. Cosmetic Preparations—Qualities and Results.—Barbara Gould, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of cosmetic preparations under the general trade designation “Barbara Gould,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Barbara Gould, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication that its product heretofore designated “Firma-Tone” or any preparation of similar composition:

(a) Is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for conditions of relaxed facial contours, heaviness of the jaw line, or flabby skin; or otherwise, that it corrects or prevents sagging facial contours.

(b) Enables the user to “hold the clean, firm contours of youth,” or to have “youthful” contours of face and neck.

(c) Is a highly specialized formula to relieve aging contours or any similar condition.

(d) Stimulates, exercises, tones, or strengthens the muscles of the face and neck.

(e) Brings “improvement immediately” in facial contour, jaw line, or flabby skin.

(f) By daily application or otherwise, gives “lasting results”; or in any way, by statement or by inference, representing that steadfast, stable or durable results may be anticipated or expected by the use thereof.
STIPULATIONS

(g) Does “everything its name (Firma-Tone) implies.”

Said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from the designation “Firma-Tone” for its product or from the use of any similar appellation having the capacity or tendency to convey the belief or create the impression that such preparation or the use thereof may be relied upon either to “firm” the facial or neck contour of the user, or to “tone” her skin or muscles. (July 18, 1940.)

2889. Carbonated Beverage—Nature, Qualities, Etc.—Red Seal Beverage Co., trading also as Zip Co., engaged in the bottling of carbonated soft drinks, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Red Seal Beverage Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from representing that its carbonated beverage designated “Zip” or any similar preparation:

(a) Is an alkalinizing beverage or an alkaliizer or an antiacid; reduces acidity, alkalizes the system, or contains true alkalinizing properties or proved agencies for relieving physical and nervous disturbances, designated or otherwise.

(b) Is a “health factor” of “proven value” or a “value aid” to health; or has “practical” value, or any perceptible value, in stimulating physical health; or keeps one physically fit.”

(c) Sweetens, settles, normalizes, or stimulates the stomach; is soothing to the most delicate stomach; is a “sure relief” for indispositions; alkalizes the digestive juices, or cleanses body linings and tissues.

(d) Corrects ill-effects caused by overdrinking, overeating, over-smoking, overapplication, or “corrects” any physical condition whatsoever; relieves lethargic conditions from lack of exercise, or banishes fatigue; or helps overcome the bad effects of these or “all other indulgences.”

(e) Calms the nerves, peps up the nerves, tones the nervous system, renews energy, promotes restful sleep, or stimulates new energy.

(f) “Slenderizes” the user or is a “proven aid” to keep “that girlish figure;” helps burn up surplus flesh or dispose; or is a “natural aid” in the “control of physical conditions” that tend to unduly increase the weight.

(g) Has any medicinal or therapeutic properties, or any appreciable effect on bodily conditions beyond such degree of refreshment as may properly be attributed to a carbonated water beverage. (July 18, 1940.)
2890. Dresses—Composition and Nondisclosure.—M. Mintz, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of dresses and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

M. Mintz, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word "Alpacas" as descriptive of said products which are not made of fabric composed of the wool of the Alpaca.

(b) Representing that its said products, which are made of rayon, are not rayon or are something other than rayon.

(c) Failing to clearly and unequivocally disclose the fact that the material of which its said products are made is rayon, such disclosure to appear in all invoices and labeling and in all advertising matter, sales promotional schemes, descriptions, or representations thereof, however disseminated or published. (July 18, 1940.)

2891. Mattresses—Professional Connections and Price.—Shifman Bros., engaged in the business of manufacturing mattresses and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Shifman Bros., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) The use on labels affixed to said products, or in any other way, of the word "Doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." either alone or in connection or conjunction with a name or in any manner so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products so labeled, branded, or referred to are made in accordance with the design or under the supervision of a doctor of medicine or a physician or that the said products contain special or scientific features resulting from medical determination or services.

(b) Offering for sale, selling, or supplying customers for resale products to which are affixed or which bear a price purporting to be the retail selling price of said products, when in fact, such price is not the regular retail selling price thereof, but is in excess of the price at which the said products are actually or customarily offerred for sale and sold in the usual course of retail trade. (July 18, 1940.)

2892. Vaccines, Serums, Etc.—Qualities, Results, Etc.—O. M. Franklin Serum Co., Inc., a Colorado corporation trading also as O. M. Franklin Blackleg Serum Co., engaged in the manufacture of a complete line of vaccines, serums, and veterinary supplies designed for use on livestock and poultry, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

O. M. Franklin Serum Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its "Franklin Concentrated Blackleg Bacterin" or other product in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from representing that such or any other preparation of similar composition:

(a) Gives positive life immunity against blackleg in every bottle, or always brings positive life immunity with one dose, or has a 15 year untarnished record of positive life immunity with one dose; or otherwise, by assertion or by implication, that it is invariably effective or 100 percent efficient for the purpose intended.

(b) Contains in one dose more than double the immunizing potency of the usual large 5 cubic centimeter dose of whole culture. (July 19, 1940.)

2893. Arch Supporters—Qualities, Made to Order and Results.—Adam Marshall, Frank Marshall, and Rudolph Marshall, copartners trading as A. Marshall & Sons, engaged in the manufacture of arch supporters, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Adam Marshall, Frank Marshall, and Rudolph Marshall, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of said devices in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed they and each of them will cease and desist from stating or representing:

(a) That the use of said devices will permanently end foot troubles or permanently remove callouses regardless of the nature thereof or unqualifiedly assure instant and permanent relief in cases of weak arches.

(b) That said devices are made to order, that is to say, are fashioned from a positive cast made from a negative impression of the individual customer's foot, through the use of some plastic material.
(c) That said devices are or will remain sanitary when used for the purposes for which they are intended.

(d) That shoes, with insoles padded haphazardly, exercises and treatments are only temporary, impractical, and expensive substitutes. (July 19, 1940.)

2894. Courses of Instruction—Price, Special, Introductory or Limited Offer and Free.—Niagara School, Inc., an Ohio corporation, engaged in conducting a resident school for the teaching of vocabulary, public speaking, voice and memory, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Niagara School, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its printed courses of instruction in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Designating or referring to a course regularly sold for $1 as a "$5.00 Course," or a $1 correspondence course as a "$5.00 Resident School Course Complete"; or otherwise, by statement or inference, misrepresenting the usual and customary price or the nature and quality of the instruction offered for sale and sold.

(b) Representing an offer as "Special" or "Introductory" when it is in fact a regular offer, with a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive students, prospective students, or the public.

(c) Representing an offer to be limited as to time or otherwise when such is not the fact, with a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive students, prospective students, or the public.

(d) Representing any commodity or service as "Free" when in fact such commodity or service is regularly included as part of the course of instruction or service, with a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive students, prospective students, or the public. (July 22, 1940.)

2895. Life Vests—Qualities and Government Conformance.—Cluff Fabric Products, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing auto and marine fabric equipment, including life preserver cushions or vests, and the like, and in the sale and distribution of said products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Cluff Fabric Products, Inc. in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its life vests in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing on tags or labels or in any other manner that the said devices have an individual total weight of 36 ounces or more or that the weight of the filling used in the construction of each thereof is 24 ounces or more, when in fact, the actual total weight and the actual weight of the said filling is less than that indicated. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing that said device has a designated total weight or is equipped with a filling of a designated weight, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said device has a buoyancy commensurate with such designated weight or weights, when in fact, the total weight and the weight of the filling is less than that designated. Said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing that the buoyancy of said device is such as to comply with the requirements of Section 5 of the Act of Congress approved June 9, 1910, for Motor Boats not Carrying Passengers for Hire, when in fact, such is not the case. (July 24, 1940.)

2896. Rye Concentrates or Cultures—Qualities, Composition, Etc.—Superior Brands, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of cereal flour and of rye bread sours in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and other partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Superior Brands, Inc. in connection with its sale and distribution of rye concentrates or cultures in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that its flavoring concentrate "Ry-Taste" or any product of similar composition:

(a) Is the only 100-percent pure rye culture or that it actually is 100 percent pure, or, by either statement or inference that it is a natural rye product devoid of any artificial sour acids or adulterations.

(b) Contains in concentrated form "all" of the aromatic flavors, color or germ of the rye berry.

(c) May be considered as part of the rye flour for labeling purposes; or otherwise, that no additional labeling would be necessary on brands flavored with said "Ry-Taste" concentrate. (July 24, 1940.)

2897. Medicinal Preparation—Nature, Results, Qualities and Composition.—Paul V. McCoy and L. E. Goursmen, copartners, trading as McCoy Drug Co., engaged in the sale of a compound known as "McCoy's Little Tablets," among other things, in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
Paul V. McCoy and L. E. Goursmen in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from:

1. The use of the word "modern" or of any other word or words of similar implication as descriptive of said product.

2. Stating or representing in any manner that when constipation is overcome through the use of said product, it ends or often ends nine-tenths or any other specified numerical estimate of other ailments with which a sufferer may be afflicted, when in fact such claim is not based upon statistical or other competent evidence.

3. Stating or representing that the use of said product will correct the elimination of any organ or that its use will effect other than temporary relief from constipation.

4. Stating or representing that the taking of the prescribed dosage of said product will in every instance or in a considerable proportion of instances overcome or cause the disappearance of symptoms, such as headaches, gas pains, biliousness, rheumatism, dizzy spells, or stomach disorders.

5. Stating or representing that said product does not contain harsh laxatives or ingredients that depend upon irritating the bowels for their effect, when in fact such is not the case.

6. Stating or representing that said product will act as a tonic for every part of the digestive tract or that it will sweeten the stomach. (July 26, 1940.)

2898. Pipes, Etc.—Lottery.—National Briar Pipe Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of briar pipes and other articles of merchandise used by smokers and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

National Briar Pipe Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, pipes or other merchandise, together with punchboards or other lottery devices, which said punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with pipes or other merchandise, or separately, which said punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public.
3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. (July 29, 1940.)

2899. Mothproof Preparation—Qualities and Results.—O. S. Schaffer, an individual, trading as Per-Mo Mothproof Co., engaged in the preparation of a liquid intended to be used as a treatment for fabrics to do away with moths and in the sale thereof under the trade name “Per-Mo,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

O. S. Schaffer in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words “Permanent Mothproof Liquid” as descriptive of said product; and from the use of the word “permanent” or of any other word or words of similar meaning, or of any statement or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the moth immunizing effect of said product will last, continue or endure or will remain fixed or constant indefinitely or that the use of said product will assure constant, equal efficacy against moths throughout the years or that such efficacy will not be impaired by dry cleaning, exposure, or use. (July 29, 1940.)

2900. Rock Wool Insulation—Competitive Product, Comparative Merits, Etc.—Eagle-Picher Lead Co., an Ohio corporation is engaged in the business of manufacturing rock wool insulating material, among other things, and in the sale and distribution thereof, through its subsidiary, Eagle-Picher Sales Co., in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged. One of their said competitors is Insul-Wool Insulation Corporation of Wichita, Kans., engaged in the manufacture of an insulation from raw material consisting of newspapers and wood pulp magazines which, after being treated or processed with certain chemicals, are ground up into a mass of fine particles which are then further treated to form the finished product such as is sold by the said corporation.

Eagle-Picher Lead Co. and Eagle-Picher Sales Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their so-called rock wool insulation in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed they and each of them will cease and desist from the inclusion in advertisements or printed matter which they, or either of them, use or place in the hands of others for use, of statements or representations, the effect of which is to convey or which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that all insulation using paper as a base or that insulation such as that sold by their competitor, Insul-Wool Insulation Corporation of Wichita, Kans., is inflammable or is readily combustible or that the thermal conductivity thereof compares unfavorably with that of so-called rock wool or is higher than that of sawdust or that the said insulation having a paper base is susceptible to moisture or will settle when properly placed in the stud of a building. Each of the said corporations also agrees to cease and desist from stating or representing, through the use of excerpts from newspapers concerning a fire which occurred at the plant of a competitor, or in any other manner, that the material which was burned in such fire was the finished product offered for sale and sold by such competitor, when in fact, the burned material was not such finished product but was only raw material which had not been placed in the completed form in which it was customarily sold by such competitor in the usual course of trade. (July 30, 1940.)

2901. Potted Bulbs—Foreign Source or Origin.—Hewett P. Mulford and M. R. Mulford, copartners, trading as Hewett P. Mulford & Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of potted bulbs to purchasers, as syndicate stores located in different States and therein engaged in reselling said bulbs to the purchasing public, in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Hewett P. Mulford and M. R. Mulford in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the phrase “Holland Potted Bulbs” as descriptive of bulbs not grown in and imported from Holland; and from the use of the word “Holland” either alone or in connection with any other word or words or in any way, in the designation of or in the advertising, branding, labeling, or description of bulbs, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said bulbs were grown in and imported from Holland, when in fact said bulbs were grown elsewhere than Holland. (July 30, 1940.)

Mellquist Reducing & Cosmetic Salons, Inc., of New York, and Mellquist Reducing & Cosmetic Salons, Inc., of Illinois, and Erik W. Mellquist, in his capacity as president of each of the said corporations and in his individual capacity, in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in their advertisements and advertising matter or in any other way of statements or representations, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the use of said product in and of itself will break down fat cells and strengthen tissues or in any way reduce the user's weight or otherwise solve the user's reducing problems. (Aug. 1, 1940.)

2904. Tacks and Upholstering Nails—Imported as Domestic.—Robert E. Miller, Inc., a New York corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of tacks and upholstery nails in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Robert E. Miller, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its imported commodities in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from the use of the words "Made in U. S. A." as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for said commodities, or from otherwise advertising the same in a manner the effect of which is or may be to convey the belief to purchasers that such commodities are of domestic origin. If commodities of foreign origin or make are treated in the United States of America to improve their appearance or for other purposes and reference is made to such treatment, then in that case, a suitable word or words shall be used to indicate clearly that such commodities are merely treated or processed in this country but are not of domestic origin or produced in the United States of America. (Aug. 2, 1940.)

2905. Milk—Grade and Composition.—Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of milk within the District of Columbia and States adjacent thereto, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act; agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Guernsey" as descriptive of said product; and from the use of the word "Guernsey" either alone or in connection with the word "milk" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that said product has been obtained exclusively from Guernsey cows. If said product is composed in substantial part of milk obtained from Guernsey cows and in part of milk obtained from cows other than the Guernsey breed, and the word "Guernsey" is used as descriptive of such Guernsey milk content, then in that case, it shall be made clearly and conspicuously to appear that said product is not composed exclusively of Guernsey milk or that said product is composed in part of milk other than milk obtained from Guernsey cows. (Aug. 6, 1940.)

2906. Shoes—Simulating, History of Product, Source or Origin, Nature of Manufacture and Price.—Bridgewater Workers Cooperative Association, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing shoes and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
Bridgewater Workers Cooperative Association, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist:

1. From the use of the words “J. W. Stetson Quality Shoes” or the word “Stetson” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or arranged within a triangle, so as to simulate the brand or label or name heretofore used by the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc., in the sale and distribution of its shoes; and from the use of the word “Stetson” in any way in connection with the marking, stamping, branding, labeling, or advertising of its shoes, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said shoes are products made by or for or in accordance with the standards and specifications of the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc.

2. From the use, as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for or in the advertisement of its products, of the name or private brand or of any simulation of the name or private brand of well-known advertised products of shoe manufacturers or shoe dealers, the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products thus marked, branded or labeled are such well-known advertised products.

3. From the use, in stamping or branding its shoes, of the phrase “Quality Shoemakers Since 1875” or of any other similar statement or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said shoes have been on the market for such indicated period of time.

4. From the use of the words, “Lord Kent English Custom Shoes” as descriptive of domestically made, machine-manufactured, shoes; and from the use of the said words in any way, so as to import or imply that said shoes are of English make or are English custom shoes.

5. From the use of the words “Slater’s Bench Made” as descriptive of machine-made products.

6. From the use of the price figure “$8.00” or “$12.00” or any other amount which purports to be the retail selling price of shoes, when in fact, such indicated retail selling price is fictitious or much in excess of the price customarily asked for said shoes in the usual course of retail trade. (Aug. 7, 1940.)

2907. J. A. Vaughn, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his correspondence courses of instruction in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from:

(a) Representations which import, imply, or infer that persons answering his advertisements or applying for registration will or may receive employment, or that work as apprentices or other employment opportunities are offered by him.

(b) The use of "blind" advertisements or sales literature to attract prospective students when such advertisements or literature fail to set forth that courses of instruction or other educational services are being offered, in such manner as to mislead or deceive students, prospective students, or the public.

(c) Using any progressive, integrated, or continuous plan to sell home study or correspondence courses unless the first mailing to the prospective student, before any money is accepted, shows without ambiguity exactly what is offered for sale and the price or prices thereof.

(d) Representations which import, imply, or infer that the courses of instruction offered for sale and sold by him include apprenticeship work or practical training either with or without compensation therefor; or that such instruction is other than a home study or correspondence course.

(e) Statements which cause or may cause the impression or belief that students completing his home study courses will or may thereby be qualified for aviation mechanic's licenses or other licenses issued by the United States Bureau of Air Commerce.

(f) Representing, directly or inferentially, by the use of testimonial letters or otherwise, that courses of instruction offered for sale or sold by him have the approval, recommendation or endorsement of the United States Bureau of Air Commerce or any other agency of the Federal Government.

(g) The use on his stationery or in his advertising or printed matter or in any other way of illustrations, pictures or drawings or other representations of the Wayne County Airport building or buildings in conjunction with the letters or initials "M U A S" or the words and letters "Home of M. U. A. S." or other letters or words, or otherwise, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to students or prospective students that the school conducted by him is situated in said building or buildings or that they are occupied in their entirety by him. (Aug. 13, 1940.)

(l) The use of illustrations depicting unnaturally heavy long wavy hair, of hair “before” and “after” using a certain preparation, of a dark colored mask removed from a lighter colored face, of a face of which one half is dark colored, and disfigured and the other half is light colored and free from blemish, or similar depictions, in connection with advertised claims in behalf of its products, the effect of which is to create or has the capacity to create the impression or belief that such products will cause hair growth, make beautiful hair or otherwise favorably affect the growth or texture of the hair, or will cause dark colored skin to become lighter in color or will eliminate pimples, blackheads, or other skin blemishes.

(m) Statements to the effect that its “Beauty experts” have conducted skin tests or that its products or preparations are compounded by skilled and experienced cosmeticians, beauty experts or chemists, or are unequalled.

(n) Representing that any article is given “free” or as a gratuity when the receipt of such article is contingent upon any consideration, terms or condition, as payment of money or rendering of services.

(o) Representing as the cost of shipping and packing an article, any sum or amount greater than or in excess of the actual cost of such shipping and packing.

(p) Representing an offer as “limited” when such offer is not definitely limited to certain persons or conditions. If there actually be such a limitation, the nature and terms thereof shall be clearly and unequivocally set forth in immediate connection with such representation.
(q) The use of the words “Guarantee” or “Guaranteed” or any other word or words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, offering for sale or sale of its products, unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (Aug. 14, 1940.)

2911. Shoes—Simulating and Price.—Farmington Shoe Manufacturing Co., a New Hampshire corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing shoes and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Farmington Shoe Manufacturing Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its shoe products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist:

1. From the use of the words “J. W. Stetson Quality Shoes” or the word “Stetson” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or arranged within a triangle so as to simulate the brand or label or name heretofore used by the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc., in the sale and distribution of its shoes; and from the use of the word “Stetson” in any way in connection with the marking, stamping, branding, labeling, or advertisement of its shoes, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said shoes are products made by or for or in accordance with the standards and specifications of the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc.

2. From the use, as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for or in the advertisement of its products, of the name or private brand or of any simulation of the name or private brand of well-known advertised products of shoe manufacturers or dealers, the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the products thus marked, branded or labeled are such well-known advertised products.

3. From marking, stamping, branding, or labeling its shoes with the price figure “$8.00” or any other amount so as to import or imply that the said amount is the retail selling price of said shoes, when in fact such indicated retail selling price is fictitious or much in excess of the price customarily asked for said shoes in the usual course of retail trade. (Aug. 14, 1940.)

2912. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, Ailments, Composition, Price, Free, Manufacturer.—Richard O. Mills, a sole trader as R. Mills & Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated “Nature’s Laxative,” in interstate commerce, in competion with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Richard O. Mills, in connection with the sale and distribution of his product "Nature's Laxative" agreed he will cease and desist from—

(a) Representing that such laxative preparation is mild or soothing; that it is a cleansing agent, efficient or otherwise, for the promotion of internal hygiene generally; that it stimulates or tends to stimulate the kidneys or liver or that its use is indicated for the stomach, kidneys, or liver; that it is a carminative, a tonic-laxative, or tonic; or that it is different from other preparations containing the same laxative ingredients.

(b) The use of words and phrases such as "Best to aid nature" or "the ideal laxative" in any manner that the effect of which is to import or imply that the use of "Nature's Laxative" is indicated for all types of constipation or that such product contains laxative principles or ingredients not present in any other preparation or preparations.

(c) Representing, directly or by implication, that the regular or continued use of such product will not so affect the organs of elimination as to necessitate the continued use of a laxative; or disparagement of comparable competitive products by publishing warnings against their use.

(d) Statements which import or imply that the said preparation may be effectively used as a substitute for fruits and vegetables or to supplement a diet deficient in fruits or vegetables.

(e) Representations which cause or may cause the impression or belief that constipation is "the greatest scourge of the age" or that sickness or ill health generally is due to or caused by constipation, or that the use of a cathartic is indicated for most of the diseases or ailments of mankind; or that in the colon lies the secret of life or unqualifiedly of health.

(f) Descriptions of such product as "purely vegetable" or in any other manner which fails to include the principal ingredient or ingredients therein or is so worded as to import or imply that it is composed wholly of well known or common garden vegetables or plants such as spinach, celery, and dandelion or other ingredients which constitute a very minor portion of the content of such product.

(g) Representations that said product is an intestinal regulator, or that it contains nothing injurious or no drugs.

(h) Representing the sum of $1 or any other amount as the price or regular price of the "treatise" or folder disseminated by him.
(i) Representing that any article is given “free” or as a gratuity when the receipt of such article is contingent upon any consideration, terms, or condition as the payment of money.

(j) The use of the phrase “R. Mills & Co. Makers of Nature’s Laxative” or other use of the word “Makers” or any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that he makes or manufactures the product sold by him or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant, factory, or laboratory in which such product is made or manufactured. (Aug. 15, 1940.)

2913. Men’s Clothing—Manufacturer.—Wolff Clothing Co., a Pennsylvania corporation, engaged in the sale of clothing, consisting of men’s suits and topcoats, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Wolff Clothing Co., in connection with the advertisements, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its clothing products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist forthwith from stating or representing that it is the maker of the products which it offers for sale and sells or that it owns and operates or controls the factory in which said products are made. It also agrees to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and printed matter of whatever kind or description of the word “Makers” and the phrases “Buy at Wolff’s Factory,” “We sell direct from our wholesale factory to you,” and “Our factory-to-you merchandising policy makes such savings possible,” or of any other word or words, phrase, or statement of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that Wolff Clothing Co. actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory wherein the products sold by it are made and finished. (Aug. 20, 1940.)

2914. Burial Vaults—Qualities.—Fred J. Mead, a sole trader as Mead-Suydam Co., engaged in the manufacture of concrete burial vaults and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Fred J. Mead, in connection with the sale and distribution of his burial vaults in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from representing that they “Outlast the Tomb,” have the quality of “Permanence,” or by other presentations, either directly or indirectly, that they will endure for a longer period of time than has been scientifically proven. He agrees also to cease and desist from the unqualified representation that a vault purchased from him "will not fail," or otherwise representing that it will perform satisfactorily under any and all conditions of installation or use. (Aug. 21, 1940.)

2915. Nursery Products—School or Institute and State Government Connection.—C. W. Stuart & Co., a New York corporation, engaged in the nursery business, consisting of the sale and distribution in interstate commerce, of a general line of fruit trees, raspberries, shrubs, shade trees, rose bushes, and the like, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

C. W. Stuart & Co., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its nursery products in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist forthwith from the use in its advertising of whatever kind or description of any statement or representation which imports or implies or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to prospective salesmen or to the readers of such advertising that the so-called "New York Landscape Institute" or "New York State Landscape Institute" is a school or institute for the training of landscape architects, or that it is a separate and distinct organization with which the C. W. Stuart & Co. is connected or associated, or that it, the said organization, is connected or associated in any way with the government of the State of New York. (Aug. 22, 1940.)

2916. Candies—"Home Made."—Frank G. Shattuck Co. and its subsidiary, W. F. Schrafft & Sons Corporation, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Frank G. Shattuck Co. and W. F. Schrafft & Sons Corporation agreed that in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their factory-made products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, that they and each of them will cease and desist from the use in their advertisements and advertising matter or in any way of the words "Home Made" or of any other words of similar implication, as descriptive of said products, and from the use of the said words "Home Made" in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are homemade or made in the home. (Aug. 22, 1940.)

2917. Plant "Nitragin"—Tests, Indorsements or Approval and Comparative Merits.—The Nitragin Co., Inc., a Wisconsin corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a product designated "Nitragin," a nitrogen-fixing bacteria culture for the inoculation of seeds of leguminous plants, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The Nitragin Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its product "Nitragin" in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Representing that such product is tested and recommended by experiment stations, agricultural workers, and farmers everywhere; or statements which import or imply that said product has been recommended generally by Federal or State agricultural experiment stations.

(b) Statements or representations the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that all or certain products regardless of their quality which are offered for sale or sold in competition with its product are inferior or without worth or value; or any other presentation in a manner having the capacity, tendency, or effect of disparaging comparable competitive products. (Aug. 23, 1940.)

2918. Automobile Tires—Composition, Qualities and Comparative Merits.—Mohawk Rubber Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing automobile tires and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Mohawk Rubber Co., in connection with the operation of its business in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on tires offered for sale, sold, or distributed by it in such commerce or on tires which it places in the hands of others for sale:

1. Of the numeral "6" in connection or conjunction with the word
"plies" or with any other word or words as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for tires which are not composed of six plies; and from the use on said tires, or the wrappings thereof, or in any other way, of the numeral "6" or of any mark, stamp, brand, or label so as to import or imply, or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said tires are composed of six or any other indicated number of plies which is in excess of the number of plies of which said tires actually are composed.

2. Of the word "dual" or the words "extra heavy duty," or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication, as descriptive of the plies of which said tires are composed, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the construction of said plies is such that their presence in the tires renders the tires of dual or double efficiency or capable of extra heavy duty, as compared with tires containing a like number of plies of similar quality. (Aug. 27, 1940.)

2919. Automobile Tires—Composition, Qualities, Comparative Merits and Factory.—Irving Fine and Gurdie Fine, copartners trading as Imperial Tire Co. and Lafayette Tire Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of automobile tires in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce
as set forth therein.

Irving Fine and Gurdie Fine, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their tire products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith:

1. From the use of the numeral "6" in connection or conjunction with the word "plies" or with any other brand or label for tires which are not composed of six plies; and from the use on said tires or the wrappings thereof, or in any other way, of the number "6" or of any mark, stamp, brand, or label, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said tires are composed of six or of any other indicated number of plies which is in excess of the number of plies of which said tires actually are composed.

2. From the use of the word "dual" or the words "extra heavy duty" or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication, as descriptive of the plies of which said tires are composed, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the construction of said plies is such that their presence in the tires renders said tires of dual or double efficiency or capable of extra heavy duty, as compared with tires containing a like number of plies of similar quality.

3. From the use of the word "Factory" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, on their printed or other advertising matter so as to import or imply that the said copartners actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said tires are made or manufactured. (Aug. 27, 1940.)

2920. Motor Oil—Composition, Source or Origin and Used or Reclaimed.—Economy By-Products Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling and distributing motor lubricating oil in commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Economy By-Products Co., Inc., in connection with the advertisements, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of motor oil in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. The use of the word "Penn" or "Pennfield" as a brand or label for or as part of the trade name under which it sells said product, when in fact said product is not composed wholly of Pennsylvania oil.

2. The use of the word "Penn" either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, letter, or letters, or in any other way, so as to import or imply that said product is composed of Pennsylvania oil in its entirety.

3. The use of the phrase “100% Pennsylvania Oil” as descriptive of said product, and from the use of said phrase or of any other statement or representation of like import, the effect of which conveys or tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the product thus referred to is composed of Pennsylvania oil, when in fact said product contains oil other than Pennsylvania oil.

4. Failing to clearly and unequivocally disclose the fact that said product contains used or reclaimed oils in its invoices and on printed and advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions, or representations thereof, however disseminated or published. (Aug. 27, 1940.)

2921. Cosmetics—Nature of Manufacture, Indorsements or Approval, Qualities, Competitive Products, Safety, Etc.—Physicians Formula Cosmetics, Inc., a California corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Physicians Formula Cosmetics, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its cosmetic preparations in interstate commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the letters “Rx” or other letters, signs, or symbols which cause or have or may have the capacity to cause the impression or belief that its cosmetic or toilet goods are in fact medicinal preparations or that each parcel is individually compounded in accordance with a specific prescription therefor.

(b) Stating that its advertising has been accepted by the Los Angeles County Medical Association when such advertising is not currently so accepted.

c) Representations which import or imply that dermatologists, skin specialists, plastic surgeons, or other medical men whose practice is limited to any one of the specialties of medical science, or that physicians or general practitioners on the Pacific coast or elsewhere have commonly or frequently sent their patients to its studios for treatment or prescriptions, or have generally or frequently prescribed, endorsed or recommended its cosmetic preparations.

d) Unqualifiedly representing that its preparations are "non-allergic," "safe," or "effective beauty aids" for the skin, or that they may be depended upon to prevent allergic irritations or maintain healthy skin.

e) Stating that "cholesterin" or any other ingredient in its cosmetic preparations "restores" or "replaces" or has the capacity to restore or replace natural oils in the skin or that it effectively combats or prevents crowsfeet, wrinkles or dry skin by means of oils applied to the skin or in any other manner whatsoever.

(f) Representing that the ingredients in its products penetrate the skin deeply or effectively; or that its "Cleansing Cream" removes "every particle" of make-up, grime and dirt from the skin or the pores thereof.

g) Statements to the effect that cosmetic preparations containing mineral oil forms a film which seals in the dirt, causing blackheads, whiteheads, and enlarged pores; or other statements which constitute unwarranted disparagement of competitive products.

(h) Representing that "Physicians Formula Deodorant is an absolute necessity," or "unqualifiedly that Modern women's skins require stimulation."

(i) Representations which import or imply that its product designated "Facial Masque" or its product heretofore designated "Tissue Cream" can be depended or relied upon to clear up blackheads, whiteheads, or enlarged pores, or keep the skin youthful or free from lines.

(j) Denominating, describing or referring to any cosmetic product as a "Tissue Cream," or otherwise by statement or inference representing that such preparation externally applied has of itself any beneficial effect upon the tissues or cell-structure of the skin.

(k) Statements such as "Mothers who are interested in the health of their adolescent daughters should insist that they use only Physiiens Formula Cosmetics" or similar presentations having the capacity or tendency to convey the impression or belief that competitive cosmetic preparations contain ingredients injurious to the health or that only preparations offered for sale and sold by it may be safely used by adolescents. (Aug. 29, 1940.)

2922. Termite Preparations—Government Indorsement or Approval, Qualities, Etc.—Extermital Chemicals, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of two chemical preparations or products of substantially the same or similar composition designated "Extermital A" and "Extermital B," which may be and usually are used in conjunction with each other as soil treatments about the foundations of buildings to check or prevent infestation of the woodwork of the buildings by termites, said treatments being applied by what the said corporation refers to as its "Extermital Process" or what is known as the "bar-hole method," consisting of the making of holes, which are then covered or closed. The said corporation, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Extermital Chemicals, Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter of whatever kind or description, or in any other way of statements or representations which import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers:

1. That either the said products or the method advocated by the said corporation for the application of said products are or is based on findings of the United States Government.

2. That soil poisoning is recommended or recognized by United States Government authorities as the best termite control method or that such soil poisoning is advocated by the said authorities other than as an adjunct to feasible structural changes, and in place of them only on condition that the structural changes necessary to block termites are impracticable, or that the said authorities advocate soil treatments by the bar-hole system or by any method other than that known as the trenching method.

3. That the repellant effectiveness of said products, when placed in the soil, is of such permanency as to guard against all future termite infestations.

4. That either the H. O. L. C. specifications, or those of any other United States Government agency, recommend soil treatment by means of bar-holes, the method of application used by the said Extenntial Chemicals, Inc., or the use of its chemical mixture for treating.

5. That the United States Government has spent several hundred thousand dollars repairing damages caused by termites to the Treasury and Interior Buildings and in the Smithsonian Museums. (Aug. 30, 1940.)

2923. Shoes—Maker, History, "Custom Made," Etc.—Holland Racine Shoes, Inc., a Michigan corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing shoes of various quality and price grades and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Holland Racine Shoes, Inc., in connection with the advertisements, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its shoe products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist:

1. From the use of the words “J. W. Stetson Quality Shoes” or the word “Stetson” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or arranged within a triangle so as to simulate the brand or label or name heretofore used by the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc., in the sale and distribution of its shoes; and from the use of the word “Stetson” in any way in connection with the marking, stamping, branding, labeling, or advertisement of its shoes, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said shoes are products made by or for or in accordance with the standards and specifications of the Stetson Shoe Co., Inc.

2. From the use of the words “Martin & Martin,” either alone or in connection with the words “Custom Made,” or the words “Domonick & Domonick,” either alone or in connection with the words “Custom Grade,” or the words “Made Exclusively for Altman,” so as to simulate the brand or label or name heretofore used, respectively, by Martin & Martin, Domonick Fine Shoes, Inc., and B. Altman & Co. in the sale and distribution of shoes, or the effect of which tends or may tend to confuse or mislead purchasers into the belief that said shoes are products of or are made for the particular concern whose brand, label or name is thus simulated.

3. From the use on its shoes of the phrase “Quality Shoemakers Since 1875” so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said shoes have been sold on the market for such indicated period of time.
4. From the use of the words "Custom Made" or "Custom Grade" either alone or in connection with the name of an alleged shoe dealer so as to import or imply that said products are of custom quality or that they have been made in accordance with the specific order of a dealer. (Aug. 29, 1940.)

2924. Quinine Products—Safety, Qualities, Results, Comparative Merits and Competitive Products.—The New York Quinine & Chemical Works, Inc., a New York corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of pharmaceutical preparations including quinine products, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The New York Quinine & Chemical Works, Inc. in connection with its sale of quinine or other pharmaceutical preparations in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Representing in its advertising or otherwise that quinine is a "perfectly safe remedy," or is the "safest" antimalarial drug; or directly or by implication that its use may always be relied upon to cause no untoward effects.

(b) Publishing or disseminating statements having the capacity, tendency, or effect of disparaging competitive products or of creating the impression or belief that such products are dangerous to use or constitute a menace, as, for example, the following:

That Atabrine or other product of like composition—
Is toxic in effect.
Has a marked depressing action on heart and circulation.
Causes cerebral excitation.
Produces permanent liver damage.
Has none of the advantages of quinine while possessing some definite disadvantages.

May result in mental derangements, gasping or accelerated respiration, circulatory failure, collapse, vomiting, rise of temperature, psychoses, loss of appetite and weight, abdominal pain, headache, diarrhea, yellowed sclera, persistent yellowing of the skin, or in any other serious disorder, ailment, or malady. (Aug. 29, 1940.)

2925. Clothing—Composition and Source or Origin.—Anderson-Little Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing men's and women's clothing and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
The cloth known to the trade and the purchasing public as “Harris Tweed” is produced on the Isle of Harris, Lewis, Uist, and Barra of the Hebrides Islands, Scotland, and is made from the wool of native sheep and carded, spun and woven by hand by the inhabitants, crofters, in widths of 26 to 28 inches; is caulked or felted, and because of its attractive appearance, good wearing qualities, fast dyes, and permanent odor of peat smoke, said cloth has acquired a good reputation and has a wide sale, and the producers of and dealers in said cloth have acquired a valuable goodwill in the words “Harris Tweed” as applied to cloth used in the manufacture of garments.

Anderson-Little Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of garments in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements, on its labels, or in any other way, of the words “Homestead Harrisle” as a trade name for or otherwise to describe garments which are not made or fabricated from Harris Tweed; and from the use of the word “Harrisle” or of any other simulation of the word “Harris” in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the garments so referred to are made or fabricated from Harris Tweed, when in fact, said garments are not made or fabricated from cloth manufactured by crofters of the Isle of Harris, Lewis, Uist, and Barra of the Hebrides Islands, Scotland. (Sept. 3, 1940.)

2926. Bread—Composition and Government Indorsement or Approval.—
Malbis Bakery Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of bread and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Malbis Bakery Co. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing directly, inferentially, by picturization or in any other manner that the bread offered for sale or sold by it and which is made with dried skim milk, butter, and water or any other fluid ingredient other than whole milk, is made with or contains whole milk, pure whole milk, or rich creamy milk.

(b) Advertisements which import or imply or which cause or may cause the impression or belief that all the bread offered for sale and sold by it is made with whole milk when in fact such bread or a portion thereof is made with dried skim milk, butter, and water or any fluid ingredient other than whole milk.
(c) Representing that its bread is made with milk supplied by the Malbis dairy unless or until the entire milk content of such bread is supplied by said dairy.

(d) Representing by means of statements, sound films in moving picture theaters, depictions, or otherwise that each loaf of bread so advertised contains one pint of milk or any other quantity of milk, whether fluid milk or any ingredient composed of milk derivatives such as dried skim milk and butter, greater than actually is contained therein.

(e) Use of the statement "U. S. Government Approved" or any other statement or representation the effect of which is to import or imply that its bread or the quality thereof has been approved or endorsed by the Federal Government or any department or agency thereof.

2927. Cosmetics—Laboratories, Prices, Free, Qualities and Results.—Walter C. Rathke, an individual, trading as W. C. Rathke Laboratories, engaged in the compounding of cosmetics and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Walter C. Rathke in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word "Laboratories" as a part of his trade name or as descriptive of his business; or otherwise representing that he owns, operates, or controls a laboratory, as such term is understood by the trade and the public, for the compounding or manufacture of the commodities offered for sale and sold by him or of any other chemical product.

(b) Quoting or otherwise holding forth any marked-up or fictitious prices for his products, or in any other way representing that the ordinary or regular prices of such goods are greater than the prices actually charged therefor in the usual course of business.

(c) Advertising an article as being "free" or a gratuity when the cost thereof is included in the price charged for a combination offer of said article with some other commodity, such for example, as a magazine subscription.

(d) Designating a complexion cream as a "tissue cream" or representing that any of the creams sold by him is a skin "normalizer" or that it "penetrates deep" into the pores or promotes skin health, or otherwise has any beneficial effect upon the tissues or cell structure of the skin.
(e) Representing that a cleansing cream "revitalizes" a skin or otherwise affects the skin beyond that normally resulting from a cleansing of its surface.

(f) Representing that the cactus plant has any recognized curative properties or mystic healing properties; or that an "oil" extracted therefrom has been known from the time of ancient civilization, or at all, to possess unusual healing qualities; or that such cactus product or any other ingredient contained in his cosmetic preparations lubricates withered skin to suppleness, stimulates fatigued glands into releasing the precious drop of moisture confined at the bottom of each pore, or penetrates into sluggish or atrophied glands or nourishes them into activity; or that it has any effect whatsoever on lymphatic gland activity, or produces any beneficial results in cases of withered glands or old complexions, or gives one a beautiful complexion or preserves skin loveliness indefinitely, or at all. (Sept. 6, 1940.)

2928. Magazine and Cosmetics—Prices, Free, Qualities and Results.—The Continental News, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the publication of a magazine named "True Mystic Science," and in the sale and distribution thereof, together with certain cosmetic products under the trade designation "Mystic Glow" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The Continental News, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its publications and premium or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Quoting or otherwise holding forth any marked-up or fictitious prices of articles or commodities which it offers for sale either in connection with a combination subscription offer or otherwise, or in any other way representing that the ordinary or regular prices of such goods are greater than the prices actually charged therefor in the usual course of business.

(b) Advertising an article as being "free" or a gratuity when the cost thereof is included in the price charged for a combination offer of said article with some other commodity, such for example, as a magazine subscription.

(c) Designating a complexion cream as a "Tissue cream" or representing that any cosmetic cream sold and distributed by it is a skin "normalizer" or that it "penetrates deep" into the pores or promotes skin health, or otherwise has any beneficial effect upon the tissues or cell structure of the skin.

(d) Representing that a cleansing cream "Revitalizes" a skin or otherwise affects the skin beyond that normally resulting from a cleansing of its surface.
Representing that the cactus plant has any recognized curative properties or mystic healing properties; or that an "oil" extracted therefrom has been known from the time of ancient civilizations, or at all, to possess unusual healing qualities; or that such cactus product or any other ingredient contained in cosmetic preparations sold or distributed by it lubricates withered skin to suppleness, stimulates fatigued glands into releasing the precious drop of moisture confined at the bottom of each pore, or penetrates into sluggish or atrophied glands or nourishes them into activity; or that it has any effect whatsoever on lymphatic gland activity, or produces any beneficial results in cases of withered glands or old complexions, or gives one a beautiful complexion or preserves skin loveliness indefinitely, or at all. (Sept 11, 1940.)

2929. Optical Lenses and Frames—Composition and "Certified."—Joseph T. Cline, Harriet T. Cline, Carol H. Cline, and Robert L. Cline, copartners trading under the firm name of Midwest Optical Supply, engaged in the manufacture of optical lenses and glasses and in the sale and distribution thereof and of optical frames in interstate commerce, in competition with other firms and partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Joseph T. Cline, Harriet T. Cline, Carol H. Cline, and Robert L. Cline, and each of them, agreed that in connection with the sale and distribution of their merchandise in commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, they will cease and desist from:

(a) Designating spectacle frames or other products as "Rhodium" which are not composed throughout of rhodium. If the article is composed of some other metal and only the surface has been finished or coated with rhodium, such fact shall be clearly indicated by suitable terms.

(b) The use of the term "semi-precious" as descriptive of products made of so-called "Villadium" which are not composed in part at least of the precious metals, or any thereof; and from the use of the word "precious" either alone or in connection with the word "semi," or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that said products are made of an alloy which is composed of metals, one or more of which is "precious" metal as that term is understood and generally accepted by the trade and purchasing public.

(c) The use of the word "Certified" as applied to or descriptive of an article of merchandise which has not been analyzed or appraised by an authorized impartial agency, its quality being duly attested in writing by such agency to be as represented. (Sept. 16, 1940.)
2930. Linens, Laces and Handkerchiefs—Source or Origin.—Charles Mamiye and Jacob Hidary, copartners, trading under the firm name of Chinese Linen Importing Co., engaged in the importation and wholesale distribution of Chinese and Japanese decorative linens, laces, and handkerchiefs in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True Tuscany Lace, as known to the trade and the public, is a hand-made filet lace of grape design produced from linen thread in the Tuscany district of Italy. A lace not made in Tuscany and of linen, which is designated “Tuscany Lace” is a misbranded product.

Charles Mamiye and Jacob Hidary, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “Tuscany” or word or words of similar import either with or without the explanation “Made in China” as descriptive of the laces or other articles sold by them which are not in fact true Tuscany Lace actually made in Tuscany of linen thread; or in any way, by assertion or inference, misrepresenting the type, quality, or origin of an article of merchandise offered for sale. (Sept. 17, 1940.)

2931. Linens, Laces and Handkerchiefs—Source or Origin.—Salim S. Dweck, an individual, engaged in the importation and wholesale distribution of Chinese and Japanese linens, laces, and handkerchiefs, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

True Tuscany Lace, as known to the trade and the public, is a hand-made filet lace of grape design produced from linen thread in the Tuscany district of Italy. A lace not made in Tuscany and of linen, which is designated “Tuscany Lace” is a misbranded product.

Salim S. Dweck in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “Tuscany” or word or words of similar import as descriptive of laces, covers, sets, or other articles sold by him which are not in fact true Tuscany lace actually made in Tuscany of linen thread; or in any way, by assertion or inference, misrepresenting the type, quality, or origin of an article of merchandise offered for sale. (Sept. 17, 1940.)

engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal product under the brand or trade designation “Egyptian Herb Tea” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Ralph E. Pritchard, in connection with the sale and distribution of his medicinal compounds in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing:

(a) That the product designated and sold by him as Egyptian Herb Tea or any product of similar composition, is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for obesity or for any of the various ailments, sufferings and discomfortures caused by overweight or surplus fat; or that by its use one may reduce safely or pleasantly without exercise, drugs, diet, or embarrassment.

(b) That said preparation is efficacious in the treatment of rheumatism, kidney trouble, high blood pressure, indigestion, gas on the stomach, pyelitis, backache, or any other affliction or condition whatsoever aside from constipation; or that priests or wise men of ancient Egypt have worked marvelous cures, or any cures, with the herbs contained in such compound; or that the same is a subtle combination of the world’s most valuable medicinal herbs.

(c) That said Egyptian Herb Tea or any product of similar composition is a tonic, or that it activates the liver or spleen or flushes the tissues of noxious poisons; or, because of purported tonic properties or otherwise, that it is capable of bringing to the user new health, hope or happiness or more vigorous lasting health; or is of marked benefit to one’s health and well being, or keeps or helps to keep the user healthy, active, and clear in mind or normal in weight.

(d) That said preparation is a blood purifier or eliminates dangerous toxic poisons from the system, or keeps the blood stream pure; or removes the poisons from the blood which cause all ailments, or that all ailments are caused by poisons in the blood.

(e) That Egyptian Herb Tea is the safest or quickest way to give proper elimination, or that it restores proper body action, breaks up fatty tissues, relieves overburdened glands, rids the body of all unwanted materials, brings the action of the different organs back to a normal state, produces a healthy normal action of all the organs of the body, or so conditions the body that no more fat will accumulate.

(f) That he is an importer of herbs or any other commodity.

The said Ralph E. Pritchard further agreed not to publish any testimonials containing statements or assertions contrary to the terms of the foregoing agreement. (Sept. 20, 1940.)
2933. Silverware, Etc.—Manufacture and Quality.—Diamond Silver Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing a line of silverware, cutlery and novelty flatware, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Diamond Silver Co. agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words “Silver Plate” as a mark, stamp, brand, or otherwise to purportedly describe its plated products, when in fact said products actually are not plated with silver; and from the use of the words “Silver Plate” in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said products are silver plated or plated with silver, when in fact they are not so plated. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2934. Silverware, Etc.—Manufacture and Quality.—J. Busch, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the wholesale distribution of silverware, flatware, cutlery, and glassware in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

J. Busch, Inc., agreed to cease and desist from selling or distributing in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, plated products which are marked, stamped, branded, or labeled with the words “Silver Plate” or with any other word or words of similar implication, when in fact said products actually are not plated with silver. It also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words “Silver Plate” in any way as descriptive of its plated products so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said products are silver plated or plated with silver, when in fact they are not so plated. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2935. Plated Products—Manufacture and Quality.—Samuel Goldfarb, Saul Goldfarb, and Philip Goldfarb, copartners trading as Goldfarb Novelty Co., engaged in the business of operating a wholesale novelty house and in the sale of their merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Samuel Goldfarb, Saul Goldfarb, and Philip Goldfarb and each of them agreed that they would cease and desist from selling or distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, plated products which are marked, stamped, branded, or labeled with the words “Silver Plate” or with any other word or words of similar implication, when in fact said products actually are not plated with silver. Said copartners, individually and collectively, also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words “Silver Plate” in any way as descriptive of plated products so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said products are silver plated or plated with silver, when in fact they are not so plated. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2936. Monogramming Machines and Equipment—Patented.—Irving Gould, sole trader as The Artcraft Monogram Co., engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of machines and equipment under the trade name “Maderagram” for the monogramming of letters and insignia on shirts, handkerchiefs, pillow-cases, and other fabrics, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Irving Gould, in connection with his sale and distribution of monogramming machines and equipment or other commodities in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing that the Maderagram machine, or machine or device of similar construction, is equipped with patented attachments; or that the transparent stencils or other unpatented commodities sold by him are patented; or by the use of the words or expressions of similar import representing that an article of commerce has protection, characteristics or qualities which it does not in fact possess. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2937. Fiber Boxes—Manufacturer.—Gem Corrugated Box Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution, as jobber, of fiber boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Gem Corrugated Box Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from marking, stamping, or branding its products with its corporate or trade name together with the words “Certificate of Box Maker” or the word “maker” or any other word or words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or others that the said corporation makes or manufactures said products or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2938. Rugs—Composition.—Manuel Feldman, an individual, engaged in business as an importer of hooked rugs and in the sale and distribution of certain thereof under the name “Province” and of certain others under the name “Acadia” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Manuel Feldman, in connection with the sale or distribution of his rug products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from the use of the words “All Wool” in advertisements and advertising matter, on labels, or otherwise, as descriptive of said products not composed wholly of wool; and from the use of the word “Wool” either alone or in connection with the word “All” or with any other word or words or in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to confuse, mislead or deceive purchasers with respect to the wool content of said products. If the rug is faced wholly or in substantial part with wool, but is backed with fabric or material other than wool, and the word “Wool” is used to refer only to the wool content of the rug face, then in that case, the word “Wool” shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that the rug is not composed wholly of wool. (Sept. 23, 1940.)

2939. Publications—Nature, Value, Special or Limited Offer, Free, Price, Etc.—Nathan Gilbert, a sole trader, as Maywood Publishing Co., engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a publication designated “20th Century Business Encyclopedia” and of other publications and pamphlets, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Nathan Gilbert, in connection with the sale and distribution of his publications in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of the word “Encyclopedia” or word or term of similar import in the title of or as descriptive of the publication heretofore designated “20th Century Business Encyclopedia” or of any other publication which is not in fact a comprehensive summary of knowledge or of a certain branch of knowledge.
(b) Statements such as "contain $100 worth of plans," "worth $50," "obtained at a cost of from one to five dollars," "value $4.75," or any representation, similar or otherwise, the effect of which is to import or imply that the publication offered for sale or sold by him have a worth or value in excess of the amount or amounts actually paid or charged therefor.

(c) Representing that an offer of any of his commodities constitutes or partakes of the nature of a "special" offer limited either as to time, persons, circumstances or otherwise, when in fact such an offer is or has been regularly and continuously made or used by him in connection with his usual method of merchandising.

(d) Representing, by use of the word "free" or word or term of similar import or meaning, that any booklets, pamphlets, or commodities regularly included in a combination offer with other articles of merchandising are given as gratuities.

(e) Representing that the contents of any publication or pamphlet offered for sale or sold by him are either "secret," "amazing," or otherwise undiscovered, unknown, astonishing, confounding, or bewildering.

(f) Representing that each, or any, of the so-called "twenty-six Amazing Secrets" has "at all times" or ever been sold for the sum of one dollar or any amount approximate thereto; or otherwise representing the normal or regular price of his publications or the contents thereof to be amounts which are in fact fictitious and in excess of those at which such publications or their contents are customarily offered for sale. (Sept. 24, 1940.)

2940. Insecticides—Qualities, Results, Comparative Merits, Safety and Manufacturer.—The Imperial Chemical Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of horticultural insecticides including a product designated "Bug-Dust-O-Cide," in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Imperial Chemical Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing that "Bug-Dust-O-Cide" or similar product is an "all purpose" insecticide; that it is a "dependable" or adequate protection for gardens, flowers, shrubs, or plants against damage by insects generally; that it can be depended upon to prevent plant disease; or that it is superior in quality or more powerful than various comparable competitive products.
(b) Statements or representations, pictorial or otherwise, which convey or tend to convey the impression or belief that "Bug-Dust-O-Cide" or similar product can be depended upon to destroy or control all insects injurious to flowers, vegetables, or plants; will destroy or control insects generally; or will destroy any of the various species named or depicted in its advertising media which are in fact immune to the lethal effects of such insecticide.

(c) Representing by statements such as "Rotenone is thirty-eight times stronger than lead arsenate as a stomach poison to bugs and insects," that such product generally is more efficacious than lead arsenate as an insecticide, or that it is a stomach poison for all bugs or insects.

(d) Unqualified representations that "Bug-Dust-O-Cide" neither stunts, injures nor retards the growth or development of plant life or has any injurious effect thereon.

(e) Stating that "Bug-Dust-O-Cide" or other insecticide containing nicotine or other toxic ingredient in sufficient quantity to cause injury when taken into the human or animal system is non-poisonous to humans or domestic animals.

(f) Statements which import or imply that the lethal effects of "Bug-Dust-O-Cide" or other insecticide containing ingredients the lethal effects of which are delayed, generally are "almost immediate" or prompt in their action; or which convey or may tend to convey the impression or belief that such product is an effectual or positive insecticide in all cases.

(g) Representing that it manufactures or otherwise makes any stock-dips, disinfectants, or other product or products not actually compounded, manufactured, or made by it. (Sept. 25, 1940.)

2941. Cosmetics—Prices, Value, Special or Limited Offer, History and London Branch.—Clarence D. Herron and Kenneth Herron, copartners, trading as House of Charm Cosmetic Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of face powder and other cosmetics in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Clarence D. Herron and Kenneth Herron, individually and as copartners trading as House of Charm Cosmetic Co., their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed that they and each of them will cease and desist forthwith from:

1. The use on the containers of their products or otherwise of any false, fictitious or misleading price which is in excess of the price at which said products are customarily sold in the usual course of retail business; and from the use of any purported price marking, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey to purchasers an erroneous belief with respect to either the quality or the value of said product.

2. Stating or representing that their products are a $3.50 value or are of any other alleged valuation which is exaggerated or in excess of the actual value of said products or the price which the said copartners charge and the purchaser pays for said products in the usual course of business.

3. Stating or representing that the offered or purported retail selling price of their products, or any thereof, is special or is limited with respect to time, when in fact said price is the customary price asked for said products in the usual course of business and without limitation as to time.

4. Stating or representing that the manufacturer of any product offered for sale or sold by the said copartners is backed by manufacturing experience extending over a period of time in excess of what is actually the fact.

5. Stating or representing that the amount asked by said copartners for any of their products covers only the packaging and handling costs thereof, when in fact, the said amount offers them a profit in excess of such cost.

6. The use on the containers of their products, in their advertising or printed matter, or in any other way of the word “London” either alone or in connection with any other word or words so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said copartners have an office or offices or a business establishment at London, England. (Sept. 26, 1940.)

2942. Mausoleums, Vaults and Burial Boxes—Composition.—Missouri Mausoleum Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing mausoleums, vaults and sectional concrete burial boxes and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Missouri Mausoleum Co., Inc., in connection with the advertisement, labeling, offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its products in commerce as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from the use of the words “Asphalt-Lined” as descriptive of such of said products as are not in fact lined with asphalt; and from the use of the said words in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the lining of the products to which said word or words refer is composed wholly of asphalt. If the lining is composed in substantial part of asphalt and in part of other material, and the word "asphalt" is used as descriptive of such asphalt content, then in that case, the said word "asphalt" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly and unequivocally that said lining is not composed wholly of asphalt but is composed in part of material other than asphalt. (Sept. 30, 1940.)

2943. Livestock and Poultry Feeds—Qualities, Results, Comparative Merits, Competitive Products, Scientific Facts, Composition, Etc.—Honeymead Products Co., an Iowa corporation, engaged in the manufacture of prepared livestock and poultry feeds and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist
from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Honeymead Products Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in interstate commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from:

(a) Representations which import or imply that livestock fed with its products command top market prices or sell at prices greater than are received for livestock of comparable quality or breed fed with rations containing equal or superior nutritional values or protein supplements.

(b) Representing, by the use of statements such as "Honeymead fed cattle are dressing out whiter and with a higher quality beef than the average," that the beef or meat of such cattle is superior to that of cattle of comparable quality or breed fed with other rations of recognized nutritional value; or any other unwarranted disparagement of competitive products.

(c) Stating that the so-called "Honeymead Market Calendar," or any other advertisement or publicity material prepared by it is compiled or otherwise prepared by the editors or other members of the staff of the Chicago Drovers Journal or other publication, or by any person or persons who do not actually compile or prepare such material.

(d) Statements which misrepresent or unduly exaggerate the importance or value of dextrose or corn sugar molasses as an animal or poultry ration, such as:

The best and most economical way of giving stock a large amount of energy producing and fat building carbohydrates.

Dextrose can be made to double your farm profits.
Adding corn sugar molasses to your feeding program will not only produce high quality beef and pork but will reduce total feeding costs.

Corn sugar molasses assures you of fine livestock, gives you greater quality and quantity of pork, and brings you the top price on the market.

Science has provided that the addition of dextrose to the ration is the most important step in getting big returns in the feed lot since balanced feed of livestock was first conceived; increases its palatability; the most nutritional food your hogs can be given.

The most scientific hog feeding program.
The miracle in nutrition.
The ideal hog fattener.

(e) Representing that authorities agree that corn sugar molasses should be added to ensilage, or that experiments have proved the health value of feeding corn sugar molasses to stock in indicated quantities or otherwise, until such claims shall have been endorsed or subscribed to by recognized livestock nutritional authorities or substantiated by experiments conducted by reliable disinterested authorities such as state agricultural experiment stations.

(f) Statements which import or imply that corn sugar molasses is a prophylactic, an effective treatment or a competent remedy for any malady, disease or ailment to which livestock are subject.

(g) Statements to the effect that its “Special Hybrid Hog Supplement” is a sensational new finding in the hog feeding industry; that such product has attracted widespread or general attention; or that it is one of the most important developments which has taken place in years; or any other misleading or exaggerated statements concerning said product.

(h) Representations which import or imply that Hybrid corn differs from open pollinated corn in chemical content, texture, hardness or palatability; or that hybrid corn is superior in food energy to open pollinated varieties of corn.

(i) Statements which tend or may tend to convey the impression or belief that the food energy contained in Hybrid corn can be utilized only by the addition of “Special Hybrid Hog Supplement”; or, by implication or otherwise, that a protein supplement to open pollinated varieties of corn is not indicated.

(j) Representing that “Honeymead Milkmeal” is a competent supplement or substitute for milk, takes the place of milk in hog or pig rations, or keeps pigs healthy.

(k) Statements to the effect that such product provides an ideal protein supplement for other rations or furnishes a balanced feeding program, until such time as it may be determined by competent disinterested scientific authorities that such product is in fact a complete, balanced supplement for pig or hog rations.

(7) Statements to the effect that a feed or ration consisting of "Milkmeel," corn sugar molasses and corn is the quickest known ration to fatten hogs.

(m) The use of the brand name "Milkmeel," or of the word "milk" either alone or in connection with any other word, as descriptive of a product composed predominantly of ingredients other than milk or milk products; or in any manner so as to import or imply that such product contains a predominant or substantial quantity or proportion of milk or milk products.

(n) Use of the phrase "rich in dextrose" as descriptive of a product which does not contain a substantial quantity of dextrose; or any statement or representation the effect of which causes or may cause the impression or belief that any of its products contain specified ingredients in quantities or percentages greater than are actually contained therein.

(o) Asserting that any of its livestock or poultry food products contains every needed element in the most digestible form; is completely or scientifically balanced, laboratory controlled, vitamin calculated, or an ideal supplement; contains all necessary minerals, proteins, carbohydrates, and fats; or otherwise representing such foods or food supplements as containing all necessary elements or constituents in proper quantities or proportions, until the correct nutritional and vitamin requirements of various farm animals and poultry has been determined or established by competent scientific authorities and the Honeymead products definitely meet such scientifically ascertained requirements.

(p) Statements which import or imply that vitamins A, B, D, E, and G, or any of them, are indicated as a supplement to the diet of farm livestock or poultry, unless in direct connection with each and every such representation, it be clearly and unambiguously stated that the benefits claimed will obtain only when there is a deficiency or suboptimal supply of such vitamin or vitamins in the feed or ration ordinarily provided such animals or poultry.  (Sept. 30, 1940.)

2944. Raw Furs—Prices to be Paid, Guarantee and Comparable Prices.—Albert H. Singer, sole trader as Albert H. Singer Fur Co., engaged as a dealer in the purchase and sale of raw furs in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Albert H. Singer, in connection with his buying and selling furs in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:
(a) Quoting or otherwise holding forth any fictitious or exorbitant price or prices which trappers or fur dealers may expect to receive from him for their furs; quoting prices which he has not in fact paid in the usual course of business; or quoting prices which might be applicable to furs of a grade or quality not produced in or which are exceptions in the section or territory circularized.

(b) Representing, directly or inferentially, that he pays a higher price for furs than do any other fur buyers, or that trappers or dealers in furs can or will realize a greater return by selling their furs to him than would be obtainable by selling such furs to any other fur buyers or through brokers.

(c) The use of the word “Guarantee” or any other word or words of similar meaning unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security.

(d) Representing that prices quoted are guaranteed unless he actually pays the prices quoted during the full period of time for which such price lists are effective or in force.

(e) Representations which import or imply that he purchases furs from trappers at prices equal or comparable to prices paid any other shippers so long as he pays dealers substantially more for the same types and grades of furs.

2945. Live Stock and Poultry Food—Comparative Value and Merits, Qualities, Results, Testimonials, Composition, Manufacturer, Guarantee, Etc.—Myco-Lac Mineral Yeast Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a livestock and poultry food or food supplement designated “Myco-Lac Mineral Yeast,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Myco-Lac Mineral Yeast Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, directly or indirectly, from:

(a) Representing that a product composed of 32 pounds of oats and one-third pound of “Myco-Lac” is equal in feeding value to 56 pounds of corn; or to any quantity of corn or other feed not scientifically proven.

(b) Statements to the effect that “Myco-Lac” is a “necessary” supplement to the food of livestock and poultry; that its use results in complete digestion of rations to which it is added or causes livestock to fatten on less quantities of food than otherwise would be used; that it enriches milk or generally increases milk production; or that it or its yeast content can be depended upon to build or strengthen reproductive organs, increase fertility, prevent abortion, or make calving easier.

(c) Stating, directly or inferentially, that such product is superior to all competing products for increasing weight, stimulating appetite, rounding out cattle for market, or for any other purpose.

(d) Representing that “Myco-Lac” when fed to sheep, generally reduces birth losses, prevents poison milk, improves the wool texture, or increases the growth thereof.

(e) Publishing or disseminating testimonials exaggerating the weight gains or other benefits obtainable by the use of “Myco-Lac,” or containing any claims, assertions, or implications contrary to the terms and spirit of this agreement.

(f) Representing that “Myco-Lac” when fed to hogs results in decreased loss at farrowing or in strong and healthy pigs.

(g) Statements to the effect that pulverized grain cultured with “Myco-Lac” constitutes a balanced ration, until such time as it may be determined by competent disinterested scientific authorities that such ration is in fact a completely balanced food for farm livestock or poultry.

(h) Representing that charcoal absorbs gas, sweetens the stomach, purifies stomach acids, or is beneficial in cases of diarrhea; that sulphur purifies the blood, stimulates circulation, improves, or benefits the hair or skin, or aids digestion; or that either sodium sulphate or magnesium sulphate has a healing effect.

(i) Representing that potassium iodide purifies blood or prevents abortion; or that it acts as a goiter preventive or prevents the condition designated “big neck,” assists the action of the thyroid gland or prevents hairless pigs, unless in direct connection with each and every such representation, it be clearly and unambiguously stated that the benefits claimed will only obtain in cases of iodine deficiency.

(j) Statements which import or imply that the yeast contained in “Myco-Lac” is the greatest known source of Vitamins B or G; or that the yeast, mineral, or other content thereof causes livestock food to take on a predigested form or appreciably improves the palatability, digestibility, or utility thereof.

(k) Representing that farm soil generally has been robbed or depleted of the elements necessary to supply minerals in livestock food; that it is necessary generally to supplement livestock food with minerals; or that sulphate of iron or any other minerals or constituents not present in “Myco-Lac” are contained therein.

(l) Representations which import or imply that “Myco-Lac” is a prophylactic, an effective treatment or a competent remedy for any malady, disease, or ailment to which farm livestock or poultry are subject; that it builds up the resistance of livestock; or is an insurance against disease or a safeguard for health.

(m) Representing, directly or inferentially, that such product when used or fed as directed:

1. Provides sufficient protein for livestock or poultry.
2. Is a potent or adequate source of yeast, cod liver oil or vitamins A, B, D, G, in livestock deficient in vitamins.
3. Is adequate as a supplement to rations lacking in vitamins; or
4. Will produce miraculous or almost miraculous results.

(n) Statements which import or imply that vitamins A, B, D, and G are indicated as a supplement to the diet of farm livestock or poultry, unless in direct connection with each and every such representation, it be clearly and unambiguously stated that the benefits claimed will obtain only when there is a deficiency or suboptimal supply of such vitamin or vitamins in the feed or ration ordinarily provided such animals or poultry.

(o) Representing that the same care is used in selecting the ingredients and compounding “Myco-Lac” as is used in preparing physicians’ prescriptions.

(p) Statements which import or imply that it manufactures or makes product it sells or owns or controls the factory in which such product is manufactured; or that it has any chemists on its staff or in its employ.

(q) The use of the word “guaranteed” or any other word or words of similar meaning unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security, as for example, refund of purchase price. (Sept. 30, 1940.)

2946. Poultry and Livestock Food Conditioner—Qualities, Properties, Comparative Value and Prices, and Testimonials.—Stock-Gro, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a food conditioner designated “Stock-Gro” for poultry and livestock, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Stock-Gro, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its product in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from representing:

(a) That Stock-Gro, or any product of similar composition, is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for, a preventive of, or “corrects” necro enteritis, blackhead, coccidiosis, round worm, scours or any other disease or affliction of livestock or poultry; or directly or inferentially that it possesses any therapeutic properties whatsoever, or is efficacious as a food conditioner or otherwise beyond such nutritive properties as it may possess.

(b) By statement or inference that lactic acid is “a most excellent antiseptic,” or that it aids the growth of animal tissue, or has or may have any beneficial effect whatsoever in the prevention or treatment of round worm infestation, intestinal disturbances, or other diseases of animals.

(c) That Stock-Gro has or will cut the cost of milk feeding 40 percent, or is the most economical form of milk feeding; or that its use is economical at the prices charged, so long as similar food conditioners, some with even higher protein percentages, are obtainable at substantially less cost.

The said Stock-Gro, Inc., further agrees not to publish or disseminate any testimonials containing statements, assertions or implications contrary to the terms and spirit of the foregoing agreement.

(Oct. 1, 1940.)

2947. Seneca Textile Corp., in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of fabrics in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of either the word “sunfast,” “tubfast,” or “faskolor,” or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication as descriptive of fabrics, the appearance or color of which is changed or affected when the fabrics are laundered or exposed to light; and from the use of the said words, or any thereof, as descriptive of fabrics so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the coloring of the fabrics thus purportedly described is unfadable or proof against fading, as when the fabrics are exposed to light or are laundered.

(Oct. 3, 1940.)

2951. Life Preservers—Qualities, Guarantee, Nature, and Insured.—Jno. O. Flautt Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, formerly Jno. O. Flautt and John M. O'Connor were copartners, trading under the firm name and style of O'Connor-Flautt Co. The said Jno. O. Flautt Manufacturing Co., Inc., upon its incorporation, on or about April 4, 1939, acquired the business theretofore conducted by said copartners, by purchase of the physical assets, and from and since its incorporation has continued the operation of such business. The said Jno. O. Flautt Manufacturing Co., Inc., and/or Jno. O. Flautt and John M. O'Connor, copartners, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of life preservers or buoyancy belts designated “Life-guard” or “LifeGard” in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and partnerships and with firms and individuals likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Jno. O. Flautt Manufacturing Co., Inc., and Jno. O. Flautt and John M. O'Connor, copartners, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of life preservers or buoyancy belts in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing, directly or inferentially, that “Lifeguard” belts or other life preservers or buoyancy belts afford complete protection from drowning or that the use of such life preservers or belts provides "perfect" or absolute safety for persons in or on the water, or "positive insurance" against drowning.

(b) The use of the word "guarantee" or any other word or words of similar meaning unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security.

(c) Statements, such as "When needed, it inflates itself into a man-size life preserver," which import or imply that the inflating mechanism contained in "lifegard" belts is completely automatic or that no manual action is required or necessary in order to inflate such belts.

(d) Representing that insurance policies are issued to purchasers of "Lifegard" belts or that purchasers and wearers of such belts are insured against drowning in the sum of $1,000 or any other amount, unless in direct connection with each and every such representation any and all limitations or qualifications pertaining to such insurance be clearly and definitely stated.

(e) Representing that purchasers and users of "Lifegard" belts are insured by Lloyds of London, or any statements the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief that such purchasers and users are insured by Lloyds of London. (Oct. 4, 1940.)

2952. Moto-Sway Corporation of America, in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in interstate commerce, as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist, directly or inferentially, from representing that automobile shock absorbers cannot be examined or refilled without the use of "Moto-Sway" automobile jacks; that enclosed springs of automobiles cannot be lubricated without the use of such appliances; that the use thereof results in the removal of all oils and sediments from crank-cases of automobile engines or in the elimination of repair bills; or in any other manner importing or implying that such equipment is necessary or essential for the lubrication or other servicing of automobiles. (Oct. 4, 1940.)

2953. Raw Furs—Prices to be Paid and Comparative Prices.—Otto P. Barth, a sole trader as Jas. C. Gordon Fur Co. and as Victor Fur Co., engaged as a dealer, in the purchase and sale of raw furs in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Otto P. Barth, in connection with his buying and selling furs in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from:

(a) Quoting or otherwise holding forth any extravagant or exorbitant price or prices which trappers or fur dealers may expect to receive from him for their furs; quoting price ranges which include amounts seldom paid, or quoting such extraordinary prices in any other manner having the capacity, tendency or effect of conveying the impression that the same are frequently paid; or quoting prices which might be applicable to furs of a grade or quality not produced in or which are exceptions in the section or territory circularized.

(b) Representing, directly or inferentially, that he pays higher prices for furs than do all other fur buyers; that trappers or dealers in furs can or will realize a greater return by selling their furs to him than would be obtainable by selling such furs to other fur buyers or through brokers; or by direct statement or by inference such as, for example, an implied necessity of obtaining raw furs with which to fill orders, that he pays higher prices than are justified by general market conditions. (Oct. 4, 1940.)

2954. Corrugated Fiber Boxes—Maker or Manufacturer.—Federated Container Co., Inc., a New York corporation, engaged as a jobber in the sale and distribution of corrugated fiber shipping boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Federated Container Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its corrugated fiber boxes in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist from stamping or marking said boxes or causing the same to be stamped or marked with the purported certification of a box maker or manufacturer together with such use of its corporate or trade name "Federated Container Co., Inc." as tends or may tend to create the impression that it, the named corporation, is the maker of said boxes. The said corporation also agrees to cease and desist from the use, as a mark or stamp on its boxes or otherwise in connection with the sale in commerce of said products, of the word "maker" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured. (Oct. 4, 1940.)

2955. Fiber Board Boxes—Maker or Manufacturer.—Samuel Goldstein and Abraham Goldstein, copartners trading as Merit Container Co., engaged in the sale of fiberboard packing boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

They also agreed to cease and desist from the use as a mark or stamp on their products or otherwise in connection with the sale in commerce of said products, of the word “maker” or of any other word or words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said copartners actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said products are made or manufactured. (Oct. 4, 1940.)

2956. Cosmetics—Endorsement or Approval and Qualities.—Carolyn Nilson Dietrich, an individual trading as “Carolyn Nilson System of Beauty Culture,” with her principal place of business located in Detroit, Mich., engaged primarily in personally administering so-called Swedish massage and gymnastics, and as an adjunct to this line of endeavor has also sold and distributed a line of cosmetics in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Carolyn Nilson Dietrich, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of her preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed she will cease and desist forthwith from the use in advertisements and advertising or printed matter of whatever kind or description, or in any other way, of any word or words, statement, or representation, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers (a) that said products have been endorsed or approved by either physicians, Hollywood stars or leaders everywhere or, in fact, anywhere; (b) that either the hair tonic preparation or the eyelash preparation will stimulate or in any way cause the hair to grow; (c) that the use of the so-called Bust Developer Cream will enlarge or reduce the breasts or in any way influence the development or contour of the breasts; (d) that the use of the so-called reducing lotion will bring about a reduction of body weight. (Oct. 7, 1940.)

2957. Herb Medicine—Qualities, Properties, Results, and Prices.—Oman E. Johnston, an individual, trading as Kenjol Pharmacal Co., engaged in the sale of a product known as “Native Herb Medicine” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Oman E. Johnston, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of his product “Native Herb Medicine” in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing:

1. That said product will relieve or cure ailments such as biliousness, colds, or suffering from piles, or rid the system of lumbago or rheumatism, or afford rapid relief from pain or all female complaints.

2. That said product is a competent remedy for or will afford a curative action upon such organic or functional diseases as hardening of the arteries, diseased kidneys, ulcers of the stomach or bowels, lowered vitality, or liver diseases.

3. That said product possesses any direct remedial value or has medicinal properties, other than that of a laxative.

4. That said product is “Standard $1.00 Size” or that its regular retail price is $1, when in fact, such amount is fictitious, in excess of the price for which said product is customarily sold in the usual course of retail trade.

5. That said product is sold for 25 cents only if the coupon is presented or as an advertising medium, when in fact said product may be purchased at any time for 25 cents with or without the coupon. (Oct. 7, 1940.)

2958. Mattresses and Other Household Furnishings—Prices or Values.—Stewart & Co., Inc., a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of mattresses and other household furnishings in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Stewart & Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its mattresses or other merchandise in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, directly or inferentially, from quoting or representing as the customary or regular price or value thereof, prices or values which are in fact fictitious and in excess of the prices at which such merchandise customarily is offered for sale and sold in the normal course of business. (Oct. 7, 1940.)

2959. Raw Furs—Prices to be Paid, Comparative Prices, and Guarantee.—W. Irving Herskovits Fur Co., Inc., a corporation engaged as a dealer in the purchase and sale of raw furs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

W. Irving Herskovits Fur Co., Inc., in connection with its buying and selling furs in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Quoting or otherwise holding forth any fictitious or exorbitant price or prices which trappers or fur dealers may expect to receive from it for their furs; quoting prices which it has not in fact paid in the usual course of business; or quoting prices which might be applicable to furs of a grade or quality not produced in or which are exceptions in the section or territory circularized.

(b) Representing, directly or inferentially, that it pays higher prices for furs than do all other fur buyers; that trappers or dealers in furs can or will realize a greater return by selling their furs to it than would be obtainable by selling such furs to other fur buyers or through brokers; or by direct statement or by inference such as, for example, an implied necessity of obtaining furs with which to fill orders, that it pays higher prices than are justified by general market conditions.

(c) The use of the word "Guarantee" or any other word or words of similar meaning unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security. (Oct. 7, 1940.)

2960. Automobile Tires—Composition and Quality.—Ethyl Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., a corporation, and Harry Mufson and Samuel Mufson are officers and sole owners of the capital stock of said corporation and also engaged in business as copartners under the firm name of Fordham Tire Co. at the same place of business. Said corporation and copartners, engaged in the sale and distribution of automobile tires in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and partnerships and with firms and individuals likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
There is a custom and usage in the rubber tire industry, followed by a number of manufacturers of pneumatic automobile and truck tires, of marking such tires with words and figures or phrases so as to indicate conspicuously and truthfully the number of plies existing in the construction of such tires. The industry's interpretation of a "heavy duty" passenger-car tire is one having more than four plies, usually six. This custom and usage is well known to the public, and the public is accustomed in the purchase of tires to place full credence in the manufacturer's representations as to the manner and quality of construction and the number of plies therein contained as indicated, by the marks, brands, words, letters, figures, insignia, or phrases appearing on the wrappings and sidewalls of said tires.

Ethyl Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., and Harry Mufson and Samuel Mufson, and each of them, in connection with their sale and distribution of automobile tires in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) The use of a figure five medallion or the words "Heavy Duty" as descriptive of a four-ply automobile tire; or representing directly or indirectly, by means of letters, blotters, words, figures, price lists, tire wrappings, markings, insignia, or brands appearing on their automobile tires or in any other way, that the tires sold by them contain more plies in their construction than they actually contain.

(b) Representing directly or indirectly that the construction of tires offered for sale and sold by them or the materials therein contained are other than the actual construction and materials contained in said tires. (Oct. 7, 1940.)

2961. Corrugated Fiber Boxes—Maker or Manufacturer.—United Box Corporation, a corporation, engaged as a jobber in the sale and distribution of corrugated, fiber boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

United Box Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of its corrugated fiber boxes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from stamping or marking said boxes or causing the same to be marked or stamped with the purported certification of a box maker or manufacturer together with such use of its corporate or trade name "United Box Corporation," as tends or may tend to create the impression that it, the named corporation, is the maker of said boxes. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use, as a mark or stamp on its boxes or otherwise in connection with the sale in commerce of said products, of the word "maker" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said boxes are made or manufactured. (Oct.
9, 1940.)

2962. Pens—Composition, Prices, and Limited Offer.—William J.
Brewer, an individual, trading as "Signet Stationery Company" engaged in the sale and distribution of stationery, letterheads, and envelopes, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

William J. Brewer, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist

1. The use of the word "Tipped" either alone or in connection with the word "Durium" or the word "Warranted" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply or the effect of which conveys, tends, or may tend to convey the belief that the pen to which said word or words refer has been headed, pointed or tipped with a substance known as "Durium" or with any superior, hard or other metal, different from the body of the pen, to insure smooth writing and lasting quality.

2. The use of the statement "14-karat gold point" as descriptive of the pen of said item which actually is not composed of gold of such indicated carats fineness; and from the use of the mark "14 K" or any symbol of similar import or meaning, as a stamp or brand for pen points or in advertising or printed matter referring to pens so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that said pens or pen points are 14-carat gold. If such pen or pen point actually is plated with gold of 14 carats fineness, and the symbol "14 K" is used as descriptive of such plate, then in that case, the symbol "14 K" shall be immediately accompanied by the words
"gold plate" or other word or words of like import printed in equally conspicuous and discernible type so as to indicate clearly that the said symbol refers to the plating of said pen or pen point.

3. Stating or representing that said items are sold to stores for resale or that $1.50 is the lowest price at which said items may be purchased; and from the use of any statement or representation, the effect of which is to ascribe to said item a purported retail selling price which is fictitious or in excess of that at which said item, or articles of comparable value are customarily sold in the usual course of business.

4. The use of the statement "we are going to give to a few representative people in each section * * * a pen and pencil * * * If you mail the enclosed reservation at once * * * for it is good for only ten days” or of any other statement or representation which imports or implies or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that such offer is limited with respect to either the time of its acceptance, the number or type or residential location of the persons to whom such offer is customarily made, when in fact the offer is a continuous one, unlimited as to time, and is available to anyone who responds to the advertising of the said William J. Brewer. (Oct. 11, 1940.)

2063. Indian Preparation—Qualities, Results, History, Composition, Value, Price, and Special or Limited Offer.—Jacob G. Bowser, an individual, together with his wife Opal Keller Bowser, trades under the name “Ponca Drug Company.” Said individuals engaged in business of compounding a preparation called “Highwood’s Old Indian Prescription” and in sale of said preparation in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Jacob G. Bowser and Opal Keller Bowser, in connection with the advertisement and labeling, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from:

1. Stating or representing that the use of said preparation will relieve the worst cases of stomach trouble in a few minutes, or pain in the back, shoulders, and hips in 1 day, or colds, fever, and tired feeling in 1 day, or that the use of said preparation will do more than to act as a laxative and thus temporarily relieve ailments, as headaches, stomach gas, and sour stomach due to constipation or digestive fermentation.

2. Stating or representing that the taking of said preparation results in the elimination from the takers’ system of “black as ink bile.”

3. The use of the word “Indian” either alone or in connection with the words “Old” or “Prescription” as a trade name for or in any way as descriptive of said preparation so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said preparation consists of a formula in use by and which has been handed down from old Indian tribes, when in fact said preparation contains ingredients unknown to the old Indian tribes and medicine men.

4. Stating or representing that their prescription is a one dollar value or is of any other alleged valuation which is exaggerated or in excess of the actual value of said product or the price which the said individuals charge and the purchaser pays for said preparation in the usual course of business.

5. Stating or representing that the offered or purported retail selling price of said preparation is special or is limited with respect to time, when in fact said price is the customary price asked for said preparation in the usual course of business and without limitation as to time. (Oct. 15, 1940.)

2964. Men's Neckwear—Nature of Manufacture and Composition.—Harry Isaacs, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of men's neckwear and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships, likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Harry Isaacs, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its neckwear in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of depictions or illustrations of hand looms on labels, brands, or other advertising media, so as to import or imply that the fabric or material of which such neckwear was manufactured was made on hand looms when, in fact, such material was made or fabricated on power driven or machine looms; or from any representation, whether by depiction, statement or otherwise, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief to purchasers that neckwear or other textile products manufactured of fabric or material not actually made on hand looms are made of hand woven or homespun materials. (Oct. 17, 1940.)

2965. Perfumes—Importers, Manufacturers, and Source or Origin.—Donald Sloat, an individual, trading as Sloat Perfume Co., engaged in the business of selling perfumes and in said business in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Donald Sloat, in connection with the advertisement, labeling, offering for sale, sale or distribution of his perfumes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. The use of either the word "Importers" or the word "Manufacturers" as descriptive of the business conducted by him.

2. The use of the word "Manufacturers" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, either alone or in connection with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said products are made, manufactured or compounded.

3. The use of the words "Dorian of London," "Etoile Du Soir," "Celeste Nuit," "Rejuoir," or the words "Blue Hawaii," as descriptive of products of domestic origin; and from referring to said products through the use of the said quoted words or of any other word or words of similar implication, either alone or in connection with any pictorial or other representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to customers or prospective customers that the products so referred to are of such foreign origin as is indicated by the particular word or words used. (Oct. 18, 1940.)

2966. Perfumes—Source or Origin and Price.—R. Rudinger, an individual trading as R. Rudinger & Co., engaged in the sale of perfume in commerce as defined by the act, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

R. Rudinger, in soliciting the sale of and selling his perfume in commerce as defined by the act, agreed to cease and desist from the use on labels affixed to said product of the words "Hawaiian Pikaki," or of either of said words so as to import or imply or which may convey or tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said product has been made or compounded in the Hawaiian Islands or has been made or compounded from the flower of that name, when such is not the fact. The said individual also agreed to cease and desist from the use on the containers of said product or otherwise of any false, fictitious, or misleading price which is in excess of the price at which said product is sold in the regular course of business, and from the use of any purported price marking, the effect of which is to convey to purchasers an erroneous belief with respect to the quality or value of said product. (Jan. 7, 1939.)

2967. Perfumes and Cosmetics—Source or Origin, Imported, Composition and Qualities.—The House of Hollywood, a corporation, engaged in the business of selling and distributing perfumes and cosmetics in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

The House of Hollywood, in soliciting the sale of and selling its perfume products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising matter or on the labels affixed to the containers of said products, of the words "Honolulu, Hawaii" or of either of said words alone or in connection or conjunction with the words "Aloha Lei" or with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply or the effect of which conveys or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are of Honolulu or Hawaiian origin and/or that the said products have been imported from thence into the United States of America. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from labeling or otherwise referring to any of its said preparations as "Pikake" either alone or in connection with the word "Paradise" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that said preparation has been made or compounded from the Hawaiian flower of that name, when such is not the fact.

Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from labeling or otherwise referring to any of its said preparations as "Pikake" either alone or in connection with the word "Paradise" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply or the effect of which conveys or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are of Honolulu or Hawaiian origin and/or that the said products have been imported from thence into the United States of America. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from labeling or otherwise referring to any of its said preparations as "Pikake" either alone or in connection with the word "Paradise" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that said preparation has been made or compounded from the Hawaiian flower of that name, when such is not the fact.

Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from labeling or otherwise referring to any of its said preparations as "Pikake" either alone or in connection with the word "Paradise" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply or the effect of which conveys or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are of Honolulu or Hawaiian origin and/or that the said products have been imported from thence into the United States of America. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from labeling or otherwise referring to any of its said preparations as "Pikake" either alone or in connection with the word "Paradise" or with any other word or words so as to import or imply or the effect of which conveys or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said products are of Honolulu or Hawaiian origin and/or that the said products have been imported from thence into the United States of America.
commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist forthwith from the use of the word “Kamela” as descriptive of products not made from fabrics composed of camel hair; and from the use of the word “Kamelo” or of any other derivation or simulation of the word “camel,” either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or in any way, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that products so referred to are made from fabric composed of camel hair. The said copartners also agreed to cease and desist from offering for sale or selling any product made of rayon, in whole or in part, without disclosure of the fact that the material of which said product is composed is rayon, in whole or in part as the case may be, made clearly and unequivocally, in the labeling and invoicing and in all advertising matter, sales promotional descriptions or representations thereof, however disseminated or published. (Oct. 21, 1940.)

2969. Jewelry—Free and Value.—Frank Milligan, an individual who traded originally as “Frank Milligan Co.” but whose present trade name is “Empire Diamond Company,” engaged in the business of selling jewelry by mail order in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Frank Milligan, in connection with the sale and distribution of his articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed he will cease and desist from:

1. The use of the word “free” or of any other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or refer to merchandise offered as compensation for services rendered in selling or distributing his merchandise, unless all the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly and unequivocally stated in equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection or conjunction with the word “free” or other used word or words of similar import or meaning, and there is no deception or probability of deception as to the price, quality, character, or any other feature of such merchandise, or as to the services to be performed in connection with obtaining such merchandise.

2. Stating or representing that merchandise offered for sale or sold by him, either alone or in connection with an alleged free gift or gratuity, is of or has a designated sales value, when in fact, such alleged valuation is fictitious or is in excess of the price for which such merchandise, or merchandise of similar quality or character, is customarily sold in the usual course of business. (Oct. 22, 1940.)
2970. Diamonds—“Certified.”—Shiman Bros. & Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged as an importer of diamonds and a manufacturer of diamond rings and in the sale of such merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Shiman Bros. & Co., Inc., in connection with the sale of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of, or from supplying others for their use, of advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or description which features or in any way makes use of the word “Certified” or of any other word or words of similar import or meaning to designate or as descriptive of diamonds which are not certified by any governmental agency, scientific bureau, or other responsible agency charged with the duty of examining and certifying to the perfection thereof. (Oct. 22, 1940.)

2971. Diamonds—“Certified.”—Joseph Hagn Co., engaged as a wholesaler in the sale and distribution of jewelry in commerce in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Joseph Hagn Co., in connection with the sale of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use, or from supplying others for their use, of advertisements or advertising matter of whatever kind or description which features or in any way makes use of the word “Certified” or of any other word or words of similar import or meaning to designate or as descriptive of diamonds which are not certified by any governmental agency, scientific bureau, or other responsible agency charged with the duty of examining and certifying to the perfection thereof. (Oct. 22, 1940.)

2972. Raw Furs—Prices to be Paid, Comparable Prices and Guaranteed.—F. C. Taylor Fur Co., a corporation, engaged as a dealer in the purchase and sale of raw furs in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

F. C. Taylor Fur Co., in connection with its buying and selling furs in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

ceive from it for their furs; quoting price ranges which include amounts seldom paid, or quoting such extraordinary prices in any other manner having the capacity, tendency, or effect of conveying the impression that same are frequently paid; or quoting prices which might be applicable to furs of a grade or quality not produced in or which are exceptions in the section or territory circularized.

(b) Representing, directly or inferentially, that it pays higher prices for furs than do all other fur buyers; that trappers or dealers in furs can or will realize a greater return by selling their furs to it than would be obtainable by selling such furs to other buyers or through brokers; or by direct statement or by inference such as, for example, an implied necessity of obtaining furs with which to fill large orders, that it pays higher prices than are justified by general economic conditions.

(c) The use of the word “Guaranteed” or any other word or words of similar meaning unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith, of exactly what is offered by way of security. (Oct. 22, 1940.)

2973. Radios—Special or Reduced Prices and Source or Origin.—George’s Radio Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling merchandise, including radio receiving sets together with cabinets in which said sets are housed, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

George’s Radio Co., Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. Stating or representing that said products have a “factory” or “list” price of $99.95 or any other designated price, when in fact, the designated price is fictitious or in excess of or is other than the price for which said products are customarily sold in the usual course of retail trade.

2. The use of the phrase “More Than ½ Off” or “Reduced $60” in connection with the offered retail selling price of $39.95 or in any other way so as to import or imply that the regular or customary retail selling price of said products is $99.95 or that the price of $39.95 is a special price or is less than one-half the customary sales price or is $60 less than the customary sales price or is other than the regular or customary retail sales price of said products.

3. The use of the word “Grunow” as an escutcheon on cabinets housing radio receiving sets so as to import or imply that said radio receiving sets were made or manufactured by Grigsby-Grunow Corporation, formerly of Chicago, Illinois; and from the use of the said word "Grunow" in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to mislead or deceive the purchasing or consuming public as to the origin, size, capacity, make, manufacture, brand, or type of said sets. (Oct. 24, 1940.)

2974. Geophysical Instruments—Doctor and Laboratories.—Gerhard R. Fisher, an individual trading as "Fisher Research Laboratories" with his principal place of business located at Palo Alto, Calif., engaged in the business of manufacturing a number of types of geophysical instruments, including one called "Metallascope," or "M-Scope" for use as means to locate pipes and metal objects underground in connection with utility operations and for prospecting, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and firms, and partnerships and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Gerhard R. Fisher, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use:

(a) Of the word "doctor," or its abbreviation, in connection with his name; and from the use of the said quoted word, or its abbreviation, in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the said individual has received such a degree or an appropriate degree from a college or university of recognized standing empowered to confer such degree.

(b) Of the plural word "Laboratories" in or as part of his trade name; and from the use of the said word "Laboratories" in any way so as to import or imply that the said individual actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls two or more laboratories. (Oct. 24, 1940.)

2975. Educational Material—Association.—Raymond E. Fideler, an individual, trading as "Informative Classroom Picture Association," engaged in the production of certain types of so-called visual educational aids, in the form of publications, for use in libraries, classrooms, and by school teachers, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with concerns likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Raymond E. Fideler agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Association" as part of his trade name under which he conducts his business in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; and from the use of the word "Association" in any way, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, or sale of his educational material, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to create the impression that the business conducted by the said individual is that of a body or society of persons engaged in the disseminating of informative learning or teaching of the type described. (Oct. 25, 1940.)

2976. Cosmetics—Qualities.—Gaetano Andronaco and Anna Andronaco, individuals, trading as "Casa Anna," engaged in the sale of a line of cosmetics, and after the consummation of such sales, in the shipment of said preparations in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Gaetano Andronaco and Anna Andronaco, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their cosmetic preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed, and each of them agreed, to cease and desist from stating or representing that the use of their said cosmetic preparations, or any thereof, will either nourish, protect, or impart tone or tonicity to the skin, or will prevent, smooth, or take away lines or wrinkles in the skin. (Oct. 28, 1940.)

2977. Beer—Composition.—Joseph Hensler Brewing Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of brewing beer and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Joseph Hensler Brewing Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its beer product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the statement "made from Barley Malt and Hops" or of any other statement or representation of similar implication, as descriptive of said product, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that said product is composed of barley malt flavored with hops as the only fermentable substance contained therein, when in fact, it actually contains such a substance other than barley malt. If said product contains hops-flavored barley malt in substantial quantity, and also other fermentable substance, and the words "barley malt and hops" are used to refer to such hops-flavored barley malt content, then in that case, it shall be conspicuously and unequivocally disclosed that the fermentable substance content of said product is not composed wholly of hops-flavored barley malt or that the said product contains a fermentable substance other than barley malt flavored with hops. (Oct. 28, 1940.)

2978. Bread—Qualities, Composition, Etc.—Fischer Baking Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of bread and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Fischer Baking Co., Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, directly or indirectly, from:

(a) Statements which import or imply that the inclusion in the diet of "Fischer's Buttercup bread" or any bread, is essential or necessary; or is vitally important or essential in the building or development of bone structure or muscle; or that the use thereof insures healthy bones or strong muscles.

(b) Representations, the effect of which conveys or tends to convey the belief or impression that "Fischer's Buttercup Bread," or any other bread composed of the same or similar ingredients in approximately the same proportions, is a "quick energy" food or provides or affords "quick" or immediate energy; that such bread or the protein content thereof is not fattening; or that the use thereof eliminates or aids in the elimination of fat.

(c) Statements which cause or may cause the belief or impression that "Fischer's Buttercup Bread" provides a "sure" or otherwise invariable means of combating or counteracting "tired, let-down" feelings or fatigue, or that it contains ingredients or constituents efficacious in combating fatigue which are not present in other foods.

(Oct. 28, 1940.)

2979. Corsets and Girdles—Qualities, Results, Special Prices, Etc.—Abram R. Canter, an individual, trading as Surgical Appliance Co., engaged in the business of selling certain corsets and girdles known by the trade name "Camp" and certain other so-called "reducing girdles," in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Abram R. Canter in connection with the sale and distribution of his products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from the use:

(a) Of the words "Give Health" or of any other word or words of similar implication, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief that the wearing of such garments, or any thereof, will give or restore health where there is an unhealthful or diseased condition.

(b) Of the statement "You Don't Have To Be Fat" or "Reduce Your Waist and Hips with this Marvelous New Reducing Girdle" or the word "reducing" in any way as descriptive of said garments, or any thereof, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief that the wearing of such garment will reduce or eliminate fat or cause the removal of local tissue and thus overcome a condition of fatness or result in the reduction of bodily tissue from either the waist or hips.

(c) Of the price representation "5.95" either alone or in connection with the word "regularly" or with any other word or words as indicative of the selling price of an article which customarily sells for less, and from the use of the word "special" as descriptive of the price for which the article is offered for sale, when in fact, such price is that for which the article is generally sold in the usual course of business. (Oct. 29, 1940.)

2980. Cowboy and Rodeo Equipment—Foreign as Domestic.—The George W. Prior Hat Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of Western hats, shirts, scarfs, mufflers, and other cowboy and rodeo equipment in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Prior Hat Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the statements or representations "made in U. S. A.," "American Made" or any term, legend, or expression of equivalent meaning, to designate the place or country of origin of an article not actually made in the United States of America; and from advertising an imported article in any manner signifying domestic origin, or otherwise, in a manner having the capacity to mislead or confuse purchasers with respect to the identity of the country of origin thereof. (Oct. 29, 1940.)

2981. Fiber Board Packing Boxes—Manufacturers.—Henry S. Rosen and Sadie Rosen, copartners, trading as Mutual Fiber Box Co., engaged in the sale of fiberboard packing boxes in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships and with corporations, individuals, and firms likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
Henry S. Rosen and Sadie Rosen, in connection with the sale and distribution of their fiberboard packing boxes in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed, and each of them agreed, to cease and desist from marking or stamping said boxes or causing the same to be marked or stamped with the purported certification of a box maker or manufacturer together with such use of their trade name "Mutual Fiber Box Co.," as tends or may tend to create the impression that they make or manufacture said boxes. Said copartners also agreed to cease and desist from the use, on their stationery or printed matter or in marking or stamping their boxes or otherwise in connection with the sale of said products, of the word "manufacturers" or "makers" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that the said copartners actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control the plant or factory in which said boxes are made or manufactured. (Oct. 25, 1940.)

2982. Textile Fabrics—Composition and Domestic as Imported.—Security Mills, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of textile fabrics simulating the appearance of Persian Lamb peltries, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Security Mills, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Advertising, branding, labeling, selling, or offering for sale, or placing in the hands of others a means to advertise, brand, label, sell, or offer for sale, any product composed in whole or in part of rayon unless full and nondeceptive disclosure of the fiber and other content of such product is made by clearly and nondeceptively designating and naming therein each constituent fiber in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent, and by giving the percentage of any fiber which is present in less than a substantial amount, or in any case less than five percent.

(b) The use of the words "Lam," "Beauty-Lam," "Reel-Lam" or other word or words connoting lamb peltries or fur as descriptive of, or as a trade name for, fabrics made of textile fibers; or in any manner representing, or placing in the hands of others a means to represent, that fabrics made or manufactured from cotton, rayon, wool, or other textile fibers are of fur or are the peltries of sheep or lambs, Persian or otherwise.
(c) Representing, through the use of the words "Persian fabric," "Persian" or any other word or term, that fabrics or other products of domestic manufacture are imported from Persia or elsewhere abroad; or in any manner representing, or placing in the hands of others a means to represent, that textile or other products woven or otherwise manufactured in the United States are made or manufactured in Persia or elsewhere abroad, or in any country other than the United States. (Nov. 4, 1940.)

2983. Ribbons—Mills and Manufacturers.—Interstate Ribbon Mills, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of ribbons in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Interstate Ribbon Mills, Inc., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Mills" as part of its corporate or trade name, and from the use of the word "Mills" or the word "Manufacturers" or of any other word or words of similar import or meaning in any way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that the said corporation makes or manufactures the merchandise sold by it or that it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which said merchandise is made or manufactured. (Nov. 4, 1940.)

2984. Advertising Material—Nature, Quality, and Order Nonconformance.—Harry J. Baruch, sole trader, as Harry J. Charles B. Higgins, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his publications in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist.
forthwith from representing, either directly or through salesmen in his employ or in any other manner, to purchasers or prospective purchasers:

1. That said publications are a complete library of human knowledge and/or that each subject dealt with therein is covered by the world's foremost writers so as to assure the reader thereof of the world's learning and culture.

2. That as a special introductory offer, a selected number of persons or only the outstanding citizens in a given community would be sold, for advertising purposes, sets of said books at a price much lower than that which was later to be charged therefor or after the lapse of the advertising period or that the price of said sets of books would be advanced later.

The said individual also agreed to cease and desist from the use on his stationery, printed, or advertising matter of the word "Publishing" as part of his trade name, and from the use of the word "Publishing" in any way, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief that the business conducted by him is that of a publisher or printer or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which the publications offered for sale and sold by him are published or printed.

2991. Beer—Composition.—Rubsam & Horrmann Brewing Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of brewing beer and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce under the brand name "R & H Premium Beer" in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Rubsam & Horrmann Brewing Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its beer product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the statement "Brewed from special premium malt and hops" or of any other statement or representation of similar implication, as descriptive of its said product, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers or prospective purchasers that said product is composed of malt flavored with hops as the only fermentable substance content thereof, when in fact, it actually contains such a substance other than malt. If said product contains hops-flavored malt, in substantial quantity, and also other fermentable substance, and the words "malt and hops" are used to refer to such hops-flavored malt content, then in that case, it shall be conspicuously and unequivocally disclosed that the fermentable substance content of said product is not composed wholly of hops-flavored malt, or that the said product contains a fermentable substance other than malt flavored with hops. (Nov. 12, 1940.)

2992. Hair Preparation—Scientific Facts, Qualities, Results, Nature and Guarantee.—Hinton Pharmaceutical Co., a Kentucky corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of an application for the hair under the trade name or designation “Danzola,” in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Hinton Pharmaceutical Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed it will cease and desist, directly or inferentially, from representing:

(a) That experts have learned the secrets of dandruff, or by statement or inference that the product “Danzola” is the result of such alleged knowledge or that because thereof dandruff is “now unnecessary.”

(b) That Danzola or any similar product is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for the condition known as dandruff, or that its use may be relied or depended upon to accomplish more than a temporary removal of loose dandruff scales or a physical hiding thereof.

(c) That Danzola is a preparation of “merit” for treatment of dandruff conditions or works like “Magic” or is either a “new” or “sensational” discovery or an “antiseptic” hair dressing.

(d) That Danzola or any preparation of similar composition will “clear up” or “do away” with dandruff, or will “rid,” “free,” or relieve one of dandruff or any other impaired condition of the scalp, either “instantly,” “quickly,” “easily,” “in a hurry,” “in just a few days time” or at all.

(e) That dandruff “gets rid of your hair” or that Danzola or any similar application intended for use in dandruff conditions will rid one of “the risk of losing” his hair or will “prevent” or keep one “free from” the “ever present danger of falling hair” or will enable one to “keep all the hair you have now”; or by statement or inference that dandruff is a recognized cause for falling hair or that said product is efficacious in any way for checking or stopping the loss of hair.

(f) That Danzola is a “fine tonic” for dandruff or “other scalp ailments,” or instantly relieves itching scalp or has any remedial or tonic effect in scalp conditions.

(g) By the use of statements such as “get that clean, glowing, bright head of hair which you’ve long wished to own,” “keep your hair healthful”; “enjoy glossy, healthy hair,” or otherwise, that Danzola has any material effect upon the growth or the health of the hair.

(h) That Danzola will revive drab and lifeless hair or add life and brightness to hair parched and bleached by the sun, or otherwise rejuvenate hair so exposed; or that it will do more than possibly present a dressy, clean, and bright appearance to said hair without adding to the health thereof.

(i) That results from the use of Danzola are guaranteed or that said preparation is guaranteed to completely clear up all dandruff; and from the use of the words “guarantee” or “guaranteed” or any other word or words of similar meaning in connection with the advertising, offering for sale or sale of its products, unless, whenever used, clear and unequivocal disclosure be made in direct connection therewith of exactly what is offered by the way of security. (Nov. 12, 1940.)

2993. Reducing Garment—Qualities and Results.—Lit Brothers, a corporation, engaged in the business of conducting a department store at which it sells a general line of merchandise, including girdles and corsets, some of which are distributed through its mail order department in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lit Brothers, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its garments, in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “reducing” or of any other word or words of similar meaning, as descriptive of said garments, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers, or the impression that the wearing of such garments will cause a reduction of local or bodily tissue or effectively remove fat and thus overcome or lessen a condition of fatness or weight. (Nov. 12, 1940.)

2994. Cosmetics—Nature, Qualities, Results, Composition, Laboratory, Etc.—Rubinoff Cosmetic Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a general line of cosmetics under the trade designation “Mme. Rubinoff’s Cosmetics,” causing the same when sold to be shipped in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
Rubinoff Cosmetic Co., Inc. in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in commerce, as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, in printed advertising, by oral presentation or otherwise, either directly or inferentially, from:

(a) Designating or representing any cosmetic preparation as a "Tissue Cream," a "tissue builder," a "food for the skin," a "rejuvenating cream," or a "nourishing" cream or oil; or otherwise representing that any of its preparations externally applied affects the texture or cell structure of the skin, or imparts renewed vitality thereto, or provides sustenance therefor.

(b) The use of the term or expression "Vitamin F" as part of or in connection with the name of any cosmetic product or as descriptive of linoleic or linolenic acids; or representing that an external application of such or any other chemicals or ingredients will restore a healthy and youthful skin.

(c) Representing that its "Neck Cream" or any similar preparation will of itself remove swarthy or scrawny appearance of, or bleach or fill out the neck, or make the skin smooth, white, or youthful.

(d) Designating or describing any cosmetic product as a "Wrinkle Remover," or representing in any way that it will eliminate or overcome wrinkles, or that its ingredients will fill out undernourished cells and tissues so left by age, worry, or otherwise.

(e) Representing that Vitamin D contained in a cream externally applied supplies irradiated sunshine to the tissues or is very nourishing to the skin or subcutaneous structure, or has any perceptible effect whatsoever upon the part or area so applied.

(f) Designating a preparation externally applied as an "Acne Cream" or an "Acne Lotion," or otherwise by assertion or by implication that such product is a competent treatment or an effective remedy generally for the condition known as acne.

(g) Representing that its product designated "Russian Herb Pack" or any similar preparation will bring youth to older skins or otherwise rejuvenate the same, or unqualifiedly will leave the skin white, soft, and radiant.

(h) Representing that its product designated "Skin Freshener" or any other rubefacient brings either a "healthy" or a "natural" glow to the skin or will produce any glow more than afforded by a temporary stimulation of the blood circulation.

(i) Representing that its product designated "Skin Tightener" or any similar preparation will make the skin smooth and firm, or will "restore" or reestablish the original firm smooth appearance of one's skin.

(j) Representing that its product designated "Muscle Oil" is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for wrinkles or sagging muscles, or by statement or inference that it is capable of restoring muscle tone or eliminating skin wrinkles.

(k) Representing that its product designated “Hair Tonic” or any preparation of similar composition is a competent treatment, or an effective remedy for either brittle, dry, or falling hair; or enables the user to avoid dandruff; or by statement or inference that it provides direct nourishment to the hair follicles, or that a hair follicle derives or may derive its separate maintenance from any surface application.

(l) Representing that its product designated “Hair Remover” will “retard future growth” of or in any way prevent the growth of hair.

(m) Representing that its product designated “Eye Bath” either “strengthens,” that is to say, increases visual acuity of the eyes or “brightens” them or serves any purpose beyond that of an ordinary eye wash.

(n) Representing that any product offered for sale and sold by said corporation “instantly” removes freckles.

(o) Representing that any preparation sold by said corporation or any combination thereof has the capacity to “correct” the “defects” in one’s skin or is “scientifically” blended or assembled to such end.

(p) Representing by statement or inference that it owns, operates, or controls a laboratory or plant in which its preparations are compounded or manufactured.

(q) Representing by assertion or implication that its cosmetics are blended especially to supply the necessary ingredients essential for the particular needs of an individual skin, after exact and correct determination by its skilled operators; or designating or referring to prepared stock treatments for merely general types of skin as “individual service.”

(2995. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, Results, Doctor, Endorsements or Approval and Testimonials.—D. R. Parsons, sole trader, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated “Psori-Oil,” in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

D. R. Parsons, in connection with the sale and distribution of his medicinal preparation under the trade designation “Psori-Oil” or any other designation, in interstate commerce as defined by said act, agreed to cease and desist, directly or inferentially, from:

(a) Statements or representations which convey or may tend to convey the belief that “Psori-Oil” or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients is a competent remedy or a “real” or effective treatment for, or will “cure” or “rid” one of psoriasis, scaly skin diseases, or any other skin or scalp affliction.
(b) The use of the trade name "Dr. D. R. Parsons" or of any statements or representations which import or imply that he is a physician or doctor of medicine or that he is engaged in the practice of medicine; or any use of the word "Doctor" or the term "Dr." in his advertising matter unless, whenever so used, it clearly appear that he is a doctor of dentistry and not of medicine,

(c) Representing that "Psori-Oil" is or has been recommended or endorsed by "many physicians," or otherwise importing or implying that such preparation has received the recommendation or endorsement of any number of physicians in excess of the number actually recommending or endorsing the same.

(d) Statements which import or imply that any testimonial letter not recently received was "just received" or was received immediately prior to the time of making such representations; or disseminating or publishing testimonials without indicating the dates when same were written, or which contain any claims, assertions or implications contrary to the terms and spirit of this agreement. (Nov. 13, 1940.)

2996. Reducing Garments—Qualities, Results and Composition.—Lane Bryant, Inc., a corporation, and Newman Cloak & Suit Co., a corporation, engaged in the operation of a chain of retail apparel shops from which sales are and have been made and mail orders filled by shipping merchandise by parcel post, or otherwise, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Lane Bryant, Inc., and Newman Cloak & Suit Co., in connection with the sale and distribution of their products in commerce, as defined by said Act, agreed to cease and desist from use in advertisements and advertising matter employed by them, or by either of them, of the word "reduce" or "reducing" or of any other word or words of similar meaning or implication, as descriptive of said garments, or of the fabric of which they are made, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief or impression that the wearing of such garments will cause a reduction of local or bodily tissue or will effectively remove fat and thus overcome or lessen a condition of fatness or weight. (Nov. 14, 1940.)

2997. Medical Instruments—Source or Origin.—MacGregor Instrument Co., a corporation, engaged in the business of selling and distributing medical instruments in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.
MacGregor Instrument Co. agreed to cease and desist from the use in connection with the advertisement, sale or distribution of its medical instruments in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, of the words "MacGregor Made" or of any other word or words of similar import, as descriptive of those of its instruments not made by the said corporation; and from the use of said words, either alone or in connection with a domestic address or in any other way, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief that said instruments are made in their entirety by the said corporation or that all the parts of which said instruments are composed are made in the U. S. A. If said instruments are composed in part of a part or parts made domestically by the said corporation, and the words "MacGregor Made" or other words of similar import, are used to indicate such fact, then in that case, said words shall be so qualified as to indicate clearly and unequivocally that said instruments are not composed wholly of parts made by the said corporation or in the United States of America, and will also indicate in clearly discernible manner the part or parts of said instruments which are not domestically made by said corporation. (Nov. 14, 1940.)

2998. Health Belt and Shoulder Brace—Qualities and Results.—Nulife Garments Corp., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a so-called "health" belt and a shoulder brace under the trade name "Munter's Nulife" in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Nulife Garments Corp., in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its devices in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter, or in any other way, or in advertising matter supplied by it to others for their use, of any word or words, statement, or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief that the wearing of said devices, or of either thereof, will:

1. Correct congenital or acquired postural deformities of the wearer.
2. Improve physical activity, increase vitality or store up physical energy throughout the entire body.
3. Make every wearer stand and grow erect or supply all the physical improvements for the body until it is corrected.
4. Straighten round shoulders instantly and permanently.
5. Compel deep breathing or stimulate respiration or correct the breathing capabilities of all persons.
6. Give instant benefits to all wearers, regardless of weight, size, age, or condition.
7. Air condition the wearer's body or stabilize or regulate the control of body temperature regardless of conditions or weather.

8. Make children stand, sit and grow up healthy and naturally strong or so improve the wearer's posture in all cases as to make him "look and feel like a West Pointer." (Nov. 15, 1940.)

2999. Girdles—Qualities and Results.—Frank & Seder of Philadelphia, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of merchandise, including women's girdles in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Frank & Seder of Philadelphia, Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale or distribution of its girdles in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "reducing" or of any other word or words of similar meaning, as descriptive of said devices, so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief or impression that the wearing of such devices will cause a reduction of local or bodily tissue or effectively remove fat and thus overcome or lessen a condition of fatness or weight. (Nov. 15, 1940.)

3000. Burial Vaults—Nature, Qualities, and Results.—Neff & Fry Co., a corporation, engaged in the construction of concrete burial vaults or so-called "Surface-Sepulchers" for the entombment of the dead, and in the sale thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Neff & Fry Co., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its burial vaults in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. The use of any statement or representation, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief or impression that said vaults will either last unimpaired throughout eternity or will afford permanent or absolute protection to or lasting preservation of bodies encased therein.

2. Stating or representing that, at the time of its interment, each vault is waterproof or that it will continue to be or to remain impervious to water, dampness or moisture.

3. Stating or representing that the initial appearance of the cast stone lid or top of said vault will endure or forever remain unmarred with its “beauty” unimpaired, as by checking, chipping, or cracking. (Nov. 26, 1940.)

3001. Novelty Hats—Old as New.—L. David Schwartz, an individual, trading as D. Schwartz Hat Works, engaged in the business of manufacturing so-called specialty and novelty hat items, and in the sale and shipment thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

L. David Schwartz, in connection with the sale and distribution of his hats or hat items in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

(a) Representing that said products, which are made in whole or in part of second-hand, old, worn, or used materials, are new or are composed of new materials by failure to properly disclose, as by stamping on the sweat bands or bodies of said products, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating such stamped part, a statement that such products are composed of or contain second-hand, old, worn, or used materials.

(b) Representing in any manner that said products which are made in whole or in part from second-hand, old, worn, or used materials, are new or are composed of new materials. (Nov. 26, 1940.)

3002. Snapshots—Nature.—Louis Pierce Hartley, an individual, engaged in business under the trade name “Natural Color Photo Service,” said business consisting of the sale and distribution in interstate commerce, of photo supplies and of colored or tinted snapshots made from films sent in by customers, in competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

Louis Pierce Hartley, in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his snapshots in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words “Natural Color” as part of his trade name, and from the use of the words “Natural Color” or “Natural Color Prints” or of any other word or words of similar import, the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief or impression to customers or prospective customers that said snapshots are the result of natural color photography, that is to say, the entire reproduction of the natural color in the photographic print by photographic process. (Nov. 28, 1940.)

corporation trading under the name “Mrs. Southern Home Made Sweets,” engaged in the business of selling candies and cookies in inter-state commerce, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

De Groodt & Associates, Inc., in connection with the advertisement, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its commodities in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, agreed to cease and desist from:

1. The use of the words “Home Made” as part of its trade name, and from the use of the said words in any way as descriptive of its factory-made products or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the impression or belief to purchasers that its said products are made at home and thus differ from factory-made products.

2. The use of the statements “The only candy which is delivered fresh from the kitchen to your place of business” so as to import or imply that the products sold by the said corporation are actually made in its own kitchen or that it owns and operates or controls the plant or factory where said products are made or that the said corporation is the only concern which delivers products from kitchen to consumer.

3. Stating or representing that its “Red Satin Heart” package formerly sold for $2 to $4 or that the price of $1.25 charged therefor is a “special” offer, when in fact such price of $1.25 is the regular price for which said package at all times has been customarily sold by the said corporation in the usual course of retail trade.

4. The use of the word “Orchid” or the picturization of such flower as descriptive of the corsage represented to be included with the purchase of certain candies, unless such word or flower picturization, when so used, is accompanied by some other word or words printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that such corsage is not composed of a natural orchid but is only an imitation thereof.

5. The use of the words “Due to the special construction of this Orchid Corsage, 10 days are required for the making” so as to import or imply that said commodity is such as required 10 days to construct the same. (Nov. 28, 1940.)

C., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a medicinal product designated Vim Herb and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That said preparation will strengthen or build up or revitalize or cleanse the system, or will build up body resistance, or will rid the system of poisons, or will strengthen or regenerate or tone digestive organs, or will renew or restore digestive action, or will cleanse the entire intestinal tract, or will completely cleanse the intestinal walls, or will lead to or preserve or protect or restore health, or can be relied upon to give one a healthy appearance, or will restore one's youth or vigor or vitality, or will cause one to have a clear brain or an active body, or will act as a tonic for the blood, or will re-tone the blood, or will help restore the cells or corpuscles of the blood, or will remove impurities from the blood, or will benefit everyone, or is curative or corrective for or will permanently rid one of any disease, ailment or disorder, or will relieve the pains of neuritis or rheumatism, or, generally, will relieve pain, or will remove poisons or wastes or acids from the kidneys, or will afford immediate or lasting or sure and positive relief from any disease, disorder or ailment, or can be relied upon to afford complete relief from flatulence, or is effective as a treatment for uric acid conditions, or will clear the skin of eruptions, or is of value in cases of skin disorders, nervousness, sleeplessness, biliousness, headaches, irritability, indigestion, or lack of energy, except where and to the extent that such conditions are caused or aggravated by constipation, or, generally, is of value in the treatment of stomach or liver or kidney disorders, or is an effective treatment for nycturia, bladder irritations, leg cramps, or backaches, or is an effective aid to digestion, or is effective as an alkalizer or cholagogue, or activates the liver, or has a great cleansing action on the liver, or is effective as a treatment or preventive of colds or of influenza, or is an effective means for enabling persons to regain lost weight.

(b) That said preparation is a tonic, or is nature's medicine, or is a health elixir, or is composed entirely of herbs, roots, barks and berries, or is purely vegetable, or is entirely different from ordinary patent medicines, or is a new discovery or a new development in medicine, or is made by an entirely new and different process, or is the most effective laxative on the market, or contains ingredients procured from all parts of the world.

(c) That "science" has recognized or is cognizant of said preparation.

(d) That said preparation benefits thousands daily, or that thousands have attested to its value, or that said preparation is known to have benefited thousands, or from making any representations which exaggerate the number of persons who have benefited from the use of said preparation or who have attested to its value.

(e) That said preparation is known to be the most popular and most highly recommended medicinal preparation in the area in which it is distributed.

(f) That said preparation is harmless, without at the same time clearly and conspicuously indicating that its use may be injurious where there are present acute inflammatory conditions of the gastro-intestinal tract.

(g) That constipation is the usual cause of stomach disorders, kidney and liver troubles or nervousness, and from making any representation which exaggerates the consequences of or the number or severity of symptomatic conditions resulting from constipation.
(h) That results from the use of said preparation are guaranteed or that said preparation is guaranteed, without at the same time clearly indicating the nature and scope of the guarantee.

The said A. P. Durham further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (July 17, 1940.)

02605. Medicinal Preparation—Qualities, Results, Etc.—The Ferguson Co., Inc., a corporation, Liberty Bank Building, Dallas, Tex., was engaged in the business of conducting an advertising agency which disseminated advertisements for a medicinal preparation designated Hay-No on behalf of Morten Laboratories, Inc., Dallas, Tex., and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

That a medicinal preparation now designated Hay-No or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients or possessing the same properties whether sold under that name or any other name:

(a) Is a competent remedy or effective treatment for hay fever, or that it has any therapeutic value in excess of affording symptomatic relief for said disease; or

(b) That the results to be achieved by the use of the said product in the treatment of sinus irritations, head colds, cold-clogged air passages, distress of nose-blowing and sneezing, stuffiness, or other symptomatic conditions are amazing, wondrous, or quick, or that said product is a discovery. (July 17, 1940.)

02606. Medicinal Herb Tea—History, Qualities, Nature, Ailments, Etc.—V. R. Smith, an individual trading as Smith & Bull Advertising Agency, 553 South Western Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., was engaged in the business of conducting an advertising agency which disseminated advertisements for a medicinal herb tea designated Cento Tea on behalf of Otto Wise, an individual trading as Medical Tea Co. of California, Inc., Los Angeles, Calif., and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That said preparation or the particular formula for said preparation has been used for centuries or for any period of time greater than is actually the case.

(b) That said preparation, or that any of the ingredients in said preparation, is of value in the treatment of gall or liver or kidney ailments, or is a competent and reliable agent for the relief of symptoms associated with such ailments, or is of value in preventing or dissolving kidney stones or gallstones, or possesses healing or analgesic properties, or is capable of restoring one to normal or vital health, or aids the liver in its functions, or purifies gall passages, or helps eliminate poisons and foreign matter from the system, or possesses disinfectant properties, or acts as a cleanser for the liver or kidneys or gall, or cleanses the stomach, or is capable of bringing about a proper distribution of body liquids, or stimulates gall secretions.

(c) That said preparation is not a laxative.

(d) That the ingredients of said preparation are carried to the affected parts.
(c) That all modern physicians subscribe to the theory that constipation causes autointoxication or a "backing up" of toxic poisons within the body.

(f) That every ingredient in said preparation possesses therapeutie value.

(g) That the hypericum content of said preparation stimulates the appetite.

The said V. R. Smith further agreed not to disseminate or cause to be disseminated any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (July 18, 1940.)

02607. Soft Drinks—Earnings or Profits and Composition.—Dr. Ward's Medical Co., a corporation, Winona, Minn., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling food products designated Ward's Summer Drinks or Summer Koolers and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That its agents, salesmen, retailers, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can earn more money by selling products of the Dr. Ward’s Medical Co. than they can earn in any other business or occupation.

(b) That prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time which are in excess of average net profits or earnings which have theretofore consistently been made in like periods of time by its active full time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary or usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances.

It is hereby further agreed by Dr. Ward’s Medical Co. that in connection with the dissemination of advertising by the means and in the manner above set out, in connection with the sale of its soft drinks, designated collectively as "Ward’s Summer Drinks" or "Summer Koolers," and individually designated as “Summer Kooler—Cherry,” “Summer Kooler—Grape,” “Summer Kooler—Lemon,” “Summer Kooler—Lemon-Lime,” and “Summer Kooler—Orange,” or any other products of substantially the same composition or possessing substantially the same properties, it will forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication—

That its soft drinks are composed wholly of the natural fruit or juice of the fruit.

The said Dr. Ward’s Medical Co. further agrees not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (July 18, 1940.)

02608. Candy—Qualities.—Curtiss Candy Co., a corporation, 622 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Ill., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a confection designated Baby Ruth and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That Baby Ruth candy will avoid fat.

(b) That Baby Ruth candy will avoid fatigue; or banish or keep fatigue away; or keeps pep, heat, or energy up to par; or sustains body activity; or reinforces body resistance to avoid ill health; or restores lost vigor; or will snap one out of spring fever, unless it is plainly and clearly stated in direct connection therewith that it is intended to help overcome fatigue and tempo-ramry increase energy when eaten between meals.

(c) That it is necessary to eat dextrose to secure the energy building and sustaining foods; or that people who need energy need dextrose or Baby Ruth candy bars.

The said Curtiss Candy Co. further agreed not to publish or cause be published any testimonial containing any representation con-trary to the foregoing agreement. (July 19, 1940.)

02609. Hair Lotion—Qualities, Composition, Safety, New, Success, and Nature.—Beutalure, Inc., a corporation, 14 Ashley Place, Wilmington, them to function normally.

14. Reconditions the scalp or causes it to have a healthy or youthful appearance.
15. Is new.
16. Is sold or used all over the world.
17. Is a discovery.

(b) That the product is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for gray, dull, faded, or streaked hair.

(c) That the action of the product in such effect as it has on the hair is similar to or the same as nature's action in removing color from the hair.

(d) That such action as the product has on the hair is permanent in effect.

(e) That the product acts on the cause of gray, faded, streaked, and dull hair or that it will prevent those conditions.

(f) That beauty of the hair is hidden or that by use of the product, natural beauty of hair will be revealed.
The said Beutalure, Inc., further agreed that it will not describe the product as a tonic and will not use the word “tonic” as a part of the trade name for the product.

The said Beutalure, Inc., further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (July 19, 1940).

02610. That a medicinal preparation now designated Milks Emulsion, or any other medicinal preparation containing substantially the same ingredients, or possessing the same properties, whether sold under that name or any other name:

(a) Is a competent treatment or effective remedy for constipation, or will do more than aid in temporarily relieving constipated conditions.

(b) Would cause female troubles, loud noises or burning sensations in the stomach to disappear, or that such disorders are due to constipation.

(c) Has been found to be, or that it is, “most effective.”

(d) Will “positively” relieve constipation or all the disagreeable symptoms thereof; give the bowels a thorough cleaning or keep them clean, or give Nature a chance to heal or strengthen them; or that it will do all that medicine can do, or that it is possible for medicine to do, for constipation or in “ridding” one of constipation.

(e) Dissolves all food waste or makes it easier for the bowels to expel it; or that it leaves the lining of the bowels coated with a soothing oil, or that it thereby assists Nature in putting the bowels back into normal condition.

(f) Will assist in promoting the appetite by relieving constipation or otherwise unless it is clearly and plainly stated in direct connection therewith that it will render such assistance only if the loss of appetite is due to constipation.

(g) Is “Nature’s Remedy.”

(h) Would free one from constipation for all time.

(i) Is a competent or effective remedy for sore throat, or that it promotes the appetite.

(j) Is sold under the “strongest” guarantee of any medicine, or

(k) That the first thing necessary in almost any sickness is to give the system a thorough cleaning out, or

(l) That thousands or any specified number of mothers have testified as to what Milks Emulsion has done for their children.

The said The Milks Emulsion Co. further agreed to cease and desist from using the word “Emulsion” or any letters, word or syllable that simulates emulsion in sound or spelling to designate or describe the said preparation as compounded and manufactured prior to May 13, 1940.

The said The Milks Emulsion Co. further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (July 23, 1940.)

(d) That said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for or will serve to prevent hog diseases generally, or is a competent and effective treatment for or will serve to prevent intestinal disturbances, or mixed infection, or scours, or thumps, or necrotic enteritis, or intestinal infection, or irritation due to worms, or swine influenza or worms, or is of therapeutic value for or will serve to prevent any disease or disorder in swine, when such is not the case.

(e) That results are guaranteed, or that said medicine is guaranteed to combat hog troubles, or that said medicine is guaranteed without at the same time indicating the nature and scope of the guarantee.

The said Miller Chemical Co., further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Aug. 22, 1940.)
02628. Soap—Comparative Merits and Qualities.—The Procter and Gamble Co., a corporation, Cincinnati, Ohio, vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a certain soap designated Ivory Soap, and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

That any test as to the mildness of Ivory Soap as compared with any competitively sold soaps shows that Ivory Soap is the purer soap or otherwise representing that the mildness of a soap is indicative of its purity.

The Procter and Gamble Co. agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Aug. 21, 1940.)

02629. Nursery Stock—Employment, Opportunities, Institute, Earnings, or Profits, Nursery, Etc.—Knight & Bostwick, a corporation, Newark, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling nursery stock, and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That it has any position to offer such as local manager, district superintendent, field supervisor, trainer, or representative when such is not the fact; or
(b) That it sends pay checks regularly or otherwise to solicitors, agents, or salesmen except in payment of commissions on orders sent in, when such is not the fact; or
(c) That it is offering agents or solicitors any established nursery or landscape business for sale or management, or that it starts men in an established nursery or landscape business for themselves unless clearly indicated that the business is only that of taking orders for nursery and landscape stock; or
(d) That the booklets, pamphlets, or instructions supplied by their author are home study courses, or that the person supplying them to it is an institute, or conducting an institute, or is in any way connected with any school, college, or institute; or
(e) That its plan for securing the names of prospective buyers eliminates house-to-house or door-to-door canvassing; or
(f) That group profit leaders assure $1, or any other amount per hour, week, or month; or that any prospect-getting plan or other plan, service, help, or cooperation, produces all the business an order solicitor can handle, or that the earnings are unlimited, or sure every week the year around; or
(g) That prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make profits or earnings within a specified period of time, which are in excess of the average net profits or earnings which have theretofore been consistently made in like periods of time by its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or
(h) By the use of such words as “up to,” “as high as,” or any words or terms of like import that prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make earnings or profits within any specified period of time of any amounts which are in excess of the net average earnings or profits within like periods of time made by a substantial number of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or
(i) That the minimum amount which prospective agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives can make in profits or earnings within any specified period of time is any amount in excess of the minimum amount earned in like periods of time by all of its active full-time agents, salesmen, distributors, dealers, or other representatives in the ordinary and usual course of business and under normal conditions and circumstances; or

(j) That it is a nursery or nurseryman unless and until it owns, controls, or operates a place where the trees, shrubs, bushes, plants, and bulbs and other nursery stock which it sells and offers for sale, are grown.

Said Knight & Bostwick further agreed not to advertise amounts or rates of earnings of any salesman which are in fact unusual, exceptional and not even approximately representative of, or fairly comparable with the amount of earnings actually made by a substantial number of its salesmen under like circumstances, in such manner or form as to import or imply that such earnings are representative, usual, and the amount of earnings which any prospective agents may reasonably expect to earn.

Knight & Bostwick further agreed that in its future advertising, where a word or phrase is used in connection with a specific claim or representation of earnings or profits by way of qualification or limitation, such word, words, or phrases will be made equally as clear and plain as the specific claim or claims which they purport to limit or qualify.

Knight & Bostwick further agreed that in computing the period of time during which specified earnings or profits were made it will include all of the time actually used for demonstrations, solicitations, and any other services performed in connection with either the sale, delivery, or collection of the purchase price by the particular agent, salesman, distributor, dealer, or other representative who is alleged to have made such earnings or profits.

The said Knight & Bostwick further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Sept. 3, 1940.)

02630. Books on Health and a Breathing Device—Qualities, Results, Comparative Merits, Etc.—Harold Wells Turner, an individual trading as Health Culture Co., 1133 Broadway, New York, N. Y., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a breathing device designated “The Wilhide Exhaler,” certain books, booklets and courses giving information on diet cures and modes of living, and a certain magazine giving information in matters of diet, exercise, and health, and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That the use of the “Wilhide Exhaler” will enable one to become healthy.
(b) That persons are starved for air, or that they are unable to increase their lung capacity normally.
(c) That a short use of the "Wilhide Exhaler" will make one feel the exhilarating effect of a cleaner blood stream, or that said device has any effect upon the blood stream.

(d) That the "Wilhide Exhaler" is more effective than other known devices for strengthening the lungs, or that said device adds to the power of the voice, or promotes the power of resisting diseases, or improves health.

(e) That the "Wilhide Exhaler" is a competent remedy or an effective treatment for catarrhal affections.

It is further agreed by the said Harold Wells Turner, that in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of certain books, booklets, and courses entitled "Uncooked Foods," "No Animal Food," "Attainment of Efficiency," "The Enlightened Life," "Health for Women," "Catarrh, Colds and Hay Fever," "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure," "How to Live Long," "Health in the Home," and "What Shall We Eat to be Healthy," in commerce as defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, he will forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(f) That the application of heat in the matter of cooking destroys the value of food.

(g) That eating uncooked foods is a diet cure or of any material benefit to health or strength.

(h) That the health of persons has been restored or benefited by the use of uncooked foods as outlined in the book called "Uncooked Foods."

(i) That persons suffering from indigestion, constipation, nervousness, weakness, obesity, headache, or other functional disorders are restored to health or are benefited in any manner by making the changes in their diet suggested in the book called "Uncooked Foods."

(j) That foods unchanged by heat are the best or are materially beneficial for the maintenance of health or vitality.

(k) That many cases of increased strength or vitality have resulted from a strictly vegetarian regime, or that the book called "No Animal Food" contains information which if followed or put into effect enables a person to increase his strength or vitality.

(l) That the book called "The Attainment of Efficiency" is one of the few great books that have been written.

(m) That the book called "The Attainment of Efficiency" is a key to efficient manhood or womanhood, or a long or happy life.

(n) That reading and putting into effect the principles expressed in "The Enlightened Life" will make one physically regenerated, healthy, or will enable one to live a long life.

(o) That reading and putting into effect the principles set forth in "Health for Women" will make women who are negative, nervous, weary, or generally pessimistic, strong, beautiful, happy, attractive, healthy, genial, or of a strong personality, or in any manner representing that said book will enable a woman to become strong, beautiful, happy, attractive, healthy, genial, or acquire a strong personality.

(p) That a woman who regulates her bowels has a clear complexion, a sweet breath, quick, active brains, an even temper, or lives a longer life than she would otherwise.
(q) That the methods of Dr. Latson which are indicated in the book entitled "Catarrh, Colds and Hay Fever" are sure.

(r) That the book called "Catarrh, Colds and Hay Fever" shows that in the treatment of a cold, patent medicines, or drugs are valueless.

(s) That E. H. Dewey, M. D., author of "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure" amazed the world with his system of natural healing for acute or chronic ailments.

(t) That putting into effect the principles set forth in the book called "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure" will enable persons suffering from chronic or acute ailments to overcome them, or to regulate their health.

(u) That patent medicines or drugs are experimental, or that they injure the stomach, poison the blood, or contaminate the body, or that when persons recover under drug treatment, it is in spite of it, or that natural methods are better than those methods which make use of drugs.

(v) That feeding sick persons causes death, or that fasting sick persons cures them, or that when persons have no appetite, no food should be taken by them.

(w) That putting into effect the principles set forth in the book called "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure" will give one brighter days, glowing health, better mentality, strength, vim, energy, or happiness, or that it will be a life-saver.

(x) That if the principles expressed in "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure" are followed, the stomach can be rebuilt or benefited or a sick body can be cured or cleansed.

(y) That the application of the principles expressed in the book entitled "The No-Breakfast Plan and Fasting Cure" will give one health or make it unnecessary for one ever to go to a specialist or to a sanitarium for advice or treatment.

(z) That "How To Live Long" is an up-to-date book on health.

(aa) That modern foods have been deprived of their mineral elements before they are served.

(bb) That the book called "Health in the Home" is the best or the most important work ever published for the promotion of the health of women or children.

(cc) That thousands of persons, or any other number of persons, have been helped to a new life, or to glowing, vital energy through reading and putting into practice the theories advocated in the book called "What Shall We Eat To Be Healthy?"

The said Harold Wells Turner, trading as Health Culture Co., agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Sept.
3, 1940.)

Indorsements, or Approval, Etc.—H. L. Williams, an individual trading as Williams S. L. K. Laboratories, Milwaukee, Wis., was engaged in selling medicinal preparations designated Rux Compound and Williams Formula, and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That its alkalizing or salicylating effect is different from old-fashioned or modern salves or liniments, or that it is absorbed by the bloodstream, or that it salicylates the system, or that physicians say it is a proven method of relieving rheumatic pain, or that it is such a proven method or that it acts on congestion of rheumatic pain, or helps flush acids out of the body or kidneys, or that acids accumulate in the kidneys, or that it can or will make or keep the blood alkaline, or that it is a competent treatment to relieve the suffering from inflamed or aching muscles, or the agony of rheumatic, or neuritic, or neuralgic pain, or that any or every ingredient used in its composition acts directly on pain or the cause of the pain, or

(b) That said preparation is an effective diuretic, or can do more than promote the flow of urine as a mild diuretic, or that acids accumulate in the kidneys to cause painful deposits, or that it is a full strength medicine, or that it is recommended by doctors, or that it is unexcelled as an antipyretic, or an analgesic for the relief of pain, or that neuralgic pain is due to toxic conditions, or that stimulation of the kidneys or the liver will relieve it; or

(c) That said preparation has any therapeutic value for the relief of pain in excess of a temporary relief from minor pains, and further agreed:

(d) That the said preparation will stimulate digestion, or act upon the whole digestive mechanism, or do more than promote the flow of urine as a mild diuretic, or eliminate waste material from the kidneys, or help build up the quality of blood, or increase hemoglobin of the blood, or give relief like several good medicines in one, or that it is an iron tonic, or that it has any therapeutic value in excess of a laxative for the temporary relief of acute constipation, a bitter stomachic, and a very mild and limited diuretic, or that it acts in any other way, or to any greater extent upon the stomach, bowels or kidneys.

The said H. L. Williams further agreed that he will not make any therapeutic claims for any ingredient or ingredients in either of his preparations—Rux Compound or Williams Formula—when such drugs are not contained in his preparations in quantities recognized by science and the medical profession as sufficient to give or contribute significant therapeutic value to the preparations.

The said H. L. Williams further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Sept. 4, 1940.)

J., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a drug designated Vapo-Cresolene and agreed, in connection with the dissemination of future advertising, to cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

(a) That such product is a "remedy" or by any other terminology, that it is a cure or will cure any disease or condition, or that it is "healing."

(b) That such product or the vapor inhalation treatment represented thereby is favored by medical opinion today, is favored more than formerly, is now recognized as the most direct method of treating nasal and bronchial membrane, reaches all such parts, avoids unnecessary dosing, or thereby saves the stomach.

(c) That such product will achieve any specified results in 48 hours or any other given period of time.

(d) That the administration of Vapo-Cresolene constitutes a competent treatment or an effective remedy for colds.

(e) That such product is a competent treatment or an effective remedy for spasmodic or ordinary croup, whooping cough, "children's diseases," pneumonia or bronchial pneumonia, "chest complaints," influenza or deep chest colds.

(f) That the effect of Vapo-Cresolene is more prolonged than that of medicated steam inhalations employed for the same purpose.

(g) That Vapo-Cresolene is the quickest and easiest way to relieve nose and throat congestion.

(h) That Vapo-Cresolene is antiseptic or will overcome lesions, or is germicidal, or will render the air of a room germicidal, or that laboratory tests demonstrate germicidal efficiency of Vapo-Cresolene under conditions of use, or that it counteracts infection or avoids serious complications.

(i) That Vapo-Cresolene insures sleep; or that it will have any effect upon promoting sleep except to the extent that it relieves coughing; that Vapo-Cresolene prevents complications, or causes diseases to run a shorter course.

(j) That employees of gas works are free from bronchial troubles.

The Vapo-Cresolene Co. further agreed to cease and desist, in connection with the sale of Vapo-Cresolene or any other preparation of the same or substantially the same composition, from making any statement which represents, directly or by implication, that Vapo-Cresolene is a competent remedy or an effective treatment for bronchitis or is of any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief to the membranes of the mucous lining of the bronchial tree in cases of bronchitis due to colds.

The Vapo-Cresolene Co. further agreed to cease and desist from representing or implying, by means of general statements relating to asthma, or otherwise, that Vapo-Cresolene, or any other preparaation of similar composition, is of any benefit in the treatment of all types of asthma, or, by failure properly and clearly to explain and limit its claims, that the product will be effective in the treatment of asthma due to allergic or cardiorenal conditions, or that it affords the greatest relief from asthma available by the use of any product.

The said Vapo-Cresolene Co. further agreed not to publish or cause to be published any testimonial containing any representation contrary to the foregoing agreement. (Oct. 23, 1940.)

CARTER CARBURETOR CORPORATION v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 434, Original

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit. June 3, 1940)

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE SUPPORTING EVIDENCE—CLAYTON ACT.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—“COMMERCE”—WHETHER “PERSON ENGAGED IN”—MANUFACTURER SELLING UNDER CONTRACTS, AT SPECIFIED PRICES AND F. O. B. PLANT, TO REGIONAL DISTRIBUTORS AND INDEPENDENT SERVICE STATIONS, AND SHIPPING TO DISTRIBUTORS IN OTHER STATES.

Where it appeared that manufacturer of carburetors made sales to some 67 regional distributors of automotive equipment, that 30 of them sold in territory comprising more than one State, that manufacturer also sold products directly to more than 86 independent service stations which could also purchase from the regional distributors, that both regional distributors' and service stations' contracts provided for purchase of carburetors and parts from manufacturer at specified prices f. o. b. St. Louis, and that orders were filled by shipment from St. Louis, in making such sales and shipments to distributors located in States other than Missouri, manufacturer was engaged in “interstate commerce” within meaning of the Clayton Act.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—CONTRACTS—WHETHER “FOR SALE OF GOODS”—MANUFACTURER EXTENDING SPECIAL SERVICING TRAINING TO EMPLOYEES OF CONTRACTEES UNDER CONTRACTS IN WHICH, HOWEVER, PRICE AND CANCELATION CONTROL VESTED IN SELF.

Where, by contracts between manufacturer of carburetors, regional distributors, and independent service stations, manufacturer established terms and conditions of sales by regional distributors to service stations, and manufacturer had power to impose conditions in respect to sales, to cancel contracts if it saw fit or to raise prices on goods delivered to the regional distributors, the contracts were “contracts for the sale of goods” within the Clayton Act, notwithstanding manufacturer conducted training courses where service station mechanics received special training in service and repair of carburetors.

Dealing on Exclusive and Tying Basis—Clayton Act, Sec. 3—Contracts—Whether “for Sale of Goods”—Contracts’ Designation.

In determining whether contracts between manufacturer of carburetors, engaged in selling them in interstate commerce for profit, and manufacturer’s service stations, were contracts for sale of goods within Clayton Act, the fact that contracts were denominated service station contracts was not controlling.

Dealing on Exclusive and Tying Basis—Clayton Act, Sec. 3—Preferential Discounts—Where Continuance Predicated on Abstention by Distributors and Independent Stations From Taking on New Line—Whether Violation by Granting Manufacturer—Intent and Effect—Manufacturer’s Control Retail Price Maintenance System Established by It as Incidental to.

In determining whether manufacturer of carburetors violated Clayton Act, the purpose and effect of manufacturer’s general bulletin advising that preferential discount granted distributors and independent service stations would be discontinued if a new carburetor line was taken on by a distributor or service station without manufacturer’s written approval, was required to be considered in light of fact that manufacturer had established within its contract a complete system of retail price maintenance.

Dealing on Exclusive and Tying Basis—Clayton Act, Sec. 3—Prices and Discounts Conditioned on Retailer Purchasers’ Abstention From Dealing in New Competing Line—If Their Affirmative Promise Absent.

Where manufacturer of carburetors fixed prices it charged and discounts allowed on purchases of its products by retailers upon condition that they should cease and refrain from dealing in a new competing line of carburetors, the contracts imposed a condition that retailer should not deal in goods of a competitor of manufacturer within prohibition of the Clayton Act, notwithstanding the retailer was not obliged to affirmatively promise in express terms not to handle goods of manufacturer’s competitors.

Where dominant carburetor manufacturer issued general bulletin notifying independent service stations that preferential discount would be discontinued if a new carburetor line was taken on by service stations without manufacturer’s written approval, the action of the manufacturer was to “lessen competition” within prohibition of the Clayton Act.
Dealing on Exclusive and Tying Basis—Clayton Act, Sec. 3—Prices and Discounts Conditioned on Retailer Purchasers' Abstention from Dealing in New Competing Line—Whether Effect, Etc., "May Be to Tend to Create A Monopoly in Any Line of Commerce"—Where Notification by General Bulletin to Independents, of Such Contingent Discontinuance, by Dominant Manufacturer, of Preferential Discount.

Where dominant carburetor manufacturer issued general bulletin notifying independent service stations that preferential discount would be discontinued if a new carburetor line was taken on by service stations without manufacturer's written approval, the action of manufacturer tended to create a "monopoly" within prohibition of the Clayton Act.

Dealing on Exclusive and Tying Basis—Clayton Act, Sec. 3—Prices and Discounts Conditioned on Retailer Purchasers' Abstention from Dealing in New Competing Line—Whether Effect, Etc., "May Be to Tend to Create A Monopoly in Any Line of Commerce"—Where Notification, by General Bulletin to Independents, of Such Contingent Discontinuance, by Dominant Manufacturer, of Preferential Discount—if Complete Monopoly Not Effected and Control of All or Nearly All of Business Concerned Not Yet Accomplished—Whether Determinative.

In determining whether action of dominant carburetor manufacturer, in fixing prices it charged and discounts allowed on purchases of its products by independent service stations upon condition that they should cease from dealing in a new competing line of carburetors, tended to create a monopoly in violation of the Clayton Act, the fact that manufacturer's action had not effected a complete monopoly and that it still did not control all or nearly all of the carburetor business was not determinative. Clayton Act, secs. 2, 3, 15 U. S. C. A. secs. 13, 14.

The fact that dominant manufacturer of carburetors had made large expenditures in research and engineering activities, for advertising and disseminating current advice and in giving instruction and information concerning complicated mechanism into which its carburetors had been developed to independent service station mechanics so as to enable service stations to render better service to public, did not vest in manufacturers a right to dictate conditions in the sale of its goods which are forbidden by the Clayton Act.

Inducing Breach of Competitor's Contracts—Dominant Manufacturer's Coercive Compulsion and Inducing of Independents So To Do, and To Cease Dealing in Product of Competitor.

Where dominant carburetor manufacturer interfered with and diverted the business of a competitor by inducing, coercing, and compelling many independent automobile service stations to cancel existing sales contracts with such competitor and to cease to deal in the products of the competitor, record sustained conclusion of Federal Trade Commission that the dominant manufacturer had engaged in acts constituting "unfair method of competition in commerce" within Federal Trade Commission Act.
CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—DOMINANT MANUFACTURER'S PREFERENTIAL PRICES AND DISCOUNTS CONDITIONED ON INDEPENDENT SERVICE STATIONS' ABSTENTION FROM DEALING IN NEW COMPETING LINE.

Where dominant carburetor manufacturer, by fixing the prices it charged and discounts allowed on purchases of its products by independent automobile service stations upon condition that they should cease from dealing in a new competing line of carburetors, sought to coerce service stations to change their character and to narrow and limit their customary service, cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission could be sustained on ground that manufacturer's action would harmfully affect public, as against manufacturer's contention that it simply took steps which were necessary to meet and protect itself against unfair trade practices and methods of a competitor.

WOODROUGH, Circuit Judge:
This is a petition by Carter Carburetor Corporation (referred to as petitioner) to review a cease and desist order issued against it by the Federal Trade Commission under section 11 of the Clayton Act 15 U. S. C. A. 21, and section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U. S. C. A. 45, for violation of section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U. S. C. A. 14, and section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. The order was issued after hearings had been held upon complaint, amended complaint and answer, at St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, and New York, at which some 1,500 pages of testimony were taken and more than 300 exhibits were introduced. The findings of fact and conclusions of the Commission were as follows:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, is a Delaware corporation, organized in 1925 with factorities and principal offices located at 2820-50 North Spring Avenue, St. Louis, Mo. It is engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling, chiefly, carburetors and carburetor parts for use in the automobile industry. It is the successor of Carter Carburetor Co., a corporation which was engaged in the same business from 1909 to 1921 when it went into bankruptcy.

Par. 2. The respondent and Bendix Products Corporation are the two largest manufacturers of automobile carburetors in the United States. More than 90 percent of the passenger cars produced in the United States in 1937 were equipped with Carter or Bendix (Stromberg) carburetors. Other carburetors, adopted by automobile manufacturers as standard equipment on recent models are Chandler-Groves, on Packard Six, Plymouth, standard model, Lincoln-Zephyr, and part of Ford; Marvel on Graham, part of Nash and part of Buick and Tillotson on Willys. Zenith Carburetor Co. is a subsidiary of Bendix and makes carburetors for replacement use on practically all makes of passenger cars and also truck carburetors.

Par. 3. Carter Carburetors were standard equipment on 60 percent of 1937 passenger cars and trucks and on more than half of all passenger cars and trucks sold for three years prior to 1937. Respondent's carburetors were standard equipment on 1937 and 1938 models of Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, LaSalle V-8, DeSoto, Hudson, Terraplane and Reo; also Chrysler-Royal, Plymouth, DeLuxe Model, Cadillac V-16, Dodge trucks and some Studebaker cars and trucks. About 70 percent of the Carter Carburetors used on Chevrolets are manufactured by the Chevrolet Company in Bay City, Michigan, under license from Carter. These are Carter carburetors and the parts are interchangeable with those manufactured by the respondent. Respondent also makes and sells a number of carburetors which are designed for use in replacing carburetors of various makes and models on automobiles in use, such as the Universal, the Packard, and the Ford carburetors featured in its sales literature. Respondent sold 1,635,000 carburetors to automobile manufacturers in 1937 for use as standard equipment.

Par. 4. Trade and commerce in carburetors has two principal branches, first, the sale of carburetors to automobile manufacturers for original equipment of automobiles; second, the sale of carburetors and parts for replacement and service of carburetors in use, commonly referred to as "after market" business. The acts and practices of respondent complained of have been in connection with the after market branch of its business, but competition in the original equipment field as well is affected. Respondent's dollar volume of sales in the two branches is in the ratio of about 5 to 2, so that its after market business amounts to a little less than 30 percent of the total. Respondent sold more than 103,000 replacement carburetors in 1937 in the after market field, the list prices of such carburetors ranging from $10 to $28 each; and the volume of the after market business was greatly increased by the sale of parts.

Par. 5. The after market business in the service of carburetors of a new manufacture entering the field is at first relatively small and takes two or three years to [725] develop in any volume, because a carburetor ordinarily does not require replacement or repair during the first year or more of use. On recent models little service is required until the car has been driven from 12,000 to 14,000 miles. In the early stages of respondent's business, after market sales amounted to only 5 percent of its total volume. Nevertheless, service station distribution is necessary at the start so that parts or new carburetors will be available if something goes wrong, and also to be able to assure the automobile manufacturer proper warranty service will be given on the carburetor.

Par. 6. The carburetor manufacturer customarily warrants his carburetor to the automobile manufacturer to be free from defect of material or workmanship in normal use and service, for the warranty period of the automobile (generally Respondent has an agreement with practically all of its customers that warranty service will be given, and that repairs during the warranty period will be taken care of by respondent's service stations and distributors without expense to the automobile maker.

PAR. 7. Most automobile makers desire and rely on the carburetor makers' retail outlets for warranty service and, after the warranty period, for service supplemental to that given by automobile dealers. The automobile dealers also rely on the service stations for a ready supply of carburetor parts for making repairs. Such service can be given by a carburetor maker only through a wide service station distribution of its products, and the availability of such service is considered by most automobile makers (except Ford and possibly Chevrolet) to be a very important factor in connection with the approval of standard equipment. Lists of "official service stations" are issued by equipment manufacturers and distributed by automobile manufacturers to their dealers for the purpose of making this service available to the dealers and car owners.

PAR. 8. The business of servicing, replacing and repairing automobiles and automobile equipment is carried on in large part by about 60,000 independent service stations and garages located throughout the United States (not including automobile dealers). Seven thousand or more of these service stations specialize in the service of electrical equipment and carburetors. Practically all stations so specializing carry and sell respondent's products, its products being handled by about six thousand general cabinet stations, and more than 500 contract service stations, as hereinafter described.

PAR. 9. Modern carburetors are complicated mechanisms, respondent's carburetors comprising some 150 to 175 parts. Competent carburetor service requires special equipment and training not possessed by the ordinary garage and garage mechanic or by many automobile dealers. For this reason the 7,000 specialized service stations above referred to handle a great bulk of the carburetor service business and the remaining 53,000 or more independent repair shops are chiefly garages not specializing in, and in most cases not giving, carburetor service.

PAR. 10. It is the established custom of the specialized carburetor and ignition stations to offer service on all makes and models of automobiles in current use and to carry in stock and deal in various competing lines of standard equipment in use on such automobiles, so that service can be given on any car that may be driven in. Most service stations originally specializing in the service of electrical equipment have since taken on carburetor service. The larger and better equipped service stations now carry practically all lines of such equipment standard on automobiles, and have contracts with competing manufacturers. A specialized carburetor service station must stock more than one line of carburetors, because the average automobile driver does not know the make of carburetor he has on his car, and different models of the same make of car may carry different carburetors.

PAR. 11. Respondent's original distributors had for years previously been specialized ignition service stations. The greater majority of stations now dealing in respondent's products carried other carburetor lines before taking on respondent's line, and still deal in and give service on one or more competing carburetors. Respondent's is one of the newer carburetors in the automotive field, although it has succeeded in acquiring the bulk of the desirable equipment accounts.

PAR. 12. For many years it has been the custom for manufacturers of electrical equipment and carburetors, and their distributors, to enter into contracts with the larger independent service stations throughout the country governing the sale of their products requiring the service station to carry a stock of the manufacturer's equipment and parts and providing for the price to be paid or discounts to be received by the service station. These contract service stations are known as official service stations of the equipment manufacturer, and are used as service references by the automobile manufacturer.

Par. 13. Although respondent had some service station distribution prior to 1927 it did not begin to enter the service field on a large scale until 1930, when it began to sell a general parts cabinet to stations throughout the country. Service stations which have purchased and maintained these cabinets now number about 6,000, are referred to as “general cabinet” stations, and are allowed a discount of 40 percent on purchases of respondent’s products, as against respondent’s general trade discount of 25 percent.

Par. 14. In 1932, respondent commenced to enter into service station contracts, as above described, offering such contracts in many cases to stations already handling Stromberg or other competing carburetors. Respondent now has between 600 and 1,000 official contract service stations (in addition to the 6,000 general cabinet stations), located in the larger towns, cities and trading areas throughout the United States. These contracts provide that the service station shall receive a discount of 50 percent (in some cases 50 and 10 percent) from list price on purchases of respondent’s products and that service station shall sell and exchange such products at prices and discounts “recommended” by respondent. Such contracts also provide that the service station shall give the warranty service (about) described and certain advertising services. The parties to such contracts are the respondent, the regional distributor and the service station. Said contracts are made for a period of 1 year, subject to renewal and subject to cancellation by any party on thirty days notice.

Par. 15. Respondent sells and ships its carburetors and carburetor parts f. o. b. St. Louis, to distributors or wholesalers of automobile equipment located in the various States of the United States, who are also under contract with respondent. Regional distributors (66) receive a discount of 60 and 10 percent, and are granted exclusive territory covering in the aggregate the entire United States. Thirty of said regional distributors have territory located in more than one state. Zone distributors (86) may purchase at 60 percent discount for shipment either direct from St. Louis or from the regional distributor.

Par. 16. Both regional and zone distributors’ contracts provide that the distributor shall sell respondent’s products at prices and discounts specified by respondent, and respondent, in practice, fixes the prices and discounts at which said distributors sell such products. List prices are published in respondent’s catalogue. The catalogue list prices are the prices used by the distributors and service stations as a basis for the purchase and sale of Carter carburetors and parts.

Par. 17. Contract service stations purchase from distributors f. o. b. the distributor’s city, but parts cabinets are generally shipped to the service station directly from St. Louis, and occasionally other shipments are made at the distributor’s request. General cabinet stations may purchase either from the distributor or a contract service station, at the prices fixed by respondent. Sales to contract service stations constitute the major part of the distributors’ sales of respondent’s products.

Par. 18. Respondent has a large mailing list, including all contract and general cabinet service stations and their personnel, and mails to said stations and personnel from time to time, a large amount of service and sales bulletins, charts, catalogue sheets, and trade information. This literature is very valuable to the service station in the conduct of its business.

Par. 19. Respondent employs a staff of 10 field representatives who travel in the field and call upon distributors and service stations, maintaining direct contact between respondent and service stations located throughout the country.
The country is divided into four districts, each under the supervision of a district manager, who supervises the work of the field representatives in his district. Respondent conducts short training courses at various distribution points, and a school at its factory in St. Louis, where many service station mechanics have received special training in the service and repair of carburetors, and in engine tune-up.

PAR. 20. On or about April 1, 1937, respondent mailed to all its distributors, contract service stations, cabinet stations, and sales service personnel, its General Bulletin No. 134, notifying the service stations "that if you take on a new carburetor line without our written approval, preferential discount, service information, and Carter contract, if any, will be discontinued by the Carter distributor." A new carburetor was defined as a carburetor made only since the publication of respondent's Bulletin No. 77, which was dated June 23, 1934. Said Bulletin No. 77 was issued only to respondent's distributors, its gist being that if the distributor took on a competing line of carburetors, he could not expect to hold his Carter representation on an exclusive territorial basis. General Bulletin No. 134 is still in effect.

PAR. 21. The manager of respondent's Parts and Service Division instructed respondent's field representatives to insist on the enforcement of the policy stated in Bulletin No. 134, and told them to see that the distributors carried out such policy, and to aid the distributors in carrying it out. He also told them to check up on the service stations that they might visit to see whether the service station was handling a new line of carburetors. On April 5, 1937, he sent a telegram to one of his field representatives in Michigan announcing the issuance of Bulletin No. 134, and stating that "our outlets must choose between Chandler-Groves and Carter" and "until they make up their minds twenty five per cent will be their discount" and in the meantime "suspending all contracts and special discounts." Distributors were to be notified. Copies of this telegram were sent to all of respondent's field men.

PAR. 22. Under date of April 7, 1937, a "confidential" bulletin was sent to all regional and zone distributors requesting them to call on all service stations handling the Chandler-Groves carburetor line, and stating that if service stations kept "the other line" after May 1, "mailings to them would be discontinued" and their Carter contracts, if any, would lapse. The standard trade discount of 25 percent would then apply.

PAR. 23. Thereupon, respondent's field representatives, distributors, and distributors' salesmen called upon the service stations and notified them, and thereafter continued to inform them, that the policy stated in Bulletin No. 134 would be enforced. Service stations found to be handling a new competing line of carburetors were told that they could not continue to carry that line and retain their preferential discount and their Carter contract, if they held such contract, and were asked to notify respondent in writing that they had discontinued the competing line and returned their stock.

PAR. 24. There appear to be three carburetors which have been made only since June 23, 1934—Chandler-Groves, Mallory, and Fish. Of these, Chandler-Groves is the only one which has been adopted as standard equipment on automobiles. Chandler-Groves carburetors and parts were manufactured by Chandler-Groves Co., a Michigan corporation organized in 1933, with offices and factory in Detroit. Chandler-Groves Co. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Holley Carburetor Co. of Detroit, a concern which has for many years manufactured electrical equipment, and formerly carburetors, for the Ford Motor Co. and other automobile manufacturers. After December 31, 1937, Chandler-Groves Co. ceased to do business, and since that time Chandler-Groves carburetors have been manufactured and sold by Holley Carburetor Co., through Chandler-Groves distributors and service stations.
PAR. 25. In addition to carburetors, the Chandler-Groves Co. at first attempted to develop car heaters, inlet manifolds, fuel pumps, and various other automotive devices. Eventually it developed a single barrel carburetor of the concentric type. Carburetors of that type in use in 1936 were made chiefly by respondent, whereas Bendix Products Corporation manufactured chiefly carburetors of the duplex or double barreled type. For that reason, during 1936 and 1937, Chandler-Groves Co.'s competition was mainly with respondent.

PAR. 26. In 1936, Chandler-Groves carburetors were adopted for use as standard equipment on Packard Six and Plymouth PT-50 (truck). In 1937, Chandler-Groves became standard equipment on Plymouth standard model passenger car and, late in the year, was adopted for Lincoln-Zephyr and for a part of Fords. In addition to the foregoing, Chandler-Groves was used on several Dodge and DeSoto export models and on the Chrysler Industrial engine. The great majority of the carburetors produced by Chandler-Groves Co. have been for Plymouth and Packard.

[728] PAR. 27. Adoption of the Chandler-Groves carburetor by Plymouth was announced by Chandler-Groves in a bulletin dated March 10, 1937. Previously, all Plymouth passenger cars had been equipped with Carter carburetors. Respondent received a copy of this Chandler-Groves bulletin a short time before respondent issued its General Bulletin No. 134. Prior to that time, respondent had not objected to its service stations handling Chandler-Groves along with other competing lines.

PAR. 28. In developing its after market business, Chandler-Groves Co. followed the usual service station contract plan hereinabove described and, prior to April 1, 1937, had entered into sales agreements with a large number of independent service stations in various parts of the United States specializing in electrical and carburetor service. In soliciting these contracts, the Chandler-Groves distributors approached the larger and better equipped service stations in their respective territories. The Chicago distributor contacted Auto-Lite (electrical equipment) service stations, and the Philadelphia distributor was also an Auto-Lite distributor and was already selling various kinds of electrical equipment to these service stations. The stations thus contracting with Chandler-Groves were established service stations carrying various lines of automotive equipment, and the great majority of them dealt in the products of respondent and other carburetor manufacturers, many of them being holders of respondent's service station contracts.

PAR. 29. About April 1, 1937, respondent, its field representatives and distributors, commenced to contact and seek out said Chandler-Groves service stations and informed them that, if they continued to deal in Chandler-Groves products, they would no longer be permitted to purchase respondent's products at a favorable discount, would cease to receive service bulletins and information from respondent, and in the case of respondent's contract service stations, that such contracts would be cancelled. Respondent's instructions to its distributors and field representatives, as indicated by its said General Bulletin No. 134 and its confidential bulletin under date of April 7 have been and are being carried out.
Respondent has carried out this policy to the extent of cancelling its contracts with and reducing the discounts available to some nineteen service stations refusing to discontinue dealing in Chandler-Groves products. In some instances, respondent offered the service station the privilege of purchasing respondent's products at a more favorable discount than the station was then receiving, upon condition that the service station sever its connection with Chandler Groves, at the same time threatening to reduce the discount if the service stations would not do so.

PAR. 30. As a result of this concerted action by respondent, its field representatives and its distributors, the independent carburetor and ignition stations throughout the country were given a choice of losing the privilege of handling or favorable terms the carburetor which was standard equipment on a majority of automobiles in use and which furnished a large part of their carburetors service business, or of giving up a new carburetor line which was standard equipment on only a few cars, which, even as to those, had not been in the field long enough to require any substantial amount of service. Confronted with these alternatives many service stations throughout the country cancelled their contracts with Chandler-Groves, returning their Chandler-Groves stock or ceased to deal in Chandler-Groves products. In a few cases the service stations refused to comply with conditions imposed by respondent, but these were mostly Chandler-Groves distributors (wholesalers dealing in respondent's products only on a service station basis). In the 10 months after April 1, 1937, a substantial number of service stations in various parts of the country severed their official service station connection with Chandler-Groves or returned their Chandler-Groves stock, or both. A large majority of these cancellations and returns occurred in April and May, 1937.

Par. 31. About 55 service stations in the Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, and Philadelphia areas cancelled their Chandler-Groves contracts after April 1, 1937, and in most cases returned their Chandler-Groves stock or ceased to purchase their additional stock. After April 1, 1937, the efforts of the distributors in these areas to obtain new Chandler-Groves service station representation met with little success and many service stations assigned opposition by respondent as the reason for their refusing to sign contracts or purchase stock. The Chicago distributor [729] obtained about 40 service station contracts for Chandler-Groves prior to April 1, 1937, and only about 10 thereafter; of the 50 contracts obtained, only half were still in force in February 1938, the other half having been cancelled by the service stations. None of these cancellations occurred prior to April 1, 1937.

Par. 32. Of 50 service stations in the Philadelphia area which held Chandler-Groves contracts during all or part of 1937, 36 which did not cancel such contracts purchased an average of $104 worth of Chandler-Groves products per station during the period of April to December of that year. Fourteen stations which cancelled their contracts purchased a net total of $18 worth of Chandler-Groves merchandise during the same period. While there was very little demand for Chandler-Groves products during the first 3 months of 1937, the 14 stations which later cancelled their contracts purchased slightly more per station from January to March than the other 36 stations.

Par. 33. By the terms of the sales contracts between Chandler-Groves Co. and service stations, the service stations agreed "to prominently display the advertising material of the vendor and to maintain mechanical equipment to efficiently service the product of the vendor." The sale of carburetors is promoted by the display of stock and advertising material. Some service stations did not return their Chandler-Groves stock after receiving respondent's Bulletin No. 134, but nevertheless refrained thereafter from displaying or advertising Chandler-Groves products, kept such stock out of sight, and ceased to promote the sale thereof.

Par. 34. Respondent has entered into or renewed contracts for the sale of its products with more than 900 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent.

Par. 35. Respondent has fixed the prices charged for its products and discounts from such prices, to approximately 7,000 service stations, on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent.
Par. 36. Respondent has made such contracts, fixed such prices, and imposed such condition and understanding, in the course and conduct of its after market, interstate business.

Par. 37. The effect of the contracts and the condition or understanding mentioned in paragraph 34 hereof, and of the condition or understanding mentioned in paragraph 35 hereof, has been and may be to substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of carburetors and carburetor parts in interstate commerce.

Par. 38. The effect of the respondent's above described acts and practices has been to induce, coerce and compel a large number of automobile service stations throughout the United States to cease and refuse to deal in or purchase the products of Chandler-Groves Co. and to cancel or violate existing Chandler-Groves sales agreements. Respondent has thereby closed to a competitor a substantial number of actual and potential service station outlets for its products, has diverted business and trade from such competitor, and has prevented such service stations from selling and dealing in a full line of standard carburetors and parts.

CONCLUSIONS

1. By its acts and practices described in paragraphs 20, 21, 22, 23, 29, 34, and 35 of the foregoing "Findings as to the Facts," the respondent, Carter Carburetor Corporation, has violated and is violating section 3 of the Clayton Act.

2. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have been and are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The petitioner has not included in its points to be argued any contention that any finding of the Commission, which is admitted to be strictly a finding of fact, is not supported by evidence in the record. It has at several places in the brief assailed some of the findings as conclusions, unsupported by and contrary to the record, and has insisted that material facts were not reported by the Commission, although pleaded in the answer to the complaint and shown by irrefutable evidence, and that the record as a whole discloses no violation as charged. Our examination convinces that each of the above findings which is strictly a fact finding is supported by evidence in the record, 15 U. S. C. A. 45 (c), and must be taken as true in this proceeding.

The petitioner admits that it promulgated its General Bulletin No. 134 of date April 1, 1937, to all its distributors, contract service stations, cabinet stations and sales service personnel, notifying "that if you take on a new carburetor line without our approval preferential discount, service information and Carter contract, if any, will be discontinued by the Carter distributor," and that it has taken effective measures to enforce the same, but it contends that there was no violation of the Clayton Act as charged and has argued points for reversal in substance as follows: (a) that in its after market transactions which are here involved it is not engaged in interstate commerce, and that its service station contracts are not contracts for the sale of goods within the meaning of section 3 of the Clayton Act; (b) that it has not fixed prices (and discounts therefrom) subject to a condition or understanding that the service stations shall not use or deal in the goods of competitors within the prohibition of section 3 of the act;
(c) that the effect of petitioner's action has not been, and may not be to lessen competition or tend to create monopoly, and that its action was lawful and without unlawful motive; (d) that its actions do not constitute methods of unfair competition within section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; (e) that this proceeding was not, and is not, in the public interest, and that it should be dismissed.

(a) Interstate commerce.—Section 3 of the Clayton Act denounces making contracts for sale of goods by a person engaged in interstate commerce on the condition or understanding that the purchaser shall not use or deal in the goods of competitors of the seller where the effect of the contract or condition may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce. The petitioner does not deny that it engages in interstate commerce in that first branch of its business described in the findings (par. 4) involving the sales of carburetors for original equipment of automobiles. But as to the "second, the sale of carburetors and parts for replacement and service of carburetors in use, commonly referred to as 'after market' business" (id.), it contends that it does not engage in interstate commerce.

It appears that petitioner's sales in this branch of its business are made to some 67 distributors or wholesalers of automotive equipment located in many states, classified by petitioner as "regional distributors." The total sales territory of these distributors covers the entire United States, and 30 of them sell in territory comprising more than one State. Petitioner also ships some of its products directly to more than 86 "zone distributors," service stations doing a certain amount of wholesale business who may also purchase from the regional distributors. Both regional distributors' contracts and zone distributors' contracts provide for purchase of carburetors and parts from petitioner at specified prices, f. o. b. St. Louis where petitioner's principal offices and factories are located. Orders are filled by shipment from St. Louis to the distributors and shipments may be made directly to service stations if the distributors so direct. We think that in making such sales and shipments to distributors and service stations located in other States than Missouri, petitioner is engaged in interstate commerce. The fact that petitioner delivers its merchandise f. o. b. St. Louis, title passing there and freight being paid by the purchaser, is immaterial where the actual movement is interstate.
Santa Cruz Co. v. Labor Board, 303 U. S. 453; Penn R. Co. v. Clark Bros. Coal Mining Co., 258 U. S. 456. The contracts between petitioner and its service stations contemplated and required the movement of petitioner's products in interstate commerce. They provide for continuing purchases by the service stations of carburetors and parts to be manufactured by petitioner in Missouri and transported to distributors (also parties to the contracts) in other States, the shipments in some cases being made directly to zone distributors and service stations, and we entertain no doubt that all such contracts, except those involving sales and shipments to distributors and service stations in Missouri, were in the course of interstate commerce.

[731] We think it must also be held that the service station contracts were contracts for the sale of goods within the act. Petitioner concedes that the service station contracts which include the petitioner, its distributors and the service stations as parties thereto "establish the terms and conditions of sales by distributors to service stations, and the actual business in this respect is conducted uniformly therewith," but it argues that the sales which are finally consummated are sales from the distributors and not from petitioner to the service stations. It is to be observed that petitioner not only made the service station contracts in the sense that it was a party to them, but they are essentially petitioner's contracts, made on printed forms issued by petitioner and headed by its name and trade-mark and of no validity till approved by petitioner's general manager. The sales provisions are prescribed by petitioner and it fixes and controls the prices and terms upon which the service station receives its products from the distributors, as set forth in the contracts. In the separate contracts with the distributor the distributor agrees to sell at prices and discounts specified by the petitioner. The list prices are found in petitioner's catalog. Complete control of the sales prices and terms is in the petitioner, and the evidence is clear that it was not the distributors but it was the petitioner which had and exercised the power to impose the conditions of its General Bulletin No. 134 in respect to sales, to cancel the contracts if it saw fit, or to raise the prices on goods to be delivered to the service stations. The method of disposing of products of manufacture in interstate commerce to retailers who in turn sell to the public, is general in many lines of industry and there is no reason to believe that the scope of section 3 may be so limited by interpretation as to sanction restraint of trade and monopoly of interstate commerce merely because of such method of distribution.

It is argued that the service station contracts may be regarded as "contracts for services" to be rendered by the stations for the benefit of petitioner and may be related to the many services rendered by petitioner to the stations, and that the contracts should be deemed "service contracts” as between the petitioner and the stations, rather than contracts for the sale of goods. Much of petitioner’s complaint in the brief is directed to the failure of the Commission to make findings upon the matter of such services. The Commission found that petitioner “conducts short training courses at various distribution points, and a school at its factory in St. Louis, where many service station mechanics have received special training in the service and repair of carburetors, and in engine tune up,” but in its answer to the complaint against it, and in its evidence, the matter of services and the relation of service to petitioner’s business and the very great expenditures incurred by it in connection with service were developed in voluminous detail. The importance of service is again urged in the brief and we entertain no doubt that the element of service has been and is a great factor in the building up and maintenance of petitioner’s business.

But the fact remains that the essential character of the petitioner’s business is that of a manufacturer of carburetors and parts, engaged in selling them in interstate commerce for profit. To the extent that it does so in contravention of section 3 of the Clayton Act, it is amenable to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act. We think no one of the provisions of the service station contracts relating to carburetor servicing, nor all of them taken together, operated to divest those contracts of their essential character as contracts for the sale of goods made in the course of interstate commerce, and we hold that they were contracts for sales of goods within that section. That they may be denominated Service Station Contracts is not controlling. “While this contract is denominated one of agency, it is perfectly apparent that it is one of sale.” Standard Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 258 U. S. 346.

(b) Price fixing on conditions against use of competitor’s goods.—Petitioner contends that the Commission’s findings set forth in paragraphs 34 and 35 are conclusions merely and unsupported. They are to the effect that petitioner has entered into or renewed contracts for the sale of its products with more than 900 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of respondent, and that it has fixed the prices and discounts from such prices to approximately 7,000 service stations on the condition or understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use or deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of petitioner.

Petitioner argues that its service station contracts, considered with General Bulletin No. 134, do not effect a fixing of prices on the conditions denounced by section 3 of the Clayton Act. Its position is that when due regard is given to the business as a whole it should be found that the service stations are simply accorded a privilege and free choice between taking the Carter goods and performing the services required by Carter on the terms offered, or, in the exercise of their judgment and at their election, to deal with Carter's competitors. The Carter contract forms contain no provision that the service station obligates itself to deal exclusively with Carter.

We think it is clearly proved that petitioner did fix the prices it charged and discounts allowed on purchases of its products by the contract service stations and general cabinet service stations, upon the condition that they should cease and refrain from dealing in a new competing line of carburetors. Petitioner's contracts with distributors require the distributors "to sell and exchange Carter Carburetors at prices and discounts specified by Company," and pursuant to these contracts, petitioner fixes the prices at which service stations may purchase from the distributors, contract service stations purchasing at a discount of 50 percent and general cabinet stations at a discount of 40 percent from list prices. Such list prices are published by petitioner in its catalog, which is furnished to all service stations and distributors and kept up to date by a loose leaf system. General cabinet stations may purchase their stock requirements from contract service stations, and the service station contracts likewise provide that the service station shall sell and exchange Carter carburetors and parts at prices and discounts recommended by petitioner. Petitioner thus has established within its own control a complete system of retail price maintenance, effective as to all sales to both contract and general cabinet service stations.

The purpose and effect of General Bulletin No. 134 must therefore be considered in the light of that situation. The Bulletin advised that the preferential discount would be discontinued if a new carburetor line (defined as a carburetor made after June 23, 1934) was taken on without petitioner's written approval. Petitioner gave instructions that if the service stations "should elect to keep the other line * * * the standard trade discount of 25 percent would then apply." Petitioner's telegram to its field representatives stated that "until they make up their minds 25 percent will be their discount." The policy was enforced by increasing prices to some service stations which refused compliance and by threats of reduction of discounts made to others and by cancelation of contracts. It was made perfectly clear to all service stations that their preferential discount would be available only on condition that they did not carry or take on a new competing line. Under these circumstances it is immaterial that those who handled petitioner's products were not obliged to affirmatively promise in express terms not to handle goods of Carter's competitors. The condition against handling the goods of competitors was made as fully effective as though it had been written in and affirmatively agreed to in express terms in the contracts. Of course it was necessary that the petitioner's distributors should cooperate to effectuate the purpose because the distributors were the immediate source from which the service stations obtained their stocks directly. But there is, and was, no doubt that such cooperation was complete, both in actual practice and according to the terms of the contracts between petitioner and distributors. The arguments presented as to the right of an individual to contract or refuse to contract with whom he pleases must be related to the provisions of section 3 of the act and the limitations there imposed. The service stations contracts were intended to and did impose a condition that the purchaser should not deal in the goods of a competitor of petitioner within the prohibition of section 3.

(c) Lessening competition and tendency to create monopoly.—The petitioner has very fully detailed and developed out of the mass of testimony in the record, facts and circumstances upon which it contends that the effect of its action in promulgating and enforcing its General Bulletin No. 134 was not and “may not be” to substantially lessen competition or to create a monopoly in commerce in carburetors. The question is primarily a question of fact, though illuminated by many court decisions, and the Commission has found on the issue against the petitioner (par. 37).

Our study of the record has convinced that the Commission has correctly found and described the relevant important factors in the carburetor industry throughout the country and the connection of petitioner’s activities therewith, and the actual and imminent effects upon interstate commerce in carburetors of petitioner’s action, which is the subject of the complaint herein. There is no doubt that the petitioner occupies a dominating position in the carburetor business of the country and no service station assuming to give a complete carburetor service, other than mere adjustments, could successfully carry on its business or render to the public the kind of service which the special service stations have long given without carrying a stock of carburetors, parts, and replacements from petitioner’s products.

The long established custom of the special service stations has been to offer carburetor service on all popular makes and models of automobiles in current use and to carry in stock and deal in competing lines of standard equipment. Although there are some 60,000 independent automobile repair shops and garages in the country, the specialized service stations, found to be about 7,000 in number, occupy a position in the business as an outlet for petitioner’s goods and render a service to the public which is of paramount importance in the industry, and petitioner has long had the choice of all these specialty organizations and the bulk of their desirable equipment accounts. A large part of the business of the service stations has consisted in servicing the Carter carburetors and any new line, under the circumstances which have prevailed, has offered small opportunity of immediate profit to the service stations. The necessary effect of petitioner's action in promulgating and enforcing its General Bulletin No. 134 was to coerce and compel the service stations which had invested in stocks of the new line of carburetors and parts to dispose of the same and refuse to purchase more, or to cease to display them and conceal them where they would not be observed by petitioner's field men and distributors' solicitors. Undoubtedly petitioner's action deterred many service stations from buying stocks forbidden them in the bulletin. The effects upon the industry of the bulletin and its enforcement by petitioner were not limited to the commerce carried on by service stations but necessarily reached the original equipment branch of the business. The great measure of reliance put by nearly all the automobile manufacturers upon the equipment manufacturers for warranty service, and after the warranty period for service supplemental to that given by the automobile dealers, is fully shown. The equipment manufacturers have their lists of official service stations and all the automobile dealers get such lists and depend upon them.

It follows that practices of a dominant carburetor manufacturer which are designed to aid do prevent a new manufacturer from obtaining a foothold in the service field will handicap the new manufacturer in selling his carburetors for original equipment and may prevent him from marketing a superior product at an equal or lower price. The petitioner's restraint upon competition works in a vicious circle since service sales on any carburetor normally depend upon the number of automobiles equipped with that carburetor, and loss of service sales and distribution by the carburetor manufacturer in turn affects his ability to meet price competition and service requirements in offering his product for original equipment.

We hold that the effect of the action of petitioner here complained of was to lessen competition within the prohibition of section 3. In United Shoe Machinery Corp. v. United States, 258 U. S. 451; Vitaphone, Inc. v. Perelman, 3 Cir., 95 F. (2d) 142; Butterick Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 2 Cir., 4 F. (2d) 910, the accused contracts were made directly by the manufacturing company with the dealers and the manufacturer-controlled distributor was not present as a conduit of the goods like in this case, but the principles laid down in those cases none the less control decision here.

The action of petitioner also tends to create monopoly. Although at the time Bulletin No. 134 was promulgated it was undoubtedly directed principally against the competition of the Chandler-Groves Co., it was made applicable to "any other carburetor put on the market since publication of our bulletin No. 77." It must be deemed to have established petitioner's policy to exclude new competition from the carburetor field which if vindicated may be extended to complete monopoly. That petitioner's action has not affected complete monopoly, and that it still does not control all or nearly all of the carburetor business is not determinative. Sections 2 and 3 of the Clayton Act reflect the intent of Congress to prevent courses of action having a tendency to create a monopoly before actual monopoly has been accomplished and the Federal Trade Commission Act supplies means to effectuate the intent. By its accused action petitioner has attempted to control the carburetor business of practically all service stations specializing in carburetor and ignition service, and they, as observed, perform a vital function in the distribution of carburetors and in meeting the requirements of the public using the carburetors. Hitherto they have serviced the various makes of carburetors. The petitioner attempts to confine them to its own products and so comes within the statute.

It is neither necessary nor relevant to belittle the work petitioner has done in giving instruction and information concerning the complicated mechanism into which its carburetors have been developed; nor to ignore its research and engineering activities or its outlay for advertising and disseminating current advices. It has made great expenditures of time and money to such ends. It results in an ability on the part of the special service stations to render better service to the public. But it does not result in vesting in petitioner a right to dictate conditions in the sale of its goods which are forbidden by section 3. It is true, as contended by petitioner, that its competitors are left free to go among the 60,000 service stations and to build up new special service stations to compete with those already established by handling product—other than petitioner's product. It is also true that the outlays that have been made by petitioner have given the established special service stations some advantages that they avail of when they service products of petitioner's competitors, and such competitors indirectly secure a benefit in that way. It is possible that some stations have made unfair substitutions of Chandler-Groves products in some instances—though we do not so decide. But there is no way by which every bit of the fruit of such large-scale dissemination of information and knowledge as petitioner has carried on can be prevented from spreading out onto the common. Educating remains merely an incident of petitioner's business. The substantial character of its business continues to be the manufacturing and selling of carburetors. The Commission properly found that petitioner's attempt to coerce the service stations into handling no goods but its own tends to create monopoly within the prohibition of the act.

(d) Unfair competition (Sec. 5, Federal Trade Commission Act).—The record fully sustains the Commission's conclusion that petitioner has engaged in acts and practices in the conduct of its interstate business which have been and are to the prejudice of the public and of petitioner's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the act.

Petitioner has interfered with and diverted the business of a competitor, the Chandler-Groves Co., by inducing, coercing and compelling many independent automobile service stations to cancel existing sales contracts with such competitor and to cease and refuse to deal in the products of such competitor. Several service station operators testified as to the coercive effect of the conditions imposed by petitioner, and that solely as a result of such conditions they cancelled their official service station contracts with Chandler-Groves and returned or concealed their Chandler-Groves stock. Petitioner not only threatened to cancel the service station contracts of, and reduce the discounts available to service stations found to be dealing in the Chandler-Groves line, but also threatened to remove such service stations from its mailing list and to discontinue distribution to them of its service and sales bulletins, which it is agreed are valuable and necessary to the service stations.

As stated by the witness Nilsen:

The few parts we had in stock we kept, but we did not talk about it or try to push the line. We felt that we could not go ahead. At first, of course, we thought we might make a business of that along with the other, but naturally when we were told that that was not agreeable to Carter, we simply did nothing about it, did not talk about it, did not try to sell the carburetor, did not do anything.

This witness further stated that it had always been his practice to handle all lines of standard automobile equipment so far as he was able to do so; that as a service station in carburetors, unless you can give service on all cars, it is pretty hard to maintain men who specialize in carburetors, have enough work for them. If you are going to single out one or two lines, it is pretty hard to keep a first-class man on the pay roll. You need service on all makes of carburetors in a small town like we are, to get volume, to maintain a carburetor department. (Oak Park, Ill., where Nilsen is located, has a population of 64,000.)

Q. Why did you choose to give up Chandler-Groves and retain Carter?—A. Because Carter was established with us, and was a profitable line. Chandler-Groves, we felt, had value mainly in the future.

[735] This testimony is characteristic of that given by other service station operators. As a result of petitioner's activities, many service stations which would otherwise have continued to carry both lines canceled their Chandler-Groves contracts and returned their stocks to the Chandler-Groves distributor. Others, like Nilsen (who also canceled his contract), did not return their stock but thereafter did not display Chandler-Groves carburetors or push the line.

Petitioner directly and consistently interfered with the contract relationships of its competitor, Chandler-Groves Co. Petitioner obtained a list of official Chandler-Groves contract service stations and used this list as a basis for approaching, and for having its distributors approach, service stations which were then representing both Chandler-Groves and Carter. A list of Chandler-Groves service stations in a Carter distributor's territory was sent to the distributor with instructions to have the distributor's salesmen "check with every service account as they go through the territory" and "insist" that the service stations give up the Chandler-Groves line.

The Carter Detroit distributor repeatedly urged the Chandler-Groves Detroit distributor to give up his Chandler-Groves representation after the latter's Carter contract had been canceled, and stated that a discount of 50 percent and 10 percent was being offered to service stations "who would go with Carter and throw out Chandler-Groves." A similar proposition was made by one of petitioner's field men to the Chandler-Groves Fort Wayne, Ind., distributor, with the alternative of a cut to 25 percent. Another instance of this practice was with Kritchmer Motor Service of Philadelphia.

On May 22, 1937, petitioner wrote to its Cincinnati distributor stating:

So long as they [service stations] insist on handling C-G material, whether carburetors or parts, we will cancel, and we will recover consignment material such as display stands, cabinets, counterbinder, service station sign, etc., and their future discount will be 25 percent. There will be no exception in this matter, and we expect distributors to police the situation for us.

The activities of the Detroit distributor in enforcing the policy inaugurated by Bulletin No. 134 are described by his testimony. After receiving the confidential letter and telegram he telephoned the service stations known to be carrying the Chandler-Groves line, read excerpts from the telegram, and told them that they would have to choose between Chandler-Groves and Carter. He then called his salesmen together and instructed them to carry out petitioner's policy and to look for Chandler-Groves products when visiting the service stations. No distinction was made between carburetors and parts, although Chandler-Groves parts are noncompetitive with Carter parts. The service stations were asked to state their decision in writing. Copies of the letters received were forwarded by the distributor to petitioner.

The method used by petitioner in concert with its distributors and field men go further than a mere refusal to deal, and in that respect are similar to the methods which were used by the Beech-Nut Co. in compelling adherence to its resale prices—methods which were declared to be in restraint of trade, and an unfair method of competition in Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Packing Company, 257 U. S. 441. In that case the competition affected was price competition in the resale of Beech-Nut products. In the present proceedings the restraint upon interstate trade is much more direct and obvious. The reasoning of the Supreme Court in the Beech-Nut case in holding that the Beech-Nut system unreasonably restrained trade applies equally to the acts and practices of petitioner here, and this case presents a plainer case of unfair competition than was there dealt with by the court. We think the following expressions of the court in that case are directly applicable here:

The system here disclosed necessarily constitutes a scheme which restrains the natural flow of commerce and the freedom of competition in the channels of interstate trade which it has been the purpose of all the antitrust acts to maintain. In its principal operation it necessarily constrains the trader, if he would have the products of the Beech-Nut Co., to maintain the prices “suggested” by it. If he fails to do so, he is subject to be reported to the company either by special agents, numerous and active in that behalf, or by dealers whose aid is enlisted in maintaining the system and the prices fixed by it. Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Packing Co., 257 U. S. 441, 453; Wholesale Grocers Association v. Federal Trade Commission, 277 Fed. 657, 664; Standard Oil Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 282 Fed. 81, 87; L. B. Silver Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 289 Fed. 983, 900.

(e) The public interest.—The point is urged that these proceedings in the Federal Trade Commission are not in the public interest and should therefore be dismissed. Petitioner contends in substance that it simply took steps which were necessary on its part to be taken, to meet and protect itself against unfair trade practices and methods of competition pursued by the Chandler-Groves Co. It presents that its General Bulletin No. 134 was directed against that company and was to meet and counteract its wrongful actions, and that the public interest was not intended to be and in fact was not harmfully affected, and “may not be” so harmfully affected within the purview of the Federal Trade Commission Act. But we think the contentions should not be sustained. We need not decide whether the Chandler-Groves Co. has also offended against the act. The mere fact that its competition with petitioner had reached sufficient importance to make it the more immediate target of petitioner’s attack is not controlling. Petitioner’s policy was not limited to one competitor. It extended to any new line made after June 23, 1934. It seems clear to us upon the proof in the record that petitioner’s course of action is pursued by it by combined and concerted action with its numerous distributors and individual agents, that such combined and concerted action is oppressive and wrongful towards the thousands of independent service stations whose business it directly and immediately restricts and interferes with, and that the public interest is thereby wrongfully and injuriously affected. As was said by the Supreme Court in Eastern States Lumber Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 613:

The argument that the course pursued is necessary to the protection of the retail trade and promotive of the public welfare in providing retail facilities is answered by the fact that Congress, with the right to control the field of interstate commerce, has so legislated as to prevent resort to practices which unduly restrain competition or unduly obstruct the free flow of such commerce, and private choice of means must yield to the national authority thus exerted.

And again in Sugar Institute v. United States, 297 U. S. 553, 599,

The freedom of concerted action to improve conditions has an obvious limitation. The end does not justify illegal means. The endeavor to put a stop to illicit practices must not itself become illicit. As the statute draws the line at unreasonable restraints, a cooperative endeavor which transgresses that line cannot justify itself by pointing to evils afflicting the industry or to a laudable purpose to remove them.

See Vitaphot, Inc. v. Perelman, 95 F. (2d) 142, supra.

Petitioner has laid stress and reliance upon Curtis Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 270 Fed. 881, affirmed, Federal Trade Commission v. Curtis Publishing Co., 260 U. S. 568; and Pictorial Review Co. v. Curtis Publishing Co., 255 Fed. 206, but we find those cases inapplicable here and to be distinguished on the facts. It was there recognized that where a producer has built up his business by creating an organization of salesmen devoting their time exclusively to the distribution of his products, he may lawfully maintain the integrity of the organization as an exclusive selling agency. But in this case, the thousands of service stations involved are established independent outlets where the public has been accustomed to go for service on all makes of carburetors and other automobile equipment. Their specialization in ignition service ante-dated the specializing in carburetors. They are not and have never constituted an exclusive selling agency for Carter products. The action of the petitioner was taken to coerce and compel them to change their character and to narrow and limit their customary service to the public and to lessen, restrain and ultimately prevent the legitimate commerce of competitors whose goods were and had been moving in interstate commerce through this important outlet.

In Journal of Commerce Pub. Co. v. Chicago Tribune Co., 286 Fed. 111, cited by petitioner, it was held that under the circumstances there shown the Tribune company was properly not enjoined from requiring the carriers of its paper over exclusive routes that it had built up by means referred to in the opinion, to handle the Tribune exclusively. The court noted that "each carrier, though owning his own [737] 'route' and buying outright from day to day his copies of the paper, recognized that the Tribune Co. had at least a moral right to a voice in controlling the methods and personnel of the carriers." We think the situation there presented was not analogous to that involved here. Here the public has an interest in the continued independence of the service stations and in fair competition in the carburetor industry, and it is the duty of the court to protect such interest by enforcing the lawful order of the Commission.
The findings and conclusions of the Federal Trade Commission are sustained and the clerk of this court is directed to enter the order of this Court against petitioner in form as ordered by the Commission.

ALLEN B. WRISLEY COMPANY ET AL. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 6980

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. June 12, 1940)

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE SUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—BRANDS AND LABELS—"OLIVE OIL SOAP" FOR SOAP COMPOSED OF OILS OTHER THAN OLIVE OIL ONLY.

Evidence held to authorize finding by Federal Trade Commission, as basis for cease and desist order against labeling a soap comprising other oils as an "olive oil soap," that an "olive oil soap" is one containing olive oil as its fatty ingredient to the exclusion of all other oils or fats.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—BRANDS AND LABELS—"PALM AND OLIVE OIL SOAP" FOR SOAP COMPOSED OF OILS OTHER THAN OLIVE OIL ONLY—EVIDENCE—STIPULATIONS—WHERE CONTRADICTED BY UNANIMOUS PERSONAL TESTIMONY TO CONTRARY.

A stipulation, that 24 out of 30 members of the consuming public would testify that the label "Palm and Olive Oil Soap" would lead them to believe that the soap contained 100 percent olive oil, could not be said to be substantial in view of unanimous testimony to the contrary by witnesses appearing personally, and did not authorize cease and desist order against use of the quoted label and similar labels.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—BRANDS AND LABELS—"OLIV-ILIO" FOR SOAP COMPOSED OF OILS OTHER THAN OLIVE OIL ONLY.

Evidence held to sustain finding by Federal Trade Commission, as basis for cease and desist order against use of such labels as "Oliva'-ilo" and the like for soap containing other fatty ingredients than olive oil, that such labels led the public to believe that the soap contained 100 percent olive oil.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—SECTION 5—PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PLEADINGS—ANSWERS—ADMISSIONS—COMPETITION CONCEDED—AS NOT NECESSARILY BARRING ISSUE UNFAIR COMPETITIVE EFFECT.

In proceeding by Federal Trade Commission, admission, in answer of allegation, that soap dealers complained against were both of the two classes of dealers in which the soap industry was divided, authorized finding that dealers of both such classes were among the competitors but did not preclude presentation of issue whether unfair methods were employed affecting competition.

Unfair Methods of Competition—Whether Method Unfair—Criteria—Diversity of Trade and Damage or Injury to Competitor.

One of the tests to be applied in determining if method of competition is “unfair” is diversion of trade, and damage or injury to competitor.

Unfair Methods of Competition—Unfair Trade Methods—Whether Unfair Methods, etc., per se.

Unfair trade methods are not per se “unfair methods of competition,” since the word “competition” imports existence of present or potential competitors and the unfair methods must be such as injuriously affect or tend thus to affect business of those competitors.

Brands and Labels—Olive Oil Only Soap for Soap Composed of Oils Other Than.

The use of brands and labels falsely representing that soap was 100 percent olive oil was an “unfair method of competition” as to that class of competitors engaged in manufacture and sale of 100 percent olive oil soap.

Public Interest—Brands and Labels—Olive Oil Only Soap for Soap Composed of Oils Other Than.

A proceeding by Federal Trade Commission for cease and desist order against labeling of soap so as to falsely represent that the soap was 100 percent olive oil was in the public interest.

Cease and Desist Orders—Scope—As Exceeding Issue Tendered by Complaint—Trade Designations—“Olive Oil” for Soaps Composed in Part Only of—Where Prohibition, Unless Accompanied by Equally Conspicuous Exposure of Other Oil Content, and Unfairness, as Alleged, With Dealers in Genuine Olive Oil Soap and Dealers in Product Composed in Part Only of.

A cease and desist order prohibiting manufacturers of soap from using the word “olive,” or similar words, unless words truthfully describing and designating each constituent oil were also used, went beyond issues raised by petition alleging merely unfair competition with dealers in genuine olive oil soap and dealers truthfully representing that their products were only partially olive oil soap, and should merely require use of name of another oil or other words clearly indicating that soap was not made wholly of olive oil.

On petition by Wrisley Co. and others to review cease and desist order of Commission directng petitioners to cease and desist from alleged unfair competition, order set aside, with permission to present a substitute order.

Mr. F. W. Sullivan, of Chicago, Ill., for petitioners.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, and Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, both of Washington, D. C., Mr. Eugene Carmichael, Jr., of Chicago, Ill., Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorneys, Federal Trade Commission, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Before Sparks, Major, and Treanor, Circuit Judges; Treanor, C. J., dissenting in part.
MAJOR, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition to review and set aside a cease and desist order entered April 6, 1939, by the Federal Trade Commission (hereinafter referred to as the “Commission”) against petitioners.

On December 24, 1936, the Commission issued its complaint pursuant to section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45, alleging, in substance, that petitioners were engaged in the business of manufacturing soap and in the distribution thereof in interstate commerce; that petitioners were in substantial competition with those engaged in the manufacture and sale of genuine olive soap, and those engaged in the manufacture and sale of soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil; that in the course and conduct of such business, petitioners sold many kinds of soap, some of which were branded, labeled, and otherwise advertised and represented as olive oil soap.

It was alleged that the oil or fat ingredient of the soap thus labeled and branded was not wholly olive oil; that genuine olive oil soap is one, the oil ingredient of which always has been and now is olive oil to the exclusion of all other oils and fats; that said soap had for many years been sold and used by the purchasing public throughout the United States and that because of its qualities had long been considered as a high quality soap, free from substances harmful to the human skin or delicate fabrics, and possessing desirable qualities not contained in other soaps; that a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public preferred to purchase and use soap, the oil content of which was wholly olive oil. It was alleged that petitioners were enabled to sell their soaps at prices substantially lower than its competitors who import or manufacture and sell genuine olive oil soap, and that the practices complained of have the capacity and tendency to cause and do cause the trade and public to purchase petitioners' said soap as and for genuine olive oil soap in preference to the more costly genuine olive oil soap sold by its competitors. It was further alleged that such practices had a tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the trade and purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of petitioners' said soap because of such erroneous belief, and that as a result thereof, trade was unfairly diverted from those competitors dealing in the genuine olive oil soap, as well as those dealing in soap not wholly olive oil, but who truthfully advertised their soap, resulting in substantial injury to competition.

1 Among the brands and labels used by the petitioners as alleged in the complaint, are: “Wrisley’s Oliv-o-lb pronounced Oliv-eye-lo,” “Turrito Olive Oil Castle,” “Wrisley’s Oliv Skin and pure Toilet Soap,” “Royale Olive Oil Pure,” “Allen B. Wrisley Co., Chicago,” “Palm and Olive Soap Regal Soap Co.,” and “Palm and Olive Oil Soap.”
The acts, practices and methods of petitioners were alleged to injure and prejudice the public and petitioners' competitors, and to constitute an unfair method of competition within the meaning and intent of the act.

[439] Petitioners' answer admitted competition and that the soaps labeled and branded as alleged in the complaint were not wholly olive oil, but denied that the use of the words “Olive Oil” in describing soap, connotes to the trade or the purchasing public that it is a soap, the oil content of which is 100 percent olive oil. The answer admits that some of petitioners' competitors dealing in soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, truthfully advertise the same. A general denial was made of other allegations of the complaint.

The Commission, after hearing, made its findings of fact, which generally follow the allegations of the complaint. We set forth in a footnote 2 such of the specific findings as appear to be material. Predicated upon such findings, the Commission entered the order here involved, which we shall discuss hereafter.

The principal contested issues are:

(1) Is it an unfair method of competition to brand and label soaps as charged in the complaint and found by the Commission which do not contain 100 percent olive oil as their fat or oil content, but which do contain olive oil in lesser amounts?

(2) Is there any specific and substantial public interest in the subject matter of the complaint which should be protected by the Commission?

(3) Is there substantial evidence to support the Commission’s finding that a substantial portion of the trade and purchasing public have been misled and deceived by use of the brands and labels set forth in

2 "Olive oil soap is a soap containing olive oil as its fatty ingredient, to the exclusion of all other oils or fats. Some of the brand names and labels used by respondents in advertising their soap have led a substantial number of the trade and purchasing public to believe that the soap so labeled, branded and otherwise advertised is olive oil soap.

"• • • For many purposes, a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public prefer to purchase and use soap, the oil content of which is wholly olive oil. Said olive oil soap has long been and is now considered by the medical profession to have the qualities requisite and desirable for bathing infants, sick and ailing persons, and is used in medicinal preparations. Said soap has long been, and is now, prescribed and recommended by the medical profession for said purposes.

"Olive oil has been higher in price than other oils and fats commonly used in the manufacture of soap, and genuine olive oil soap is more costly to manufacture than respondents' said soaps, and respondents are enabled to, and do, sell their soaps at prices substantially less than respondents' competitors who import, or manufacture, and sell genuine olive oil soap, can and do sell the same.

"There are a substantial number of the consuming public who understand an olive oil soap to be a soap containing 100% olive oil as its oil or fat content, and prefer to buy and use said soaps.

"• • • There are among the competitors of respondents manufacturers and distributors of genuine olive oil soap and manufacturers and distributors of soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, who truthfully advertise, sell and distribute their soaps among the various states of the United States. By the use of the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, thereby, substantial injury is being and has been done by the respondents to competition in commerce as herein set forth."
the complaint which has resulted in a diversion of trade to petitioners and from their competitors?

(4) Is the evidence sufficient to disclose any substantial competition between petitioners' products labeled and branded as described in the complaint, and those containing olive oil as their sole oil or fat ingredient?

The first two issues, so it is contended, raise questions of law to be determined by the court and not by the Commission. Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 253 U. S. 421, 427; International Shoe Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 280 U. S. 291, 298. Petitioners concede the well established rule that the findings of the Commission are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

In considering the contentions of the respective parties, it is important to keep in mind that the Commission's case as revealed by the pleadings, the hearing and its argument here, is predicated upon the theory that petitioners untruthfully and falsely represented their soaps as containing 100 percent olive oil; that by reason of this misrepresentation alone, a substantial portion of the public was induced to purchase such soap; that it was deceived thereby and, as a result of such deception, both a substantial portion of the public and petitioners' competitors were injured or damaged. In considering the alleged misrepresentation on the part of petitioners, it also must be borne in mind that they consist entirely of the brands and labels set forth in the complaint. True, the Commission in its findings referred to the "soap so labeled, branded, and otherwise advertised as olive oil soap." What is meant by the words "otherwise advertised" we do not know, as we do not find a scintilla of evidence in the record that petitioners' soap was advertised, or that the alleged misrepresentation consisted of anything other than the brand or label itself.

One of the highly controverted questions at the hearing was, what is an "Olive Oil soap"? It is petitioners' contention that such soap is usually and generally classified by the manufacturer, retailer and the public into three classes, (1) those soaps which are genuine, 100 percent pure olive oil, (2) those soaps in which the olive oil content predominates, and (3) types of olive oil soaps which are for general toilet purposes and contain olive oil in lesser quantities. The soaps in question are included in the third classification. The record discloses that petitioners introduced a large amount of credible testimony sustaining its theory in this respect. On the other hand, the Commission specifically found that an olive oil soap is one containing olive oil as its fatty ingredient to the exclusion of all other oils or fats. We think there is substantial testimony in support thereof. Under such circumstances, we are not permitted to weigh the evidence and must accept the finding in this respect.
In our judgment, the important, if not controlling, question is not whether an olive oil soap is one, the contents of which are 100 percent olive oil, but whether the labels and brands used by the petitioners constitute a representation that the soaps so branded and labeled were pure olive oil soaps, as that term is defined by the Commission. The case of the Commission must stand or fall upon the answer to that question. It thus becomes essential to consider the brands and labels in question, with a view of ascertaining if such constitute a misrepresentation, deceptive to a substantial portion of the public, keeping in mind the theory of the case that the public was deceived only because it was falsely led to believe it was obtaining a 100 percent olive oil soap.

One of the brands named in the complaint and the findings is, "Palm and Olive Oil Soap." Was the use of such brand and label a representation that it was a 100 percent olive oil soap, and does the evidence substantially support a finding to that effect? There was testimony by a number of witnesses, including some of the witnesses for the Commission, who testified it would mean to them a soap, the contents of which included, at least, both palm oil and olive oil. The only evidence to the contrary, upon which the Commission is forced to rely, is found in a stipulation between counsel for the respective parties entered into during the course of the hearing. It was stipulated and agreed that if 30 members of the consuming public were called to testify, they would give certain testimony regarding various matters in controversy. Included in such matters was that "sixteen of said thirty persons would testify that they understand olive oil soap to be one, the oil content of which is 100 percent olive oil," while 14 would testify to the contrary, and 24 of said 30 persons would testify that use of the expression "palm and olive oil soap" would lead them to believe that said soap is an olive oil soap, i. e., one containing 100 percent olive oil. In our judgment, such a stipulation can be given little, if any, weight, and cannot be said to be substantial in view of the unanimous testimony to the contrary given by witnesses who appeared personally. How a person with any intelligence could look at the label or brand upon a cake of soap or the wrapper thereof, containing the two descriptive words "palm and olive" oil and be misled into believing that such words meant 100 percent olive oil, is so incredible as to be unbelievable. We suppose that by the same process of mental reaction, such witness would believe that the words "goose grease and lard" mean 100 percent lard and no goose grease, or that if shown a picture of a cow and a horse, would be led to believe he had seen a picture of two horses.

What we have said with reference to palm and olive oil soap likewise applies to the brands and labels "Palm and Olive Soap" and
"Oliv-Palm Complexion Soap." That the Commission had little faith in its contention as to these particular brands and labels is apparent, we think, from the exception contained in its cease and desist order which will be referred to hereafter.

[441] Of the other labels and brands, namely, "Oliv-ilo," "Royal Olive Oil Pure," "Purito Olive Oil Castile," "Olive-Skin Pure Toilet Soap" and "Del Gloria Castile Made with Pure Olive Oil," the Commission found that such brands and labels represent, and lead the public to believe, that they are a 100 percent olive oil soap. Provisions of the stipulation referred to heretofore furnish some support for such a finding, but as to each of these labels and brands, there is the testimony of witnesses who appeared personally, furnishing additional support. While in some instances such testimony is not of a convincing nature, yet we think it is sufficient to sustain the finding.

At this point it seems appropriate to make reference to the decision of this court in Kirk & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 59 F. (2d) 179 (certiorari denied 278 U. S. 663), and which petitioners argue is controlling here. While the language in that opinion apparently affords some support for petitioners' argument, we do not agree that it is controlling. There the order of the Commission was directed at the word "Castile" when used in connection with soap. It was there argued by the Commission, as here, that such soap is one in which olive oil constitutes the sole oily or fatty ingredient. The opinion comments upon the contrariety of opinion disclosed by the record and holds, in effect, that the evidence supports the finding that the use of the word "Castile" had the capacity to deceive. The court, however, regarded as decisive a bulletin promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of Standards, which defined the term "Castile" as applied to a soap, to include those made from oils other than olive. In other words, the definition thus given was inconsistent with that contended for by the Commission, and the court set aside the cease and desist order. Subsequently, the Supreme Court in Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Co., 291 U. S. 67, 75, appears to have decided the effect to be given a promulgation of the Bureau of Standards contrary to that given by this court in the Kirk case, and, therefore, our holding there is unavailing here.

Petitioners also argue that, as a matter of law, the Commission was without jurisdiction on account of the lack of substantial competition. The Commission replies that the question of substantial competition is foreclosed by the pleadings. It seems pertinent to point out that the record discloses, without dispute, that the soap industry is generally divided into two classes, one of which is concerned with a 100 percent olive oil content, and the other with a lesser content of olive oil. The former has a more limited or special use, employed largely on a physician's advice in connection with the hospitals and the sick, and is also used in certain industrial activities. The latter consists of those dealing with what is termed a general purpose soap, which includes most of the ordinary toilet soaps and its utility is far greater than the other. Petitioners were engaged in the manufacture and sale of both classes of soap. The complaint alleged that petitioners were in substantial competition with both classes of soap dealers, which allegation was admitted by the answer. We do not think such admission precludes the issue now presented. Of course, petitioners were in competition with both classes and that would be true irrespective of whether they were engaged in a legitimate business or otherwise. The question at issue is not merely one of competition, but whether unfair methods were employed which affected that competition. The Commission has found that among the competitors of petitioners are, those who manufacture and sell a 100 percent olive oil soap and those who manufacture and sell a soap, the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil, but who truthfully advertise, sell and distribute the same. We think there can be no question regarding the validity of such finding—in fact, it is admitted by petitioners' answer. The Commission then finds that by the use of the labels and brands as charged, trade is unfairly diverted to petitioners from such competitors and that, thereby, substantial injury has been done to competition in commerce. It would seem that the result which must follow from an unfair method of competition is diversion of trade, damage or injury to a competitor—in fact, that is one of the tests to be applied in determining if the method is unfair.

As was said in Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643, 649:

• • • Unfair trade methods are not per se unfair methods of competition. It is obvious that the word "competition" imports the existence of present or potential competitors, and the unfair methods must be such as injuriously affect or tend thus to affect the business of these competitors—that is to say, the trader whose methods are assailed as unfair must have present or potential rivals in trade whose business will be, or is likely to be, lessened or otherwise injured. • • •

We have no difficulty in concluding that the use of brands and labels, which falsely represented that such soap was 100 percent olive oil, was an unfair method of competition as to the class of competitors engaged in the manufacture and sale of 100 percent olive oil soap. When the public was induced to purchase by reason of such deception, it would seem to necessarily follow that trade was diverted to petitioners from its competitors who were engaged in the manufacture and sale of 100 percent olive oil soap, and to the detriment of the latter. It is more difficult to see, however, under the issue presented by the pleadings, how petitioners' unfair method could have resulted in any damage or injury to that class of competitors engaged in the manufacture and sale of general purpose soaps containing less than 100 percent olive oil. The reasoning in this respect must proceed upon the theory that such purchasers desired a special purpose soap as distinguished from a general purpose soap. Being deceived, the competitor dealing in the special purpose soap was deprived of their trade. This same public, however, who desired the special purpose soap, had it not been deceived, would not and could not have purchased from the dealer in general purpose soap. How, then, could there have been any business diverted or any injury or damage sustained by the latter class of competitors? Our discussion in this respect is perhaps immaterial except as it concerns the provisions of the cease and desist order.

We are of the opinion there is no merit to petitioners' argument that the proceeding was not in the public interest. As pointed out heretofore, the Commission found that petitioners, by the use of certain brands and labels, misled and deceived the public into purchasing its product. The Court, in Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., et al., 288 U.S. 212, 217, said:

• • • The result of respondents' acts is that such purchasers are deceived into purchasing an article which they do not wish or intend to buy, and which they might or might not buy if correctly informed as to its origin. We are of opinion that the purchasing public is entitled to be protected against that species of deception, and that its interest in such protection is specific and substantial. • • •

We now come to the challenged order itself, which, we think, is broader than the issue tendered by the complaint, and the theory on which the case was tried. As was said in Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 253 U.S. 421, 427:

• • • Such an order should follow the complaint; otherwise it is improvident and, when challenged, will be annulled by the court.

Petitioners are ordered to cease and desist from "using the word 'olive' or any other word or words or any combination of words or parts thereof or any device of similar import or meaning to describe, designate, or in any way refer to soap, the oil or fatty content of which is not wholly olive oil, except that in the case of soap containing olive oil and other oils as the fatty content, the word 'olive' may be used as descriptive of the olive oil content if there is used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent oil in the order of its predominance by volume, beginning with the largest single oil constituent, and provided that if any particular oil in said soap is not present in an amount sufficient substantially to effect its detergent or other qualities, the percentage in which such oil is present shall then be specifically disclosed."
Various oils and fats are used in the manufacture of soap, such as olive, palm, tallow, white grease, olive oil foots, etc. Where the soap contains a number of oils, the order, as we understand it, would require that the name of each be included in the brand or label name. This would seem highly impractical, which perhaps is immaterial, but the essential objection is that such a requirement is beyond the involved issue. The sole issue, as stated heretofore, was that the representation of a 100 percent olive oil soap was an unfair method of competition. If it failed to meet that requirement, it was immaterial and beside the issue as to what other ingredient it might include. It was that representation which deceived the public. The purpose of the order is to prevent such deception. In order to accomplish such purpose, the public, who has been deceived, needs be informed only that petitioners' soap is less than 100 percent olive oil. With that information, the public who demands a 100 percent olive oil soap will no longer be interested in petitioners' product, or its contents.

We have pointed out some of the names complained of which we have found not to misrepresent, and which obviously should not be included in the order. Using the brand "Oliv-Ilo" as illustrative of the names which we hold to misrepresent, we think the order should go no further than to forbid their use except in connection with the name of another oil or by some other word or words clearly indicating that such soap is not made wholly of olive oil. (e. g., part olive oil.) Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Co., 258 U. S. 483, 490.

The order to cease and desist is therefore set aside, with permission to the Commission, if it shall so desire, to present an order consistent with this opinion.

TREANOR, Circuit Judge, concurring in part and dissenting in part.

Petitioners stipulated that each of the names, or brands, involved in this proceeding meant to a majority of the purchasing public an "olive oil soap"; and petitioners further stipulated that to a majority of the purchasing public an "olive oil soap" means "one, the content of which is 100 percent olive oil." It is true, as pointed out in the majority opinion, that there was testimony to the contrary by witnesses who appeared personally. Petitioners, however, were in a position to have special knowledge of the reaction of the purchasing public to the trade names, or brands, which identified their soaps. No doubt few people would be misled who analyzed the trade name with knowledge that palm oil and olive oil are distinct types of oil. We are not in a position to know how widespread among the purchasing public is the knowledge of the difference between palm and olive oils; nor are we informed what percent of the soap purchasing public analyzes trade names, or brands. No doubt petitioners have considerable knowledge respecting the psychology of advertising and they have stipulated that the majority of the soap purchasing public would understand that the names, or brands, in question mean that the soaps bearing such names are olive oil soaps containing 100 percent olive oil. Such stipulation furnished substantial evidence for a finding that a substantial portion of the purchasing public was deceived by the names, or brands, used by petitioners.

Also I am of the opinion that the Commission's order is warranted by the facts and that the provisions of the order do not go beyond the requirements of adequate protection to the public and the prevention of evasion.

DECREES

The petitioners herein, having filed with this Court on, to wit, June 2, 1939, their petition to review and set aside an order to cease and desist issued by the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, under date of April 6, 1939, under the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and a copy of said petition having been served upon the respondent herein, and said respondent, having thereafter certified and filed herein, as required by law, a transcript of the entire record in the proceeding lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered, including the report and order of said respondent; and the matter having been heard by this Court on briefs and argument of counsel; and this Court thereafter, on June 12, 1940, having rendered its decision setting aside the order of said respondent, with permission to said respondent, if it shall so desire, to present an order consistent with the opinion of this Court; and said respondent having presented to this Court an order consistent with said opinion—

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said order to cease and desist, issued by the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, under date of April 6, 1939, be, and the same hereby is reversed and set aside, and the following order is affirmed by this Court and its enforcement directed:

"It is ordered, That the respondents [petitioners before this Court], Allen B. Wrisley Co. and Allen B. Wrisley Distributing Co., also trading under the name Regal Soap Co., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, and Karl Mayer, George A. Wrisley, and Wrisley B. Oleson, copartners trading as Karl Mayer & Co., or trading under any other name, their agents, representatives and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of soap in interstate com-

1. Representing in any manner that a soap which does not contain olive oil to the exclusion of all other oils is an olive oil soap.

2. Using the brand names or labels “Olivilo,” “Royal Olive Oil Pure,” “Purito Olive Oil Castile,” “Olive-Skin Pure Toilet Soap,” or “Del Gloria Castile Made With Pure Olive Oil,” or other brand names or labels of similar import or meaning containing the word “Olive” or the letters “oliv” or any equivalent term, to describe, designate or in any way refer to soap the oil content of which is not wholly olive oil. Nothing contained herein shall prevent the respondents from using brand names containing the word “olive,” or any derivative thereof or other word or words of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate a soap containing olive oil combined with other oil or oils, if respondent shall, clearly, conspicuously, and truthfully designate that such soap is not made wholly of olive oil, and if olive oil is present in said soap in an amount sufficient substantially to effect its detergent or other qualities. The prohibition of this order shall not apply to the trade names or labels “Palm and Olive Oil Soap,” “Palm and Olive Soap,” and “Oliv-Palm Complexion Soap.”

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the petitioners herein shall, within 90 days after the entry of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this decree.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, shall modify its said order to cease and desist as hereinabove set forth in this decree.

SHEFFIELD SILVER COMPANY, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. June 19, 1940)

Order denying motion for injunction to restrain Commission from proceeding against petitioner under Commission's complaint in the matter of Sheffield Silver Co., Docket 4000, for alleged misleading use of word “Sheffield” in connection with its offer and sale of silver plated hollow ware (not made and fabricated in Sheffield, England, as alleged, but by petitioner at its place of business in New Jersey), on the ground that the matter at issue was res judicata by reason of decision of court in Sheffield Silver Company, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, July 18, 1938, 98 F. (2d) 676, 27 F. T. C. 1689.

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.
Mr. Jay Leo Rothschild, of New York City, for petitioner.
Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Cyrus B. Austin, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Petitioner in the foregoing matter, in its answer to Commission's complaint, dated February 29, 1940, set up as a defense, in addition to denial of various allegations of the complaint, that matter at issue was res judicata by reason of decision of court above cited.

Thereafter, on April 16, petitioner moved the Commission to dismiss its said complaint and proceeding, by reason of the decision of the court as above set forth, and its ensuing order vacating the Commission's prior cease and desist order in Sheffield Silver Co., Inc., Docket 2638, 26 F. T. C. 713, 719.

Said motion was denied by the Commission on May 1, "without prejudice to the right of the respondent [petitioner herein] to renew said motion and to argue it before the Commission on the date of final argument herein."

Petitioner's motion to the court, which included in its recital matters above set forth, and following the filing with the court of a "Memorandum on Behalf of the Federal Trade Commission," was denied by the court without opinion, "it having been shown to the satisfaction of the court that its jurisdiction under the Federal Trade Commission Act is limited to the review of final orders to cease and desist, and to the affirmance, modification, or setting aside of such orders, and that it has no power under the statute to interfere with 'the taking of testimony and the finding of facts essential to the making of such an order as shall ultimately be passed upon by the Circuit Court of Appeals.'

"It was also shown that there were fundamental differences between the two proceedings, the former case, charging unfair methods of competition, having been brought under the original 1914 statute, and the latter, based not upon injury to competitors, but upon misrepresentation and tendency to mislead and deceive the public, having been brought under the amended statute of 1938."2

Order, by Circuit Judges Evan A. Evans, William M. Sparks, and Walter C. Lindley, modifying, as below set forth, upon motion of Commission, court's prior decree of July 1, 1936, in Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, which followed its opinion and decision in Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, M. J. Holloway & Co., Queen Anne Candy Co., and The Bonita Co., July 1, 1936, 84 F. (2d) 910, 22 F. T. C. 1149, and was entered in response to Commission's application to enforce its cease and desist order in D. 2264, 20 F. T. C. 468, prohibiting sale of candy by lottery schemes or devices.

ORDER

Upon the motion of the Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein—

It is hereby ordered, That the decree of this court entered herein on July 1, 1936, be modified by inserting after the words "it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by this Court that the said respondent, A. McLean & Son, a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors" the following, "in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products," and made a part of this decree.

NOTE: Complete decree, as thus modified, follows:

The Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, having filed with this court on, to wit: February 29, 1936, an application for an enforcement of an order to cease and desist, issued by it against respondent in this cause, under date of June 21, 1935, the said petitioner having also certified and filed herein a transcript of the record and proceedings lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered; and the said respondent subsequently having filed its answer to said application for enforcement, and the matter having been heard by this court on said transcript of record, answer of respondent, briefs of counsel, and oral arguments of counsel; and this court thereafter, to wit: On July 1, 1936, having filed its opinion, and entered an order that the said order to cease and desist be modified, and as modified be affirmed.

Thereupon, It is ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the said respondent, A. McLean & Sons, a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors, in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, forever cease and desist from:

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.
1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers, for resale to retail dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or are designed to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, wholesale dealers and jobbers packages or assortments of candy which are used or are designed to be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package of candy, for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of a different color; together with larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy, or other articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy, or other articles or merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

4. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers, display cards, either with assortments of candy or candy products, or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers display cards or other printed matter for use in connection with the sale of candy or candy products, which said advertising literature informs the purchasing public that upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy of a particular colored center, a larger piece of candy or small box of candy or another article of merchandise will be given free to said purchaser.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said respondent, A. McLean & Son, a corporation, shall within 30 days after the service upon him of a copy of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. M. J. HOLLOWAY & COMPANY

No. 5797

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. July 19, 1940)

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.
Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Earl J. Kolb, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Beach, Fathchild & Scofield, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

ORDER

Upon the motion of the Federal Trade Commission, Petitioner herein—

It is hereby ordered, That the decree of this court entered herein on July 1, 1936, be modified by inserting after the words "it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by this Court that the said respondent, M. J. Holloway & Company, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors" the following, "in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products," and by the substitution of the following paragraphs:

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or a punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

4. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers, display cards either with assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers display cards or other printed matter for use in connection with the sale of candy or candy products, which said advertising literature informs the purchasing public that upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy of a particular colored center, a larger piece of candy or small box of candy or another article of merchandise will be given free to said purchaser.

The Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, having filed with this court on, to wit: February 29, 1936, an application for an enforcement of an order to cease and desist, issued by it against respondent in this case, under date of June 25, 1935, the said petitioner having also certified and filed herein a transcript of the record and proceedings lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered; and the said respondent subsequently having filed its answer to said application for enforcement, and the matter having been heard by this court on said transcript of record, answer of respondent, briefs of counsel and oral arguments of counsel; and this court thereafter, to wit: on July 1, 1936, having filed its opinion, and entered an order that the said order to cease and desist be modified, and as modified be affirmed.

Thereupon, it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the said respondent, M. J. Holloway & Co., a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors, in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, forever cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers, for resale to retail dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or are designed to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, wholesale dealers and jobbers packages or assortments of candy which are used or are designed to be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package of candy, for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy, or other articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy, or other articles or merchandise are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or a punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said respondent, M. J. Holloway & Co., a corporation, shall within 30 days after the service upon him of a copy of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.
FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. QUEEN ANNE CANDY COMPANY 1

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. July 19, 1940)

Order, by Circuit Judges Evan A. Evans, William M. Sparks, and Walter C. Lindley, modifying, as below set forth, upon motion of Commission, court's prior decree of July 1, 1936, in Federal Trade Commission v. Queen Anne Candy Co., which followed its opinion and decision in Federal Trade Commission v. A. McLean & Son, M. J. Holloway & Co., Queen Anne Candy Co., and The Bonita Co., July 1, 1936, 84 F. (2d) 910, 22 F. T. C. 1149, and was entered in response to Commission's application to enforce its cease and desist order in D. 2277, 21 F. T. C. 102, prohibiting sale of candy by lottery schemes or devices.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Earl J. Kolb, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Beach, Fathchild & Scofield, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

ORDER

Upon the motion of the Federal Trade Commission, Petitioner herein—

It is hereby ordered, That the decree of this court entered herein on July 1, 1936, be modified by inserting after the words "it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the said respondent, Queen Anne Candy Company, a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors" the following, "in the manufacture, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products," and by the substitution of the following paragraphs:

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the person procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or a punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

in lieu of paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) appearing in the decree of this court reading as follows:

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy or other articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or small boxes of candy or other articles of merchandise, are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

4. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers, display cards either with assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers display cards or other printed matter for use in connection with the sale of candy or candy products, which said advertising literature informs the purchasing public that upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy of a particular colored center, a larger piece of candy or small box of candy or another article of merchandise will be given free to said purchaser.

The Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, having filed with this court on, to wit: February 29, 1936, an application for an enforcement of an order to cease and desist, issued by it against respondent in this cause, under date of June 25, 1935, the said petitioner having also certified and filed herein a transcript of the record and proceedings lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered; and the said respondent subsequently having filed its answer to said application for enforcement, and the matter having been heard by this court on said transcript of record, answer of respondent, briefs of counsel and oral arguments of counsel; and this court thereafter, to wit: On July 1, 1936, having filed its opinion, and entered an order that the said order to cease and desist be modified, and as modified be affirmed.

Thereupon, it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the said respondent, Queen Anne Candy Co., a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors, in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, forever cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers, for resale to retail dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or are designed to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, wholesale dealers and jobbers packages or assortments of candy which are used or are designed to be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the person procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or a punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said respondent, Queen Anne Candy Co., a corporation, shall within 30 days after the service upon him of a copy of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. BONITA COMPANY

No. 5799

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. July 19, 1940)

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.
Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Earl J. Kolb, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.
Beach, Fathchild & Scofield, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Order

Upon the motion of the Federal Trade Commission, Petitioner herein—

It is hereby ordered, That the decree of this court entered herein on July 1, 1936, be modified as follows: (a) By inserting after the words "it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by this Court that the said respondent, Bonita Company, a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors" the following, "in the manufacture, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products;"; (b) By the substitution of the following paragraph:

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality having centers of a different color or being of a different color and contained within wrappers, together with larger pieces of candy which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the person procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color or a piece of candy of a particular color.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of a different color, together with larger pieces of candy, or small boxes of candy or other articles of merchandise, which said larger pieces of candy or small boxes of candy or other articles of merchandise, are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color, and (c) by including in said decree paragraphs 4 and 5 of the order entered by the Commission reading as follows:

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.
Note: Complete decree, as thus modified, follows:

The Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, having filed with this court on, to wit: February 29, 1936, an application for an enforcement of an order to cease and desist, issued by it against respondent in this cause, under date of June 21, 1935, the said petitioner having also certified and filed herein a transcript of the record and proceedings lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered; and the said respondent subsequently having filed its answer to said application for enforcement, and the matter having been heard by this court on said transcript of record, answer of respondent, briefs of counsel and oral arguments of counsel; and this court thereafter, to wit: On July 1, 1936, having filed its opinion, and entered an order that the said order to cease and desist be modified, and as modified be affirmed.

Thereupon, it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the said respondent, The Bonita Co., a corporation, its representatives, agents, servants, employees, and successors, in the manufacture, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, forever cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers, for resale to retail dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or are designed to be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, wholesale dealers and jobbers packages or assortments of candy which are used or are designed to be used without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality having centers of a different color or being of a different color and contained within wrappers, together with larger pieces of candy which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the person procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color or a piece of candy of a particular color.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device commonly called a push card or punchboard, for use or which may be used in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail.

5. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a push card or a punchboard either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

6. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers, display cards, either with assortments of candy or candy products, or separately, bearing a legend or legends or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

7. Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers display cards or other printed matter for use in connection with the sale of candy or candy products, which said advertising literature informs the purchasing public that upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy of a particular colored center, a larger piece of candy, or small box of candy, or another article of merchandise will be given free to said purchaser.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said respondent, The Bonita Company, a corporation, shall within 30 days after the service upon him of a copy of this decree, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.

FASHION ORIGINATORS GUILD OF AMERICA, INC., ET AL. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 312

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. July 22, 1940)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—EVIDENCE—REJECTION BEFORE COMMISSION—APPLICATION TO COURT FOR LEAVE TO ADDUCE—WHETHER PRIOR FAILURE TO MAKE, WAIVER ON APPEAL ON CONCLUSION CASE.

The fact that dressmakers' guild failed to apply to Circuit Court of Appeals for leave to adduce additional evidence before the Federal Trade Commission did not cause guild to lose its only opportunity to question or correct any rulings made by commission during hearing at which commission made a "cease and desist" order, on ground that the guild's only remedy under statute dealing with unfair methods of competition and prevention of them by commission was to make such application, since the presupposition on which the statute was drawn was that the court shall have no jurisdiction over the proceedings until the commission has concluded the case. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

DESIGNS—DRESS AND FABRIC—RIGHTS IN—AUTHOR'S.

The author of a design for a dress should be deemed to be on the same footing as the author of a drawing or a picture, and to have a "common-law property" in the reproduction of the dress.

DESIGNS—DRESS AND FABRIC—RIGHTS IN—REGISTRATION BY OWNERS—WHERE "PUBLICATION."

Regardless of whether designs of dressmakers' guild could be registered or not, "publication" of them was a surrender of all "common-law property" of the guild in them.

DESIGNS—DRESS AND FABRIC—RIGHTS IN—IN GENERAL.

[81] Until the copyright law is changed or until the copyright office can be induced to register designs for dresses and fabrics as copyrightable under the existing statute, they fall into the public demesne without reserve.

BOYCOTTS—REFUSAL TO DEAL, CONCERTEDLY—LEGALITY PRIMA FACIE.

A combined refusal to deal with anyone as a means of preventing him from dealing with a third person, against whom the combined action is directed, is a "boycott," and, because a boycott is prima facie unlawful, it must be justified.

1Reported in 114 F. (2d) 80. For case before Commission, see 28 F. T. C. 430. The Supreme Court on March 3, 1941, affirmed decision in instant case, 61 S. Ct. 703.
BOycotts—ReFusAL TO DEaL, CONCERTedLY—BuYeRs FROM CoPyists, UNAuTHoRIZED, OF DESIGNS OF OWNers' GUILD—Whether "UNPUBLISHED" or "PUBLISHED" as Cr ITERIOn.

Though it would be lawful for dressmakers' guild to refuse to deal with a retailer who knowingly bought dresses from one who copied the guild's "unpublished" designs without consent, however the copier gained access to them, that excuse would not extend to a boycott of retailers who bought dresses copied from "published" designs of the guild.

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—OBJECTIVES—TRADE "ABUSES" PREVENTION.

Many trade combinations which affect competition are lawful, when they are designed to prevent trade "abuses."

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—OBJECTIVES—TRADE "ABUSES" PREVENTION—REASONABLENESS AS CR ITERIOn.

The lawfulness of every trade combination does not depend on whether it reasonably corrects trade "abuses," since there are some combinations that nothing will excuse.

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—WHERE MEANS UNLAWFUL PER SE.

Where the means of a trade combination are unlawful per se, the purposes of the confederates will not justify the means.

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—WHERE MEANS UNLAWFUL PER SE—PRICE FixING AND INTEREST OF CONSUMER—Rule OF Reason.

Price fixing by a trade combination is not the only means unlawful per se, and the interest of the consumer is not all that determines the "reasonable¬ness" of a contract "in restraint of trade."

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—CutTING OFF, Competitors' ACCESS TO CUSTOMERS OR MARKET—WHERE Benefit TO CONSUMER OR UNEXCLUDED PROducERS.

To exclude from the market any of those who supply it, assuming that there is no independent reason by virtue of their conduct to justify the exclusion, is unlawful, and it is no excuse for doing so that the exclusion will result in benefits to the consumers or to the producers who remain.

CONCERT OF ACTION—TRADE CoMBINATIONS—LEGAUTY—CutTING OFF, Competitors' ACCESS TO CUSTOMERS OR MARKET—WHERE MARKET ALSO SUPPLIED BY OTHER THAN MOVING PARTIES—Women's DRESSES.

The fact that dressmakers' guild did not supply the whole market for women's dresses was of no consequence in determining whether the guild was guilty of unfair trade practices.

MONopOLIES—DRESs DESIGNS—REPRODUCTION—CONCERT OF ACTION TO CONTROL ALL.

To attempt to gather to one's self all possible reproductions of a given dress design is to attempt to create a monopoly.

FEDERAL TRADE COmmISSION ACT—SECTION 5—PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—EVIDENCE—ReJECTION BEFORE COmmISSION—WHERE CoMBINATION TO MONopOLIZE MARKET FOR DRESs DESIGNS UNLAWFUL PER SE—ProFFERED EVIDENCE TO ExCUSE.

Where combination was unlawful per se because it attempted to establish a monopoly in market for certain dress designs, the Federal Trade Commission was right in refusing to hear any evidence to excuse combination's actions, since it could have no excuse.

On petition by Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., and others, to review cease and desist order of Commission, order affirmed.

Weisman, Quinn, Allan & Spett, of New York City (Mr. Milton C. Weisman and Mr. Melvin A. Albert, both of New York City, of counsel) for petitioners.

Mr. Everett F. Haycraft, of Washington, D. C., for Commission.

L. Hand, Circuit Judge:

This case comes before us on petition to review an order of the Federal Trade Commission, directing the petitioners to "cease and desist" from certain "unfair trade practices" in interstate commerce. The principal respondent below, the Fashion Originators Guild, and its members sell medium and high priced women's dresses to retailers, who select from designs exhibited in show rooms in New York City. The members make their dresses from what [82] they assert to be "original designs" of their own, to protect which the Guild was organized in 1932, though the designs are neither patented nor copyrighted. About a fourth of all women's dresses made in this country sell for more than $10.75, and the Guild (disregarding whether they were members for the whole year) in 1935 sold 42 percent of these; their sales of cheaper dresses were less, though in the next lowest grade, $6.75 to $10.75, they were 10 percent of the total sales in that class. (The Commission found much higher percentages than these; but for the purposes of the case it is not necessary to do more than to take the Guild's own figures.) In order to prevent what the Guild calls "style piracy," that is, the copying of their "original designs," the Guild and its members refuse in combination to sell any dresses to retailers who purchase, or order to be manufactured, dresses which the Guild finds embody copies of its designs. For that purpose it has set up a "Piracy Committee" which decides which of the designs "registered" by its members, are "originals"; it employs shoppers in various parts of the country who visit the shops of retailers and report delinquents; if a retailer is found to be selling "pirated designs," he must stop doing so, or he will get no more dresses of any sort from the Guild; nor will he be allowed to see the designs exhibited in its New York show rooms. Retailers who cooperate with the Guild must agree to accept the decision of the "Piracy Committee," and must return to sellers any dresses that have been "pirated"; they must also agree to abide by the Guild's regulations. Furthermore, in their sales they must warrant to the customer that the designs of the dresses they sell have not been "pirated." The Guild keeps a card index in which it enters upon red cards the names of those retailers who fail in any of these regards. It also maintains a group known as the "Textile Affiliates or Associates" whose members register textile designs with the "National Federation of Textiles, Inc.,” and the dressmaker members of the Guild agree that they will not buy "unregistered" fabrics; conversely, textile members of the Guild agree to sell only to dressmakers who are parties to the combination. About twelve thousand retailers had signed the agreement by the end of the year 1935, and were cooperating with the Guild. Besides the Guild proper, several other subsidiary organizations were made parties to the proceeding, as well as their officers and members and those of the Guild: it is not necessary, however, to describe the relations of the subsidiaries to the parent. The Commission, having found the foregoing facts, made an order appropriate to break up the combination, which the respondents petitioned to review.

The findings are supported by an abundance of evidence and are indisputable; they do not go beyond the conceded purposes of the Guild, which does not indeed deny them, but on the contrary seeks to justify the combination. It says that the sanctions which it imposes were necessary to protect the industry as a whole from "demoralization" and the "property" of its members from appropriation. In great detail it offered to prove what were the results of allowing "style piracy" to continue; how disastrous it was to all those in the business—manufacturers, retailers and customers—how "style pirates" in some instances gained access to their designs by bribery, burglary and other crimes; how the Guild had benefited the whole industry by the elimination of such evil practices. The Commission refused to receive any evidence of the kind; it held that the combination was unlawful per se; thereby, by implication ruling that even though the combined interests of all those affected made "style piracy" an evil, the manufacturers could not lawfully unite to suppress it by the means employed.

At the outset a preliminary question arises which we must dispose of before we proceed to the merits. The Commission asks us not to consider the proffered evidence on the ground that the Guild's only remedy was under section 5 of the act; that is, having failed to "apply to the court for leave to adduce additional evidence," it lost its only opportunity to question or correct any ruling made during the hearing. This argument rests upon an obvious misunderstanding of the section, and would incidentally result in a procedure that would greatly hamper, if it did not destroy, the effectiveness of the Commission itself. Section five is not directed to the correction of errors committed by the Commission during its proceedings or at any other time; it is analogous to a motion for a new trial upon newly discovered evidence. This appears from its very language, which makes it a condition upon the relief granted that "there were reasonable grounds for the failure to adduce such evidence in the proceeding before the Commission." It is absurd to speak of the exclusion of evidence as a "failure to adduce" it. Moreover, the notion that every time an examiner erroneously rules out evidence at a hearing, the respondent must apply first to the Commission, and then to the court, to correct his error at the risk of forfeiting all right to complain, scarcely needs to be stated to be answered. It contradicts the whole presupposition on which the statute was drawn; i.e., that the court shall have no jurisdiction over the proceedings until the Commission has concluded the case. Chamber of Commerce v. Federal Trade Commission, 280 Fed. 45, 48 (C. C. A. 8). Cf. Federal Power Commission v. Edison Co., 304 U. S. 375, 384, 385; Jones v. Securities & Exchange Commission, 79 F. (2d) 617, 619 (C. C. A. 2). We must therefore decide the case as though the Guild had proved what it offered to prove; that is, we must decide whether its offer was relevant. If it was, the case must go back for further hearing, because the examiner made it plain that he would hear nothing of the kind suggested; and his refusal absolved the Guild from the idle ceremony of swearing witnesses and questioning them. We proceed therefore to the merits.

The author of a design for a dress should be deemed to be on the same footing as the author of a drawing or a picture; and the author of a drawing or a picture has a "common-law property" in its reproduction. Prince Albert v. Strange, 1 McN. & G. 25, 43; Turner v. Robinson, 10 Ir. Ch. 121; S. C. on appeal, 10 Ir. Ch. 510; Parton v. Prang, Fed. Cas. 10,784; Oertel v. Wood, 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 10; Oertel v. Jacoby, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 179. The controversy as to whether "intellectual property" is lost by "publication" goes back to the Eighteenth Century. The great case of Donaldson v. Beckitt, 4 Burr. 2408, decided, although by a narrow vote, that it is not so lost; but it also decided that the statute destroyed the "property" itself; and the result in most cases was therefore the same as though publication was an abandonment, since the act applied only to published works. It would follow, if Donaldson v. Beckitt, supra (4 Burr. 2408) remains law in all that it held, that so far as the statute does not cover such property, "publication" does not destroy it, and that it is therefore perpetual. Mr. Drone in his well-known work (A Treatise on the Law of Property in Intellectual Productions, 1879) insists that this is the only proper result (pp. 116-118); but his opinion was obviously much colored by his passionate disapproval of Donaldson v. Beckitt, supra (4 Burr. 2408) anyway; and we think that the logic, if inexorably applied, is overwhelmed by the practical absurdity of the result. It would certainly be a strangely perverse anomaly that turned the grant of statutory copyright into a detriment to the "author"; yet it would be hard to prove that the statutory remedies conferred made up for the limitation of the monopoly. Omission of property from the act would be a bonanza to those who possessed property of that kind. Although it is true that when Donaldson v. Beckitt, supra (4 Burr. 2408) was decided, there was considerable "intellectual property" which the statute did not cover, we do not believe that the judges would have countenanced such a result, and the implications of Turner v. Robinson, supra (10 Ir. Ch. 121, S. C. 10 Ir. Ch. 510) were very clearly to the contrary. When in this country the Constitution (sec. 8, cl. 8, art. 1) gave to Congress power to "secure" to authors the "exclusive Right to their" "Writings," it was to be only "for limited Times," and did not allow a perpetual copyright. The purpose so disclosed is certainly inconsistent with the assumption that an author—notwithstanding publication and full enjoyment of his "common-law property"—might maintain his monopoly for "unlimited Times." While we have been unable to discover any case which squarely presented the situation—that is in which "intellectual property," not covered by the copyright act then in existence, was challenged because of its "publication"—there are plenty of general expressions in the books that the "common-law property" does not survive. Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 658; Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 347; American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 299, 300; Caliga v. Inter Ocean Newspaper, 215 U. S. 182, 188; Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co., 134 Fed. 321, 324–326 (C. C. A. 2); Parton v. Prang, supra, 18 Fed. Cas. 1273, page 1277, No. 10,784; Palmer v. DeWitt, 47 N. Y. 532, 536–538; Jewelers Mer. Agency v. Jewelers Publishing Co., 155 N. Y. 241; Oertel v. Jacoby, supra, p. 188 (44 How. Pr. 179); [84] Waring v. WDAS Broadcasting Station, 194 Atl. 631, 635, 636 (Pa.); Chamber of Commerce v. Wells, 100 Minn. 205 (111 N. W. 157, 159). We conclude therefore that, regardless of whether the Guild’s designs could be registered or not, "publication" of them was a surrender of all its "common-law property" in them.

To embody a design in a dress or a fabric, and offer the dress for general sale was such a "publication" nothing more could be done to bring it into the public demesne. It may be unfortunate—it may indeed be unjust—that the law should not thereafter distinguish between "originals" and copies; but until the copyright law is changed, or until the Copyright Office can be induced to register such designs as copyrightable under the existing statute, they both fall into the public demesne without reserve. Cheney Bros. v. Doris Silk Corporation, 35 F. (2d) 279 (C. C. A. 2). The Guild has therefore no more excuse for preventing other dressmakers from copying one than the other. Indeed, it is conceivable that those who might go to the trouble and expense of seeking out the best-known dressmakers of Paris, and of copying their models and designs—as was frequently done—should assert that by investing so much, they too acquired a "property" in the designs they brought back which ought to be protected against all but the author himself. We are therefore to judge the Guild as a combination seeking to exclude outsiders from a market to which they have as lawful access as it has itself.

A combined refusal to deal with anyone as a means of preventing him from dealing with a third person, against whom the combined action is directed, is a boycott; and a boycott is prima facie unlawful; it must be justified. United States v. American Livestock Co., 279 U. S. 435, 437; Restatement of Torts, §765 (1). That it can be justified we have indeed very recently said in Millinery Creators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 109 F. (2d) 175, 176; and in the case at bar for example, it would be a lawful form of self-help for members of the Guild to refuse in combination to deal with retailers who knowingly bought dresses of those who had stolen "unpublished" designs; or who got access to them by any other crime, or by a breach of promise not to use them; further, it would be lawful to refuse to deal with a retailer who knowingly bought of one who copied "unpublished" designs, without the author's consent, however the copier gained access to them. But that excuse does not extend to a boycott of retailers who buy dresses copied from "published" designs; if that is to be justified, the excuse must be found elsewhere. Many trade combinations which affect competition are lawful, when they are designed to prevent trade "abuses"; they are "reasonable," though perhaps to say so is no more than to state the problem. Appalachian Coals, Inc. v. United States, 288 U. S. 344, 374; Sugar Institute v. United States, 297 U. S. 553, 598. Certainly it is not true that the lawfulness of every combination depends upon whether it "reasonably" corrects trade "abuses"; there are some combinations that nothing will excuse. The accepted rubric for this is that when the means are unlawful per se, the purposes of the confederates will not justify them. Sugar Institute v. United States, supra, 599 (297 U. S. 553). The most recent example of this is the Supreme Court's reaffirmation of the unconditional illegality of price-fixing, in spite of the probability that the combination in fact benefited the industry. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150. However grave the industrial disorders, that remedy was not permissible; the industry may restore itself by many devices, but not by all.
The case at bar is not one of price-fixing, and for that reason United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., supra, does not control, for the members of the Guild are free to compete with each other in price or in any other way they choose. The purpose was no more than to exclude "piratical" dressmakers from any share in the market for "original" designs; all else was left open. Success in that purpose might, or might not, result in an increase in price to the consumer, or in that stabilization of prices which United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., supra, condemned. Nobody can tell what will be its effect because, although the exclusion of the "piratical" dressmakers will reduce the supply and price is normally a function of supply, it does not appear that the Guild has not a reserve of producing power equal to what it excludes. If so, it may well be able to take up the slack, so to say, created [85] by its efforts, and free competition among the members may keep prices as low and as wayward as they were before. Price fixing is not, however, the only means unlawful per se; the interest of the consumer is not all that determines the "reasonableness" of a contract "in restraint of trade." It is also unlawful to exclude from the market any of those who supply it—assuming that there is no independent reason by virtue of their conduct to justify their exclusion—and it is no excuse for doing so that their exclusion will result in benefits to consumers, or to the producers who remain. W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 47; Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 611; Binderup v. Pathé Exchange, 263 U. S. 291, 311, 312; Anderson v. Shipowners Association, 272 U. S. 359, 363; Bedford Cut Stone Co. v. Journeymen Stone Cutter's Association, 274 U. S. 37, 54; Paramount Famous Corporation v. United States, 282 U. S. 30, 43, 44; United States v. First National Pictures, Inc., 282 U. S. 44, 54; National Harness Association v. Federal Trade Commission, 268 Fed. 705, 712 (C. C. A. 6); Wholesale Grocers Association v. Federal Trade Commission, 277 Fed. 657, 663 (C. C. A. 5); Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 85 F. (2d) 522 (C. C. A. 2). There is another reason supporting this conclusion. A successful combination among a part of the producers to exclude others, even when not accompanied by an agreement fixing prices, puts into their hands collectively the power to control the supply and with it the price. The fact that that power is not at the moment exercised is no assurance that it may not be; if the effort succeeds and the combination is not disrupted, it may at any time be used, and there will then be no protection to the consumer.

Finally, it is of no consequence that the Guild does not supply the whole market for women's dresses; it aims at a monopoly however small its share of total sales. The reason is as follows. Although all dresses made after one design are fungibles, the different designs themselves are not fungibles. Each has its own attraction for buyers; each is unique, however trifling the basis for preferring it may be. Hence to attempt to gather to oneself all possible reproductions of a given design is to attempt to create a monopoly, as at once appears from the fact that a copyright for it—and à fortiori a design patent upon it—would be ranked as a monopoly. It is true that the sanction of that monopoly may be very weak; it depends upon the design's attractions above over designs, often not a very important margin of advantage. But the same is true of nearly all monopolies, for there are substitutes for most goods. As to each design therefore the Guild is seeking to establish a monopoly; and it is unimportant whether its gross sales are large or small, as compared with those of all women's dresses. For these reasons the combination was unlawful per se; the Commission was right in refusing to hear any evidence in its excuse, for it could have no excuse; the case is the same as Millinery Creators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, supra (109 F. (2d) 175). Similarly the conduct of the examiner in shutting off cross-examination and the like—of which the Guild urgently complains—was proper; the case stood admitted, no defense was possible; indeed, so far as the Guild has any complaint whatever, it is that the hearings against it were drawn out most unnecessarily.

In 1937 the First Circuit did indeed affirm a decree which dismissed a bill in equity brought against the Guild by a retailer. Wm. Filene's Sons Co. v. Fashion Originators Guild, 90 F. (2d) 556. We cannot find any distinction between the facts as there found and those which we feel bound here to take as though proved; and it follows from what we have already said that we are unwillingly forced to a different conclusion. That difference lies in the fact that, as we have said, we do not understand that a court will inquire into whether a combination benefits an industry when the means used are themselves unlawful; and that to try altogether to exclude others from manufacturing what they are free to make, is an unlawful means. If on the other hand the First Circuit believed that the "originator" of a design has an interest to protect greater than one who has merely appropriated an existing design at his own labor and expense, we cannot agree as to that either.

The order will therefore be affirmed, except that—as in Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, supra, 526, 527 (85 F. (2d) 522)—it will not be understood to apply to cases in which a retailer, knowingly buys dresses, access to the design of which has been procured (1) by fraud, bribery or any other crime, (2) through some breach of contract, or (3) before the design has by "publication" come into the public demesne.

Order affirmed.
GEORGE H. LEE COMPANY v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 419

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit. July 23, 1940)

RES JUDICATA—IN GENERAL.

Where the underlying issue of two suits is the same, the adjudication of the issue in the first suit is determinative of the same issue in the second suit.

RES JUDICATA—GOVERNMENT SUITS—WHERE RELITIGATION OF SAME ISSUE BY DIFFERENT OFFICER.

A privity exists between officers of the same government so that a judgment in a suit between a party and a representative of the United States is "res judicata" in relitigation of the same issue between that party and another officer of the government.

Suits and Adjudications—Where Government Bound—As Binding Officials of, Also.

Where a suit binds the United States it binds its subordinate officials.

RES JUDICATA—GOVERNMENT SUITS—WHERE THEREFORE LIBEL PROCEEDING FOR MISBRANDING SAME PRODUCT LITIGATED.

The United States may not relitigate the same issue in successive libel proceedings for condemnation of goods on ground that they are misbranded in violation of Food and Drugs Act, which involve different quantities of the same product, nor may it relitigate the same issue in any proceedings in which the parties are the same and the product is the same. Food and Drugs Act, sec. 8, par. 3, as amended, 21 U. S. C. A. sec. 10, par. 3.

RES JUDICATA—WHERE RIGHT, QUESTION OR FACT DISTINCTLY PUT IN ISSUE AND DIRECTLY DETERMINED, ETC.—IF SECOND SUIT FOR DIFFERENT CAUSE OF ACTION BY SAME PARTIES OR THEIR PRIVIES.

A right, question, or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction as a ground of recovery cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies, and even if the second suit is for a different cause of action, the right, question, or fact once determined must, as between the same parties or their privies, be taken as conclusively established so long as the judgment in the first suit remains unmodified.

RES JUDICATA—WHERE RIGHT, QUESTION OR FACT DISTINCTLY PUT IN ISSUE AND DIRECTLY DETERMINED, ETC.—IF SECOND SUIT FOR DIFFERENT CAUSE OF ACTION BY SAME PARTIES OR THEIR PRIVIES—LIBEL PROCEEDING UNDER FOOD AND DRUGS ACT AGAINST POULTRY VERMIFUGE AS MISBRANDED, AS THEREAFTER BARRING SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDING BY COMMISSION AGAINST PRODUCT'S MANUFACTURER FOR FALSE REPRESENTATION THEREOF IN RESPECT IN WHICH THEREFORE IN ISSUE.

branded and that representations by manufacturer on labels and circulars were false, judgment for the manufacturer was "res judicata" on issue of falsity of the representations which were in issue in the libel, and was not subject to collateral attack in proceeding by Federal Trade Commission charging manufacturer with use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce by soliciting sale of its product through deceptive, misleading, and false statements. Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U. S. C. A., secs. 41-58; Food and Drugs Act, sec. 8, par. 3, as amended, 21 U. S. C. A., sec. 10, par. 3.

On petition for review of Commission's order requiring it to cease and desist from making certain representations concerning product produced by it, order vacated without prejudice to such further proceedings as are not inconsistent with opinion.

Mr. Donald J. Burke, of Omaha, Neb., for petitioner.

Mr. William T. Chantland, special attorney, of Washington, D. C. (Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorney, all of Washington, D. C., on the brief), for Commission.

Before GARDNER and SANBORN, Circuit Judges, and COLLET, District Judge.

SANBORN, Circuit Judge.

The petitioner, a Nebraska corporation engaged in advertising, distributing and selling in interstate commerce a product called "Gizzard Capsules" as a remedy or vermifuge for worms in poultry, has petitioned for the review of an order of the Federal Trade Commission requiring that petitioner "cease and desist from representing: (1) that said product is a remedy or vermifuge for all three kinds of worms in poultry; (2) that said product will remove pinworms from poultry; (3) that said product will remove tapeworms from poultry unless it be represented with equal conspicuousness that this product merely shears off the strobilae or chain of segments of the tapeworm, leaving the head of the worm, capable of growing new segments, attached to the intestines of the fowl."

The petitioner challenges this order upon one ground, which is that the representations which the Commission found to be false and misleading and which are prohibited by its order, had previously been adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction not to be false representations, in a libel proceeding brought by the Government to condemn 47 packages of "Gizzard Capsules," which adjudication it is claimed was binding upon the Commission.

The libel proceeding was instituted on August 8, 1934, in the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri.

The United States in that proceeding charged that this same product was "misbranded in violation of the Food and Drugs Act, section 8 as amended, Paragraph Third, 21 U. S. C. A. sec. 10, in the case of drugs, in that the following statements, appearing upon and within the package of the product, are statements regarding the curative or therapeutic effect of the article and are false and fraudulent, in this, that the article contains no ingredient or combination of ingredients capable of producing the effect claimed, and that the same were applied to the said article knowingly and in reckless and wanton disregard of their truth or falsity: (Package label—same for all sizes) 'For * * * Large Tape Worms and Pin (Ceca) Worms in Chickens and Turkeys * * * For the Removal of * * * Large Tape and Pin (Ceca) Worms in Poultry * * * delivers the medicine, undiluted, fresh and full strength directly upon the worms in the intestines. * * *' (Circular) 'For * * * Large Tape and Pin Worms in Chickens and Turkeys * * * To lay well, hens must be reasonably free from worms * * * Worm your flock with Gizzard Capsules; * * * to expel the worms * * * the exact full strength dose of worm medicine is emptied into the intestines and reaches the worms. * * *'"

The petitioner, as claimant and manufacturer of the product, defended the libel proceeding. It denied that the labels or circulars contained false statements as alleged by the government, and denied that its statements were either false or fraudulent or that the capsules were incapable of producing the effects that it was represented they would produce. There were, then, two issues of fact presented for determination in the libel proceeding: (1) Were the challenged statements contained in the labels and circulars false? (2) Was the petitioner guilty of fraud in making such statements? After a trial, the court resolved both of these issues in favor of the petitioner and entered a decree dismissing the proceeding. The government took no appeal, and the decree became final.

Thereafter on June 11, 1936, the Federal Trade Commission issued its complaint charging petitioner with the use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning of the "Federal Trade Commission Act," sections 41-58, U. S. C. title 15, to the injury of competitors, by soliciting the sale of and selling "Gizzard Capsules" upon "extravagant, deceptive, misleading, and false statements regarding the therapeutic value, efficacy, and effect" of its product in advertisements on labels and in pamphlets, newspapers, and magazines. The Commission further charged that "as a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent [petitioner here] to substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia."
The petitioner moved to strike so much of the complaint as was based upon representations as to the efficacy of its product for the treatment of large roundworms, large tapeworms, and pinworms in poultry, on the ground that in the libel proceeding the falsity of such representations was in issue, and that the court in its decree had determined that they were not false, and, in so doing, had necessarily determined the product to be efficacious for the purposes for which it was intended and sold. The motion to strike was denied, and the petitioner filed its answer denying the allegations of the complaint and asserting the defense of res judicata. The Commission overruled that defense, apparently upon the theory that the decree in the libel proceeding was not binding upon it; and, after extended hearings, it was found that petitioner, in advertising its product, represented that it was a single remedy for the several kinds of worms in poultry and that this single remedy for all kinds of worms was better than separate remedies for each kind of worm; and also found "that respondent's [petitioner's] product is not an [585] effective vermifuge for all three kinds of worms, nor is it better than separate remedies for each kind of pinworms or for tapeworms in poultry. When administered to fowl infested with tapeworms this product tends to shear off the tapeworm strobilae or chain of segments, leaving the tapeworm heads attached to the intestines of the fowl. These heads are capable of growing, and do quickly grow, new segments." The Commission further found that: "Respondent's representations, herein described, have had and now have a tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into an erroneous and mistaken belief concerning the therapeutic value, efficacy and effect of 'Gizzard Capsules.' A substantial portion of the purchasing public, as a direct result of said mistaken and erroneous belief, have purchased respondent's product with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing products designed for similar use, who truthfully advertise and represent the properties of their respective products and the results that may be obtained from their use. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia." The Commission concluded that the acts and practices of petitioner complained of were all to the prejudice of the public and of petitioner's competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. It thereupon entered the order complained of.

The petitioner has not included in its record in this court the testimony taken before the Commission and concedes that, unless the Commission was precluded from entering its order because of the decree in the libel proceeding, the order must stand. It denies the right of the Commission to relitigate any issues which were determined in the libel proceeding, and to make its findings on such issues, either in whole or in part, the basis for its order.

There is force in respondent's contention that the issues tried and determined in the proceedings initiated by and had before it differed in essential particulars from those tried and determined by the court in the libel proceeding. It is apparent, however, that the Government—having failed, in the libel proceeding, to secure a determination that the "Gizzard Capsules" were misbranded and that the representations made by the petitioner on labels and circulars were false on the ground that the product, which concededly would remove large roundworms from poultry, would not completely remove large tape-worms or pinworms—then initiated this proceeding through the Federal Trade Commission to secure a determination that the same or substantially the same representations which were asserted to be false and fraudulent in the libel proceeding were in truth and fact false and misleading and therefore constituted an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Although the remedies sought by the Government in the two proceedings were different—condemnation in the first, and a cease and desist order in the second—it is obvious that the alleged falsity of the representations of the petitioner with respect to the therapeutic value and effectiveness of its product constituted the main basis for each of the proceedings; that in the libel proceeding the court determined that the representations that the product was a remedy for tapeworms and pinworms as well as large roundworms were not false, while the Commission later determined that the representations with respect to pinworms and large tapeworms were false and misleading. It is equally obvious that the Commission completely disregarded the effect of the decree entered in the libel case on conducting its proceedings and in making its findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order.

Where the underlying issue in two suits is the same, the adjudication of the issue in the first suit is determinative of the same issue in the second suit, Sunshine Anthracite Coal Co. v. Adkins, 60 S. Ct. 907, 916. "There is privity between officers of the same Government so that a judgment in a suit between a party and a representative of the United States is res judicata in relitigation of the same issue between that party and another officer of the Government. See Tait v. Western Maryland Railway Co., 289 U. S. 620." Sunshine Anthracite Coal Co. v. Adkins, supra (p. 917 of 60 S. Ct.). "Where a suit binds the United States, it binds its subordinate officials," Sunshine Anthracite Coal Co. v. Adkins, supra, (p. 917 of 60 S. Ct.). The United States may not relitigate the same issue in successive libel proceedings involving different quantities of the same product (George H. Lee Co. v. United States, 9 Cir., 41 F. (2d) 460), nor may it re-litigate the same issue in any proceeding in which the parties are the same and the product is the same. The rule is “that a right, question or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, as a ground of recovery, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies; and even if the second suit is for a different cause of action, the right, question or fact once so determined must, as between the same parties or their privies, be taken as conclusively established, so long as the judgment in the first suit remains unmodified,” Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 48; Mitchell v. First National Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 478-481; Tait v. Western Maryland Railway Co., 289 U. S. 620, 623.

Unless a question which a court or an administrative board has power to decide is to be regarded as conclusively settled as between the parties by the final decree of the court or the final order of the board, there can be no end to a controversy except as the result of the financial disability of one of the parties. If the question of the falsity of the representations of the petitioner contained on its labels and circulars had been determined adversely to the petitioner in the libel proceeding, it could not have been heard to say in the proceedings instituted by the Commission that such representations were true. By the same token, the United States and its instrumentality, the Commission, were not, after the decree in the libel proceeding, entitled to say that the representations made by the petitioner which had been finally adjudged not to be false, were in fact false. The Government had had its full day in court on that issue, had lost its case, and could not collaterally attack, either directly or indirectly, the decree entered against it.

The contentions of the respondent that the court in the libel proceeding merely determined that the petitioner had not intentionally misrepresented the therapeutic qualities of its product, whereas the Commission in the proceeding before it rules that the petitioner's representations were untrue and misleading, is not borne out by the record. The court in the libel proceeding determined that the representations, directly challenged and distinctly put in issue by the government, were not false, and, in doing so, necessarily determined that the product of the petitioner was a remedy for the three kinds of worms in poultry. The Commission, on the other hand, has determined that the representations upon which the libel proceeding was based were in fact false and misleading. The main underlying issue in both the proceedings was the same, namely—Are the representations made by the petitioner false because the product has not the therapeutic qualities claimed for it?
Whether the Commission, if it had accepted as a fact that the representations which had been alleged to be false in the libel proceeding were not false, could have found other representations in the advertising of the petitioner which would have justified findings and conclusions that petitioner had been guilty of unfair competition in interstate commerce, we are not asked to decide, and manifestly could not decide upon the record presented. The order of the Commission is based, in large part at least, upon its finding that the representations that petitioner's product was an effective remedy or vermifuge for all three kinds of worms were untrue. The Commission thus plainly failed to accord to the decree in the libel proceeding the effect to which it was entitled. The Commission redetermined an issue which was already settled by a court of competent jurisdiction and reached a contrary conclusion. Under the circumstances, we think that its order cannot stand.

The order is vacated without prejudice to such further proceedings as are not inconsistent with this opinion.

GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION ET AL. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 404

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Aug. 12, 1940)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—INSTALLMENT SALES—MOTOR VEHICLES—"SIX PER CENT." PLAN.

On petition to review Federal Trade Commission's order to cease and desist from advertising of installment sales of motor vehicles, evidence held to support Commission's finding that such advertising tended to mislead and deceive substantial part of purchasing public into belief that defendant's "six per cent." finance plan contemplated simple interest charge of six per cent. per annum on unpaid balances of purchase price of vehicles sold, so as to require denial of petition and affirmation of order.

JURISDICTION—INTERSTATE COMMERCE—PARTIES—SUBSIDIARIES—WHERE LOCAL FINANCE COMPANY ENGAGED IN UNFAIR PLAN WITH ASSOCIATE SUBSIDIARY AND MANUFACTURING PRINCIPAL OF SELLING IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE THROUGH FALSE AND MISLEADING ADVERTISING OF INSTALLMENT SALES PLAN.

The Federal Trade Commission had jurisdiction to order automobile manufacturing corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary sales corporation and acceptance corporation, acting as manufacturing corporation's agents in unified plan of selling and financing automobiles shipped in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from certain advertising of installment sales of motor vehicles, as against contention that acceptance corporation was not

On petition by General Motors Corporation, the General Motors Sales Corporation, and the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, to review Commission's order requiring them to cease and desist from using certain forms of advertising in connection with installment sales of motor vehicles, petition denied and order affirmed.

_Mr. John Thomas Smith_, of New York City (Mr. Anthony J. Russo, of New York City, of counsel), for petitioners.

_Mr. W. T. Kelley_, chief counsel, _Mr. Martin A. Morrison_, assistant chief counsel, _Mr. James M. Hammond_, and _Mr. James W. Nichol_, all of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Before AUGUSTUS N. HAND and CHASE, Circuit Judges, and LEIBELL, District Judge.

AUGUSTUS N. HAND, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition by the General Motors Corporation and two of its wholly owned subsidiaries, General Motors Sales Corporation and General Motors Acceptance Corporation, to cease and desist from the use of the so-called 6-percent plan in marketing automobiles manufactured by General Motors Corporation and sold on installment to the public. At first the cars made by the latter corporation were sold by it to its five subsidiaries, Chevrolet Motor Co., Olds Motor Works, Pontiac Motor Co., Buick Motor Co. and Cadillac Motor Co. and then sold by them to dealers in the various states, who in turn sold to the public. The Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint against General Motors Corporation, General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and the above five subsidiaries of the former who had been selling cars to dealers who used the Acceptance Corporation's 6-percent plan. Shortly afterwards these five companies were dissolved and General Motors Sales Corporation took their place as a wholesale instrumentality in marketing the cars, and was then made a party to the proceeding.

The general course of business was (1) manufacture of the cars by the General Motors Corporation, (2) transfer and sale of the cars to the one of the five subsidiary companies whose name was identified with the model sold, and (3) sale by the latter to the dealers. After General Motors Sales Corporation was organized and the above five subsidiaries were dissolved, the Sales Corporation took the place of each one of the companies as transferee of title and possession and acted as selling agent for General Motors Corporation to the dealers.
In connection with the sales by the five subsidiaries and afterwards by the subsidiary Sales Corporation the so-called 6-percent plan was used in most cases where the purchasing public bought cars under the installment plan. The General Motors Acceptance Corporation (hereafter referred to as GMAC) was organized by General Motors to finance retail installment (time) sales made by dealers to retail buyers. It financed not only installment purchases of cars but also purchases of other products in the automobile business which were manufactured by General Motors. It did this by making a contract with the dealer whereby the balance due under the installment contract was secured by a conditional sale agreement and payments in reduction of the balance were made monthly over a series of from 6 to 18 months. In the autumn of 1935 the plan of financing the purchase of the several brands of motor vehicles on the 6-percent installment payment plan was first advertised through General Motors Acceptance Corporation in the newspapers. The Commission made the following findings as to the plan here involved:

The initial advertisement was as follows:

GENERAL MOTORS ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION REDUCES TIME PAYMENT COSTS ON NEW CARS

With a new 6% Plan

GMAC announces today a new, economical way to buy any new General Motors car from General Motors dealers all over the United States. It's the plan you've been waiting for—a plan you can understand at a glance. It is far simpler and more economical than any other automobile time payment arrangement you've ever tried.

Actually as simple as A, B, C—this new plan provides for convenient time payments of the unpaid balance on your car—including cost of insurance and a financing cost of 6%. This represents a considerable reduction in the cost of financing car purchases. It is not 6% interest, but simply a convenient multiplier anyone can use and understand. Nothing is added in the way of so-called service or carrying charges. There are no extras. Simply a straightforward, easy-to-understand transaction.

This simple step brings the world's finest cars within reach of thousands who have long needed new cars. When you buy a new Cadillac or Buick, Chevrolet or Pontiac, Oldsmobile or LaSalle, on this new plan, you actually save money!

And finally—buyers under this new plan receive an insurance policy in the General Exchange Insurance Corporation which protects them against Fire, Theft, and Accidental Damage to their cars.

Following the appearance of this advertising matter, many similar advertisements were published both by GMAC and by the other five selling subsidiaries of respondent, to wit, the Chevrolet, Pontiac, Olds, Buick and Cadillac Companies. Some of them gave an extended explanation of the "6%" plan, such as is given in the advertisement quoted in full above, but most of them did not and confined themselves to a short reference to the "6%" plan. Typical references to the "6%" plan in these advertisements are as follows:

Chevrolet: "Compare Chevrolet's low delivered prices and the new, greatly reduced GMAC 6% Time Payment Plan."

Pontiac: "All Pontiac cars can be bought on GMAC's new 6% Plan which greatly reduces the cost of buying on time."

Olds: "New 6% GMAC Time Payment Plan."

Buick: "The new GMAC 6% TIME PAYMENT PLAN not only simplifies financing but actually cuts the cost of buying a car on time."

LaSalle: "Available on GMAC's new 6% Time Payment Plan."

Cadillac: "Available on GMAC's new 6% time payments."

In addition to these advertisements, the "6%" plan was highly publicized by the use of billboards and window posters. In many of these advertisements the symbol "6%" was featured in a size far greater than most of the other lettering in the advertisement. All of these advertisements were paid for by GMAC or the other selling subsidiaries of General Motors as indicated herein, entirely from their own funds or from a fund known as the "dealers' fund," which was collected and controlled by the [35] selling subsidiaries. Money for the "dealers' fund" was raised by billing the dealers a specified amount in the invoice pertaining to each car sold to them. This charge was in turn passed along to the retail purchaser by the dealer. Neon signs featuring the term "6%" were also made available by said subsidiaries to dealers as were mats and sample advertisements for use in inserting advertisements in local newspapers, magazines or circulars, at the dealer's expense.

The function and purpose of all of this advertising, including that published by GMAC, was to promote and further the sale to the purchasing public of new cars manufactured by General Motors.

On succeeding the five dissolved corporations, the General Motors Sales Corporation carried on their business as before, the business of the dissolved companies being the work of divisions of the Sales Corporation.

The Commission found that there was a regular flow of commerce in motor vehicles from the factories of General Motors in Michigan.
to the retail purchasers in other States, carried out first by the five dissolved companies and subsequently by their successor, and that this movement was assisted by the acts of GMAC. It accordingly made an order directing General Motors Corporation, General Motors Sales Corporation and General Motors Acceptance Corporation to cease and desist from the form of advertising which they had pursued under the plan. We think the order was right and should be affirmed and the petition to review be denied.

There was evidence before the Commission to support its finding that the advertisements referred to "Have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the said "6%" or "six per cent" finance plan, as above set forth, contemplates a simple interest charge of 6 per cent per annum upon the deferred and unpaid balance of the purchase price of the motor vehicles sold, and tends to cause, and has caused, such purchasing public to buy motor vehicles manufactured by General Motors because of that erroneous and mistaken belief, when in truth and in fact the total of the credit charge, computed in accordance with said "6%" or "six per cent" plan, amounts to approximately 11 1/2 percent simple interest per annum upon the deferred and unpaid balance, as diminished by the installment payments made, of the price of the motor vehicles sold to the purchasing public."

That the rate of interest is actually almost double 6 percent simple interest, as found by the Commission, is shown by Commission's Exhibit 66, which is a booklet issued by GMAC, and is not contested by General Motors or its subsidiaries. That the rate is so much greater than 6 percent is because the GMAC time payment plan of financing involves a 6 percent charge "on the full amount of the account originally financed from the date it begins to run to the date the account is closed, regardless of the fact that the account is divided into, and amortized gradually and regularly by, monthly payments of equal amounts."

While we do not regard the plan used here as inevitably misleading, we think that in a good many cases it would be likely to cause the

1 The order directed General Motors and its subsidiaries to cease and desist from:
(1) Using the word "six per cent" or the figure and symbol "6%" or any other words, figures, or symbols indicating percentage, in connection with the cost of, or the additional charge for, the use of a deferred or installment payment plan of purchasing motor vehicles or any other product, when the amount of such cost or charge collected from, or to be paid by, the purchaser of a motor vehicle or any other product under such plan is in excess of simple interest at the rate of 6% per annum, or at the rate indicated by such words, figures, or symbols, calculated on the basis of the unpaid balance due as diminished after crediting installments as paid.
(2) Acting concertedly or in cooperation with any company, firm, or individual, or with any of their agents or dealers, in a way calculated to further the sale of motor vehicles or any other product through use of the methods referred to in paragraph (1) of this order.
It is argued that the advertisement we have quoted could not mislead. The advertisement stated on its face: "It is not 6% interest, but simply a convenient multiplier anyone can use and understand." Nevertheless the calculation of the difference between a rate of 6 percent per annum and the amount payable under the plan would not be easy for the ignorant, as was demonstrated by the inability of at least one witness to make the calculation. Nor would the distinction be observed by the careless. The words in the fourth line of the advertisement: "With a new 6% plan," arrest the attention immediately and many a purchaser would not continue to read the rest of the advertisements or digest the warning statement that the 6 percent was not interest, but merely a multiplier. Moreover, there was a body of advertising matter on billboards and on window posters in which no such guarded statement was made and in which the attention of the public was directed pointedly to the unexplained symbol "6%.

It is noteworthy that the plan involved such competitive advantages that rival companies doing a large proportion of the business of the country felt obliged to adopt and to advertise it with emphasis on the "6%" symbol. It is objected by the petitioners that the reason the plan appealed to the public and was adopted by competitors is only that the mode of calculating the installment payments is very simple and that under the plan the finance cost of an installment purchase is less than formerly. This really does not affect the issue of the propriety of the advertising. That, under the plan, GMAC was offering to finance installment purchases at lower costs than before does not justify a form of advertising which has been found by the Commission, upon substantial evidence, to result in deception of the public. It may be that there was no intention to mislead and that only the careless or the incompetent could be misled. But if the Commission, having discretion to deal with these matters, thinks it best to insist upon a form of advertising clear enough so that, in the words of the prophet Isaiah, "wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein," it is not for the courts to revise their judgment.

As a practical matter we suggest that the order cannot be one grievously interfering with the only convenient mode of computing monthly installment payments on unpaid balances, since several competitors with a great business abandoned advertising, similar to that we have been considering, when it was challenged by the Commission.

The contention that the Commission is without jurisdiction because GMAC was not engaged in interstate commerce is without merit. While GMAC was primarily acting as a local finance company, it was wholly owned by General Motors, and, with the Sales Corporation, acted as an agent of General Motors in a unified plan of selling and financing cars shipped in interstate commerce. Under the decision of the Supreme Court in Trade Commission v. Education Society, 302 U. S. 112, 120, there was jurisdiction. Cf. National Harness Manufacturers' Ass'n v. Federal Trade Comm., 268 Fed. 705, 709 (C. C. A. 6).

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (c)—BROKERAGE AND COMMISSION PROVISIONS—"SERVICES RENDERED" CLAUSE.

The statute prohibiting the payment or acceptance of commission, brokerage, or other compensation, except for services rendered, was framed to prohibit the payment of brokerage in any guise by one party to the other, or the other's agent, at the same time expressly recognizing and saving the right of either party to pay his own agent for services rendered in connection with the sale or purchase.

Commission, of Washington, D. C., on the brief), for the Commission.

Before MAGRUDER and MAHONEY, Circuit Judges, and PETERS, District Judge.

PETERS, District Judge:

This is a petition to review and set aside an order of the Federal Trade Commission directing petitioners, Quality Bakers of America, an unincorporated association, and Quality Bakers of America, Inc., a corporation, in connection with the purchase of commodities in interstate commerce by any member of the former or stockholder of the latter, to cease and desist from accepting brokerage fees, or allowances in lieu thereof, and from paying the same, directly or indirectly, to their members and stockholders; and directing other petitioners, certain baking companies, members of the said association, in connection with their purchases of commodities in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from accepting such fees or allowances, in any form, either from sellers from whom they purchase, or from the petitioners, Quality Bakers of America or Quality Bakers of America, Inc.

The order of the Commission was based upon its findings of facts and conclusion that the facts showed a violation of Section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act (49 Stat. [395] 1527), which reads as follows:

It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to pay or grant, or to receive or accept, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, except for services rendered in connection with the sale or purchase of goods, wares, or merchandise, either to the other party to such transaction or to an agent, representative, or other intermediary therein where such intermediary is acting in fact for or in behalf, or is subject to the direct or indirect control, of any party to such transaction other than the person by whom such compensation is so granted or paid.

The complaint of the Commission, initiating the proceeding, alleged that Quality Bakers of America, Inc., accepted for the benefit of its members, respondents in the complaint, and petitioners herein, prohibited brokerage fees and allowances from various sellers of merchandise, including certain flour-mill companies, also named as respondents in the complaint. Subsequently, the Commission dismissed its complaint as against the flour-mill companies for the stated reason that some of them had gone out of business and others had ceased their alleged improper practices and there was no reason to apprehend that they would be renewed, and those companies are no longer parties to the proceeding.

The petitioners, in their answer to the complaint, denied that their business practices constituted any violation of the Clayton Act as amended and also claimed to be exempted from its provisions by section 4 of the Robinson-Patman Act which provides that a cooperative association shall not be prevented from returning to its members any part of its net earnings in proportion to the business done by them. Constitutionality of the Act as well as the jurisdiction of the Commission is also attacked.

From findings as to the facts made by the Commission, it appears that the voluntary, unincorporated association known as "Quality Bakers of America," having its headquarters in New York City, has a membership comprising some seventy wholesale baking concerns located in various parts of the country, who are and agree to be non-competitive among themselves so long as their membership continues.

The active, operating agent of the association of bakers, referred to as the Association, is a Delaware corporation, organized under the mercantile corporation law of that State and called Quality Bakers of America, Inc. The officers of the corporation and of the Association are the same persons. All the stock of the corporation is owned by members of the Association and cannot be otherwise owned without the consent of the corporation.

The corporation, referred to as the Service Company, acts as purchasing agent for the members of the Association and also renders them various other services and benefits, including assistance in management and services in connection with production, engineering, accounting, and advertising.

The lines of merchandise purchased by the Service Company for its stockholders include flour and other food materials, as well as machinery and a variety of equipment and supplies used in the manufacture, storage and distribution of wholesale bakery products. Some of the merchandise is bought outright by the Service Company and resold to its stockholders. In other cases the Service Company as a broker effects the purchase in behalf of the stockholders.

The stockholders of the Service Company, a representative group of whom, together with the corporation and the Association, and their officers, are named as respondents in the complaint of the Commission, are found by the Commission to be, severally:

* * * engaged in purchasing commodities from sellers located in States other than the States in which such Service Company and said stockholders individually maintain their respective principal places of business. Said stockholders, or some of them, daily transmit orders for the purchase of merchandise to respondent Service Company and such orders in nearly every case are transmitted by mail or other means of communication across State lines. In executing such orders and in purchasing the commodities specified therein, respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc., transmits such orders and purchases commodities from one or more of a group of over 200 manufacturers, processors, producers, or distributors, located in many different States, and who in a large majority of cases are located in a State other than the State of New York, where the Service Company has its principal office and place of business. As a result of such purchase and sale transactions, respondent Quality Bakers of America, Inc., and each of its said stockholders transport or cause to be transported baker's supplies and commodities from the sellers thereof, located in many different States, to, through and into States other than the State of origin or shipment of such commodities. Said stockholders habitually transmit money or the equivalent thereof in payment of the purchase price for such commodities by United States mail and other means, from their individual places of business, usually across State lines, to the sellers of such merchandise and products, and the Service Company daily receives brokerage fees on purchases made by its stockholders through it, which are transmitted to it by such sellers located in States other than the State of New York, through the medium of the United States mails and otherwise, most of such remittances crossing State lines between the offices of such sellers and the offices of the Service Company. Such purchases by the Service Company's stockholders through the Service Company, and the collection of such brokerage fees by said Service Company, in the manner stated, cannot be accomplished or brought about and is not effectuated except by the use of interstate channels of communication, nor are such commodities so purchased obtained, nor can they be obtained in most cases except by the transportation of the same, at the instance and request of the Service Company and its stockholders, from one State to, into, or through other States of the United States. In using such methods of ordering, purchasing, and making payment for commodities so purchased and in obtaining and collecting such brokerage fees, respondent Service Company and its stockholders operate in the channels of interstate commerce and are engaged in such commerce. Respondent Service Company is an indispensable interrelated instrumentality in the course of such commerce, and its operations cannot be conducted except by means of the use of facilities available in the channels of interstate trade, communication, and commerce. * * * The operations of respondent Service Company are centered in its offices in New York, but extend into every State in which one or more of its stockholders and the sellers of commodities with whom it negotiates purchases of commodities are located. The plan of operation of the Service Company and its stockholders, above described, is an integral whole which cannot be separated into constituent parts without destroying the whole. Said plan of operation contemplates the use of and uses the facilities and instrumentalities of interstate commerce and is effectuated almost entirely through the means and channels of traffic and commerce among and between the several States.

Brokerage fees and commissions collected by the Service Company from the concerns selling merchandise to it or to its stockholders on its order are not paid over to the stockholders directly, the procedure being substantially as follows: The stockholders, members of the Association, agree to pay to the Service Company certain dues, measured by the baking capacity of the member's plant, the minimum being $25 per week. These dues are charged to the several stockholders on the books of the Service Company. The stockholders are also charged with the price of services and benefits rendered to them by the Service Company, including the use of its purchasing department and certain other special services of value to the bakers.

The brokerage fees and commissions collected by the Service Company from the sellers of merchandise, are applied in accordance with the provisions of a so-called membership and service agreement entered into between each member of the Association and the Association and Service Company as follows:

That all brokerage, selling, and commissions, selling discounts or other amounts allowed by suppliers of materials, manufactured advertising, machinery, and equipment and collected by the Quality Bakers of America, Inc., shall be applied one-half to the credit of the Member's dues on whose business the brokerage or allowance originated, and the remaining half shall be applied by the Board of Directors in such manner as it shall determine, for service purposes for the benefit of the members of the Quality Bakers of America.

Under the above arrangement, in each case, one-half of the brokerage fee collected by the Service Company is credited on its books to the stockholder whose buying order produced the fee. The other half is used by the Service Company to pay a dividend of 8 percent on the stock and the operating expenses of the company including the expense of furnishing to its stockholders the services and benefits above-mentioned.

On the evidence before it, the Commission found that during the year ending July 1, 1937, preceding the service of the complaint in August of that year, the Service Company executed approximately 13,500 orders for the purchase of commodities on a brokerage-fee basis for its stockholders, the purchase price of such commodities being estimated to be between $5,500,000 and $5,900,000 in amount. On such purchases the Service Company received brokerage fees from the sellers of such commodities totaling $163,933.84. The Commission also found that since July 1, 1937, the Service Company has continued to purchase commodities on a brokerage-fee basis for its stockholders in the same manner and using the same methods as before. The Commission also found:

In 1930, the dues actually charged to stockholders ranged from nothing for suspended members to $5,920, the latter figure being for a stockholder with five plants. In 1936, of 69 member-stockholders, 36 were credited with more than one-half of the brokerage fees collected by the Service Company on their purchases than the dues charged against them amounted to. In the cases of all but ten of said stockholders, the total brokerage fees collected on purchases made by them through the Service Company exceeded the amount of dues charged against them. During the year 1936 the total amount of brokerage fees collected by the Service Company amounted to $181,528.20; of the amount, $90,700.10 was credited by the Service Company to the respective accounts of its member-stockholders. Dues charged against all the stockholders during 1936 amounted to $79,556.

It also found:

All of the profits of said company inure to the benefit of the stockholders in the form of money and credits and valuable benefits and services. In all matters and transactions in which the Service Company negotiates or deals with sellers in connection with the purchase of commodities by its stockholders, such Service Company is the agent and representative of such stockholders, acts in fact for them, and in their behalf, and is subject to their direct control.

The conclusion of the Commission was in substance that Quality Bakers of America, Inc., and its stockholders are engaged in interstate commerce "in all material aspects of the practices involved herein"; that in the course of such commerce the corporation is and has been accepting brokerage fees from sellers on purchases of commodities made by its stockholders through it, while acting as the agent for them and in their behalf and while owned and controlled by such stockholders; that the stockholders receive such brokerage fees in the form of money, credits, benefits and services paid for by such fees; that neither the Service Company nor the stockholder renders any service, in connection with the sale commodities, to any seller so paying such fees; that the Association is an organization designed and used to facilitate and further the objectives and operations of the Service Company and its stockholders; that the corporation is not a cooperative association within the meaning of section 4 of the Robinson-Patman Act; that the plan of operation and practices of the Association and the corporation and their members result in the transmission of brokerage fees from sellers to buyers on transactions involving the purchase and sale of commodities in the course of interstate commerce and "that such acts, practices, and policies are violative of the provisions of paragraph (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended."

As a result of its conclusion, the Commission issued the cease and desist order complained of.

The petitioners take exception to some of the findings of fact made by the Commission.

The act establishing the Federal Trade Commission and providing for a revision of its order specifies that "The findings of the Commission as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive." (U. S. C. A. Tit. 15, Sec. 45 (c).)

The language of that statute is plain enough and the courts have no right to ignore it. "The courts cannot pick and choose bits of evidence to make findings of fact contrary to the findings of the Commission." Federal Trade Commission v. Standard Education Soc., 302 U. S. 112, 117.

The weight to be given the evidence as well as the inferences reasonably to be drawn from it, is for the Commission. Federal Trade Commission v. Pacic Paper Ass'n, 273 U. S. 52, 63; Federal Trade Commission v. Artloom Corp., 69 F. (2d) 36.

In view of the above rule and of our desire to curtail this opinion, we deem it unnecessary to discuss all the findings which are objected to, and, where not mentioned, it may be understood that we consider that findings are supported by evidence.

Although challenged by the petitioners, it hardly can be questioned, in view of the evidence before the Commission, that the corporation, referred to as the Service Company, has been acting as agent for its stockholders, members of the Association, in extensive transactions involving the purchase of merchandise; that it has been the practice of the Service Company to collect commissions or brokerage fees from the sellers of the merchandise, which are transmitted from other States to the Service Company in New York, which transmits them to the member-stockholders. The stockholders, controlling the corporation, elect to receive the greater part of the brokerage in a form other than cash; but they receive it nevertheless. Such a proceeding (in interstate commerce) is precisely what is prohibited by the statute.

It is contended that the petitioners, so far as the acts complained of here are concerned, are not engaged in interstate commerce, but are engaged in rendering a contractual service that is not interstate commerce. The contractual service referred to is one alleged to be rendered the sellers of merchandise in connection with the sale and purchase of goods, which the petitioners also claim is permissible by the language of the statute.

The only petitioner collecting anything in the nature of a commission directly from the sellers being the Service Company, it is, presumably, that company which is referred to as rendering services under contract. The Commission has found unequivocally that “There is no evidence in the record that the Service Company has contracted with any seller to render him any service in connection with the sale of his commodities or to find buyers for him or to promote the sale of his merchandise.” This finding is disputed by the petitioners, but in view of the evidence we think it must stand.

It can be reasonably concluded from the evidence before the Com-mmission that the Service Company was the purchasing agent of the buyers and in that capacity dealt with the sellers. Undoubtedly the sellers received valuable benefits and advantages from the business given them by the Service Company, other than the ordinary profits on the sales. For instance—they were saved the expense incident to obtaining the business and dealing separately with numerous customers taking a large amount of merchandise. In that way and to that extent the Service Company rendered services and had contractual relationship with the sellers. For those benefits the sellers were willing to pay and did pay and, no doubt, after such a course of dealing had been established, it was considered by all parties that there was an implied agreement to pay, but it is a mistake to assume that the payments made were other than essentially commissions on the sales or to suppose that such a practice was lawful after the passage of the Robinson-Patman Act.

The petitioners contend that by the language in paragraph (c), above quoted, reading “except for services rendered in connection with the sale or purchase of goods,” the Congress recognizes that a buyer, or his agent, may perform services for the seller in connection with the transaction for which the seller may pay and the buyer or his agent receive compensation by way of a brokerage fee or commission on the sale. We do not take such a view of the paragraph. The construction contended for makes much of its language meaningless; it does vioence to the purpose of the Act and has been explicitly rejected in other circuits. It is plain enough that the paragraph, taken as a whole, is framed to prohibit the payment of brokerage in any guise by one party to the other, or the other's agent, at the same time expressly recognizing and saving the right of either party to pay his own agent for services rendered in connection with the sale or purchase.

The committee reporting the bill to the H. of R. stated that paragraph—

(c) * * * permits the payment of compensation by a seller to his broker or agent for services actually rendered in his behalf: Likewise by a buyer to his broker or agent for services in connection with the purchase of goods actually rendered in [399] his behalf; but it prohibits the direct or indirect payment of brokerage except for such services rendered. It prohibits its allowance by the buyer direct to the seller, or by the seller direct to the buyer; and it prohibits its payment by either to an agent or intermediary acting in fact for or in behalf, or subject to the direct or indirect control, of the other. Report No. 2287, 74th Congress, 2d. Session, March 31, 1936.

Even if the Service Company here renders services to the sellers under agreement to do so, as claimed by petitioners, it cannot lawfully collect brokerage fees from the sellers since it is acting as agent for the purchasers. As was stated in the Great Atlantic and Pacific Company case, "The agent cannot serve two masters, simultaneously rendering services in an arm's length transaction to both."

The petitioners also argue that the statute is not applicable to them, and that the Commission was without jurisdiction, because, as they say, the Commission's complaint was based upon payment made by the sellers to the Service Company for services rendered; that such services were rendered by agreement and that the sale of services is not interstate commerce. Several cases, including Hopkins et al. v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, are cited in support of the proposition that "the service contract is separate and distinct from the actual sale in interstate commerce" and not a part of it. The argument proceeds upon a wrong basis. It is misleading to say that the complaint is for accepting money for services rendered. There is no prohibition against an agent's accepting money for services rendered his principal. In fact it is expressly provided for by the language in the statute. The objection is to the acceptance of money for the other party's principal. That is what the complaint charges. Brokerage fees and commissions, so described and admittedly paid before the passage of the Robinson-Patman Act, are not changed in nature by calling them something else, nor made legal by an agreement for their payment.

The point in this connection is whether the parties were engaged in interstate commerce and whether the payments in question were made in the course of such commerce. As to that there can be no serious question. The purchasing stockholders are located in twenty-five different States. The sellers of the commodities purchased are 200 in number and located all over the country. The Service Company either buys outright and re-sells to the stockholders or places orders with the sellers for shipment direct to the purchasers. It all contemplates and requires interstate transportation of merchandise. The fact that intrastate and interstate transactions may be commingled does not restrict the power of Congress to protect and control what is committed to its care. Currie v. Wallace, 306 U. S. 1.

Objection is made that the unincorporated association, Quality Bakers of America, is not itself engaged in interstate commerce and should not be included in the cease and desist order.

It is true that it does not appear that the Association as such is engaged in commerce, but its members are so engaged, and the Association as an instrumentality in the current of commerce is within the regulatory power of Congress and was properly included in the order. Chamber of Commerce v. Federal Trade Commission, 13 F. (2d) 673, 684.

The objection to the jurisdiction of the Commission on the ground that the respondents in the complaint were not engaged in interstate commerce is not well taken.

The petitioners claim to be exempted from the provisions of paragraph (c), above referred to, by Section 4 of the Robinson-Patman Act (49 Stat. 1528), which reads as follows:

Nothing in the act * * * shall prevent a cooperative association from returning to its members, producers, or consumers the whole or any part of, the net earnings or surplus resulting from its trading operations, in proportion to their purchases or sales from, to, or through the association.

The petitioners contend that both the unincorporated association, Quality [400] Bakers of America, and the corporation, Quality Bakers of America, Inc., are cooperative associations within the meaning of the above-quoted section of the statute and have supported their contention with argument, both before the Commission and in this court, but we deem it not necessary to consider whether either or both of the organizations mentioned are cooperatives within the meaning of the statute because we hold that Section 4 does not authorize cooperative associations to engage in the practices forbidden by Section 2 (c) of the act, nor except them from its provisions. There is nothing in the language of the statute which warrants such a conclusion or such a forced construction. The action and debates in Congress to which we have been referred so indicate. Cong. R. Vol. 80, page 8452. See also page 9561.

Paragraph (c) is a distinct and complete provision in itself making illegal the giving or taking of commissions or their equivalent under the circumstances mentioned in the text. There are also in the act other provisions making other practices illegal as unfair trade practices, but, as it was put by the court in the Oliver case:

No reason suggests itself why the limitations and provisions relating to one should be read into those relating to the other.

There are no provisions in Section 4 exempting cooperative associations from the penalties imposed for violation of Section 2 (c).

The constitutionality of Section 2 (c) as we have interpreted it is not open to serious question. Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 667; Biddle Purchasing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 96 F. (2d) 687; Oliver Bros. v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 763; Webb-Crawford v. Commission, 109 F. (2d) 268.

In view of the adequate discussion of the constitutional question in these cases, further elaboration of this point would be superfluous.

Some other points made against the action of the Commission have been argued and considered by us but are not regarded as having sufficient merit to require further discussion or to change our conclusion, which is that the order of the Commission should be sustained and the performance of it commanded.

A decree will be entered affirming and enforcing the order of the Federal Trade Commission.

YARDLEY OF LONDON, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Sept. 13, 1940)

Order, in accordance with stipulation, as below set forth, withdrawing petition to review order of Commission in Docket 2330, 30 F. T. C. 156, 165, directing respondent, its officers, etc., in connection with offer, etc., of toilet requisites and cosmetics, to cease and desist from representing falsely, through use of words "London," "English," or "Old English," etc., as therein set forth, that its toilet requisites and cosmetics, made, compounded, diluted or bottled in the United States or elsewhere than England, were made, etc., in said country or were of English origin, and using such terms or phrases as "33 Old Bond Street," etc., to refer to any of its said products, or word "London" as part of its corporate name, in connection with offer, etc., of such products, as in said order variously set forth,

Mr. Dallas S. Townsend, of New York City, for petitioner.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Morion Nesmith, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.
The above proceeding having been adjusted, it is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between Dallas S. Townsend, Esq., counsel for the petitioner herein, Yardley of London, Inc., and Morton Nesmith, Esq., counsel for the respondent, Federal Trade Commission, that the petition heretofore filed herein by said petitioner to review the order of said respondent dated December 20, 1939, be and hereby is withdrawn, without costs to either party as against the other, and that an order to such effect may be entered without further notice.
Dated September 9, 1940.

(S) Dallas S. Townsend, Counsel for Petitioner, Yardley of London, Inc.

(S) Morton Nesmith,
Counsel for Respondent, Federal Trade Commission.

Approved:
(S) W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel.

So ordered:

CALIFORNIA LUMBERMEN'S COUNCIL ET AL. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 8984
(Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit. Oct. 1, 1940)

In proceeding before the Federal Trade Commission, as in any in personam action, there must be jurisdiction over the parties sought to be affected by any order of the Commission. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

Cease and Desist Orders—Appellate Procedure and Proceedings—Commission Jurisdiction—Respondents—Service—Appearance Counsel Before Commission and Court as For All.

In proceeding to review a cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission, wherein petitioners urged that Commission was without jurisdiction over any of the petitioners not served with copy of complaint, attorney who in an affidavit and during trial before examiner stated that he appeared for all petitioners, and who had appeared before the Commission and the Circuit Court of Appeals ostensibly representing some one or more of the petitioners, would be held to have appeared generally for all petitioners, since, if he intended to limit his appearance as representing less than all petitioners, he should have so informed examiner and court at earliest time practicable.

1 Reported in 115 F. (2d) 178. For case before Commission, see 27 F. T. C. 515. Petition for rehearing in this case was denied on November 19, 1940. The Supreme Court, on March 31, 1941, denied certiorari in this case. 61 S. Ct. 827.
In Federal Trade Commission proceeding, although it is customary for a defendant's case to be presented after that of plaintiff's, there is nothing to prevent the taking of testimony out of such regular order where there is reason therefor.

The action of examiner in Federal Trade Commission proceeding in requiring respondents to present their case prior to closing of Government's case, where taking of testimony of Government's witness was not feasible until after testimony of two of respondent's witnesses who had failed to respond to subpoenas, was proper and did not prejudice respondents who urged, on review of case and desist order, that they were denied a fair trial.

In proceeding to review cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission, wherein petitioners sought to nullify order on ground of unfair trial because of examiner's exclusion of evidence from the record, petitioners should have applied to the court under statutory provision authorizing court to order additional evidence to be taken before Commission, for leave to produce the evidence deemed to have been wrongfully excluded, and, where petitioners failed to do so and to show materiality of the excluded evidence or to show wherein they were prejudiced, relief would be denied.

In proceeding to review cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission, wherein petitioners alleged that evidence was improperly excluded from the record, court would not nullify the order because of Commission's denial of motion for an order requiring official reporter to prepare and file with Commission a true, full and correct transcript of the entire record including all evidence taken in the proceeding, where petitioners could have proceeded by appropriate application under statute authorizing court to order additional evidence to be taken before Commission, and petitioners failed to show materiality of the alleged excluded evidence or to show wherein they were prejudiced.

Under Federal Trade Commission Act, the hearing in proceeding for cease and desist order was not required to be before entire board but could be before an examiner appointed by the Commission to hear evidence and rule on evidentiary points and to thus make a record of the testimony to be filed in office of Commission. Federal Trade Commission Act, secs. 2, 5, 15 U. S. C. A. secs. 42, 45.
In Federal Trade Commission proceeding commenced in 1936 for cease and desist order against lumbermen's organizations, wherein a witness for government testified to acts of trade restriction by respondents from 1929 to time of trial, respondents were entitled to cross-examine the witness with respect to National Industrial Recovery Act codes during period in 1933 and 1934 in which the codes were in effect, but examiner's unnecessary restriction of such cross-examination were not prejudicial to respondents, since cease and desist order was directed only to continuation of acts practiced and threatened and the codes could not be a defense to unlawful acts after codes became ineffective.

The purpose of a cease and desist order by Federal Trade Commission against unfair methods of competition is not to punish for past acts, but to prevent the occurrence or the threatened continuance of illegal acts.

Price fixing, fixing of quotas, boycotts, and other acts the doing of which lumbermen's organizations were ordered to cease and desist, constituted "unfair competition" within meaning of Federal Trade Commission Act authorizing Commission to issue cease and desist order.

Order of Federal Trade Commission that respondents, in connection with the purchase "and" sale of lumber and building materials in interstate commerce, cease and desist specified acts, including the imposition upon manufacturers of "unfair, discriminatory, or prohibitive terms and conditions", and specified acts "unlawfully" restricting sale and distribution of lumber and building materials, was not invalid as being vague, indefinite, and obscure, where substance of order when read as a whole left no question but that acts were prohibited in the case of purchase or sale, either separately or together, and left no question as to meaning of the quoted words and phrases.

The publishing by lumbermen's organizations of lists of members, so as to thereby indicate that business could be done with such members or that other persons should not be dealt with, constituted "unfair competition" which could be prohibited by Federal Trade Commission by cease and desist order.

Federal Trade Commission's cease and desist order which contained preliminary provision ordering that respondents, in connection with the purchase and sale of lumber and building materials in interstate commerce, cease and desist specified acts, was not invalid on ground that the restrictions of the order were not limited to interstate commerce, since each of the provisions of the order was necessarily limited to interstate commerce by the preliminary provision.

On petition to review cease and desist order issued by Commission under Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, order held proper, and relief under petition denied.

Mr. Morgan J. Doyle, of San Francisco, Calif., for petitioners.
Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr.
Martin A. Morrison, assistant chief counsel, and Mr. Daniel J. Murphy and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorneys, all of Washington, D. C., for Commission.

STEPHENS, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition to review an order issued by the Federal Trade Commission against petitioners in which petitioners are ordered to cease and desist the doing of certain acts. (15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.)

On August 14, 1936, the Commission issued a complaint against the petitioners alleging a violation of fair methods of competition in interstate commerce in the manner following: The petitioners, as it was alleged and found to be true, were organized in the State of Caliifornia for the purpose of engaging in carrying out a program, policies and aims of the California Lumbermen's Council, composed of affiliates under different names or titles, which affiliates include "Petitioners."
The California Lumbermen's Council and affiliated organizations have as their membership retail dealers in, and vendors of, lumber and building materials. Such dealers and vendors are persons, partnerships, and corporations who, as dealers and vendors, are engaged in the business of buying, selling, and distributing to contractors, builders, dealers, consumers, and other purchasers, lumber, and building materials. Petitioners in the course and conduct of their business pur-case lumber and building materials from manufacturers, producers, and distributors in various States and cause such lumber and building materials to be shipped and transported to warehouses, places of business, and to customers from points in one State to points in the same State, and from points in one State to points in another State.

The petitioners constitute a large portion of those conducting the building material and lumber business in Pacific coast and contiguous States, and are and have been in actual and potential competition with each other and with nonmembers dealing in the same type of materials. That this group of petitioners constitute such an influence in the trade of such materials in interstate commerce that they are enabled to and do promote and enhance their own volume of trade and profit by confining the sale and distribution of such materials largely to the petitioners and members thereof; to induce, require and compel manufacturers and producers of said materials to refrain and to cease and desist from selling or distributing said materials to others and affiliates; thereby compelling nonmembers to purchase said materials through members of petitioner's organizations upon terms and conditions imposed by petitioners. The petitioners, by combining, confederating and conspiring together, have interfered with trade in interstate commerce in an unfair and unlawful manner by limiting trade to members; boycotting and threatening to boycott manufacturers and producers dealing with nonmembers; issuing quotas of sales for members within certain districts; imposing fines and penalties for violation of the orders of the petitioners; controlling prices by issuing uniform price lists to members thereby enhancing the natural and normal profit ordinarily obtained through free competition.

Issue was formed by the filing of an answer and evidence was taken before a trial examiner designated for this purpose by the Commission. A transcript of the trial was filed with the Commission and after examination thereof findings of fact, generally in accordance with the complaint, and an order for the petitioners to cease and desist in their practices and policies were made by the Commission. The petitioners do not attack the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings of fact but petitioners claim that the transcript of the record is not a complete or a sufficient record of the proceedings. The order itself is attacked.

Following the filing of petitioners' petition for a review in this court, the Commission filed a transcript of record and petitioners filed a motion for an order to:

(a) strike from the files the transcript of the record filed by the Commission. (b) require the Commission to file a complete and entire record of the proceedings below, or in the alternative, vacate the cease and desist order made by the Commission.

A like motion had been filed with the Commission and had been denied. This court denied the motion (103 F. (2d) 304).

Subsequently, another motion by petitioners requesting an order commanding the Commission to file a supplemental transcript of record was denied by this court (104 F. (2d) 855).

The points relied upon in the petition for review will be taken up in the order of their statement in petitioners' opening brief.

The first point raised is: "The Commission was without power or jurisdiction [181] to issue the cease and desist order against any of the petitioners who were not served with a copy of the complaint."

The statute, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45, is relied upon as requiring proof of service as a jurisdictional requisite. As in any in personam action there must be jurisdiction over the parties sought to be affected by any order of the Commission. In answer to this point, the counsel for the Commission takes no issue with the cases relied upon by petitioners but claims there is sufficient proof of service and that the record shows that a general appearance of Morgan J. Doyle as their attorney for all petitioners. That such an appearance has been made is made clear by an examination of the record.

The complaint by which the original proceeding was instituted before the Federal Trade Commission is entitled "In the Matter of California Lumbermen's Council" (then follows other names). In the body of the complaint those charged with violating the Federal Trade Act are referred to as "respondents." The answer does not designate the "respondents" answering but states as follows:

Now comes each and all the respondents heretofore served with copies of the complaint herein, and for answer to the complaint of the Commission herein, admit, deny and aver as follows • • •. [Italics ours.]

Whether or not this appearance can be construed as appearance for all "respondents" need not be decided.1

1 Subsequent to the oral hearing in this court, certificate has been filed as follows. Appended to this certificate is a list of the names of those against whom the order is directed with the exception of Ralph P. Duncan and Charles G. Bird:

I, Joe L. Evins, Acting Secretary of the Federal Trade Commission, and official custodian of its records, do hereby certify that attached is a full, true, and complete copy of return receipt cards showing service of complaint in Docket 2898, in the matter of California Lumbermen's Council, et al., on the following respondents:

Registry No. | Respondent served
---|---
370003 | California Lumbermen's Council,
370006 | George N. Ley,
370008 | George C. Burnett (Cal. Lumbermen's Council),
370010 | J. H. Kirk (Cal. Lumbermen's Council),
370011 | Warren Tillison,
370012 | S. P. Ross,
370013 | I. E. Horton,
370014 | A. S. Hatch,
370015 | E. S. McBride (Cal. Lumbermen's Council),
370016 | James Tully,
370017 | Coast Counties Lumbermen's Club,
370018 | Wiley Masengill,
370019 | W. H. Enlow,
370020 | J. H. Kirk (Coast Counties Lumbermen's Club),
370021 | C. S. Tripler,
370022 | Central Valley Lumbermen's Club,
370023 | C. C. Moorhead,
370024 | W. O. Mashek,
370026 | Thomas L. Gardner,
370027 | Northern Counties Lumbermen's Club,
370028 | George K. Adams,
370029 | E. S. McBride (Northern Counties Lumbermen's Club),
370030 | C. D. LeMaster,
370031 | Peninsula Lumbermen's Club,
370032 | San Joaquin Lumbermen's Club,
370033 | George C. Burnett (San Joaquin Lumbermen's Club),
370034 | F. Dean Prescott,
370036 | Bernard B. Barber.

The receipt cards referred to, however, do not show that the complaint was in the envelope receipted for.
The counsel appearing for an undisclosed number of respondents by filing the answer executed an "Affidavit in Support of Motion Before Federal Trade Commission" and therein states "That he is an attorney at law, a member of the State Bar of the State of California, and is the attorney for Respondents in the proceeding pending before the Federal Trade Commission, and entitled 'In the Matter of California Lumbermen's Council, Docket No. 2898,' that he has been the attorney of record in said proceeding Docket No. 2898 continuously since the inception of said proceedings and the filing of the answer therein; * * *

During the taking of evidence in the trial before the examiner, the following colloquy took place between counsel and the examiner:

Trial Examiner Digos. Mr. Doyle, I understand that you are counsel for Mr. LeMaster, is that correct?
Mr. Doyle. I am appearing for all respondents.

[182] In both of these instances the counsel has referred to the parties he represents as "respondents" rather than in the limited manner in which the answer was drawn. Up to the time of the above colloquy the case appears to have been proceeding under the assumption that Mr. Doyle was representing all respondents, and therefore the case was conducted under the same assumption.

Now after the trial has been completed and litigation has proceeded through several hearings in this court, counsel for the first time reveals his intention of relying upon the strictest limitation upon his appearance, i. e., that he appears only for those respondents whom the Commission can prove were legally served. He appeared before the Commission and this court ostensibly representing some one or more of the respondents. It is the right of the examiner to know whom counsel represents and not alone those who may come under some uncertain category. When the examiner attempts to make certain whom counsel represents he answers, "All respondents." We are loath to believe that counsel whom this court knows as an able lawyer in good standing at the California State bar and the bar of the Federal courts means to rely upon the equivocal position these facts suggest. We think he represented that he appeared for all respondents and that it was his duty to inform the examiner and this court at the earliest time practicable, whom he appeared for if he meant to appear for less than all respondents. In the circumstances, we hold that counsel represented that he appeared generally for all respondents.

The second point raised is that the cease and desist order is invalid and void because petitioners were denied and deprived of a fair trial. Several separate considerations in support of the general statement are made, the first of which is that counsel for respondents was required to put on his case prior to the closing of the case for the Government; and upon his refusal to further proceed the trial examiner declared the case of respondents closed and proceeded to the hearing of the Government's case. There is no authority cited by petitioner to the effect that a change in the order of presentation of a case deprives either side of a fair hearing and constitutes a ground for reversible error. While it is customary for the defendant's case to be presented after that of the plaintiff’s, there is nothing to prevent the taking of testimony out of such regular order where there is reason therefor. Petitioners' point is based upon the following events, the record reading:

Trial Examiner Diggs. This witness, whose testimony, you say, will have reference to the testimony of the two Respondent witnesses who did not appear, will it be possible to put that testimony on before these Respondent witnesses testify?

Mr. Murphy (for government). No. Possible, but not feasible.

Trial Examiner Diggs. In view of the fact that the inability of counsel for the Commission to actually announce the close of his case is due to the failure of certain Respondents to appear in response to subpoenas, I rule that Respondent will begin the taking of its testimony at 10:00 o'clock a.m., * * * and that when the attorney for the Commission shall have concluded the introduction of the testimony indicated by him, that at that time, the Respondent will be offered an opportunity to rebut the testimony so offered.

Mr. Doyle. We object and protest against the ruling of the Examiner compelling us to proceed with the presentation of our defense prior to the time the Commission's case is closed. We claim and insist that to compel us to do so constitutes a denial to us of due process; that it is not in accordance with the rules of the Commission's established practice and customs.

On the next day the petitioner was called upon to present his case, and the record shows what transpired:

Mr. Doyle. I again say, Mr. Examiner, we decline to proceed any further with the presentation of the defense in this matter, until the government’s case is in and closed, and an announcement to that effect made.

Trial Examiner Diggs. Then I announce that the taking of testimony in the Respondent's case is closed.

Later in the proceedings of the case, and at the time of the closing of the case for the Government, the following took place:

Mr. Sadler. Mr. Examiner, the Government will now rest its case.

Examiner Vicini. Well, you haven't anything further then?

Mr. Sadler. No; the Government now rests its case.

Examiner Vicini (addressing petitioners). You haven't anything?

[183] Mr. Doyle. There is an order here barring us from putting in testimony.

Examiner Vicini. Yes; I understood there was.

Mr. Doyle. So under that order, we are not permitted to put in any testimony.

Examiner Vicini. Mr. Diggs made that order and presented it on June 7th, I believe.

Mr. Doyle. I don't recall the date; it was discussed a number of times.

Examiner Vicini. June the 7th. Well, if there is no other testimony to be offered, the evidence being complete, it is ordered that the formal order of closing the case be referred to the Chief Trial Examiner. That will be the order, that we stand adjourned.
The action of the examiner was correct and reasonable. It may be added that in any event there does not seem to have been any prejudice to petitioner.

Other claimed instances of an unfair trial relate to rulings upon the admission of evidence which resulted in the rejection or the striking from the record of evidence admitted. Petitioner claims the ruling of the Commission should be nullified because of such rulings by the examiner. But petitioner should have applied to the court for leave to produce the evidence deemed to have been wrongly kept out of the record. The statute provides:

If either party shall apply to the court for leave to adduce additional evidence, and shall show to the satisfaction of the court that such additional evidence is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to adduce such evidence in the proceeding before the Commission, the court may order such additional evidence to be taken before the Commission and to be adduced upon the hearing in such a manner and upon such terms and conditions as to the court may seem proper.

In a proper case where the evidence sought to be adduced is material the order will be granted. (See Consolidated Edison Co. of New York v. N. L. R. B., 305 U. S. 197, 59 S. Ct. 206, 83 L. Ed. 126, Dec. 5, 1938 which construes a similar provision in the N. L. R. B. Act, 29 U. S. C. A. 160 (e).

The other asserted errors under this general point of unfair trial could have been passed upon by appropriate petition as provided for and construed above and suggested in the earlier opinion reported in 103 F. (2d) 304. Here, however, the counsel pressing this point of error has not even attempted to show the materiality of the excluded portions or wherein petitioners have been prejudiced.

The next point relied upon is that after the hearings below were closed, the Commission denied respondents' motion for an order requiring the official reporter to prepare and file with the Commission, a true, full, and correct transcript of the entire record in the proceeding including all the evidence taken therein. This point is sufficiently answered by the comment just concluded.

The point is made by the appellant that the Commission is without power to appoint an examiner to hear evidence and rule on evidentiary points thus making a record of the "testimony". The wording of the act itself precludes any such construction. The act states (15 U. S. C. A. 45):

* * * The person, partnership, or corporation so complained of shall have the right to appear at the place and time so fixed and show cause why an order should not be entered by the Commission requiring such person, partnership, or corporation to cease and desist from the violation of the law so charged in said complaint. * * * The testimony in any such proceeding shall be reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission. If upon such hearing the Commission shall be of the opinion that the method of competition in question is prohibited by this subdivision of this chapter, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served * * *

There is no requirement in the act that the hearing be before the entire board. The requirement is only that testimony be taken in a hearing provided for by the board and when reduced to writing, filed in the office of the Commission. The report made by the Commission is clearly made upon the basis of the written facts as so filed and that this is the method intended is shown from the treatment in the statute of these two subjects; i. e., first the filing of the written testimony as produced at the hearing, and then the report based upon such hearing (as shown by the filed transcript of the trial.) The act provides specifically for Examiners (15 U. S. C. A. 42).

The next claimed error is that appellants were prohibited from cross exam[184]ining one of the government's witnesses as to the N. I. R. A. codes. The fact is that this witness testified to acts of trade restriction by the clubs or associations, termed respondents, from 1929 until the present time. The period of 1929 and 1930 was inquired into for the purpose of showing the manner in which the respondents operated, as well as to show restrictive acts. The witness was particularly fitted to testify as to the period for at that time he was an officer of one of the organizations and had knowledge of the others as well. The acts constituting restraint of trade in violation of law were of a continuing type and continued from the time of this witness's membership in the organization to the date of the trial. The cross examination as to the N. I. R. A. codes was of course limited to the period from Oct. 15, 1933 to May 1, 1934 for that was the period in which the codes were in effect. [Schechter Corporation v. United States, 295 U. S. 495, 723, 55 S. Ct. 837, 79 L. Ed. 1570.] We agree with counsel for respondents that the cross examination at this point was unnecessarily restricted. We think, however, that no harm was done.

The purpose of a cease and desist order is not to punish for past acts, but to prevent the occurrence or the threatened continuance of illegal acts. Even though such codes could be relied upon as a defense to the period over which they were in force, which we do not decide, they could be no defense to acts violating the law after they had been declared a nullity, and the evidence goes that far. It is to the continuation of acts shown to have been practiced and threatened that this order is directed.

The next point made by appellant is that the cease and desist order of the Commission should be dissolved for the reason that certain portions thereof are in excess of the powers of the Commission and that various acts prohibited by said order do not constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce. We set out provisions of the case and desist order in the margin. Under this point it is claimed that the order is vague, indefinite and obscure to an extent of invalidity. The portion objected to is as follows:

"Power to Prohibit. The Commission is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations, except banks, and common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce." See amendment of June 23, 1938. Change of no importance here.

That these acts have been held to constitute unfair competition within the meaning of the act has been established by the following cases among others:

Conspiracies by wholesalers to prevent sales by manufacturers to competitors—Wholesale Grocers' Association (C. C. A., 1922), 277 F. 657.

3 (1) Preparing and publishing rosters or lists containing the names of respondent dealer members of respondent organizations and distributing the same among manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers, or their representatives, of lumber and building materials, for the purpose, or with the effect of, indicating that the specified persons or concerns are entitled to buy direct from said manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers, or that other persons or concerns, not included therein, are not so entitled.

(2) Soliciting, accepting, or acting upon, information as to sales, proposed sales, or contracts of sale, by manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers, of lumber and building materials to nondealer members of respondent organizations or other purchasers, for the purpose of preventing further dealing between such buyers and the said manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers.

(3) Using boycott, threats of boycott, either with or without other coercive methods, to persuade, induce, or compel manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers to refrain from selling lumber and building materials to non-member dealers of respondent organizations or other purchasers, or to refrain from so selling, except on unfair, discriminatory, or prohibitive terms and conditions fixed by respondents.

(4) Representing, directly or indirectly, to manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers that the members of the respondent organizations would withhold or withdraw their patronage if said manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers sold to competing dealers in lumber and building materials, or to others whose names were not listed on the respondents' rosters.

(5) Fixing or establishing uniform prices at which members of respondent organizations should sell lumber or building materials in particular trade areas.

(6) Fixing or determining the quotas of business in the sale and distribution of lumber and building materials which manufacturers, producers, wholesalers, and dealer members may do in particular trade areas which, thereby, unlawfully restricts or hinders the sale and distribution of lumber and building materials in interstate commerce.

(7) Demanding or exacting penalties or commissions from manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers on sales of lumber and building materials made by said manufacturers, producers, and wholesalers to purchasers other than the members of respondent organizations.

(5) Demanding or exacting penalties or commissions from dealer members, or other dealers, on sales of lumber and building materials, made by said dealer members or other dealers, in trade areas where other dealer members have their places of business which, thereby, unlawfully restricts or hinders the sale of lumber and building materials in interstate commerce.

(9) Holding meetings to devise means for making effective the aforesaid programs and policies, or similar programs and policies.

(10) Employing other cooperative or coercive acts and methods in promoting and carrying out the aforesaid programs and policies, or similar programs and policies.
It is ordered that Respondents (naming petitioners) in connection with the purchase and the offering for sale, sale and distribution of lumber and building materials, in interstate commerce do forthwith cease and desist, etc.

The objection by petitioner is best shown by quoting from his brief, p. 49:

It will be observed that the language of the injunction is in the conjunctive—that is, that the petitioners are ordered to cease and desist "in connection with the purchase and the offering for sale", etc., etc.

Assuming that petitioners did the forbidden acts in connection with or in relation to the purchase only. Would that constitute a violation of the order and leave them subject to a penalty?

Or assume that they did not do any of the forbidden acts in connection with the purchase of lumber, but did do the forbidden acts in connection with the sale of lumber. Would that constitute a violation of the order and leave petitioners subject to punishment?

The Commission and this court are interested in the substance of the order, and when the order is read as a complete article there is no question but that the acts prohibited are prohibited in the case of purchase and sale or the purchase or sale, separately or together.

It is also argued that the order prohibits the petitioners from imposing upon manufacturers "unfair, discriminatory, or prohibitive terms and conditions." The fact is that this reference to a portion of paragraph three of the order must be considered in conjunction with the whole of said paragraph and the meaning is not questionable when it is so read. This same type of objection made to paragraphs six and eight of the order wherein the word "unlawfully" is claimed to be equivocal is answered by the same reasoning, that is, that the fixing and determining of quotas and exacting penalties are unlawful and prohibited when affecting interstate commerce.

It is stated by appellant that some of the acts prohibited are not unlawful and one of such is claimed to be the prohibited publishing of lists of members with the effect of indicating such concerns may be dealt with or that other persons should not be dealt with. That this is a proper prohibition was settled in the case of Eastern States Lumber Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 612, and the reasons there given apply equally here.

Further it is contended that the restrictions of the order are restraints upon intrastate commerce and not limited to interstate commerce. Each of the provisions of the order are necessarily limited to interstate commerce by the preliminary provision of the order which states: "in connection with the purchase and the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of lumber and building materials, in interstate commerce, do forthwith cease and desist," etc.

The order of the Commission is proper and relief under this petition is denied.

Haney, Circuit Judge, concurs in the result.
ORDER, in accordance with stipulation, as below set forth, withdrawing petitioners' motion to review Commission's denial of their petition (without prejudice to renewal thereof on presentation of case to Commission) to dismiss Commission complaint against them in Docket 3722—which charged petitioner corporations (under their prior corporate names) and petitioner individuals, respondents before Commission, engaged in mail-order business for sale and distribution of radios and radio parts, with places of business in five States, with advertising, falsely and misleadingly, their prices as wholesale and themselves as wholesalers—on the grounds, among others, as set forth in said motion, that testimony for Commission did not sustain charges of complaint and that none of petitioners' acts and practices constituted unfair methods of competition or unfair or deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the statute.

Court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises, and

It appearing to the court, That the defendants are domiciled and transact business in the Northern District of West Virginia; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendants are engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as Prescription Female Capsules and as Lady Lydia Capsules, also designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength; Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength; and as Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Double Strength and Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Triple Strength, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendants have disseminated or are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendants have falsely represented that said preparation advertised as Prescription Female Capsules and as Lady Lydia Capsules, also designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength; Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, and as Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Double Strength and Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Triple Strength, is a safe, competent and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Prescription Female Capsules and as Lady Lydia Capsules, also designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength; Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, and as Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Double Strength and Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Triple Strength, as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in nonpregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and
It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Prescription Female Capsules and as Lady Lydia Capsules, also designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength; Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, and as Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Double Strength and Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Triple Strength, as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion, which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendants, Lenard Gotlieb and Sarah Gotlieb, individuals, trading as Reed's Cut Rate Drug Store and as Fountain Cut Rate Drug Stores, their agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as "Prescription Female Capsules" and as "Lady Lydia Capsules," also designated as "Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength"; "Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength," and as "Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Double Strength" and "Lady Lydia Female Capsules—Triple Strength," whether sold under the same names or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisement represents, directly, indirectly, or by implication that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendants under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendants named herein.

entered forthwith, and the Court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Southern District of West Virginia; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as "Harmless Prescription Capsules" and as "Special Prescription Capsules," otherwise designated as "Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength" and as "Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated or is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparation advertised as Harmless Prescription Capsules and as Special Prescription Capsules, otherwise designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength and as Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as Harmless Prescription Capsules and as Special Prescription Capsules, otherwise designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength and as Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in non-pregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and

scription Capsules, otherwise designated as Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength and as Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength, as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual may produce in pregnant women an abortion, which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Howard Deckelbaum, an individual, trading as Sun Cut Rate Drug Store, his agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are and each of them hereby is strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said drug preparation advertised as “Harmless Prescription Capsules” and as “Special Prescription Capsules,” otherwise designated as “Prescription Female Capsules—Double Strength” and as “Prescription Female Capsules—Triple Strength,” whether sold under the same names or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisement represents, directly, indirectly, or by implication that said preparation is a safe, competent and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by an United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. D. J. MAHLER COMPANY, INC.

No. 67

(District Court, District of Rhode Island. July 31, 1940)

Order for preliminary injunction by District Judge John P. Hartigan, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisement of defendant's "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" for removal of superfluous hair by individual self-application in the home; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendant under Section 5 of Federal Trade Commission Act, and disposition of such complaint, as in said order set forth. 2

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Abner E. Lipscomb, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., a corporation, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, Abner E. Lipscomb, and the defendant appearing by its attorney, Hugh F. O'Donnell, and the defendant having waived herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and the Court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the District of Rhode Island; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the party and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

2 Such complaint duly issued in the matter of D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., Docket 4228, on August 7, 1940, and is now pending.
It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a device or apparatus, designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus, and by various means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the Mahler Method of electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by means of the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus is a safe method which may be employed by individual self-application in the home; that the use of the said Mahler Method or Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus is an effective and efficient method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body; and that said device or apparatus can be successfully operated with ordinary care and skill; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of said device, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in local infections, erysipelas, skin burns, scarring, metallic stains, or permanent pitting and disfigurement; that when such infection occurs in the nose, on the upper lip or over the glabella, it may result in serious illness or death, and in those instances where the device and method are applied to cancerous or syphilitic lesions, not recognizable as such by the layman, fatal consequences may also result; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a court on review or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;
It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons participating with them and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus, for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, advertised as the Mahler Method, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that the Mahler Method of electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by means of the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus is a safe method which may be employed by individual self-application in the home, or that the use of the said Mahler Method or Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus is an effective and efficient method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body, or that said device or apparatus can be successfully operated with ordinary care and skill, or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said device and method by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in permanent disfigurement, physical injury, and in serious, irreparable injury to health; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. CLITO CO. 1895

Seminization of false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparation advertised as "Clito" also designated as "Clito Emmenagogue Capsules" is a safe, competent, or effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; or that there is no risk from its use and that it does not interfere with one's work; or that it is an effective remedy for long standing and obstinate cases of delayed menstruation; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of said preparation, advertised as "Clito" also designated as "Clito Emmenagogue Capsules," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in nonpregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as "Clito" also designated as "Clito Emmenagogue Capsules," as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion, which may be followed by pelvic infection and an infection of the abdominal structures, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Rene P. Balditt, an individual, trading as Clito Co., his agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by an United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparation advertised as “Clito” also designated as “Clito Emmenagogue Capsules” is a safe, competent, or effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; or that there is no risk from its use and that it does not interfere with one’s work; or that it is an effective remedy for long standing and obstinate cases of delayed menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparation advertised as “Clito” also designated as “Clito Emmenagogue Capsules” is a safe, competent, or effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; or that there is no risk from its use and that it does not interfere with one’s work; or that it is an effective remedy for long standing and obstinate cases of delayed menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.
DECREE

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, Jacob L. Goldman, alias J. L. Coleman, an individual, trading as Atlas Health Appliance Co., and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, Gerard A. Rault; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant has waived hearing herein and has consented that this decree be entered forthwith; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Southern District of California; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a device or apparatus, designated as Atlas Short Wave Diathermy, recommended to the unskilled lay public for individual self-application in the home in the cure or treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Jacob L. Goldman, alias J. L. Coleman trading as Atlas Health Appliance Co., Docket 4291, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of December 4, 1940. See 32 F. T. C.
It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said device by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus; and that the defendant has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said device, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said device or apparatus in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of said Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that the use of said device or apparatus, designated as Atlas Short Wave Diathermy, by the unskilled lay public is a scientific, safe, harmless, and effective means and method for individual self-application in the home in the cure or treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body, and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body; and

It appearing to the court, That said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said device by laymen or by persons not trained in physical therapy, or in the technique of diagnosing and treating pathological conditions of the human body by the application of short wave diathermy, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health; and

It appearing to the court, That by reason of technical inexperience on the part of the layman, an improperly adjusted electrode may produce a spark gap between the electrode and the skin, causing a severe electric burn; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of said device, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in peritonitis, blood poisoning, or both, when applied in conditions of acute inflammation, such as boils, carbuncles, acute arthritis due to infection, acute pelvic infections in the female, acute cystitis, acute sinus infections, tonsillitis, lung abscess, appendicitis, and acute prostatitis; serious or fatal hemorrhage when applied in any condition where there is a tendency to hemorrhage, or in which congestion of the blood would aggravate existing troubles, such as varicose veins, gastric ulcer, ulcerative colitis, menstruation, and female disorders such as menorrhagia, dysmenorrhea from retroversion or anteversion of the uterus, subinvolution of the uterus from any cause, uterine infections and chronic pelvic inflammatory disease; abortion, followed by subinvolution, putrefaction or infection with disastrous results in most cases when said device is applied by the layman during pregnancy; stimulating the growth of cancerous cells, metastasis or in spreading the trouble to other tissues when diathermy is applied to areas which may be affected by malignant tumors; that in those areas of the skin where the sense of heat has been lost due to injury or impairment of the peripheral nerves, the application of diathermy may result in tissue destruction and severe burns; and

It appearing to the Court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a Court on review or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Jacob L. Goldman, alias J. L. Coleman, an individual, trading as Atlas Health Appliance Co., his agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons participating with him and having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus, designated as Atlas Short Wave Diathermy, recommended to the unskilled lay public for individual self-application in the home in the cure or treatment of self-diagnosed disease and ailments of the human body, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said device or apparatus in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which advertisements represent that the use of said device or apparatus by the unskilled lay public is a scientific, safe, harmless, and effective means and method for the cure or treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body by individual self-application in the home; or that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body, or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said device by laymen or by persons not trained in physical therapy, or in the technique of diagnosing and treating pathological conditions of the human body by the application of short-wave diathermy, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health; pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. MAX CAPLAN, TRADING AND DOING BUSINESS AS CAPITAL DRUG COMPANY

File No. 39

(District Court, Western District of Virginia. Sept. 5, 1940)

Order for preliminary injunction by District Judge John Paul, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisement of defendant's drug-containing preparation for women, under designation "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps"; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendant under Section 5 of Federal Trade Commission Act, and disposition of such complaint, as in said order set forth.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. C. Robert Mathis, Jr., special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. Max Caplan, of Roanoke, Va., pro se.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, Max Caplan, an individual trading and doing business as Capital Drug Co., and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, C. Robert Mathis, Jr., and the defendant appearing and having waived hearing herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and the Court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same, and now being fully advised in the premises; and

1 Not reported in Federal Reporter.

2 Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Max Caplan, trading and doing business as Capital Drug Co., Docket 4343, on October 10, 1940, and is now pending.
It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Western District of Virginia; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as “Mrs. Bee Femo Caps,” in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated or is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparation, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparation advertised as “Mrs. Bee Femo Caps” is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that there is no risk in its use and that it does not cause the user discomfort or inconvenience; and it is effective in obstinate, unnatural, and suppressed cases of delayed menstruation; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as “Mrs. Bee Femo Caps,” as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in nonpregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as “Mrs. Bee Femo Caps,” as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion or premature birth which may be followed by pelvic infection and general peritonitis, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

_It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Max Caplan, an individual trading and doing business as Capital Drug Co., his agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by an United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparation advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps" is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that there is no risk in its use and that it does not cause the user discomfort or inconvenience; and it is effective in obstinate, unnatural, and suppressed cases of delayed menstruation, or which advertisements fail to reveal all facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement violates any of the prohibitions contained in paragraph 1 hereof.

_It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein._

*It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in nonpregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and

*It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparation, advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion or premature labor which may be followed by pelvic infection and general peritonitis, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

*It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act:

*It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Sherry's Cut Rate Drug Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by an United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparation advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps" is a safe, competent, or effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; or that there is no risk from its use and that it does not cause the user discomfort or inconvenience; or that it is an effective remedy for delayed, unnatural, suppressed menstruation, or which advertisements fail to reveal all facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement violates any of the prohibitions contained in paragraph 1 above.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.

ORDER FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, Allied Pharmacal Co., Inc., a corporation, trading under its own name and also trading and doing business as Erie Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, as Mack Pharmacal Products Co., and as Mrs. Bee Laboratories, and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, C. Robert Mathis, Jr., and the defendant appearing and having waived hearing herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and the court having read the sworn pleadings, and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same, and now being fully advised in the premises; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Northern District of Ohio; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," and sometimes designated as "Mrs. Bee Femo Pills," "Femo Caps," "Femo Pills," "Bee Caps," and "Bee Pills," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated or is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparations by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said drug preparations, and by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparations in violation of the Federal

Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Erie Laboratories, Inc., etc., et al., Docket 4382, on November 20, 1940, and is now pending.
The Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparations advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," and sometimes designated as "Mrs. Bee Femo Pills," "Femo Caps," "Femo Pills," "Bee Caps," and "Bee Pills," are safe, competent and effective preparations for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that there is no risk from their use; that they do not cause the user discomfort or inconvenience; and that they are effective for delayed, unnatural, suppressed menstruation; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparations, advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," and sometimes designated as "Mrs. Bee Femo Pills," "Femo Caps," "Femo Pills," "Bee Caps," and "Bee Pills," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in non-pregnant women gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of the said preparations, advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," and sometimes designated as "Mrs. Bee Femo Pills," "Femo Caps," "Femo Pills," "Bee Caps," and "Bee Pills," as prescribed in said advertisements or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may produce in pregnant women an abortion or premature labor which may be followed by pelvic infection and general peritonitis, resulting in the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Allied Pharmacal Co., Inc., a corporation, trading under its own name and also trading and doing business as Erie Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, as Mack Pharmacal Products Co., and as Mrs. Bee Laboratories, its officers, directors, agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereupon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparations advertised as "Mrs. Bee Femo Caps," and sometimes designated as "Mrs. Bee Femo Pills," "Femo Caps," "Femo Pills," "Bee Caps," and "Bee Pills," are safe, competent, and effective preparations for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that there is no risk in their use and that they do not cause the user discomfort or inconvenience; and they are effective in obstinate, unnatural, and suppressed cases of delayed menstruation, or which advertisements fail to reveal all facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparations to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and that the use of said preparations may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement violates any of the prohibitions contained in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and it is ordered that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. JULIUS MILLER, TRADING AS MILLER DRUG COMPANY

No. —

(District Court, Western District of New York. Oct. 9, 1940)

Decree of preliminary injunction by District Judge Harold P. Burke, restraining, for the reasons and as below set forth, including immediate and irreparable injury to public in further dissemination of such false advertisements, advertisement of drug preparation variously designated as "Belite," "Reducers" and "Miller's Reducing Prescription"; pending issuance of complaint by Commission against defendant under Section 5 of Federal

Federal Trade Commission Act, and disposition of such complaint as in said decree set forth. 2

Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. James L. Baker, special attorney, both of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. Julius Miller, of Rochester, N. Y., pro se.

DECREES OF PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause coming on to be heard upon the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission for the issuance of a preliminary injunction against the defendant, Julius Miller, an individual trading and doing business as Miller Drug Co., and the plaintiff appearing by its attorney, James L. Baker, and the defendant appearing and having waived hearing herein, and having consented that this decree be entered forthwith, and the Court having read the sworn pleadings and the affidavits filed with and in support thereof, and having duly considered the same, and now being fully advised in the premises; and

It appearing to the court, That the defendant is domiciled and transacts business in the Western District of New York; and

It appearing to the court, That it has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter hereof, and that the law and the evidence are in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant is engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug preparation advertised as "Belite," "Reducers" and as "Miller's Reducing Prescription," in commerce between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and

It appearing to the court, That said defendant has disseminated or is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and that the defendant has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said drug preparation in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of which advertising the defendant has falsely represented that said preparation advertised as "Belite,"

1 Such complaint duly issued in the matter of Julius Miller and Jessie Miller, trading as Miller Drug Co., Docket 4363, and was followed by order to cease and desist issued as of December 12, 1940.
"Reducers," and as "Miller's Reducing Prescription" is a cure or remedy for obesity and constitutes a safe, competent, or effective treatment for obesity and the reduction of bodily weight; and

It appearing to the court, That the use of said preparation advertised as "Belite," "Reducers," and as "Miller's Reducing Prescription," as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, accelerates the rate of metabolism, thereby burning the body tissues in excess of that which is normal, and may produce nausea, vomiting, headaches, muscular and articular pains, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor, tachycardia, and angina pectoris, and may result in thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions, and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation and other serious and irreparable injury to health; and

It appearing to the court, That the further dissemination of such advertisements would cause immediate and irreparable injury to the public and that it would be in the public interest to enjoin and restrain the further dissemination of said advertising pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until such complaint is dismissed by the Commission or set aside by a court on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the defendant, Julius Miller, an individual trading and doing business as Miller Drug Co., his agents, servants, representatives, employees, and assigns, and all other persons having notice of this order, be, and they hereby are, and each of them hereby is, strictly enjoined and restrained, pending the issuance of a complaint by the Federal Trade Commission against said defendant under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and until said complaint is dismissed by the Commission, or set aside by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States on review, or the order of the Commission to cease and desist made thereon has become final within the meaning of section 5 of said act, from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said drug preparation advertised as "Belite," "Reducers," and as "Miller's Reducing Prescription" is a cure or remedy for obesity or constitutes a safe, competent or effective treatment for obesity or the reduction of bodily weight, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health in that it accelerates the rate of metabolism, thereby burning the body tissues in excess of that which is normal, causing permanent injury to the heart, thyroid gland, and other vital organs.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement violates any of the prohibitions contained in subparagraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That this decree of injunction be issued without bond, and that a copy of this order be served upon the defendant named herein.
PENALTY PROCEEDINGS

During the period covered by this volume, i.e., June 1, 1940 to November 30, 1940, settlement was made of penalty proceeding in the matter of U. S. v. George Earl McPewen et al., trading as Herbal Medicine Co., in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland.

Said civil proceeding was brought under the provisions of Paragraph (1) of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act for violation of a cease and desist order made by the Commission in the matter of George Earl McPewen, et al., doing business as Herbal Medicine Company and Natex Company, Docket 3075, November 3, 1937, 25 F. T. C. 1296, in which the Commission ordered respondents George Earl McPewen and several partners, doing business as Herbal Medicine Co. and Natex Co., their representatives, etc., in connection with the offer, etc., in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, of their medicinal preparations designated “Herb Doctor”, “Herb Doctor Compound” and “Natex,” or similar preparations, to cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparations, or any of them, are competent or effective cures, remedies, or treatments for stomach troubles, rheumatism, neuritis, liver troubles, deranged kidney, nervousness, general run-down condition, indigestion, dizziness, gastritis, colds, biliousness, and other similar maladies, ailments, and conditions of the human body; or that said preparations, or any of them, will cure constipation or headaches due to constipation.

2. Representing that said preparations, or any of them, are new remedies.

Judgment was entered in said civil proceeding on September 27, 1940, for $100 and costs, which were paid, and order issued satisfying judgment on November 21, 1940.
